D-10
3724
1909 admiral Bashville. The 23

admiral Guinea 143

admiral Peters 135

Adventure of Lady Ursula 1

Aladdin (Drury Lane) 316

Aladdin (Lyceum) 307

Alice in Wonderland 310

American Widow. The 4

Arcadians. The 112

Arsene Lupin 15

Artful Mrs Dearing 87

As you Like It 91

Bad Girl of the Family. The 313

Beethoven 276

Bells. The 228

Best People. The 184

Berris 76

Blue Bird. The 290

Bluffing One's Way 51

Boy's Proposal. a 75

Brass Bottle. The 222

Brewsters Millions 168

Charles the First 41

Charley's Aunt 311

Charlotte ou Bigamy 11

Chauffeur. The 145

Chief of Staff. The 30

Chips 154

Chorus Lady. The 99

Cinderella 323

Collegeites The 58

Colonel Smith 103

Come Into side (Revue) 86

Come Michaelmas 108

Conquest The 105

Dancing Girl. The 42

Dashing Little Duke. The 43

Dear Little Denmark 196

Deputy sheriff. The 176

Devil. The 95

Diana of Dobsons 11

Dollar Princess. The 236

Don 244

Dramatist at Home. The 22

Dryad. The 149

Dumb Mans Curse. a 249

Earth The 93

East Lynne 268

D-10
3724
1909

Englishman's Home. An 26 117
Eunice 135
Explorer. The 133
Fallen Fairies 297
False Gods 215
Fatal Dance. The 184
Feed the Brute 72
Fires of Fate. The 161
Flag Lieutenant. The 256
For the Soul of the King 326
Gentlemen of the Road 244
Gondoliers. The 12
Great-Divide. The 219
Great Mrs Alloway. The 259
Hamlet 35. 67. 132
Head of the Firm. The 63
Henry of Navarre 5
Henry IV 129
High Bid. The 46
His Borrowed Plumes 173
House of Bondage. The 70
House of Temperley. The 320
House Opposite. The 281
Importance of Being Earnest. The 284
King Lear 206
Lethal Hotel. The 289
Light O' Love 131.
Little Damozel. The 250
Little Mrs Cummin 286
Lorimer Sabiston, Dramatist 263
Louis XI 52
Love Watches 126
Lyons Mail. The 265 274
Macbeth 127
Madame X 193
Making a Gentleman 213
Maid of Honour. A 227
Merchant of Venice. The 107
Merry Devil. A 144
Merry Peasant. The 252. 276
Merry Widow. The 156, 181.
Mid-Channel 198
Might-be Right 267
Mobswoman. The 191
Monsieur Beaucaire 40
Mountaineers. The 238
Mrs Peady and the Countess 91
Mrs Gorringe's Necklace 3
Musical Martians. The 242
Noble Spaniard. The 72
Nursery Governess. The 103
Old Heidelberg 134

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, I

Olive Latimer's Husband		13
One of the Best		129
on Shelum River		169
on the Health	(Ballet)	304
Our Miss Gibbs		17
Penelope		9
Persian Princess. a		109
Peter Pan		36 305
Peter's Mother		153
Philosooma		55
Physical Culture		7
Pierrot and Pierrette		266
Pin and the Pudding The		186
Pinkie and the Fairies		302
Prisoner of the Bastille		124
Prisoner of Zenda The		4
Proud Prince. The		202
Psyche	(Ballet)	78
Real Woman The		55
Roberto le Diavolo	(Ballet)	172
Romeo and Juliet		98
Round the World	(Ballet)	228
Russian Tragedy. a		278
Samson		33
School for Scandal The		79
Servant in the House The		257
Sense of Humour. a		191
She Stoops to Conquer		52
Shewing up of Blanco Posnet. The		288
Sir Walter Raleigh		246
Spare Room. The		59
Smith		240
Soul's Flight. a		46
Strife		65
Thalia's Tea Cup		180
Thief. The		123
Three Musketeers. The		61
Tilda's New Hat		24
Tinker's Wedding. The		266
Trilby		262 270
Truants. The		37
Twelfth Night		122
Two in a Trap		168
Two Little Vagabonds		177
Visit. The		286
What the Public Wants		136
Where Children Rule		294
Whip. The		209
White Man. a		301
Willoxy Pattern Plate The		88
Woman in the Case. The		141

3724
1909
Waters, J.

World and His Wife The 155. 160.
Yeomen of the Guard The 60.

Adelphi of the Merry Widow" 158
Comus and "The Devil 96
Command Performances 270. 273
Failures 57. 171
Library deals 114
Irish plays 151
Objecting to names in a play 15
Promenade Concerts in a Theatre 242
Marie Brenkers failure 57
Merry Widow Farewell 181
Shakespeare Festival 164
Westminster Gazette & George Edwardes 232

3724
1909

GARRICK THEATRE
THE ADVENTURE of LADY URSULA

Miss Evelyn Millard

3724
1909
Waters, J.

THE GARRICK.

On Tuesday, Jan. 5, revival of the Play, in Four Acts, by Anthony Hope, entitled "THE ADVENTURE OF LADY URSULA."

EVELYN MILLARD'S Season

(Under the Direction of MR. TOM B. DAVIS)

TUESDAY, JANUARY 5TH, 1909, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30

The Adventure of Lady Ursula

By ANTHONY HOPE

(By arrangement with Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN)

The Lady Ursula Barrington	Miss EVELYN MILLARD
Dorothy Fenton	Miss DORA BARTON
Mrs. Fenton	Miss DOLORES DRUMMOND
Sir George Sylvester	Mr. HERBERT WARING
Mr. Dent	Mr. CHARLES FULTON
The Earl of Hassenden	Mr. J. L. MACKAY
The Rev. Mr. Blimboe	Mr. LYTTON GREY
Mr. Castleton ... ..., ...	Mr. OWEN ROUGHWOOD (by permission of Mr. Lewis Waller)
Quilton	Mr. EVELYN VERNON
Sir Robert Clifford...	Mr. HEATH HAVILAND
Mr. Devereux	Mr. GERALD JEROME
Mr. Ward	Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
Mills	Mr. JOHN W. LAURENCE
Servant	Mr. FRANK H. DANBY

ACT I. ... ... The Earl of Hassenden's House at Edgware
ACT II. ... ... Sir George Sylvester's House at Edgware
ACT III. Lord Hassenden's Lodging in London near St. James's Palace
ACT IV. ... . Sir George Sylvester's House at Edgware

CRITERION THEATRE.

Lessee ... SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Messrs. SPIERS & POND, Ltd.

On WEDNESDAY, Jan. 6th, and every evening at 9, for a limited number of nights.

Mrs. GORRINGE'S NECKLACE.

By HUBERT HENRY DAVIES.

3724
1909

Captain Mowbray (Retired)	Mr. YORKE STEPHENS
Colonel Jardine (Retired)	Mr. FRED LEWIS
	(By arrangement with Mr. FRED HARRISON)
Lieutenant David Cairn	Mr. LESLIE FABER
Mr. Jernigan (A Detective Inspector) ...	Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Charles (A Footman)	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
Mrs. Jardine	Miss MARIE ILLINGTON
Isabel Kirke...	Miss DOROTHY THOMAS
Vicky Jardine	Miss ELFRIDA CLEMENT
Miss Potts	Miss ETHEL MARRYATT
AND
Mrs. GORRINGE	Miss MARY MOORE

The Scene of the Play is laid in the Library in Colonel Jardine's House.

The Action takes place near a Garrison Town at a little distance from London, and covers a period of about 20 hours.

Preceded at 8.30 by

THE AMERICAN WIDOW.

By Miss ROSINA FILIPPI.

The Earl of Somerville	Mr. JOHN TOKE
Mrs. Vanbright	Miss FRANCES VINE

Scene—Office of Mr. Wells (Solicitor).

Programme of Music.

March	"Maitres d'Armes"		Gauvin
	ACT I.
Overture	"Light Cavalry"		Von Suppé
	ACT II.
a Waltzer	"Amoretten Täuz"		Gungl
b Morceau Ancien	"Pomponette"		Durand
	ACT III.
a Serenade	"Lyrique"		Elgar
b Dances from "Nell Gwynne"			Germain
	ACT IV.
a Song	"A Summer's Night"		Goring Thomas
b Czardas	"Danse Styrienne"		Michiels

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 3.

Musical Director	Mr. E LOCKWOOD
Stage Manager	Mr. REGINALD WALTER
General Manager	Mr. A. F. HENDERSON

On Thursday, January 7th, and every evening at 8,

A new Romantic Play in Four Acts, entitled,

"HENRY OF NAVARRE."

By WILLIAM DEVEREUX.

Charles IX. (King of France)	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
Henry de Bourbon (King of Navarre)	Mr. FRED TERRY
Henry (Duc de Guise)	Mr. A. E. ANSON
Henry (Duc d'Anjou)	Mr. HARRY F. WRIGHT
Arthur de Mouhy (a Huguenot Leader)	Mr. WALTER EDWIN
Cosmo Ruggieri (an Astrologer)	Mr. HORACE HODGES
Marshal de Tavannes	Mr. J. CARTER-EDWARDS
Chancellor de Birague	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Duc de Retz	Mr. MAURICE TOSH
Duc de la Rochefoucauld	Mr. C. R. GIBBON
M. dés Valles	Mr. MAURICE ELVEY
M. de Besme	Mr. PHILIP MERIVALE
Nancey (Captain of the King's Guard)	Mr. SYDNEY PORTER
Page	Mr. R. EASTEN PICKERING
Catherine de Medici (the Queen Mother)	Miss TITA BRAND
Marie Belleforet	Miss KATHLEEN DOYLE
Charlotte de Sauve	Miss GLADYS GARDNER
La Belle Dayole	Miss KITTY CARTERET
Mdlle. de Montmorenci (La Belle Hosseuse)	Miss GWEN THOMAS
Mdlle. de Torigni	Miss BEATRICE MANNING
Marguerite de Valois	Miss JULIA NEILSON

Courtiers, Soldiers, Servants, &c.: Misses GRAHAM, WHITNEY, TERRY: Messrs. GRAHAM, RHODES, GAZE, SHEPHERD, COAN-BUSH.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act I.—July 8th ... ... Ante-Room in the Louvre
Act II.—August 21st ... ... Room in the Louvre
Act III. Aug. 21st, evening - Marguerite's Apartments in the Louvre
Period, 1572.
Act IV., Scene I.—August 23rd ... ... Charles IX.'s Private Room
Scene II.—August 23rd Marguerite's Apartments in the Louvre
An Interval of ten minutes between each Act.

Miss JULIA NEILSON's Dresses specially designed and executed by Mrs. NETTLESHIP, Wigmore Street, W.
The Dance in the Second Act arranged by Mr. JOHN D'AUBAN.
Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN. Scenery by R. C. McCLEERY. Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by Messrs GILL & BUGATTI.
The Play produced under the direction of Mr. FRED TERRY. The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. SYDNEY FFOULKES.

MATINEES—WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13th, & EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Henry of Navarre"	Sydney Ffoulkes
	AFTER ACT I.
BALLET RUSSE		Luigini
	AFTER ACT II.
a. INVITATION À LA VALSE		Weber
b. INTERMEZZO		Mascagni
	AFTER ACT III.
a. ANDANTE AND RONDO CAPRICCIOSO		Mendelssohn
b. CORONATION MARCH		German

General Manager	Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT	Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. GOODWIN NOCK
Stage Manager	Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL	Advertisement Manager	Mr. ALFRED W. POPE

NEW
THEATRE,
St. Martin's Lane.

EVENING
Thursday Jan 7
1909

Orch. Stall, 10/6

No K 190

Left [To be retained

3724
1909

The keynote of the play is struck at the beginning. We listen to the plottings of Catherine de Medici; we are shown the timorous scruples of Charles IX.; and the characters of Henry de Bourbon and Marguerite de Valois are drawn in a very diverting scene, in which he piques his future wife by assuming a rustic and boorish air, and then making love to her in the most ardent, poetic, and romantic manner. Henry knows that he is surrounded by enemies, Catherine especially being anxious to get rid of him; but he remains at Court, partly for the sake of the Huguenot cause, partly for the love of Marguerite. He cannot quite make up his mind whether she is in the plot against his life; and his final words in the first act are, "Does Marguerite know?"

The Court astrologer and purveyor of poisons, Cosmo Ruggieri, thinking that Henry is certain to become King, gives him a ring the stone of which will change colour if placed near poison. In doubt as to his wife's complicity, he neglects her to such an extent that, in a moment of bitter resentment, she makes an assignation with Henry's deadliest enemy, the Duc de Guise. Then comes an explanation between her and her husband. Henry convinces her of his affection, and she tries to cancel the appointment with De Guise. The end of this second act is irresistibly effective. The Queen-Mother has given Marguerite some deadly poison, and has told her that it is a love-philtre. Marguerite, at a ball at the Louvre, drops this into a goblet of wine and hands it to Henry. The magic ring turns green; Henry's suspicion is aroused, and he asks her to drink first, which she joyously prepares to do, when he dashes the cup down, as if by accident, snatches up another, and drains it to her health.

In the third act Henry's jealousy is excited by rumours that his wife has made an assignation with De Guise; and the King of Navarre at first prepares to kill the Duc. Then he perceives that the Queen-Mother is using the situation for her purposes. Whichever is the victor in the duel, she will have one enemy the less. He resolves not to fall into the error of slaying De Guise, which would raise the population of Paris, to his ruin; and when Marguerite, on De Guise's arrival in her apartment, cries for help, Henry arrives, masked and disguised, assists the Duc to escape by a rope ladder, and presents himself to the King and courtiers, who come expecting to find De Guise. "Where should a husband be," says Henry, "but in his wife's bedroom?"

The last act is very strong indeed. Charles's consent to "St. Bartholomew" is obtained; the massacre begins, and Henry dashes into the fray to save De Mouhy, bringing him in wounded. De Guise and his men enter, and the Duc turns from Henry with scorn when he sees the white band which Marguerite—like the lady in Millais' picture—unknown to Henry, has bound to his arm to save him. Henry tears the false badge off indignantly, and is hard pressed, but he is saved by the King for Marguerite and future greatness.

3724
1909

TO-NIGHT AT 8

CHARLES FROHMAN and ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH

PRESENT

Miss MARIE TEMPEST

In a Comedy in Three Acts, entitled

PENELOPE

By W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

Penelope	Miss Marie Tempest
Dr. O'Farrell	Mr. Graham Browne
Professor Golightly	Mr. Alfred Bishop
Mrs. Golightly	Miss Kate Bishop
Mr. Davenport Barlow	Mr. Eric Lewis
Mrs. Ferguson	Miss Norma Whalley
Mr. Beadsworth	Mr. Herbert Ross
Mrs. Watson	Mrs. Calvert
Mr. Anderson	Mr. J. H. Brewer
Peyton	Miss Ethelwynn Arthur-Jones

ACT I. The Drawing-Room at Dr. O'Farrell's House in John Street, Mayfair ACT II. The Consulting Room
ACT III. Penelope's Sitting-Room

The Scenery painted by Messrs. W. Hann & Son.

The Play Produced under the Direction of Mr. DION BOUCICAULT.

Miss Tempest's Costumes by Madam Hayward, New Bond Street.
Miss Norma Whalley's by Martial & Armand, Place Vendome, Paris. Miss Kate Bishop's by Madam Marchant, 65, Margaret Street, W.
Miss Whalley's Hats by the Maison Lewis, Regent Street.

The Piano supplied by Archibald Ramsden, Limited, 103, New Bond Street.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. Herbert E. Haines.

Overture	"Lurline"	Wallace
Suite Enfantine	1. Dance des Enfants 2. Dance des Galants 3. Dance des Filles	Lardelli
(a) Entr'acte	"A Venetian Romance"	Herbert E. Haines
(b) Selection	"King of Cadonia"	Sidney Jones
March

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Business Manager	(For Charles Frohman)	JAMES W. MATHEWS
Stage Manager		CLIFFORD BROOKE

Prices. Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.
Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager (For Comedy Theatre) LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 9
Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
9/1/1909
STALL H22
To be retained

The favourable reception given to Mr. W. Somerset Maughan's new comedy at the Comedy on Saturday was chiefly owing to the excellence of the acting. Penelope may be described as consisting of a French philosophical plot, treated in a hybrid spirit, with purely English characters. The effect of thie combination is not entirely satisfying, and is, at times, almost unpleasant. But the interest is never let drop, unless it is at the conclusion, when the long-foreseen dénouement is over-elaborated, and should certainly be condensed.

The plot of Penelope deals with the attempts made by Mrs. O'Farrell, who has been married only five years to a young West End doctor, to win back the affection of her husband, which he has transferred to a married woman named Mrs. Ferguson, whose spouse is a sea captain who is "serving his country" in the Mediterranean. There is a family council in the first act, at which are gathered Penelope's uncle, Mr. Davenport Barlow, an elderly fop with fashionable tastes; her mother, Mrs. Golightly, whose hobby is foreign missionary work; her solicitor, in this case a cypher; and her uncle, Professor Golightly, a mathematician. After the others have said their say, the Professor evolves the theory that Penelope has been treating her husband too well, and has been lavishing her fondness upon him too freely. If, says the Professor, she will only affect entire indifference, both to him personally, and to his infidelity to her, he will in the end be as weary of Mrs. Ferguson's endearments as he has become with respect to his wife's. So Penelope sets to work to try the experiment. Her husband accounts for his frequent absences by a story about a patient, a Mrs. Mack, who frequently requires to be operated upon; and fun is extracted in the customary way from his evasions and excuses. Mrs. Ferguson is a personal friend of Mrs. O'Farrell's; and, believing that the latter is ignorant of the intrigue, comes to see the doctor on pretence of consulting him about her health. So bold do the pair become that they arrange a trip to Paris together, giving out that Dr. O'Farrell has to put the mythical Mrs. Mack on to the Riviera train, while Mrs. Ferguson has been asked by the patient to take the place of her maid, who has been called away. Mrs. O'Farrell thinks that things have gone far enough, and tells her husband that she "knows all." He is astounded, not only at the extent of her information, but at the calm way in which she takes his infidelity. He waxes righteously indignant at her callousness, and reproaches her with it. He, at any rate, he says, has a "moral sense." However, in the end he is so far tamed and subdued by Penelope's attitude that he decides not to go to Paris with Mrs. Fergusson.

That lady's punishment comes in the last act. Penelope plays with her cleverly, until O'Farrell, very awkwardly, breaks off their relations, when Mrs. Ferguson flies into a passion, and pretends that she never cared for him. She is induced to console herself with Mr. Barlow, and then the erring husband has to make his peace with his wife. She delays her pardon for some time, but eventually grants it; and on their reconciliation the curtain falls.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

EVENINGS at 8. MATINEES AT 2.

The Romantic Comedy in Four Acts entitled

[illegible] of Dobson's

By CICELY HAMILTON.

MISS SMITHERS	Assistants living-in at Dobson's	MISS NANNIE BENNETT
MISS KITTY BRANT		MISS MARY BARTON
MISS JAY		MISS MURIEL VOX
MISS DIANA MASSINGBIRD ...		MISS LENA ASHWELL
MISS MORTON		MISS DORIS LYTTON
MISS PRINGLE	(Forewoman at Dobson's)	MISS AIDA PALMER
MRS. CANTELUPE		MISS FRANCES IVOR
WAITER		MR. W. LEMMON WARDE
MRS. WHYTE FRYSER		MISS GERTRUDE SCOUT
SIR JABEZ GRINLAY, Bart. (Grinlay's Emporium Ltd.)		MR. DENNIS EADIE
CAPT. THE HON. VICTOR BRETHERTON (Late Welsh Guards)		MR. C. M. HALLARD
OLD WOMAN		MISS BERYL MERCER
POLICE CONSTABLE FELLOWES		MR. NORMAN McKINNEL

THE NAMES OF THE CHARACTERS ARE GIVEN IN THE ORDER OF THEIR APPEARANCE ON THE STAGE.

ACT I. One of the Assistants' Dormitories at Dobson's Drapery Establishment. NEW (14 days elapse).

ACT II. Public Sitting Room, Hotel Engadine, Pontresina. Evening. (07 days elapse).

ACT III. The same. Morning. (14 weeks elapse).

ACT IV. The Thames Embankment. SAME TIME—THE PRESENT.

Scenery by H. POLLS. Dresses by POWER, 13 Conduit Street. Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

STAGE MANAGER - - MR. MAITLAND DICKER.

Preceded each evening at 7.30 by:

By EDWARD PARRY

CHARLOTTE GARVICE ...	MISS GERTRUDE SCOTT
PETER GARVICE ...	MR. MAITLAND DICKER
LANCELOT BRAGBY	MR. DENNIS EADIE
JOHN McINYRE	MR. C. M. HALLARD

SCENE—The Garvices' Living Room, at 7, Link Street, Blackborough.

THE KINGSWAY STRING QUARTETT

MR. PHILIP CATHIE (First Violin) MR. LLOYD DAVIES (Viola) MR. HORACE FELLOWES (Second Violin) MR. JACQUES RENARD (Violoncello) and MR. STANLEY HAWLEY (Pianoforte and Director of Music)

FOR PROGRAMME OF MUSIC SEE PAGE 4.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Management.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer at Matinees during and after the performance.

Opera Glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

No charge is made for the use of the Cloak Rooms, and no gratuities are allowed.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be painted on every part [illegible]. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all doors and entrance doors which must open outwards. Where there is a fire proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions whether permanent or temporary.

PROPRIETRESS - - - - MISS LENA ASHWELL.

BUSINESS MANAGER - - - MR. WALTER MAXWELL.

KINGSWAY THEATRE

11/1/1909

Stall

E 18

To be retained

D-10
3724
1909

"THE GONDOLIERS" AT THE SAVOY.

The Comic Opera, in Two Acts, Written by W. S. Gilbert, Composed by Arthur Sullivan, revived at the Savoy Theatre on Monday, Jan. 18.

SAVOY THEATRE.

SOLE LESSEE AND MANAGER, MRS. D'OYLY CARTE. 18/1/1907

THIS EVENING AT 8.25.

The ORIGINAL COMIC OPERA in Two Acts, entitled

THE GONDOLIERS

OR,

THE KING OF BARATARIA.

Written by W. S. GILBERT. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

THE DUKE OF PLAZA-TORO	MR. C. H. WORKMAN.
LUIZ, his Attendant	MR. LEO SHEFFIELD.
DON ALHAMBRA DEL BOLERO, the Grand Inquisitor	MR. RUTLAND BARRINGTON.
MARCO PALMIERI ...	MR. HENRY HERBERT.
GIUSEPPE PALMIERI	MR. HENRY A. LYTTON.
ANTONIO ... ... Partners	MR. FREDERICK H. WEVILL.
GIORGIO ... ... in Love	MR. CECIL CURTIS.
ANNIBALE	MR. A. LAURENCE CLIFF.
FRANCESCO	MR. ERNEST ELEVAN.
THE DUCHESS OF PLAZA-TORO	MISS LOUIE RENE.
CASILDA, her Daughter	MISS DOROTHY COURT.
GIANETTA	MISS ELSIE SIMS.
TESSA	MISS JESSIE ROSE.
FIAMETTA ... ... Contadine	MISS JESSIE LOGAN.
GIULIA ...	MISS MARIENNE ANGEAN.
VITTORIA	MISS BEATRICE LOARER.
INEZ, the King's Foster Mother	MISS AMY ROYSTON.

Chorus of Gondoliers, Pages, Contadine, etc.

Act I. . . The Piazetta, Venice A Terrace and Hall.
Act II. . . Pavilion in the Palace of Barataria Throne.

DATE 1750.

There will be an interval of about 15 minutes between Acts I and II.

Dresses by Madame LEWIS, and Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & CO., 7 & 8, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Management do not guarantee the appearance of any individual Artist.
All letters on any business connected with the Savoy Theatre to be addressed to Mrs. D'OYLY CARTE, and not to any individual official.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR	MR. FRANCOIS CELLIER
STAGE MANAGER	MR. ALBERT JAMES
ACTING MANAGER	MR. HAPPY P. TOWERS

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

Sole Lessees and Managers ... ... A. & S. GATTI.

Under the Management of A. & S. GATTI.

On Tuesday Evening, January 19th, 1909

And Every Evening at 8.30

OLIVE LATIMER'S HUSBAND

A NEW PLAY IN THREE ACTS

By RUDOLF BESIER.

Characters.

Sir Charles Weyburn	Mr. LYN HARDING
Colonel Mapleson-Finch	... Mr. WILFRED DRAYCOTT
Berkeley Ogden, M.P. ...	Mr. CHARLES TROODE
James Morpeth, M.D....	... ... Mr. JAMES HEARN
Doctor Wolfe	... Mr. LESLIE FABER
A Servant	... Mr. NORMAN WRIGHTON
Olive Latimer ...	... Mrs. PATRICK CAMPBELL
Mrs. Mapleson-Finch ...	... Miss HELEN FERRERS.
Doris Mapleson-Finch...	... Miss DAGMAR WIEHE
Mrs. O'Connor ...	... ... Miss ELSIE CHESTER
Nurse Cary	... Miss BELLE NAPIER

Scene - At Brockham Lacey, Harry Latimer's Home
(W. Harford)

The Action takes place between 6 p.m. and 10.15 p.m. on a Winter's Evening.

A minute is supposed to elapse between Acts I. and II., two hours between Acts II. and III.

Produced under the Direction of Mr. FREDERICK KERR

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

a. MAZURKA ...
b. SERENADE ...		Elgar
c. GAVOTTE ...	"Contrasts"
a. SERENATA ...		Moszkowski
b. HUNGARIAN DANCES ...		Brahms
SUITE "Casse Noisette" ...		Tschaikowsky

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. EDWARD JONES.

Costumes worn by MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL and MISS DAGMAR WIEHE by MARTIAL & ARMAND.

Costumes worn by MISS HELEN FERRERS by REVILLE & ROSSITER, Ltd.

Riding Habit by BUSVINES, Ltd

Hunting Suits by HAMMOND & Co., Ltd.

Furniture by WARINGS, Ltd. Wigs by CLARKSON

"OLIVE LATIMER'S HUSBAND" will shortly be preceded by a new Comedy in one act from the pen of Mr. KEBLE HOWARD, entitled "THE DRAMATIST AT HOME," in which Mr. and Mrs. LESLIE FABER will appear.

Ices, Tea, and Coffee can be had of the Attendants.

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs A & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End and City Supply Co. Ltd.

Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s

Doors open 7.0 and 8.0. Commence at 2.30 and 8.30

Telephone No 3815 Gerrard.

Box Office (Mr. ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

Business Manager ... ... HERBERT CLARK

D-10
3724
1909

"OLIVE LATIMER'S WIFE."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—In your issue of Tuesday last a special paragraph was devoted to the production of "Olive Latimer's Husband," by Mr. Rudolf Besier, and which is to take place at the Vaudeville Theatre on Tuesday next. The Daily Telegraph therein stated that the characters in this piece were (inter alia):

Colonel Mapleson-Finch,
Mrs. Mapleson-Finch,
Doris Mapleson-Finch.

As I am the only Colonel Mapleson in existence, and the head of the sole Mapleson family, I wrote to Messrs. Gatti, who are producing the play, stating that although I do not personally object to chaff and innocent joking, I should strongly resent anything in this play which made Mrs. Mapleson or my niece, Miss Doris Mapleson, appear ridiculous, and I drew the attention of Messrs. Gatti to the statement made by The Daily Telegraph.

Without admitting or denying the same, Messrs. Gatti wrote me on Saturday last that the name Mapleson would be dropped throughout the play, and the above characters alluded to would be Colonel Finch, Mrs. Finch, and Miss Finch. I have, nevertheless, arranged for my solicitor and a shorthand writer to be present. What is particularly annoying to me is that the announcement in The Daily Telegraph has considerably upset my niece, who is governess to a distinguished Welsh England county family, and they having read this announcement in your paper have told my niece that they consider it very objectionable for the name of the governess to their children to appear in the bill of a Vaudeville play, and that it is very bad taste on my part to drag my niece (who is an orphan) into my (sic) theatrical speculations.

I feel sure that nothing short of a letter disowning all connection with the announcement in The Daily Telegraph and with the production of "Olive Latimer's Husband" will convince my nieces employers to the contrary.

Perhaps I ought to admit that I was nicknamed Colonel Finch by my dear and highly-esteemed friend, the late Richard Mansfield, in consequence of a satirical notice which appeared in the Boston Herald many years ago, when I unsuccessfully produced an opera called "Pedette" in Boston. The adverse criticism in question finished with these words: "Colonel Mapleson's aviary of canated nightingales proved to be very ordinary finches." Hence my nickname of Finch, and which I imagined was ancient history.—Yours, &c.,

HENRY MAPLESON, Colonel.
27, St. James's-street, S.W., Jan. 17.

"OLIVE LATIMER'S HUSBAND."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—We have read with considerable surprise Colonel Mapleson's letter in your columns this morning. As it may be thought that this represents the correspondence between us, we beg to send herewith copies of the originals, and shall be obliged if you will publish same.—We are, Sir, yours faithfully,

A. and S. GATTI.

[Copy.]

Mapleson and Co. (Ltd.), 47, Charing-cross-road, W.C., Jan. 14, 1909.

Messrs A. and S. Gatti, Vaudeville Theatre.

Dear Sirs—My attention has been drawn to a paragraph in The Daily Telegraph of the 12th inst., wherein it is stated that you purpose giving a new play on the 19th inst., entitled "Olive Latimer's Husband," wherein the characters (inter alia) are:

Colonel Mapleson-Finch,
Mrs. Mapleson-Finch,
Doris Mapleson-Finch.

Inasmuch as I am the only Colonel Mapleson, and that there is no other family in existence but mine of this name, it is obvious that these characters will be taken as referring to myself and family.

I am a thorough sportsman, and can stand a joke or chaff as well as anyone, but I shall resent anything which is likely to hold me or my family up to public ridicule. As my relations with the late Messrs. Gatti were always of the most friendly character, I write you in advance of the production of this play so as to preclude the possibility of any unpleasantness afterwards.—Awaiting the favour of your reply, yours faithfully, (Signed) HENRY MAPLESON, Colonel.

[Copy.]

Dear Sirs—We are in receipt of yours of the 14th inst., taking exception to our use of the name "Mapleson-Finch" in our forthcoming production. We would, in the first place, assure you that the author has no idea of a personal allusion, you being, as a matter of fact, entirely unknown to him. Further, we would point out to you that the name of the character is "Mapleson Finch," and that he is alluded to throughout the play as Colonel Finch, and his wife as Mrs. Finch.

Trusting that this explanation will be satisfactory, we are, yours faithfully, (Signed) A. and S. GATTI.

Vaudeville Theatre, Managers, A. and S. Gatti, London, Jan. 18.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell opened at the Vaudeville on Tuesday in a new play by Mr. Rudolf Besier entitled Olive Latimer's Husband. Mr. Besier is the author of The Virgin Goddess, which was produced at the Adelphi in 1906; and his latest effort is quite in harmony with the genius of Mrs. Campbell, who plays the principal part in a style which may well be termed inimitable. The piece is short—it only plays about a couple of hours—and the theme is a sad and bitter one; but Mr. Besier's treatment of it is so straightforward and sincere, so free from sensuous suggestion, and so ennobled by the spirit of suffering that the general effect is not repellant; and the interest from beginning to end is tensely sustained..

The action takes place at a country house. The owner, Harry Latimer, is lying seriously ill of typhoid fever. The history of his marriage with his wife Olive is a painful one. Her parents, Colonel and Mrs. Mapleson-Finch, are greedy worldlings, who are willing, indeed desirous, to sell their daughters in the highest bidder in the matrimonial market. Latimer fell passionately in love with Miss Olive Mapleson-Finch, and she was disposed of to him in the usual manner. Before marriage, however, she told him that she could never love him; but he was so infatuated that he consented to wed her in the hope that she might learn to do so in the end. Instead of this, she grew to detest him, and took as a lover a young man named Sir Charles Weyburn, an old schoolfellow of Latimer's and his dearest friend. This is the situation when the curtain rises on a sitting-room at Brockham Lacey, with a second doctor being telephoned for, and a general atmosphere of anxiety and dread. The Colonel and his wife are exempt from these feelings, their minds being occupied with scheming for the sale of their second daughter, Doris, to an elderly and absurdly egoistical M.P., Mr. Berkeley Ogden. The Colonel, an easy-going, stupid creature, who lets all his acquaintances sponge on him, is under the domination of his wife, a hard, crafty, and merciless woman, who fully appreciates her husband's incapacity for intrigue. The doctor, an old friend of Latimer's, arrives, and discovers that the night before the patient made his condition dangerous by getting out of bed and writing a letter to Sir Charles. Mrs. Latimer, a Miss Cary, and Mrs. O'Connor, an old family servant, have been doing the nursing; which of them is responsible for Latimer having been thus allowed to leave his bed? Mrs. O'Connor says she never left the room, but admits that she felt asleep for a couple of hours. The doctor does all that he can to unravel the mystery; but he does not succeed in finding out the truth, which is that Mrs. Latimer came into the room while Mrs. O'Connor was asleep, and did not wake her, thus leaving Latimer uncontrolled. Olive imagines that her husband saw the hatred in her face when she entered, and that the letter he has written to Sir Charles contains an account of her heartless conduct; and she endeavours in vain to get the doctor to give up the letter. When Sir Charles arrives, his love for Olive is eclipsed by the pangs of conscience, for Latimer sinks and dies. The unhappy woman sees her sister about to make the same mistake in life as she—Olive—committed in marrying a man she could not love; and she violently opposes the sacrifice. Her mother and father—the latter is chronically impecunious, and hopes to borrow of his future son-in-law—are highly indignant; and Mrs. Mapleson-Finch continues to coerce Doris, to whom Mrs. Latimer makes a very eloquent appeal. Both Olive and Sir Charles suffer keenly under their punishment. He is tortured by remorse at the thought of his treachery to his friend; and she is in terror lest the reading of the letter shall kill his love for her. In the last act, driven to desperation, and determined at all cost to save Doris from a similar fate, Mrs. Latimer confesses that she wilfully left her husband unattended, wishing that he might die. Doris rebels, and refuses to marry Ogden. Olive demands from Weyburn the letter, which he has not yet read, and says she will read it aloud. To her surprise, it contains, instead of the expected denunciation, a confession of the writer's fault in marrying Olive as he did, and a wish that she may be happy with Sir Charles. But the experience she has gone through has killed her love for him, or, at any rate, made her feel that they must separate, though he departs saying that he shall always love her to the end. "Leave me alone with my husband!" says Mrs. Latimer, standing in a kind of trance; and on this impressive finale the curtain falls.

3724
1909

GAIETY THEATRE.

MANAGER ... ... MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

To-Night, Saturday, January 23rd, 1909, at 8,

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES

Will produce a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled

"OUR MISS GIBBS,"

By "CRYPTOS."

Constructed by JAMES T. TANNER.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS and PERCY GREENBANK.

Music by IVAN CARYLL and LIONEL MONCKTON.

The Honourable Hughie Pierrepoint ...	(an Amateur Criminal)	Mr. GEORGE GROSSMITH, Jun.
The Earl of St. Ives ...	(Lord Eynsford's Father) ...	Mr. O. B. CLARENCE
Slithers ...	(a Professional Crook)	... Mr. ROBERT HALE
Mr. Toplady ...	(Manager at Garrod's)	Mr. ARTHUR HATHERTON
Lord Eynsford ...	... (in love with Mary) ...	Mr. J. EDWARD FRASER
Mr. Beavis ...	... (the Earl's Family Solicitor) ...	Mr. J. A. EVELYN
A Taxi Cabby ...	... ...	Mr. F. PAYNE
Mr. Amalfy ...	(the Director General of the White City)	Mr. H. BURCHER
	AND
Timothy Gibbs ...	(Mary's Yorkshire Cousin) ...	Mr. EDMUND PAYNE
Lady Elizabeth Thanet	(engaged to Lord Eynsford) ...	Miss DENISE ORME
Madame Jearne ...	(Modiste at Garrod's) ...	Miss JEAN AYLWIN
The Duchess of Minster ...	(Lady Elizabeth's Mother)	Miss GLADYS HOMFREY
Mrs. Farquhar ...	(an Impecunious Woman of Fashion)	Miss MAISIE GAY
Clarita		Miss KITTY MASON
Nora }		Miss OLIVE MAY
Sheilah }	(Colleens of Irish Village at the White City)	Miss ADELINE BALFE
Kathleen }		Miss ROSIE BEGARNIE
		Miss GLADYS COOPER
Lady Connie		Miss JULIA JAMES
Lady Sybil		Miss ENID LESLIE
Lady Trixie		Miss CRISSY BELL
Lady Angela		Miss SUZANNE SELBOURNE
Lady Muriel		Miss GERTIE THORNTON
Lady Gwen
	AND
Mary Gibbs ...	("Our Miss Gibbs") ...	Miss GERTIE MILLAR

Girls at the Stores:—Mesdames Madge Melbourne, Ida Barnard, Rhona Dalvy, Joe Howard, Gladys Carrington, Pattie Wells, Irene Warren, Shirley Power, Pauline Francis, Nancy More, Marjorie Michie, Marjorie Napier, Ruby Kennedy, Ruth Argent, Gertrude Birch, Marie Dean.

Dudes:—Messrs. G. Grundy, E. Camp, A. Fraser, J. Redmond, C. Cameron, S. Lyndon.

D-10
3724
1909

ACT I. ... ... Garrod's Stores (Joseph Harker).

ACT II. ... Court of Honour at Franco-British Exhibition (Joseph Harker).

Owing to the elaborate nature of the change of Scene, there will be an interval of 20 minutes between Acts I. and II.

The Play produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES and Mr. EDWARD ROYCE.

Orchestra under the direction of Mr. IVAN CARYLL.

Costumes designed by SIGNOR COMELLI

And executed by MARCAINE LACROIX, Paris, Madame LUCILLE, Madame HERBERT, Miss FISHER, B. J. SIMMONS & Co., Cox in Garden, JOHNS & BONHAM, Ltd., 14, King Street, St. James', BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS, MORRIS ANGEL & SON, and HARROD'S, Ltd.

Millinery by MAISON LEWIS, L. L. LEVILLON, and GAINSBOROUGH, Ltd.

Wigs by W. CLARKSON. Shoes by H. & M. RAYNE.

Furniture by J. S. LYON

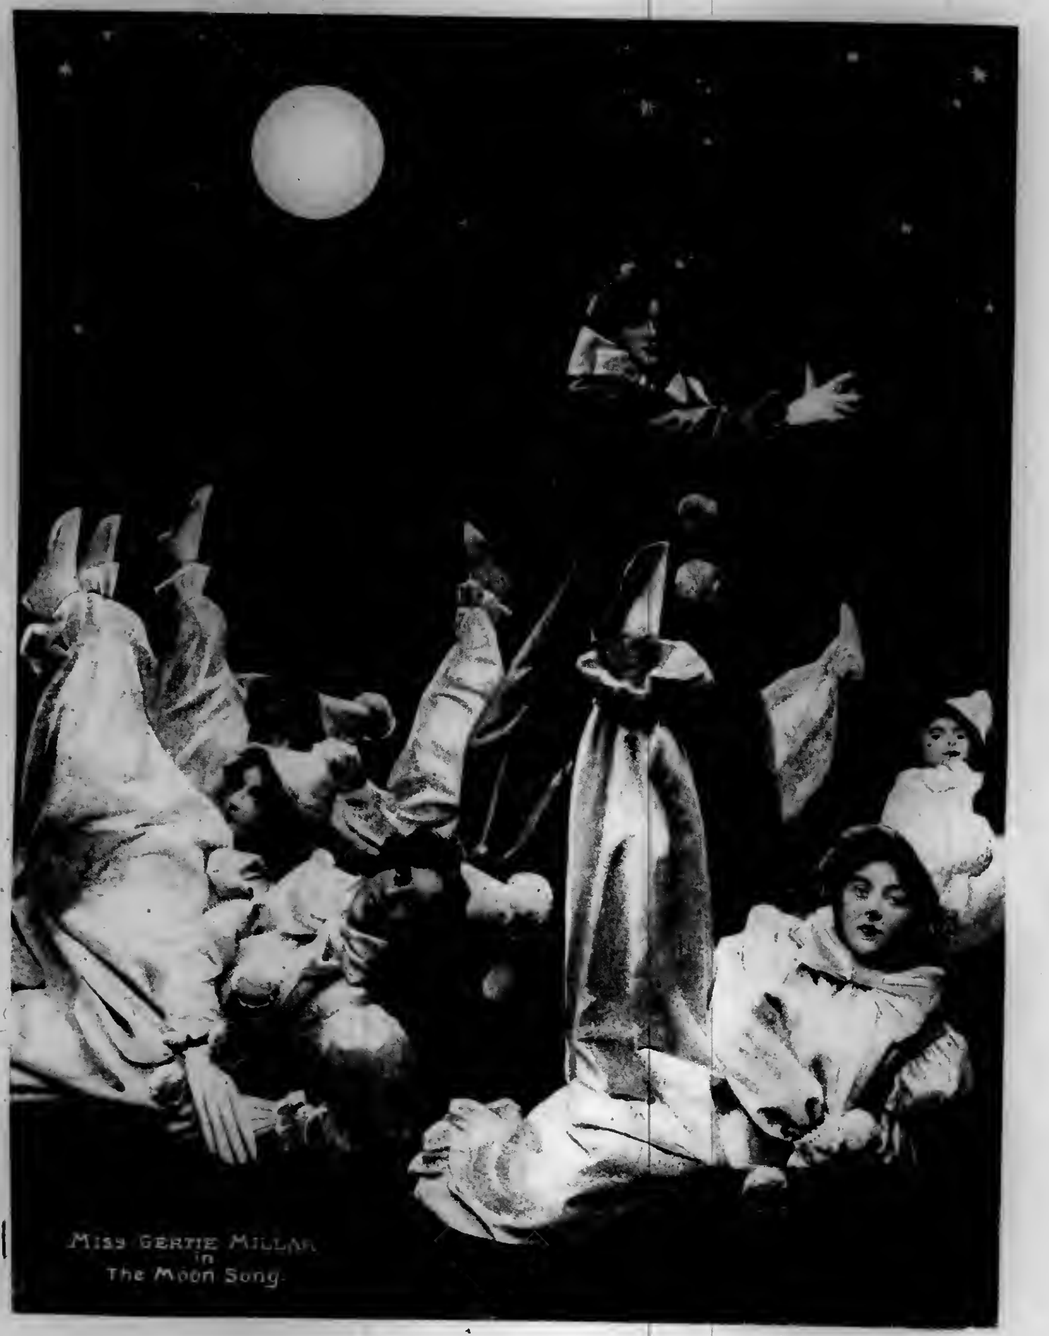
Properties by H. W. ELLIOTT. Electrical Effects by G. A. APPLEBEE.

Machinist, T. SHELDON

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. EDWARD ROYCE.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY from 10 till 10.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN



(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.
(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors which must open outwards.
(3) Where there is a Fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.
Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium
All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

The reception of Our Miss Gibbs at the Gaiety left no room for any doubt of the success of the piece, and a long run for it is absolutely assured. The result has been secured by Mr. George Edwardes's genius for the production of musical plays. How he has managed, for these many years past, to keep the lamp of entertainment burning at the Gaiety is astonishing; but the fact remains, and another leaf was added to the laurels of the great Provider last Saturday. Whoever "Cryptos" may be, he is certainly inventive. The plot of Our Miss Gibbs is not only amusing; it is never entirely abandoned. When Mr. Edwardes has a weak scenario he knows—none better than he—how to bolster it up with accessories and embellishments; but he is wise enough to let a good story alone. The fun of the libretto of Our Miss Gibbs is obtained from the adventures of a countryman in London. Timothy Gibbs, a Yorkshire rustic, comes up to town to play in the brass band contest with a local band at the Crystal Palace. He is the cousin of Mary Gibbs, a very pretty and popular young lady, who presides over the flower department at "Garrod's" Stores. At this colossal establishment he meets with the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint, an "amateur criminal," who is instructed by a professional "crook" called Slithers, a smart and plausible person of good appearance and address. Pierrepoint has stolen the Ascot Gold Cup, which has been won by the Earl of St. Ives, and is carrying the trophy about with him in an ordinary leather bag. This happens to be of the same size and pattern as Timothy's, and the bags are accidentally exchanged. When Timothy opens Pierrepoint's bag and finds the cup, the "crook" takes it away from him, and places it in the safe deposit of the establishment. Mary is not without her anxieties. She has been courted by and has fallen in love with a young man who has represented himself to be a bank clerk, but is really the Earl of St. Ives's son, Lord Eynsford. The Duchess of Minster wants to marry him to her daughter Lady Elizabeth Thanet, and comes to "Garrod's" with the Earl's solicitor, Mr. Beavis, to try and buy Mary off. As she thinks she knows nothing of Lord Eynsford Miss Gibbs is highly indignant, and the first act ends with her discovery of her lover's identity, her rejection of his pleadings and excuses, and her departure, with the rest of the leading characters, for the White City, under the wing of an impecunious lady of fashion whom she has helped to obtain some new frocks.

In the second act, at the White City, Timothy's troubles increase. He is implicated in the theft of the cup, and trembles when he reads in the papers that the thief is in London "disguised as a countryman," and that the Earl's bloodhounds have been sent to assist the police. So he dresses as a competitor for the Marathon race, and rushes wildly from the pursuit of imaginary dogs. In the end the Earl gets back his cup, and is so charmed with Miss Gibbs that he consents to the marriage; and Timothy, after so many troubles, returns to Yorkshire and peace.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J

Miss GERTIE MILLAR
in
The Moon Song.

3724
1909
Waters, J.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

Under the Management of A. & S. GATTI.

EVERY EVENING AT 9,

OLIVE LATIMER'S HUSBAND

Preceded at 8.30 by a Comedy in One Act, entitled—

THE DRAMATIST AT HOME

By KEBLE HOWARD.

Ralph (a newly discovered Dramatist) Mr. LESLIE FABER
Margery (his Wife) ... ... Mrs. LESLIE FABER

Scene—RALPH'S STUDY.

Comedy, in One Act, by Keble Howard, produced at the Vaudeville Theatre on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 23.

Ralph .....MR. LESLIE FABER
Margery .....MRS. LESLIE FABER

Hitherto, like Mr. A. W. Pinero and Mr. Henry Arthur Jones in their early years as dramatists, Mr. Keble Howard has been content to give us one-act pieces; and we have been invariably interested by his modest work for the stage—so interested, indeed, that when he decides to "spread" himself, as it were, we think the author of "The Smiths of Surbiton" should be able to write an excellent three-act comedy. Our opinion is prompted by the enjoyment we derived from the neat dialogue and refined and delicate humour of The Dramatist at Home, which was produced at the Vaudeville Theatre on the afternoon of Saturday last in front of Rudolf Besier's powerful piece, Olive Latimer's Husband. Ralph, who has been responsible for successful plays, has reached a thorny situation in the piece that he is writing. A husband tells his wife that their marriage is a mistake: that they are not a bit suited to each other. How should the wife treat this declaration? He is resolved to try the situation on Margery, who comes to his study. When he blurts out the unwelcome confession of the imaginary husband of the play, Margery neither treats him to a burst of indignation nor a flood of tears. She is cool, level-headed, even bantering. It is Ralph that shows temper and want of dignity. Bouncing out of the room for the purpose of looking at the bedroom fire, he gives Margery the opportunity for reading his manuscript. She soon finds a solution to the situation in the play which she thinks will add to its humour, and writing it down hurriedly, pins the sheet of copy to the lamp-shade. Switching off the lights, she reclines on the sofa, hides her face behind a cushion, and pretends to sleep. Ralph returns and reads the additions to his MS. He then understands what a real help to him is Margery, who immediately takes him in her arms when he asks for forgiveness for his stupidity. Possibly Margery will in future collaborate with him.

"THE ADMIRABLE BASHVILLE;
or, CONSTANCY UNREWARDED."

The Play, in One Act, by Bernard Shaw, revived at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 26.

AT 2.30 ON

Tuesday	... ...	January 26th	Tuesday	... ...	February 2nd
Thursday	... ...	,, 28th	Thursday	... ...	,, 4th
Friday	... ...	,, 29th	Friday	... ...	,, 5th will be given

The Admirable Bashville

Or Constancy Unrewarded

Bernard Shaw's Masterpiece

In the Elizabethan Style.

The characters of the play in the order of their appearance.

Lydia	Miss MARIE LÖHR (her first appearance in this part) (By arrangement with Mr. CYRIL MAUDE)
Cashel	Mr. BEN WEBSTER (his original part)
Mellish	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE (his first appearance in this part) (By Courtesy of Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES)
Lucian	Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE (his original part)
Bashville	Mr. HENRY AINLEY (his first appearance in this part) (By Courtesy of Miss EVELYN MILLARD)
Policeman	Mr. HALLIWELL HOBBES (his first appearance in this part) (By Courtesy of Mr. VEDRENNE)
Lord Worthington	Mr. COURTENAY FOOTE (his first appearance in this part)
Cetewayo	Mr. JAMES HEARN (his original part) (By Courtesy of the Messrs. GATTI)
Paradise	Mr. EDWARD SASS (his first appearance in this part) (By Courtesy of Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON)
Adelaide	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI (her first appearance in this part)

Citizens, Zulu Chiefs, Attendants, Spectators, &c., &c.

Beefeaters in charge of the stage ... Mr. HUGH B. TABBERER and Mr. WALTER CREIGHTON.

The period of the play is the Spring and Summer of 1882.

With a view to preserving the strictest unity of place, all the scenes will be presented simultaneously. Full information as to their whereabouts will be communicated to the audience by the Beefeaters in charge of the stage.

There will be no interval between the acts; but the curtain will be lowered for six minutes after the great combat scene whilst the bodies of the slain are being removed.

The incidental music is by Wagner and other composers of eminence.

The traditions of the Elizabethan stage will be more or less strictly adhered to in the representation of the play.

3724
1909
Waters, J.

The Performance will conclude with

A Play in One Act by GEORGE PASTON.

Mrs. Fishwick ... ... Miss AGNES THOMAS
(By Courtesy of Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON)

Tilda (her Daughter) ... ... Miss FLORENCE LLOYD

Walter Emerson ... ... Mr. NORMAN PAGE

Daisy Meadows' ... ... Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
(By Courtesy of Mr. OSWALD STOLL)

SCENE—A Room in a Tenement House, Clerkenwell.

OVERTURE - - - - - "Alceste" - - - - - Chr. W. v. Gluck.

AFTER THE COMBAT SCENE.

ALLEGRETTO CON GRAZIA FROM THE "SYMPHONY PATHETIQUE" - - - - - P. Tschaikowsky.

BEFORE 'TILDA'S NEW HAT.

INVITATION A LA VALSE - - - - - - - - - - C. M. v. Weber.

Incidental Music arranged by ADOLF SCHMID.

Musical Director—Mr. ADOLF SCHMID.

Stage Manager—Mr. CECIL KING. Associate Stage Manager—Mr. STANLEY BELL.

GENERAL MANAGERS - - - - - - - - - { HENRY DANA / FREDERICK WHELEN

Copies of the After noon Theatre edition of THE ADMIRABLE BASHVILLE can be obtained from the attendants, price One Shilling.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

NOTICE.—Mr. TREE begs to announce that on Tuesday, February 16th, and Every Evening, will be revived

THE DANCING GIRL

BY HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

The Cast will include:

MR. TREE
MR. LOUIS CALVERT
MR. A. VANE-TEMPEST
MR. NORMAN PAGE
MISS MARIE LÖHR
MR. BASIL GILL
MR. G. W. ANSON
MR. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
MISS ROSINA FILIPPI
MISS ALICE CRAWFORD

First Matinee SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, and every following Wednesday and Saturday.

The Safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE NOW OPEN.

An altogether enjoyable and extremely amusing piece is The Admirable Bashville, which was produced, with little renown, at the Imperial Theatre on June 8, 1903. The impression produced by its revival at the Afternoon Theatre on Tuesday was warmly favourable. Bursts of laughter again and again interrupted the performance; and so hilarious did the house become that it received some very strong and serious attacks on Civilisation with smiles of tolerant indifference. The idea of taking a modern plot, telling it in blank verse, and mounting it in the primitive style attributed to Shakespearean times, gave opportunity for some funny business, such as that of a supposed corpse scuttling away, showing its feet under a screen formed by two beefeaters holding up an immense Union Jack. The burlesque blank verse was so good that much of it was taken quite seriously; and Mr. Shaw's serio-comic sketch went in first-rate style from beginning to end, and was an obvious success.

The scene is laid in a park in Wiltshire, the owner of which, a Miss Lydia, is soliloquising about trees and birds before a couple of tapestry curtains which are supposed to represent the entrance to her castle. To her enters Cashel Byron, a refined and intellectual prize-fighter, who takes her for a country lass, and opens an acquaintance which promises well. When he discovers her rank, he withdraws, is soon found by his trainer Mellish, a fat and repulsive person who reproaches him with neglecting his duty to his backers, and with philandering with a woman. Byron bitterly abuses Mellish; and when the trainer proposes to accompany him that evening in his stroll beneath Lydia's window, Cashel kills him with a single blow on the "bread basket." The curtains then separate, and disclose an aristocratic apartment in London, with Lydia seated in conversation with her cousin Lucian, a private secretary, to whom she is betrothed. Her footman, Bashville, at her request, reads aloud an account of a recent prize-fight in which Byron was the victor; and he, irreproachably attired, knocks at the outer door, and endeavours to gain admittance to see Lydia. Bashville, who is a fine wrestler, trips him up, and goes to tell his mistress, who in the end sends Lucian away, and tells Bashville to show Byron in. He proposes to her, and she implores him to give up his profession and become a gentleman. He scorns both the class and the notion, and goes off to take part in a glove-fight before Cetewayo and his suite at the Agricultural Hall—the date of the play is 1882. Bashville, who, it now appears, loves Lydia, relieves his feelings in a mock heroic soliloquy. The whole of the stage is now supposed to represent the Agricultural Hall with the Zulu monarch in a chair of state. He draws a contemptuous comparison between his muscular and healthy Zulus and the "anæmic" Londoners, asserts that the invention of modern weapons of war was the result of cowardice, and delivers a scathing attack on English greed and degeneration. Paradise, a vulgar prize-fighter, is easily vanquished by Byron, when a warlike frenzy takes possession of Cetewayo, and he leads his suite into a combat with the Londoners. Byron rushes to the rescue, and is beheld by Lydia knocking over the Zulus like nine-pins. When he has completed his triumph, she rushes to him and throws her arms round his neck, while he tenderly declares that all he has done has been "for her."

"'TILDA'S NEW HAT."

Mrs. Fishwick .....Miss AGNES THOMAS
'Tilda (her daughter) ....Miss FLORENCE LLOYD
Walter Emerson .....R. NORMAN PAGE
Daisy Meadows .....Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER

George Paston's piece is a bit of low life, amusing and slightly pathetic. As our readers may remember, Tilda Fishwick, a factory girl, has made for herself a bright blue blouse and a new hat with superb black ostrich feathers; and so attractive is she with these decorations that a little clerk named Walter Emerson, an apostle of popular culture, has deserted his sweetheart, Daisy Meadows, and has turned his attention to 'Tilda. Daisy comes to 'Tilda to complain; and the good-natured girl gives her the cherished hat, loads her the blue blouse to use as a pattern, and thus leads Emerson to return to his allegiance. He goes out with Daisy, and 'Tilda cannot restrain her tears as from her window she watches them walk away.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor CHARING CROSS ROAD. Sir Charles Wyndham.

Sole Lessee and Manager ... ... FRANK CURZON.

EVERY EVENING at 8.45 o'clock,

FRANK CURZON'S

NEW PRODUCTION

AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS,

By A PATRIOT.

Mr. Brown	Mr. CHARLES ROCK
Reggie Brown	Mr. GEORGE BEALBY
Syd Brown	Master JACK HOBBS
Geoffrey Smith	Mr. LAWRENCE GROSSMITH
Paul Robinson (a Volunteer)	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Maggie Brown	Miss ELAINE INESCORT
Amy Brown	Miss MONA HARRISON
Ada Jones	Miss CHRISTINE SILVER
Captain Finch (6th Vol. Batt. Blinkshire Regiment)	Mr. E. W. GARDEN
Captain Lindsay (Ex-Cumberland Fusiliers, Adjutant 6th Vol. Batt. Blinkshire Regiment)	Mr. RUDGE HARDING
Lieut. Jackson (6th Vol. Batt. Blinkshire Regiment)	Mr. MAX LEEDS
Colour-Sergeant Harris (Welsh Guards Attached, 6th Vol. Batt. Blinkshire Regiment)	Mr. CHARLES WEIR
Prince Yoland	Mr. EDMUND MAURICE
Lieut. Rian Hobart	Mr. H. STEPHENSON
Sergeant Thol	Mr. PHILIP KNOX
Sergeant Garth	Mr. FORBES DAWSON
Doctor	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
An Officer	Mr. HOWARD STURGE
Telephone Orderly	Mr. B. EGERTON

Soldiers, Volunteers, &c.

ACT I. ... Scene: Playroom of Mr. Brown's House, "Myrtle" Villa, Wickham in Essex. Mid-day

ACT II. ... ... The Same. Early Morning. Following Day

ACT III. ... ... The Same. Afternoon of the Next Day

THE PLAY PRODUCED FOR FRANK CURZON BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by BRUCE SMITH. Furniture by J. S. LYON.

Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Rifles supplied by CHARLES LANCASTER & Co., Ltd (Gunmakers to H.M. the King). Panton Street, Haymarket.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Business Manager	J. HERBERT JAY
Musical Director	ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager	TOM LOVELL

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	OVERTURE - - -	"Britain" - - - Arranged by Ernest Bucalossi
2.	SELECTION - - -	"Yeomen of the Guard" - - - Sullivan
3.	(a) MAZURKA MILITAIRE - - -	- - - Missa
	(b) REGIMENTS THAT PASS - - -	Selected - - -

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Grand Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.

Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD. Doors open at 8.15, Matinees 2. Commence at 8.45, Matinees 2.30.

"AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME."

Play, in Three Acts, by "A Patriot," produced at Wyndham's Theatre on Wednesday, Jan. 27.

One of the boldest satires on the British public that has ever been put on the stage was presented on Wednesday when An Englishman's Home, announced as being written by "A Patriot," was presented by Mr. Frank Curzon to his patrons at Wyndham's Theatre. It is a complete resumé of all the criticisms on our Army organisation that have been spoken and written in the last ten years; and, of course, the author's attacks are all the more drastic for being presented in the shape of an "object lesson." The scene is the small house in Essex of a certain Mr. Brown, a bumptious Briton with a craze for diabolo. His young friend, Geoffrey Smith, is a typical, self-indulgent, slangy, "cheeky" young clerk, an enthusiastic spectator of football matches. Geoffrey's taste is shared by his sisters, Maggie and Amy; and Paul Robinson, a volunteer who is in love with the former, is in a minority of one in the little circle, being laughed at both by the lads and the lassess. A thick fog and a strike have cut off all communications, and Myrtle Villa is practically isolated. The first intimation of the landing of the troops of the "Empress of the North," who have landed on the Eastern Coast is the entry of Prince Yoland and his lieutenant, Rian Hobart, who put Mr. Brown and Reggie under arrest, and billet themselves on the premises. Then we are shown on the stage what would be the result of a raid in our bemuddled and unprepared state. Robinson dashes down to Brentwood on his bicycle, but finds the population in the greatest confusion, singing patriotic songs in the streets. He returns, utterly exhausted, to take part in the defence of the villa, which is organised by a company of the 6th Volunteer Battalion Blinkshire Regiment, commanded by Captain Finch, a fussy and overbearing officer, very irritable and ignorant of the art of war. The only member of the company who appears to know what to do is the colour-sergeant, and under his direction the place is put into a condition of defence. It is shelled by the enemy from a distance, a bit of shrapnel striking the blatant Reggie as he stands on a table. He falls dead at the end of the second act. In the third the tragic side of war is strongly shown. Some of the volunteers are seriously wounded, and as there are no medical appliances in connection with the corps, the doctor who arrives can do little. The shelling of the villa continues, holes being blown in the walls and roof. The obstinate conceit of Mr. Brown and his silly son cannot, however, be quelled. The former abuses everybody, and the latter finds fault with the regulars, who are now beginning to get into touch with the enemy. The villa becoming untenable, the volunteers are ordered to retire; but Mr. Brown refuses to leave, and after some blundering attempts manages to load a rifle and kill a couple of the enemy's infantry, which is advancing to occupy the position. Prince Yoland, on arriving, treats Mr. Brown as a franc-tireur and sends him out to be shot; and the old fellow goes to his death stubbornly, his daughter rushing in and shrieking with horror at her father's fate. The arrival of the English regulars, who have been hurried up from London on motor 'buses, saves the situation, and on this comforting conclusion the curtain falls.

THE author of An Englishman's Home, the production of which at Wyndham's has so stirred the patriotic pulse, is Major Guy Lonis Busson Du Maurier, D.S.O., son of the late George Du Maurier, the author of Trilby, and brother of the popular actor Mr. Gerald Du Maurier. The new author commanded the 20th Mounted Infantry Regiment in South Africa in 1901 and 1902, being mentioned in dispatches. He became a lieutenant in the Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regiment) in 1885, and is still in the same regiment serving at the present moment with the 3rd Battalion at Pietermaritzburg, Natal.

A PLAY WITH A LESSON.

"AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME."

LORD ESHER'S VIEWS.

Not for years has a play created such a sensation as has "An Englishman's Home," presented by Mr. Frank Curzon at Wyndham's Theatre on Wednesday night. The author is a military officer, who is, at the moment, abroad, but the play—the story of a foreign invasion of England—was revised and prepared for the stage by Mr. J. M. Barrie and Mr. Gerald du Maurier.

The censor at first refused permission for the play to be produced, but leave was given when it was pointed out that no particular country was aimed at. Mr. Curzon informs us that the invaders in the play are not meant to be Germans. They are simply foreign invaders and do not wear German uniforms.

Viscount Esher, chairman of the County of London Territorial Association, was among those in the stalls at the first performance. His lordship said yesterday to a representative of The Daily Mail:

"The play is simply splendid. I hope that provincial companies will be formed to take it all through the great towns. It demonstrates in the first place what an invasion of England would really mean. In it you see the people who do not understand the subject at all—who think national defence does not matter, and who do not realise what is before them if ever a raid on this country happens—brought to understand the real truth.

"On the stage are shown precisely the conditions which the ordinary middle-class householder cannot be brought to believe in, which he ridicules and despises. Here he has examined to hang with some exactitude what he and his whole family will be subjected to should we be invaded.

LESSONS FOR YOUNG MEN.

"A second lesson is to throw into sharp outline before the young people of this country the results of men, otherwise perfectly qualified for the bearing of arms, devoting themselves exclusively to their own amusements, to athletics, and to nothing which is of national import. Contrasted with these are the young men who do take life seriously, yet who do not lack in their military work a large measure of enjoyment.

"A third lesson is to be read in the difference between the people who have treated such serious matters as invasion lightly and those who, like the supposed invaders, have been thoroughly disciplined to the importance of war. This furnishes some of the most remarkable incidents in a brilliant play—one which must suggest to everyone who sees it how necessary some skill in arms must be.

1909
Waters. J.

"I have very slight criticism to make of the play. The captain commanding the company is unlike anyone who would be in such a position now. Possibly for the purposs of art the author has exaggerated the character, and that is, of course, perfectly legitimate, but the fact is that the type exists no longer. The men may be inefficient and ignorant, but no one can regard them as ridiculous. They are brave.

"I hope that not only young men will see this play, but also young women. They have presented to them a picture of their helplessness in face of the commonest wounds in war, which must make them realise how important a position they may occupy in the Territorial scheme. The girls in the play cannot bandage wounds, and seem merely to aid and abet their male friends in despising the one youth who has taken up as his hobby the defence of his country."

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1909.

"AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME."

MR. J. M. BARRIE'S POSITION.

SECOND THEATRE TO BE OPENED.

To the Editor of "The Daily Mail."

Sir, An impression seems to have got abroad that I am in some way connected with the play "An Englishman's Home" at Wyndham's Theatre, kindly allow me to say that I am not, though I wish I were. I have had the smallest share in it.

The mistake has probably arisen through my having been present at two or three of the rehearsals merely as a great admirer of the play and thankful that we had a management with the courage to produce it.

I may add that the piece is entirely the work of one man and that no other person whatever has had any sort of hand in it.

J. M. BARRIE.

Leinster Corner, Lancaster-gate, W.

CENSOR AND 'THE FOLLIES.'

SKIT ON "AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME" FORBIDDEN.

The Lord Chamberlain has refused to license a skit on Major Du Maurier's play "An Englishman's Home"—now being performed at Wyndham's Theatre—which the Follies had proposed to introduce into their programme at the Apollo Theatre.

The travesty would have played only about ten minutes, but the author and producer, Mr. H. G. Pelissier, was unable to convince the reader of plays that the skit would be accepted by the public merely as a harmless burlesque.

The Lord Chamberlain has authority to refuse a license for any play that he considers, for political or social reasons, undesirable. But it is possible, in the case of a piece in which there are not more than six characters, and which will not occupy more than forty minutes, to produce it at a music-hall even after a license has been refused by the censor.

The reason for refusing a license in the present instance is not quite clear, as the slight plot does not closely follow that of the original, but concerns itself more with alien immigration into England than with an invasion. The reader of plays, however, is understood to have said that any stage performance likely to cause offence to a friendly Power had best be left unperformed, and that therefore the skit on "An Englishman's Home" could not be sanctioned.

25/2/1909

INVISIBLE PLAY.

THE FOLLIES' REPLY TO THE CENSOR.

2/3/1909

The great joke of all the jokes at the performance of "The Follies" last night at the Apollo Theatre was, of course, that "bit" (shall we say?) about the Censor—whether the skit on "An Englishman's Home" was or was not to be permitted. Nobody quite knew whether the whole pother was not a little anticipatory "potted" business of ingenious Mr. Pelissier. So we went to "The Follies" fully prepared to take pot-luck.

Mr. Pelissier made a little speech, deploring the loss of some thousands of pounds' worth of scenery. Then, while we were all listening, the invasion began. The "other" players would play it. Down came the curtain; bang went a shell. Fight and howl as he might, Mr. Pelissier could avail nothing. There was as much gunpowder spent as ever the way at Wyndham's. Who won—"what every invader knows"—nobody quite knew. Perhaps we were conqueror behind the scenes; perhaps not. Anyhow, Mr. Pelissier was saved, though shot in the leg by a foreign barber who used to shave him, and the "fourth wall" collapsed—with glee and Gargantuan applause at the fact that, though censored, Mr. Pelissier had brought off part of his joke—which ought to be the joke of London.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, APRIL 12, 1909.

"ENGLISHMAN'S HOME" IN BERLIN.

HISSED OFF THE STAGE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

BERLIN, Sunday.

The first performance in Berlin of "An Englishman's Home" came to a close to-night amid scenes of disorder such as have rarely been witnessed in a Berlin theatre. When the curtain fell the turmoil and confusion in front of the footlights was a counterpart to the uproar of the scene on the stage.

The play was punctuated from the middle of the second act to the final scene with jeers, hisses, catcalls, and tumult, frequently bringing the action to a standstill, and at times threatening to stop the entire performance. The audience was large, fashionable in appearance, and included a fair representation of the professional element of Berlin, the chief of the Kaiser's Naval Cabinet, Herr von Mueller, being one of a number of distinguished persons present.

During the first act the house was comparatively quiet save for occasional mild symptoms of growing restlessness. As the second act progressed the noises, principally from the upper sections of the theatre, became louder, and at last broke out in a sustained chorus of vigorous booing. A trifling blaze at one side of the stage, due to the ignition of a fragment of scenery during the "bombardment" in the last act, alarmed some of the spectators, who started to leave. This contributed to the general confusion.

The revised version of the play, as given to-night, concludes with the invading force in triumphant possession of the stage. If the change, defined as a "concession to local sentiment," was intended to secure a favourable reception it failed. The invaders' victory, like the inefficiency of the English soldiers, was greeted with ironic laughter. Other incidents of the play, sensational or ludicrous, met much the same fate. There was some attempt at applause following the first act, but it was speedily stifled.

How far Berlin's refusal to take the play seriously was due to the character of the performance it is hard to say, but it is noteworthy that the demonstrations of disapproval seemed to be directed most at those portions of the play where the action dragged. The impression was that the audience was not offended, but bored. Whether the play, advertised to run for a week, will be withdrawn to-morrow could not be decided to-night.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE

Lessee & Manager - - Mr. FRANK CURZON.

The Great Invasion Play,

AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME

"AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME."

THE KAISER'S VIEWS.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

April 15 1909. BERLIN, Thursday.

It is stated in Court circles, says the Boersen Courier, that the Kaiser evinced great interest in the fate of "An Englishman's Home" in Berlin. Shortly before leaving Potsdam for Corfu the imperial entourage discussed the disturbances at the first performance of the play here.

The Kaiser, overhearing the discussion, remarked that he knew the contents of the play well. He added that books and long articles concerning all kinds of possibilities of invasion had been written, and that now, regrettably, the stage had been made the scene of political propaganda.

It was perfectly natural, the Emperor is reported to have said, that such pieces should seek to enforce their "lessons" by crass contradictions. That fact might be welcomed, as German audiences, which were rather fastidious, were always repelled by crass treatment of subjects. It was in no way good for the relations of nations if they were brought into political opposition to each other on the stage.

"An Englishman's Home" was a piece written for a certain group of Englishmen. Consequently it was impossible in Germany to admire the play, and in Berlin it met with a rebuff.

"The rebuff shows," the Kaiser is said to have concluded, "that we are far from feeling satisfaction at the weaknesses presented by other countries." As far as he was acquainted with English family life it in no way corresponded with that depicted in the play.

"ENGLISHMAN'S HOME."

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

BERLIN, Tuesday.

"An Englishman's Home," after two performances in Berlin, has been withdrawn from the stage.

3724
1909
Waters, J.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee—Mr. WILLIAM GREET

Under the Management of Mr. TOM B. DAVIS.

Mr. LEWIS WALLER

ON TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2ND, 1909, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.15,

"THE CHIEF OF STAFF"

A Play in Four Acts,

By RONALD MAC DONALD.

General Sebastian de Solatierra	Mr. WILLIAM HAVILAND
Colonel Stephen Cavendish	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Major Dennis O'Driscoll	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Guillermo Herrero	Mr. SHIEL BARRY
Sergeant Baltazar	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
Pedro Costanza	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Jaime	Mr. REGINALD DANE
Marcos	Mr. CATON WOODVILLE
Frasquito	Mr. GEORGE COURTNEY
A Despatch Rider	Mr. PATRICK DIGAN
Engracia de Solatierra	Miss AURIOL LEE
Iduna de Solatierra...	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Lola	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE

The Action takes place in an Inland Republican State of South America.

Act I.	The Garden of the Presidencia
Act II.	The Loggia of the Presidencia
Act III....	The same. (Three weeks later)
Act IV....	The Log Cabin on the Condor's Ridge

The scene is laid in an inland Republican State of South America, the President of which, General Sebastian do Solatierra, has for right-hand man and trusted comrade an English adventurer called Stephen Cavendish. Cavendish has been wounded in a recent engagement, and the President's wife, in nursing him, has fallen in love with her patient. Cavendish never lets women "count for anything"; but the Signora Engracia makes love to him so warmly that he does not entirely repel her advances. The situation is becoming dangerous when the President's step-daughter Idnna interposes to save the Signora, to whom she is deeply attached, from ruin. She has an interview with Cavendish, in which she tells him frankly that she detests her cold-blooded, mereiless character, and will do all she ean to prevent the affair with Signora Engracia from going any further. Her opportunity for interference soon comes. The General sees his wife and Cavendish together, and starts with loaded revolver to defend his honour; but when he surprises the Colonel with a veiled lady in his arms, it turns out to be Iduna, who has taken this means of saving her step-mother's life. "After what you have seen, General," says Cavendish, "I have only to nsk you for the hand of your daughter!"

In the second act there is much plot and counter-plot. The villains of the piece are Guillermo Herrero, a repulsive anarchist, who is secretly in love with Iduna; Pedro Costanza, a rascal whose life the too-generous General has spared; and Lola, a native girl of very fertile invention, who, with Herrero's help, concocts a most complicated scheme. The General leaves the Presidencia to suppress a revolt outside the city, and the villains having cut one of the telephones, and drawn the cartridges from Cavendish's revolver, come upon him with Iduna. The Colonel, however, has discovered that his weapon has been unloaded, and has hidden another in the sling in which he sustains his recently-injured nrm. The ruffian's cover him with their weapons, disarm him as they think, and order him to sign an order to release the rebel prisoners from the gaol. He pretends to consent, and when they drop their revolvers, draws his reserve "gun" and shoots them down one after the other. Herrero, dying, confides to Iduna the details of a plot by which Cavendish is to be decoyed to a log cabin on the "Condor's Ridge," to which Engracia, her escort drugged, will be conveyed, the General then being informed that his wife is unfaithful to him, and induced to start for the spot and shoot the despoiler. In order to substantiate the statement, the artful Lola has secured two of Engracia's letters, and placed an affectionate epistle from her to her husband, beginning "my darling," in the envelope directed to Cavendish.

The last act takes place at the hut in the hills. Cavendish arrives, realises the situation, and prepares for the worst. Iduna, who has, by this time, fallen in love with Cavendish, follows, and is placed in a side apartment with Engracia. The general makes his appearance as expected, and endeavours to force a duel upon the Colonel, who at last, by circumstantial evidence, manages to convince her friend of the tricks that have been played. Iduna confesses her love for Cavendish, Costanza is executed, and Engracia, who has returned heart and soul to her marital allegiance, is entirely reconciled to her husband.

3724
1909
Waters, J.

GARRICK
THEATRE.

3/2/09

Orch. Stall

Row K

No 5

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3RD, 1909, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

Mr. BOURCHIER and Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENT

"SAMSON"

A Play in Four Acts,

By HENRY BERNSTEIN.

Jacques Brachard	... ...	Mr. BOURCHIER
Jérôme Le Govain	... ...	Mr. CHARLES BRYANT
Marquis d'Andeline	... ...	Mr. ARTHUR WHITBY
Maximilien ...	... (his Son) ...	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Flach	... ...	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Marcel de Fontenay	... ...	Mr. BERTRAM FORSYTH
Jean	... ...	Mr. WILLIAM BURCHILL
Josef	... ...	Mr. CHARLES VERNON
Zambo	... ...	Mr. ALFRED BRISTOWE
		Mr. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Waiters... ...	... ...	Mr. NEWTON DUNNE
Anne-Marie Brachard	... ...	Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH
Marquise d'Andeline	... ...	Miss MARIE ILLINGTON
Elise Vernette ...	... ...	Miss EDYTH LATIMER
Suzanne D'Elgarde	... ...	Miss MARGARET VIVIAN
Clotilde... ...	... ...	Miss PAMELA GAYTHORNE

The action of the play passes in Paris at the present time.

ACT I. ...	... ...	... At the d'Andelines
ACT II. ...	... ...	... At the Brachards
ACT III. ...	... ...	... At the Hotel Ritz
ACT IV. ...	... ...	... At the Brachards

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

The success of the English version of Mr. Henry Bernstein's Samson at the Garrick Theatre on Wednesday was fully and confidently expected. The main idea of the piece is so strong that it would have prevailed even with less excellent treatment, literary and dramatic, than that given to it by the anonymous translator and by Mr. Arthur Bourchier and his company. There can be little doubt that Samson is destined to fill the Garrick Theatre for many months to come.

The hero, Jacques Brachard, is an immensely rich Paris financier, who began life in a Marseilles slum, and by wit, perseverance, and lucky speculations has made himself one of the monarchs of the Bourse. He has fallen in love with Anne-Marie Brachard, the daughter of the Marquis and Marquise d'Andeline, and has been allowed to marry her on the clear understanding that she does not love him and never can. Brachard's connection with the family has caused the friends of the Andelines to give them the cold shoulder, but has led to the enrichment of the family by his advice as to their speculations. Brachard has also made the fortune of a scamp of good family named Jérôme le Govain, who, when in reduced circumstances, was engaged to a wealthy widow, Elise Vernette, whom he deserted when he became rich, though he had borrowed largely from her in his poverty. Having got rid of her brutally, Le Govain is making love to Anne-Marie, who repels his attacks feebly, and eventually assents to his proposal that, while Brachard is absent for a couple of days in London, she shall come with him to a supper-party at the Café de Paris. Elise, who has frequented such gatherings for the sake of being near Le Govain, with whom she is still infatuated, and who is under deep obligations to Brachard, who has helped her when she was in trouble, gives the financier a hint of what is going to take place, and advises him, while letting it be thought that he has gone to England, to remain in Paris and knock at his wife's bedroom door at midnight.

The next act takes place at the Brachards' house, where the Marquis and Marquise, summoned by a watchful maid-servant, have hurried to learn that Brachard, getting no reply to his knocking, has broken down the door of his wife's bedroom. Brachard enters; and soon after Anne-Marie returns from her supper party. After dismissing the parents, the financier has an explanation with his wife, and, after angry resistance on her part, extracts from her the name of the man who took her to the Café, and an account of her adventures there. It appears that the behaviour of the party was so outrageous that Anne-Marie fled from the place in horror. Brachard locks his wife in her room, and then telephones to his man of business to meet him early on the following morning for extensive operations on the Bourse.

The scene of the third act—the strong one of the play—is laid in a room at the Hotel Ritz, Paris. Here Brachard has a serious conversation with his agent Flack, who is reluctant to carry out Brachard's instructions, but is sternly ordered to do so by the financier, who has determined to ruin de Govain by causing Egyptian copper shares, in which the treacherous scoundrel has invested all his money, to go down to a low level. Flack represents that, in order to accomplish this it will be necessary to jeopardise Brachard's whole fortune; but the agent is told to go on selling Egyptians to the bitter end. Having made his enemy's downfall certain, Brachard asks him to breakfast, and having told him what his punishment is to be, prevents him from leaving the room to interfere with the manœuvres on the Bourse. Le Govain, furious, tries to stab Brachard with a sword stick; but the ex-dock-hand is too strong for him, and deprives him of his weapon, contemptuously refusing to give the practised duellist "satisfaction." When the panic is assured, and the paper-boys are crying the news of it in the streets, Brachard releases his prisoner, and has a grotesque paroxysm of triumph.

In the last act Brachard is ruined, and has been requested by the Minister to leave Paris. Anne-Marie's parents want her to obtain a divorce; but she refuses to desert her husband now that he is in trouble, and the play ends with every prospect of his winning his wife's love.

"HAMLET" AT THE SHAFTESBURY

Shakespeare's tragedy, revived at the Shaftesbury Theatre on Monday, Feb. 8.

Claudius	Mr. Frank Tyars
Hamlet	Mr. H. B. Irving
Polonius	Mr. Tom Reynolds
Laertes	Mr. Eric Maxon
Horatio	Mr. Stanley Howlett
Osric	Mr. H. C. Hewitt
Rosencrantz	Mr. Arthur Curtis
Guildenstern	Mr. J. Patric Curwen
Marcellus	Mr. B. A. Pittar
Bernardo	Mr. H. Hilliard
Francisco	Mr. Norman MacOwan
Reynaldo	Mr. W. Graham
First Player	Mr. S. Beaumont
Second Player	Mr. W. Cass
Priest	Mr. H. R. Cook
First Gravedigger	Mr. Charles Dodsworth
Second Gravedigger	Mr. George Silver
Ghost of Hamlet's Father	Mr. Frank Cochrane
Gertrude	Miss Eily Malyon
Ophelia	Miss Dorothea Baird
Player Queen	Miss E. Frances Davis

1909
Waters, J.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager - CHARLES FROHMAN

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9th, 1909 at 2.45

SPECIAL REPRESENTATION

OF SCENES FROM

J. M. BARRIE'S

PETER PAN

BY KIND PERMISSION OF

CHARLES FROHMAN

By the JUVENILE MEMBERS of the DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE COMPANY.

Mrs. Darling	Miss IVY KNIGHT
Mr. Darling	Master ERNEST HOLLOM
Wendy	Miss BERYL ST. LEGER
John	Master VICTOR PIERPOINT
Michael	Master WILLIE HOLLOM
Peter	Miss TESSIE PARKE
Eliza	Master H. HOLLOM
Captain Hook	Master HERBERT HOLLOM
Nana	Master J. CHILD
Smee	Master W. G. MANNING
Starkey	Master W. CHILD
Cecco	Master GORDON CARR
Mullins	Master MARINI
Nibs	Master BEN ROSE
Tootles	Miss ALICE ROBINSON
1st Twin	Master ERNEST HOLLOM
2nd Twin
Curly	Master A. HALL
Slightly	Master BARNES
Tiger Lily	Miss ALICE ROBINSON
Jukes)	Master J. CHILD
Cookson)
Noodler	Master LESLIE OSWELL

Produced under the direction of Master HERBERT HOLLOM.

J. Miles & Co. Ltd., Wardour Street, W.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11TH, AT 8.30

MATINEES, WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS, AT 2.

A Comedy in Three Acts entitled

By WILFRED T. COLEBY

DICK CHEAWOOD	MR. C. M. HALLARD
BENT	MISS MARGARET MURRAY
CHECKLEY	MR. W. LEMMON WARDE
LORD STRELLAND	MR. NORMAN MCKINNEL
THE REV. PHILIP PRESTON	MR. ERNEST YOUNG
MRS. COLLINS	MISS GERTRUDE SCOTT
LADY DARNAWAY	MISS FRANCES IVOR
PAMELA GREY	MISS ATHENE SEYLER
BILL CHEAWOOD	MR. DENNIS EADIE
FREDA SAVILLE	MISS LENA ASHWELL
JACK CARSTAIRS	MISS OLIVIA
PEGLER	MR. W. FAZAN

ACT I. The Hall, Nethercote Grange. Afternoon.
ACT II. Pamela's Bed-room. Evening.
ACT III. The same as Act I. Next Morning.

Scenery by J. HARKER

Dresses by POWER, 132, Sloane Street. Wigs by GUSTAVE

Musical Director - - -	MR. STANLEY HAWLEY
Stage Manager - - -	MR. MAITLAND DICKER
Assistant Stage Manager -	MR. HERBERT CHOWN

FOR PROGRAMME OF MUSIC SEE PAGE 6.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Management.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the foyer at Matinees during and after the performance.

Opera Glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

No charge is made for the use of the Cloak Rooms and no gratuities are allowed.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions whether permanent or temporary.

PROPRIETRESS - - - - - MISS LENA ASHWELL.

BUSINESS MANAGER - - - MR. WALTER MAXWELL.

3724
1909
Waters, J.

KINGSWAY
THEATRE

11/2/1909

Stall

G 16

To be retained

The heroine, Freda Saville, is an "advanced" young woman, who has been betrayed into a false marriage with a man who already had a wife. The result was a boy; but as the father was killed in a frontier war in India and the child was taken care of by some friends, no harm has ensued to Freda, who has come home to England and has fallen in love with Dick Chetwood, a wealthy country gentleman. Dick's brother Bill, a blunt, rough individual, who has returned a rich man from Buenos Ayres, has won the heart of Miss Pamela Grey, a weak and silly girl, who uses the latest slang and wants to appear in a Mand Allan costume at an amateur entertainment. Pamela puts down all her folly to Freda, in earlier days, having preached emancipation to her; but Freda, who has now renounced her unorthodox opinions, implores Pamela not to go out with Bill Chetwood to Buenos Ayres as his mistress, as the flighty young person is preparing to do. Dick has generously offered to hand over part of his estates to Bill; and Freda tells the latter that, if he does not give up his intention of taking Pamela away unwed she—Freda—will use her influence to stop the transfer. In answer, Bill informs Freda that he knows all about the child, and will mention the matter to Dick if Freda does not withdraw her opposition to the gift of the estate. Then Freda takes out a revolver, and threatens to blow Bill's brains out unless he promises not to seduce Pamela. This is the strong point of the play. Freda says she will count five and then fire. At the word "four" Bill snatches at the pistol, but is wounded in the arm, the noise of the shot being accounted for to the aroused household by a visit from an imaginary burglar.

In the last act a rich neighbour, Lord Strelland, who knows Freda's secret, offers to be silent if she will let him adopt the child, now a fine boy. Freda refuses, and confesses all to Dick, who maintains their engagement; and Bill, after some difficulty, is induced to marry Pamela by special licence.

3724
1909
Waters, J.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee—Mr. WILLIAM GREET

Under the Management of Mr. TOM B. DAVIS.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30

THE ROMANTIC ENGLISH COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS

BY

BOOTH TARKINGTON AND E. G. SUTHERLAND,

ENTITLED

"MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE"

Monsieur Beaucaire ...	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Duke of Winterset ...	Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
Major Molyneux ...	Mr. REGINALD DANE
Lord Townbrake ...	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
Mr. Bantison ...	Mr. GAYER MACKAY
Mr. Rakell ...	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Mr. Bicksett ...	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Beau Nash ...	Mr. HERBERT JARMAN
Captain Badger ...	Mr. S. B. BRERETON
Marquis de Mirepoix ...	Mr. SHIEL BARRY
Francois ...	Mr. H. SAVILLE
Jolliffe ...	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Servant ...	Mr. CATON WOODVILLE
Lady Mary Carlyle ...	Miss GRACE LANE
Lucy Rellerton ...	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE
Mrs. Mabsley ...	Miss GWENDOLIN FLOYD
Lady Rellerton ...	Miss MAY CHENERY
Miss Presbury ...	Miss DOROTHY DIX
Miss Paitelot ...	Miss MAUD DIGAN
Miss Purlitt ...	Miss MAUD VYSE
Countess of Greenbury ...	Miss MINNIE GRIFFIN

Misses Storey, Sarll, Bloomfield, Rayne, Lane

Messrs. Cushing, Langley-Bill, McGuinness, Sarll, Bailey, Baxendell, Courtney

The Action of the Play takes place at Bath—Period 1735.

"CHARLES THE FIRST" AT THE SHAFTESBURY.

Play, in Four Acts, by W. G. Wills, Revived on Monday, Feb. 15.

Charles the First	MR. H. B. IRVING
Oliver Cromwell	MR. FRANK TYARS
Marquis of Huntley	MR. TOM REYNOLDS
Lord Moray	MR. ERIC MAXON
Ireton	MR. B. A. PITTAR
First Cavalier	MR. STANLEY HOWLETT
Second Cavalier	MR. H. C. HEWITT
Attendant	MR. J. PATRIC CURWEN
Queen's Page	MR. ARTHUR CURTIS
Roundhead Captain	MR. W. GRAHAM
Prince James	MISS FLORENCE WAUDBY
Princess Elizabeth	MISS ELSIE VINEAU
Lady Eleanor	MISS ELLY MALYON
Queen Henrietta Maria	MISS DOROTHEA BAIRD

LYRIC THEATRE Lessee: Mr. W. GREET
Under the Management of Mr. TOM B. DAVIS

On Monday, February 15th, 1909,

As "Monsieur Beaucaire."

For 12 Evening Performances & 2 Wednesday Matinees, Feb. 17th & 24th Doors Evenings at 8 Matinees at 2

3724
1909
Waters, J.

"THE DANCING GIRL."

Drama, in Four Acts, by Henry Arthur Jones.
Revived at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday, Feb. 16.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16TH AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.40.

The Dancing Girl

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

Duke of Guisebury	Mr. TREE
Hon. Reginald Slingsby	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
David Ives	Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Mr. Crake	Mr. G. W. ANSON
Mr. Goldspink	Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
John Christison	Mr. BASIL GILL
Augustus Cleevers	Mr. WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Captain Leddra	Mr. PATRICK KIRWAN
Charles	Mr. NORMAN PAGE
Servant	Mr. HENRY MORRELL
Sybil Crake	Miss MARIE LÖHR (By arrangement with Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.)
Lady Bawtry	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
Lady Brislington	Miss JULIET HARDINGE
Faith Ives	Miss VERA COBURN
Mrs. Christison	Miss MURIEL ALEXANDER
Mrs. Leddra	Mrs. E. H. BROOKE
Sister Beatrice	Miss VALENTINE
Drusilla Ives	Miss ALICE CRAWFORD

ACT I.—The Beautiful Pagan.

SCENE—The Isle of Endellion. (Two years pass between Acts 1 and 2)

ACT II.—The Broken Bowl.

SCENE—Diana Valrose's Boudoir, at Richmond. (Six months pass between Acts II. and III.)

ACT III.—The Last Feast.

SCENE—Reception Room at the Duke of Guisebury's Town House, St. James's Park.

(Two years pass between Acts III. and IV.)

ACT IV.—The Desired Haven.

SCENE—John Christison's Cottage at Endellion.

THE HICKS THEATRE,

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

TO-NIGHT, Wednesday, February 17th, 1909, at 8 o'clock,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

ELLALINE TERRISS

(by arrangement with SEYMOUR HICKS)

In a New Play with Music,

"The Dashing Little Duke"

BY

SEYMOUR HICKS.

Music by FRANK E. TOURS. Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS.

The Chevalier de Matignon		C. HAYDEN COFFIN
The Baron de Bellechasse		SAM WALSH
Lieutenant Armand de Solitcau	of the King's Dragoons	FRANK WILSON
An Officer of Dragoons		HENRY FRANKISS
Dubois	Richelieu's Valets	LAWRENCE CAIRD
Merlac		FREDERICK VIGAY
Lepas	(a Dancing Master)	M. PROTTI
Moulinet	(a Hairdresser)	HUGHES CROISE
Fleury	(a Florist)	CHARLES LE GALLEY
Canif	(a Manicurist)	ROLAND CHESTER
The Abbé de la Touche	AND (Richelieu's Tutor)	COURTICE POUNDS
The Duchesse de Bourgogne		LOUIE POUNDS
The Duchesse de Noailles		MAUD MILTON
Diane de Noailles	(Richelieu's Wife)	ELIZABETH FIRTH
Césarine de Noce	(a Maid of Honour)	CORALIE BLYTHE
The Baronne de Bellechasse		FLORENCE WOOD

3724
1909
Waters, J.

Mdlle. Geneviève de Fauvepre	Maids of Honour to the Duchesse de Bourgogne	MAY KENNEDY
,, Juliette de Laubriet		DORIS STOCKER
,, Antoinette de Preselles		RENA GOLDIE
,, Marie de Mortemer		MARIE BRENDA
,, Celestine de Gallifet		CARINA CLIFF
,, Claire de Viennez		MABEL WATSON
,, Madeleine de Maugars		ROSIE CHESNEY
,, Violette des Vaux		DINI GRAHAM
,, Cécile du Grand Vivier		NELLIE PRYOR
,, Élise de Gontaut		MILLICENT FIELD
,, Hélène de Laundal		GWENDOLINE D'ARCY
,, Thérese de Belair		EILEEN CHISHOLM

AND

The Duc de Richelieu . . . . . LILALINE TERRISS

Dancers, Courtiers, Soldiers, Court Ladies, Florist, Manicurists, &c., &c.

Act I. The Anté-Room to the Presence Chamber in the Palace of Versailles. Evening.

Act II. In Richelieu's Apartments, Paris. Joseph Harker
Two days later. Morning.

Act III. In the Garden of Richelieu's House at St. Cloud.
The same Evening.

Dances and Choral Effects by FRED FARREN.

Dresses specially designed by PERCY ANDERSON. Ladies' Dresses, Acts I. and II., executed by Miss NASH. Gentlemen's Costumes, also Ladies' Dresses, Act III., by J. B. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, Covent Garden.
The Duchesse's Coiffure arranged by M. FELIX BERTRAND, 19, Warwick Street, Regent Street.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY SEYMOUR HICKS.

Orchestra under the Direction of the Composer.

The Original Novelisation of this Play from the French of MM. BAYARD & DE MANOIR was made by OSMOND SHILLINGFORD and AUBREY BOUCICAULT

General Manager for CHARLES FROHMAN — W. LESTOCQ

PRICES.

Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s.
Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager — OSCAR BARRETT, Jun.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain:—1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The Duc de Richelieu is the youthful hero of the story. Still in his teens, he has become the husband of the prond but beautiful Diane de Noailles. There is, however, a clause in the marriage contract according to which the Duke is not to be permitted to see his charming wife for one year, except in the presence of her mother, the Duchesse de Noailles. The Duke naturally rebels at this unreasonable restriction, and makes it pretty plain that he has not the least intention of complying with it. But the relative of the great Cardinal is a dashing but not by any means a discreet young man, and this is evidenced by the fact that he openly boasts of the favour shown him by the Duchesse de Burgoyne, the result being that the offended lady makes him an object of ridicule to the whole of the Court by treating him as a saucy boy, and publicly presenting him with a box of sugar-plums. The Chevalier de Matignon is in love with the Duc's wife, and as she has shown disdain for her husband, the Chevalier suggests that he should have his revenge by flirting with other young women. But by means of a letter addressed by the amorous Chevalier to Diane the Duke learns of his treachery, and resolves to fight him. When the Duchesse, who really loves her husband, hears of his intention she falls to the ground in a dead swoon. The duel takes place in the last act, and of course the Chevalier, expert swordsman though he be, is defeated. And in spite of the objectionable "clause five" in the marriage contract, the Duke and Duchesse resolve that their honeymoon shall no longer be delayed, and this brings the story to a happy ending.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

THE AFTERNOON THEATRE.

A Comedy in Three Acts by HENRY JAMES.

Captain Yule		Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON
Mr. Prodmore		Mr. EDWARD SASS
Chivers	(an old servant)	Mr. IAN ROBERTSON
A Young Man		Mr. ALEXANDER CASSY
Mrs. Gracedew		Miss GERTRUDE ELLIOTT
Cora		Miss ESME HUBBARD

English Tourists—Messrs. S. T. PEARCE, PILLING, TYNDALL, STEWART, GAZE, BOAG.
Misses LILY PRICE, MABEL GILL, ROBERTS, JULIET HARDINGE.

American Tourists—Messrs. W. RINGHAM, WILMOT, C. B. VAUGHAN.
Misses MAUD BUCHANAN, SYLVIA BUCKLEY, WHITAKER.

SCENE—The Central Hall of an old English Country House. Time—The Present.

Intervals of Five Minutes only between the Acts.

To be followed by

(Previously called "The Sacrament of Judas.")

A Play in One Act by LOUIS TIERCELIN, done into English by LOUIS N. PARKER.

Jacques Bernez		Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON
The Count of Kervern		Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Chapin	(Representative of the People)	Mr. IAN ROBERTSON
Jean Guillou		Mr. ERNEST HENDRIE
Jeffik Guillou		Miss GERTRUDE ELLIOTT

A SQUAD OF SOLDIERS.

The scene is laid at St. Michel-en-Grave (Brittany), in the month of January, 1793.

Scenes, Costumes and Properties, from Designs by JOHN KELT.

Stage Manager Business Manager	For Mr. Forbes-Robertson	Mr. IAN ROBERTSON. Mr. SHAD FROST.

THE AFTERNOON THEATRE.

18/2/1909

Mr. Forbes-Robertson's programme at His Majesty's on Thursday afternoon contained an interesting and extremely well-written three-act comedy by Mr. Henry James, entitled

"THE HIGH BID."

The only complaint one can advance against Mr. Henry James's dramatic effort is that the dialogue in the piece is a little too discursive, particularly in the first act, for stage purposes, although it might read exceedingly well in a novel. The theme and plot of the play are not exactly new; but, for the matter of that, we are frequently told that nothing is new under the sun; and if Mr. James has decided to exploit an old idea, at least it can be said to his credit that his treatment of it is somewhat original, and that, moreover, the treatment is such as one would expect from a literary man of Mr. James's eminence. All the scenes are laid in the central hall of an old English country house, the ancestral seat of Captain Clement Yule. The property, by virtue of mortgages and other encumbrances, really belongs to the wealthy Mr. Prodmore, whose desire it is to hand it back, without price or payment, to Captain Yule. But, as in most transactions, not only in business but in love, there is the question of a quid pro quo, and in Mr. Prodmore's case the stipulation is that the Captain shall bestow upon his daughter the name and dignity of an old family. The girl, Cora, is already in love with a youthful nincompoop, and in the first act she is carefully tutored by her father as to the style of manner and behaviour she shall adopt in the presence of the prospective husband who has been chosen for her. "Be charming!" says old Prodmore, and the dutiful daughter undertakes to observe the injunction. When Captain Yule arrives, with, of course, preconceived notions as to what is expected from him, Mr. Prodmore, with business-like acumen and alacrity, speedily plunges into the question of the marriage proposition that has been, of course, previously laid before the gallant Captain. An introduction to Cora follows, and Yule indicates his feelings towards that lady in what may be termed a negative fashion; that is, he pays her the least possible attention that a gentleman could pay to the daughter of his host. Another of Mr. Prodmore's guests is a young and fascinating American widow, Mrs. Gracedew, and as soon as she and Yule meet there is a mutual falling in love. Mrs. Gracedew goes into raptures over everything in the quaint, historic old family seat, and as, during the exchanging of confidences, she learns that the house is about to pass from the Yule family, she urges him to accept Mr. Prodmore's terms, even to rejecting his political beliefs and becoming a Conservative member of Parliament—as suggested by Mr. Prodmore—so as to save to himself and his possible posterity the ancient home of his ancestors. Down in her part of the world, she tells him, men hesitated at nothing that brought them material wealth and happiness. He promises her that he will act upon her advice, and goes off in search of Mr. Prodmore. Meanwhile, Cora comes to Mrs. Gracedew, and frankly and somewhat tearfully admits to that lady that she really has not any affection for Captain Yule—there is someone she likes infinitely better, and she would welcome an opening out of the entanglement her father has woven for her. Mrs. Gracedew is delighted to hear all this, and she extracts an undertaking from Cora that if Captain Yule proposes to her she will refuse him. And Cora runs away to join The Young Man upon whom her heart is truly set. When Mr. Prodmore re-enters the hall, Mrs. Gracedew informs him that his daughter has run away with The Young Man. After Mr. Prodmore's anger has subsided a little, Mrs. Gracedew offers him £50,000 for the manor house. He reminds her of the exalted value she put upon the place and its contents while describing them to a party of tourists, and he will not accept a less sum than £70,000. Mrs. Gracedew agrees to pay this amount, and she makes a present of the property to Captain Yule, and, of course, another wedding is arranged.

The second and concluding piece was

"A SOUL'S FIGHT."

The Play, in one act, by Louis Tircelin, done into English by Louis N. Parker.

Jacques Bernez .....Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON
Chapire .....Mr. IAN ROBERTSON
The Count of Kervern .....Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Jean Guillou .....Mr. ERNEST HENDRIE
Jeffik Guillou .....Miss GERTRUDE ELLIOTT

This piece originally bore the title The Sacrament of Judas, and the poignant tragedy it contained formed a powerful contrast to Mr. James's quiet comedy. The part of the man (Jacques Bernez) who renounces his priestly vows, then gives absolution to his rival in love, and finally makes a sacrifice of his own life in order that his aristocratic enemy may get safely away from the Republican soldiers, was enacted with all the dramatic vigour and intensity of feeling of which we know Mr. Forbes-Robertson to be capable. Miss Gertrude Elliott as Jeffik Guillou struck a deep note of pathos in the scene where Bernez threatens to betray the Count to the Representative of the people, and won much sympathy. Mr. Ben Webster as the Count of Kervern presented a courtly appearance, and furnished an appropriate realisation of the character; while Mr. Ian Robertson as Chapire and Mr. Ernest Hendrie as Jean Guillou submitted admirable interpretations of these rôles.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

EVERY EVENI

WILL BE ACTED

"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA."

Romantic Play in a Prologue and Four Acts, adapted from Anthony Hope's story by Edward Rose, revived at the St. James's Theatre, on Thursday, Feb. 18.

THE PRISONER OF ZENDA

A Romantic Play in a Prologue and Four Acts,

Adapted from ANTHONY HOPE'S Story by EDWARD ROSE

CHARACTERS OF THE PROLOGUE:

Prince Rudolf	(The Red Elphberg, Heir Apparent to the Throne of Ruritania)	Mr. George Alexander
Duke Wolfgang	(The Black Elphberg, his Cousin)	Mr. Frank Cooper
Gilbert, Earl of Rassendyll		Mr. Walter Maclean
Horace Glyn ...	(a Young Diplomatist) ...	Mr. Reginald Owen
Jeffreys ...	... (an Old Servant) ...	Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds
Giffen	... (a Servant) ...	Mr. Ashton Pearse
Amelia, Countess of Rassendyll	(Sister to Horace Glyn)	Miss Lydia Bilbrooke

Period of Prologue, 1733. Scene—Lord Rassendyll's House in London.

CHARACTERS OF THE PLAY:

Rudolf the Fifth	(The Red Elphberg, King of Ruritania)	Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Rudolf Rassendyll	(a Young Englishman)	Mr. FRANK COOPER
Michael, Duke of Strelsau	(The Black Elphberg) ...	Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE
Colonel Sapt	(an Old Soldier)	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Fritz von Tarlenheim	... ...	Mr. VERNON STEEL
Captain Hentzau	Followers of Duke Michael	Mr. HENDERSON BLAND
Detchard		Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Bertram Bertrand	(a young English Artist) ...	Mr. F. J. ARLTON
Marshal Strakencz	... ...	Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Lorenz Teppich ...	(Chancellor of Ruritania) ...	Mr. HENRY KITTS
Franz Teppich ...	(his Brother, Mayor of Strelsau)	Mr. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Lord Topham ...	(English Ambassador) ...	Mr. ROHAN CLENSY
Ludwig	Retainers at Tarlenheim ...	Mr. SYDNEY HAMILTON
Toni		Mr. F. SINCLAIR
Josef	... ...	Miss STELLA PATRICK CAMPBELL
Princess Flavia ...	... ...	Miss FRANCES DILLON
Antoinette de Mauban	... ...	Miss BEATRIX DE BURGH
Frau Teppich ...	... ...

Ladies, Courtiers, Ambassadors, Soldiers, &c., &c.

Time—The Present Day. The Action of the Romance takes place in the Kingdom of Ruritania during the reign of King Rudolf V.

Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER appears as Prince Rudolf in the Prologue, as Rudolf Rassendyll and Rudolf the Fifth in Acts I., II. and III., and in Act IV. as the imprisoned King and Rassendyll.

ACT I. ... ... IN THE FOREST NEAR ZENDA.
CONCERNING THE COLOUR OF MAN'S HAIR.

ACT II. ... ... WINTER PALACE AT STRELSAU.
A FAIR COUSIN AND A DARK BROTHER.

ACT III. ... ... THE CASTLE OF TARLENHEIM.
THE KING CAN DO NO WRONG.

ACT IV. ... ... THE CASTLE OF ZENDA.
IF LOVE WERE ALL.

The Scenery painted by W. HANN and W. RAPHAEL.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

"SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER."

Revival of Goldsmith's Comedy at the Haymarket Theatre, on Saturday, Feb. 20.

Every Evening at 8.30

Matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30

Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON presents

GOLDSMITH'S Comedy

She Stoops to Conquer

Sir Charles Marlow	Mr HERBERT BUNSTON
Hardcastle	Mr E. HOLMAN CLARK
Young Marlow	Mr ROBERT LORAINE
Hastings	Mr LOUIS GOODRICH
Tony Lumpkin	Mr GEORGE GIDDENS
Stingo	Mr GILBERT PORTEOUS
Diggory	Mr EDWARD RIGBY
Roger	Mr JOHN CASTLE
Ralph	Mr H. GERRISH
Gregory	Mr EDMUND BREON
Jeremy	Mr J. CASSELS COBB
Tom Twist	Mr REGINALD EYRE
Jack Slang	Mr HARRY NORTON
Tom Tickle	Mr CHARLES FANCOURT
Mat Muggins	Mr GEORGE WALLACE
Mrs Hardcastle	Mrs A. B. TAPPING
Miss Hardcastle	Miss ETHEL IRVING
Miss Neville	Miss BEATRICE FERRAR
Maid	Miss WINIFRED BEECH

Act I.	Scene 1	A Room in Hardcastle's House
	Scene 2	The Three Jolly Pigeons
	Scene 3	Another Room in Hardcastle's House
Act II.	.. .. ..	A Room in Hardcastle's House
Act III.	Scene 1	The Back of Hardcastle's Garden
	Scene 2	A Room in Hardcastle's House

Scenery by WALTER HANN.

Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN from designs by KARL.

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE,

Under the Sole Management of Mr. W. H. C. NATION.

On MONDAY EVENING, [illegible] at 8.30 [illegible] Evenings at 8.30, and [illegible] at 2.30,
A New Comedy, in Three Acts, by [illegible] entitled

BLUFFING ONE'S WAY

JACOB FILE	Mr T. P. HAYNES
SIR SACRIPANT BRAZEN, M.P.	Mr WALTER LAUNTON
ERNEST REINHOLD	Mr HENRY AINSWORTH
JOBBING HIGHFLYER	Mr A. DAVIDSON
SUBTLE PAMPHLET	Mr HENRY CHAMPTON
EMILY FILE	Miss UNA BRUCKSHAW
ALMA HIGHFLYER	Miss MABEL LUNSTAN

Act I	PAMPHLET'S BOOK SHOP IN COVENT GARDEN
Act II	DRAWING ROOM IN FILE'S HOUSE IN BEDFORD SQUARE
Act III.	PARLOUR IN SIR SACRIPANT BRAZEN'S FLAT IN PALL MALL

To be followed by a New Musical and Satirical Play, in Three Scenes, by V. PARK, introducing several New Songs by W. H. C. NATION, entitled

The Kingdom of Kennaquhair.

The author of Bluffing One's Way, whom we judge to be Mr. W. H. C. Nation, has probably utilised more of his own ideas than those of the well-known French author who is named, for one cannot but very readily recognise in this piece many of the characteristics which distinguished other plays which have recently been produced at the Royalty Theatre, and in which the author has postulated his theories as to political and social questions. Old Jacob File, the wealthy miser, has a daughter and a ward. With the former, Emily File, Sir Sacripant Brazen has at one time pretended to be in love, though when he discovered that there was less possibility of getting possession of her father's wealth than he had at first fancied, he discards her, and simulates affection for Alma Highflyer. That young lady's brother has been gambling rather heavily upon the Stock Exchange, with the result that Alma loses a considerable portion of her fortune. When Sir Sacripant is told this, he believes that a game of bluff is being played upon him, and in order to make the family and others think that he is an unselfish, high-minded gentleman, he still says that he will marry Alma. When, however, he learns that what has been related to him of Alma's misfortunes is only too true, he writes a letter breaking off the engagement. He is just about to send the letter to Alma—who, by the way, is in love with someone else, and detests the notoriety-seeking member of Parliament—but when the news comes that Alma's brother has had an extraordinary stroke of luck and is a rich man, Sir Sacripant changes his mind and decides that he loves the girl after all. Alma's real fiancé is Ernest Reinhold, who threatens to expose Sir Sacripant for having stolen some of his notes for a book on India, the authorship of which is attributed to Sir Sacripant, although that worthy was not the writer, this, however, being part of the game of bluff engaged in by the enterprising, if not altogether honourable, politician. The end of the case is that Sir Sacripant relinquishes all claims to Alma, and Ernest, after all, gets the woman he wants.

1909
Waters, J.

"LOUIS XI."

The Drama, in Four Acts, by Casimir Delavigne, Adapted and Arranged by Dion Boucicault, Revived at the Shaftesbury Theatre on Monday, Feb. 22.

Louis XI.	Mr. H. B. Irving
The Dauphin	Miss Eily Malyon
Duc de Nemours	Mr. Eric Maxon
Philip de Comines	Mr. B. A. Pittar
Jacques Coitier	Mr. Tom Reynolds
Tristan L'Ermito	Mr. Frank Tyars
Olivier le Dain	Mr. Arthur Curtis
Francois de Paulo	Mr. Frank Cochrane
Cardinal D'Alby	Mr. H. R. Cook
Count de Dreux	Mr. Stanley Howlett
Monseigneur de Lude	Mr. P. Walder
Count de Dunois	Mr. W. Hemstock
Montjoie	Mr. Norman Macowan
Toison D'Or	Mr. S. Beaumont
Marcel	Mr. Charles Dodsworth
Richard	Mr. J. Patric Curwen
Officer of the Royal Guard	Mr. W. Graham
King's Attendant	Mr. H. C. Hewitt
Martha	Miss May Holland
Marie de Comines	Miss Dorothea Baird

Miss EVELYN MILLARD'S Season

Thursday, February 25th, and every evening at 8.45.

THE REAL WOMAN.

By ROBERT HICHENS.

Mark Vernon	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Horace Carruthers	Mr. HERBERT WARING
Hugh Graham	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Sir George Venables	Mr. C. LEVESON-LANE
Mr. Bew	Mr. LYTTON GREY
Doctor Byrd	Mr. HEATH HAVILAND
Butler at Lady Arden's	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Butler at Vernon's	Mr. FRANK H. DANBY
Footmen at Lady Arden's	Mr. D. H. KEITH Mr. GEOFFREY DOUGLAS
The Duchess of Dorchester	Miss ANNIE HUGHES
Diana Woodham	Miss KATE CUTLER
Mrs. Gage	Mrs. HARRY CANE
AND
Lady Arden	Miss EVELYN MILLARD

ACT 1	Lady Arden's House in Grosvenor Street (Walter Hann).
ACT 2	A House in Kelly Street, Poplar
ACT 3	Mark Vernon's House in Mill Street (W. Hemsley)

Darby, Stone & Sons, Ltd., Ink. Mfrs., Harrow, Belfast, &c.

CRITERION
THEATRE
25/2/09
STALL
Row J
No 171

5724
1909
Waters, J.

Mr. Hichens has rather the reputation of being cynical, morbid, and ultra-refined; but in The Real Woman he has given us a touching, sincere, and pathetic play, which interests from first to last, though the preparation is somewhat prolonged. The action, when it commences, is, however, all the more convincing from this artistic deliberation, and from the leisurely way in which an atmosphere has been created of luxury, ease, and idle enjoyment. In the first act, we are at the house, in Grosvenor-street, of Lady Arden, a fascinating widow, whose fashionable friends, Horace Carruthers, Sir George Venables, Mr. Bew, and the Duchess of Dorchester, are supping with her after a Wagner night at Covent Garden. Mark Vernon, a rich, shrewd, and amiable newspaper proprietor, is wooing Lady Arden in an easy-going way, but she is not in love with him, though they are very good friends. At the supper-table there is much discussion of a certain Hugh Graham, a man of good family, who has gone out into the East End to work among the poor. He is a friend of Vernon, who defends him against the attacks of the cynical Carruthers, who hates Graham because the latter has discovered his seduction of a servant girl, Diana Woodham. Her child, a crippled boy, has been run over, and is now lying seriously injured in a house at Poplar. Carruthers scoffs at Graham's saintliness and indifference to women, and bets Vernon £500 that if Lady Arden employs her powers of fascination on the philanthropist he will become her slave. Graham arrives, and, to try the proposed experiment, Lady Arden volunteers to go with him and Vernon to the bedside of the dying boy.

In the next act, at Poplar, we witness the result. Graham at first snubs Lady Arden, and exposes her ignorance of the simplest domestic duties. But the hopeless sorrow of Diana Woodham at the death of her boy touches the heart of her ladyship, and she takes the work-girl into her arms. This changes Graham's opinion of Lady Arden's character, and he is on the brink of falling in love with her. Vernon, moved both by justice and jealousy, threatens to open Graham's eyes, and tell him about the bet. So ends this excellent and interesting act.

The situation thus created is handled very judiciously in the concluding division of the play. The leopardess cannot change her spots, and nothing but a miracle can make Lady Arden a suitable wife for Graham. It is evident, indeed, that Vernon is her proper mate, and that he must be made to defeat the other suitor, Carruthers, for whom Lady Arden has rather a preference. This is cleverly brought about by the author's skill. Though Lady Arden's nature has not been altered, it has been modified by her experience, and Vernon is more in love with her than ever. It is through Carruthers that Graham learns of the wager, and is disillusioned. He goes back to his work at Poplar. All this is handled both firmly, ingeniously, and delicately; and the result is that out of a rather slight scenario is evolved a very agreeable evening's amusement.

Marie Dressler's
ALDWYCH THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager [ALDWYCH, STRAND.] MARIE DRESSLER

On February 27th and Every Evening at 8 p.m.

MARIE DRESSLER'S Company
IN
"PHILOPOENA"

A Farrago of Fun, Fancy, and Foolishness in Two Acts.

Book and Lyrics by EDGAR SMITH. Music by MAURICE LEVI.

Philip Gesler	A Millionaire Mustard Manufacturer of Cincinnati, U.S.A.	FRANK BERNARD
Henry Hawkins ...	(of Liverpool) ...	... STANLEY COOKE
Charley Hammersley ...	(His Nephew) ...	... SYDNEY BARRACLOUGH
Sam Walker ...	(Stranded on the Continent)	... RALPH NAIRN
Mons. Dauber ...	... (An Artist) ...	... ALFRED LESLIE
Antoine ...	(A Waiter at "La Cascade")	... EDWARD KIPLING
Wilhelm ...	... (A Mountain Guide) ...	LUCY KIPLING
Marcelle ...	More or less Gay Parisiennes	... SILVIA ZAN
Helene ...		... LESEMOIR-GORDON
Elise ...		... D. DOLARO
Jeanne ...		... ELIZABETH WIELAND
Eaton Beane ...	of Boston, U.S.A.	... P. DENTON
Mrs. Eaton Beane ...		... ENID LESLIE
Fuller Fogg ...	London Tourists	... ROPER LANE
Mrs. Fogg ...		... JULIA DOLARO
Mimi de Chartreuse	The Patron Saint of Paris "Bohemia"	MADAME MORICHINI
Peter Routt ...	of Holland	... HARRY BERTRAM
Mrs Routt ...		... DOROTHY WALLIS
Biffkins	(of Tooting)	... JOHN BENNETT
Howell Goode	American College Youths seeing Paris	... H. PERCY
Toots Horner		... CYRIL KEENE
Willoughby Hurd		... H. NORTH
Fifine	Cocottes	... CONSTANCE FISHER
Ninette		... M. ROMNEY
Marice		... GLADYS LENNOX
Pierre Montmarte ...	Parisian Friends of Hammersley	... E. J. CARLINS
Henri Batignolles ...		... REGINALD THOMAS
Jean Maxim ...		... CHRIS FRANCIS
Maurice Vian ...		... GEORGE GRAY
Hans	(a tame Bear) ...	... RICHARD LOMAS
	AND
Philopoena Gesler	Heiress of her father's Mustard Millions	MARIE DRESSLER

Act I. .. .. In the Alps, Switzerland (Philip Howden)

Act II. .. "La Cascade," The Bois, Paris (Alexandre Bailly)

Incidental to Act II., Miss LILY FLEXMORE, Danseuse.

"THE COLLEGETTES"

Book and Lyrics by EDGAR SMITH. Music by MAURICE LEVI.

Professor Witheredloon	(Devoted to the Higher Athletics for Girls)	SYDNEY BARRACLOUGH
Jim Witheredloon	(A flirt, son of Professor Witheredloon)	RALPH NAIRN
"Ratty" McGown	(Suffering from the disadvantages of a Collegiate Education)	STANLEY COOKE
The Town Policeman		FRANK BERNARD
Mrs. Trimley Dazzle	(Chaperon)	LUCY KIPLING
"Stubby"	(A chronic Football Enthusiast)	LESEMOIR-GORDON
Polly	Students	GIPSY DALE
Jennie	Students	D. DOLARO

AND

Tilly Buttin .. (An Emergency Halfback) MARIE DRESSLER

Students, Theologians, Town Boys, &c.

Dancers: The Misses Stuart, Harrison, Lorraine, Gerrard, Kayes, Martin, Warren, Maclaren, Chatteris, Wieland, Lennox, Hill, Holmes, Nainby.

Scene 1 .. The Campus at Backwater College (F. L. Schmitz)

Scene 2 .. .. Outside the Football Field (F. L. Schmitz)

Stage Director ... ... GEORGE CAPEL

Costumes Designed and Executed by MAISON BEER, 7 Place Vendome, Paris.
Hunting Costumes by JAMES SMART.
The Gearless Electric Carriage supplied by THE ELECTRIC LANDAULET Co.
Swiss and Indian Costumes and Wigs by W. CLARKSON.
Hats designed and executed by Madame KOSKY.
Boots and Shoes by STAGG & MANTLE.

Orchestra under the Direction of the Composer.

PRICES: Boxes, £4 4s., £2 2s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle: First Eight Rows, 7s. 6d.; Last Three Rows, 5s.
Upper Circle: First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone 2315 Gerrard. Doors open at 7.30; Matinees at 1.45.

BOX OFFICE (D. C. JAMES) OPEN 10 TO 10.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages and stair cases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

1909
Waters, J.

Messrs. Edgar Smith and Maurice Levi's piece does not claim to be more than a "farrago," and it fully justifies the description. It is, indeed, merely a background for the display of the talents of two remarkable performers with strongly contrasted styles. It is somewhat difficult to describe the piece itself. The action opens in the Alps. Here a couple of tourists, a rich mustard manufacturer named Gesler and a man from Liverpool called Henry Hawkins, are enjoying themselves, accompanied by Charley Hammersley, Hawkins's nephew, and Gesler's daughter Philopoena. She is a big, bold, half-educated American girl; and her parent and Hawkins are anxious that a match shall be made between her and Charley. The young people are strongly opposed to this arrangement, Charley being enamoured of a beautiful "Bohemian" of Paris, one Mimi de Chartreuse, while Philopoena has her eye on a youth called Sam Walker. They agree to cause a quarrel between Gesler and Hawkins, and to do so induce them to go to Paris. Before they depart, Gesler and Hawkins dress up as William Tell and his son, and are menaced by a number of Hammersley's friends disguised as Swiss brigands.

The scene of the second act is the Bois de Boulogne near the Cascade and Restaurant. Here there is some funny business with the garçon, caused by the tourists' ignorance of French; and Walker is induced to dress up as a waiter. Gesler and Hawkins discuss absurdly a will which the latter has made in favour of Miss Gesler. In this act there are some agreeable interludes, which are none the less acceptable to the audience for not having any visible connection with the play. A party of students from the Quartier Latin, disguised as North American Indians, enter and sing a song with a chorus; and Mimi gives very sweetly and pleasantly the Jewel Song from Faust. After much rather foolish fun, a satisfactory conclusion is arrived at, and the curtain descends amidst applause.

Philopoena was followed by a piece in one act, book and lyrics by Edgar Smith, music by Maurice Levi, entitled

"THE COLLEGETTES."

Prof. Witheredloon ..MR. SYDNEY BARRACLOUGH
Jim Witheredloon ....MR. RALPH NAIRN
"Ratty" McGown .....MR. STANLEY COOKE
The Town Policeman .....MR. FRANK BERNARD
Mrs. Trimley Dazzle .....MISS LUCY KIPLING
"Stubby" ....MISS LESEMOIR-GORDON
Polly .....MISS GIPSY DALE
Jennie .....MISS D. DOLARO
Tilly Buttin .....MISS MARIE DRESSLER

With the exception of Miss Dressler all the artists who appeared in this ridiculous "skit" have our sympathy. It is a burlesque of The College Widow, the odd American football play which was presented to a London audience at the Adelphi last April. Mr. Sydney Barraclough and Mr. Ralph Nairn battled bravely with the difficulties of their tasks as Professor Witheredloon and Jim Witheredloon, and Mr. Stanley Cooke as the "Coach" made the most of the opportunity afforded him by a bit of mock elocution. The remainder of the cast was submerged by the silliness of the play, which was only saved from failure by the energetic and broadly-comic exertions of Miss Marie Dressler as Tilly Buttin, an "emergency half-back," a part which she sustained with energy, earnestness, and stolid comicality.

MR. GEORGE GRAVES is generously interesting himself on behalf of the chorus and stage-hands of Miss Dressler's company, who are suffering from the failure of the enterprise, subscriptions to the amount of £91 having already been raised chiefly through his exertions. Among the contributors to the fund are Mr. Brandon Thomas, Mr. Bransby Williams, Mr. H. G. Pélissier, Mr. Richard Golden, Mr. Paul Rubens, and Mr. Frank Curzon. The Eccentric Club, the members of which had already subscribed £45, also made a grant of 5 guineas from its benevolent fund.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, MARCH 12, 1909.

MISS MARIE DRESSLER.

SUDDEN TERMINATION OF HER SEASON.

Miss Marie Dressler's season at the Aldwych Theatre came to a sudden stop yesterday. The company were told that Miss Dressler was not going on with the performances of "Philopoena," and admission was refused them to the dressing-rooms.

After nightfall passers-by, curious to know why the front of the theatre was in darkness, stopped to peer through the glass doors, and found on one of them a sheet of paper on which was written: "Owing to the continued illness of Miss Marie Dressler further performances of 'Philopoena' have been indefinitely postponed."

At the back of the theatre the company that had rehearsed for over five weeks, for which custom provides no pay, and drawn but one payment were anxiously waiting to know what was going to be done. Some of the principals were engaged on a twelve weeks' contract. Miss Dressler, however, did not turn up to relieve their anxiety. At seven o'clock the business manager told them that he had been given instructions to say that if they would call at the theatre this afternoon everybody would be paid a week's salary, and that was as much as Miss Dressler could do at present. He also stated, in reply to an inquiry, that all the trade accounts would be paid within a month.

THEATRE IN DARKNESS.

At this time—seven o'clock—the whole of the theatre, with the exception of the little hall of the stage entrance, was in darkness. All the dressing-rooms were locked, by order of the proprietors of the theatre, and the company were informed that whatever belongings they had in them could be obtained next day. Into the little hall sixty or seventy people tried to squeeze themselves. They loudly discussed their grievances. They were all in trouble, and it seemed to them useless to complain. "Ladies and gentlemen, will you please send a postcard, with your names and addresses, to the agent?" called out the stage manager, and when a voice answered, "We are not going to pay any more commission," there was a roar of laughter.

At eight o'clock a messenger boy arrived with a letter from Miss Dressler. It was opened by the stage manager, who read as follows:

To My Company.—That I am not able to continue the fight with you all is due to fate, which, I fear, has been against me. I only care for my company, which I was proud of and loved, and I am too ill to explain myself as I should like to, but I want you to know that I mortgaged everything I had in the world to pay you last week. I thank you for your attention and able support and God knows I wish you all good luck. I did my best.

MARIE DRESSLER.

Only a day or two ago Miss Dressler stated that she had put the whole of her savings—between £7,000 and £8,000—into her venture at the Aldwych Theatre.

MISS MARIE DRESSLER.

HOW THE COMPANY BRAVED A BLANK EXCHEQUER.

There was great disappointment for Miss Marie Dressler's company at the Aldwych Theatre yesterday afternoon, when they learned that the one week's salary promised them the previous night was not forthcoming. Principals, chorus, orchestra, stage hands, and staff shared in the disappointment—there was no money for anyone.

The "call" for 3.30 yesterday to pay a week's salary had been made to the company by the stage manager, on behalf of Mr. J. H. Dalton, Miss Dressler's general manager, but that gentleman's appointment to hand over the necessary cash at one o'clock yesterday had not been kept. When the box-office manager, to whom the money was to have been given at one o'clock, found that Mr. Dalton was an hour and a half behind time, he rang up the house in Kensington where Miss Dressler lives, and was informed that she had gone out of town the previous night for a week or ten days.

The company, with their salaries unpaid, felt despondent, but on the whole they bore themselves very bravely.

Five weeks' rehearsals and ten days' work, and only one week had been paid. The stage hands, married men most of them, stood silently in the street, but the company, of different temperament, tried to put a cheerful face on it. After all, they were not as bad as the poor man who had been engaged to look after the carriage-folk, who had to buy his own uniform in order to qualify for his situation and 25s. a week. The bright blue uniform, with its gilt lettering and buttons, looked sadly out of place in the crowd at the stage-door waiting for money that did not arrive.

1909
Waters, J.

Every evening at 9.

THE REAL WOMAN

By ROBERT HICHENS.

Preceded at 2.30 and 8.30 by

"THE SPARE ROOM,"

By E. M. BRYANT.

Keziah Crauford	Miss ALICE BEET
Jane Crauford	Miss AMY LAMBORN
Dulcie Crauford	Miss GWENDOLEN WREN
Mary	Miss MAY TAVERNER
Henry Crauford	Mr. LYTTON GREY

Scene The Crauford's House in a small country town in the South of England.
Time—The present.

Stage Manager	Mr. FRANK HARDING
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. CLAUDE EDMONDS
Musical Director	Mr. ALEC MACLEAN

Box Office (Mr. Hollingshead) open from 10 to 10. Telephone : 3,844 Gerrard.

Prices of Admission.

Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £3 3s. : Stalls, 10s. 6d. : Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. : Family Circle, 5s. and 4s. ; Pit, 2s. 6d.

Miss MILLARD'S Season under the direction of Mr. TOM. B. DAVIS.

Acting Manager .. .. Mr. ANGUS MacLEOD

On Saturday evening The Real Woman was preceded by a one-act play, by E. M. Bryant, entitled The Spare Room. The play deals with a rather severe character, Keziah Crawford, whose only son, abroad, has sent his young wife home. She arrives, but meets with a most unfavourable welcome from her mother-in-law, and that lady is only eventually won over by the fact that the young wife's baby, conveniently for the time being left outside in its mail-cart, is a girl, and is named Keziah. The spare room is accordingly assigned to the new arrivals. The parts are ably played by Miss Alice Beet as Keziah, Miss Amy Lamborn as Jane, and Miss Gwendolen Wren as the wife, Dulcie.

1909
Waters, J.

"THE YEOMEN OF THE GUARD."

Revival of the Comic Opera, in Two Acts, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan (Originally Produced at the Savoy Theatre on Oct. 3, 1888), Savoy Theatre, Monday, March 1.

SAVOY THEATRE.

SOLE LESSEE AND MANAGER, MRS. D'OYLY CARTE.

THIS EVENING, MONDAY, MARCH 1st, 1909, at 8.25, and Subsequent Evenings for Four Weeks,

The ORIGINAL OPERA in Two Acts, entitled

THE

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD

OR,

The Merryman and his Maid.

Written by W. S. GILBERT. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

SIR RICHARD CHOLMONDELEY { Lieutenant of the Tower }	MR. LEO SHEFFIELD
COLONEL FAIRFAX (Under sentence of Death) ...	MR. HENRY HERBERT
SERGEANT MERYLL (Of the Yeomen of the Guard) (His original part)	MR. RICHARD TEMPLE
LEONARD MERYLL (His Son)	MR. LAURENCE LEGGE
JACK POINT (A Strolling Jester)	MR. C. H. WORKMAN
WILFRED SHADBOLT { Head Jailor and Assistant Tormentor }	MR. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
THE HEADSMAN	MR. RICHARD SHAW
CORPORAL	MR. CECIL CURTIS
FIRST YEOMAN	MR. W. DAVIDSON
SECOND YEOMAN	MR. FRED HEWETT
FIRST CITIZEN	MR. FRED EDGAR
SECOND CITIZEN	MR. SIDNEY ASHCROFT
ELSIE MAYNARD (A Strolling Singer)	MISS ELSIE SPAIN
PHŒBE MERYLL (Sergeant Meryll's Daughter) ...	MISS JESSIE ROSE
DAME CARRUTHERS (Housekeeper to the Tower)	MISS LOUIE RENE
KATE (Her Niece)	MISS BEATRICE BOARER

Chorus of Yeomen of the Guard, Gentlemen, Citizens, &c.

Scene ... ... Tower Green (W. Raphael)

DATE—16TH CENTURY.

There will be an interval of about 15 minutes between Acts I. and II.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Under the Management of Mr. TOM B. DAVIS.

EVERY EVENING AT 8,

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

A PLAY IN FIVE ACTS,

Adapted from the Novel of Alexandre Dumas,

By HENRY HAMILTON.

Louis XIII. ...	(King of France) ...	Mr. GAYER MACKAY
Cardinal Richelieu ...	... ...	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Duke of Buckingham	... ...	Mr. VINCENT CLIVE
	(By arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR COLLINS
Comte de Rochefort	... ...	Mr. REGINALD DANE
M. de Treville ...	... ...	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
Athos ...	of the King's Musketeers	Mr. BASSETT ROE
Porthos ...		Mr. HERBERT JARMAN
Aramis ...		Mr. SHIEL BARRY
De Chemerault		Mr. FRANK RIDLEY
D'Estrees ...		Mr. FREDERICK LLOYD
Jussac ...	of the Cardinal's Guard	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Bicarat ...		Mr. CATON WOODVILLE
Bernajoux ...		Mr. O. S. BAILEY
De Cahusac		Mr. CECIL MCGUINNESS
La Vieuville		Mr. A. J. NAPPER
Vernet ...		Mr. ROY CUSHING
Dujart ...		Mr. C. BANKES
Felton	... ...	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Planchet	... ...	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Mousqueton ...	... ...	Mr. HERBERT VYVYAN
Bourdet	... ...	Mr. PATRICK DIGAN
Brisemont ...	... ...	Mr. A. N. WIGHT
Fourriet	... ...	Mr. L. JAMES
De La Fauconniere ...	... ...	Master HAMILTON KNIGHT
Le Masle	... ...	Mr. D. BARTUN
Raoul D'Artagnan ...	... ...	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Anne of Austria ...	(Queen of France) ...	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Miladi	... ...	Miss AURIOL LEE
Gabrielle de Chalus ...	... ...	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE
Mother Superior ...	... ...	Miss GWENDOLIN FLOYD
Toinette	... ...	Miss DOROTHY DIX
Sister	... ...	Miss MAY CHENERY

1909
Waters, J.

Act I. ...	Scene 1 ...	. .	The Antechamber of M. de Treville
	Scene 2 ...	... ...	The Pre aux Clercs
Act II. ...	Scene 1 ...	The Louvre.	The Queen's Apartment
	Scene 2 ...	... ...	The Rue de la Harpe
	Scene 3 ...	The Louvre.	The Queen's Apartment
Act III. ...	Scene 1 ...	... ...	The Palais Cardinal
	Scene 2 ...	... ...	D'Artagnan's Lodging.
	Scene 3 ...	...An Antechamber	in the Hotel de Ville
Act IV. ...	Scene 1 ...	... ...	The Park of St. Cloud
	Scene 2 ...	... ...	The House of Miladi
Act V. ...	Scene 1 ...	... ...	The Convent, Bethune
	Scene 2 ...	...The Louvre.	The Queen's Apartment

Mr. Waller has been assisted in the production by Mr. HERBERT JARMAN.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"The Three Musketeers"	Frederick Rosse
PRELUDE AND VALSE LENTE ...	..."Coppelia"	Leo Delibes
SELECTION	"Madame Butterfly"	... Puccini
"HUMORESKE"	... ...	.. Dvorak
"LA FILEUSE"	... ...	Mendelssohn
MAZURKA MARCHE RUSSE }	from the "Ballet Russe"	... Luigini

STAGE MANAGER ... ... Mr. CHARLES LA TROBE
MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... ... Mr. LEONARD CHALK

Costumes by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN. Ladies' Dresses by Mrs. MURRAY.
Furniture by OETZMANN. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Overture and Incidental Music specially composed by FREDERICK ROSSE.
The Fight by Mons. FELIX BERTRAND.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2 O'CLOCK.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 7.30. Commence at 8. Carriages at 11.
Matinee Doors open at 1.30.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. A. C. BELSEY.

LYRIC THEATRE.

On Wednesday, March 3, Revival of the Play, in Five Acts, Adapted by Henry Hamilton from the Novel of Alexandre Dumas, entitled "THE THREE MUSKETEERS."

Mr. Henry Hamilton's adaptation of Dumas' novel was produced at the Globe Theatre on Oct. 22, 1893, with Mr. John Beauchamp as Cardinal Richelieu, Mr. Bassett Roe as Athos, Mr. Charles Goodhart as Porthos, Mr. Gerald Gurney as Aramis, Miss Kate Rorke as Anne of Austria, Miss Florence West as Miladi, Mis Eva Moore as Gabrielle de Chalus, and Mr. Lewis Waller as d'Artagnan. Mr. Waller revived the popular drama at the Lyric Theatre on Wednesday with marked success. His d'Artagnan is, indeed, one of the best rôles in his repertory, and he plays it with a spirit, verve, and entrain, and a dry, natural humour that are thoroughly effective.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

Sole Lessees and Managers ... ... A. & S. GATTI.

Mr. LESLIE FABER'S Season.

On THURSDAY, MARCH 4th, 1909,
And Every Evening at 9,

THE HEAD OF THE FIRM

A Play in Four Acts from the Danish of HJALMAR BERGSTROM, by LESLIE FABER

John Lydford (Owner of Lydford Ironworks) Mr. JAMES HEARN
Philip Lydford (his Son) ... Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
James Browne (his Father-in-Law, a retired Schoolmaster) Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
George Heymann (Manager of Lydford Ironworks) Mr. LESLIE FABER
Edward Dalby ... ... Mr. EVELYN BEERBOHM (By permission of Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES)
Torley ... ... Mr. ERNEST COSHAM
Helen Lydford (Wife of John Lydford) Miss HENRIETTA WATSON
Betty Lydford (her Daughter) Miss ETHELWYN JONES
Mrs. Dalby ... Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER (By permission of Mr. H. BEERBOHM TREE)

The Action takes place in Lydford's House at the present time, and lasts from the Evening of one day until the Afternoon of the next day.
Lydford's House is on the outskirts of a large Midland manufacturing town.

Preceded at 8.30 by a Comedy in One Act, entitled—

THE DRAMATIST AT HOME

By KEBLE HOWARD.

Ralph (a newly discovered Dramatist) Mr. LESLIE FABER
Margery (his Wife) ... ... Mrs. LESLIE FABER

Scene—RALPH'S STUDY.

1909
Waters, J.

Mr. Leslie Faber's translation of Hjalmar Bergstrom's drama was not received at the Vaudeville Theatre on Saturday in quite the same spirit that its author probably intended; but, nevertheless, it held their attention firmly, created strong interest, and evoked hearty laughter. It is a drama of sociology and business, and the scene is laid in the house of John Lydford, the owner of the Lydford Ironworks. In order to indulge his taste for pictures he has allowed the reins of government at the works to be taken out of his hands by his manager, George Heymann, a young Jew of great cunning and ability. The great rivals of the Lydford works are a certain American Iron Trust, who threaten the Lydford establishment with extinction by underselling. Philip Lydford's son is an idle theorist, who has been spending his time abroad, and has become a strong Socialist. Mrs. Lydford fears and suspects Heymann, and when she learns that, by his advice, the business is to be turned into a limited liability company, she offers Lydford the alternative of dismissing Heymann or being separated entirely from her and from his son. Mrs. Lydford's father, an elderly schoolmaster, advises Lydford to consent to his wife's departure, but to send her daughter, Betty, who is secretly in love with Heymann, away with her. Betty at first refuses to go, but consents when Heymann asks her to do so. He then declares his love, and they become engaged. But when it comes to the point, the ironmaster consents to postpone the conversion of the business into a company, and has a violent quarrel with Heymann, who reveals the fact that the firm is in a dangerous position, with a strike imminent and the Trust menacing its prosperity. However, he resigns his position, and goes out.

The last act is taken up with showing that Heymann, l'homme nécessaire, must be reinstated. The son goes out to address the rioters, and is received with howls and insults. He returns, convinced that he is helpless, and the curtain falls on Lydford, with his wife's full consent, sending for Heymann to resume his post.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE,

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, W.C.

Proprietors ... ... Mr. & Mrs. FRANK WYATT.
Sole Lessee and Manager ... ... CHARLES FROHMAN

SIX SPECIAL MATINEES.

Tuesdays and Fridays, March 9th, 12th, 16th, 19th, 23rd and 26th, at 2.30.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

"STRIFE,"

A Play in Three Acts,

BY

JOHN GALSWORTHY.

PERSONS IN THE PLAY.

John Anthony ...	(Chairman of the Trenartha Tin Plate Works)	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL
		By kind permission of Miss LENA ASHWELL
Edgar Anthony	(his Son) ...	... Mr. C. M. HALLARD
		By kind permission of Miss LENA ASHWELL
Frederick H. Wilder		Mr. DENNIS EADIE
		By kind permission of Miss LENA ASHWELL
William Scanterbury ...	(Directors of the same) ...	Mr. LUIGI LABLACHE
Oliver Wanklin		Mr. C. V. FRANCE
Henry Trench	(Secretary of the same)...	... Mr. O. P. HEGGIE
Francis Underwood, C.E. ...	(Manager of the same) ...	Mr. A. S. HOMEWOOD
Frost	(Valet to John Anthony) ...	... Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Simon Harness	(a Trades Union Official) ...	Mr. GEORGE INGLETON
David Roberts		Mr. J. FISHER WHITE
James Green		Mr. R. LEISK
John Bulgin ...	(A Workmen's Committee) ...	Mr. P. L. JULIAN
Henry Thomas		Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
George Rous		Mr. OWEN ROUGHWOOD
Llewellyn		Mr. JOHN KELT
Henry Rous		Mr. I. GILLESPIE
Lewis		Mr. CHARLES BISHOP
Jago		Mr. CHARLES DANVERS
Evans	(Workmen at the Trenartha Tin Plate Works)	Mr. DRELINCOURT ODLUM
A Blacksmith		Mr. W. HENROYS
Davies		Mr. EDWARD SIDNEY
A Red-Haired Youth		Mr. LESLIE OSWELL
Brown		Mr. J. W. MASON
Smith		Mr. HAROLD CHAPIN
Enid Underwood	(Wife of Francis Underwood, Daughter of John Anthony)	Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
Annie Roberts	(Wife of David Roberts) ...	Miss MARY BARTON
		By kind permission of Miss LENA ASHWELL
Madge Thomas ...	... (Daughter of Henry Thomas) ...	Miss LILLAH McCARTHY
Mrs. Rous	(Mother of George and Henry Rous) ...	Miss ROSE CAZALET
Mrs. Bulgin	(Wife of John Bulgin) ...	... Miss SIDNEY PAXTON
Mrs. Yeo	(Wife of a Workman) ...	Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
A Parlourmaid to the Underwoods ...	... .	... Miss GLADYS STOREY
Jan	(Madge's Brother, a boy of 10) ...	Master SIMON NAGLE
	A Crowd of Men on Strike.

The Action passes on February 7th, near the Trenartha Tin Plate Works on the borders of England and Wales.

Act I. - - - - The Dining-Room of the Manager's House.

Act II.—Scene 1 - - - - The Sitting Room of David Roberts' Cottage.
Scene 2 - - - - An open space outside the Works.

Act III. - - - - - The Drawing-Room of the Manager's House.

The Play Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

General Manager for CHARLES FROHMAN ... ... W. LESTOCQ.
Business Manager ... ... JAMES W. MATHEWS.
Stage Manager ... DUNCAN McRAE | Musical Director ... ... JOHN CROOK.

ICES TEA AND COFFEE can be had of the Attendants

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

64 66

There is nothing but praise to be given to Mr. John Galsworthy's play Strife, which was produced at the Duke of York's Theatre on Tuesday afternoon. A subject which is often dealt with in a mistaken and superficial way is treated with knowledge and judgment; the characters are life-like and impressive; and the climax is achieved inevitably and without effort. The pathos of some of the situations is calculated to wring the heart, if it be made of penetrable stuff, and the dialogue is uniformly strong, terse, and eloquent.

The position of affairs at the Trenartha Tin-plate Works, "on the border of England and Wales," is this:—The men have struck work for an advance of wages, a step which has not been entirely approved of by their Union. John Anthony, the chairman of the company, is an obstinate old man, who is determined not to yield in the smallest degree to the demands of the men, although the company is losing thousands by the strike. On the other side, David Roberts, one of the workmen who has been paid a paltry sum for a clever invention which has brought in large sums to the company, urges his comrades to hold out to the last gasp. In the first act he comes, at the head of a deputation, to a board meeting which has been held in the dining-room of the house of Francis Underwood, John Anthony's son-in-law. The directors are inclined to compromise; but John Anthony will not hear of it, and over-rules them all by his age and influence. Henry Trench, the secretary of the company, tells the old man that the directors are planning to throw him over; but Anthony only calls for a whisky and soda, and drinks it stolidly as the act-drop descends.

In the second act we are shown the effect of the strike on the families of the workmen. Roberts's wife is dying of starvation; but when Mrs. Underwood calls at the cottage and tries to argue with her, the poor woman is desperately loyal to her husband and his opinions. Madge Thomas, the daughter of a religious old miner named Henry Thomas, is angry at the suffering she sees, and, by appealing to her sweetheart's affection for her, she induces him to desert his leader, Roberts, and to advocate the termination of the strike. The second scene of this act shows a crowd of workmen assembled outside the Works, to hear speeches from their orators. Simon Harness, a Trades Union official, counsels a compromise, and says the Union will not support the men if they do not take this advice. The apostate sweetheart "follows on the same side," and the religious workman appeals to the Welshmen in the name of "Chapel." But all the impression thus made is destroyed when Roberts gets on the platform. By a burning speech, he inflames the passions of the men to the highest pitch; but, at the very climax of his eloquence, Madge rushes in and cries, "Your wife's dead!" Roberts collapses and goes out, and, in his absence, a compromise is agreed upon.

In the last act, the directors show signs that they, too, have "had enough of it." The death of Annie Roberts is announced, and has an influence on the board, who at last pluck up courage to depose John Anthony, and do so by a unanimous vote. The old man is as obstinate as ever, and makes an eloquent speech in his defence; but he has to yield. Roberts, who is under the impression that the men were still staunch to him, arrives full of fight, and is astounded to hear of the compromise. "They've done us both, Mr. Anthony!" he cries, and the old tyrant bows to his opponent before staggering out, a beaten man. The secretary remarks that the terms arrived at are exactly those originally proposed by Harness in a spirit of compromise, to which the latter answers, "That's just the fun of the game!"

67

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees and Managing Directors .. .. Popular Playhouses, Ltd. HENRY R. SMITH and ERNEST CARPENTER.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, 17, Craven Street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Saturday ~~TUESDAY~~, MARCH ~~9~~ 13, 1909, at 8. And Every Evening at 8 until further notice. Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30

SHAKESPEARE'S Tragedy

HAMLET

The Prelude and Incidental Music composed by H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.

Characters.

Hamlet (Prince of Denmark: Son of the late and nephew to the present King	MR. MATHESON LANG
Claudius (Uncle to Hamlet)	MR. ERIC MAYNE
Polonius (Lord Chamberlain)	MR. GEORGE FITZGERALD
Horatio (Friend to Hamlet) ...	MR. HALLIWELL HOBBES
Laertes (Son to Polonius) ...	MR. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Rosencrantz } Courtiers and Students	MR. SYDNEY VAUTIER
Guildenstern } from Wittenberg	MR. COWLEY WRIGHT
Osric (A Courtier)	MR. RICHARD ANDEAN
First Player	MR. ERNEST GRIFFIN
Second Player	MR. DOUGLAS BURTON
Third Player	MISS DORA CLEMENTS
Player Queen	MISS RITA TOMKINS
A Lord	MR. HENRY ARMSTRONG
Priest	MR. R. W. WESTERMAN
Marcellus } Soldiers	MR. GEORGE RELPH
Bernardo }	MR. WILFRED EDMUNDS
Francisco }	MR. CHARLES L. LUDLOW
First Gravedigger	MR. S. MAJOR JONES
Second Gravedigger	... MR. H. K. AYLIFF
Captain	.. MR. J. H HODSON
Servant	MR. JOHN BEAMISH
First Sailor	MR. CHARLES TERRIC
Second Sailor	MR. ERNEST CRESFAN
Messenger	MR. RUSSELL DAVIS
Ghost of Hamlet's Father	MR. FREDERICK ROSS
Gertrude (Queen of Denmark and mother to Hamlet)	MISS MARY ALLESTREE
Ophelia (Daughter to Polonius) ...	MISS HUTIN BRITTON

Lords, Ladies, Soldiers, Pages, Priests, Players, Servants, etc., etc.

The Play produced under the Stage Direction of who desires to gratefully acknowledge valuable assistance from Mr. MATHESON LANG, in the construction of this acting version.

ERNEST CARPENTER,

"HAMLET" AT THE LYCEUM.

Shakespeare's Tragedy, Revived at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday, March 13.

1909
Waters, J.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.

Scene 1. The Battlements of the Castle
Scene 2.—The Great Hall of the Castle
Scene 3.—A Room in the House of Polonius
Scene 4.—The Battlements of the Castle
Scene 5.—A more remote part of the Battlements

ACT II.

Scene.—The Great Hall of the Castle

ACT III.

Scene.—The Great Hall of the Castle

ACT IV.

Scene 1.—The Queen's Chamber
Scene 2.—A Room in the Castle
Scene 3.—The Great Hall of the Castle

ACT V.

Scene 1.—The Graveyard
Scene 2.—A Room in the Castle
Scene 3.—The Great Hall of the Castle

The Scenery Designed and Painted by E. C. NICHOLLS and Assistants.

The Costumes designed by Mr. KARL and executed by Messrs. L. and H. NATHAN.

Miss HUTIN BRITTON's Costumes by ROSSETTI.

Floral Decorations by J. BAUMLER & Co.

The Wigs by C. H. Fox, Ltd. The Furniture by J. S. LYON.

The Duel in Act 5 arranged by M. BERTRAND.

The following selection will be played by the Lyceum Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.

1.	PRELUDE TO "HAMLET"	- -	H. Sullivan Brooke
2.	EPISODE -	"Carnival in Paris" -	- Svensden
3.	SUITE - -	"Scandinavia" -	- Hartmann
4.	FANTASIE -	"Nebershilda" -	- Lumbye
5.	OVERTURE -	"Youth" -	- Hervey

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. Mr. W. F. CROWE

Stage Manager .. .. Mr. S. MAJOR JONES

Assistant Stage Manager Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG | Chief Machinist Mr. A. R. GEORGE

Chief Electrician ... Mr. F. B. FIDGE | Advertising Dept. ... Mr. P. RAPHAEL

PRICES—Boxes. £4 4s., £3 3s., £2 2s., & £1 11s. 6d.; Stalls, 5s. & 3s. (reserved): Dress Circle, 4s. and 2s. 6d. (reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Box Office (ANDREW SPENCER) open 10 to 10.
Telephone Nos.: 7617, 7618 & 7619 GERRARD.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

1909
Waters, J.

Tuesdays . . . March 16th and 23rd.

Thursdays . . March 18th and 25th.

Fridays . . . March 19th and 26th.

THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE

An Original Play in Three Acts by SEYMOUR OBERMER.

Sir Vincent Meredith - - - - -	MR. HERBERT WARING
Paul Bertrand, F.R.C.S. - - - -	MR. AUBREY SMITH
Dr. Roland - - - - - -	MR. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Cairns - - - - - - -	MR. COMPTON COUTTS
Lady Joan Meredith - - - - -	MISS EVA MOORE
Duchess of Banff - - - - -	MISS BERYL FABER
Lady Carlington - - - - -	MISS SARAH BROOKE

ACT I.—Paul Bertrand's Consulting Room, Harley Street, W.

ACT II. & III.—The Living Room of a Swiss Châlet near Chamonix, commanding a view of Mont Blanc.

Three weeks elapse between each Act.

"THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE."

Play, in Three Acts, by Seymour Obermer, Produced at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday, March 16.

The productions at the Afternoon Theatre are always interesting, and The House of Bondage is a play with many good points. It is irritating, however, by its complexity, and by the mixture of dramatic effect with propagandism. Some of the situations are, nevertheless, intellectually, if not theatrically, effective, and the piece is capitally written. We start with a quartette of mismated people. Sir Vincent Meredith, an ambitious politician, has become indifferent to his wife, Lady Joan, and is carrying on a liaison with the Duchess of Banff, who has helped him greatly in his career. Lady Joan, disgusted with her husband's behaviour, has fallen in love with an eminent physician, Paul Bertrand, the greatest living expert in operations on the brain. In the first act, Lady Joan has been "making people talk" by frequent visits to the doctor's consulting-room, and his friend, Lady Carlington, warns him that he is endangering his position by giving food for scandal. When Lady Joan comes, Bertrand tells her that these visits must cease, lest they should injure her reputation. Lady Joan is less solicitous about this than he is; but Bertrand, after telling her that he loves her, says that for that very reason their meetings are dangerous, and must cease. He has just prescribed for her a visit to Switzerland, when Sir Vincent, a stern, pale personage, enters, and, after satirically explaining to Lady Joan that her conduct is the "talk of the town," puts the plain question to Bertrand, "Do you love my wife?" "Yes," says the doctor. Sir Vincent then says that he has a "growth on the brain" which will have to be removed, and that Bertrand must perform the operation. After some very natural objection, the latter consents to do so.

In the second act, we find the trio in Switzerland, preparing for the operation. Sir Vincent argues the point with Lady Joan, but, of course, finds her unanswerable. As she says, what sort of a life is she to lead if she obtains a judicial separation? Bertrand refuses to elope with her, and so give Sir Vincent a chance of getting a divorce; and Sir Vincent does not offer to strike her, and so give her the plea of "cruelty" for divorcing him. If the law of divorce were the same for the husband as for the wife, Lady Joan's course would be clear. As it is, the parties are at a deadlock. The position is further complicated by the question of the operation. Lady Carlington comes from England to protest against Bertrand's performing it. She does not question his professional loyalty; but she says that the critical position will affect his nerve. Bertrand himself is worried by it, and tells Lady Joan that he will throw up the case, and call in another doctor. But she encourages him to go through with what he has undertaken, and on his decision to do so the act-drop descends.

In the interval between the second and third acts the operation has been successfully performed, and Sir Vincent is on his legs again, apparently quite well. The duchess comes to Chamonix to renew the liaison, and the two women meet. Lady Joan reproaches the duchess bitterly for her conduct. "If you had been brave enough," she says, "to elope with my husband and live with him in the face of the world, I could have forgiven you; but your secret liaison is contemptible." The duchess is at first remorseful; but finally resumes her unrepentant attitude. Sir Vincent, however, is stricken with a sense of his sin, and promises, as he is likely to be a Cabinet Minister, to work night and day for a reform of the Law of Divorce.

"The House of Bondage" having failed to secure sufficient public support, the performances announced by the Afternoon Theatre for next Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday will be abandoned. Money taken for these dates will be returned upon application to the box-office.

Mr. Charles Hawtrey's season at the Royalty Theatre opened on Saturday with decided success. The description of The Noble Spaniard as "Victorian farce" is not exactly correct. The Victorian farce was a much cruder and coarser affair than the quaint comedy into which Mr. Maugham has turned his French original, which is entitled Les Oûtils du Ménage, and the moderation and refinement of the acting keep the play quite within the pale of comedy. Were this not so, the effect of the adaptation would be destroyed, for the story is wildly extravagant. The Duke of Hermanos is one of those stage Spaniards who are never seen or heard of in real life. He is a descendant of Don Cæsar de Bazan, "noble" in the extreme, and having the right, as he often repeats, to wear his "at" in the presence of his King. He has a "soul of fire," and nothing stops him when he is once in love with a lady. An English family staying at Boulogne consists of Mr. Justice Proudfoot and his mature, but frivolous, wife, Lady Proudfoot; Marion Nairne, a pretty widow; and Lucy, an ingénue, who is engaged to Captain Chalford, a languid dandy of the period. All the personages in the play wear Victorian costumes, with flounces and crinolines. Friends of the Proudfoots are the Count and Countess de Moret, the former a very susceptible and impressionable Frenchman. Into this peaceful family, the Duke of Hermanos, who has received a fiery passion for Marion Nairne, enters audaciously. Dispensing with the formality of an introduction, he calls on Marion, tells her of the overpowering passion she has inspired in him, and so harasses her that, to get rid of him, she says that she is married. The Duke declares that "rival" and vows that he will challenge her husband and kill him in a duel. The fiery Spaniard mistakes Mr. Justice Proudfoot for the "obstacle," and tries in vain to induce him to accept a challenge. When Lady Proudfoot comes in from a shrimping excursion, the Justice, who believes her with her imprudence, Lady Proudfoot is much at not knowing who it is that is enamoured of her. Eventually, a reconciliation takes place between the Proudfoots, and Hermanos, returning uneventfully, finds the couple embracing, and jumps to the conclusion that the Justice, whom he believes to be Marion's husband, is unfaithful to her.

The Duke continues to press his suit in the second act, in which, by his excited blundering, he interferes with the loves of Captain Chalford and Lucy. A bouquet is an accessory of importance in this act. The Duke has left one with her, telling her that he is prepared to elope with her, and that, if she wants him, she has only to throw the flowers from the balcony. Lucy finds the bouquet, and thinks that it has been sent by her fiancé; and he, believing that it is the gift of a rival, quarrels with her. Hermanos fancies the Captain is Marion's lover, and challenges him to single combat on the sands, an offer which the Captain promptly accepts. And so the Duke's errors and his excitement increase.

In the third act, from a remark made by Marion, he jumps to the conclusion that the Count de Moret is her husband, and challenges him, the But the susceptible Count is thus led to imagine that the Countess, on entering, finds him kneeling at Miss Nairne's feet and emitting ecstatic vows. By this time, Marion has come to the conclusion that the only way to put a stop to the complications caused by the Duke's extravagant actions is to marry him; so, confessing her deception, she consents to become his wife.

1909 Waters, J.

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE

Lessee, Mr. Tom B. Davis.

Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

On SATURDAY, MARCH 20th, 1909, at 9 o'clock,

A Victorian Farce in Three Acts, adapted from the French of Grenet-Dancourt, by

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM,

ENTITLED

"THE NOBLE SPANIARD"

Duke of Hermanos	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Mr. Justice Proudfoot	Mr. E. LYALL SWETE
Captain Chalford	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Count de Moret	Mr. LEON M. LION
Marion Nairne	Miss KATE CUTLER
Lucy	Miss ANNE CLEAVER
Countess de Moret	Miss VANE FEATHERSTON
Mary Jane	Miss JOY CHATWYN
Lady Proudfoot	Miss FANNY BROUGH

THE SCENE IS LAID AT BOULOGNE IN 1850.

ACT I. ... ... Mr. JUSTICE PROUDFOOT'S HOUSE MORNING ROOM (Hatter Haun)

ACTS II. and III. ... ... " " DRAWING ROOM "

The Words of the Song in the Second Act by Felicia Hemans and the Music by Virginia Blakemore.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. CHRISTMAS GROSE

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Box Office (Mr. C. Wright) open 10 to 10.

Preceded at 8.15 by George Paston's Comedietta, entitled

"FEED THE BRUTE"

Samuel Pottle	Mr. ROBERT WHYTE, Junr.
Mrs. Pottle	Miss MARY BROUGH
Mrs. Wilks	Miss GWYNNE HERBERT

SCENE—MAWSON'S BUILDINGS, WEST HAM

The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Harold Robertson Grimston will play

Costumes and Dresses designed by Mr. Tom Heslewood

General Manager ... ... Mr. Lyston Lyle.

1909
Waters, J.

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

Lord Chamberlain to Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES, 6, Park Square, Regent's Park, N.W. Sole Proprietors: Messrs.

EVERY EVENING at 9 o'clock,
For a Limited Number of Performances,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

"STRIFE,"

A Play in Three Acts, by JOHN GALSWORTHY.

Preceded at 8.15 by

A BOY'S PROPOSAL

A Play in One Act, by ARTHUR ECKERSLEY

Mr. Augustus Sheringham	-	(a Bachelor) -	Mr. HUBERT WILLIS
Tom - - - -		(his Nephew, aged 14) -	Master PHILIP TONGE
Lady Pilkington - -		(a Widow) -	Miss MAY CHEVALIER
Dean - - - -		(a Butler) -	Mr. P. L. JULIAN

At Lady Pilkington's Flat.

Programme of Music.

Overture - - -	"Rosamunde" - - -	- Schubert
Symphony No. 4 - -	- - - - - -	- Haydn
Symphony No. 39 - -	- - - - - -	- Mozart
Symphony No. 7 - -	- - - - - -	- Haydn

Orchestra under the Direction of MERLIN MORGAN.

The Box Office (under the direction of Mr. A. P. Oxley) is open daily from 10 to 10

PRICES OF ADMISSION,

Private Boxes, £3 3s., £4 4s. & £5 5s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, First Four Rows, 7s. 6d.; Other Rows, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone 2645 Gerrard.

Doors Open Matinees at 1.45. Commence at 2.15. Evenings at 7.45 Commence at 8.15.

Business Manager	-	(for CHARLES FROHMAN) -	JAMES W. MATHEWS
Acting Manager	-	(for GEORGE EDWARDES) - -	W. ANGUS McLEOD

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, APRIL 1st, 1909, at 8.45 o'clock,

FREDERICK HARRISON and CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENT

A New Comedy in Three Acts, by HUBERT HENRY DAVIES.

The Marquis of Bewdley		Mr. A. E. MATTHEWS
Lord Herbert Penrose		Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Sir Philip Merryweather, Bart. ...		Mr. IVO DAWSON
Mr. Hopkins		Mr. C. V. FRANCE
Harrison ...	... Lord Bewdley's Servants	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Ernest ...		Mr. ARTHUR MINTON
Parrott ...	... Mrs. Pym's Servants	Mr. L. H. KENDRICK
George ...		Mr. E. F. MEADS
The Marchioness of Bewdley		Miss HENRIETTA WATSON
Lady Merryweather		Miss NINA SEVENING
Rachel Hopkins		Miss MADGE TITHERADGE
Mrs. Pym		Miss LOTTIE VENNE

The Action takes place at the present day in the Summertime.

Act I. .. At Lord Bewdley's House in Park Lane. Tuesday Afternoon

Act II. .. The Hall at Mrs. Pym's House on the Thames. Saturday Afternoon

Act III. .. .. The River Bank. Sunday Morning

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. DION BOUCICAULT.

Scenery by WALTER HANN. Dresses by Madame HAYWARD.

Lessee & Manager .. .. .. Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON

Business Manager .. .. Mr. HORACE WATSON

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

Thursday
Evening

Apr 1

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No

This to be retained

This ticket is sold subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

Mr. Hubert Henry Davies's comedy is rather thin in idea and construction; but it is brightly and pleasantly written, and contains a capital part for Miss Lottie Venne, to whose extraordinary exertions much of the success of the production on Thursday evening may be attributed. Bevis shows the seamy side of the amalgamation between money and rank, wealth in this case being represented as decidedly more dignified and admirable than aristocracy. Bevis, the young Marquis of Bewdley, is an easy-going, agreeable young man who has been "spoilt" by the number of girls who admire him and would like to marry him. His mother, the Marchioness of Bewdley, and his uncle, Lord Herbert Penrose, are anxious that he shall marry money, so that they may come in for some of the "pickings" which may be made out of a wealthy, plebeian father-in-law. Bevis has already selected an agreeable heiress, Rachel Hopkins, the daughter of a wealthy brewer, and the only question is that of settlements. The Marchioness and Lord Herbert both hope to get a good deal out of Mr. Hopkins, but he resents their demands stoutly. When Rachel understands what is going on, she determines to put Bevis to the test; so she tells him that her father says that, if she marry the young Marquis, he—Hopkins—will leave her nothing. Bevis, on hearing this, suggests the engagement must be broken off; and Rachel, after disclosing the trick she has played in order to find out if he really loves her, leaves him and his family with scorn. The act ends with Bevis—who, now that Rachel has refused him, is spurred into a resolve to win her—announcing that he is determined to do so at all costs.

Bevis induces a silly and impecunious widow, Mrs. Pym, to take a small house on the Thames, and to invite his family and the Hopkinses there at the same time. The result is a very awkward situation, which is made amusing by the comic anxiety and grotesque distress of Mrs. Pym. However, Bevis manages to renew his suit to Rachel, who "snubs" him thoroughly. She tells him plainly that what he calls his love for her is nothing but pique, and declines to reconsider her decision. But Mr. Hopkins has a serious and paternal interview with her, and persuades her that it is her duty to accept Bevis even against her own inclinations. She tells him plainly how the matter stands, and says that she will be his wife. But Bevis is not satisfied with such a cynical contract. If Rachel will only marry him for politic reasons, and has no affection for him personally, he will not be her husband on such degrading terms. The second act ends with the pair still at loggerheads.

In the last act, of course, the playwright brings the young people together. Bevis goes to bathe, and while concealed behind some bushes, overhears the conversation of his mother and uncle, who believe that he has been drowned, and realises their worldliness and heartlessness. He also learns that Rachel, in spite of her spirited behaviour, loves him deeply; and, after that, there is no further difficulty in arranging their union.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

78

Business Manager & Secretary,
H. Woodford.
Treasurer,
A. E. Corrick.
Stage Manager,
Clarence Hunt.

Alhambra Theatre

CHARING CROSS ROAD AND LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON.

Managing Director—ALFRED MOUL.

PROGRAMME.

Subject to Alteration at the Discretion of the Management.

Programme for Monday, April 5th, 1909.

7. PSYCHE 9.10

An Idyll, in Three Scenes.

Dramatic Action and Dances arranged by M. ALFREDO CURTI
Music by ALFRED MOUL.
Costumes by ALIAS from designs by COMELLI Scenery by M. AMABLE
Mise-en-scène by A. WARTEL Lighting by J. WILLIAMS
Incidental Music by A. WHITE Wigs by GUSTAVE.
Presented under the Personal Direction of ALFRED MOUL.

Cupid ... Mlle. BRITTA
Mlle. JEAN JET
Miss ETTA ROSE
Mlle. M. SUTTY

Psyche ... Mlle. LEONORA

Supported by the full CORPS DE BALLET of the ALHAMBRA THEATRE

SCENE I. The Temple of Venus.

Processional March (Offerings to Venus) Psyche's Homage to Venus
Adoration of Psyche Dance of the Priestesses Crotal Dance
The Arrival of Venus The Heralds of Venus and
The Denunciation of Psyche

Scene II. The Rocks.

Condemnation of Psyche. Cupid's Awakening.

Scene III. Cupid's Bower.

Awaiting Psyche's Arrival Cupid's Ecstasy The Arrival of Psyche
The Awakening of Psyche Veil Dance The Dawn of Love
Cupid's Prayer Homage to Venus, The Nuptials and Finale.

APOTHEOSIS.

78

1909
Waters, J.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7TH, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK.

The School for Scandal

By RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN.

Sir Peter Teazle	Mr. TREE
Sir Oliver Surface	Mr. HENRY NEVILLE
Sir Harry Bumper	Mr. ROBERT CUNNINGHAM
Sir Benjamin Backbite	Mr. HENRY V. ESMOND
Joseph Surface	Mr. BASIL GILL
Charles Surface	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
Careless	Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAIN
Snake	Mr. JAMES HEARN
Crabtree	Mr. EDWARD TERRY
Rowley	Mr. HERMANN VEZIN
Moses	Mr. LIONEL BROUGH
Sir Toby	Mr. CARLETON REX
Trip	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Servant to Joseph	Mr. HENRY MORRELL
Lady Teazle	Miss MARIE LÖHR (By arrangement with Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.)
Mrs. Candour	Miss SUZANNE SHELDON
Maid to Lady Teazle	Miss LAURA COWIE
Maria	Miss DAGMAR WIEHE
Maid to Lady Sneerwell	Miss GABRIELLE DE WILDEN
Lady Sneerwell	Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS

Act I.

SCENE 1.—Lady Sneerwell's Boudoir. SCENE 2.—Sir Peter's House.
SCENE 3.—Lady Sneerwell's Drawing Room.
The Minuet has been arranged by LOUIS HARVEY D'EGVILLE.

Act II.

SCENE 1.—Drawing Room at Sir Peter's. SCENE 2.—Hall in Charles Surface's House.
SCENE 3.—Picture Room at Charles Surface's.

Act III.

The Library at Joseph Surface's.

Act IV.

SCENE 1.—Sir Peter's House. SCENE 2.—The Library at Joseph Surface's.

The Scenery has been painted by JOSEPH HARKER, except Act II. Scene III. which has been painted by WALTER HANN.

The Costumes and Scenery have been specially designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.

The Costumes have been executed by Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, W.C.
The Antique Furniture of the period has been obtained from Messrs. D. L. ISAACS, 44 to 48, New Oxford Street, W.C.

Music of the Play.

OVERTURE	"Il Matrimonio Segreto"	Domi Cimarosa (Born 1749).
GAVOTTA	INTERLUDE AFTER 1ST SCENE, ACT I.	Padre Martini (1706-1784).
(a) MUSETTE	INTERLUDE AFTER 2ND SCENE.	M. P. de Montéclair (1666-1737).
(b) MENUET		Handel (1685-1759).
THE TRIUMPHING DANCE from "Dido and Aeneas"	ENTR'ACT AFTER ACT I.	H. Purcell (1658-1695).
GAVOTTE AND GIGUE from the Suite in D		J. S. Bach (1685-1750).
GAVOTTE from "Iphigenie in Aulis"	INTERLUDE AFTER 1ST SCENE, ACT II.	Ch. W. Gluck (1714-1787).
OLD ENGLISH AIRS	INTERLUDE AFTER 2ND SCENE.	Traditional 17th and 18th Century.
CONCERTO GROSSO No. 7 (1st Movement)	ENTR'ACT AFTER ACT II.	Handel
SUITE: AIRS DE BALLET	ENTR'ACT AFTER ACT III. "Platée"	J. Ph. Rameau (1683-1764)
AIR DE BALLET from "Le Devin du Village"	INTERLUDE AFTER 1ST SCENE, ACT IV.	J. J. Rousseau (1712-1778).

First Matinee Saturday, April 10th, and every following Wednesday and Saturday.
Special Matinee, Easter Monday, April 12th.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.
Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

STAGE MANAGER—MR. CECIL KING. ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—MR. STANLEY BELL.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—MR. ADOLF SCHMID.
GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - MR. HENRY DANA.

1909
Waters, J.

8°02

THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL.

NOTE BY THE PRODUCER.

LET me first acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. Percy Macquoid, R.I., whose sympathetic help in the archæological aspect of the play has been invaluable. My thanks are due also to Mr. Walter Sichel, who by the courtesy of the Sheridan family and many others, has had access to every available document in the composition of his forthcoming work on Sheridan.

Few will dispute that "The School for Scandal" is the most brilliant Comedy that has been given to the world. It was begun by Sheridan some years before its first production in 1777, and was then still the work of a young man. He was not yet twenty-six, although already the author of "The Rivals," "The Duenna," and "A Trip to Scarborough." As a dramatist he had achieved a feat no less remarkable than Pitt as a politician, who was Prime Minister at the age of twenty-four. Although young, Sheridan had not written his masterpiece hurriedly. The smoothness and polish of the dialogue and the precision of the style were the result of laborious and careful work. His natural wit was great, but he told Ridgway, to whom in later years he sold the copyright of "The School for Scandal," that he had been nineteen years endeavouring to satisfy himself with the style of the play and had not yet succeeded.

It has been said by his detractors that Sheridan owed much to his predecessors who wrote for the stage, but to be accused of plagiarism is the sufferance of the original. It is the peculiar attribute of literary genius to borrow and make its own the wares of its inferiors. "Je prends mon bien ou je le trouve."

Sheridan had, like most great dramatists, lived in the atmosphere of the theatre—he was the son of an actor and himself the manager of Drury Lane Theatre.

In these days of censorship and criticism, it is interesting to learn that a license was refused for the play before its first performance. Sheridan described the incident himself to the House of Commons many years later. To quote Brander Matthews in his introduction to the play: "It happened at this time there was the famous city contest for the office of Chamberlain between Wilkes and Hopkins. The latter had been charged with some practices similar to those of Moses the Jew, in lending money to young men under age, and it was supposed that the character of the play was levelled at him in order to injure him in his contest, in which he was supported by the ministerial interest. In the warmth of a contested election, the piece was represented as a factious and seditious opposition to a Court Candidate He, however, went to Lord Hertford, then Lord Chamberlain, who laughed at the affair and gave the license."

The Comedy was on its production an immediate success. Reynolds, the dramatist who passed the theatre during the performance, gives outside evidence of the enthusiasm: "I heard such a tremendous noise over my head, that, fearing the theatre was proceeding to fall about it, I ran for my life; but found the next morning that the noise did not arise from the falling of the house, but from the falling of the screen in the fourth act, so violent and tumultuous were the applause and laughter."

William Hazlitt writes of Sheridan "His comic muse does not go about prying into obscure corners or collecting idle curiosities, but showing her laughing face, she points to her rich treasure, the follies of mankind. She is garlanded and crowned with roses and vine leaves. Her eyes glow with delight and her heart runs over with good natured malice. Her step is firm and light and her ornaments consummate."

In the present production of the comedy it is played almost in its entirety. It is hoped that it is justifiable to represent Sir Peter as a younger man than he has been usually made, for Sheridan states that he is about 50 years of age, and the conclusion of the play is robbed of half its meaning if Lady Teazle has to return to her home with a dotard.

That Lady Teazle should be played by an actress with complete youth on her side, seems to me to be indicated throughout the play. We pardon the child who aspires to be a woman of fashion, and who appears to be heartless from the inexperience of youth rather than from real want of feeling.

Charles Lamb, in his well-known recollections of the play and the acting, claimed that "The School for Scandal" is "a purely artificial comedy," and his elaboration of this idea is masterly in its charm. It seems to me that the "gentle Elia" lacks only a due appreciation of the essence and the drift of Sheridan's work. If, indeed, the author did intend that his characters should not appeal to the sympathies, he reckoned without his guests—the audience. "The School for Scandal" is essentially a human document; in watching this play we needs must yield to its inherent passion. Although it may be true that the genius of Sheridan was greater in the direction of wit than of humour—and the greater of these is humour—the abiding sway of "The School for Scandal" is surely due to the heart interest with which it is informed. It is this very humour of the heart despised by pedants, which has preserved and will preserve this masterpiece. Ephemeral intellect, grimacing at sentiment, owns but its little day. Humanity abides: cynicism is the humour of hate.

7th April, 1909. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

SHERIDAN in his first sketch for the School for Scandal infers that Sir Peter marries Lady Teazle in 1765. This period has therefore been chosen for the mounting of the present production, as being novel and very representative of the last phases of early Georgian decoration and costume. In the men's coats of this transitionary time, the skirted folds still remain emphasized, the cuffs are placed tighter to the sleeves and flowered brocades are still in fashion, but the waistcoats have become shorter. The hoop that had distended the skirts of fashionable ladies since the beginning of the century, gave way about 1760 to panniers gathered at the hips over a more moderate petticoat generally trimmed with a flounce, the long waisted cut of the bodice and short sleeves remaining the same as in former years. The men's wigs were worn neat and small, while those of the ladies began to increase in size until 1785, when their proportions became preposterous. Powdered hair lasted as a fashion from 1730 to 1790, about the latter date it fell into disuse, except at Court. At the same time the taste for it must have died hard, as a tax on hair powder was levied in 1796, which in that year brought in £200,000 to the Revenue. Patches and painting were the necessary accompaniments of this style of dressed powdered hair, and at no period of our civilized society were women so be-plastered with paint and powder as during the middle part of the 18th century. Many deaths amongst fashionable ladies were reported to have occurred through the excessive use of pernicious cosmetics.

At the period depicted in the present production the strong blues, greens and reds of former years, had given way to secondary and more delicate shades of colour—the patterns on the brocades used in the sacques being small, the stripe or tabouret being introduced in the design—morning dresses as well as those for the evening were open at the neck, hats were not considered necessary, small caps or silk hoods being used with walking dress. A fashionable person like Lady Teazle would have had a negro boy to carry her hood and parasol.

The decoration of Lady Sneerwell's rooms represents that period of transition immediately preceding the taste introduced by Robert Adam. Her dressing-rooms imitates the style of the decoration in Chesterfield House, her reception rooms being furnished in the French taste with Rose du Barri tapestry set in lambris of carved and gilt walnut, a style adopted here by the ultra-fashionables who took every opportunity of imitating the manners and tastes of that country. The rooms in Sir Peter Teazle's house are of an earlier date, and are founded on the decorations of Lauderdale House, once occupied by Nell Gwynne, and now destroyed. The furniture here is principally of the latter style of Chippendale.

PERCY MACQUOID.

1909
Waters, J.

6

"COME INSIDE."

REVUE, in 3 Scenes,

By GEORGE GROSSMITH, Junr.

Lyrics by C. H. BOVILL.

Music Composed and Arranged by CUTHBERT CLARKE.

Scenery by R. McCLEERY.

The Costumes supervised by C. WILHELM, and executed by Miss HASTINGS and MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.

STANLEY BRETT
AS
The Matinee Idol—A Cabinet Minister—A Financier.

ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
AS
Mr. Pelfridge—A President—A Ringmaster—Wilkie.

SAM COLLINS
AS Carrie Carnation—Consul XIV.—Sousa—The British Lion.

LULU VALLI
AS Violet—The Tatler—Cristobel.

WINIFRED O'CONNOR
AS
Carrie Re-incarnated.

COLLETTE DORIGNY
AS
Mdlle. Mauchoir, Pasta Mack, Le Chapeau.

Mlle. LYDIA KYASHT
In an Entirely New and Original Dance.

Scene 1.—The Beauty Parlour at Pelfridge's.

Scene 2.—The Back of a Weekly.

Scene 3.—The Universal Arena.

The production under the supervision of the Author and FRED FARREN.

EMPIRE

100

Row E

No. 1

STALLS, 7/6

Saturday, April 10th 1909

This portion does not admit to the Theatre

TERRY'S THEATRE

Sole Proprietor - - - - - - - - - - - - - - MR. EDWARD TERRY.

Under the Management of A. F. HENDERSON and REGINALD WALTER.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10th, and EVERY EVENING at 9 o'clock,

ARTFUL MISS DEARING

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,

BY ARTHUR LAW.

The Hon. Alaric Dawley	Mr. PAUL ARTHUR
Palgrave Dawley	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
Judson Blew	Mr. ARTHUR LONGLEY
Servant	Mr. ALLINGTON
McBittock (Landlord of the "Blossop Arms")	Mr. GEORGE INGLETON
Lady Gertrude Dawley	Miss GRANVILLE
Lady Bun	Miss KATE PHILLIPS
Arabella Dawley	Miss PHYLLIS EMBURY
Kate ... ... (a Waitress)	Miss E. MAYNE
Patience Dearing	Miss ANNIE HUGHES

ACT I. Scene - Morning Room in the Dawleys' London House

ACT II. Scene - The Hall at the Dawleys' (The Same Evening)

ACT III. Scene - The Coffee Room in the "Blossop Arms" (The Following Day)

Produced by E. DAGNALL.

Miss Kate Phillips' and Miss Embury's Dresses by THE ELITE LADIES' DRESS COMPANY, St Victoria Street, S.W. Miss Hughes' Dresses by JAY'S, Ltd. Millinery by MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

Preceded by at 2.30 and 8.30,

THE WILLOW PATTERN PLATE

A Chinese Musical Romance.

Written and Composed by Miss EUGÉNIE MAGNUS.

Tsai Yong	... (a Young Fisherman) ...	Mr. CRAUFURD KENT
Kao-ton-ki	... (a Wealthy Mandarin) ...	Mr. JOHN CLULOW
Nieu-chi	(the Mandarin's Daughter)	Miss NANCY ROSSITER

Scene - The Willow Pattern Plate.

Programme of Music

Overture	"Rosamunde"	Schubert
Dance	"Love Thoughts"	Murray Lucas
Selection	"Les Contes D'Hoffmann"	Offenbach
Entr'acte	"Spanish Dance"	Theo Hollam
Waltz	"Danse D'Amour"	Jacques Heer
Sketch	"Entr'acte Gladiators"	Faulk

MATINEES (OF BOTH PLAYS) EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager	Mr. Gerald Venning
Acting Manager ..	Mr. Cecil Breton
Musical Director .	Mr. Andrew Levey

Doors open at 8 Matinees at 2 Telephone, 2702 Gerrard

Box Office Open 10 to 10.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and stair cases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Miss Patience Dearing is governess in the family of Mr. nod Mrs. Dawley, two impecunious "smart" people who live partly by borrowing from a rich young man named Judson Blew, who is courting their daughter Arabella, aod partly by the large sums paid to Lady Dawley by a socially-ambitious parvenue, Lady Bun, the widow of an engineer, to whom Lady Dawley acts as sponsor in Society. The author's boldness and originality are shown by the idea of substitution, for a period of penal servitude, of a certain Mr. Johnson, an adventurer, for the Hon. Alaric Dawley, a relative of the Dawleys and the heir to a peerage, who has committed forgery and pays Johnson a thousands pounds to take his (Dawley's) place in prison. Dawley, however, by a second forgery, draws out the £1,000 and then disappears; and Johnson, who has an extraordinary resemblaoce to the Hon. Alaric, presents himself at the Dawleys' house in London as the ex-convict. The Dawleys are anxious to secure him for Arabella, and eocourage his attentions. Miss Dearing at onco sees through the deception, and makes Johnson confess to the triek. The Hon. Alaric's father is in Africa; should he die, the yonog forger will inherit the peerage. An alliaoce is struck ap between Johnson aod the governess under the title of "Dearing and Co." as the first act ends.

In the second Lady Bun, who has made a fiasco by reciting at a smart gathering a very risqué poem from the repertory of Yvette Guilbert, is consoled by Miss Dearing with the tidings that the Hon. Alaric Dawley wants to marry her, for Miss Dearing has resolved that he shall secure the widow's money. A letter arrives from a British Consul abroad with the news that Alaric's father has been eaten by cannibals, and Johnson consequently in his assumed character becomes a peer. A great surprise is reserved for the last act, which takes place in the coffee-room of a country inn kept by a Scotchman named McBittock, who has been mysteriously allowed by the landlord, the recently-deceased Dawley, to live there rent free. It seems that Lady Bun was married informally in Scotland to the late Lord Dawley, who subsequently deserted her. Believing herself free to remarry, she wedded the engineer, but not before having a son, the Johnson of the play. The artful Miss Dearing discovers that McBittock and his wife were witnesses of the Scotch contract, which, therefore, holds good in law; so that the forger, the son of Dawley's second marriage, is technically illegitimate, Johnson being the heir. When he finds that Lady Bun is his mother, he, of course, gives up the idea of marrying her, and follows the dictates of his heart in placing it at the feet of the artful Miss Dearing. Arabella is thus left free to accept Judson Blew.

preceded by a very pretty little Chinese musical romance, written and composed by Miss Engénie Magnus, entitled

"THE WILLOW PATTERN PLATE."

Tsal Yong .....Mr. Craufurd Kent
Kao-ton-ki .....Mr. John Clulow
Nieu-chi .....Miss Nancy Rossiter

This not too clearly developed trifle deals with the love of a young Chinese fisherman named Tsal Yong for Nieu-chi, the daughter of the mandarin Kao-ton-ki. The latter intends his daughter to marry a wealthy prince, and is determined to put the lovers to death. Their souls are turned into the turtle-doves which adorn the sky of the well-known plate pattern. Mr. Craufurd Kent was a handsome and spirited Tsal Yong, and his song, "I love a lady fair," was warmly applauded; Mr. John Clulow gave a capital performance as Kao-ton-ki, and rendered his ditty, "A mighty mandarin am I," in excellent style; and Miss Nancy Rossiter won all hearts by her delightful acting and sweet singing as Nieu-chi. The music was very agreeable, and the little piece gave evident satisfactioo.

1909
Waters, J.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE COURT.

On Monday, April 12, Revival of Shakespeare's Comedy,

"AS YOU LIKE IT."

The Duke	Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Duke Frederick	Mr. J. Cassels Cobs
Jaques	Mr. Will Dennis
Amiens	Mr. J. Cookson
First Lord	Mr. W. Edwyn Holloway
Oliver	Mr. Herbert Bunston
Jaques de Boys	Mr. Clifford Lomer
Orlando	Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Le Beau	Mr. Wilfred Fletcher
Touchstone	Mr. William Haviland
Adam	Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Charles	Mr. Douglas Homer
Corin	Mr. Russell Thorndike
Sylvius	Mr. Duncan Yarrow
William	Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Rosalind	Miss Fay Davis
Celia	Miss Viola Holland
Phœbe	Miss Dorothy Bell
Audrey	Miss Esme Hubbard

Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH'S SEASON.

(By arrangement with Miss EVELYN MILLARD.)

On Tuesday, April 13th, and every evening at 8.30.

An Original Farce in Three Acts, entitled:

Mr. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS,

By R. C. CARTON.

Joanna, Countess of Rushmere		Miss COMPTON
Earl of Rushmere	(her Nephew by Marriage)	Mr. G. DAVY BURNABY
Hon. Robert Jennerway	(her Second Husband)	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Lord Kinslow (his Father)		Mr. GEORGE E. BELLAMY
John Bounsall	Partners in the Bounsall Emporium	Mr. FRED LEWIS
Hamilton Preedy		Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Mr. Sidgrave	(a Retired Solicitor)	Mr. LYTTON GREY
Reginald Saunders	(a Dental Surgeon)	Mr. WALTER PEARCE
Bilson	(Preedy's Man Servant)	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPÉ
Chauffeur		Mr. CLAUDE EDMONDS
Mrs. Sidgrave		Miss LYDIA RACHEL
Emma Sidgrave		Miss SHELLEY CALTON
Harriet Budgen		Miss DORA BARTON

Scene .. Living Room of Hamilton Preedy's Flat in South Kensington. (Walter Hann.)

ACT 1 .. Monday Evening. ACT 2 .. Tuesday Morning ACT 3 .. Tuesday Evening

The Ladies' Dresses by Messrs. Stagg & Mantle. The Pictures kindly lent by the Mitchmore Art Co., 61 Russell St., W.C. Furniture by J. S. Lyon.

Miss Compton's Dresses by Madame Sollitt. Hats by Madame Elliott, of Hanover Square. Other Dresses by Stagg & Mantle

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Programme of Music.

I.	Fanta-ia	Oscar Strauss
II	(a) Die Maus	Paul Lincke
	(b) Selection from "Les Mousquetaires au Couvent"	Varney
III	(a) "Petite Marche"	A. Varcus
	(b) Valse from "The Dollar Princess"	Leo Fall

"The Waltz Dream"

Stage Manager .. .. Mr. Frank Harding
Assistant Stage Manager .. .. .. For Mr. Weedon Grossmith Mr. Claude Edmonds
Musical Director .. .. Mr. Alec Maclean

Box Office (Mr. Hollingshead) open from 10 to 10. Telephone: 3,844 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION. Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £3 3s.: Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.: Family Circle, 5s. and 4s.: Pit, 2s. 6d.

Business Manager .. .. .. (For Mr. Weedon Grossmith) .. Mr. RICHARD T. MAYNARD

Acting Manager .. .. .. (For Miss Evelyn Millard) .. .. Mr. WALTER MAXWELL

1909
Waters, J.

6

"COME INSIDE."

REVUE, in 3 Scenes,

By GEORGE GROSSMITH, Junr.

Lyrics by C. H. BOVILL.

Music Composed and Arranged by CUTHBERT CLARKE.

Scenery by R. McCLEERY.

The Costumes supervised by C. WILHELM, and executed by Miss HASTINGS and MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.

STANLEY BRETT
AS
The Matinee Idol.—A Cabinet Minister.
A Financier.

ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
AS
Mr. Pelfridge—A President.
A Ringmaster.—Wilkie.

SAM COLLINS
AS Carrie Carnation.—Consul XIV.—
Sousa—The British Lion.

LULU VALLI
AS Violet.—The Tatler.
Cristabel.

WINIFRED O'CONNOR
AS
Carrie Re-incarnated.

COLLETTE DORIGNY
AS Mdlle. Mouchoir, Pasta Mack,
Le Chapeau.

Mlle. LYDIA KYASHT
In an Entirely New and Original Dance.

Scene 1.—The Beauty Parlour at Pelfridge's.

Scene 2.—The Back of a Weekly.

Scene 3.—The Universal Arena.

The production under the supervision of the Author and FRED FARREN.

EMPIRE

100

Row E

No. 1

STALLS, 7/6

Saturday, April 10th
1909

This portion does not admit to the Theatre

TERRY'S THEATRE

Sole Proprietor - - - - - - - - - - - - - MR. EDWARD TERRY.

Under the Management of A. F. HENDERSON and REGINALD WALTER.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10th, and EVERY EVENING at 9 o'clock,

ARTFUL MISS DEARING

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,

BY ARTHUR LAW.

The Hon. Alaric Dawley	... ...	Mr. PAUL ARTHUR
Palgrave Dawley	... ...	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
Judson Blew ...	... ...	Mr. ARTHUR LONGLEY
Servant	... ...	Mr. ALLINGTON
McBittock	(Landlord of the "Blossop Arms")	Mr. GEORGE INGLETON
Lady Gertrude Dawley	... ...	Miss GRANVILLE
Lady Bun ...	... ...	Miss KATE PHILLIPS
Arabella Dawley	... ...	Miss PHYLLIS EMBURY
Kate	... (a Waitress) ...	Miss E. MAYNE
Patience Dearing	... ...	Miss ANNIE HUGHES

ACT I. Scene - Morning Room in the Dawleys' London House

ACT II. Scene - The Hall at the Dawleys' (The Same Evening)

ACT III. Scene - The Coffee Room in the "Blossop Arms" (The Following Day)

Produced by E. DAGNALL.

Miss Kate Phillips' and Miss Embury's Dresses by THE ELITE LADIES' DRESS COMPANY, 82 Victoria Street, S.W. Miss Hughes' Dresses by JAY'S, Ltd. Millinery by MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.

1909
Waters, J.

Preceded by at 2.30 and 8.30,

THE WILLOW PATTERN PLATE

A CHINESE MUSICAL ROMANCE.

Written and Composed by Miss EUGENIE MAGNUS.

Tsai Yong	... a Young Fisherman ...	Mr. CRAUFURD KENT
Kao-ton-ki	a Wealthy Mandarin ...	Mr JOHN CLULOW
Nieu-chi	the Mandarin's Daughter	Miss NANCY ROSSITER

Scene - The Willow Pattern Plate.

Programme of Music . .

Schubert
Alcock Lucas
Offenbach
Theo Holtum
Jacques Heros
Lack

MATINEES (OF BOTH PLAYS) EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager	Mr. GERALD VENNING
Acting Manager	Mr CECIL BRETON
Musical Director	Mr. ANDREW LEVEY

Doors open at 8 Matinees at 2 Telephone, 2702 Gerrard

Box Office Open 10 to 10.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Miss Patience Dearing is governess in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Dawley, two impecunious "smart" people who live partly by borrowing from a rich young man named Judson Blew, who is courting their daughter Arabella, and partly by the large sums paid to Lady Dawley by a socially-ambitious parvenue, Lady Bun, the widow of an engineer, to whom Lady Dawley acts as sponsor in Society. The author's boldness and originality are shown by the idea of substitution, for a period of penal servitude, of a certain Mr. Johnson, an adventurer, for the Hon. Alaric Dawley, a relative of the Dawleys and the heir to a peerage, who has committed forgery and pays Johnson a thousands pounds to take his (Dawley's) place in prison. Dawley, however, by a second forgery, draws out the £1,000 and then disappears; and Johnson, who has an extraordinary resemblance to the Hon. Alaric, presents himself at the Dawleys' house in London as the ex-convict. The Dawleys are anxious to secure him for Arabella, and encourage his attentions. Miss Dearing at once sees through the deception, and makes Johnson confess to the trick. The Hon. Alaric's father is in Africa; should he die, the young forger will inherit the peerage. An alliance is struck up between Johnson and the governess under the title of "Dearing and Co." as the first act ends.

In the second Lady Bun, who has made a fiasco by reciting at a smart gathering a very risqué poem from the repertory of Yvette Guilbert, is consoled by Miss Dearing with the tidings that the Hon. Alaric Dawley wants to marry her, for Miss Dearing has resolved that he shall secure the widow's money. A letter arrives from a British Consul abroad with the news that Alaric's father has been eaten by cannibals, and Johnson consequently in his assumed character becomes a peer. A great surprise is reserved for the last act, which takes place in the coffee-room of a country inn kept by a Scotchman named McBittock, who has been mysteriously allowed by the landlord, the recently-deceased Dawley, to live there rent free. It seems that Lady Bun was married informally in Scotland to the late Lord Dawley, who subsequently deserted her. Believing herself free to remarry, she wedded the engineer, but not before having a son, the Johnson of the play. The artful Miss Dearing discovers that McBittock and his wife were witnesses of the Scotch contract, which, therefore, holds good in law; so that the forger, the son of Dawley's second marriage, is technically illegitimate, Johnson being the heir. When he finds that Lady Bun is his mother, he, of course, gives up the idea of marrying her, and follows the dictates of his heart in placing it at the feet of the artful Miss Dearing. Arabella is thus left free to accept Judson Blew.

preceded by a very pretty little Chinese musical romance, written and composed by Miss Eugénie Magnus, entitled

"THE WILLOW PATTERN PLATE."

Tsai Yong .....Mr. Craufurd Kent
Kao-ton-ki .....Ma. John Clulow
Nieu-chi .....Miss Nancy Rossiter

This not too clearly developed trifle deals with the love of a young Chinese fisherman named Tsai Yong for Nieu-chi, the daughter of the mandarin Kao-ton-ki. The latter intends his daughter to marry a wealthy prince, and is determined to put the lovers to death. Their souls are turned into the turtle-doves which adorn the sky of the well-known plate pattern. Mr. Craufurd Kent was a handsome and spirited Tsai Yong, and his song, "I love a lady fair," was warmly applauded; Mr. John Clulow gave a capital performance as Kao-ton-ki, and rendered his ditty, "A mighty mandarin am I," in excellent style; and Miss Nancy Rossiter won all hearts by her delightful acting and sweet singing as Nieu-chi. The music was very agreeable, and the little piece gave evident satisfaction.

1909
Waters, J.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE COURT.

On Monday, April 12, Revival of Shakespeare's Comedy,

"AS YOU LIKE IT."

The Duke	Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Duke Frederick	Mr. J. Cassels Cobb
Jaques	Mr. Will Dennis
Amiens	Mr. J. Cookson
First Lord	Mr. W. Edwyn Holloway
Oliver	Mr. Herbert Bunston
Jaques de Boys	Mr. Clifford Lomer
Orlando	Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Le Beau	Mr. Wilfred Fletcher
Touchstone	Mr. William Haviland
Adam	Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Charles	Mr. Douglas Homer
Corin	Mr. Russell Thornoike
Sylvius	Mr. Duncan Yarrow
William	Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Rosalind	Miss Fay Davis
Celia	Miss Viola Holland
Phœbe	Miss Dorothy Bell
Audrey	Miss Esme Hubbard

Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH'S SEASON.

(By arrangement with Miss EVELYN MILLARD.)

On Tuesday, April 13th, and every evening at 8.30.

An Original Farce in Three Acts, entitled:

Mr. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS,

By R. C. CARTON.

Joanna, Countess of Rushmere	.. ..	.. .. Miss COMPTON
Earl of Rushmere	(her Nephew by Marriage)	.. Mr. G. DAVY BURNABY
Hon. Robert Jennerway ..	.. (her Second Husband)	.. Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Lord Kinslow (his Father) ..	.. ..	Mr. GEORGE E. BELLAMY
John Bounsall	Partners in the Bounsall Emporium	.. Mr. FRED LEWIS
Hamilton Preedy		Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Mr. Sidgrave	(a Retired Solicitor)	.. Mr. LYTTON GREY
Reginald Saunders	.. (a Dental Surgeon)	.. Mr. WALTER PEARCE
Bilson	(Preedy's Man Servant)	.. Mr. FREDERICK VOLPÉ
Chauffeur	.. ..	.. Mr. CLAUDE EDMONDS
Mrs. Sidgrave	.. ..	.. Miss LYDIA RACHEL
Emma Sidgrave	.. ..	.. Miss SHELLEY CALTON
Harriet Budgen	.. ..	.. Miss DORA BARTON

Scene .. Living Room of Hamilton Preedy's Flat in South Kensington. (Walter Hann.)

ACT 1 .. Monday Evening. ACT 2 .. Tuesday Morning ACT 3 .. Tuesday Evening

The Ladies' Dresses by Messrs. Stagg & Mantle. The Pictures kindly lent by the Mechmore Art Co., 61 Russell St., W.C.
Furniture by J. S. Lyon.
Miss Compton's Dresses by Madame Sollitt. Hats by Madame Elbort, of Hanover Square. Other Dresses by Stagg & Mantle.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Programme of Music.

I.	Fanta-ia	.. "The Waltz Dream"	Oscar Strauss
II.	(a) Die Maus	.. ..	Paul Lincke
	(b) Selection from "Les Mousquetaires au Couvent" ..	.. ..	Varney
III.	(a) "Petite Marche"	.. ..	A. Vireus
	(b) Valse from "The Dollar Princess" ..	.. ..	Leo Fall
	Stage Manager	For Mr. Weedon Grossmith	Mr. Frank Harding
	Assistant Stage Manager	For Mr. Weedon Grossmith	Mr. Claude Edmonds
	Musical Director	.. ..	Mr. Alec Maclean

Box Office (Mr. Hollingshead) open from 10 to 10. Telephone: 3,844 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION. Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £3 3s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Family Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.

Business Manager	(For Mr. Weedon Grossmith)	Mr. RICHARD T. MAYNARD
Acting Manager	(For Miss Evelyn Millard)	Mr. WALTER MAXWELL

1909
Waters, J.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE COURT.

On Monday, April 12, Revival of Shakespeare's Comedy,

"AS YOU LIKE IT."

The Duke	Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Duke Frederick	Mr. J. Cassels Cobb
Jaques	Mr. Will Dennis
Amiens	Mr. J. Cookson
First Lord	Mr. W. Edwyn Holloway
Oliver	Mr. Herbert Bunston
Jaques de Boys	Mr. Clifford Lomer
Orlando	Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Le Beau	Mr. Wilfred Fletcher
Touchstone	Mr. William Haviland
Adam	Mr. Stanley Latbury
Charles	Mr. Douglas Homer
Corin	Mr. Russell Thornike
Sylvius	Mr. Duncan Yarrow
William	Mr. Stanley Latbury
Rosalind	Miss Fay Davis
Celia	Miss Viola Holland
Phœbe	Miss Dorothy Bell
Audrey	Miss Esme Hubbard

Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH'S SEASON.

(By arrangement with Miss EVELYN MILLARD.)

On Tuesday, April 13th, and every evening at 8.30,

An Original Farce in Three Acts, entitled:

Mr. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS,

By R. C. CARTON.

Joanna, Countess of Rushmere		Miss COMPTON
Earl of Rushmere	(her Nephew by Marriage)	Mr. G. DAVY BURNABY
Hon. Robert Jennerway	(her Second Husband)	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Lord Kinslow (his Father)		Mr. GEORGE E. BELLAMY
John Bounsall	Partners in the Bounsall Emporium	Mr. FRED LEWIS
Hamilton Preedy	Partners in the Bounsall Emporium	Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Mr. Sidgrave	(a Retired Solicitor)	Mr. LYTTON GREY
Reginald Saunders	(a Dental Surgeon)	Mr. WALTER PEARCE
Bilson	(Preedy's Man Servant)	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPÉ
Chauffeur		Mr. CLAUDE EDMONDS
Mrs. Sidgrave		Miss LYDIA RACHEL
Emma Sidgrave		Miss SHELLEY CALTON
Harriet Budgen		Miss DORA BARTON

Scene .. Living Room of Hamilton Preedy's Flat in South Kensington. (Walter Hann.)

ACT 1 .. Monday Evening. ACT 2 .. Tuesday Morning ACT 3 .. Tuesday Evening

The Ladies' Dresses by Messrs. Stagg & Mantle. The Pictures kindly lent by the Mechmore Art Co., Gt. Russell St., W.C.
Furniture by J. S. Lyon.
Miss Compton's Dresses by Madame Sollitt. Hats by Madame Ridout, of Hanover Square. Other Dresses by Stagg & Mantle.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Programme of Music.

I.	Fantasia .. "The Waltz Dream"	Oscar Strauss
II.	(a) Die Maus	Paul Lincke
	(b) Selection from "Les Mousquetaires au Couvent"	Varney
III.	(a) "Petite Marche"	A. Varens
	(b) Valse from "The Dollar Princess"	Leo Fall

Stage Manager .. For Mr. Weedon Grossmith .. Mr. Frank Harding
Assistant Stage Manager .. For Mr. Weedon Grossmith .. Mr. Claude Edmonds
Musical Director .. Mr. Alec Maclean

Box Office (Mr. Hollingshead) open from 10 to 10. Telephone: 3,844 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.— Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £3 3s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Family Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.

Business Manager .. (For Mr. Weedon Grossmith) .. Mr. RICHARD T. MAYNARD

Acting Manager .. (For Miss Evelyn Millard) .. Mr. WALTER MAXWELL

1909
Waters, J.

Mr. Preedy is the junior partner in the Bounsall Emporium, a large miscellaneous modern shop. He owes his position to the senior partner, Mr. John Bounsall, a fashionable sporting tradesman of the new school. Mr. Preedy lives in a flat at South Kensington, where he is waited on by a fat and impertinent valet named Bilson. At the commencement of the play, he proposes to Emma Sidgrave, the daughter of a retired solicitor from Birmingham, who accepts him, after confessing to a previous flirtation with a young dental surgeon called Reginald Saunders. Mr. Preedy's troubles begin when Mr. Bounsall calls at his flat, and tells him that he—Bounsall—is eloping with Joanna, Countess of Rushmere, whose husband, the Hon. Robert Jennerway, has run away to Egypt with a lady of easy virtue. Bounsall's plan is to convey the Countess to his aunt's house in the provinces, and leave her there till she can obtain a divorce. At this juncture Bounsall receives a telegram informing him that a wealthy relative in Norfolk is at the point of death, and wishes to be reconciled to Bounsall, and to make a will in his favour. So the senior partner leaves the Countess in the care of Preedy at the flat.

Preedy acts like a preux chevalier. He gives up his bedroom to the Countess, and goes out in the rain to sleep at an hotel, promising to engage a maid for her, and to ask a firm of smart milliners to send her in some hats. The trouble comes on the morning after, when the return of Preedy to his flat in evening dress and the presence of the Countess in his bedroom cause much surmise. Harriet Budgen, the lady's maid whom Preedy has ordered from the registry office, draws her own conclusions from the facts before her, and at once raises her terms; his cook leaves unexpectedly, and his manservant gives him a month's notice; his prospective father-in-law has to be put off the scent; and the young dental surgeon from Birmingham arrives on a kind of detective visit and refuses to go away. The climax of Preedy's difficulties is reached when the Countess's nephew by marriage, the Earl of Rushmere, and her father-in-law, Lord Kinslow, come to enquire her whereabouts. Preedy is hard pressed, but he keeps his promise to Bounsall, and stoutly declines to "give the show away." The storm rages until Preedy, driven to desperation, violently ejects the obstinate Saunders from the flat, and ends the act by taking the Countess out to lunch.

In the last division of the piece Bounsall returns, and confesses that, his rich relative having insisted, as one of the conditions of bequeathing his wealth to Bounsall, that the latter shall marry the moribund man's niece there and then, he—the senior partner—has thrown over the Countess and consented to the ceremony being performed. The Hon. Robert Jennerway returns repentant; the Countess dismisses Mr. Bounsall with a few deeply scornful sentences; and Mr. Preedy enjoys the credit due to his chivalrous conduct.

SEASON UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MISS LENA ASHWELL AND MR. OTHO STUART.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30
MATINEES, WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 3.

THE EARTH

BY JAMES BERNARD FAGAN.

Lady Susan Sturrage	Miss SARAH BROOKE
Hector Stronge	Mr. ERNEST YOUNG
Tupper	Mr. CECIL ROSE
Miss Janion	Miss FLORENCE HAYDON
The Countess of Killone	Miss LENA ASHWELL
The Earl of Killone	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Sir Felix Janion	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL
Michael Dickson	Mr. A. G. POULTON
Roger Morrish	Mr. C. M. HALLARD
The Rt. Hon. Denzil Trevena, M.P.	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
James Bent	Mr. REGINALD EYRE
Parker	Mr. RODERICK MacLEOD
Robinson	Mr. ARTHUR PHILLIPS
Rev. Malcolm Mackenzie	Mr. W. LEMMON WARDE

The Names of the Characters are given in the order of their appearance on the Stage.

Dresses by JAY'S, LTD. Furniture supplied by SPILLMAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Musical Director	Mr. STANLEY HAWLEY.
Stage Manager	Mr. HERBERT CHOWN.

ACT I.	The Garden, Arrowleigh Court. Whit Sunday Morning). (Harker).
ACT II.	The Library, Arrowleigh Court. (Afternoon). (Hann).
ACT III.	Trevena's Study, Queen Ann's Gate. (Thursday Night). (Hann).
ACT IV.	The Chief's Office, Janion Buildings, E.C. (Friday Morning). (Harker).

TIME—TO-MORROW.

PRECEDED EACH EVENING AT 8.15 BY
MR. GEORGE CARNE ROSS.
IN SELECTIONS FROM HIS REPERTOIRE.

"THE EARTH."

Play, in Four Acts, by James Bernard Fagan. Produced at the Kingsway Theatre on Wednesday, April 14.

1909
Waters, J.

Miss Lena Ashwell and Mr. Otho Stuart commenced their season at the Kingsway Theatre on Wednesday with a play by Mr. J. B. Fagan. There are always intellect and interest in any drama presented at the Kingsway, and The Earth is no exception to the rule. It is an energetic protest against the modern system of the ownership of numerous newspapers by one proprietor—a "journalistic Trust," as one of the characters describes it. Mr. Fagan, for the purposes of his play, rather exaggerates the power of the daily Press and of the pluralist proprietor. But he makes effective use of what we may call the "Parnell motive," already employed in The Bauble Shop and Waste. The Earth is a deeply interesting, strongly serious, and entirely "up-to-date" and vitally important piece, dealing with a social problem in earnest and masterly style.

The Earth is avowedly a "play with a purpose," a dramatic satire, and a "showing up" of alleged abuses. The author of The Prayer of the Sword is very bitter indeed against the alleged tyranny of the newspaper Trust; but we think he takes the matter far too seriously. The modern Press is remarkably free from canards and scandalous gossip. Its personalities are usually harmless; and, in its endeavour to report faithfully every occurrence of interest, it always respects the rules of decency. The publicity which it gives to criminal trials and divorce cases undoubtedly adds a terror to vice and crime; and, though some of the developments of the new journalism may be silly and childish, they are correspondingly harmless. No daily newspaper could exist without consulting the taste of the English public, which, though sometimes hysterical, is never morbid or prurient; and the idea of a proprietor of numerous newspapers having any extensive influence for or against an important political measure is absurd. People, nowadays, form their opinions for themselves, and do not take them stereotyped from any newspaper, and the loyalty of readers to any particular sheet is not as fixed and unalterable as it once was. The daily journal is becoming more and more what it was originally, a vehicle for the publication of news and advertisements, and fulfils its function in a business-like and satisfactory way. Mr. Fagan's satire is really too severe, and is much too heavy for his subject.

The "combat" of the drama is between Sir Felix Janion, a rich newspaper proprietor, and the Rt. Hon. Denzil Trevena, a philanthropic M.P., whose Wages Bill, which has for its principal object the prevention of "sweating," is about to be presented to the House of Commons. Janion is strongly opposed to the Bill, which, he says, will cause a "commercial chaos," and is using all his influence to get the Government to "drop" it. Unfortunately, Trevena is carrying on an intrigue with the wife of an inebriate and impecunious Irish nobleman, the Earl of Killone; and Janion, through a French window leading to his lawn, sees them embracing. He immediately orders his henchman, Michael Dickson, to have the guilty pair watched; and the result is that Janion turns up at Trevena's chambers in Queen Anne's Gate, armed with complete evidence of the adultery of the parties. "Unless you promise me that you will abandon the Bill," he says to Trevena, "I shall go at once to Lord Killone and give him this information. He will immediately institute proceedings for a divorce, and your career will be at an end." Trevena is willing to risk political extinction, but he shrinks from the shame which will fall on Lady Killone, and promises to withdraw the Bill.

The last act takes place in Janion's offices in the E.C. district. Here the author indulges in some humorous exposures of the methods of the "new" journalism, a story which is found to be too risqué for a religious journal owned by Janion being transferred to another publication called Happy Homes. Janion has already announced in his paper the withdrawal of the Wages Bill, and is exulting in his success when Lady Killone calls, and, in a passionate scene, endeavours to soften his heart. Janion is proof against her entreaties, and when Trevena arrives he holds him to his bargain. Lady Killone protests earnestly against the sacrifice of the Bill to her interests, and finally, as a last stroke, says that unless Janion will withdraw the announcement of the abandonment of the Bill, and unless Trevena promises to continue his advocacy of it, she will make her sin and Janion's mean action in the matter public. Janion cannot face the risk of exposure, and gives in; and the Wages Bill is gone on with after all.

On Saturday, April 17th, and Every Evening at 8.15,

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' and Mr. ROBERT COURTNEIDGE'S

PRODUCTION OF

THE DEVIL

A Play in Three Acts,

From the Hungarian of FRANCIS MOLNÁR.

By HENRY HAMILTON.

"O limèd Soul, that struggling to be free,
Art more engaged!"

Gustave Vaillant	(a Financier)		Mr. BASSETT ROE
Maurice Dufaure	(an Artist)		Mr. VINCENT CLIVE (By kind permission of Mr. Arthur Collins)
Baron Tourbinet	Friends of Vaillant		Mr. J. S. BLYTHE
Anatole de Crillon			Mr. C. W. BLACKALL
Gaston Géricault			Mr. ARTHUR SOAMES
Baget	(Maurice's Servant)		Mr. J. B. GORDON
	AND
The Devil			Mr. LYN HARDING
Yvonne de Nerval			Miss GLADYS MASON
Mimi Vernon			Miss CONSTANCE HYEM
Madame du Chauffault	Guests of Vaillant		Mrs. RALEIGH
Mademoiselle d'Hyrvoix			Miss HELEN LEYTON
Madame Baron			Mrs. ROSE EDOUIN
	AND
Hélène Vaillant			Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE (By kind permission of Mr. Charles Frohman)

ADELPHI THEATRE

17/4/1909

Orch. Stall

No B 6

THIS PORTION TO BE RETAINED

1909
Waters, J.

Scene - - Paris.

Act I. .. .. Maurice's Studio.

Act II. .. .. .. Conservatory of Vaillant's House.

Act III. .. .. Maurice's Studio.

Scenery by Mr. GEO. E. DODSON.
Ladies' Costumes by Messrs. REDFERN, Ltd., 26 Conduit Street, W.
The Costumes worn by Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE by PAQUIN.
Cigarettes supplied by ABDULLA & Co., Ltd., 9 New Bond Street, W.
Furniture and Accessories supplied by Mr. FRED R. SCOFIELD, 1 Angell Park Gardens, Brixton.

The Play produced by Mr. HENRY HAMILTON.

Programme of Music.

1. PRELUDE ... ... Rachmaninoff
2. SELECTION ... ... "Mefistofele" ... ... Boito
3. SELECTION ... ... "La Part de Diable" ... ... Auber

Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. GEO. ENCYL LEWIS.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.15.

The Box Office (under the direction of Mr. A. P. Oxley) is open daily from 10 to 10

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £3 3s., £4 4s. & £5 5s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, First Four Rows, 7s. 6d.; Other Rows, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone 2643 Gerrard.

Doors Open Matinees at 1.45. Commence at 2.15. Evenings at 7.45. Commence at 8.15.

Business Manager - - - - - - - - - Mr. HERBERT RALLAND
Stage Manager - - - - - - - - - - Mr. J. B. GORDON

The Devil is a crude and rather unsavoury melodrama, based on an outworn superstition, and treated without poetry, imagination, or that plausibility which often conceals the illogical nature of an imaginary motive. It is, however, active, vivid, and energetic in action; and it is spiced with a profusion of smart and bitterly cynical epigrams. The story opens in the studio in Paris, of Maurice Dufaure, a young artist who is painting the portrait of Hélène Vaillant, the wife of a middle-aged Parisian financier. A polite stranger, well-dressed, and with an obsequious and engaging air, appears and introduces himself as M. Lenoir. It is the Devil, walking the earth in the disguise of a polished gentleman. Satan immediately proceeds to influence all around him for evil. He insinuates immoral ideas into the minds of Maurice and Hélène, and succeeds in ingratiating himself with the latter's husband, who invites him to a ball, which the Vaillants are giving on the same evening.

At this ball, in the second act, "Lenoir" plays the devil with the guests. He tempts a lady gambler to steal a sleepy young man's money, and persuades an ingénue to strike up a flirtation with a young roué. These, however, are merely incidental diversions of the Prince of Darkness. His chief interest is in the adventures of Maurice and Mme. Vaillant. In the conservatory, which is the scene of the second act, a curious incident is introduced. The Devil induces Maurice to believe that Mme. Vaillant has, to please him—the Devil—appeared at the ball with nothing on except her opera cloak. All this, of course, tends to accelerate the fall of Hélène, from whom the tempter extracts, while she is under his hypnotic influence, a letter to Maurice confessing her passion for him. Against such cunning power and such a persistent undermining of their principles, Maurice and Hélène cannot combat long. In the end they succumb to temptation. Hélène goes to the artist's studio to recover her letter, and ends by throwing herself into the artist's arms. M. Vaillant arrives, and is heard knocking furiously at the outer door, as the Devil, having attained his purpose, disappears amid flashes of lightning and peals of thunder.

CENSOR & 'THE DEVIL'

Mr. Redford's Remarkable Protest by Letter.

Mr. Redford, the Examiner of Plays, has sent the following telegram (says the "Daily Express") to the acting-manager of the Adelphi Theatre, at which "The Devil" was produced on Saturday last:—

Weston-super-Mare, 19 April.

Acting-Manager,
Adelphi Theatre, London.

Would appear from notices Saturday's performances you have disregarded conditions of licence—no indecency of dress, stage business, etc. Examiner can only form judgment on dialogue, with stage directions. You are entirely responsible for representation. Should recommend careful revision and modification in future performances. REDFORD.

The following reply was sent to Mr. Redford:—

There is certainly no indecency in either dress or stage business. Will be delighted if you can personally see performance or send representative.

A representative of the Lord Chamberlain's office was among the audience at the second performance last night.

1909
Waters, J.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE COURT.

On Monday Afternoon, April 19, Shakespeare's Tragedy,
"ROMEO AND JULIET."

Escalus	Mr. Herbert Bunston
Paris	Mr. Duncan Yarrow
Montague	Mr. Russell Thorndike
Capulet	Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Romeo	Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Mercutio	Mr. William Haviland
Benvolio	Mr. J. Cassels Cobb
Tybalt	Mr. W. Edwyn Holloway
Friar Laurence	Mr. Will Dennis
Friar John	Mr. A. Ramsay Macbeth
Balthasar	Miss Dorothy Bell
Gregory	Mr. Douglas Homer
Peter	Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Abram	Mr. George Owen
Apothecary	Mr. Russell Thorndike
Page to Paris	Mr. Clifford Lombe
A Servant	Mr. Wilfred Fletcher
Chorus	Miss Juliet Hardinge
Lady Montague	Miss Estelle W. Stead
Lady Capulet	Miss Gertrude Netterville
Juliet	Miss Fay Davis
Nurse to Juliet	Mr. E. H. Brooke

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

Sole Lessees and Managers ... ... A. & S. GATTI.

A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN'S Season

On MONDAY, APRIL 19th, 1909

And Every Evening at 8.30,

HENRY B. HARRIS presents

ROSE STAHL

In a Comedy in Four Acts, entitled

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES.

Characters.

NOTE—The Characters are arranged in the order in which they appear.

Mrs. O'Brien	ALICE LEIGH
Nora O'Brien	EVA DENNISON
Shrimp, The Duke } Stable Boys {	EDGAR PLEON
	HARRY PLEON, Junr.
Patrick O'Brien	GILES SHINE
Dick Crawford	FRANCIS BYRNE
Patricia O'Brien	ROSE STAHL
Dan Mallory	WILFRED LUCAS
Milly Sultzer, Inez Blair, Evelyn La Rue, Rita Nichols, Lou Archer, Mai Delaney } of the Chorus {	AMY LESSER
	CLAIRE LANE
	HELEN HILTON
	ANNE IVES
	MARGUERITE WHEELER
	MARGARET ROHE
Georgie Adams Coote (a Wardrobe Woman)	KENYON BISHOP
Sylvia Simpson (a Show Girl)	MADELINE TRAVERSE
Call Boy...	JAMES FORREST
A Laundryman	JOHN ADAMS
Rogers	ALBERT SIMS

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act I. Kitchen of Tiarndy's Quarters at Mallory's Racing Stables. November.

Act II. A Chorus Room, Longacre Theatre, New York. 7.45 p.m. The following April.

Act III. Crawford's Apartments. Nine o'clock the same Evening.

Act IV. The Home of Pat and Nora. Three Hours later.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE	"Pique dame"	... Suppe
SELECTION	"Our Miss Gibbs" ...	... Caryll-Monckton
FANTASIE, AMERICAN ...	... ...	... Victor Herbert
a. MORCEAU	"Amina"	... Lincke
b. "CHANT SANS PAROLE" ...	... ...	... Tschaikowski

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. EDWARD JONES.

Manager ... (for HENRY B. HARRIS) ... HARRY DAVIS

Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open 2 and 8. Commence at 2.30 and 8.30

Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.

Box Office (Mr. ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

Business Manager ... ... HERBERT CLARK

1909
Waters, J.

"Analogy," says Sir Felix Janion, the great newspaper proprietor in The Earth, "is not logic," and in writing of The Chorus Lady, by Mr. James Forbes, which was produced at the Vaudeville Theatre on Monday, under the auspices of Messrs. A. S. Gatti and Charles Frohman, we might go a step farther and say "Analogy does not make a play." It is true that quaint American analogies, invested with the quaint American accent, tickle pleasantly the ears of the more sober-speaking Briton, and are most probably a source of refreshment and delight to the American who has long sojourned in our midst, and whose Transatlantic sense of humour will doubtless quicken and respond to the chorus girl when she refers to herself as the "big screech of the household," and to the embraces of her sweetheart as "just peach preserve"; but when these embellishments are eliminated, it is reluctantly realised that "the play" is not "the thing," but that all that is left is a hackneyed story, with more or less obvious improbabilities. However, we can at least be grateful to the comedy in that it has served to introduce us to the original and attractive personality of Miss Rose Stahl, and has given us at least one good scene, the Dressing-room of the Chorus Girls, whose amusing chatter, tinged with some kindliness, much shrewd common sense, and more than a suspicion of malice, gives the impression of being taken from actual life. The story is of two sisters—one strong, self-reliant, loyal; the other, the younger, a pretty, feather-brained, little thing, weak, appealing, and selfish. The elder, Patricia, who is already in "the chorus," does her best to dissuade her sister from following in her footsteps, but finding her protests of no avail, she vows to look after and protect her "sis." In spite of Pat's vigilance, Nora, the younger girl, comes under the influence of an unscrupulous man, Dick Crawford, to whom she gives a bill for 300 dollars, to which she has attached her father's name, and which she has borrowed from Crawford to pay some betting debts. To get back this bill, Nora goes at night to Crawford's rooms, where she is followed hot-foot by Pat, who gets wind of what is going on. She finally discovers Nora in an inner room, where she (Pat) flies to conceal herself from her mother and Dan Mallory, her sweetheart, who comes to pay Crawford a visit in their search for Nora. Dan, who is suspicious, is about to force his way into the inner room, when Pat emerges, and, to save her sister, adopts the old stage device of pretending that it is she who is the culprit, though there seems to be no apparent reason why she should not have told her mother and Dan the whole truth. It is also difficult to believe that so fine a fellow as Dan would not have shown a little more faith in his sweetheart, and have looked about for some explanation of her conduct. In the last act it is Nora who inadvertently gives the secret away, and the curtain comes down on the reconciliation of this singularly obtuse pair of lovers.

[redacted]

EVERY EVENING at 9

WILL BE ACTED

COLONEL SMITH

A LIGHT COMEDY, IN FOUR ACTS,

By A. E. W. MASON

Colonel Smith		Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Admiral Grice		Mr. WILLIAM FARREN
William Faraday, J.P.		Mr. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Robert Tarver		Mr. EVELYN BEERBOHM (By arrangement with Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES)
James Raleigh		Mr. ERNEST THESIGER
Henry Steele		Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Martin		Mr. HENRY KITTS
Celia Faraday	Daughters of William Faraday	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH (By arrangement with Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN)
Madge Rockingham		Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Phyllis Faraday		Miss ALTHEA FRANCIES
Evelyn Trenchard		Miss DOROTHY GREEN

The Action takes place at Mr. Faraday's House in the Country.

ACT I.	Scene: The Drawing-room	Evening
ACT II.	Scene: The Same (Eight Months later)	Late Afternoon
ACT III.	Scene: The Morning-room (an hour and a-half later)	Evening
ACT IV.	Scene: The Same (Ten Days later)	Morning

Preceded Every Evening at 8.15 by

THE NURSERY GOVERNESS

A Play in One Act. Translated and adapted from M. PROVINS' "LA GOUVERNANTE"

By P. G. DUCHESNE

Mr. Simpson Brigge		Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Captain Trent		Mr. VERNON STEEL
Mrs. Trent	(née Hester Lorimer)	Miss JANE SAVILE
Wilson		Miss K. RICIMER

Scene ... ... Morning-Room at Mrs. Trent's House.

The Scenery painted by Mr. W. RAPHAEL

1909
Waters, J.

It is Mr. George Alexander's practice to vary the output of strenuous modern drama at the St. James's by an excursion into the pleasant domain of comedy, and he is now relying upon a charming play by Mr. A. E. W. Mason. The Liberal Member for Coventry, besides being the author of many novels, one of which, "The Courtship of Morrice Buckler," was dramatised by Miss Isabel Bateman and the author, and produced at the Grand Theatre, Islington, in the December of 1897, had his book "Miranda of the Balcony" produced in play-form in New York in 1901. Mr. Mason is not only a playwright, but has also had the not very common experience for a Member of Parliament of figuring fourteen years ago on the stage itself. In connection with the Independent Theatre Society, he sustained the part of Nicola in Arms and the Man, and was also in the cast of Mr. W. B. Yeats's literary play The Land of Heart's Desire. He also went on several tours. Mr. Mason has written a pleasant and amusing piece, full of harmless fun and touches of wistful tenderness, and giving Mr. Alexander and Miss Irene Vanbrugh some very acceptable opportunities. Colonel Smith is a charming light comedy, full of bright humour and quaint, natural characterisation. Its delights are gentle, but they are genuine, and the piece is a welcome change from a surfeit of seriousness. It reflects very faithfully the quiet current of well-to-do country life, with its droll domesticities and simple, unsophisticated interests. Celia Faraday is the eldest of three daughters of William Faraday, J.P. She has not yet received an offer of marriage, being really too good for the shallow young men with whom she comes into contact, though her sisters, Madge and Phyllis, are respectively engaged, one of them to a Mr. Robert Tarver, an empty-headed young man, who is one of the candidates at the forthcoming election. It has become a rule in the family that Celia shall be neglected; she feels herself to be, as she says, "put on the shelf." So she invents an imaginary Colonel Smith, who has started on the Somali expedition, and announces her engagement to him to the family. The fact of this fictitious engagement entirely alters the estimate of her formed by her sisters and by the young men of the little circle, who vie with each other in their attentions, and even the elderly Admiral Grice becomes enamoured of the affianced Celia. When the device has served its purpose, she puts an advertisement in the Times announcing the death of Colonel Smith, and considers that the incident is closed. Unfortunately, a letter which she addressed to Colonel Smith in Somamiland has reached a real officer of that name, who presents himself at the Faraday mansion under the name of Col. Llewellyn Vavasour, and diverts himself with the embarrassment of Celia, who has to endure much cross-questioning about her relations with the imaginary Smith. The Colonel is invited to stay and help Tarver in his election, and, by an ingenious suggestion, he secures that young man's success. Smith and Celia become great friends, and almost arrive at "love-passages"; but Mr. Faraday finds that there is no "Llewellyn Vavasour" in the Army List, and asks the Colonel for an explanation. It is given by Celia, who "makes a clean breast" of her deception, and explains the unhappiness which led to it. After this, it only remains for Smith to overcome her scruples, soothe her self-reproaches, and ask her to become his wife.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Under the Management of Mr. TOM B. DAVIS.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24TH, 1909, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

THE CONQUEST

A Play in Three Acts,

By

GEORGE FLEMING.

Colonel Armand de Montriveau		Mr. LEWIS WALLER
The Chevalier Du Pré		Mr. HERBERT JARMAN
The Marquis de Marly		Mr. SHIEL BARRY
The Vicomte de Nolac-Messenier ...		Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Le Gay	(a Dancing Master) ...	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Antoinette, Duchesse de Langeais		Miss MAXINE ELLIOTT
Comtesse de Cerny	(Margot) ...	Miss FRANCES DILLON
Claire de Paves		Miss DOROTHY DIX
Madame de Brezé ...	(Therese) ...	Miss GEORGIE ESMOND
The Superior of the Convent		Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
Justine	(Maid to the Duchesse) ...	Miss GLADYS STOREY
A Nun		Miss GWENDOLINE FLOYD

The Action of the Play takes place in Paris, 1801-1804.

Act I.		... The Gardens of the House of the Duchesse de Langeais
Act II. ...	Scene 1	The House of the Duchesse
	Scene 2 ...	A Room in the Apartment of Colonel de Montriveau
Act III.		(Three Years Later) At the Convent, Neuilly

There will be an interval of two minutes between Scenes 1 and 2 in Act II.

1909
Waters, J.

In attempting to adapt for dramatic purposes Balzac's curious story, "La Duchesse de Langeais," Miss Fletcher chose a task beyond her powers, and probably beyond those of any playwright. The original is a rather unsavoury study of female character, containing some peculiarly gruesome and improbable incidents, and culminating in a gloomy and melancholy climax. To alter Balzac's work so as to make it effective as a stage play would be impossible without destroying all the intent and purpose of the novelist, and misrepresenting his genius. In the original, the revenge which is wrought by the Duc de Montriveau is to punish the lady for having "led him on" to a certain point, and then disappointed his expectations. In the play, is is caused by a theatrical misunderstanding. The Antoinette, Duchesse de Langeais of the drama is simply a heartless and vain coquette, and her character is contrasted with that of Montriveau, a brave, long-enduring, and straightforward Republican soldier, one of Napoleon's tonghest warriors. To gratify her love of "conquest" at the expense of so strong a nature, the Duchesse exerts all her fascinations, and finally obtains so complete an empire over her adorer that he actually resigns his commission because she says she dislikes the Republican uniform. Even after this supreme sacrifice, she refuses to marry him; and unfortunately, by accident, he discovers a wager which she made that she would bewitch him, and sees her in the arms of an old friend, who has came to give her fatherly advice. Montriveau vows revenge, and, in what we English consider a rather cowardly and unmanly manner, he causes the lady to be seized by three of his agents clad in black, that she may be branded on the forehead. She tries to prove her love for him by consenting willingly to the disfigurement; but nothing that she says or does will make him think her sincere. In despair, she secludes herself in a convent. An interval of three years takes place, in which Montriveau achieves more military triumphs, while the Duchesse endures all the agonies of religious mortification. In the last act, in a convent at Neuilly, we see her preparing to take the final vows. The bed on which she is to lie, and become "dead to the world" is prepared. A girl friend from outside the walls tells Antoinette that Montriveau still loves her, but the Superior works hard to dispel all mundane thoughts from the soul of the novice. De Montriveau arrives with papers bearing the signatures of the Emperor, the Pope, and the Archbishop of Paris, ordering the release of Antoinette from the convent. The Superior tells him that she is dead, and Antoinette reclines on the bed, and pretends to be a corpse. De Montriveau, kneeling, utters a speech full of grief and bitterness, and finally, drawing a pistol from his belt threatens to shoot himself. On which Antoinette springs up, and clasps him in her arms.

dios.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE COURT.

On Monday, April 26, Revival of
"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

The Duke of Venice	Mr. Herbert Bunston
The Prince of Morocco	Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Antonio	Mr. Will Dennis
Bassanio	Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Gratiano	Mr. W. Edwyn Holloway
Salanio	Mr. J. Cassels Cobb
Salarino	Mr. Wilfred Fletcher
Lorenzo	Mr. Duncan Yarrow
Shylock	Mr. William Haviland
Tubal	Mr. Russell Thorndike
Launcelot Gobbo	Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Old Gobbo	Mr. Russell Thorndike
Leonardo	Mr. Clifford Lomer
Balthazar	Mr. A. Ramsay Macbeth
Stephano	Mr. George Owen
Clerk of the Court	Mr. Macbeth
A Gaoler	Mr. Douglas Homer
Portia	Miss Fay Davis
Nerissa	Miss Esme Hubbard
Jessica	Miss Dorothy Bell

1909
Waters, J.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.45,

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' and Mr. ROBERT COURTNEIDGE'S

PRODUCTION OF

THE DEVIL

Preceded at 8.15 by a New Comedy, in One Act,

COME MICHAELMAS

By KEBLE HOWARD.

John Cogbill	(a Young Farmer) ...	Mr. ARTHUR SOAMES
Mr. Cogbill	... (his Father)	Mr. GEO. W. PARTE
Mrs. Cogbill... ...	... (his Mother)	Mrs. ROSE EDOUIN
Charity	... ...	Miss PEARL KEATS

Scene - - The Parlour of Nutland's Farm.

"COME MICHAELMAS."

Comedy, in One Act, by Keble Howard, Produced at the Adelphi on Monday, April 26.

John Cogbill .....MR. ARTHUR SOAMES
Mr. Cogbill .....MR. GEO. W. PARTE
Mrs. Cogbill .....MRS. ROSE EDOUIN
Charity .....MISS PEARL KEATS

The invincible shyness of a bucolic lover forms the basis of Mr. Keble Howard's pleasant little episode, Come Michaelmas, which was presented to a large audience at the Adelphi for the first time on Monday. The character, however, in which one is chiefly interested, is the lovable Mrs. Cogbill, who brings back our memories to George Eliot's Mrs. Poyser in "Adam Bede." The dear old girl talks too much, it is true; but the author shows his customary care in the finished detail of this character-sketch. Mr. and Mrs. Cogbill are by way of giving up Nutland's Farm, which has been in their family for several generations; and the maternal heart has gone out to pretty Charity, who has been engaged to her son, John, for some seven years. She hopes that he will now settle down in the old homestead, and the sooner he makes up his mind to ask Charity to name the day the better. But John is like another Medus: the proximity of the woman he loves does not inspire him with eloquence; and though Charity tries her best to help him by pretending interest in his mending of a whip, the result is certainly not encouraging. John's failure determines Mrs. Cogbill, and she clinches matters by helping him with his proposal of marriage, and we leave him with Charity in his arms—the inevitable conclusion of the play. Mrs. Rose Edouin gives all possible effect to her sketch of Mrs. Cogbill, the impersonation being full of maternal solicitude and affection. Mr. Arthur Soames as the backward John Cogbill is irreproachable in his expression of shy simplicity; and Miss Pearl Keats's rustic coquetry is very effective.

Old playgoers who go to see The Devil will recognise in the piece some resemblance to the late Herman Merivale's The Cynic, produced at the Globe on Jan. 14, 1882, with Mr. Hermann Vezin as the Count L'Estrange (Mephistopheles) and the late Marie Litton as Daisy Brent. Like the heroine of The Devil, Daisy Brent has married somebody very much older than herself, and, also like her, is continually being tempted to throw herself into the arms of a former lover, whom we may call the Faust of the story. Since its production on the 17th ult. the author, Mr. Henry Hamilton, has considerably modified the ending. Hélène Vaillaat still goes to the artist's studio; but, instead of throwing herself into the arms of Maurice Dufaure, she answers the tempter's mocking cynicisms by prayer. The simple appeal to the Deity confounds M. Lenoir, whose muttered curses are smothered by reverberating thunder and lightning flashes. The wife no longer listens to the promptings of her heart, but to the voice of duty, and she stands—a triumphant figure—alone on the stage as the tableau curtains close in. Mr Hamilton, by thus inserting in his play a plea for the Scriptural doctrine of the efficacy of prayer in the hour of temptation, works out a moral climax, but we are afraid that Mrs. Grundy will still give a minatory shake to her curls when she listens to some of the speeches that are still retained.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

... ... Mr. TOM B. DAVIS.

TUESDAY, APRIL 27th, and every Evening at 8,

MR. TOM B. DAVIS

Will produce a NEW ORIENTAL MUSICAL PLAY entitled

A Persian Princess

Written by LEEDHAM BANTOCK and P. J. BARROW.
Lyrics by PERCY GREENBANK.
MUSIC BY SIDNEY JONES.
Additional Numbers by MARIE HORNE.

King Khayyam		Mr. GEORGE GRAVES
Prince Hassan, Prince Omar	His Sons	Mr. CLARENCE BLAKISTON, Mr. NOEL FLEMING
The Lady Ayala	The Royal Housekeeper	Miss LILY IRIS
Swaak	(The Keeper of the Royal Camel)	Mr. HORACE MILLS
Amm Zad	(The Keeper of the Slaves)	Mr. JOHN MORLEY
El Tabloid	(The Court Physician)	Mr. AUBREY FITZGERALD
Akbar	(The Captain of the Guard)	Mr. J. WARREN FOSTER
Mustapha	(The Old Man of the Desert)	Mr SIDNEY BRACEY
Wunbarest, Tubarest, Khomynkaud, Dhiskord	The Court Musicians	Mr. JOHN LAWSON, Mr. RICHARD ATTWOOD, Mr. JAMES HAUGHTON, Mr. JAMES BERNARD
Mpoani, Mpogo	King Khayyam's Body Guard	Mr. LIONEL BRAHAM, Mr. WILLIE HARTILL
Zingarie ...	(a Clove Gatherer)	Miss CARRIE MOORE
Ujujube	King Khayyam's Favourite Dancer	Miss VIVIEN TALLEUR
Selim ...	(a Coffee Bearer)	Master GEORGE BURNS
Zoraida, Meranda, Nurmahal, Marzipan, Zobeide, Fuljan	Ladies at King Khayyam's Court	Miss JESSIE LONNEN, Miss ETHEL NEGRETTI, Miss GLADYS HERRIES, Miss DORIS BERESFORD, Miss EMMIE SAXTER, Miss TESSIE HACKNEY
Lulu ...	... (a Slave Girl) ..	Miss BEATRICE HARRINGTON
Alfred ...	... (the Camel) ...	A BACTRIAN CAMEL
Xyo-la ...	(Townswoman)	Miss ISABEL AGNEW
Khissme, Zen Zen, Mai-i, Dou Dou, Ylopia, Goulnal	King Khayyam's "Bul-Buls"	Miss MINNIE BAKER, Miss ALICE HATTON, Miss MOYA MANNERING, Miss HILDA STEWART, Miss LUCY DAVIES, Miss MAGGIE JARVIS
King Khafilah ...	... ...	Mr. M. R. MORAND

AND

Princess Yolene (King Khafilah's Daughter) Miss RUTH VINCENT

Chorus of Courtiers, Merchants, Turtle Fishers, Egg Seekers, Ivory Carvers, Guards and Slaves, &c., &c.

1909
Waters, J.

Act I. .. The Slave Market outside King Khayyam's Palace (ALFRED TERRAINE)

Act II. .. King Khayyam's Palace (JOSEPH HARKER)

Costumes and Dresses Designed by PERCY ANDERSON.

Ladies' Dresses Executed by MRS. NETTLESHIP and Gentlemen's Costumes made by B. J. SIMMONS & Co.

Electrical Fittings by T. J. DIGBY.

Properties and Floral Decorations by BURDETT & Co.

The Celesta by MUSTEL & Co.

PRODUCTION BY SYDNEY ELLISON.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.

ORCHESTRA UNDER THE DIRECTION OF Mr. SIDNEY JONES.

PRICES.

Private Boxes, £5 5s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s.
Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Dress Circle, 5s.
Upper Circle, 4s. and 3s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 7.40 o'clock (Wet Evenings 15 minutes earlier).
Matinee—Doors open at 1.40

Acting Manager ... ... Mr. A. C. BELSEY

"If a man says to a girl "I love you," and says it very nicely, it is about as much as she can expect." Unfortunately for "the man"—in this case Prince Omar of Persia—"the girl," the Persian Princess Yolene, expected rather more than a protestation of affection, however nicely put, and the result was much tribulation of soul for him and a good deal of fun for her. In justice to Prince Omar it must be said that this flippant speech was made before he was acquainted with the lady to whom, for State reasons, he was to be betrothed, and he had been having a very good time, apparently, with a lot of lovely little ladies clothed in exquisite flowing garments and with hair of beautiful Persian red. The Princess Yolene, on her way to her betrothal, has given her father, the King of Khafilah, the slip, and, unattended, has reached the slave market outside the palace of Prince Omar's father, King Khayyam, just in time to catch the Prince embracing several of the lovely little ladies and giving voice to the aforesaid aphorism. Prince Omar is interested in the lovely stranger at first sight, but she refuses to reveal her identity to him until he has promised to keep it a secret. Then, having extracted his promise, she tells him that the reason why the humour of the remarks she overheard has escaped her is because she happens to be the girl in question. Prince Omar's dismay is great; he realises that she, and none other, is his guiding star, but when he tells her so she laughs scornfully. In the meantime, King Khafilah is distracted at the loss of his daughter, and, fearful of the wrath of old King Khayyam, he induces a pretty gipsy girl, Zingarie, to pose temporarily as the Princess. But the imposition is quickly revealed by Prince Omar, and Zingarie, an artful little witch, is carried off to be sold as a slave, together with Princess Yolene, who remains incognito, and who is arrested by the order of Omar's brother, Prince Hassan. Hassan has observed his brother's infatuation, and plots to marry him to the beautiful stranger, thinking in this way that he will secure Yolene for himself and gain the throne, which his father is abdicating, and from which Hassan has been ousted by public vote. Hassan's plans succeed admirably, but to his own downfall, as, through his intervention, Yolene becomes convinced of Omar's affection, and forgets the unfortunate speech which has been the cause of their estrangement.

Shaftesbury Theatre

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE W.

PROPRIETORS
THE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE LATE MR. JOHN LANCASTER

LESSEE AND MANAGER.
ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

TO-NIGHT at 8 o'clock

"The Arcadians"

A Fantastic Musical Play, in Three Acts

By MARK AMBIENT and A. M. THOMPSON
Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS
Music by LIONEL MONCKTON and HOWARD TALBOT

James Smith (of Smith & Co., Caterers, London) / Simplicitas (an Arcadian)	Mr. DAN ROLYAT
Peter Doody (a Jockey) - -	Mr. ALFRED LESTER
Jack Meadows - - -	Mr. H. E. PEARCE
Bobby - - - - -	Mr. NELSON KEYS
Sir George Paddock - -	Mr. AKERMAN MAY
Percy Marsh - - - -	Mr. DEANE PERCIVAL
Reggie - - - - -	Mr. CHARLES CHAMIER
Sir Timothy Ryan - - -	Mr. CHAS. STROOD
Harry Desmond - - -	Mr. GEORGE MASTERS
James Withers - - -	Mr. WALTER L. RIGNOLD
Hooten - - - - -	Mr. ARTHUR JOHNSTONE
Time - - - - - -	Mr. GEORGE ELTON
Mrs. Smith - - -	Miss ADA BLANCHE
Lady Barclay - - - -	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Lucy Selwyn - - - -	Miss MURIEL HASTINGS
Marion - - - - -	Miss MARY BERYS
Beatrice - - - - -	Miss VIOLET WALKER
Amaryllis - - - -	Miss BILLIE SINCLAIR
Daphne - - - -	Miss M. LAWSON
Dryope - - - - -	Miss DOROTHY LAINE
AND
Eileen Cavanagh - - -	Miss PHYLLIS DARE
ARCADIANS
Chrysea - - - - -	Miss MAY KINDER
(By kind permission of Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES)
Astrophel - - - - -	Mr. H. E. PEARCE
Strephon - - - -	Mr. CHARLES CHARTERIS
Damœtas - - - - -	Mr. S. OLIVER
AND
Sombra - - - - -	Miss FLORENCE SMITHSON

1909
Waters, J.

SHAFTESBURY
THEATRE
24/4/09
28
Orch. Stall
G1
David Allen & Sons, Ltd., Printers, Harrow, Belfast, &c.

Act I.	- - -	ARCADIA (CONRAD TRITCHLER)
Act II.	- - -	ASKWOOD (R. C. MCCLEERY)
Act III.	- - -	THE ARCADIAN RESTAURANT (STAFFORD HALL and W. HOLMES)

The Arcadian Costumes and their Accessories Designed by WILHELM

The Ladies' Modern Costumes designed and made by LUCILLE, Hanover Square
Millinery made by ZYROT ET CIE., 14, Hanover Square
The Gentlemen's Modern Costumes made by Messrs. DOHERTY & YELL, 24, Hanover Square.
The Arcadian Costumes made by Mrs. WOOLCOTT
Properties by W. ROBINSON, Liverpool — Wigs by CLARKSON

The Play Produced by ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

Dances Arranged by HARRY GRATTAN

The Orchestra will, on this occasion, be Conducted by MR. HOWARD TALBOT

Owing to the numerous difficulties attending a first production, the indulgence of the audience is desired should any apparent delay occur between the Acts.

OPERA GLASSES (by Negretti & Zambra) are on hire, and may be obtained from any of the Attendants at a charge of SIXPENCE for each performance

PRICES OF ADMISSION. Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., £2 12s 6d. and £1 11s. 6d.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. and 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office Open 10 to 10 — Telephones—GERRARD 6666 and 6867

Doors Open at 7.30 p.m. — Commence at 8 p.m.

General Manager - - - - - - -	Mr. DOUGLAS MILLAR
Stage Manager - - - - - - -	Mr. WALTER L. RIGNOLD
Musical Director - - - - - - -	Mr. ARTHUR WOOD

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

1909
Waters, J.

We shall be sporting with Amaryllis in the shade and dallying with Daphne in the sun of prosperity for some time to come at the Shaftesbury, where Mr. Robert Courtneidge commenced his management on Wednesday with the most certain anticipations of a great success in the new fantastic musical play, The Arcadians. The spirit of Planché hovers over the book, in which there is also something of Gilbertian topsy-turvydom; and it is all delightful, exhilarating, picturesque, and a very riot of drollery. The rapt admiration of the playgoer is immediately captured by the opening scene—"Arcadia," by Conrad Tritchler, which is of entrancing beauty. Life glows with radiance beneath beautiful blossoms. It is a landscape lifting to eternal summer. Strephan and Chloe tread the primrose path. As they tell us, Dame Nature blest their birth with "spell of sun and sea and gold of garnered field." For a time we are under that spell, listening the while to Sombra, the chief Arcadian maiden, as she sings of "The Pipes of Pan"—"the magic reed that charms at need the heart of maid and man." But the introduction of Old Time, "the man who keeps creation moving on," interrupts the revels of the Arcadians. In the universal scheme of progress they are in arrears—just about three thousand years. The scythe-bearer is followed by an arrival from London, none other than Mr. James Smith, of Smith and Son, caterers, who drops from an airship. Smith's business qualifications make lying a necessity of his existence; but terminological inexactitudes are anathematised by the Arcadians, who thrust the Cockney tradesman down the well of truth, where he is rejuvenated, and mentally purified. Henceforth he is Simplicitas, a shepherd in a goat-skin, with blossoms in his hair, and wearing "shorts" that "leave rather a draught round the knees." Simplicitas talks of the wickedness of London, and Sombra determines to go back with him to teach the simple life and banish lies.

They travel to Askwood, where the race for the Corinthian Cup is about to be run. The scene in the enclosure is a brilliant one, the throng of society women being dressed in the most elaborate and beautiful toilettes. We become interested in Jack Meadows, who is backing for £5,000 his horse, The Deuce, for the chief race of the day. Should he win, it would speed him in the good graces of Eileen Cavanagh, an Irish girl, the niece of Mrs. Smith, Smith's better-half, who does not recognise her old man in the quaintly-clad Simplicitas. The jockey about to ride The Deuce has never won a race, and is full of melancholy forebodings. The horse "savages" him, and another jockey has to be found. Sombra, the Arcadian, suggests Simplicitas, and he is forced into the saddle, the act closing with his triumph.

Smith, otherwise Simplicitas, possesses a large hotel, which hitherto has been a white elephant. He conceives the brilliant idea of turning it into an Arcadian restaurant, with waiters and waitresses dressed as nymphs and shepherds. Peter Doody, the melancholy jockey, is pressed into the service. Jack Meadows' suit of Eileen is much hampered by the Arcadian innocence of Sombra, who includes him in her scheme of universal affection. Her unrestrained platonic love prompts her to kiss him on every occasion, and Eileen is naturally jealous. The misunderstandings are speedily straightened out, and Simplicitas, the Arcadian, financier, and amateur jockey, is eventually discovered to be the long-lost Smith, who goes back to middle-aged respectability with another dousing in the artesian well of the restaurant. Maid and man are adjured in song to rejoice while they can in the spring of their pleasure and pride, and on a lively finale the curtains close.

The remarkable success of the new musical play "The Arcadians," at the Shaftesbury Theatre, has been followed by an extraordinary demand for seats, and yesterday a "deal" for no less than £12,000 worth of seats was concluded by the "librarians" with Mr. Robert Courtneidge.

DM. 4/6/1909

IMPULSIVE HORSE ACTOR.

Owing to an excess of professional zeal the horse that makes a nightly appearance at the Shaftesbury Theatre in the racecourse scene of "The Arcadians" rushed on from the wings on Tuesday evening and won his race about thirty seconds before he was supposed to have passed the post.

Luckily for the hero and heroine and the ladies of the chorus the impulsive four-footed actor upset nothing more serious than the temper of the stage manager. The latter has informed the proprietor of the steed that if the animal makes any more flying starts before he gets his cue an understudy will get the position, and the perquisites in the shape of apples and chocolates that the lovers of animals in the company hand over to this horse, who wins a race seven times a week, will thus be lost to him. Mr. Dan Rolyat was on the racer's back when it went out prematurely to win its race on Tuesday. That saved the situation and an accident.

DM. 3/6/1909

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

1. BEFORE THE THUNDERBOLT: THE BROWN FAMILY AND THEIR FRIENDS

The action of the play takes place in the "playroom" at Myrtle Villa, in Essex, the home of Mr. Brown, a typical British citizen of the lower middle class. The play opens on Boxing Day morning. Mr. Brown is learning a tune; Reggie Brown is concocting Limericks; and the rest of the party, including Geoff Smith and Ada Jones, are enthusiastically discussing football prospects.

2. MR. BROWN ORDERS A SUPPOSED "VOLUNTEER" OFF HIS GROUNDS

A Post Office strike is in progress; business is at a standstill; and the country is cut off from all news of outside events. In addition, there is a heavy fog. Suddenly the Browns discover on the lawn a party of soldiery, whom they suppose to be Volunteers. Though Paul Robinson, himself a Volunteer and the only earnest man of the party, is doubtful on the point, Mr. Brown orders them off, and after asking some questions, they depart.

3. MR. BROWN DEMANDS THE INVADER'S NAME AND CORPS

The "Volunteers" soon return, and Mr. Brown is furious at their trespassing in his grounds and riding all over his drive. Prince Yoland enters, whereupon Mr. Brown flies at him in anger at this "disgraceful intrusion," threatens to write to the papers, and demands his name and corps. "I am Prince Yoland, Captain in the Black Hussars of her Imperial Majesty the Empress of the North," he replies, and the curtain falls on the first act.

"AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME."

POLICE CALLED IN AT DUBLIN THEATRE.

There were wild scenes at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, last night when the play "An Englishman's Home" was produced.

The theatre was crowded, and almost from the start the packed gallery displayed remarkable rowdiness, hissing, shouting, and "booing" with such effect that the curtain had to be rung down several times. After a number of exciting intervals the play proceeded with curtailments.

The din was so great that a large body of police was summoned to restore order, and at least one arrest was made during the repeated interruptions.

D.M. May 4 09

1909
Winters, J.

1909
ters, J.

ALDWYCH THEATRE

SEYMOUR HICKS Proprietor

EVERY EVENING at 8

SEYMOUR HICKS'

Production of the Drama in Four Acts, entitled

ONE OF THE BEST

by

SEYMOUR HICKS and GEORGE EDWARDES

Dudley Keppell	HENRY AINLEY
Philip Ellsworth	H. A. SAINTSBURY
Lieut.-General Coventry ...	ALFRED BRYDONE
Sir Archibald McGregor ...	FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
The Rev. Dr. Penrose	EDGAR PAYNE
Baron von Veltheim	JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Private Jupp	HARRY NICHOLLS
Sergeant Hennessy	J. GRAEME CAMPBELL
Corporal Smythe	GEOFFREY DOUGLAS
Private (Hon.) Montressor ...	RICHARD BRENNAND
Private Ginger	CECIL BOYLE
Private Snipe	GEORGE ELLISTON
Private White	EDWARD LEITH
Jason Jupp	ROTHBURY EVANS
President of the Council ...	WILLIAM WILSON
Esther Coventry	NANCY PRICE
Mary Penrose	BEATRICE TERRY
Kitty Spencer	DIDO DRAKE
Mrs. Spencer	KATE KEARNEY

"ONE OF THE BEST."

The Drama, by Seymour Hicks and George Edwardes, Revived at the Aldwych Theatre, on Saturday, May 1.

ACT I
The Rectory Garden at Market Ditton—Time, Afternoon

ACT II
The Government Offices at Portsmouth—Time, Towards Evening

ACT III—Scene 1
The Court Martial (A week has elapsed)

Scene 2
Outside the Canteen

Scene 3
The Barrack Square (A week elapses)

ACT IV—Scene 1
Outside the "Nut and Squirrel"—Time, Afternoon

Scene 2
The Barrack Square—Time, Evening

Manager C. E. Hamilton

The simple story is easily to be remembered. The hero, Dudley Keppell, is a lieutenant in the Second Highlanders, and the heroine is Mary Penrose, the daughter of a country vicar. The villain, Philip Ellsworth, a saw-mill owner, has seduced the daughter of Lieut.-General Coventry, and, being in want of money, is ready to sell a plan of the fortifications of Portsmouth—if he is able to purloin them—to an emissary of a foreign government. Coventry has laid an electric trap for the thief in his—Coventry's—Portsmouth office; and the seduced girl secures the keys of the safe for Ellsworth, who enters to burgle it. The Lieut.-General grapples with Ellsworth, who escapes, leaving Keppell, who enters at the critical moment, under suspicion, which is increased by certain details of circumstantial evidence. Keppell is tried by court-martial, and is sentenced to public degradation and penal servitude. Coventry overhears a conversation between his daughter and Ellsworth, and thus discovers the truth. Keppell is reinstated, and Ellsworth is lynched by a mob.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE COURT.

On Monday, May 3, Revival of Shakespeare's Comedy,
"TWELFTH NIGHT."

Orsino	Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Sebastian	Mr. Duncan Yarrow
Antonio	Mr. Herbert Bunston
Sea Captain	Mr. A. Ramsay Macbeth
Valentine	Mr. J. Cassels Cobb
Curio	Mr. Clifford Lomer
Sir Toby Belch	Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Sir Andrew Aguecheek	Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Malvolio	Mr. William Haviland
Fabian	Mr. Russell Thorndike
Feste	Mr. Max Montesole
First Officer	Mr. George Owen
Second Officer	Mr. Douglas Homer
A Priest	Mr. A. Ramsay Macbeth
Olivia	Mrs. Lorraine New
Viola	Miss Fay Davis
Maria	Miss Esme Hussard

"MACBETH."

Shakespeare's Tragedy, Revived at the Garrick Theatre, on Friday Afternoon, May 7.

Macbeth	Mr. Bourchier
Duncan	Mr. Leon Quartermaine
Malcolm	Mr. Douglas Imbert
Donalbain	Miss Nell Carter
Banquo	Mr. Arthur Whitby
Fleance	Miss Pamela Gaythorne
Macduff	Mr. Charles Bryant
Lennox	Mr. William Burchill
Rosse	Mr. A. S. Homewood
Seyton	Mr. William Armstrong
First Murderer	Mr. Bertram Forbyth
Second Murderer	Mr. Charles Vernon
A Doctor	Mr. Burchill
A Porter	Mr. Charles Goodhart
A Messenger	Mr. Marion
The Three Witches	Mr. H. Nye Chart Mr. Alfred Brietowe Mrs. H. Nye Chart
A Gentlewoman	Miss Marie Illington
Hecate	Miss Margaret Vivian
An Apparition	Miss Winifred Bateman
Lady Macbeth	Miss Violet Vanbrugh

1909
Waters, J.

Saturday May 8.

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

EVERY EVENING at 8.40

WILL BE ACTED

THE THIEF

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS.

Adapted from the French of HENRY BERNSTEIN

By COSMO GORDON-LENNOX

Richard Chelford	Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Raymond Leyton	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Harry Leyton (his Son)	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Mr. Protheroe	Mr. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Servant	Mr. MONTAGUE WIGAN
Marise Chelford	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH (By arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman)
Isabel Leyton (Raymond Leyton's Second Wife)	Miss DOROTHY GREEN

The Scene is laid at Mr. Leyton's Country House. The action occurs during the Autumn of the year, within the space of twenty-four hours.

1909
Waters, J.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees .. .. Popular Playhouses, Ltd.
Managing Directors .. .. HENRY R. SMITH and ERNEST CARPENTER

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, 17, Craven Street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Thursday, May 13th, 1909, and every Evening at 8,
MATINEE, WEDNESDAYS at 2.30,

The Prisoner of the Bastille

By NORMAN FORBES.

Although this Play has been suggested by DUMAS' book "THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK," the Plot is entirely original.

Characters.

Louis XIV. (King of France)	}	Mr. MATHESON LANG
Philippe Marchiali (his Brother)	}
Duc de Vermandois (Louis de la Vallière's Son)		Master LENTON MURRAY
Monsieur D'Herblay (Bishop of Vannes) ...		Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Monsieur de St. Mars (Governor of the Bastille) ...		Mr. ERIC MAYNE
Cardinal Mazarin		Mr. COWLEY WRIGHT
Du Jouca (Chief Turnkey of the Bastille) ...		Mr. CHARLES L. LUDLOW
Monsieur Maliconne } Courtiers		Mr. VALENTINE SELLVA
Monsieur de Wardes }		Mr. TERENCE O'BRIEN
Monsieur de Guiche }		Mr. RICHARD DEANE
Antoine (a Deaf and Dumb Servant) ...		Mr. GEORGE HANNAWAY
De Gaumont (an Officer)		Mr. SIDNEY VAUTIER
Colbert (a Musketeer)		Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Armand (an Usher)		Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG
Jaques (a Soldier)		Mr. ERNEST CRESFAN
Anne of Austria (The Queen Mother) ...		Miss GERALDINE OLLIFFE
Jean (Louise's Old Nurse)		Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
Mademoiselle de Montalais		Miss WINIFRED BEECH
Mademoiselle D'Oloune ... } Ladies of		Miss AVICE SCHOLTZ
Mademoiselle de Châtillon ... } the Court		Miss AGNES THORNTON
Comtesse de Cheviente ... }		Miss NAOMI BARTON
Mademoiselle Tonnay Charente }		Miss KITTY FIELDER
Louise de la Vallière		Miss DOROTHY THOMAS

The Play produced under the Stage Direction of ERNEST CARPENTER.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act I. - - Garden in the Old Monastery at Semur

Act II. Rooms set apart for Louise de la Vallière in the Louvre.

Seven Years are supposed to elapse.

Act III. Scene 1—Louise de la Vallière's Apartments.
Scene 2—Cell in the Bastille.

Acts III. & IV. are supposed to take place on the same night.

Act IV. - - Louise de la Vallière's Apartments.

The Scenery Designed and Painted by E. C. NICHOLLS, and Assistants.

The Costumes designed by Mr. KARL and executed by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN.

The Dresses worn by Miss Thomas designed and executed by Madame STOFFORD.

Floral Decorations by Messrs. J. BAUMLER & CO.

The Wigs by C. H. FOX, Ltd. The Furniture by J. S. LYON.

The following selection will be played by the Lyceum Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.

OVERTURE ...	... "Egmont" ...	...	Beethoven
SELECTION ...	... "Gaiety Echoes" ...	...	Godfrey
ENTR'ACT ...	(a) "Southern Beauties"	...	Bratton
	(b) "Yester Thoughts"	...	Herbert
SELECTION ...	..."Plantation Songs"...	...	Clutsam

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. .. Mr. W. F. CROWE
Stage Manager .. .. Mr. S. MAJOR JONES

Box Office (ANDREW SPENCER) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

With the exception of the last act, in which certain important alterations have been made, Mr. Norman Forbes's drama The Prisoner of the Bastille is practically the same as The Man in the Iron Mask, which was presented at the Adelphi in the March of 1899, with the author as Louis XIV. and Philippe Marchiali, Mr. W. H. Vernon as Monsieur D'Herblay, Mr. W. L. Abingdon as M. de St. Mars, Mr. G. W. Anson as the gaoler, Miss Genevieve Ward as Anne of Austria, Miss Dolores Drummond as Jean, Miss Hilda Hanbury as Mlle. de Montalais, and Miss Kate Rorke as Louise de la Vallière. The legend of the "Man in the Iron Mask" has been discussed in many an erudite essay, and the subject is so wrapt in mystery that one can easily excuse Dumas the Elder, and Mr. Norman Forbes after him, for dealing very freely with the theme, and with the French history of the period. In the first act, we see the rightful heir to the throne of France, who has an exact resemblance to his brother, Louis XIV., secluded in the old monastery, under the name of Philippe Marchiali. Monsieur D'Herblay, the Bishop of Vannes, is aware of Marchiali's identity, and desires that he shall escape and seize the throne; but the prisoner has fallen in love with the beautiful Louise de la Vallière, and is diffident of his ability to rule France. However, he agrees to attempt to leave the monastery, and, by the help of the Bishop, who delays the exit of the King's favourite, De St. Mars, Marchiali gets away to Paris. The King admires Louise, and has arranged that she shall become ostensibly the wife of De St. Mars, but really Louis' mistress. Marchiali, instead of leaving France, returns to the Louvre, where Louise has been allotted apartments, crosses swords with De St. Mars, whom he defeats, and is captured and taken to the Bastille. Louise has never seen the King's features, as, in their interviews, he has always concealed them with a mask, and when he removes this, and tells her that he has been masquerading as Marchiali in order to win her love, she falls into the trap, and becomes the King's mistress. Seven years elapse. Marchiali has been lying in the Bastille, where his face has been concealed by an iron mask. Monsieur D'Herblay induces the King to visit his brother in the prison, and, when Louis arrives, chloroforms him, and locks the mask upon his face, while Marchiali assumes the royal robes. In the version of the play which was presented at the Adelphi, the King was murdered in the Bastille by De St. Mars, who believed he was killing Marchiali, and thus, by his enemy's act, the latter was placed on the throne of France. In the present version De St. Mars attempts to assassinate Marchiali, but is prevented by the guard, Marchiali being hailed as King.

1909
Waters, J.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

Tuesday
Evening

May 11

Orchestra Stl 10/6
No. K 21

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, MAY 11th, 1909, at 8.15,

FREDERICK HARRISON and CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENT

Miss Billie Burke

IN

LOVE WATCHES

A Comedy in Four Acts, by ROBERT DE FLERS and ARMAND CAILLAVET.

Adapted by Gladys Unger.

Count Andre de Juvigny		JULIAN L'ESTRANGE
Ernest Augarde		ERNEST LAWFORD
The Abbe Merlin		W. H. CROMPTON
Mons. Carteret		STANLEY DARK
Germain		HORTON COOPER
François		ARTHUR MINTON
Chauffeur		E. F. MEADS
Jacqueline		BILLIE BURKE
Lucie de Morfontaine		MAUDE ODELL
Marquise de Juvigny		KATE MEEK
Charlotte Bernier		GRACE ARMYTAGE NOBLE
Baroness de St. Ermin		HENRIETTA WATSON
Christine ...	... her daughters ...	DAISY MARKHAM
Solange... ...		GLADYS BAIRD
Rose		LAURA CLEMENT
Louise		LAURA BARRADELL
Maid		MILDRED BARRETT

ACT I. -	Morning Room in the Marquise de Juvigny's country house near Dieppe
ACT II. - -	Drawing Room in Andre de Juvigny's house in Paris
ACT III. - - -	Study in Ernest Augarde's flat in Paris
ACT IV. -	Drawing Room in the Marquise de Juvigny's house in Paris

Programme of Music

Musical Director, Mr. CLAUDE FENN-LEYLAND.

OVERTURE	"Le Caid"	Thomas
SELECTION	"Songs Without Words"	...Mendelssohn
SUITE	... "L'Arlesienne"	Bizet
THREE BAVARIAN DANCES ...	... ...	Elgar

Grand Pianoforte by CRAMER, 126 Oxford Street.

Stage Manager	... ... Mr. EDGAR MACGREGOR
Acting Manager	... ... Mr. HAROLD ENTWISTLE

Matinee every Saturday at 2.15.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets or any kind of head dress

This request is made for the benefit of the audience and the Management trust that it will appeal to everyone and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out

The Box Office (Mr. W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10

Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £4 4s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 5s.; Upper Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Telephone 3344 Gerrard

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain

1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Lessee & Manager .. .. .. Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON

Business Manager .. .. Mr. HORACE WATSON

in the above adaptation of MM. Robert de Flers and Armand Caillavet's comedy L'Amour Veille, which was produced at the Comédie Française in the October of 1907, with M. Coquelin cadet as L'Abbé Merlin and Mlle. Leconte as Jacqueline. The heroine is an impulsive, ingenuous maiden, who believes in absolute frankness in matters of the heart, and has no hesitation in telling her agreeable cousin, André de Jnvigny, that she is in love with him. He is delighted, though he has been carrying on an intrigue with a widow, a certain Lucie de Morfontaine. It has been that lady's practice, when wishing to be alone with André at her house, to tell her servants to say that she is busily engaged with the secretary for the Society for the Regeneration of Young Tartars. Jacqueline has an earnest but hopeless admirer in Ernest Augarde, a young historian, an awkward and unattractive young man, who is beloved by Charlotte Bernier, a teacher of music.

The first act ends with the announcement by Jacqueline of her engagement to André. The second shows the young couple returned to Paris after their honeymoon. Jacqueline is almost childishly enamoured of her husband, and is jealous of his pre-nuptial intrigues. He tells her the truth about his liaison with Mme. de Morfontaine, and explains to her the plan involving the mention of the "Young Tartar" Society. She exacts from him a promise that he will never see or speak to the lady again; and, to pacify her, he gives his word not to do so. Jacqueline goes out to pay a call, and Mme. de Morfontaine, forcing herself past the servant, comes on the scene. She pretends to faint; and André has to take her in his arms, and finally to see her home. Jacqueline returns, and learns from the servant of Mme. de Morfontaine's visit. The young wife is painfully excited, and, telephoning to her rival's address, is told that she is secluded with the secretary of the Society for the Regeneration of Young Tartars. Jacqueline immediately jumps to the conclusion that her husband is with the lady, and rushes out to revenge herself by an intrigue with another man, selecting for her purpose the modest and unattractive Ernest, and announcing her intention by letters to all her family.

Arrived at Ernest's room, she starts a flirtation with him, which ends in his trying to kiss her. His eyes are soon opened to the real object of her visit, and he sympathises with her distress. Her uncle, Mons. Carteret, and some other friends, arriving in search of Jacqueline, she conceals herself, overhearing their conversation. Finally she departs, after exacting from Ernest a promise to help her in making her husband jealous.

In the last act she tries in vain to make her family believe that she has been unfaithful to André, and he explains to her that it was a certain English lord and not himself who was closeted with Mme. de Morfontaine when Jacqueline telephoned to the lady's house. When it is discovered that it was Ernest that Jacqueline visited, André is reassured; the student proposes to Charlotte, and is accepted; and Jacqueline and André are again on affectionate terms.

1909
Waters, J.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Under the Management of Mr. TOM B. DAVIS.

TO-DAY AT 2,

SHAKESPEARE'S

HENRY IV.

PART I.

King Henry IV. ...	... ...	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Henry	(Prince of Wales) ...	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
John of Lancaster	... ...	Mr. PATRICK DIGAN
Earl of Westmoreland	... ...	Mr. FRANK RIDLEY
Sir Walter Blunt	... ...	Mr. HALLIWELL HOBBES
Thomas Percy ...	(Earl of Worcester) ...	Mr. ARTHUR AYERS
Henry Percy ...	(Earl of Northumberland) ...	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Hotspur ...	(his Son) ...	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Edmund Mortimer	(Earl of March) ...	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
Archibald ...	(Earl of Douglas) ...	Mr. J. H. IRVINE
Owen Glendower	... ...	Mr. HERBERT JARMAN
Sir Richard Vernon	... ...	Mr. REGINALD DANE
Sir John Falstaff	... ...	Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Poins	... ...	Mr. SHIEL BARRY
Gadshill ...	... ...	Mr. CATON WOODVILLE
Peto	... ...	Mr. CLAUDE VERNON
Bardolph ...	... ...	Mr. ROBERT BOLDER
Sheriff ...	... ...	Mr. ROY CUSHING
Francis ...	... ...	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Raby	(Hotspur's Servant) ...	Mr. HUGH CUNNINGHAM
A Traveller ...	... ...	Mr. S. BAILEY
Lady Percy ...	... ...	Miss AURIOL LEE
Lady Mortimer ...	... ...	Miss MARION EVANS
Mistress Quickley	... ...	Miss MINNIE GRIFFEN

Lords, Officers, Chamberlain, Carriers, Travellers and Attendants.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE LYRIC.

On Tuesday Afternoon, May 11, Revival of the First Part of "HENRY IV."

1909
Waters, J.
Lives

Act I.	...	Scene 1 ...	... London. The Palace
		Scene 2 ...	... London. A Street
		Scene 3 ...	... London. The Palace
Act II.	...	Scene 1 ..	... The Road near Gadshill
		Scene 2 ...	... Warkworth Castle
		Scene 3 ...	... Boar's Head Tavern
Act III.	...	Scene 1	... The House of the Archdeacon of Bangor
		Scene 2 ...	.... London. The Palace
		Scene 3 ...	... Boar's Head Tavern
Act IV.	...	Scene 1 ...	The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury
		Scene 2 ...	... The Road to Coventry
		Scene 3 ...	The King's Tent near Shrewsbury
		Scene 4 ...	The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury

(The Tableaux Curtains will be lowered once during Scene 4 to denote the passing of time)

Mr. Waller has been assisted in the production by Mr. HERBERT JARMAN.

Programme of Music.

PRELUDE		Leonard W. Chalk
SELECTION	"Madama Butterfly"	Puccini
GRACEFUL DANCE	from "Henry VIII."	Sullivan
SCENES PITTORESQUES		Massenet

The Prelude and Incidental Music composed by LEONARD W. CHALK.

STAGE MANAGER ... ... Mr. CHARLES LA TROBE
MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... ... Mr. LEONARD W. CHALK

Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN. Ladies' Dresses by Mrs. MURRAY. Wigs by CLARKSON.

EVERY EVENING at 8 o'clock,

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

BY HENRY HAMILTON.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. A. C. BELSEY

THE AFTERNOON THEATRE.

Friday - - 14th May
Tuesday - - 18th May Thursday - - 20th May
at 2.45.

LIGHT O' LOVE.

(LIEBELEI) by ARTHUR SCHNITZLER.

Translated by G. VALENTINE WILLIAMS.

Produced by Herr MAX BEHREND.

Fritz Lobheimer - - - - -	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Hans Weiring - - - - -	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
Theodor Kaiser - - - - -	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
A Gentleman - - - - -	Mr. JAMES HEARN
Christine - - - - -	Miss MARGARET HALSTAN
Mizi Schlager - - - - -	Miss MARGARET BUSSÉ
Lina - - - - -	Miss HETTY KENYON
Katherine Binder - - - -	Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER

Act. 1.—Fritz's Chambers. Act 2.—Christine's Room.
Act 3.—Christine's Room, 2 days later.
Time: The Present.—Vienna.

THE AFTERNOON THEATRE.

"LIGHT O' LOVE."

The Play in Three Acts, by Arthur Schnitzler, entitled Liebelei, Translated by G. Valentine Williams, Produced at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, May 18.

Fritz Lobheimer .....MR. HENRY AINLEY
Hans Weiring .....MR. H. R. HIGNETT
Theodor Kaiser .....MR. CHARLES MAUDE
A Gentleman .....MR. JAMES HEARN
Christine .....MISS MARGARET HALSTAN
Mizi Schlager .....MISS MARGARET BUSSE
Lina .....MISS HETTY KENYON
Katherine Binder ....MISS SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER

Not much need be written concerning Light o' Love. It does not quite belong to the class of plays which we expect at the Afternoon Theatre, being a German domestic drama of a conventional character, with some hazy philosophy thrown in. The said philosophy emanates from the father of the seduced heroine. He is understood to advocate "free love" unions on the ground that you can only be young once, and that, while you are, it is best to "have your fling," at any rate. This doctrine appears to work badly in his daughter's case. Christine Weiring, the child of an old violinist, is carrying on a love affair with a young man of fashion name Fritz Lobheimer He is seriously enamoured of a married woman, and Christine is only his "light o' love," and is seen supping with him in company with his friend Theodor Kaiser and an audacious little grisette called Mizi Schlager. There are the usual accompaniments of a Bohemian supper, which is interrupted by the entrance of the husband, who has discovered the intrigue between Fritz and his wife, and comes to demand satisfaction. In the second act Fritz calls on Christine at her humble home, and, after a scene of amorous expansion, bids her good-bye—she does not know that he is going to fight a duel. In the last act, Kaiser comes to tell her that Fritz has been killed, and she extracts from him the truth about the married woman. "What, then, was I to him?" she cries frantically; and goes out, apparently to commit suicide, for the father, looking pensively from the window, says, "She will never come back."

SHAKESPEARE AT THE COURT.

On Monday, May 17, Shakespeare's Tragedy "HAMLET."

Claudius .....MR. KENYON MUSGRAVE
Hamlet .....MR. GERALD LAWRENCE
Polonius .....MR. STANLEY LATHBURY
Horatio .....MR. HERBERT BUNSTON
Laertes .....MR. T. A. SHANNON
Rosencrantz .....MR. DUNCAN YARROW
Guildenstern .....MR. J. CASSELS COES
Osric .....MR. WILFRED FLETCHER
Marcellus .....MR. YARROW
Bernardo .....MR. A. RAMSAY MACSETH
Francisco .....MR. GEORGE OWEN
First Player .....MR. RUSSELL THORNDIKE
Second Player .....MR. FLETCHER
Third Player .....MR. CLIFFORD LOMER
First Gravedigger .....MR. WILLIAM HAVILAND
Second Gravedigger ..MR. RUSSELL THORNDIKE
A Priest .....MR. MACSETH
Ghost of Hamlet's Father
MR. W. EDWYN HOLLOWAY
Gertrude .....MISS ESME BERINGER
Ophelia .....MISS FAY DAVIS
Player Queen .....MISS ESTELLE STEAD

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Under the Management of Mr. TOM B. DAVIS.

ON WEDNESDAY EVENING, 19TH MAY, 1909, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

THE EXPLORER

A Play in Four Acts,

BY

WILLIAM SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

Alexander Mackenzie	... ...	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Richard Lomas	... ...	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Dr. Adamson	... ...	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Sir Robert Boulger, Bart.	... ...	Mr. FREDERICK LLOYD
George Allerton	... ...	Mr. SHIEL BARRY
The Rev. James Carbery	... ...	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Captain Mallins	... ...	Mr. A. CATON WOODVILLE
Miller	... (Lady Kelsey's Butler) ...	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
Charles	... (Richard Lomas's Valet) ...	Mr. P. DIGAN
Mrs. Crowley	... ...	Miss FANNY BROUGH
Lady Kelsey	... ...	Miss GWENDOLINE FLOYD
Lucy Allerton	... ...	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY

Act I.	... ...	Lady Kelsey's House, Park Lane
Act II.	... ...	The Camp, Africa
Act III.	... ...	Lady Kelsey's House, Park Lane
Act IV.	... ...	Richard Lomas's Study, Portman Square

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

"OLD HEIDELBERG."

English Version, in Five Acts, by Rudolf Bleichmann, of Wilhelm Meyer Forster's Comedy, Alt-Heidelberg, Revived at St. James's Theatre on Monday, May 24.

Karl Heinrich .....MR. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Staatsminister von Haugk ....MR. WM. FARREN
Hofmarschall Freiherr von Passarge
MR. ACHTON PEARSE
Kammerherr von Breitenberg
MR. ALFRED A. HARRIS
Kammerherr Baron von Metzieg
MR. LESLIE PALMER
Dr. Jüttner .....MR. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Lutz .....MR. E. LYALL SWETE
Graf von Asterberg ....MR. DERMOT FITZGIBBON
Von Wedell .....MR. REGINALD OWEN
Kellermann .....MR. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Rüder .....MR. W. R. STAVELEY
Frau Rüder .....MISS HENRIETTA LEVERETT
Frau Dörffel .....MISS CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT
Käthie .....MISS EVA MOORE

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessee and Manager
MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER

TUESDAY, MAY 25th, 1909.

PRECEDED BY

ADMIRAL PETERS

An Adaptation from W. W. JACOBS' Story of that name,

By W. W. JACOBS and HORACE MILLS

George Burton ... (a Naval Pensioner) ... Mr. ARTHUR WHITBY
Joe Styles ... (an old Messmate of Burton's) Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Mrs. Dutton ... (a Widow) ... Miss MARY WEIGALL

Scene—Exterior of Burton's Cottage at Seacombe.

"ADMIRAL PETERS."

An Adaptation, in One Act, by W. W. Jacobs and Horace Mills, from Mr. Jacobs's Story of the same name, Produced at a Matinée at the Garrick Theatre on Tuesday, May 25.

George Burton .....MR. ARTHUR WHITBY
Joe Styles .....MR. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Mrs. Dutton .....MISS MARY WEIGALL

Mr. W. W. Jacobs's stories are always delightfully humorous, and the above adaptation retains all the irresistible drollery of the original narrative which is to be read in that diverting volume "Odd Craft," one of the best of Mr. Jacobs's volumes of tales of longshore life. The version was produced in front of The Arm of the Law at a matinée at the Garrick Theatre on Tuesday in aid of the Winchester Cathedral Fabric Fund. The scene, a very pretty one, is on the beach at Seacombe, near the cottage of one George Burton, a Naval pensioner. Burton is engaged to Mrs. Dutton, a comely and well-to-do widow, who has induced him to become a teetotaller. Unfortunately, Joe Styles, an old messmate of Burton's, has come to see him, with the result that George has broken the pledge, and has been seen by Mrs. Dutton dancing jigs in the public street. In order to make his peace with the widow, Burton tells her that he was "acting under orders," and presents Styles as his—Burton's—"old admiral," Peters. Styles, who is a brisk, sharp fellow, takes advantage of his fictitious rank to order Burton about imperiously, and make him march round at word of command and do the "extension motions," while he (Styles) flirts with the widow, who is greatly flattered by the "admiral's" attentions. In order to induce Styles to leave the neighbourhood and the widow, Burton has to pay him £10 and his railway fare; and when the faithless messmate has the money safely in his pocket he reveals the fact that he has a wife already.

137

Waters, J.
Plays

Mr. Arnold Bennett's play What the Public Wants, which we fully described after its production at the Aldwych Theatre on May 3, under the auspices of the Stage Society, was put on at the Royalty on Thursday evening, and had a very favourable reception. The appearance of Mr. Charles Hawtrey in the part of Sir Charles Worgan gave a lighter tone to the whole play; and the audience at the Royalty was even more readily receptive of the wit and satire of the piece than the stalwart supporters of the Society which originally presented it. A responsive peal of laughter answered each amusing line, and the evidently considered intensely funny.

As our readers are aware, the leading personage, Sir Charles Worgan, is the millionaire owner of various publications, and is ambitious of being received in literary and cultured society. He meets an old friend in an actress, the still young and pretty Mrs Vernon, who is a member of a "high art" theatre, the manager of which is a certain Holt St. John, an unpractical "producer" who is on the verge of bankruptcy. Sir Charles's dilettante brother, Francis, tells him that the only way for him to enter cultivated society is to marry a clever wife; and, as Sir Charles is charmed by Mrs. Vernon, he proposes to her, and is accepted. The trouble comes when the millionaire prepares to revive and publish in one of his papers an old scandal relating to a lady still living in his native place, Bursley, where he goes to spend his holiday. His relatives urge him to cancel the article, but he refuses—"on principle," as he puts it—until Mrs. Vernon implores him to do so for her sake. In the end, however, she realises that she and Sir Charles are too dissimilar to become man and wife, and she breaks off their engagement.

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE

Lessee, MR. TOM B. DAVIS.

Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

On THURSDAY, MAY 27th, 1909, at 8.30,

A Play in Four Acts, by

ARNOLD BENNETT,

ENTITLED

"WHAT THE PUBLIC WANTS"

Sir Charles Worgan	(Newspaper Proprietor)	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Francis Worgan	(Wanderer)	Mr. BEN WEBSTER
John Worgan	...(Provincial Doctor)	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Saul Kendrick	(Manager of Worgan's, Limited)	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Holt St. John	(Theatrical Manager)	Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Samuel Cleland	(Stage Manager)	Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
Simon Macquoid	(Dramatic Critic)	Mr. LEON M. LION
James Brindley	(Earthenware Manufacturer	Mr. CHARLES TROODE
Edward Brindley	(his Son)	Mr. PERCY GOODYER
Page Boy		Master W. JARVIS
Mrs. Worgan	(Mother of the Worgans)	Miss GWYNNE HERBERT
Annie Worgan	(Wife of John Worgan)	Miss ANNE CLEAVER
Mrs. Downes		Miss MARY BROUGH
Mrs. Cleland, "Henrietta Blackwood"		Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Servant		Miss GERTRUDE HOPE
Emily Vernon	(Widow)	Miss MARGARET HALSTAN

THE ACTION TAKES PLACE IN LONDON AND IN THE FIVE TOWNS.

ACT I.	SIR CHARLES WORGAN'S OFFICE IN THE "MERCURY" BUILDING	FOUR MONTHS ELAPSE.
ACT II.	THE SAME	FOUR MONTHS ELAPSE.
ACT III.	ROOM IN JOHN WORGAN'S HOUSE, BURSLEY	A FEW DAYS ELAPSE.
ACT IV.	SAME AS ACT I.

Scenery by W. HANN.

STAGE MANAGER ... MR. EDWARD FITZGERALD ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER ... MR. CHRISTMAS GROSE

FIRST MATINEE OF "WHAT THE PUBLIC WANTS" ON WEDNESDAY NEXT AT 2.40, AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

Box Office (Mr. C. WRIGHT) open 10 to 10.

Preceded every Evening at 8 by GEORGE PASTON'S Comedietta, entitled

"FEED THE BRUTE"

Samuel Pottle	Mr. ROBERT WHYTE, Junr.
Mrs. Pottle	Miss MARY BROUGH
Mrs. Wilks	Miss GWYNNE HERBERT

SCENE—MAWSON'S BUILDINGS, WEST HAM.

GENERAL MANAGER ... MR. LYSTON LYLE

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

THE HICKS THEATRE,

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

Manager - - - - - CHARLES FROHMAN.

MARC KLAW'S SEASON.

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, JUNE 1st, 1909, at 8.15,

FANNIE WARD

IN

"EUNICE"

A New Play in Four Acts,

By LEE ARTHUR and FORREST HALSEY.

Oviat	Mr. CHARLES CARTWRIGHT
Bruce Van Allen	Mr. JOHN W. DEAN
Clyde Townley	Mr. H. REEVES-SMITH
Howard Townley	Mr. H. NYE CHART
Merton Lyon	Mr. J. L. MACKAY
Mr. Van Allen	Mr. HARRY CANE
Jordan	Mr. LAWRENCE ROBBINS
Groves	Mr. E. F. SAXON
Mrs. Van Allen	Miss GRANVILLE
Blanche Gerry	Miss MARGARET FULLER
Blake	Miss BEATRICE GROSVENOR
Murielle	Miss MARCELLE KREUTZ
AND
Eunice	Miss FANNIE WARD

Act I.	.. .. Summer Cottage at the Seaside near New York
Act II.	Conservatory at Van Allen's House at Seaside (Joseph Harker)
Act III.	.. At Bruce Van Allen's Residence, New York (Walter Hann)
Act IV.	.. .. The Same

Miss WARD'S Dresses by LUCILLE; and others by ALLAN ET CIE., 106 New Bond Street, W.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

Pictures by HENRY GRAVES & Co., Ltd., 6 Pall Mall, S.W.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY CHARLES CARTWRIGHT.

Programme of Music.

1.	OVERTURE	"Light Cavalry"	Suppé
2.	(a) MARCH	"Salut à Vienne"	Ganne
	(b) INTERMEZZO ..	"Spoontime"	Tilsey
	(c) VALSE-BOSTON ...	"Rêve de Rosette"	H. R. Grimston
3.	SELECTION	"Old English Airs" ...	Arranged by Grimston
4.	(a) ENTR'ACTE	"En Badinant"	d'Ambrosio
	(b) CZARDAS ...	... ...	Michiels

The Pianoforte, Organ and Celesta by MUSTEL & Co., 41 Wigmore Street.

Musical Director—HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON.

General Manager for MARC KLAW ... ... FRANK JACKSON

MATINEE THURSDAY AT 2.30.

General Manager for CHARLES FROHMAN ... ... W. LESTOCQ

BOX OFFICE (G. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Business Manager for CHARLES FROHMAN ... OSCAR BARRETT, Jun

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Waters, J.
Plays

Ennice is an artist's model, who has been deserted by her father, her mother having died when she was seven years old. A callous libertine, named Clyde Townley, has seduced her under a promise of marriage and has brought her to America. Townley is living in a "summer cottage" which has been lent to him by his brother, who makes him an allowance, and has offered him a business mission to South America. Townley has made the acquaintance of Bruce Van Allen, a young man with wealthy parents, and Bruce falls in love with Eunice, whom Townley presents as his daughter. The young man invites the pair to his father's house at the seaside, and when he proposes marriage to her, and she learns from his valet, Oviat, that Townley is about to desert her, she accepts Bruce, not without misgivings.

In the third act we find them living together and the parents of a little girl of seven, of whom they are very fond. Eunice has made Bruce very happy, and she is beginning to feel secure, when Townley returns to New York. His mission has been successful, he is in funds, and his fancy for Eunice has revived. He gives her the choice between coming to supper with him at his hotel, and his forwarding her compromising letters, one by one, to her husband. Eunice goes to the hotel to plead with him; and, when he makes advances to her, kills him with a table knife.

In the last act, on the morning after the murder, she is in a state of terrible tension awaiting arrest, and she tells her husband all. He is bitterly indignant; but soon the news arrives that Oviat, who, it appears, was Eunice's father, has confessed to the crime, and then poisoned himself with morphia. Eunice is, therefore, saved; and Bruce, when he learns that she killed Townley in defence of her honour, forgives her and takes her to his arms.

MR HERBERT SLEATH'S SEASON

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2ND, 1909, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

THE WOMAN IN THE CASE

A Play in Four Acts,

By CLYDE FITCH.

Julian Rolfe	Mr. HERBERT SLEATH
Thompson	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Jimmy O'Neil	Mr. FRANK TENNANT
Louis Klauffsky	Mr. E. DAGNALL
Walters	Mr. CECIL YAPP
Inspector Williams	Mr. HENRY HARE
1st Attendant	Mr. HAROLD RICHARDSON
2nd Attendant	Mr. FRANK MAYO
Margaret Rolfe	Miss GRACE LANE
Mrs. Hughes	Miss KATE SERJEANTSON
Elsie Brewster	Miss EVA KILLICK
Dora Miller	Miss ENID SASS
Louise Mane	Miss CICELY GRAY
AND
Claire Forster	Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH

The Action of the Play passes in New York.

Act I.	...	Drawing Room in Julian Rolfe's House, 5th Avenue
Act II.	... ...	... Visitors' Room at the Tombs Prison
Act III.	... ...	Margaret's Flat in West 52nd Street
Act IV.	... ...	Mrs. Rolfe's Bedroom in 5th Avenue

The Play produced by Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH.

GARRICK
THEATRE

DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, BELFAST, &c.

2/6/09

Orch. Stall

Row K

No E

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

BUSINESS MANAGER ... } for Mr. Herbert Sleath { ... Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM
STAGE MANAGER ... } { ... Mr. MARTIN HENRY

The Box Office (Mr. A. R. BRITTEN) is open daily from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone 3933 Gerrard.

BUSINESS MANAGER ... ... } { ... Mr. THOMAS STEVENS
STAGE MANAGER ... ... } For { ... Mr. ALEXANDER STUART
MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... ... } Mr. Bourchier { ... Mr. EDMOND RICKETT
ACTING MANAGER ... Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY

Mr. Clyde Fitch is a very prolific playwright, and has written dozens of dramas which have been performed with success in the United States. In England he is best known by Mr. Beerbohm Tree's production of The Last of the Dandies and Mr. Cyril Maude's presentation of Taddles. The Woman in the Case, which was produced in America in 1904, is an effectively sensational domestic drama, good of its kind, simple in idea and construction, thrilling in the excitement of risk and uncertainty, and liberally supplied with affectionate sentiment. It also introduces a quaint picture of a certain side of New York life; and it has a capital part for a clever character actress.

Before the action commences a mystery has arisen concerning the death of a young man named Philip Long, who has been found in his room shot through the head. All that is known is that his friend, Julian Rolfe, made Philip promise not to ruin his life by marrying a worthless and vulgar creature named Claire Forster, of whom for a short period of folly Rolfe was himself enamoured. He is now most happily married to a charming girl, who is devotedly attached to him. While Margaret is singing to her husband at their home in Fifth-avenue, an Inspector of Police arrives with an order for Julian's arrest for the murder of Long, and Rolfe is removed after a harrowing scene of distress.

The second act takes place in the Tombs prison, New York, where Rolfe's solicitor, Thompson, tells him that he is in a very dangerous position, as Claire Forster is determined that he shall be convicted, and has offered certain evidence which is likely to injure him, though he is entirely innocent. When the prisoner has been removed Claire is announced, and Margaret hides behind the door of the room. Claire is an insolent, dissipated catin, and defiantly announces her intention of getting Rolfe convicted in revenge for his having prevented Long from marrying her. When the demi-mondaine has departed, Margaret declares that she will, at all costs, worm herself into Claire's confidence and extract from her the truth about Long's death. She does this in the third act, where the "great scene" of the play occurs. Margaret has taken a flat, under an assumed name of course, in the same block of buildings in which Claire lives, has struck up an acquaintance with her, and has become her friend. In order to do this, Margaret has been obliged to assume the manner and accent of a demi-mondaine, and smoke and drink with Claire and her "protector," Louis Klauffsky, a vulgar little Jew. Claire obstinately avoids the subject of Long's death, till, on the eve of the trial, Margaret, in a thrilling and tantalising scene, succeeds in inducing her to unbosom herself. Then Claire, half-drunk, describes how Long shot himself after giving his promise to Rolfe; and, as Margaret has taken care to have a couple of witnesses concealed in an adjoining room, her husband's innocence is established, greatly to her joy. The last act simply concludes the play.

Preceded at 8.15 by an Episode, called

"THE CHAUFFEUR"

Adapted from the French of MAX MAUREY by GASTON MAYER.

MR. BAXTER	Mr. HENRY KEITS
MR. CRAWLEY	Mr. PETER BLUNT
ALGERNON STUBBS	Mr. A. HOLMES-GORE
ROBINSON	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
FRANCES	Mr. LANE CRAUFORD
MRS. BAXTER	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS

SCENE ... THE OUTSIDE OF THE BAXTERS' BARN. Bruce Smith

The following Programme of Music will be played during the evening:

MARCH	"Wien bleibt wien" - Schrammel	SCENES PITTORESQUES	"Air de Ballet" - Massenet
CAPRICCIO ITALIEN	Tschaikowsky		"Fete Boheme" - Massenet
SELECTION	"Sylvia Ballet" - Delibes

Matinee of both Plays Every Wednesday at 2.15

Stage Manager - Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
Musical Director - Mr. JOHN ANSELL

Opera Glasses, by Negretti & Zambra, can be hired from the Attendants at a charge of 6d. for the performance.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Management, and all Wines and Spirits are of the best quality. Ices by the Horton Ice Cream Co.

No charge is made for the use of the Cloak Rooms, and no Gratuities are allowed.

Cigars of the best brands can be obtained in the Vestibule after the performance.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the Audience by kindly removing their Hats.

Toilet Table appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's, Ltd.

Box Office Open 10 to 10 under the direction of Mr. H. C. HOOPER.

Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £1 4s. Stalls, 10/6 Balcony Stalls, 7/6 Balcony, 5/- Upper Boxes, 2/6 Gallery, 1/-
All Seats, including Gallery, can be booked.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. (1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

GENERAL MANAGER - Mr. ALFRED TURNER

1435
Waters, J.
1909
Plays
143
141
R7

To-night, Thursday, June 3rd, 1909, at 8.45

Will be presented, for the First Time, a Florentine Farce of the 16th Century, called

"A MERRY DEVIL"

By JAMES BERNARD FAGAN.

SIR PHILLIP LILLEY		Mr. C. AUBREY SMITH
COUNT SILVIO SPINI	(A Poet)	Mr. A. HOLMES-GORE
CAPTAIN BAMBAZONE		Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
MESSER MARCO RICCI	(Geralda's Uncle)	Mr. SYDNEY PAXTON
MESSER LORENZO SIRBOLLI	(Secretary to the Eight)	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
AMBROGIO	(A Steward)	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
A DOCTOR		Mr. PETER BLUNT
NARDO		Mr. EDWARD SOUTTS
CARLO		Mr. LANE CRAUFORD
TONIO	Servants	Mr. CHAS. HAMPDEN
BALDASSARE		Mr. F. PERCIVAL
CECHINO		Mr. A. EVERETT
GUARD		Mr. M. A. WETHERELL
CHERUBINO		Master HAROLD EVERETT
SERAFINO		Master BOBBIE ANDREWS
MADONNA CASSANDRA DEI TASSINARI		Miss JESSIE BATEMAN
SEMIRAMIS	(An Egyptian Slave)	Miss ADELINE BOURNE
MADONNA GERALDA CAPPONI		Miss WINIFRED EMERY

HUNTSMEN, BEATERS, SOLDIERS, ETC.

ACT I.	GARDENS OF THE CAPPONI PALACE.	(Afternoon)	Joseph Harker
ACT II.	LOGGIA OF THE SAME	(Night)	" "
ACT III.	A ROOM IN THE SAME	(Next Morning)	Bruce Smith

Cherubino's Songs specially composed by ROGER QUILTER. [illegible] by JOHN ANSELL.

Costumes by L. and H. NATHAN, 17, Coventry Street, W., from designs by EXLI.
Ladies' Costumes by Messrs. NEILLESHIP & Co., 27, Wigmore Street, W.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture [illegible] OETZMANN & Co.

"A MERRY DEVIL."

A Florentine Farce of the Sixteenth Century, by James Bernard Fagan, Produced at the Playhouse on Thursday, June 3.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Mr. Bernard Fagan, the poetical author of The Prayer of the Sword, has turned his attention to comedy, and has written for Mr. Cyril Maude a piece which supplies him and Miss Winifred Emery with many excellent opportunities. The story of the conquest of a spoiled and unruly beauty by a masterful lover is told once more, very pleasantly and piquantly and in choice English. The lady, Geralda Capponi, is rich, beautiful, admired, and wilful. At the beginning of the play we see her, on her return from hunting the bear, pestered by the attentions of a silly poet, a certain ridiculous Captain Bambazone, a greedy and corpulent braggart, who presses his suit on her eagerly and absurdly. Geralda is a merry coquette, and has been drawing on by her wiles a blunt Englishman, Sir Phillip Lilley, who is deeply in love with her. She sends him on a fool's errand to fight a man who has long been dead, and laughs in his face when he returns. Offended by his reprehension of the Italian practice of poisoning, she determines to make him still further ridiculous; and, by telling him that she has poisoned Bambazone, induces him to drag out into the garden, and begin to bury, the corpse of a bear which she has killed. The officers of justice arrive to search for the body, and find Lilley interring the pig, and there is much merriment at the Englishman's expense. Scorned and derided by Geralda, he runs after her into the house, and gives her a good whipping.

In the last act the lady smarts under her humiliation, and encourages Captain Bambazone to arrange a reprisal. He entices Lilley into a room in the Palace, has him overpowered and bound by servants, and hands Geralda a riding whip to revenge herself with. Lilley maintains his manly attitude, and Geralda, who realises that she has found her master, soon yields to her affection for him; and the lovers are united.

"THE CHAUFFEUR."

Mr. Baxter .....MR. HENRY KITTS
Mr. Crawley .....MR. PETER BLUNT
Algernon Stubbs .....MR. A. HOLMES-GORE
Robinson .....MR. JOHN HARWOOD
Frances .....MR. LANE CRAUFORD
Mrs. Baxter .....MISS EMMA CHAMBERS

The technicalities of motoring were exploited for humorous purposes in this farcical sketch, in which a gardener named Stubbs, who has made a mistake as to the nature of the situation which Mr. and Mrs. Baxter have advertised, pretends to be a chauffeur, though he knows nothing of motors or machinery. His blunders and excuses create much merriment, and finally he is engaged by a certain Mr. Crawley, who, having suffered from many knowing and imperious chauffeurs, jumps at the chance of getting an ignorant and submissive one.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Mr. Bernard Fagan, the poetical author of The Prayer of the Sword, has turned his attention to comedy, and has written for Mr. Cyril Maude a piece which supplies him and Miss Winifred Emery with many excellent opportunities. The story of the conquest of a spoiled and unruly beauty by a masterful lover is told once more, very pleasantly and piquantly and in choice English. The lady, Geralda Capponi, is rich, beautiful, admired, and wilful. At the beginning of the play we see her, on her return from hunting the boar, pestered by the attentions of a silly poet, a certain ridiculous Captain Bambazone, a greedy and corpulent braggart, who presses his suit on her eagerly and absurdly. Geralda is a merry coquette, and has been drawing on by her wiles a blunt Englishman, Sir Phillip Lilley, who is deeply in love with her. She sends him on a fool's errand to fight a man who has long been dead, and laughs in his face when he returns. Offended by his reprehension of the Italian practice of poisoning, she determines to make him still further ridiculous; and, by telling him that she has poisoned Bambazone, induces him to drag out into the garden, and begin to bury, the corpse of a boar which she has killed. The officers of justice arrive to search for the body, and find Lilley interring the pig, and there is much merriment at the Englishman's expense. Scorned and derided by Geralda, he runs after her into the house, and gives her a good whipping.

In the last act the lady smarts under her humiliation, and encourages Captain Bambazone to arrange a reprisal. He entices Lilley into a room in the Palace, has him overpowered and bound by servants, and hands Geralda a riding whip to revenge herself with. Lilley maintains his manly attitude, and Geralda, who realises that she has found her master, soon yields to her affection for him; and the lovers are united.

"THE CHAUFFEUR."

Mr. Baxter .....Mr. Henry Kitts
Mr. Crawley .....Mr. Peter Blunt
Algernon Stubbs .....Mr. A. Holmes-Gore
Robinson .....Mr. John Harwood
Frances .....Mr. Lane Crauford
Mrs. Baxter .....Miss Emma Chambers

The technicalities of motoring were exploited for humorous purposes in this farcical sketch, in which a gardener named Stubbs, who has made a mistake as to the nature of the situation which Mr. and Mrs. Baxter have advertised, pretends to be a chauffeur, though he knows nothing of motors or machinery. His blunders and excuses create much merriment, and finally he is engaged by a certain Mr. Crawley, who, having suffered from many knowing and imperious chauffeurs, jumps at the chance of getting an ignorant and submissive one.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE,

SOLE PROPRIETOR, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

THE AFTER NOON THEATRE.

Friday - -	4th June	Thursday - -	10th June
Tuesday - -	8th June	Friday - -	11th June

at 2.30.

ADMIRAL GUINEA

A Drama in Four Acts, by

W. E. HENLEY and ROBERT LOUIS STEPHENSON.

Produced by Mr. NORMAN PAGE.

John Gaunt	called "Admiral Guinea," once Captain of the Slaver "Arethusa"	Mr. EDWARD SASS
Arethusa Gaunt - - - -	(his Daughter) - - -	Miss AMY LAMBORN
David Pew -	(a Blind Beggar, once Boatswain of the "Arethusa")	Mr. JAMES HEARN
Kit French - - - - -	(a Privateersman) - - -	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Mrs. Drake - - -	(Landlady of the "Admiral Benbow" Inn) -	Miss AGNES THOMAS

Acts 1, 3, and 4—A Room in Admiral Guinea's House.

Act 2—The Parlour of the "Admiral Benbow" Inn.

The Scene is laid in the neighbourhood of Barnstaple.

The Time is about the year 1760.

The Action occupies part of a day and night.

THE DRYAD

A Pastoral Fantasy,

Composed by DORA BRIGHT.

The Dryad - - - - - - - - - - - -	MLLE. ADELINE GENÉE
A Shepherd - - - - - - - - - - - -	Mr. GORDON CLEATHER

These will be Mlle. Genée's only London appearances this Season.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL COURT THEATRE,

SLOANE SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.

Proprietor—Mr. J. H. Leigh.

IRISH PLAYS

From

THE ABBEY THEATRE, DUBLIN.

(Lessee—Miss A. E. F. Horniman).

MONDAY, 7th June, at 8.30.	DERVORGILLA, by Lady Gregory. THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD by J. M. Synge.
TUESDAY, 8th June, at 8.30.	KATHLEEN NI HOULIHAN, by W. B. Yeats. THE WELL OF THE SAINTS, by J. M. Synge. THE WORKHOUSE WARD, by Lady Gregory.
WEDNESDAY 9th June, at 2.30.	DERVORGILLA, by Lady Gregory. THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD by J. M. Synge.
WEDNESDAY 9th June, at 8.30.	IN THE SHADOW OF THE GLEN, by J. M. Synge. AN IMAGINARY CONVERSATION, by Norreys Connell. RIDERS TO THE SEA, by J. M. Synge. HYACINTH HALVEY, by Lady Gregory.
THURSDAY, 10th June, at 8.30.	DERVORGILLA, by Lady Gregory. THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD by J. M. Synge.
FRIDAY, 11th June, at 8.30.	KATHLEEN NI HOULIHAN, by W. B. Yeats. THE WELL OF THE SAINTS, by J. M. Synge. THE WORKHOUSE WARD, by Lady Gregory.
SATURDAY, 12th June, at 2.30.	AN IMAGINARY CONVERSATION, by Norreys Connell. THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD by J. M. Synge.
SATURDAY, 12th June, at 8.30.	IN THE SHADOW OF THE GLEN, by J. M. Synge. AN IMAGINARY CONVERSATION, by Norreys Connell. RIDERS TO THE SEA, by J. M. Synge. HYACINTH HALVEY, by Lady Gregory.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessee and Manager
MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER

EVERY EVENING AT 9,

THE WOMAN IN THE CASE

A Play in Four Acts,

By CLYDE FITCH.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

ADMIRAL PETERS

An Adaptation from W. W. JACOBS' Story of that name,
By W. W. JACOBS and HORACE MILLS.

George Burton	... (a Naval Pensioner) ...	Mr. CECIL YAPP
Joe Styles ...	(an old Messmate of Burton's)	Mr. HENRY HARE
Mrs. Dutton	... (a Widow) ...	Miss MARY WEIGALL

Scene—Exterior of Burton's Cottage at Seacombe.

"PETER'S MOTHER."

Revival of the Comedy, in Three Acts, by Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, at the Haymarket Theatre, on Tuesday, June 8.

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, JUNE 8TH, 1909, AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 9, FREDERICK HARRISON and OTHO STUART

PRESENT

PETER'S MOTHER

A Comedy in Three Acts,

By Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE.

Sir Timothy Crewys	(of Barracombe House, Devon)		Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE
Lady Mary Crewys ...	(his wife)	...	Miss MARION TERRY
Peter	(his son)	...	Mr. A. E. MATTHEWS
Lady Belstone ...	(his widowed sister)	...	Miss DOLORES DRUMMOND
Miss Georgina Crewys	(his spinster sister)	...	Miss ALICE BEET
John Crewys, Q.C. ...	(his cousin)	...	Mr. FREDERICK KERR
Canon Birch ...	(Rector of the Parish)	...	Mr. ARTHUR WHITBY
Doctor Blundell ...	(a country doctor)	...	Mr. ALFRED BUCKLAW
Mrs. Hewell ...	(a country neighbour)	...	Miss HILDA THORPE
Sarah	(her daughter)	...	Miss GILLIAN SCAIFE
Ash	... ...	...	Mr. EYRE
Footman ...	... ...	...	Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON

Act I. .. The Hall at Barracombe House, Devon. (Afternoon in February, 1900)
Act II. .. The Same .. .. (Two years and four months have elapsed) Act III. .. The Garden of Barracombe House .. (Three months have elapsed) 1909

Waters, J.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

CHIPS

A Comedy in One Act by LECHMERE WORRALL.

George Merrick ...	...	(a Barrister) ...	Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
Molly ...	...	(his wife) ...	Miss GWENDOLEN LOGAN
Chips ...	...	(a waif) ...	Miss IRIS HAWKINS

Scene—The Drawing Room at the Merrick's Seaside Bungalow.

Programme of Music

Musical Director, Mr. CLAUDE FENN-LEYLAND.

OVERTURE	"Le Caid"	Thomas
SELECTION	"Songs Without Words"	Mendelssohn
SUITE	... "L'Arlesienne"	Bizet
THREE BAVARIAN DANCES	... ...	Elgar

Grand Pianoforte by CRAMER, 126 Oxford Street.

Stage Manager	... Mr REGINALD EYRE
Acting Manager	... Mr. A. SMYTH-PIGOTT

Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 3.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Box Office (Mr. W. H. LEVERTON) IS open daily from 10 to 10

Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £4 4s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 5s.; Upper Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Telephone 3344 Gerrard

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain

1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Lessee & Manager .. .. .. Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON

Business Manager .. .. Mr. HORACE WATSON

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 15th, AT 2.30,

THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE

A Play in Three Acts,

By CHARLES FREDERICK NIRDLINGER.

Adapted from "El Gran Galeoto," by JOSÉ ECHEGARAY.

Don Ernesto ..	.. .. ..	Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
Don Julian ..	.. .. ..	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Don Severo ..	(his Brother) ..	Mr. GEORGE COOKE
Capt. Beaulieu ..	(of the British Embassy) ..	Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Pepito	(Don Severo's Son) ..	Mr. PERCY FOSTER
Genaro	(an Innkeeper) ..	Mr. HERBERT DANSEY
Servants of Don Julian	.. .. ..	Mr. E. COMBERBACH Mr. R. NEVILLE
A Surgeon ..	.. .. ..	Mr. W. ABBEY
Donna Teodora ..	(Wife of Don Julian) ..	Miss N. DE SILVA
Donna Mercedes ..	(Wife of Don Severo) ..	Miss MARY RORKE

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

Act I. ... Drawing Room in Don Julian's House. Madrid (George J. Dodson)
Act II. ...Don Ernesto's Lodgings in a small Hotel. Madrid (George J. Dodson) Act III.... Drawing Room in Don Julian's House

Miss N. de Silva's and Miss Mary Rorke's Dresses by REDFERN, Ltd.

CHAPPELL GRAND PIANOFORTE.

Acts I. and III. designed and furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	First Movement of Suite	Tschaikowsky
SELECTION	Second and Third Movements of Suite ...	Tschaikowsky
SELECTION	... { Melody ... ... Valse	Grieg Brahms

Business Manager	Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL
Stage Manager	Mr. ALFRED RIVERS
Musical Director	Mr. NORMAN O'NEILL

The Stage under the direction of Mr. H. J. LOVEDAY.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

DALY'S THEATRE

By command of the Lord Chamberlain, the proscenium safety curtain is lowered daily in the presence of the audience, about the middle of the performance, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order.

Every Evening at 8.15. Matinee, Saturdays at 2.30.

TUESDAY, JUNE 8th, 1909.

Second Anniversary Performance.

PRODUCED BY Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

THE MERRY WIDOW

"DIE LUSTIGE WITWE."

By VICTOR LEON and LEO STEIN.
Music by FRANZ LEHAR.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS.

ACT I.—The Marsovian Embassy in Paris... ... ALFRED TERRAINE.
ACT II.—Grounds of Sonia's House near Paris ... JOSEPH HARKER.
ACT III.—Maxim's Restaurant, Paris

Stage Director ... ... Mr. J. A. E. MALONE.

Musical Director... ... ... Mr. HAROLD VICARS.
The Dances arranged by Mr. FRED FARREN.

The Music of the Opera published by Messrs. CHAPPELL.
50, New Bond Street.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. W. ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.

Private Boxes £2 12s. 0d. to £5 5s. : Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. ; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 0d. ; Upper Circle (Front Row), 5s. ; Other Rows, 4s. ; (Unreserved) Pit, 2s. 0d. ; Gallery, 1s.

Cast of the Play.

VICOMTE CAMILLE DE JOLIDON ...	...	Mr. ROBERT EVETT
MARQUIS DE CASCADA	...	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
GENERAL NOVIKOVICH (Military Attache)	...	Mr. FRED KAYE
M. DE ST. BRIOCHE	...	Mr. BASIL S. FOSTER
M. KHADJA (Counsellor of Legation)	...	Mr V. O'CONNOR
NISCH ... (Messenger to the Legation)	...	Mr. W. H. BERRY
WAITER AT MAXIM'S	...	Mr. RALPH ROBERTS
GEORGIE ... (An habitue of Maxim's)	...	Mr. GEORGIE MAHRER

AND

PRINCE DANILO (Secretary of Legation) Mr. JOSEPH COYNE	BARON POPOFF (Marsovian Ambassador in Paris) Mr. J. F. MCARDLE

NATALIE	(Wife of Popoff) ...	Miss MARY GREY
FROU-FROU		Miss GABRIELLE RAY
ZO-ZO		Miss MABEL MUNRO
MARGOT		Miss M. SEYMOUR
JOU-JOU	(Girls at Maxim's)	Miss DORA FRASER
DO-DO		Miss WANDA LOTTERS
LO-LO		Miss PHYLLYS LE GRAND
TO-TO		Miss DOLLY DOMBEY
FI-FI		Miss MAY HOBSON
SYLVAINE ...	(Wife of Khadja) ...	Miss GERTRUDE GLYN
OLGA	(Wife of Novikovich) ...	Miss IRENE DESMOND
PRASKOVIA	...	Miss KATE WELCH

AND

SONIA ...	(The Merry Widow) ...	Miss LILY ELSIE

MANIA FOR A PLAY.

WORSHIPPERS OF "THE MERRY WIDOW."

"The Merry Widow" celebrates the second anniversary of its unbroken run at Daly's Theatre this evening, and in a few weeks this piece, which set a fashion in hats and created a craze for a waltz, will bid good-bye to London.

Only those employed in Daly's Theatre can realise the infatuation that this musical play exercised. Every Saturday night during the first twelve months of the run a very considerable section of both gallery and pit was occupied by the same people. These were the people who protested angrily against Mr. Edwardes making any changes in the play, who interrupted the performance when he introduced a player into it who had no part on the first night, and who waited as a deputation on Mr. Edwardes and informed him that they would cease their demonstrations if he would promise to make no further changes.

DIARY OF 100 VISITS.

One feminine patron of the gallery sent in last week to the manager her diary of over a hundred visits to "The Merry Widow." It gives the number of each visit, date, who was with her, and some brief remark, in this manner:

Visit.		Remarks.
32.	Mar. 5, 1908.	With Chris—she sees Lily for the first time.
36.	April 20, 1908.	Alone Berry's last night. House full. Admitted me.
42.	Aug. 7, 1908.	Alone. The eve of Joe's departure.
45.	Aug. 14, 1908.	I took in a recruit—Miss Morris.
52.	Oct. 3, 1908.	With Nellie, Dot, etc. Noisy crew.
62.	Dec. 5, 1908.	3rd person in. Joe's return. What a night!!!
76.	Jan. 16, 1909.	Alone. Lily new dress (grey) in' Act 1.
91.	Mar. 22, 1909.	Mrs. T. Freda, Blackwells, Thonet, 2 Blakes, Fletcher. Return of our Lily and Evett.
95.	April 3, 1909.	Alone. No Friends present.
98.	April 19, 1909.	With Alice B. More Lily. New hat, cloak, dress (red and purple) 3rd Act.

Thus it goes, five large sheets of typewritten matter about one play that she evidently knows by heart and continues to go to week after week.

"THE MERRY WIDOW."

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—When my English version of "The Merry Widow" was first produced at Daly's Theatre in June 1907 I was obliged to write to the Press to defend my work against an announcement which was made to the effect that the adaptation then presented had been written by Mr. Edward Morton, the dramatic critic of the Referee.

I explained at the time that I had been aware that Mr. Morton had previously prepared a version which, for reasons I was not concerned with, it was not considered possible to use; and that when Mr. George Edwardes commissioned me to do the work I suggested to him that it would be a kindly action to present the adaptation anonymously, so that Mr. Morton might be spared unnecessary pain and embarrassment; for Mr. Morton had during many months advertised the fact in the Referee that he had prepared the adaptation of the play.

My reward for this well-meant proposal was a claim publicly made by Mr. Morton to be accepted as the writer of the work which was mine, and he reiterated this claim in an interview accorded to him by your paper, thereby causing me very great annoyance; but you courteously allowed me to answer his statements and suggestions in a plain record of the facts, which he did not afterwards dispute.

This week, however, in the Referee the following words appear in a paragraph referring to the run of "The Merry Widow":—

> Its score is now six hundred and seventy-two not out; and its staying power, apparently, is not yet exhausted, though the end must come next Saturday. It is in no unfriendly spirit, I promise you, towards the gentle author—who (by the name of Mordred) is not unknown to the readers of the Referee—that I wish him no better luck next time.

Mr. Edward Morton is, I believe, "Mordred" of the Referee. And I beg you to allow me again, in justice to myself, plainly and emphatically to state the truth that the English version of "The Merry Widow" known to the public was prepared by me and not by "Mordred" of the Referee or anyone else.

BASIL HOOD.

94, Piccadilly, W.

D. M. July 28 1909

"THE MERRY WIDOW."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE REFEREE."

SIR,—In last week's issue of the REFEREE the following words appeared in a paragraph referring to the run of "The Merry Widow":

> Its score is now six hundred and seventy-two not out; and its staying power, apparently, is not yet exhausted, though the end must come next Saturday. It is in no unfriendly spirit, I promise you, towards the gentle author, who (by the name of MORDRED) is not unknown to the readers of the REFEREE, that I wish him no better luck next time.

When my version of "The Merry Widow" was first produced at Daly's Theatre in June, 1907, I was obliged to write to the Press to defend my work against an announcement which was made to the effect that the adaptation had been written by Mr. Edward Morton.

I explained at the time that I had been aware that Mr. Morton had previously prepared a version which, for reasons I was not concerned with, was not used, and that when Mr. George Edwardes commissioned me to do the work I had agreed that the adaptation should be presented anonymously.

Mr. Edward Morton is, I believe, MORDRED of the REFEREE. And I beg you to allow me again, in justice to myself, plainly and emphatically to state the truth that the English version of "The Merry Widow" known to the public was prepared by me, and not by MORDRED of the REFEREE or anyone else.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

94, Piccadilly, W., July 28, 1909. BASIL HOOD.

[. We apologise to Captain Basil Hood for the error into which CARADOS had momentarily fallen and regret if Captain Hood has been caused any inconvenience by it. The length of time which has elapsed since "The Merry Widow" started on its successful career is CARADOS'S excuse for temporary forgetfulness of an early controversy regarding its authorship. In justice to Captain Hood we are pleased to give full publicity to his statement that he is the author of the English version of "The Merry Widow" as played at Daly's Theatre.—EDITOR.]

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

"THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE."

Play, in Three Acts, Adapted by Charles Frederick Nirdlinger from José Echegaray's El Gran Galeoto, Produced at the Adelphi Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, June 15.

Don Ernesto .....Mr. Martin Harvey
Don Julian .....Mr. Henry Ainley
Don Severo .....Mr. George Cooke
Captain Beaulieu .....Mr. Ben Webster
Pepito .....Mr. Percy Foster
Genaro .....Mr. Herbert Dansey
Servants { .....Mr. E. Comberbach
.....Mr. R. Neville
A Surgeon .....Mr. W. Abbey
Donna Teodora .....Miss N. de Silva
Donna Mercedes .....Miss Mary Rorke

Mr. Martin Harvey is always presenting us with some production which is at once enterprising and artistic; and Mr. Nirdlinger's adaptation of Echegaray's El Gran Galeoto, which was performed at the Adelphi on Tuesday afternoon, certainly answers to the description. The version differs from that by Mr. Malcolm Watson, which was produced at a matinée at the Shaftesbury Theatre in the April of 1889, with Mrs. Lancaster Wallis, Mr. Farren, and Mr. Fred Terry in the cast, in that the locale and the nationality of the characters are retained. Echegaray is one of the most interesting dramatists of our day. It is not often that a playwright is also a Minister of Finance, a Professor of Mathematics, a member of an Academy of Sciences, and a Minister of Commerce and Education; and that with all these occupations he finds time to write over fifty plays. El Gran Galeoto is essentially Echegarian.

The World and His Wife is a fine example of constructive ability as applied to a tragic theme. The dénouement appears to be evolved quite naturally from the elements at the outset, yet, on closer analysis, the impression of inevitability is seen to have been created by the consummate skill of a practised playwright. The piece is a sermon on the importance of studying appearances. The trio of husband, wife, and friend is, when the action opens, an entirely happy and innocent one. Don Julian and his wife Teodora, important personages in Madrid society, are both beloved by Don Ernesto, a young man for whom Julian is endeavouring to obtain a diplomatic appointment. Ernesto's father exposed the rogueries of a rascally army contractor called Olivares, and the latter is on the look-out for revenge. Unfortunately, in their innocence, Ernesto and Teodora have given spiteful scandal its opportunity; and the resultant situation is clearly defined by Don Julian's brother Severo. The Spanish Foreign Office has actually refused to give Ernesto the post on account of the "town talk" about the relations between him and Teodora. Ernesto wants to go away; but Julian considers this would be an acknowledgment of the truth of the slander, and insists on his remaining. Yet even into Julian's mind suspicions begin to intrude; and these are turned into beliefs by a series of unfortunate events. Ernesto is on the eve of leaving Spain when, on going to a certain café to arrange about his passage, he hears Teodora insulted by Olivares, and strikes him in the face. A duel is immediately arranged; but before Ernesto can meet Olivares, Julian, who hears of the affair, urges a prior claim, and is severely wounded in the combat which ensues. Teodora has most imprudently written to Ernesto a perfectly innocent letter, which her husband has found at Ernesto's hotel, but has refrained from opening; and she comes at a most critical moment to beg Ernesto not to fight. While they are talking, a knocking comes at the door. Severo and Julian's seconds are carrying him in—the duel took place in a large studio adjoining the hotel. Teodora runs into Ernesto's bedroom; and Julian is borne in half-dead. He demands to see his wife; and Teodora rushes out from her concealment, thus confirming Julian's suspicions.

After this there is no hope for the victims of malice and misunderstanding. Julian at first refuses to see his wife; but when she and Ernesto demand to be heard in their defence, the wretched man staggers out, and after a fierce denunciation, strikes Ernesto in the face. Julian then returns to his bed and dies. The triumph of calumny appears to be complete; but Ernesto turns upon his foes. Hitherto, he says, there has been not the smallest love between him and Teodora. Now that it has been settled that they are lovers, lovers they will be. And so he wraps the weeping woman in his cloak, and leads her out protectively.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Tuesday, June 15th, 1909, and Every Evening at 8.30,

THE FIRES OF FATE

A Modern Morality Play in Four Acts, by

ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

Colonel Cyril Egerton, D.S.O.	(53rd Bengal Lancers)	Mr. Lewis Waller
The Rev. Samuel Roden	... ...	... Mr. A. E. George
	(Minister of Clayview Congregational Church, Hackney)
James Roden, M.D., F.R.C.S....	...	... Mr. J. Fisher White
Mr. Thomas Belmont	(of Dublin)	... Mr. Frederick Lloyd
Mr. Cecil Brown ...	(of London)	... Mr. Evelyn Beerbohm (By arrangement with Mr. George Edwardes)
Mr. Brodie	(of Edinburgh)	... Mr. Alec F. Thompson
Mons. Octave Fardet...	(of Paris).	... Mr. Michael Sherbrooke
Rudkin	(Dr. Roden's Butler)	... Mr. Herbert Vyvyan
Abdulla	(a Dragoman)	... Mr. Shiel Barry
Captain Jack Archer ...	Bimbashi, Egyptian Camel Corps	Mr. Charles Maude
Sidi Mohamed ...	(a Dervish Spy)	... Mr. W. Cronin-Wilson
Ali Wad Ibrahim ...	(an Arab Chief)	... Mr. Frank Woolfe
Abdurrahman ...	(, do.)	... Mr. Henry Stevens
Mrs. Belmont ...	... ...	... Miss Auriol Lee
Miss Adams ...	of Massachusetts, U.S.A.	Miss Agnes Thomas
Miss Sadie Adams ...		Miss Evelyn D'Alroy

Soudanese Soldiers, Negroes, Arabs, &c.

Time - - - - - The Winter of 1894.

LYRIC
THEATRE.

15/6/1909

Orchestra
Stall.

E19

TeBeL Electric Press Paddington Green, W.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Act I. ... ... Dr. Roden's Consulting Room

Act II. ... ... A Tourist Steamer on the Nile

Act III. ... ... The Abousir Rock

Act IV. ... ... The Oasis of Abouteb

(The Curtain will be lowered for 30 seconds during Act IV. to mark lapse of time.)

There will be Intervals of 10 minutes between the Acts.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE ... ... "Light Cavalry" ... ... Suppé

After Act I.

BALLET EGYPTIEN ... ... Luigini

After Act II.

a. DANSE ARABE
b. VALSE DES FLEURS } from the "Casse-Noisette" Suite ... ... Tschaikowsky

After Act III.

a. CHŒUR DES DERVICHES ... ... Gabriel Sebek
b. MARCHE INDIENNE ... ... Sclenik

STAGE MANAGER ... ... MR. CHARLES LA TROBE

MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... ... MR. LEONARD CHALK

Scenery by R. C. McCLEERY and BRUCE SMITH.

Costumes by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN. Ladies' Dresses by Mrs. MURRAY.

Furniture by OETZMANN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

FIRST [illegible] SATURDAY NEXT AT 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 8. Commence at 8.30. Carriages at 11.

Matinee Doors open at 2 p.m.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... MR. A. C. BELSEY.

"The Tragedy of the Korosko" is in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's second manner. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" was published in 1891; the Nile excursion story came out in 1898, after "The Exploits of Brigadier Gerard," "Rodney Stone," and "Uncle Bernac." The author has given to "The Tragedy of the Korosko," a tale of suffering and adventure, a high moral significance and a central interest, and has called his adaptation a "modern morality play." It preaches an elevated spiritual doctrine in a most telling and impressive manner, and with effective and extraordinary realism. We doubt if truth to domestic detail has ever been carried further than in the first act of Fires of Fate. We are shown the consulting-room of a London physician, Dr. Roden, a stern, sarcastic agnostic, who is about to take a holiday on the Upper Nile with his brother, a Congregational minister and an enthusiastic Christian. Colonel Cyril Egerton, who has spent most of his life in India, comes to consult the doctor about certain alarming symptoms. After examining his patient carefully, Dr. Roden tells him that he has, at the most, a year to live; he is suffering from a progressive disease of the nerves, which must end in paralysis and death. The complaint is incurable; at least, there is only one case on record that did not end fatally—that of a man who was cured by a shock which was sustained by him in a terrible railway accident. Egerton's first impulse is to commit suicide, but the Rev. Samuel Roden appeals so strongly to his sense of duty that he promises not to take his own life, and to accompany the brothers on their Nile trip.

The next scene is a very realistic set, representing the deck of a Nile boat, with the river and the desert in the background. On board besides the brothers Roden and the Colonel is a beautiful young girl, Miss Sadie Adams, who is chaperoned by a relative from Massachusetts. Egerton falls in love with her; but he is reminded by the Rev. Samuel that he—the Colonel—in his condition, has no right to seek the affections of any young woman. Sadie is puzzled by the changes in Egerton's manner to her, and is much distressed by them; and a mysterious Arab, who has been hanging around the ship, overhears the arrangements, announced by a sleek dragoman, as to the visit next day of the whole party of tourists to the Abousir Rock in the desert.

In the third act the party arrive at the rock, where they are captured by some marauding dervishes, after their escort has been overpowered and one of the tourists shot. Both men and women are dragged away to be sold as slaves, with the exception of the Colonel, who is stunned by a heavy blow on the head, and is left for dead. Egerton, who, foreseeing trouble, arranged with a young English officer of Camel Corps to signal if the party was in danger, manages to "flag-wag" a warning with his handkerchief before he falls fainting on the sand.

In the last act we see all the prisoners in the hands of the Arabs. Two of them, an Irish lady and gentleman, are murdered and left by the wayside; the others suffer severely, but their trials only serve to purify and elevate them. Sadie reproaches herself for her thoughtless selfishness; a greedy and self-indulgent Londoner displays heroic qualities when tempted to escape and leave his comrades to their fate; and the minister comes out stronger than ever in adversity. The Colonel rejoins the party in order to help Sadie; and there is a heated discussion as to whether the Europeans shall buy their lives by turning Mohammedans. At the critical moment the officer of Camel Corps brings his troops to the rescue; and it is found that the shock and suffering which the Colonel has endured have entirely cured him of his disease, so that he can conscientiously take Sadie to his arms.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager — MR. TREE.

FIFTH

June 21st to July 3rd,

1909

Monday, June 21st, to Saturday, July 3rd (two weeks),

Programme for First Week, commencing Monday, June 21st.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Evenings,

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Friday Evening and Saturday Matinee,

Saturday Evening,

JULIUS CÆSAR.

Programme for Second Week, commencing Monday, June 28th.

Monday Evening,

Tuesday and Thursday Evenings,

HAMLET.

Wednesday Matinee and Friday Evening,

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. BENSON and their Shakesperian Company, including Mr. OTHO STUART and Miss GENEVIEVE WARD.

Wednesday Evening,

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Saturday Matinee,

Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH and their Garrick Theatre Company.

Saturday Evening,

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

And Act II., Scene 2, from ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

The following Artists will appear :—

Mr. TREE.

Mr. BASIL GILL.
Mr. WILLIAM HAVILAND.
Mr. JAMES HEARN.
Mr. GODFREY TEARLE.
Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER.
Miss IRIS HOEY.

Mr. LYN HARDING.
Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE.
Mr. NORMAN PAGE.
Mr. LEON M. LION.
Miss VIOLA TREE.
Miss MARIE LÖHR.

Mr. LIONEL BROUGH.
Mr. G. W. ANSON.
Mr. HUBERT CARTER.
Mr. DONALD CALTHORP.
Miss SUZANNE SHELDON.
Miss ETHELWYN JONES

Miss ELLEN TERRY.

Waters, J.
Plays

Monday, June 21st, to Saturday, July 3rd (two weeks),

Programme for First Week, commencing Monday, June 21st.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Evenings,

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Friday Evening and Saturday Matinee,

Saturday Evening,

JULIUS CÆSAR.

Programme for Second Week, commencing Monday, June 28th.

Monday Evening,

Tuesday and Thursday Evenings,

HAMLET.

Wednesday Matinee and Friday Evening,

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. BENSON and their Shakespearian Company, with Mr. OTHO STUART and Miss GENEVIEVE WARD.

Wednesday Evening,

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Saturday Matinee,

Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH and their Garrick Theatre Company.

Saturday Evening,

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

And Act II., Scene 2, from ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

The following Artistes will appear :—

Mr. TREE.

Mr. BASIL GILL.
Mr. WILLIAM HAVILAND.
Mr. JAMES HEARN.
Mr. GODFREY TEARLE.
Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER.
Miss IRIS HOEY.

Mr. LYN HARDING.
Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE.
Mr. NORMAN PAGE.
Mr. LEON M. LION.
Miss VIOLA TREE.
Miss MARIE LÖHR.

Miss ELLEN TERRY.

Mr. LIONEL BROUGH.
Mr. G. W. ANSON.
Mr. HUBERT CARTER.
Mr. DONALD CALTHORP.
Miss SUZANNE SHELDON.
Miss ETHELWYN JONES

Waters, J.
Plays

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor — CHARING CROSS ROAD — Sir Charles Wyndham.

Sole Lessee and Manager — FRANK CURZON.

On Tuesday Evening, June 22nd, 1909, and Every Evening at 8.45,

EMMA HUTCHISON & PERCY HUTCHISON'S Production

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS

By WINCHELL SMYTH and BYRON ONGLEY

(Dramatised from the Story of GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON).

By arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN.

Montgomery Brewster	PERCY HUTCHISON
Charlie Harrison	ROBERT MINSTER
Mr. Grant	ROBERT FORSYTH
Colonel Drew	CHARLES HARLEY
Archie Golding	HENRY HAMPSON
Joseph McCloud	AUBREY MATHER
Frank Bragdon	CHARLES ESDALE
Tommy Smith	H. DOUGLAS GREET
Horace Pettinghill	GILBERT CLARK
Jack Gardiner	W. FORBES
Rawles	FRANK HILL
Thomas	GEORGE SALVER
Mons. Bargie	A. P. KAYE
Captain Perry	ARTHUR BAWTREE
First Officer	GORDON ASH
Quartermaster	V. STEEP
First Sailor	FRANK WALSH
Second Sailor	CLAYTON BROWN
Third Sailor	J. JOHNSTONE
First Office Boy	K. LYNN
Second Office Boy	GEORGE LINCOLN
Swearengen Jones	FRED WEBSTER
Mrs. Dan de Mille	LILIAS EARLE
Janice Armstrong	FRANCES DAVIE
Barbara Drew	GWLADYS MORRIS
Trixie Clayton	EDYTH GOODALL
Miss Boynton	MAY SETON
Miss Finnigan	DOROTHY WHITAKER
Miss Gardiner	BETTY FAIRFAX
Margaret Gray	CICELY STUCKEY

Act I. The Hall of Montgomery Brewster's House (Three months elapse).
Act II. Brewster's Offices
Act III. Top Deck of S.Y. "Flitter."
Act IV. The Hall of Montgomery Brewster's House.

The Play produced by PERCY HUTCHISON & CYRIL RAWDON.

Preceded at 8.15 by

TWO IN A TRAP

By ALBERT E. DRINKWATER.

Jim ... ROBERT MINSTER — Kit ... EDYTH GOODALL

Scene - - - A Flat in Chelsea.

Scenery by BRUCE SMITH and PHILIP HOWDEN. Furniture by WARINGS. Uniforms by H. & M. RAYNE.
Motor Clothing by Messrs. LUNHILL'S Ltd., 2 Conduit St., W. Miss Lilias Earle's Dresses by Messrs. CHARLES LEE & SONS.
Wigmore St. Miss Stuckey's Dresses by Messrs SWAN & EDGAR. The Ship Scene has been specially built by Mr. FRANK BALLARD.
The Cloud and Water Effects by JOSEPH McENCHEN, New York. Electrical Effects by THOMAS J. DIGBY, Shaftesbury Av nue.

Business Manager ..
Stage Manager ... ... } for Emma Hutchison and Percy Hutchison
Secretary ... ... } ... ... GEORGE CLARKSON
Musical Director ... ... A. P. KAYE
... ... OTHO HAZLEWOOD
... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI

First Matinee, Saturday, 26th June, at 2.15, and every Wednesday thereafter.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1. OVERTURE - "Die schöne Galathé" - J. Von Suppé
2. SELECTION - "King of Cadonia" - Sidney Jones
3. (a) - "There once was an owl" - Victor Herbert
   (b) - "Danse des Apaches" - Cuthbert Clarke
   (c) - "La Fleurette" - Arthur Wellesley
4. AIRS FROM - "The Singing Girl" - V. Herbert
5. (a) - Czardas - Miska
   (b) - "Chinese Wedding" - Ernest Bucalossi
   (c) - "Badinage" - Covelli Wendeut

Business Manager ... ... (For Frank Curzon) ... ... J. HERBERT JAY

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Grand Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.
Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD. Doors open at 7.45, Matinees 1.45. Commence at 8.15, Matinees 2.15

ALDWYCH THEATRE

SEYMOUR HICKS Proprietor

EVERY EVENING AT 9 WEDNESDAY MATINEE AT 3

NERIGNE

Under the Direction of A. E. DAREWSKI in

"THE SPIRIT OF POETRY"

DEPICTING IN THREE SCENES

THE SPIRIT OF POETRY,
A DAY OF SUNSHINE, and
IT IS NOT ALWAYS MAY — by LONGFELLOW
AND
THE BANDIT'S DEATH — by TENNYSON

"ON JHELUM RIVER"

AN INDIAN MUSICAL LOVE STORY

Book by NYDIA Lyrics by FREDERICK JOHN FRASER
Music by AMY WOODFORDE-FINDEN

Soubhana	(fruit seller)	IVOR FOSTER
Lallee	(boat girl)	DOLLY CASTLES
Dallel	(incense burner)	ALFRED LUGG
Samvara	(snake charmer)	WILLIAM LUGG
Madinka	(flower seller)	OLIVE ELTON
Telago	(dancing boy)	MARIA THEA
Ranzan	(rich silversmith)	FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
	AND
Chadni	(Nautch girl)	NERIGNE

Milksellers, Boatmen, Singing Women, Sweetmeat Sellers, Nautch Girls, &c.

Misses Violet Herbert, Eileen Castles, Lita Higgs, Madeline Lang, Violet Furnivall, Bertha Buckley, Dorothy Carlton, Gladys Carlton, Beatrice West, Ninna Gottgetrue, Kathleen Cadwell

Messrs. Dillon, Jupp, Nugent, Austin, Dini, Montrose, Francis, Alexander, Adair, Appleby

Time—Present Scene—Kashmiré

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

ACT I—Scene 1

An Indian Flower Garden—Early Morning (Helmsley)

Scene 2

A Bazaar at Srinagar—Afternoon (Helmsley)

ACT II—Scene 1

The Silversmith's House on the River Bank—Evening (Helmsley)

Four days elapse between Scenes 1 and 2 in Act I

An Interval of 10 minutes between Acts I and II

PRECEDED AT 8.30 AND 2.30 BY

H. V. SURREY in a Farce entitled

PHYSICAL CULTURE

Maxim Stragner	(Professor)	HAROLD COTTER
Yvonne de la Mare	(pupil)	MARCELLE DELECLUZE
Lord Hector Strongbolt	(pupil)	H. V. SURREY

Scene Office of Stragner's Gymnasium

Costumes and Wigs by W. CLARKSON
Pianos furnished by J. STROHMENGER & SONS
Floral Decorations by HENRY L. BUDER
Stage Flowers by PUETZ & Co.

Orchestra under the Direction of K. ERNEST IRVING

Stage Manager FEWLASS LLEWELLYN

PRICES:

Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d., 5s., 4s. Balcony 2s. 6d.
Upper Circle, 3s., 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. Gallery, 1s.

Manager C. E. Hamilton

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and stair cases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

ALDWYCH
THEATRE.

22/6/1909

STALL

No. 68

To be retained.
No Bonnets allowed

The combination of elocutionary excellence, dramatic energy, and the suppleness and strength of the bayadère is not common; and Miss Nerigne, who made her appearance at the Aldwych Theatre, under Mr. A. E. Darewski's direction, on Tuesday, poesesses all three qualities. On Jhelum River has hardly story enough to justify its three-act form, but it gives Miss Nerigne an opportunity of displaying her gifts to advantage. The theme of "Nydia's" libretto is simple, not to say trite. A handsome young fruit-seller, named Soubhana, loves a gentle and virtuous boat-girl, called Lallee. Their affection is envied by a rich, but elderly, silversmith, Ranzan, and by a seductive dancing girl, Chadni. The latter insinuates jealousy into the mind of Soubhana, and endeavours to intoxicate him by her voluptuous advances; but Soubhana calls her a "wanton," and casts her off. Whereupon she draws a dagger and swears to be revenged. In the end, however, when Ranzan finds the lovers together, Chadni uses the weapon against him, in order to remove an obstacle to Soubhana's happiness. The music in On Jhelum River was of a decidedly superior order. Mrs. Amy Woodforde-Finden had written some very sweet and winning melodies, which were very pleasantly rendered by Mr. Ivor Foster—who sang with excellent intonation and much taste, but spoke his dialogue in too low a key—and Miss Dolly Castles, who vocalised admirably as Lallee, and acted with engaging simplicity. Mr. William Lugg represented a solemn and sententious snake charmer with picturesque dignity; and Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn played Ranzan conscientiously. Miss Nerigne as Chadni wore the undress made popular by Miss Maud Allan, and did a nautch dance well in the second act. She was seen at her best, however, in the scene in which the dancing girl informs Soubhana of her love for him. Here Miss Nerigne was very expressive and dramatic, her effective poses greatly assisting her in portraying passion. The scenery, by that clever artist Mr. Helmsley, was very pretty and picturesque. There was an excellent orchestra under the direction of Mr. K. Ernest Irving; and Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn's sound stage-management was shown in the easy action of the crowds in the opera production. On Jhelum River was preceded by four recitations given by Miss Nerigne in appropriate costumes. Her selections were "The Spirit of Poetry," "A Day of Sunshine," and "It is not always May," this part of the entertainment concluding with "The Bandit's Death," which Miss Nerigne delivered with much dramatic power, her depiction of the bitter sorrow and vengeful grief of the murderess being very intense and energetic.

The first item on the programme was a farce in one act, played for the first time, and entitled

"PHYSICAL CULTURE."

Maxim Stragner .....MR. HAROLD COTTER
Yvonne de la Mare ..MISS MARCELLE DELECLUZE
Lord Hector Strongbolt ....MR. H. V. SURREY

The modern taste for physical training is touched upon in this sketch rather amusingly. Yvonne de la Mare, a chorus lady from the Folies-Bergère, comes to Professor Stragner's gymnasium, and mistakes for him Lord Hector Strongbolt, a pupil. He gives her a lesson in gymnastics, falls in love with her, and propitiates the real professor with gifts, the piece concluding with the probability of a marriage between the young people. Mr. Harold Cotter played the Professor ably and well; and Miss Delecluze and Mr. H. V. Surrey were bright and amusing as the playful pupils.

JUNE 22, 1909

"ON JHELUM RIVER."

INTERIM INJUNCTION AGAINST A PERFORMANCE.

In the Chancery Division, before Mr. Justice Eve, this afternoon, Mr. Patterson applied on behalf of Messrs. Boosey and Co. for an injunction to restrain Mr. Darewski from performing the dramatic piece called "On Jhelum River."

He said that negotiations had been going on between Messrs. Boosey and Co. and Mr. Darewski as to the terms upon which the former would grant a licence to the latter to produce the play, of which they held the copyright. An agreement was arrived at under which Mr. Darewski was to have the licence, but one of the conditions was that he was to pay 80gs. on account of royalties.

That sum, said counsel, had not been paid, and as the play had been advertised for production to-night, Messrs. Boosey asked for an injunction restraining the defendant pending the action.

An affidavit by Mr. Arthur Boosey as to the ownership of the copyright and the arrangements made was read, and his lordship granted an interim injunction extending over Thursday next.

ALDWYCH THEATRE.

When the audience assembled in the Aldwych Theatre last night to witness the performance by Mme. Nerigne and her company of "The Spirit of Poetry" and "On Jhelum River" they were informed by messengers who came among them that there would be no performance that evening.

Those who had paid for admission at the doors had their money returned, and shortly afterwards the auditorium was in darkness, while before nine o'clock the bills outside the theatre were pasted over with sheets of blue paper.

22/6/1909

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

EMPIRE THEATRE.

PROGRAMME, JULY 5th, 1909,

AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.0.

Subject to alteration at the discretion of the Management.

The Ballet Divertissement
from Act III. of MEYERBEER'S Opera,

"ROBERTO IL DIAVOLO."

Produced by ALEXANDER GENÉE.

The Mise en-Scene and Costumes designed and supervised by C WILHELM.
The Scene painted by R. C. McCLEERY.
The Dresses executed by Miss HASTINGS.

CHARACTERS.

ROBERT Duke of Normandy ..... Mr. NOEL FLEMING
BERTRAM his Father, a Fiend ..... Signor BARBALONGA
AND
ELENA Spirit of the Abbess ..... Mlle. ADELINE GENÉE
Supported by the Corps de-Ballet.

Scene 1.—A Ruined Convent Cloister in Sicily.

ARGUMENT.

Bertram, the fiend-father of Robert, anxious to establish a complete mastery over him, dares him to pluck a magic bough from his Mother's Tomb. This is in the Cloisters of a Convent which has fallen into ruin, owing to the sinful excesses of its former occupants. Bertram, in order to overcome the scruples of his son, evokes the spectres of the dead and buried nuns, who, casting aside their conventual garb, appear as beautiful nymphs, led by the spirit of their Abbess Elena, and tempt the young Knight to the act of sacrilege by the power of their wiles and seductions.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

Lessee and Manager = = = = = CHARLES FROHMAN

Mrs. GEORGE CORNWALLIS-WEST'S MATINEES.

TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOONS,

JULY 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th,

Commencing at Three o'clock.

HIS BORROWED PLUMES

An Original Modern Comedy in Three Acts,

By Mrs. GEORGE CORNWALLIS-WEST.

Major Percival Sumner, V.C.	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
John Waterbury, M.P.	Mr. F. DONOVAN
Basil Delaine, K.C.	.. Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Henry Martin	Mr. ALAN URQUHART
Mr. Mowser (Manager of the National Theatre)	Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
Butler	.. Mr. CREGAN
Footman	Mr. RUSSELL
Lady Mary Trianon ..	Miss SARA ALLGOOD
Fabia Sumner ..	Mrs PATRICK CAMPBELL
Angela Cranfield ..	Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON
Rose Wispey	Miss ANNIE HUGHES
Alma Dorset	Miss STELLA PATRICK CAMPBELL
Jane Linneth	Miss WINIFRED FRASER
Blanche (Maid to Angela Cranfield) ..	Miss RENEE DE VAUX
Attendant at National Theatre	Miss MURIEL VARNA

"Hicks Theatre was yesterday given its new name—the Globe—the glazed portico showing it in large letters and programmes bearing it for the first time. This afternoon the King and Queen will be present there to witness the performance of Mrs. George Cornwallis-West's play "His Borrowed Plumes." D.M. July 9 1909

ACT I.

Annexe to Hotel. Bray, Berks (E. G. Banks)

ACT II.

Library at the Sumner's House, London. Three Months Later

ACT III.

Scene 1 .. Mrs. Cranfield's Boudoir. One Month Later.

Scene 2 .. Ante-Room of Royal Box at the National Theatre. Evening of the same Day. (E. G. Banks)

Dresses by Madame ARQUA, "PAQUIN," Messrs. LIBERTY & Co., and JAYS, Limited.

Ladies' Hats supplied by FRANCE MARBOT, 20 Rue Royale, Paris, and 30 Ovington Street, S.W.

The Furniture in Acts I., II., and Scene 1 of Act III., supplied by Messrs. MAPLE & Co.

The Furniture in Scene 2, Act III., supplied by LENYGON & Co., Old Burlington Street.

The Court Cupboard in Scene 2, Act III., lent by Mr. LEONARD F. WYBERD, of 87 Wigmore Street, W.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Oberon" ...	... ... Weber
ENTR'ACTE I.	(a) Selection of Melodies	... ... Grieg
	(b) Humoreske	... ... Dvorak
ENTR'ACTE II.	... Ballet Music from "Gioconda" ...	... ... Ponchielli
INTERLUDE ...	... ...	... Quentin Morvaren

Business Manager
Musical Director ... for Mrs. George Cornwallis-West — Mr. H. LANGLEY, Mr. ALEC MACLEAN, Mr. H. W. VARNA
Stage Manager ...

BOX OFFICE (G. CLARE) open 10 to 5. Prices: Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

General Manager ... } ... for CHARLES FROHMAN ... W. LESTOCQ
Business Manager ... } OSCAR BARRETT, Jun

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Mrs. Cornwallis-West's play opened badly, owing to an accident of acoustics; but it was soon evident that she had a real gift and instinct as a dramatist, and His Borrowed Plumes took a firm hold on the interest of the audience, and maintained it to the close of the performance. The working out of the plot involved some amusement of a kind not, perhaps, anticipated by the author; but there was something very human in the weaknesses of the rather easily "humbugged" husband, and his naive confessions of his feelings endeared him to the audience, if they did not win respect or excite admiration. The play, in short, is a woman's play, with a woman for the real "hero." The much-injured Mrs. Sumner, who has to play a waiting game, and take her revenge by generous forgiveness in the last act, can, however, be hardly as interesting as the restless and active intriguante ever on the alert to gain an advantage; and it says much for Mrs. Cornwallis-West's skill that she has managed to make vice ridiculous and in the end contemptible, and to win and retain our sympathy for necessarily passive virtue. She might with advantage slightly revise her work, in the light of the matinée production, in matters of detail. For instance, the sudden change from resentment to grief in Mrs. Cranfield when Sumner leaves her in answer to her abuse is natural in itself, but is too abruptly treated in the text; and there are a few other minor matters which can be easily and quickly attended to. On the whole, however, His Borrowed Plumes is singularly free from the usual errors of the inexperienced dramatist.

It was a novel idea to introduce what we may call "professional jealousy" as a dramatic motive, and to make the hero and heroine rivals in fiction. The ambition of Major Percival Sumner, V.C., is to write a successful play, though he has neither invention nor dramatic gift. His wife, Fabia, on the contrary, is a clever novelist, and has sketched out the plot of a new book. She is unhappy, however, because a certain Mrs. Angela Cranfield, a lady who has been divorced, and has a mysterious "past," is freely fascinating Major Sumner by her clever tricks. One of these, which is very effective, is to get the Major to read aloud some of his verses, concealing from Fabia the fact of the authorship. Fabia criticises them severely, and the Major is hurt and irritated, Mrs. Cranfield artfully soothing his wounded vanity. She also steals from a despatch box the plot of Fabia's story, and lets it filter in conversation into the mind of the Major, who bases, on what he believes to be his own ideas, a play which is accepted by a London manager. Basil Delaine, a barrister, who knows of a blackmailing episode in Mrs. Cranfield's past, tries to get her to confess her theft by threats of exposure; but she defies him. Her admission is the result of a quarrel which she has with Sumner, when he shows that he is getting tired of her. In retaliation, she tells him that she inspired him with the ideas which were stolen from his wife's story; and Sumner, deeply humiliated, goes out to find Fabia, leaving Mrs. Cranfield sobbing in anger and grief. In the last act, which takes place in the ante-room of a London theatre during the performance of Sumner's play, husband and wife come to an understanding, and she forgives him freely.

5724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

MR. HERBERT SLEATH'S SEASON

EVERY EVENING AT 9, WEDNESDAY MATINEE AT 3,

THE WOMAN IN THE CASE

PRECEDED AT 8.30, AND MATINEE AT 2.30, BY

THE DEPUTY SHERIFF

By H. M. VERNON.

Reggie Brooks	(a wealthy young Englishman)	Mr. HAROLD RICHARDSON
Dick Turner	(Sheriff of Belnap County)	Mr. HENRY HARE
Arthur Curtis	(a fugitive)	Mr. H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Denver Nell	(a Dancer from Mooney's)	Miss ENID SASS

Scene: A Cornfield in a Western American State. Early Morning.

"THE DEPUTY SHERIFF."

A Play, in One Act, by H. M. Vernon, Produced at the Garrick Theatre on Wednesday Afternoon, July 21.

Reggie Brooks .....MR. HAROLD RICHARDSON
Dick Turner .....MR. HENRY HARE
Arthur Curtis .....MR. H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Denver Nell .....MISS ENID SASS

THE scene in which this piece is set is one that would rejoice the heart of any artist. It represents a cornfield in a Western American State, and real sheaves are placed in appropriately careless fashion upon the stage. It is a spectacle of gorgeous gold, and makes one long for the country. In this scene, which is extremely well arranged, and upon the effectiveness and beauty of which we offer our cordial congratulations to the scenic artist, producer, and stage-manager, a wealthy Englishman, Reggie Brooks, sits sketching at an easel. He is disturbed by the sudden appearance of a fugitive, Arthur Curtis, who rushes breathless into the cornfield and explains that he is being pursued. Brooks suggests that he should hide in a scarecrow, and scarcely has he done this than up gallop Dick Turner, the Sheriff, and a couple of his men, armed with revolvers. It is then that Brooks is made acquainted with the fact that he is assisting to shelter a murderer, who shot a man named Kennedy in a public-house bar. Brooks tells the Sheriff and his men to go to his house for refreshment, and while they are away he is visited by a girl, Denver Nell, who is seeking to avenge the murder of Kennedy, her "man," as she describes him. She suspects, and quite rightly, that Brooks knows something of the whereabouts of the assassin, but after a few minutes she leaves. Then Brooks calls the fugitive Curtis from his hiding-place, and Curtis, who is also an Englishman, defends his crime by pleading what we suppose the Americans would term the "Unwritten Law." The man he shot had taken his (Curtis's) sister away from her home, had deceived her, brought about her dishonour, and had deserted her in Paris. Denver Nell, who has returned to the cornfield, overhears the explanation, the revolver which is brought out for purposes of vengeance is put back into its case, and she departs silently and sadly away from the scene. In the end Brooks lends Curtis a horse and a fresh suit of clothes, and shows him how to make good his escape.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees .. .. Popular Playhouses, Ltd.
Managing Directors .. .. HENRY R. SMITH and ERNEST CARPENTER.
Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, 17, Craven Street, Charing Cross, W.C.

GREAT REVIVAL FOR A FEW WEEKS ONLY.
Saturday, July 24, 1909, and every Evening at 8
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30

TWO LITTLE VAGABONDS

By GEORGE R. SIMS and ARTHUR SHIRLEY. From "Les Deux Gosses" by M. Pierre Decourcelle.

Characters.

George Thornton		Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Captain Darville		Mr. ERIC MAYNE
John Scarth		Mr. SIDNEY VAUTIER
Bill Mullins (alias "The Gaffer")		Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Dido Dunce, The Cough Drop	His confederates	Mr. CHARLES L. LUDLOW, Mr. GEORGE ELLISTON
Leeson (A Soldier Servant)		Mr. RICHARD ANDEAN
Hargitt (Landlord of "The Chequers")		Mr. WILFRED EDMONDS
Dr. Lynn		Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG
Job Gargoyle (A Sexton)		Mr. SIDNEY YOUNG
Whiffin (A Village Constable)		Mr. A. G. LEIGH
Footman		Mr. GEORGE HANNAWAY
Marion Thornton (Thornton's Wife)		Miss FRANCES DILLON
Barbara Scarth (Thornton's Sister)		Miss OLIVIA-GLYNN
Sister Randall (A Hospital Nurse)		Miss MABEL MANNERING
Maidservant		Miss AVIS SCHOLTZ
Biddy Mullins (The Gaffer's Wife)		Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
Wally, Dick	Two Little Vagabonds	Miss BERYL MERCER, Miss EVA LUMLEY

Soldiers, Policemen, Rustics.

The Play produced under the Stage Direction of ERNEST CARPENTER

1909
ters, J.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act I. Scene 1—The Exterior of "The Chequers" near Canterbury

Scene 2—A Lane near the Barracks.

Scene 3—The Drawing Room.

(A period of seven years is supposed to elapse between Acts 1 & 2.)

Act II. Scene—The Caravan by the roadside, near the Church.

Act III. Scene—The Drawing Room.

Act IV. Scene 1—The Gaffer's Garret.

Scene 2—The Canal Lock.

Act V. Scene—The Boys' Bedroom.

The Scenery Designed and Painted by E. C. NICHOLLS, and Assistants.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. SULLIVAN BROOKE, will play selections from well known works.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. .. Mr. W. F. CROWE

Stage Manager .. .. Mr. S. MAJOR JONES

Box Office (ANDREW SPENCER) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard

---

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

H 180

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

"THALIA'S TEACUP";
OR, "THE DELIGHTS OF DECEIT."

A Light Comedy in Three Acts, by Norreys Connell, produced at the Court Theatre, on Saturday evening, July 24.

Mrs. Twickenham .....Miss Isabel Grey
Frank Twickenham .....Mr. Athol Stewart
Bessie Twickenham ....Miss Gwendolen Wren
Felicia .....Miss Mabel Champion
Mr. Twickenham .....Mr. Edmund Gurney
Thalia Twickenham .....Miss Thyrza Norman
Mr. Tabb .....Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Mr. Halliday .....Mr. H. R. Hignett
Mr. Boothby .....Mr. E. W. Tarver

We are afraid that it is impossible to predict a long run for Thalia's Teacup, and one regrets this the more when one remembers that the author has some talent in the direction of literary craftsmanship. Possibly Mr. Connell might have succeeded better had he made his ideas as set forth in the play the basis of a novel. But as a work for the stage—and apart from the fact that Thalia's Teacup contains passages which are in questionable taste—it is rather hopeless.

All the scenes are laid in the morning-room of Mr. Twickenham's house in Bloomsbury. Mr. Twickenham is a solicitor, and not a very bright specimen of one, if we are to judge him according to his conversation and his doings. But we are not concerned so much with him as with his daughter Thalia, a mischief-making young lady who is not remarkable for any great attachment to the truth. She has just returned home from a convent school, and on the railway journey she succeeded in getting a male companion, Mr. Tabb, a bounder who has pretensions to an affection for her, to pay her fare, although the amount had been previously sent to her by her father. On the last occasion that Thalia had travelled to the school she had been clever enough to dupe the railway officials into believing that she had paid for her ticket and had lost it, whereas what really happened was that the ingenious maiden had not purchased a ticket at all, but had spent the money in other ways upon herself, excusing herself to her family and friends with the pretext that she had devoted the cash to charitable objects. Thalia's inherent faculty for the invention of falsehoods seems—so we suppose the author would have us believe—to be accounted for by some real or fancied law of progeniture. Two days before Thalia came into the world her mother broke a much-treasured teacup, and, fearing to acknowledge the accident to her husband, put the blame upon the sinless cat. And so Thalia's mind is imbued with this one maternal indiscretion, and while still a schoolgirl, indulges in the most barefaced fabrications. She makes love to the hard-up bounder, Mr. Tabb, who allows himself to be called the Honourable, and leads her people to imagine that he receives an income of fifteen hundred a year; to a weak-minded and particularly emasculate curate, Mr. Boothby; and to a rather easily imposed upon criminal barrister, Mr. Halliday, all of whom propose to her with unmeasured fervency. She secretes the curate in a box ottoman which contains her sister's lingerie, indelicately referred to as "wild oats." In the attempt to play the same trick upon the lawyer, the presence of the curate in the box is revealed to the amusement of the family, who now rush in—a denouement arranged beforehand by the deceitful Thalia. The only person Thalia has not deceived is a distant cousin, Frank Twickenham, who understands her, and does not hesitate to tell her in unmistakable language what he thinks of her reprehensible conduct. But the end of it all is that, in spite of his stated dislike for her at the beginning of the play, the curtain falls on his agreement to marry her.

Daly's Theatre.

Last Night
of
The Merry Widow.
778th Performance.

183

'MERRY WIDOW' FAREWELL

GREAT CROWDS AND EXCITING SCENES.

Daly's Theatre was a scene of beauty on Saturday. The occasion might have been a gala performance in honour of a great personage instead of a farewell to a musical play. "The Merry Widow" has set another precedent.

All day crowds of people gathered in the streets around the theatre. The façade of the house was decorated with flowers and flags and evergreens, and an endless stream of callers passed in at the doors in the vain hope of being able to buy seats. Outside the building the long queues formed for the matinée and evening performances were eloquent of the demand for places. Some enthusiasts had been waiting from half-past five in the morning.

By four o'clock the scene was an extraordinary one. It might have been a fair. So numerous were the barkers in the streets, and a large force of police was not sufficient at that hour to control the crowds. Tea and cakes carried out from the theatre by a couple of men for the queues, were seized by boys in the crowd, and eventually waitresses, under police protection, had to attempt the catering.

The inside of the theatre was beautifully decorated with crimson and pink flowers. The private boxes were bowers of roses, the occupants of the circles and stalls were locked at the stage across masses of foliage and flowers, and the proscenium was like the entrance to a great arbour.

WHIRLWIND OF CHEERS.

On this occasion Mr. George Edwardes was honouring "The Merry Widow," and it was evident that the public was with him. Everything seemed right to the audience on Saturday. They wanted every song twice over and the dances repeated again and again. Each principal, as he or she appeared, was received with a storm of cheers. Even the smallest part was cheered when the player was one of those who had gone through the two years' run.

At the end there were speeches by Mr. Edwardes, Mr. Coyne, and Miss Elsie. Mr. Edwardes thanked the public for their long continued patronage of Daly's Theatre. Then Miss Elsie, holding him by the hand, almost timidly spoke a few words. "I cannot thank you for your kindness to me; words fail me," she said, and, visibly affected, she stopped. Then Mr. Coyne said: "You have given me the happiest two years of my life here at Daly's Theatre."

On the stage the company had a little supper. They drank Mr. George Edwardes's health and sang "For he's a jolly good fellow," with the result that he told them on Monday to rehearse the song. Outside in the streets the people heard the cheers. There were thousands about the stage door and the neighbouring streets waiting to see the principals leave, taking with them in their motor-cars and cabs the great numbers of bouquets with which they had been presented.

Waters, J.
Plays

DALY'S THEATRE

By command of the Lord Chamberlain, the proscenium safety curtain is lowered daily in the presence of the audience, about the middle of the performance, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order.

LAST NIGHT OF THE MERRY WIDOW
SATURDAY, JULY 31st, 1909.

PRODUCED BY Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

THE MERRY WIDOW

"DIE LUSTIGE WITWE."

By VICTOR LEON and LEO STEIN.

Music by FRANZ LEHAR.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS.

ACT I.—The Marsovian Embassy in Paris... ... ALFRED TERRAINE.
ACT II.—Grounds of Sonia's House near Paris ... JOSEPH HARKER.
ACT III.—Maxim's Restaurant, Paris

Musical Director... ... ... Mr. HAROLD VICARS.
The Dances arranged by Mr. FRED FARREN.

The Music of the Opera published by Messrs. CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond Street.

The Floral decorations by ROBERT GREEN LTD., 28 & 29, Crawford St., W.

Cast of the Play.

VICOMTE CAMILLE DE JOLIDON	Mr. ROBERT EVETT
MARQUIS DE CASCADA	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
GENERAL NOVIKOVICH (Military Attache) ...	Mr. FRED KAYE
M. DE ST. BRIOCHE	Mr. BASIL S. FOSTER
M. KHADJA (Counsellor of Legation) ...	Mr V. O'CONNOR
NISCH ... (Messenger to the Legation) ...	Mr. W. H. BERRY
WAITER AT MAXIM'S	Mr. RALPH ROBERTS
GEORGIE ... (An habitué of Maxim's) ...	Mr. GEORGIE MAHRER

AND

PRINCE DANILO (Secretary of Legation) Mr. JOSEPH COYNE	BARON POPOFF (Marsovian Ambassador in Paris) Mr. J. F. McARDLE

NATALIE	(Wife of Popoff)	Miss MARY GREY
FROU-FROU		... Miss GABRIELLE RAY
ZO-ZO	(Girls at Maxim's)	Miss MABEL MUNRO
MARGOT		MISS M. SEYMOUR
JOU-JOU		Miss DORA FRASER
DO-DO		Miss GWEN BROGDEN
LO-LO		Miss PHYLLYS LE GRAND
TO-TO		MISS DOLLY DOMBEY
SYLVAINE ...	(Wife of Khadja) ...	Miss GERTRUDE GLYN
OLGA	(Wife of Novikovich) ...	Miss IRENE DESMOND
PRASKOVIA		... Miss KATE WELCH

AND

SONIA ...	(The Merry Widow)	Miss LILY ELSIE

182

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor — CHARING CROSS ROAD. — Sir Charles Wyndham.

Sole Lessee and Manager ... ... FRANK CURZON.

On THURSDAY, AUGUST 5th, and Every Evening at 8.45,

FRANK CURZON'S

NEW PRODUCTION:

THE BEST PEOPLE

AN ORIGINAL COMEDY, IN THREE ACTS, BY

FREDERICK LONSDALE.

Lord Emsworth	..	Mr. FREDERICK KERR
The Hon. Gerald Bayle ..	..	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Lord Wynlea	..	Mr. CHARLES SUGDEN
Jackson	..	Mr. HOWARD STURGE
Mr. James Spofforth	..	Mr. PHILIP CUNINGHAM
Hibbet .. .. (Chauffeur)	..	Mr. ROBERT RIVERS
Griffiths .. .. (Manservant)	...	Mr. FORBES DAWSON
Lady Emsworth	..	Miss LETTICE FAIRFAX
AND
The Hon. Mrs. Bayle	..	Miss EVA MOORE

Acts I. and II. ... ... The Bayle's Flat, Hill Street, London

Act III. ... . Wynlea Park, Hertfordshire

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY FRANK CURZON.

PRECEDED AT 8 O'CLOCK, BY

A BOY'S PROPOSAL

A LITTLE COMEDY, BY ARTHUR ECKERSLEY.

Mr. Sheringham	Mr. FORBES DAWSON
Lady Pilkington	Miss MAY CHEVALIER
Tom	Master PHILIP TONGE
Butler	Mr. BRIAN EGERTON

Scene ... ... Lady Pilkington's Flat

Scenery by BRUCE SMITH.

Miss EVA MOORE'S and Miss FAIRFAX' Dresses and Hats by Messrs. REDFERN, LTD.

Miss MAY CHEVALIER'S Dress and Hat in First Piece by Messrs. SELFRIDGE & Co., LTD.

Musical Director... ... ... ERNEST EUCALOSSI

Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

First Matinee, WEDNESDAY, 11th AUGUST, at 3, and every Wednesday thereafter.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST EUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1	MARCH	"Wee Macgregor"	....Imers
2	SELECTION	"Our Miss Gibbs"	Caryll-Monckton
3	a. INTERMEZZO	"Amina"	... Paul Lincke
	b. VALSE	"La voix de mon Cœur"	E. Hartley Summers
4	SELECTION	"The Arcadians"	Monckton-Talbot

Business Manager ... ... J. HERBERT JAY

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Grand Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD. Doors open at 7.30. Matinees 2.30. Commence at 8. Matinees 3.

It is quite possible that the relations between the two married couples who are the principal characters in the comedy would not bear very deep analysis; but they are sufficiently logical and plausible to pass muster in a piece of this kind. A rather stupid young man, the Hon. Gerald Bayle, son of Lord Wynlea, has married a bright and clever woman, and a keen humorist, Lord Emsworth, has wedded a rather dense and silly girl for her money. Mrs. Bayle, coming to the conclusion that she and Gerald have been seeing too much of each other, has gone for a trip to Spain. Here she has been made love to by an ardent Englishman, and has hastily returned home to escape his advances. In her absence Gerald has been beguiled by Lady Emsworth, who has touched his heart by her exaggerated descriptions of the ill-treatment she has to endure from her husband. On the very evening of Mrs. Bayle's return, Gerald has arranged to have supper with Lady Emsworth at his flat. Mrs. Bayle accidentally discovers this assignation, and asks Lord Emsworth, who admires her immensely, to sup with her.

In the second act, the amusing and complicated situation thus created is developed. Each of the four guests is uncertain how much the others know; but Mrs. Bayle saves Lady Emsworth by saying that she was in the secret of her husband's invitation. Mrs. Bayle leads Gerald on to a protestation of love, then insists upon a separation; and Lady Emsworth refuses to return to her husband's roof.

In the last act we find the wives staying at Gerald's father's place in the country, Mrs. Bayle disdainfully repelling all Gerald's attempts at reconciliation. Lord Emsworth, who has previously resented his wife's attempt to treat him as a mere pensioner by tearing up a cheque which she has written for him that he may pay an urgent debt of honour, arrives with his pockets full of bank notes, the gains of a lucky speculation, and advises Gerald to sue for pardon no longer. He takes the advice, and starts for London in his car; and Mrs. Bayle, in dismay, packs up and prepares to follow him. But Bayle's car is run into by another motorist, who happens to be the very man with whom Mrs. Bayle flirted in Spain. Though her explanation of the incident is entirely to her credit, it prevents her taking quite such high ground as she has previously occupied, and the play ends with reconciliation all round, and general happiness.

a piece in one act by Arthur Eckersley, played for the first time, and entitled

"A BOY'S PROPOSAL."

Mr. Sheringham .....MR. FORBES DAWSON
Lady Pilkington .....MISS MAY CHEVALIER
Tom .....MASTER PHILIP TONGE
Butler .....MR. BRIAN EGERTON

The leading character in this sketch was a schoolboy named Tom, who, for a joke, has forged a proposal of marriage in his uncle, Mr. Sheringham's, handwriting, and has sent it to an agreeable widow, Lady Pilkington, who has replied with a refusal. Sheringham calls to explain matters, but Lady Pilkington, who has changed her mind, now accepts him, and as he really likes her, he is silent. Tom's trick is, however, subsequently exposed, and the lady's mortification is keen. She dismisses Sheringham, but Tom manages to bring the parties together, and takes credit for his successful match-making. A good deal of ingenuity was displayed by the author in the construction of the amusing trifle, which served its purpose excellently.

D-10
3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Mr. HARDING COX'S SEASON.

MONDAY, AUGUST 23RD, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.50,

THE PIN & THE PUDDING

A Play in Three Acts, by BARTON WHITE.

Robert Anthony Malkin	-	Mr. HARDING COX
Pat Carberry	-	Mr. ROBERT WHYTE, Jr.
Johnny Cripps	-	Mr. RAYMOND BUTLER
Mr. Allan	-	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Brutus P. Streak	-	Mr. H. DE LANGE
Mr. Robbins	(Purser)	Mr. WINDHAM GUISE
Quartermaster	-	Mr. JOHN DENNYS
Mrs. Malkin	-	Mrs. SAM SOTHERN
Mrs. Brutus P. Streak	-	Miss GREVILLE MOORE
Maid	-	Miss MAY BLAYNEY
Tamsie	- (Malkin's Daughter)	Miss IRIS HOEY

Act I. ... ... Klondyke Flats, Lower Tooting (Summer). W. T. Hemsley
Act II. ... ... A Country House (Winter). Walter Hann
Act III. ... Music Saloon, R.M.S. "Bermuda" (at anchor in Naples Harbour). W. T. Hemsley
Six months elapse between each Act

Wigs by C. H. Fox. Furniture by Messrs. OETZMANN & Co., LTD.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

THE FATAL DANCE

A Dramatic Episode by HARDING COX.

Bob Barry	(Theatrical Manager)	Mr. J. CLIFFORD BROOKE
Hilda Barton	-	Miss MAGGIE NEILL
Consuela Marquez	-	Miss GREVILLE MOORE

Scene ... Green Room of the Theatre Royal, Alchester.

The Plays produced by Mr. HUBERT DRUCE.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. PERCY E. FLETCHER, will perform the following Selection of Music—

OVERTURE	"Mammon's Pallast"	Emil Titl
THREE LIGHT PIECES	(a. "Lubly Lulu") (b. "Filinette") (c. "Folie Bergère")	Fletcher
SELECTION	"Merry England"	Edward German
FANTASIE	"La Bohème"	Puccini
INTERMEZZO	"Venetian Boat Song"	Tosti
MARCH	"Fete de Flora"	Stecht
Acting Manager		Mr. ELLIOT LANE
Stage Manager		Mr. DUNCAN DRUCE

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s. Other Rows 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

COMEDY 23
THEATRE
Sole Lessee,
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
23/8/1909
STALL
E20
To be retained

Mr. Barton White's play, which was produced at the Theatre Royal, Margate, on June 7, is undoubtedly old-fashioned in idea and treatment; but in many ways the ancient fashion was a good one; and, though we are afraid the piece is a little too naïf for the sophisticated tastes of the patrons of a smart West End theatre, we can imagine it having a very successful career in the provinces. It is quite Dickensian in its exuberance, and in its emphasis on the sorrows of genteel poverty. Robert Anthony Malkin is a clerk in the office of Carberry and Co., patent medicine manufacturers. In a moment of weakness, and to pay his wife's railway fare on a visit to her dying mother, he has stolen ten shillings from his employers, and has gone to prison for a month; but the name placed on the charge-sheet was "Robert Anthony," and his wife and his daughter Tamsie believe him to have been given a month's holiday by the firm, the present head of which, Pat Carberry, is a blatant, boastful cad. He takes a fancy to Tamsie, and wants Malkin to let her come and work at the office; but this is prevented by Malkin's suddenly coming into a fortune of £20,000, which has been left to him by a relation in Australia. The property would have been left to a certain young man named Allan, who is supposed to have been drowned at sea; but he offended the owner of it, who bequeathed it to Malkin, with a curious codicil to the effect that if he had been in prison for over seven days the fortune was to revert to certain benevolent societies. Tamsie, who is a romantic, restless, imaginative girl, pines in the suburban atmosphere; and in order that she may have comfort and change of scene, Malkin fraudulently accepts the fortune.

In the next act, we find the family living in luxury in a house in the country, Malkin having made an old friend, an intemperate and eccentric lawyer's clerk called Johnny Cripps, his secretary. Carberry learns, from an indiscretion of Cripps's, about the codicil, and puts pressure upon Malkin to persuade Tamsie to become his—Carberry's—wife. Malkin, in desperation, begs his daughter to give her consent; and Tamsie promises to marry Carberry if she is in the same mind when she returns from Australia, where Malkin, whose conscience pricks him as regards the disinheritance of young Allan, is going, to make certain that the missing man is really dead.

Now, Allan was not drowned at all, and has become the mate of the steamer on which the Malkins return to England. He falls in love with Tamsie, who discovers his identity with the aforesaid legatee. Malkin makes full confession to him of his theft and his fraud, and when Carberry comes on board for an answer to his proposal, he finds Tamsie engaged to the mate. With a gleam of generous feeling, however, he refrains from handing Malkin over to the police.

was preceded by a dramatic episode by Harding Cox, played for the first time, and called

"THE FATAL DANCE."

Bob Barry .....MR. J. CLIFFORD BROOKE
Hilda Barton .....MISS MAGGIE NEILL
Consuela Marquez .....MISS GREVILLE MOORE

Mesmerism is the motive of this sketch, which, with a first-rate dancer in the principal part, we can imagine doing well at a variety theatre. The scene is the "green-room" of the Theatre Royal, Alchester. Hilda Barton has been loved by Bob Barry, a theatrical manager, but he has transferred his affection to a dancer named Consuela Marquez. Consuela is a good "subject," and Hilda has no difficulty in putting her into a mesmeric trance. Moved by jealousy, Hilda conceives the idea of "suggesting" to Consuela, whose health is very delicate, that she shall dance herself to death; and the unfortunate girl, under Hilda's influence, actually does so, and falls dead upon the stage.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE,

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, W.C.

Proprietors
Sole Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. & Mrs. FRANK WYATT.
... ... CHARLES FROHMAN

Monday, August 30th, at 8, and Every Evening following at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

"ARSÈNE LUPIN,"

A Play, in Four Acts,

By MM. FRANCIS DE CROISSET and MAURICE LEBLANC.

The Duc de Charmerace	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Guerchard	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Gournay-Martin	Mr. ERIC LEWIS
The Examining Magistrate	Mr. HERBERT BUNSTON
Charolais	Mr. HERBERT DANSEY
Hippolyte, Anastase, Bernard — Charolais' Three Sons	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE, Mr. HAROLD CHAPIN, Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
The Commissary of Police	Mr. PAUL BERTON
The Concierge	Mr. P. L. JULIAN
Firmin	Mr. D. J WILLIAMS
The Agent of Police	Mr. WILLIAM LUFF
Jean	Mr. WARBURTON GAMBLE
Poursin, Dieusy, Bonavert — Guerchard's Agents	Mr. ERNEST YOUNG, Mr. GEORGE LESTOCQ, Mr. ROBERT HORTON
Alfred ... ... (a Butler) ...	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Locksmith	Mr. DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Sonia	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
Germaine Gournay-Martin	Miss MARGUERITE LESLIE
Victoire	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
Jeanne	Miss ANN CLEAVER
Marie	Miss GWENDOLEN RAYNE
Concierge	Miss MARY BARTON
Irma	Miss DOROTHY BELL

Act I. ... ... AT M. GOURNAY-MARTIN'S CHATEAU IN BRITTANY.
Act II. ... ... AT M. GOURNAY-MARTIN'S MANSION IN PARIS.
Act III.

N.B.—There will only be a short interval between Acts II. and III

Act IV. ... ... AT THE DUC DE CHARMERACE'S FLAT.

The Scenery painted by Messrs. WALTER HANN & SON.
The Costumes by Madame HAYWARD, New Bond Street.
Furniture by Messrs. OETZMANN & Co., Ltd., Hampstead Road, W.

The Play Produced under the Direction of Mr. DION BOUCICAULT.

The Novel of the Play is published by Messrs. MILLS & BOON.

General Manager for CHARLES FROHMAN ... ... W. LESTOCQ.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s 6d; Orchestra Stalls 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s 6d; Dress Circle, 6s.; Upper Circle 4s.; Pit, 2s 6d; Gallery, 1s.
Box Office 10 to 10. Telephone, GERRARD 312.

Business Manager ... ... JAMES W. MATHEWS.

Stage Manager ... DUNCAN McRAE | Musical Director ... ... JOHN CROOK.

GLOBE THEATRE.—Wednesday Evening next, at 8 o'clock, CHARLES FROHMAN and HENRY W. SAVAGE present "Madame X," by ALEXANDRE BISSON. The Globe Theatre Company, including Miss LENA ASHWELL.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Wednesday, September 15th, CHARLES FROHMAN will present "The Great Divide," by WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY.

ICES TEA AND COFFEE can be had of the Attendents

G. HARMSWORTH & Co., Printers, 115 Drury Lane, W.C. Telephone No. 664 Ger...

A piece of the class to which Arsène Lupin—the original of which was produced at the Athenée, Paris, on Oct. 23 last year—belongs must be taken for what it "claims" to be—a creator of excitement by the aid of ingenious incidents. Judged by this standard, MM. de Croisset and Leblanc's drama performs its function, though the earlier acts are rather wanting in movement. There indeed is an excess of preparation, and we are some time in coming to the startling sensations of the third and fourth acts.

The story opens at the country-house of M. Gournay-Martin, a rich collector of art-treasures and curiosities. He has some time since been robbed by an audacious burglar, named Arsène Lupin, who has effected his purpose by impersonating a famous detective called Guerchard. One of M. Gournay-Martin's most precious possessions is a tiara of great beauty and value; and now Lupin writes to the collector telling him that he—Lupin—will "fetch" the tiara on a certain date at midnight. M. Gournay-Martin's daughter Germaine is engaged to be married to the Duc de Charmerace, who has returned from seven years of exploration at the South Pole. The real Duc, we may mention here, is dead, and it is Arsène Lupin who is impersonating him at the collector's château. He is attracted by Sonia Kritchnoff, Germaine's ill-used companion, who falls deeply in love with the supposed Duc. Sonia is a thief, or, at any rate, has committed a theft in the past, and she now steals a pearl necklace belonging to Germaine as the family are leaving the château for Paris to protect the threatened treasures at M. Gournay-Martin's mansion from the indefatigable Lupin.

When they arrive, they find that the house has been broken into, and that an examining magistrate is investigating the crime with an extreme foolishness which contrasts with the quiet observation of Guerchard. The detective suspects Sonia; and the necklace would be found in her possession but for the readiness of Lupin, who removes it from the pocket of her cloak before it is searched by Guerchard. But the detective's suspicion of the identity of the Duc with Arsène Lupin has been aroused by various details; and matters come to a climax in the third act, when the supposed Duc and the detective are left in the burgled house to guard the celebrated tiara from Lupin. The appointed hour approaches, and Guerchard taxes the thief with his impersonation. Lupin maintains his assumed identity, and dares the detective to fire on him. As the hand reaches midnight, Guerchard clutches the box which contains the tiara; but Lupin tells him that the ornament that he holds is an imitation which has been substituted for the real ornament, which the thief daringly displays, and then runs away with it, followed hotly by Guerchard's men.

In the last act we are introduced to Lupin's flat in Paris. It is fitted with various means of concealment and escape, notably with a safe which, in ordinary circumstances, is concealed by a bookcase running on castors. Here Lupin, still posing as the Duc, is waited upon and worshipped by his gang; and here he is visited by Guerchard, who gloats over Lupin's defeat. Guerchard has Sonia at his mercy, but offers not to arrest her if Lupin will surrender himself. To this Lupin consents, and allows himself to be handcuffed; but he afterwards breaks his bonds, and keeps Guerchard and his agents at bay by threatening them with a bomb. Lupin then removes the bookcase, gets into the lift, and descends. His pursuers follow; but when they are in the lift they are raised into a cell above, where they are detained while Lupin makes up as Guerchard, and, aided by the disguise, escapes with Sonia, who, reformed by love, has vowed to steal no more.

A Season under the Direction of Miss BERYL FABER and Mr. M. V. LEVEAUX

To-night (Tuesday), August 31st, 1909, at 8.45

Will be presented, for the First Time, a New and Original Comedy, in Three Acts, called

"A SENSE OF HUMOUR"

By BERYL and COSMO HAMILTON.

MAJOR ARCHIBALD HAY	Mr. GUY STANDING
SIR WILLIAM HUTTON, Bart.	Mr. LESLIE FABER
MEAKIN ... ... (Sir William's Man) ...	Mr. ERNEST COSHAM
VIOLA HAY	Miss AURIOL LEE (By courtesy of Mr. J. E. VEDRENNE)
STANNER (Lady Hutton's Maid) ...	Miss BUENA BENT
LADY HUTTON	Miss BERYL FABER

The Scene is laid in a Fishing Cottage on the Isle of Mull, which is shared by the Hays and the Huttons, and the action of the Play is all within twenty-four hours.

ACT I.	THE BREAKFAST ROOM.	(Morning.)
ACT II.	THE SAME.	(Evening.)
ACT III.	THE BOUDOIR.	(Five Minutes later.)

Preceded at 8.15 (for the First Time) by a Drama, in One Act, called

"THE MOBSWOMAN"

By LEON M. LION and W. STRANGE HALL.

MARGARET ELLERTON	Miss BUENA BENT
NETTA ELLERTON	Miss MADGE BURNAND
SIR PIERCE ROLVENDEN	Mr. CECIL KINNAIRD
GEORGE ROLVENDEN	Mr. H. WALTERS, Jun.

SCENE ... A ROOM IN MARGARET'S COTTAGE AT THELSTONE.

Ladies' Costumes by VIOLA, Ltd., 27, Albemarle Street, W. Furniture by Messrs. HAMPTON & SONS, Pall Mall.
The Special Aldin Pictures in Act I. kindly supplied by Messrs. LAWRENCE & JELLICOE, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden.

THE PLAYHOUSE
31/8/1909
Orch: Stall
J 5
This to be retained

3124 1909 Waters, J. Plays

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

When Beryl and Cosmo Hamilton's play was produced at the Comedy Theatre on Jan. 7, 1906, we stated that the audience frequently applauded the smartness of the dialogue, laughed at the occasional flashes of humour in the piece, and thoroughly appreciated the clever way in which the authors sustained the interest until the final fall of the curtain. As the comedy remains practically unaltered we need not modify our opinion of its revival by Miss Beryl Faber and Mr. M. V. Leveaux in commencing their season at the Playhouse on Tuesday; but our readers will be glad to be reminded of the salient points of the amusing story. Major Archibald Hay is a "good fellow" and a good sportsman, but (or should we say "therefore"?) he takes the many good things with which the world has provided him very much for granted. These "many good things" include a charming wife—a wife, moreover, with a temperament, who is justly incensed at being treated more as an intelligent piece of valuable furniture than as a living, breathing woman, hungry for the outward proofs of an affection which she has almost begun to doubt. In order to arouse jealousy in her husband Viola Hay starts a promising flirtation with the husband of her friend, Margaret Hutton. Major Hay and Sir William Hutton have rented jointly a fishing cottage in the Isle of Mull. Billy, who is something of a gay Lothario, responds very readily to the advances of the lady, and with Viola stage-managing the scene, he is brought to the pitch of taking her in his arms and kissing her just as the Major comes along. He, exceeding wroth, rushes to Margaret Hutton with the tale, and talks of divorcing Viola. Lady Hutton is a woman of the level-headed, sunny type. She makes light of the whole thing, tells Archie that it is the flimsiest of flirtations, and suggests that, to teach the others a lesson, they, too, shall feign an undying affection for one another. This plan at first succeeds admirably, and Viola is completely nonplussed at the turn of affairs; but a little reflection enables her to imagine the true facts of the case. She imparts her suspicions to Billy, and in their turn they decide to "play up." It is now Margaret and Archie who are nonplussed, so much so that Margaret that same evening decides to play her trump card, and retires to her boudoir, followed by the obedient Archie, and the door is locked. This master-stroke gives them the rubber. Viola and Billy throw off all pretence: Billy breaks things (a pleasant little habit of his when annoyed), and Viola turns the vials of her wrath on Margaret, whom she vows to ruin socially. An interview between the two women, however, leads to a complete disclosure of the motives underlying their actions, and it is a case of "and kissed again with tears" all round.

"THE MOBSWOMAN."

Margaret Ellerton .....Miss Buena Bent
Netta Ellerton .....Miss Madge Buanand
Sir Pierce Rolvenden .....Mr. Cecil Kinnaird
George Rolvenden .....Mr. H. Walters, jun.

This was the story, well and tersely told, of a girl who had been driven to a life of crime by the force of circumstances. She had spent some years in America, where she had been known as Meg the Mobswoman, a daring and successful thief. Meg returns to England a woman with money, to find her mother and sister, who have known nothing of her life in America, on the point of starvation. The help she brings them comes too late to save the mother, but to Netta, the younger sister, it brings all that makes life worth living. Netta is loved by George Rolvenden, nephew of Sir Pierce Rolvenden, whose hobby is amateur detective work. Meg has been up to her tricks again; a house in the neighbourhood has been burgled and some valuable jewels stolen. Sir Pierce comes to see his nephew's fiancée, and tells the sisters that he has various clues to the criminal whom he is trying to detect. This he is able to do in a very short time owing to the extraordinary manner in which Meg has omitted to cover her tracks (unpardonable from a thief's point of view, we should imagine), the place fairly bristling with incriminating evidence. Being alone with Meg, he taxes her with the crime, and identifies her with the famous (but somewhat careless) mobswoman. She owns up boldly, but implores him not to wreck Netta's happiness; then, finding him obdurate, tells him the whole touching story of her sad life, and finally wins from him a promise to keep silence on condition that she will vanish for ever from Netta's life. This she agrees to do, and, taking up a bottle of prussic acid, is about to drink it when Sir Pierce dashes it from her hand, and, touched by her single-hearted devotion to her sister, he vows that in future life shall give her those compensations which it has lacked in the past.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN & HENRY W. SAVAGE

PRESENT

MADAME X

A Play in a Prologue and Three Acts by Alexandre Bisson.

Louis Fleuriot		Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE
Raymond Fleuriot		Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Noel		Mr. CYRIL HARCOURT
Périssard		.. Mr. G. W. ANSON
Merivel		.. Mr. O. P. HEGGIE
Laroque		Mr. C. M. HALLARD
Dr. Chesnel		Mr. HERBERT ROSS
Victor	(Servant at Hotel)	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Presiding Judge		.. Mr. J. H. BARNES
Valmorin	(Public Prosecutor)	Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE
Clerk of the Court		.. Mr. JOHN KELT
Usher of the Court		Mr. W. L. BRANSCOMBE
Foreman of the Jury		Mr. J. P. KIRKWOOD
Fontaine	(Gendarme)	Mr. PHILIP KNOX
Jacqueline Fleuriot		Miss LENA ASHWELL
Hélène		Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Marie		Miss NANNIE BENNETT
Madame Varenne		Miss WINIFRED HARRIS
Rose		Miss ELSIE CHESTER

"MADAME X."

Play in a Prologue and Three Acts, Translated from the French of Alexandre Bisson, Produced at the Globe Theatre on Wednesday, Sept. 1.

D-16
3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Prologue	.. Louis Fleuriot's Study in his House at Passy
	(Twenty years elapse.)
Act I.	At the Hotel of The Three Crowns, Bordeaux
Act II. ..	Raymond Fleuriot's Study, Bordeaux
Act III.	The Court of Assizes, Bordeaux

The Play produced under the Direction of Mr. DION BOUCICAULT.

The Scenery by Messrs. W. HANN & SON.
The Costumes by Madame HAYWARD, New Bond Street.
The Hats by THE MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Ruy Blas"	...	Mendelssohn
SPANISH DANCES	...		Moszkowski
SELECTION	"La Tosca"		Puccini
HUNGARIAN DANCE	...	...	Brahms

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY NEXT, SEPTEMBER 8th, AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ...	GEORGE A. HIGHLAND
Musical Director	C. PENN-LEYLAND
General Manager .. for Charles Frohman) ..	W. LESTOCQ

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Business Manager .. ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

La Femme X, the work of M. Alexandre Bisson, the well-known French farce writer, was produced at the Porte-Saint-Martin, Paris, on Dec. 15 last year, with Mme. Jane Hading as Jacqueline and M. Jean Coquelin as Noel. It proved thoroughly successful, as the work of one so well acquainted with the requirements of the stage and of Mme. Hading was likely to be; and the success of the original will certainly be repeated by the translation which Mr. Charles Frohman presented at the Globe Theatre on Wednesday evening. And here we may congratulate ourselves on the prevalent practice of giving to the French author the honour which is his due when offering the public a translation of his play. In the last generation Madame X. would have been handed to some able playwright to translate, and his name would have appeared on the programmes instead of the real author's. The method adopted by Mr. Frohman has all the advantages of honesty.

The moral of Madame X. is that, though a man's wife may leave him and elope with a lover, he should not, when she comes back and pleads for forgiveness, thrust her into the street. This is what is done by Louis Fleuriot, a stern and passionate lawyer, when his wife, Jacqueline, returns home to see her child, who is ill. Fleuriot is inexorable, and shows her the door without making any provision for her future, thereby practically condemning her to a life of shame. This conduct is the more unworthy, as she brought him a very handsome dot, which he retains. The expulsion takes place in a prologue, and the action commences twenty years after, when Jacqueline has sunk very low in the social scale, and has returned to Bordeaux from Buenos Ayres in the company of a man with a shady past named Laroque. He is visited by an old acquaintance, Périssard, who has established a blackmailing business in Paris, and wants Laroque to take charge of a branch of it. From certain remarks made by Jacqueline, who is addicted to ether-drinking, Laroque has learned something of her history; and Périssard suggests that Fleuriot, who has now risen high in his profession, shall be blackmailed by a demand for Jacqueline's dowry. When she is told of this, she says she would rather die than consent to such an infamy; and on Laroque insisting on departing for the purpose, she shoots him dead with a revolver, and is arrested for the murder.

She is tried for the crime at the Bordeaux assizes, and her own son, Raymond Fleuriot, who is now a young barrister, undertakes the defence of "Madame X."; for Jacqueline, who is so much altered as to be unrecognisable, refuses to state her identity or explain the motive of her act. The scene of the trial is effectively elaborated; and Noel makes an impassioned speech in the prisoner's defence, urging that her motive for preventing Laroque from doing what would cause misery to her friends was an "extenuating circumstance" which ought to earn for her an acquittal. This is also the opinion of the jury; and Jacqueline is allowed to die naturally on a chair in the emptied court, after recognising her son, and being forgiven—too late—by her repentant husband.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

P.W.T.

1/9/09

Orch. Stall

H 22

To be retained
No Bonnets allowed.

GATTI ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, BELFAST, &c.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee and Manager .... FRANK CURZON.

Every Evening at 8 o'clock,

FRANK CURZON'S
NEW PRODUCTION

"Dear Little Denmark"

A Danish Musical Incident in Two Acts.

Chatter, Jingles and Tunes by PAUL A. RUBENS.

The Duke Ernst von Rasmussen	... ...	Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Karl	(his Nephew and Heir, Hon. Col. of Body-guard)	Mr. C. MORTON HORNE
Conrad Petersen	... (A Bell Founder)	Mr. BERTRAM WALLIS
Simon Jorgensen	(Burgomaster of Falsternore)	Mr. JOHN CLULOW
Louis Jensen ...	Apprenticed to Hansen and in addition Professional Letter Writer)	Mr. A. W. BASKCOMB
Sergeant Ohls ...	... (Of the Duke's Body-guard)	Mr. FRED W. RING
Chamberlain ...	... ... (To the Duke)	Mr. WARWICK WELLINGTON
Robles	... (An English Butler)	Mr. J. DORNAN
Town Crier ...	... ...	Mr. IAGO LEWYS
Neils	... ... (A Clockmaker)	Mr. J. B. FRASER
	AND
Hans Hansen ...	...(Official Clock Winder to the Town of Falsternore)	Mr. HUNTLEY WRIGHT
Orletha	A Native of Jutland – Servant to the Burgomaster)	Miss GRACIE LEIGH
Nardia	... ... (The Duke's Daughter) ...	... Miss HAZEL DAWN
Adeline	... (Principal Genée Girl)	Miss PEGGY BETHEL
Members of the Duke's Ballet Troupe	... ...	... Miss DAISY FISHER
	... ...	Miss CLAIRE LYNCH
	... ...	... Miss GLADYS BEECH
	... ...	Miss WINNIE ERSKINE
	... ...	... Miss NANCY RICH
	... ...	Miss KITTY SPARROW
Elsa	.. (Principal Dancer) ...	Miss PHYLLIS MONKMAN
	AND
Christine	(Daughter of the Burgomaster) ...	Miss ISABEL JAY

[illegible] Dukes of Courtiers, Villagers, Councillors, Guards, Men at Arms, Retainers, Clockmakers, Choir-Girls, etc., etc.

Act I. Scene ... Outside the Public Park at Falsternore, a Small Town on the Coast of Denmark (Bruce-Smith).

Act II. Scene The Duke's Castle at Copenhagen. 14 days later (Bruce-Smith).

Dresses designed by C. KARL and executed by L. & H. NATHAN and E. LANDOLFF & Co. Ladies' and Art Dresses and Hats by SLEFFRIDGE & Co. Miss Isabel Jay's Dresses by LIBERTY. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Play Produced by FRANK CURZON.

Dances arranged by FRED FARREN.

Musical Conductor ... ... J. A. de ORELLANA.
Stage Manager ... ... EDWARD SHALE.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.

[illegible] Orchestra Stalls 6d. Balcony Stalls 1s. Upper Circle 1st Two Rows, 2s.; Other Rows, 1s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

General Manager .. .. T. B. VAUGHAN.

Environment and "atmosphere" are necessary even in a musical play, but it can hardly be said that Mr. Paul Rubens is as much at home in the Kattegat as he was in the Zuyder Zee, or that his latest "incident" with chatter and jingle, entitled Dear Little Denmark, produced before a packed house on Wednesday at the Prince of Wales's, sustains his reputation as a contriver of light entertainments of the stage. Fascination and charm mark the more sentimental melodies in the score, and the finale of the first act is quite musicianly. Of amusing dialogue, however, there is little; but the company, numbering as it does some of the chief experts in Rubens methods, works admirably together, and when the funny men become boldly familiar with the text, they may sound greater depths of drollery, and the whimsicality of the whole may then be cast in exactly the right mould to draw the thousands of lovers of musical comedy to be found in London and the suburbs–le monde qui s'amuse. For his story the author, as far as we are aware, has not been searching among any family archives. It is entirely his own invention, and is quite simple. The Duke Ernst Von Rasmuesen, drest in the brief authority common to musical comedy magnates, has a musical ear, and also the gout. The first is a cause of much distress arising from the clangour of the bells, for which the hero, Conrad Petersen, a bell-founder, is responsible. He is disgraced by the irate Duke, who finds a factotum in a comic clock-winder, Hans Hansen, who professes to be able to tune the chimes and cure the gout. Conrad is thrust into prison, and his sweetheart Christine, given over to Hans by the Duke, who is the girl's godfather.

Hans, however, gets into grievous trouble himself, because he is quite unable to cure the irritable Duke. We need not dwell at any great length on the simple means by which the lovers are brought together and made happy. Christine, unlike other sweethearts, does not laugh at locksmiths but steals the key of Conrad's dungeon. Conrad becomes one of the great Danes, and assists in a love duet, in a beautiful uniform, and all is well.

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

Under the Management of Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER

EVERY EVENING at 8

WILL BE ACTED

MID-CHANNEL

A PLAY, IN FOUR ACTS, BY

ARTHUR PINERO

Theodore Blundell	Mr. LYN HARDING
The Hon. Peter Mottram	Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Leonard Ferris	Mr. ERIC MATURIN
Warren (Servant at Lancaster Gate)	Mr. A. E. DRINKWATER
Cole (Servant at the Flat in Cavendish Square) ...	Mr. STUART DENNISON
Rideout (Mr. Ferris's Servant)	Mr. SYDNEY HAMILTON
Upholsterers	Mr. OWEN NARES Mr. T. WEGUELIN
Zoe Blundell	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH (By Arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN)
Mrs. Pierpoint	Miss KATE SERJEANTSON
Ethel Pierpoint	Miss ROSALIE TOLLER
Mrs. Annerly	Miss NINA SEVENING
Lena	Miss RUTH MAITLAND
A Maidservant	Miss FAITH CELLI

The Scene is laid in London. The Events of the First Act take place on an Afternoon in January. The rest of the Action occurs on a day in the following June.

THE SCENERY PAINTED BY MR. W. RAPHAEL.

A signal will be given from the stage by the sounding of a bell one minute before the curtain rises upon each Act.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Sir Arthur Pinero is indeed amazing. The older he grows the better he writes; and, if he goes on at this rate, we may expect more masterly outputs still from his alert and penetrative intellect. Strong in its simplicity, deep in its dealings with the elemental instincts of humanity, supremely workmanlike in its technique, and with certain mannerisms of style entirely abandoned, Mid-Channel is a masterpiece. There is no straining for effect, no hyper-ingenious invention in this admirable drama. The plant develops quite naturally from its seed; and, such is the sense of inevitableness which the author creates, that we almost overlook the consummate excellence of his conception and contrivance. And Sir Arthur does not shrink from the stern reproof which is the sermon of his story. Quite unexpectedly—for the situation of Mr. and Mrs. Blundell is so common that it escapes attention in the heat of the play's action—comes this blow from the shoulder, delivered with unerring aim at one of the most pernicious tendencies of modern society; and the hopeless climax, when the wretched woman realises the shipwreck she has made of her life, is handled with a discretion which entirely robs it of staginess. In Mid-Channel Sir Arthur Pinero has excelled himself; and his latest play is a serious and valuable contribution to the dramatic literature of the epoch

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Blundell have started married life with the intention of "having a good time," and the agreement that there shall be no "troublesome brats of children" to interfere with their advancement and their amusements. They have prospered financially and socially, and have been happy, until the "mid-channel" of life is reached. Then they have begun to quarrel, and as they have no family to keep them together and to supply the want felt by married people on the wane, they have gone their own ways. Blundell has taken a mistress, a divorced woman, Mrs. Annerly; and Mrs. Blundell has yielded to a lover, a young man called Leonard Ferris, with whom she has cohabited while on an Italian trip. Mrs. Blundell is a woman of impulses, most of them good ones. Ferris loved her secretly for years before she separated from her husband; and, realising then the hopelessness of his suit, courted a young girl called Ethel Pierpoint, a warm friend of Mrs. Blundell's. When the latter realises that the liaison is spoiling two people's lives, she breaks it off and sends Ferris away passionately furious at her decision. Blundell simultaneously becomes weary of the companionship of Mrs. Annerly, and buys her off with a cheque for £2,500; and his friend, the Hon. Peter Mottram, sees a chance of bringing the husband and wife together. Mrs. Blundell comes to her husband's flat for a reconciliation, and he tells her what he has done since they separated, and asks her to come back to him. Like Tess in Mr. Thomas Hardy's story, Mrs. Blundell eventually owns to her adultery with Ferris, and asks Blundell to forgive her. But the masculine feeling of injury is too strong; he becomes violently jealous, and casts her off, agreeing, however, to let her divorce him if she likes. But before she goes she tells Blundell that their marriage was doomed from the moment they decided that it should be childless; and this speech is the moral of the play.

The unhappy woman, who has meant well throughout, now returns to Ferris, and tells him that her husband will facilitate a divorce if Ferris will promise to marry her afterwards. But, in the interval, Ferris has pushed on matters with Ethel Pierpoint, and has proposed to her. He offers, indeed, to break the engagement and marry Mrs. Blundell, but she refuses to consent to such a sacrifice. There is but one way out of the difficulty, and she takes it. She throws herself from the balcony of Ferris's flat into the street; and her suicide ends the play.

3424
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees .. .. Popular Playhouses, Ltd.
Managing Directors .. .. HENRY R. SMITH and ERNEST CARPENTER.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, 17, Craven Street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Saturday, Sept. 4th, 1909, and every Evening at 8

MATINEE WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2.30

THE ROMANTIC PLAY:

THE

PROUD PRINCE

By JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY,

With Music specially composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Characters.

King Robert of Sicily	... ...	Mr. MATHESON LANG
Count Hildebrand	... ...	... Mr. ERIC MAYNE
Diogenes ...	(The Court Fool)	... Mr. ERNEST GRIFFIN
Theron ...	(The Executioner)	... Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
The Archangel ...	... ...	... Mr. HARVEY BRABAN
Hieronymus ...	(A Priest)	... Mr. SIDNEY VAUTIER
Sigurd ...	(Captain of the Guard)	... Mr. A. G. LEIGH
The Archbishop of Syracuse	... ...	Mr. COWLEY WRIGHT
Zal, Rustum	(Lysabetta's Slaves)	... Mr. ERNEST CRESFAN, Mr. J. R. GILLESPIE
An Old Exile ...	... ...	... Mr. RICHARD ANDEAN
A Young Man ...	... ...	... Mr. TERENCE O'BRIEN
A Soldier ...	... ...	... Mr. C. A. CHANDLER
An Old Citizen ...	... ...	... HARRY LESTER
A Townsman ...	... ...	... W. COATS BUSH
Perpetua ...	(The daughter of Theron)	... Miss DOROTHY THOMAS
Lysabetta ...	(A Courtesan) ...	... Miss FRANCES DILLON
Helena, Corinna, Theodora	(Her favourites)	... Miss OLIVIA GLYNN, Miss MABEL MANNERING, Miss ALICE COX
Messalinda, Faustina, Yolande	(Ladies of the Court)	Miss LILIAN KEVILL DAVIES, Miss G. CONWAY TEARLE, Miss MAUDE LESLIE
A Young Exile ...	... ...	... Miss AVICE SCHOLTZ
A Townswoman	... ...	... ... Miss EDWARDS

Courtiers, Soldiers, Priests, Courtesans, Exiles, &c.

The whole produced under the Stage Direction of

ERNEST CARPENTER.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.
THE ARCHANGEL.
Scene—The Mountain-top.

ACT II.
THE STRANGE WOMAN.
Scene—The House of Lysabetta.

ACT III.
THE SACRISTAN.
Scene—The Cathedral at Syracuse.

ACT IV.
THE MARTYR.
Scene—The Arena.

The Scenery Designed and Painted by E. C. NICHOLLS, and Assistants.

The Costumes designed by Mr. KARL and executed by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN.

The Floral Decorations by Messrs. J. BAUMLER & CO.
The Wigs by C. H. FOX, Ltd.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. SULLIVAN BROOKE, will play selections in the intervals, as per list overleaf.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. .. Mr. W. F. CROWE
Stage Manager .. .. Mr. S. MAJOR JONES

Box Office (ANDREW SPENCER) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

The legend of Robert the Bad, King of Sicily, is the framework upon which Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy—whose work for the stage is well known on both sides of the Atlantic—has woven a romantic play that we think will fill the Lyceum for many nights to come. The theme has inspired the author to write with poetic fervour; and the supernatural element is treated with considerable reverence—a quality that is also to be noted in what may be called the religious scenes. The climaxes are arrived at naturally; the effects which are dramatic are reached without any striving for them; and there is running through the piece the fervent repentance of the stricken hero, who turneth away from his wickedness, to find only too surely that the vicious courses of a ruler steeped in sin impose upon the ruled much misery. The ennobling purity of the heroine, too, strikes a note of sympathy that is insistent, continuous; and the main issue is never obscured or involved. The enormous house that gave such an enthusiastic reception on Saturday night to the work acclaimed once more the success of a popular play based on a story easily "understanded of the people," finely acted, and beautifully mounted, and Messrs. Ernest Carpenter, who has produced, and Henry R. Smith have again done the trick.

The play opens on the mountain-top; and we are revealed much of the wickedness of Robert of Sicily. A slave to the baser passions, he laughs at the maiden Perpetua, who with virginal innocence suggests marriage as the outcome of the love that he avows for her. But the libertine is in no mood for romance, and the maiden is dragged away to the house of Lysabetta, the chief of his mistresses. He then piles the Pelion of blasphemy upon the Ossa of arrogance by reviling the words of the "Magnificat" that are being chanted by the monks. As the impressive sentence rings out in majestic emphasis, "He hath put down the mighty from their seat; He hath exalted them of low degree," his ribald laughter is heard above the cadences of the solemn chant. But the avenger is at hand, and the reverberating thunder proclaims the wrath of an offended Deity. The heavenly messenger pronounces the doom of the insolent King. He takes the form of a misshapen jester, and a jeering and mocking crowd treat his assertion of kingship as a huge joke.

The second act takes us to the house of Lysabetta, the strange woman, who is surrounded by her disciples. The unsullied Perpetua excites the hatred of the syrens who belong to the oldest profession in the world, and they wed her in mockery to Robert, who, in his new rôle of Diogenes, the Court fool, is treated with contumely. At first he behaves like a satyr; but when the maiden, crossing herself, and calling upon the Virgin, prepares to stab herself rather than submit, the man's nature is wholly changed, and his chief concern is to take her from the unhallowed place and set her free. He thinks out a plan whereby as a second Orpheus she shall follow him wherever he pipes; but the villain, Hildebrand, foils him in this. Then the penitent takes her under his cloak, which, he says, has been worn by a man infected with the plague. The ruse succeeds, and the now devoted pair take sanctuary in the cathedral at Syracuse. Here we learn from a crowd of exiles of the wretchedness of the people of Sicily; and the story is advanced a stage when Robert, gathering divine strength, gives Hildebrand—who, with Lysabetta, follows the fugitives—his death-blow with a large iron cross.

In the last act Perpetua, who has been condemned as a sorceress, is brought into the arena to be burnt at the stake if the ordeal by battle goes against her. Her defender is her father, Theron, and her challenger Robert, who hopes to be defeated, thereby saving her and sacrificing his own life. He gains his desire, but the Archangel intervenes and saves him. He again wears his kingly robes, and Perpetua will share the honour and dignity of a new and nobler reign.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8TH, 1909, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

HERBERT TRENCH

PRESENTS

SHAKESPEARE'S TRAGEDY

KING LEAR

Lear ...	(King of Britain)	... Mr. NORMAN MCKINNEL
King of France		... Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
Duke of Burgundy...		... Mr. E. A. WARBURTON
Duke of Cornwall		... Mr. J. FISHER WHITE
Duke of Albany		... Mr. KENYON MUSGRAVE
Earl of Kent		... Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Earl of Gloucester...		... Mr. JAMES HEARN
Edgar ...	(Son to Gloucester)	... Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
Edmund ...	(Bastard Son to Gloucester)	... Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Doctor		... Mr. EDWARD RIGBY
Fool		... Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
Oswald ...	(Steward to Goneril)	... Mr. TREVOR LOWE
Curan		... Mr. J. SHERARD
Gentleman		... Mr. GORDON BAILEY
Herald		... Mr. CASSELS COBB
Servant to Cornwall		... Mr. F. RIDLEY
Captain to Goneril		... Mr. R. W. HUTTON
Attendant to Lear		... Mr. W. R. HAINES
Messenger		... Mr. R. MCLEOD
Cordelia		... Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
Goneril		... Miss ADA FERRAR
Regan		... Miss MARIE POLINI

Act I. ...	Scene 1	...	Lear's Palace
	Scene 2	...	Gloucester's Castle
	Scene 3	...	Albany's Palace
Act II. ...	Scene 1	...	Before Gloucester's Castle
	Scene 2	...	A Wood
	Scene 3	...	Before Gloucester's Castle
Act III. ...	Scene 1	...	A Heath
	Scene 2	...	A Hovel
	Scene 3	...	Within Gloucester's Castle
Act IV. ...	Scene 1	...	Cliffs near Dover
	Scene 2	...	A Tent
Act V. ...	Scene 1	...	British Camp near Dover
	Scene 2	...	A Wood

General Stage Director ... ... NORMAN MCKINNEL

The Play produced for HERBERT TRENCH by FRANK VERNON.
Music specially composed by NORMAN O'NEILL.
The Scenery, Costumes and Properties designed by CHARLES RICKETTS.
Scenery painted by JOSEPH HARKER. Costumes by SIMMONDS & Co. and Madame FRECKNALL.
Metal Work by Mrs BISHOP

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

General Manager ... ... CARL F. LEYEL
MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... NORMAN O'NEILL | STAGE MANAGER ... CHARLES LA TROBE

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request is made for the benefit of the audience and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out

The Box Office (Mr. W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10
Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £4 4s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 5s.; Upper Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.
Telephone 3344 Gerrard

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN

1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Lessee & Manager ... ... FREDERICK HARRISON
Director - HERBERT TRENCH
Business Manager ... ... HORACE WATSON

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

FRENCH

Wednesday
Evening

Sept. 8

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No. [illegible]

This ticket is not transferable

The Orchestra is not disposed to the right of the Manager to make an alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

Lady Diana is chosen Deputy Mistress of the Beverley Hounds

T.R.D.L.

9/9/1909

Retain this portion, which is the Voucher for One Seat only, and does not admit to the Theatre.

Row	No.
B	3

Orches. Stall

THE WHIP

BY

CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

Incidental Music Composed by J. M. GLOVER

Mr. BASIL GILL	as	Rev. VERNER HASLAM
Mr. GEORGE BARRETT	,,	TOM LAMBERT
Mr. CYRIL KEIGHTLEY	,,	Captain GREVILLE SARTORIS
Mr. VINCENT CLIVE	,,	HUBERT, EARL OF BRANCASTER
Mr. CHARLES ROCK	,,	JOE KELLY
Mr. ALFRED BUCKLAW	,,	The MARQUIS OF BEVERLEY
Mr. CECIL CAMERON	,,	HARRY ANSON
Mr. FRED GROVE	,,	TOM FOSTER
Mr. CHARLES BLACKALL	,,	Captain RAYNER
Miss FANNY BROUGH	as	The Hon. Mrs. BEAMISH
Miss JESSIE BATEMAN	,,	LADY DIANA SARTORIS
Miss NANCY PRICE	,,	Mrs. D'AQUILA
Miss MADGE FABIAN	,,	MYRTLE ANSON
Miss MAY WARLEY	,,	LADY ANTROBUS
Mrs. EDWIN PALMER	,,	Mrs. Purley
Miss ELLA CLARKSON	,,	Mrs. Tomlin
Miss JOAN BURTON	,,	Mrs. Pelham
Miss WINIFRED BATEMAN	,,	Lady Gore
Miss OLIVE PALMER	,,	Lady Middleton
Miss MARJORIE DAY	,,	Miss Fordyce
Miss GERTIE BRITTON	,,	Miss Carlyon
Mr. TOM RONALDS	,,	Emmett
Mr. BERT MONKS	,,	Carpenter at Tussaud's
Mr. FRED PENLEY	,,	Tomlin
Mr. JACK FROST	,,	Golder
Mr. E. MORGAN	,,	Bunting
Mr. CHARLES GRAHAME	,,	Lord Clanmore
Mr. A. C. HARDIE	,,	Sir Andrew Beck
Mr. HAROLD BELCHER	,,	Lord Langham
Mr. SYDNEY BOWER	,,	Mr. Quilter

Mesdames: LEWIS, YARRE, LEONARD, MAUDE, OST, PHILLIPS, MURRAY, FULTON, NICHOLLS.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I.

THE KENNELS, FALCONHURST [Henry Emden

ACT II.

FALCONHURST

Scene 1. TERRACE OF THE ITALIAN GARDENS [Henry Emden

Scene 2. THE LOGGIA [Henry Emden

Scene 3. THE GREAT HALL [R. McCleery

ACT III.

Scene 1. STABLES AT THE HORSE SHOW [Bruce Smith

Scene 2. GREVILLE SARTORIS' CHAMBERS [Bruce Smith

Scene 3. MADAME TUSSAUD'S [Bruce Smith

Scene 4. MORNING ROOM AT FALCONHURST [Bruce Smith

Scene 5. FALCONHURST STATION [Bruce Smith

Scene 6. MANFIELD JUNCTION [Bruce Smith

ACT IV.

NEWMARKET

Scene 1. THE RUTLAND ARMS Henry Emden

Scene 2. THE BIRDCAGE [R. McCleery

Scene 3. THE 2,000 GUINEAS [R. McCleery

Stage Manager ... ... ERNEST D'AUBAN

Acting Manager ... C. F. TAYLOR Secretary ... R. H. LINDO

Business Manager ... ... SIDNEY SMITH

Once again the saddling bell is heard at old Drury, and the smell of the turf is brought across the footlights. The story of The Whip opens at Falconhurst, the Yorkshire seat of the Marquis of Beverley, a fine, old-fashioned owner of race-horses. Living with him are his granddaughter, Lady Diana Sartoris, and Captain Greville Sartoris, the Marquis's cousin, who, although heir to the title, has no claim on the estates, which have been settled on Lady Diana. Captain Sartoris is a fortune-hunter, and wants to marry Lady Diana for her money. Lambert, the Marquis's trainer, tells her that someone in the stable has been giving away its secrets and declares his determination to find out the traitor, and a stranger artist whom Diana has met in the neighbourhood is suspected. A motor-car with the artist and a lady dashes past. The lady is thrown out, unhurt, but the artist is picked up insensible, and is, by orders of the Marquis, carried to the Castle. The stranger it appears is Lord Brancaster. The lady is a certain Mrs. D'Aquila.

In the next act, at Falconhurst, where Lord Brancaster has been carried and is slowly recovering from his accident, he falls in love with Lady Diana. Mrs. D'Aquila, who has been mixed up in several unsavoury divorce cases, tells Sartoris that Brancaster at one time proposed to marry her, and had even gone so far as to obtain a special licence; and Sartoris persuades her to go through a form of marriage with him, he personating the Earl. The local curate is one Haslam, over whom Sartoris has a hold owing to his participation in some gambling scandal. Haslam is easily coerced, and the ceremony takes place.

Brancaster recovers and proposes for the hand of Lady Diana. At a Hunt breakfast in the Great Hall at Falconhurst, her grandfather announces her engagement to Brancaster; but Mrs. D'Aquila appears and announces herself to be the latter's wife, and calls upon Haslam to confirm the marriage certificate she presents to the Marquis. The curate admits that he officiated, and Lord Beverley turns Brancaster and Mrs. D'Aquila out of his house.

The Marquis's horse, The Whip, is entered for the Two Thousand Guineas. Lady Diana, Sartoris, and Brancaster renew their vows, and Kelly, a big bookmaker, lays Brancaster the odds in thousands against The Whip. Lambert, who gets locked up by accident in Tussand's after closing time, overhears Sartoris and Mrs. D'Aquila planning the destruction of the horse while the animal is being conveyed by rail from Falconhurst to Newmarket. The Whip is got ready for his journey, when everyone is surprised at the absence of his trainer, who was to have accompanied the horse to the racecourse. Lambert is released, however, in time to inform Beverley of the plot against The Whip, and stop the horse going by the train, in which Captain Greville Sartoris travels ready to uncouple the horse-box and leave the poor animal to be killed in the accident which occurs. At the last moment before the race Greville Sartoris, having sworn an information against the jockey, Anson, for having threatened to murder him, the "jock" is arrested on Newmarket Heath, and as all the jockeys have weighed out, there is no possibility of obtaining a substitute. Lord Brancaster, at the head of an angry crowd, rescues Anson from the detectives, who are held prisoners while the jockey mounts and starts. The Whip wins, and the confession of Haslam leaves the Earl of Brancaster and Lady Diana Sartoris free to marry.

DETECTIVE (to Harris): "I must arrest you on a charge of threatening the life of Captain Sartoris."

BAN ON 'POTTED PLAY TITLE.'

On behalf of Messrs. Hamilton and Raleigh, authors of "The Whip" at Drury Lane Theatre, Messrs. Lumley and Lumley have written to Mr. Pelissier, of the Follies, at the Apollo Theatre, objecting to his use of the title "The Whip" for one of his "potted plays," and asking him to give an undertaking to discontinue its use. D.M. Oct-16

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

MISS JESSIE BATEMAN
as Lady Diana Sarrons
and
"TAD" WALP

SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 11TH, 1909, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

MAKING A GENTLEMAN

A Play in Four Acts,

By ALFRED SUTRO.

Sam Carey	Mr. BOURCHIER
Archibald Carey	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Lord Parkhurst	Mr. EDMUND MAURICE
Hon. Lionel Trenning	Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
Geoffrey Carleon	Mr. BERTRAM FORSYTH
Edmunds	Mr. WILLIAM BURCHILL
Franklin	Mr. CHARLES VERNON
Wilson	Mr. DALLAS CAIRNS
Baroness von Ritzen	Miss ETHEL IRVING (By arrangement with Mr. J. E. VEDRENNE)
Hon. Mrs. Trenning	Miss MURIEL BEAUMONT
Mrs. Revell	Miss AGNES THOMAS
Milly Chambers	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
Mrs. Irwin	Miss MARY WEIGALL

The Action passes in London, and in One Day.

ACT I.	Archibald Carey's Flat in South Audley Street
ACT II. ...	The Drawing Room of the Trenning's House in Norfolk Street
ACT III.	The Baroness's Drawing Room
ACT IV.	Sam Carey's Rooms

BUSINESS MANAGER	Mr. THOMAS STEVENS
STAGE MANAGER	Mr. ALEXANDER STUART
MUSICAL DIRECTOR	Mr. EDMOND RICKETT
TREASURER	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE
ACTING MANAGER	Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

GARRICK
THEATRE.

11/9/09

Orch. Stall

Row N

No 24

DAVIS ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW. BPL.450, 46

Mr. Sutro has written a curiously unequal and unsatisfactory play, the general effect of which is disappointing. On the other hand, it contains, in parts, as good or better work than this able dramatist has ever done. Its great defect is a division of sympathy. The merits and demerits of the principal personages are constantly on the balance, in our estimation, and the result is a wavering of allegiance and a weakening of dramatic interest which may seriously affect the prospects of the play. At first we are inclined to take the part of the old pickle manufacturer against his callous and ungrateful children; but when he is so foolish as to expect his son, whom he has encouraged, or at any rate allowed, to grow up in laziness and idleness to come out with him and travel in pickles, he loses our regard. The son, who starts by appearing to us a heartless "bounder," becomes curiously noble and sincere in his dealings with the rich widow; and the widow's past is insufficiently explained, though it is evident that she cares enough for society to want to creep into it on sufferance. The consistent characters are repellent. The affectionate husband is ridiculous; the wise grandmother is stony, and the daughter is consistently cruel and shallow. And yet some of the scenes are cleverly conceived and admirably written; and Mr. Bourchier has an important and effective part.

The hero is old Sam Carey, a retired pickle manufacturer who has made a fortune, and has desired that his descendants shall inhabit an upper sphere. He has married his daughter to the Hon. Lionel Trenning, a foolish young man with a passion for golf, whose father, Lord Parkhurst, is a "guinea-peg," whose name appears on the prospectuses of certain shady companies. Carey's son, Archibald, is a gay, exuberant, idle youth, who, like his sister, rarely visits Carey, who lives by himself, only consoled by the affection of the daughter of a deceased employee, an impulsive girl called Milly Chambers. Such is the state of things when Carey, having lost a large amount by the failure of one of Lord Parkhurst's companies, tries to retrieve himself by speculation, and loses almost his all. He breaks the news to Archibald, and asks the young man to come out with him to Canada and go into partnership with him in a pickle factory there. Archibald, whose heart is in the right place, consents, and the first act ends with Carey's exultation.

When the Hon. Mrs. Trenning and Lord Parkhurst hear of the plan they oppose it, and scheme a marriage between Archibald and a certain Baroness von Ritzen, who, having made a false step in her youth, has been married by an old man who has left her a large fortune, and is working her way into society. Archibald, horrified at the prospect of having to "travel" in pickles, is persuaded to call on the Baroness and propose. She sees through him easily, and is hurt that he has joined the army of fortune-hunters who seek her for her money. She extracts from him the truth about his instigators; Archibald finds that he is really in love with the Baroness, and she believes him when he says so; but when she learns that he has promised his father to go to Canada, she makes it a condition of their engagement that Archibald shall obtain his father's consent.

Carey, who has old-fashioned ideas of respectability, cannot endure that his son shall marry a lady with a "past," and in a scene with the Baroness he explains to her, with as much gentleness as possible, his objections. The Baroness is grieved, but bows to Carey's decision. But the son finds that he cannot give up the Baroness and fulfil his promise to his father. Carey, out-argued and baffled, feels that he is out of place in a world of strange ideas, and goes off to Canada with Milly Chambers.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

FALSE GODS

AN EGYPTIAN PLAY, IN FOUR ACTS.

Translated by J. B. FAGAN, from "LA FOI," by BRIEUX.

Music Specially Composed by SAINT-SAËNS.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

EVERY EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK.

FALSE GODS

The Pharaoh		HUBERT CARTER
The High Priest		HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE
Rheou	(Husband to Mieris)	EDWARD SASS
Pakh	(The Potter)	WILLIAM HAVILAND
Satni	(The Potter's Son)	HENRY AINLEY
Bitiou	(Slaves to Rheou)	JULES SHAW
Sokiti		LEON M. LION
Nourm		FRANK ESMOND
The Steward		A. SCOTT CRAVEN
The Exorcist		HENRY MORRELL
Mieris	(A Blind Woman)	Mrs. PATRICK CAMPBELL
Yaouma	(Her Handmaiden)	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Kirjipa		Miss BATEMAN (Mrs. Crowe).
Hanou		Miss LAURA COWIE
Taya	(Servants to Rheou)	Miss ADELINE BOURNE
Sitsinit		Miss JEAN HARKNESS
Nagaou		Miss HILDA MOORE
Delethi		Miss ELINOR FOSTER
Nahasi		Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
Monene		Miss CLARE HARRIS

ACTS I. AND II.
Rheou's House.

ACT III.
Outside Pakh's Hut.

(An interval of two months takes place between Acts 1 and 2.)

ACT IV.

SCENE 1.—In the Temple.

SCENE 2.—The Same.

The Scenery has been painted by JOSEPH HARKER.

The Dresses and Properties have been designed, and the Scenery supervised by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.

The Costumes have been executed by Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, W.C. and by Miss ROSE LEVERICK.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

FIRST MATINEE:

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 18th, and every following Wednesday and Saturday.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING.

ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

M. Brieux, who demolished popular education in Blanchette, modern art in Ménages d'Artistes, modern science in L'Evasion, universal suffrage in L'Engrenage, charity in Les Bienfaiteurs, and female fate generally in Les Trois Filles de M. Dupont—what could he do in the galley whose flag flies so bravely at the bottom of the Haymarket? For La Foi amounts to this: that the most merciless analyst of modern times has let himself loose on Religion. The late Mr. John Davidson in "The Theatrocrat" described an agnostic play being hooted off the stage by a furious mob lead by a bishop. We should not have been surprised if there had been a "row" on the first night of False Gods. For the play is simply an indictment of contemporary belief and contemporary worship. It is Robert Elsmere resigning his living and wounding his wife, it is Shelley being expelled from college, it is Bradlaugh before he was recognised to be a reactionary and received as respectable. There is not a custom or an absurdity in connection with modern religion that is not attacked in False Gods. The "special providence" that saves one man from shipwreck and drowns another equally meritorious; the expediency which allows an intellectual man to accept the Thirty-Nine Articles and read the Athanasian Creed; the humane weakness that tolerates superstition as a palliative; the desperate clinging to dear illusions and long-cherished hopes; nervous disease taking the form of pious hallucination; and an educated priesthood shrugging its shoulders and managing the masses for their own good—all, all are here, the old familiar faces; and all are keenly, but not mercilessly, scarified. For M. Brieux has no contempt for the weaker vessels; he has only infinite understanding and pure pity.

And how is it that this drama—a direct defiance and challenge to any average theatrical audience—was received at His Majesty's on Tuesday, not with angry outcries, but with enthusiastic cheers? There are only two ways of accounting for it. Either the audience was composed of agnostics, or they did not see the point of the play. We are inclined to think that the latter is the correct explanation. If M. Brieux had put a prayer for rain instead of the Nile-raising service, a perverted curate in place of Satni, a litany in a church instead of a chorus in a temple, and a young agnostic's engagement with a charming croyante broken off on account of his beliefs instead of the loves of Satni and Yaouma, there would certainly have been "booing." But what can there be in common between us and these ancient Egyptians?

M. Brieux, however, is a dramatist first and an iconoclast afterwards; and, in the earlier part of the play, at any rate, it is drama that predominates. It is quite possible here to regard the play from a purely theatrical point of view. The story of the young priest Satni, who comes home with his faith destroyed, and denounces the national religion with unflinching obstinacy, is very interesting. His sweetheart, Yaouma, is a firm believer in the Egyptian gods; and, when she is chosen as the living sacrifice which is to cause the Nile to rise, she is in raptures. In vain does Satni declare that the gods are false, and overturn the idols from their pedestals. A thunderstorm which comes on opportunely is attributed to his influence with his new deities; and he is called upon to make the lame walk and the blind see. The masses, released from superstitious influence, break out into riot, and cannot comprehend the great moral truths. Satni is tried as in a furnace—by his great love for Yaouma, by fear, the remains of his early belief, and, hardest test of all, by his sympathy with the credulous people who crave a sign. This last ordeal is too severe, and Satni touches the lever that works the mechanism which reveals the glories of the goddess to the imploring worshippers.

M. Brieux's pessimism represents the Agnostic as false to his faith, and reaping the punishment of his weakness. In vain he confesses his share in the pious fraud; the people will not believe him; Yaouma goes cheerfully to the sacrifice; and Satni is stabbed to death by an apostate. Apart from the risk of offence in the theme of the play, the courage which replaces physical movement by intellectual combat, as M. Brieux does in parts of La Foi, is colossal; and the production of False Gods is an experiment the result of which we shall observe with intense interest.

His Majesty's Theatre
HAYMARKET.

Tues. Evening
Sept. 14, 1909.

STALL

Ten Shillings and Sixpence

No. M 7

This to be retained.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15th, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE GREAT DIVIDE

A Play in Three Acts,

By WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY.

Ruth Jordan	.. .. ..	EDITH WYNNE MATTHISON
Polly Jordan	.. .. ..	LAURA HOPE CREWS
Mrs. Jordan	.. ..	ISABEL WALDRON
Phillip Jordan	.. .. ..	FREDERIC BURT
Doctor Newberry	.. .. ..	WILLIAM J. BUTLER
Winthrop Newberry	.. .. ..	CHARLES F. GOTTHOLD
Architect	.. .. ..	FRANK BROWNLEE.
Contractor	.. .. ..	ROBERT HERBERT
Dutch	.. .. ..	FRANK WELDON
Pedro	.. .. ..	ARTHUR BENTON
Lon	.. .. ..	J. HARRY BENRIMO
Burt Williams	.. .. ..	HENRY B. WALTHAM
Boy	.. .. ..	JAMES HAGAN
	AND
Stephen Ghent	.. .. ..	HENRY MILLER

Act I. ... ... Interior of Phillip Jordan's Cabin in Southern Arizona

Act II. In Front of Stephen Ghent's House on a Plateau in the Cordillera Mountains

Act III. ... ... Sitting Room of Mrs. Jordan's Home at Milford Corners, Mass

Stage Manager ... ... } for Charles Frohman { ... FRANK BROWNLEE
Business Manager ... .. } { ... JAMES W. MATHEWS

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Business Manager ... (for Mr. Geo. Edwardes) ... MR. T. B. YOUNG

The play is undeniably moving and powerful, and its first act would stamp any writer as a dramatist of the first class. It is distingnished by primitivo passion and elemental chivalry. We are in Southern Arizona at the opening of the play, on the ranche of Philip Jordan, who has invested a small fortune in his venture. He has as his right hand his sister Ruth, who, notwithstanding the dour religious training of her childhood, is radiantly happy in the spacious life of the sierra, and realises to the full the poetry of the vast solitude in which she dwells. Young Winthrop Newberry, who is evidently in love with her, does not appeal to her. He is too "finished." She wants somebody less complete.

Left alone in the rude dwelling, Ruth has to face in the dead of night a couple of ruffians, who laugh at her puny efforts at defence and defiance, and then gamble for her. A third man enters. It is Stephen Ghent, a claim owner, somewhat less brutal, but callous and desperate under the influence of liquor. To him Ruth appeals. "Save me," she says, "and I will be yours." "It's a dead square deal?" he inquires. "Give me your hand on it." He then bargains with the baser scoundrels, who consider his first offer to them merely the price of an Indian squaw. One of them is content to be bought off with a necklace of nuggets, but the other will fight, and gets his quietus from the revolver bullet of Stephen, who returns from the chapparal wounded in the arm. He places the weapon in front of Ruth, who is writing to her people preparatory to departure with her captor. The girl puts the gleaming barrel to her temple, but her courage fails her. The man, unconcernedly smoking, breaks an ominous silence by the question "Why don't you shoot?" The degradation to which she has pledged herself is too terrible to bear; but she can neither immolate herself nor kill him. Entreaties and upbraidings do not soften him. There is no dallying with innocence; and the two pass out into the night to be married by civil contract before a justice of the peace. Unlike the peasant husband of Electra in the Euripides play, Stephen does not hold it shame to abase the woman who is his by compulsion.

On an isolated plateau in the Cordillera Mountains—a really beautiful stage picture with lovely lighting effects—in the second act we reach a higher plane of civilisation, and Stephen Ghent is cast in a more heroic mould. No longer the desperado, he becomes the chivalrous wooer of the woman he has taken for his own—the suppliant for the love for which his heart yearns. The thought of her ignominy is ever with Ruth. It chills and depresses her. His repentance, his humility, his rough tenderness, his plans for her greater happiness in a larger dwelling leave her cold, unsympathetic. She will not use his money, but works at mat weaving and basket making to maintain herself. It is while disposing of her wares at the hotel in the valley that she sees some of her people, who follow her. Neither her brother nor her former lover learn the reason of her strange departure from the ranche or her marriage, and from the former Stephen hears for the first time of Ruth's work and earnings. When alone, he questions her. The pent-up agony of her life wells forth in a torrent of reproaches. She has bought the necklace of nuggets—her price—which she throws at his feet. He offers her freedom, and even though she has told him in a very beautiful passage of the play that she is about to become the mother of his child, she leaves him to make her home with her people.

In the third act, the home of the Jordans in Massachusetts, Ruth is there with her baby, and her condition of health is alarming. Unknown to her, Stephen has been keeping the home going, for the Jordan family have been overwhelmed with misfortune. The cloud that has lowered so long over them is dispelled by Stephen's gift of property, formerly theirs, that has been bought by him and has become valuable. Ruth eventually falls into Stephen's arms when she learns that love—always the determining factor in a happy union—was after all the impulse that moved him to purchase her. As the play is closing Ruth winds the necklace round Stephen's neck, and the "wages of sin," as she has called it, becomes the talisman of a chastened affection, the pledge of a newer life, with love at its meridian.

HENRY MILLER
in
THE GREAT DIVIDE.

Waters, J.
Plays

Waters, J.
Plays

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

Sole Lessees and Managers ... ... A. & S. GATTI.

Under the Management of
Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

On Thursday, September 16th, 1909, at 8 p.m.

And Every Following Evening, at 8.15 p.m.

Mr. GASTON MAYER presents

THE BRASS BOTTLE

A Farcical Play, in Four Acts,

BY

F. ANSTEY.

Characters.

Horace Ventimore	Mr. Lawrence Grossmith
Professor Anthony Futvoye	Mr. Alfred Bishop
Fakrash-El-Aamash	Mr. E. Holman Clark
Spencer Pringle	Mr. Rudge Harding
Samuel Wackerbath	Mr. Luigi Lablache
Rapkin	Mr. J. H. Brewer
Chief of Caravan	Mr. A. Spencer
Head Efreet	Mr. John Carey
A Waiter	Mr. Walter Ringham
Mrs. Futvoye	Miss Lena Halliday
Sylvia Futvoye	Miss Viva Birkett
Mrs. Rapkin	Miss Mary Brough
Mrs. Wackerbath	Miss Armine Grace
Jessie	Miss Gladys Storey
Zobeida	Miss Mabel Duncan

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACTS I. and II. - - - - Horace Ventimore's Rooms

There will be an Interval of Two Minutes after Act 1 and Eight Minutes after Act 2.

ACT III. Scene 1 - - - - - - Ventimore's Office

Scene 2 - - - - - - Futvoye's House

There will be One Minute Interval between Scenes 1 and 2, during which the audience are requested to keep their seats. After Act 3, Eight Minutes.

ACT IV. Scene 1 - - - - Ventimore's Rooms

Scene 2 - - - "Pinafore" Room, Savoy Hotel

There will be an Interval of One Minute between Scenes 1 and 2, during which the audience are requested to keep their seats.

The Play has been Produced (for Mr. Gaston Mayer) by Mr. FREDERICK KERR

Stage Manager ... } For Mr. GASTON MAYER { Mr. LOUIS MERCANTON
Assistant Stage Manager } { ... Mr. CLAUD VERNON

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Overture ...	... "Haydée"	... Auber
Polish Dance ...	... ...	Scharenka
Selection ...	"Miss Gibbs" ...	Caryll Monckton
Ballet Music ...	... "Egyptien"	... Luigini

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr Edward Jones.

Eastern Costumes designed by Comelli, made by B. & J. Simmons.
Ladies' Dresses by Jays. Furniture supplied by Oetzmann.

Ices, Tea, and Coffee can be had of the Attendants.

Refreshments supplied by Messrs. A. & S. Gatti, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

Matinees every Wednesday & Saturday at 2.15

Prices of Admission.—Private Boxes, £1 1s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 1.45 and 7.30. Commence at 2.15 and 8.
Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.
Box Office (Mr. Arthur Frye) open from 10 to 10.

Business Manager { (for Messrs. A. & S. Gatti) Mr. HERBERT CLARK
(for Mr. Gaston Mayer) Mr. ALFRED COURTENAY

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Nearly ten years have elapsed since Mr. F. Anstey published his amusing tale "The Brass Bottle"; and certainly it needed some courage to put the story on the stage. The incidents are so extravagant that it was to be feared that the fun might be considered childish. But this is where the logical art of Mr. Anstey comes in. Wildly as his imagination runs riot, it is always governed by dramatic consistency. Given his premises, and all that follows is quite natural. The story of The Brass Bottle has the advantage of dealing with fiction with which we are all familiar. Who has not revelled in the delights of Mr. John Lane's version of "The Arabian Nights" and followed the adventures of the Caliph Haroun al Raschid and the futures of Prince Ahmed and the Fairy Pari-Banou? As in so many other of his tales, Mr. Anstey has made his effect by the introduction of the supernatural into modern reality. A young architect, named Horace Ventimore, buys a brass bottle at a sale. It contains a rebellious Djinn, who has been so imprisoned as a punishment by the great Suleiman. The Djinn is immensely grateful, and showers on his releaser benefits which prove most embarrassing. A caravan of camels stops at the door of the London house, and slaves bring in dozens of bales containing jewels of fabulous size and value. At Horace's request these are removed, but the Djinn, not to be baulked, sends the young architect a rich client, Samuel Wackerbath, who gives him an order for a magnificent country mansion. But this is a mere nothing to the misguided generosity which follows. Horace's simple apartment is changed into a dazzling Moorish hall; and, when his sweetheart, Sylvia Futvoye, and his future father and mother-in-law come to dinner, they are served by slaves with an Oriental repast, including kibobs, which have to be eaten with the fingers. But the climax of Horace's dismay comes with the dance of Houris which follows the sweetmeats. When the most beautiful of these throws herself at his feet, clasps his knees, and hails him as her lord and master, Mr. Futvoye, who is a professor and understands Arabic, "puts the worst construction" on the incident; and even Sylvia can hardly believe that Horace is entirely true to her. The Djinn's well-meant generosity results in endangering his protegé's engagement and in giving an opportunity to another of Sylvia's admirers, a priggish young man named Pringle. But the Djinn still further embarrasses the architect. He brings Wackerbath to Horace's office, and on slight offence turns him into a dog and makes him run about on all fours; and when the Professor refuses to restore the seal of Suleiman which was on the bottle, the Djinn transforms him into a mule. Screamingly funny is the situation when the scientist, in the actual shape of the animal, speaks with the voice of the Professor and is heard kicking the furniture of his study to pieces in his anger. Appealed to by Pringle, the Djinn releases Mr. Futvoye from his quadrupedal form, and flies away through the air bearing Horace to his home. Here the Djinn, terrified by the signs of progress which he sees in London, resolves to return to his bottle, but before he does so he erases from the minds of the dramatis personæ, excepting Ventimore and Pringle, all recollection of the supernatural incidents which have occurred. This gives material for a very amusing last scene in the "Pinafore Room" at the Savoy Hotel. When Pringle tries to make merry at the expense of the Professor he is regarded by everyone as insane and advised to consult a doctor.

QUEEN'S THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

PROGRAMME

Under the Management of
Mr H.B. IRVING

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22nd, 1909
and Every Evening, and SATURDAY AFTERNOON,
OCTOBER 2nd, and every SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Mr. H. B. IRVING

A New Play in One Act, by EDWARD DENBY, founded on an incident in the late G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE'S Novel, "Holmby House," entitled:

"A Maid of Honour"

Oliver Cromwell		Mr. FRANK TYARS
General Harrison		Mr. B. A. PITTAR
Major Humphrey Bosville	(of Lord Bernard's Horse)	Mr. E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Captain George Effingham	of Cromwell's	Mr. STANLEY HOWLETT
Captain Hugh Trentham	Ironsides	Mr. H. C. HEWITT
Charles Stanford	(Orderly Officer)	Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
Mary Cave	(Maid of Honour to Queen Henrietta)	Miss DOROTHEA BAIRD

SCENE—A Room in "The Pied Bull" Inn on the Road between Oxford and Gloucester.

Scenery by G. SACKMANN.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Near Anstey
Bottle put th extrav fun in where Wildly govern mises,
story dealin
liar.
John and f al Ra the F his t intro realit more, rebell punis imme benef van hous
taini
Hora not rich an o this whic char his fath serv clud fing witl mer
her.
him a wor
Syl tru sul
and Syl
Pri
the offi an th m fo sit of fe st
Pi
qu bo te in be d.
P
d fo
F t i c

"The Bells"

So-and-so's Play
Adapted by Leopold Lewis, from "Le Juif Polonais" or The Polish Jew

Mathias	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Christian	Mr. E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Father Walter	Mr. CHARLES DODSWORTH
Hans	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Dr. Zimmer	Mr. B. A. PITTAR
Notary	Mr. J. CASS
Fritz	Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
President of the Court	Mr. FRANK TYARS
Clerk of the Court	Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
Mesmerist	Mr. FRANK COCHRANE
Catharine	Miss SUZANNE SHELDON
Sozel	Miss MAY HOLLAND
Annette	Miss PHYLLIS EMBURY

Act I. The Burgomaster's Inn
Act II. The Burgomaster's Parlour
Act III. The Burgomaster's Bedroom (The Dream)

Overture
Overture
Selection
Tableau

Mus. Dir. Mr. HAMILTON HAGUE

FIRST MATINÉE Saturday, October 2nd; and Every Saturday at 2.30.

PRICE OF ADMISSION: Stalls [illegible] Balcony Stalls 3s each, Dress Circle 5s, Upper Circle [illegible] Pit [illegible] Gallery 1s
Private Boxes, One to Three Guineas.

200 DRESS CIRCLE SEATS at 5s. each.

Box Office Mr J. W. SHEPPARD Now Open. Telephone Gerrard 9137 Two lines

N.B. The bars are under the sole control of the management, and refreshments of the highest quality only are supplied, at moderate prices.

Acting Manager & Treasurer Mr W. J. CUNNINGHAM Stage Manager Mr. HAMILTON REYNOLDS
Assistant Acting Manager Mr. J. B. GLOVER Assistant Stage Manager Mr. HORACE COOK

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

224

Nearl
Anstey
Bottle' put the extrava fun - m where Wildly govern mises, story dealin
liar.
John and fo
al Ra the F his ta introd realit
more, rebell
punis imme benef van house taini
Hora not rich an o
this whic
char his fath serv clud fing witl mes her him a l wor
Syl tru sul
and Syl
Pri
the offi an
the ma for sit
of fe st
P qu
be fe ir
b
d
P
d f l t
i
e

DALY'S THEATRE

Every Evening and Matinee Every Saturday.

To-night, Saturday, September 25th, at 8 o'clock (1st Night)
(On this occasion the Opera will be conducted by the Composer).

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION

— THE —

DOLLAR PRINCESS

A Musical Play in Three Acts by
A. M. WILLNER and F. GRÜNBAUM.
Adapted for the English Stage by BASIL HOOD.
Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS.
Music by LEO FALL.

Musical Director - - - - - - Mr. HAROLD VICARS

Stage Production by Mr. EDWARD ROYCE

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. W. ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes, £2 12s. 6d. to £3 3s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle (Bonnets allowed) Front, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

The "Dollar Princess" Novel, published by Messrs. Mills & Boon at 1/- net

. . Cast of the Play . .

Freddy Fairfax		Mr. ROBERT MICHAELIS
Mr. Bulger	(Confidential Clerk to Conder)	Mr. W. H. BERRY
Dick	(Cousin to Conder)	Mr. EVELYN BEERBOHM
John, Earl of Quorn ...	(Groom to Conder)	... Mr. BASIL S. FOSTER
Sir James McGregor ...	(Footman to Conder)	... Mr. WILLIE WARDE
Duke of Stonehenge ...	(Butler to Conder)	... Mr. F. J. BLACKMAN
Vicomte de Brésac ...	(Chef to Conder)	..Mr. GARNET WILSON
Lieut. Grant	(U.S.A.) ...	Mr. HAROLD DEACON
	AND
Harry Q. Conder ...	(a multi-Millionaire)	... Mr. JOSEPH COYNE

Olga	... (a Lion Queen) ...	... Miss EMMY WEHLEN
Daisy	... (Dick's Sister) ...	Miss GABRIELLE RAY
Dulcie du Cros	(a Californian Girl)	... Miss MAY KINDER
Sadie Von Tromp ...	... (her Friend) ...	...Miss GLADYS COOPER
Lady Augusta		Miss PHYLLIS LE GRAND
Lady Dorothy		... Miss MAY HOBSON
Lady Gwendoline		Miss GERTRUDE GLYN
Lady Margaret		Miss MARION LINDSAY
Hon. Editha Dalrymple		...Miss DOLLY DOMBEY
	AND
Alice	(Conder's Sister)	... ... Miss LILY ELSIE

ACT I.—Conder's House, New York - - - ALFRED TERRAINE
ACT II.—Garden Court, Conder's House - - JOSEPH HARKER
ACT III.—Freddy's Bungalow, California - - ALFRED TERRAINE

ACT I. Dresses by Madame ARQUA.
ACT II. Dresses at the Garden Party by MARGAINE LACROIX, Paris.
Dresses at the Reception designed and made by LUCILE, Ltd., Hanover Square, London.
ACT III. Dresses by MARGAINE LACROIX, Paris.
The Dresses of Miss LILY ELSIE and Miss GABRIELLE RAY by LUCILE, Ltd., and of Miss EMMY WEHLEN by PAQUIN, Ltd.
Gentlemen's Costumes by Messrs. JOHNS & BONHAM, BURKINSHAW & KNIGHT, MORRIS ANGEL and B. J. SIMMONS & Co.
Hats by ZYROT et CIE. and MAISON LEWIS.
Dresses from designs and suggestions by COMELLI.

By command of the Lord Chamberlain, the proscenium safety curtain is lowered daily in the presence of the audience, during the interval, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order.

3124
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

The Dollar Princess has undergone a good deal of improvement since it was performed for the first time in England, at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, on Thursday, Dec. 24, and, at present, its only fault is that it plays rather too long. This embarrassment of riches can, however, be easily altered; and Mr. Edwardes has certainly presented to his patrons an exquisitely delightful and attractive entertainment. The Dollar Princess is not a mere jumbio of songs and incidents; it has a humorous story, and bright and piquant dialogue; and the finale of the second act is spiritedly dramatic. The satire of the piece is none the less keen for being humorous. What can be more extravagantly ironical than the situation with which the action opens—the quick, vulgar, commonplace multi-millionaire, surrounded by art which he can neither understand nor appreciate, with a baronet for his footman, an earl for his groom, and a soi-disant Russian countess for his housekeeper? His sister Alice is prouder and less practical than himself, and has less sense of fun. So, when a young, well-groomed Englishman, Freddy Fairfax, comes to apply to Conder for a situation, she engages him as her private secretary for the pleasure of humiliating and mortifying him. But Fairfax is not to be put down; and Alice secretly admires his spirit. As she can neither make up her mind to dismiss him nor suppress him by her scorn, she allows him to remain in her service, and gradually falls in love with him. Matters between them are precipitated by Conder's cousin, Dick, bringing with him from Europe a lady who calls herself a Russian countess, but is really a female lion-tamer. Conder is delighted with her, and engages her as his housekeeper. Daisy, Dick's younger sister, has taken a fancy to the Earl of Quorn, her brother's head groom. So here we have three couples who are in Cupid's net. Matters are brought to a climax in the second act, when Conder proclaims his intention of marrying the Countess. This leads to Daisy proposing to Quorn, and marrying him off hand, but with the proviso that their union shall be one only in name. But Quorn, as soon as the ceremony is over, refuses to accompany Daisy on her "honeymoon" as a mere attendant; and when Alice, under the impression that she can buy, Fairfax as her husband, "like a painter or a clerk," proposes the match to him, he rejects her offer with scorn, and throws up his situation. She flies into a passion, and, after an hysterical outburst, faints, thus supplying an effective finale to the second act. The last takes place in Freddy's bungalow in California. He is now making money, and Alice comes to humble herself, and, by pretending that she has lost her fortune and asking him to engage her as his secretary, prepares an understanding which is reached the more rapidly because Fairfax makes her believe that he is attracted by another woman. Daisy repents of her solitary honeymoon, Olga confesses her imposture and is forgiven, and so the Conder family are happy at last.

A CENSORSHIP OF CRITICISM.

THE PRESS AND NEW PLAYS.

"WESTMINSTER GAZETTE" AND "THE DOLLAR PRINCESS."

Oct 14 1909

When, some years ago, owing to a postal miscarriage, the Westminster notice of a new piece at a certain theatre failed to appear in our first edition, the manager sent post-haste a message to our commercial department intimating that as a consequence he proposed to withdraw all his advertisements from our columns forthwith. We recall the episode to-day as an appropriate introduction to the remarkable correspondence which follows, and from which it will be seen that Mr. George Edwardes has thought fit to resort to the same procedure under circumstances which raise a question of more general and public interest. With such elucidatory comments as accompany it, the correspondence speaks for itself. Enough, therefore, by way of further preliminary, to say that we have adopted the course of publishing it as a means of calling attention to a matter in which the public at large as well as the Press has a vital concern.

The correspondence begins with the following letter, written from Daly's Theatre Offices, 31, Lisle-street, under date of September 30, by Mr. Edwardes. The letter, we may add, is marked "Private and not for publication," but we informed Mr. Edwardes at once that in a case of this kind we could not consent to be bound by any such reservation. Mr. Edwardes writes:

Sir,—I make it an invariable rule never to question any criticism of my plays in the newspapers; but, having read the notice of your critic—"H. A. S."—of "The Dollar Princess" (September 27) and of "The Mountaineers" (September 30) in the "Westminster Gazette," I am compelled to break my rule and to ask your attention to what I consider is a most unfair, gratuitous, and unjustifiable attack upon my play and upon Captain Basil Hood, its adapter. Your critic, of course, is quite entitled to his opinion that "The Dollar Princess" is "a most tiresome book," although I may remark that his view was not generally shared by others; but that he should think it necessary to revert to this play again in order to attack it in his notice of "The Mountaineers" in your issue of to-day shows that he can be actuated only by malice and spite, and by no other motive.

As I am entitled to consider that within reasonable limits a newspaper may be of assistance to a theatrical manager through its advertisement columns, and as it appears to me to be an anomaly to advertise in one column and to be attacked in another, and as your contributor appears to have gone out of his way to try and injure me in my business by a perfectly unnecessary and dragged-in attack in a second notice, I have instructed the managers of my various theatres to withdraw my advertisements and to cease my connexion with your journal—as it has now become a menace to me.

I must apologise for the length of this letter, and I hope under the circumstances you will not consider the course I am taking an unreasonable one.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

GEO. EDWARDES.

Almost simultaneously we received the following letter from Messrs. Stanley, Woodhouse, and Hedderwick, solicitors:

We have been consulted by our client, Captain Basil Hood, the author of the English version of "The Dollar Princess," now being performed at Daly's Theatre, in reference to the notice of its first performance appearing in your issue of the 27th ult., which he thinks, in so far as it refers to his work, exceeds the limits of fair criticism and is calculated to convey an unjust and damaging impression of his work. We observe your critic says: "Half a dozen performers of this class, backed by a gorgeous setting and taking music, can carry off the most tiresome book, and it is really wonderful how they do it. Read in cold print the lines allotted to them, and it is impossible to believe that the thing could be accomplished." Captain Hood complains that to describe his work in these terms is in no way justified and fair, and goes beyond the limits of fair criticism. We feel sure that you will appreciate that such a reference to Captain Hood's work must be calculated to do him serious injury in his profession, and entitles him to ask for amends to be made.

Eulogy With Slight Reservations.

Now, dealing with Mr. Edwardes first, what was the actual character of the notice of which he complains? From his letter the uninstructed reader would gather that it was severely condemnatory. Few certainly would suspect that, in point of fact, it was in the main highly favourable and even enthusiastic. Thus our critic wrote, among other things:

In the result the whole thing was a roaring success, because its music is so charming, because it is mounted so sumptuously, and played by such popular performers. . . . As to Dr. Leo Fall's music, it is decidedly superior to that usually encountered in works of this class. . . . As to the mounting of the work, nothing more beautiful in the way of scenery, dresses, and the rest has ever been witnessed even in latter-day musical comedy. . . . The reception of the work was enthusiastic in the extreme.

And so on and so on.

But there was a fly in the ointment. Our critic did not think much of the book of the piece, and dared to say so, and on this account Mr. Edwardes sends us the extraordinary letter which we have quoted. On the strength, that is to say, of a single passage in a long and mainly eulogistic notice, taken in conjunction with a passage which does not please him in another notice of a rival production, Mr. Edwardes does not scruple to launch one of the gravest charges which it is possible to make against a critic in his professional capacity by means of a "private" letter to the editor and at the same time intimates to the journal which he represents that he proposes to withdraw the advertisements for his three theatres. We do not know what Mr. Edwardes's views on the subject may be, but we fancy that the plain man will be disposed to characterise this proceeding in rather blunt terms. Certainly it is a kind of action which it seems to us highly necessary to resist as a public duty, in the interests of criticism and of the liberty of the Press.

The Reply of the "Westminster Gazette."

We sent Mr. Edwardes, accordingly, the following reply:

Sir,—Your letter greatly puzzles me, for until I received it I was honestly under the impression that our critic's notice of "The Dollar Princess" was about the handsomest eulogy of a musical comedy that we had ever published in the "Westminster Gazette." I have read it again, as well as the cross-reference to it in the other notice, and I cannot imagine how malice could be imputed to a critic who speaks in these terms of the performance. He does, indeed, express his opinion that the book is not the equal of the music and setting, but if a critic may not say that without being charged with malice, there remains nothing that he can say.

You will, I am sure, not expect me to discuss this matter with you as if it were a question of advertisement. But when you write to an editor that a critic is actuated by "malice and spite, and no other motive," you do him a great injury, for, if the editor believes you, it must ruin him in his calling. I do not wish to say anything hastily about this incident, for I hope, on reconsideration, you will not persist in this charge; but I have the writer's interests to consider as well as the interests of the "Westminster Gazette," and I think you will see on reflection that a letter of the kind you have addressed to me cannot be a private matter between you and me.—Yours faithfully,

EDITOR.

Mr. George Edwardes' Position.

This brought a further letter from Mr. Edwardes, dated October 2, in the course of which he explained:

I would have left your critic's remarks unanswered had he not seen fit to make a further attack under cover of a notice of another play. If he had given as his opinion merely that the "book is not the equal of the music and the setting," as you say in your letter, I should not have written to you; but in his notice of "The Mountaineers" he writes: "Not here are dashing show ladies in costumes by Paquin and Lucile; not here are irresponsible comedians who rarely deviate into the text set down for them; not here those miscellaneous songs and turns whose only common element is their irrelevance to the story. Such things may be well enough in their way, but at the Savoy they have no use for them. Here they believe in a 'straight' book, a 'straight' score, and the rigour of the game." Taken with the context in which this theatre is particularly mentioned, I believe you must agree that this passage was either meant to bring the methods of my theatre into contempt, or, if your critic claims that this was not so, then his phrases were most unfortunately expressed, and I should not have attributed the motives which I did, and of which you complain, had it not been for the unusual and totally unnecessary references to this theatre implied in the contemptuous remarks contained in his notice of "The Mountaineers."

In reply to this our critic writes:

I think Mr. George Edwardes does less than justice both to himself and to his play in assuming that the words from my notice of "The Mountaineers" which he quotes were intended to apply to "The Dollar Princess." So far as I am aware—and Mr. Edwardes will correct me if I am wrong—it would not be true to suggest of "The Dollar Princess" that it contains either "irresponsible comedians" or "miscellaneous songs and turns" of the sort referred to. Certainly it was not my intention to make any such suggestion when penning the remarks in question, which were designed to have a general, not a special, application. In a word, Mr. Edwardes seems to have made the mistake of putting on a cap not intended for him, and then to have cried out because it does not fit.

We wrote accordingly to Mr. Edwardes in this sense, adding:

The passage is in any case perfectly genial and good-natured, and I cannot imagine how any charge of malice against the critic could be founded on it. You will, I am sure, agree with me that this correspondence raises a point of great importance to our critic personally and to theatrical critics in general—a point which I think can hardly be disposed of in correspondence between you and me.

To this letter we have received a reply from Mr. Edwardes, dated October 6, in which he says:

Dear Sir,—At the risk of being considered pertinacious I must reply to your letter of the 5th. I am bound, of course, to accept your critic's assurance that the passage I quoted "had no reference to any production of 'mine'; but will you allow me to point out to you that there was no play produced in London between "The Dollar Princess," September 25, and "The Mountaineers," on September 29: that the announcement was inserted in my programmes at Daly's that the dresses of the ladies were by "Paquin and Lucile," amongst others; that your critic uses the names of these very firms; and that they do not, I believe, appear in this conjunction in the programmes of any other theatres; so that the conclusion was forced upon me that his strictures could refer to no other theatre but Daly's?

I note what you say about the "straight" book, but there were also the phrases "miscellaneous songs and turns whose only common element is their irrelevance to the story," and "the vigour of the game"—surely, if my premisses were correct, implying that we do not play it here!

The letter goes on to proffer an invitation to the editor to visit the theatre, although any opinion that he might form would obviously have no bearing on the question whether the critic was entitled to say what he did.

The Limits of Criticism.

Captain Hood's case may be dismissed more briefly. Indeed, we hardly gather that he expects us to take it very seriously. His suggestion that the limits of fair criticism were exceeded by such sentences as he quotes is, in truth, absurd. If a critic cannot say that a musical comedy libretto is not a miracle of wit and humour, or even go further and venture the opinion that it is tiresome, what may he say? At the same time, while he is quite prepared to justify every word of his article, our critic points out that the particular passage alluded to was intended, as the context shows, in a general sense, and not as a specific reference to "The Dollar Princess," and if, therefore, it is any solace to Captain Hood's wounded feelings to know this, we have pleasure in making the explanation.

Otherwise we have nothing to withdraw or explain, and having set forth the facts we are content to leave the matter to the judgment of the public, with the single observation that, for our own part, we cannot but regard the whole episode as an unwarrantable attempt to curb the free expression of honest opinion in the Press, and as such deserving of all the publicity which can possibly be accorded.

Mr. George Edwardes's Letter.

We have received the following letter to-day:

Sir,—From the comments in your own and other journals, it is plain that you have successfully fostered the misunderstanding that I made a complaint in consequence of your original criticism of "The Dollar Princess," and withdrew my advertisements in consequence of your critic's remarks in that notice. I challenge you to produce a particle of evidence for such statements from my letters, either as written by me or as edited by you, with material omissions, for unauthorised publication. What I complained of, and still complain of, is the insertion, in a notice of another play at another theatre, of a succession of sneers, which obviously referred to "The Dollar Princess," and which your critic had not embodied in his notice of that piece. Honest criticism, however unfavourable, is privileged; but to make the criticism of one play the vehicle for attacking another is surely outside the limits of fair comment.

I must repeat emphatically that, as you are well aware, I took no action and made no complaint in consequence of your original notice of "The Dollar Princess," though you seem to have misled your correspondents into this false view of the case. It was not till the allusions to "The Dollar Princess," under cover of the criticism on "The Mountaineers," that I first wrote to complain. May I say, in conclusion, that as you have published the correspondence without my permission, it would have been as well to publish it in a complete form?—I am, Sir, your truly, October 16. Geo. Edwardes.

[Mr. George Edwardes here insinuates something that is contrary to fact. We published three letters of his—the first in full, the second with two or three lines of opening omitted which made absolutely no change in the sense or the argument, and the third without the terms of an invitation to ourselves to visit the theatre. There was no material omission. Nor have we fostered any misunderstanding. We have left the letters to speak for themselves, and our correspondents and contemporaries have formed their own judgment upon them.—Ed. W.G.]

Captain Basil Hood and His Position.

Sir,—I thank you for having given prominence yesterday to my letter, in which I was enabled not only to acknowledge your courteous assurance that your critic did not intend the words I had complained of to apply to my work, but also to put right a probable misunderstanding with regard to my attitude. To that letter you appended a comment which impels me to ask that your courtesy to me may be for a little while continued.

You say, "At the same time we must add that had our critic desired to apply the words he used specifically to 'The Dollar Princess,' or any other particular play, he would have been entirely within his rights."

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Will you allow me to ask you, as politely as may be, whether that statement is more than an expression of opinion, and, if not, whether it may not possibly be erroneous?

For it appears to me that no dramatic critic of experience could or would venture to pronounce judgment on the inherent value in the "cold print" of a stage play, in order to contrast it with the patent result obtained by its performance, without having ever seen the material he was criticising.

Yet your critic, "H. A. S.," wrote: "Read the lines allotted to them in cold print, and it is impossible to believe that the thing could be accomplished."

And you, Sir, deliberately say that "if he had desired to apply the words to my work" (the manuscript of which he has not seen) "he would have been entirely within his rights." I beg your leave respectfully to differ from you, and to say that he would have done what no dramatic critic who respects himself would do.

And in connexion with this argument, which concerns a question of some importance to dramatic authors, will you now state whether it is true, as announced in an important journal of to-day, that your critic "H. A. S." is not the dramatic critic, but the musical critic, of your paper? I feel that I can rely upon your sense of fairness and pertinency to grant me the space for this letter in its entirety, even if it exclude some irresponsible impertinences of pseudonymous correspondents.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, Basil Hood.

October 17.

[Certainly "H. A. S." is also the musical critic of the "Westminster Gazette," but that does not prevent him from being able to form an intelligent judgment either of the libretto of an opera or of the "book" of a musical comedy. A critic clearly does not need a manuscript before him to enable him to say that the lines without the music and the acting would make a flat performance.—Ed. "W.G."]

Mr. George Edwardes Again Replies.

We print to-day a further letter from Mr. George Edwardes, whose notepaper has the printed information that "business letters should not be marked private":

Sir,—As to the importance of the omitted lines of my second letter to you, I fear I must differ from you. These lines made it perfectly clear that I was not writing "in complaint of the reference to the libretto of 'The Dollar Princess' in the 'Westminster Gazette.'" I wrote to complain of disparaging references to "The Dollar Princess" in your critic's notice of "The Mountaineers." These allusions could not be called "a fair, impartial, and carefully weighed criticism" of anything—if it was criticism at all. The "misunderstanding" that you have "fostered" is, simply, that my action was taken in consequence of your critic's original notice of "The Dollar Princess." You did not leave "the letters to speak for themselves," but commented on them in a manner calculated to mislead your readers, and the judgment that some of your contemporaries have formed in consequence is evidently founded on the comments and not on the text.—I am, Sir, yours truly,

Geo. Edwardes.

Daly's Theatre Offices, 31, Lisle-street, London, W., October 18.

[We can leave our readers to judge for themselves regarding the importance of the omitted lines, which we give below in italics. Mr. Edwardes knows that there was no disparaging reference to "The Dollar Princess" in our notice of "The Mountaineers," and that he simply chose to construe a perfectly general reference to musical comedy of a kind as applying to the kind of musical comedy offered by himself. The construction put upon the sentence by Mr. Edwardes was an impossible construction, as we explained to him at the time, and it does not become more possible by repetition.

Mr. Edwardes's letter of October 2 read:

I am obliged for your polite reply to my letter, but I fear you must have misunderstood it or that I did not make my point very clear.

I did not at the time write to you in complaint of the references to the libretto of "The Dollar Princess" in the "Westminster Gazette," and I would have left your critic's remarks unanswered had he not seen fit to make a further attack under cover of a notice of another play.

It will be seen that the omitted portion is practically repeated in the words that immediately follow, and that were printed by us.—Ed., "W.G."]

Ourselves and Mr. Edwardes.

The following letter appears in the "Times" this morning:

Sir,—Mr. George Edwardes's letter published in your issue of yesterday would leave the reader to infer that the "Westminster Gazette" had suppressed a material part of his complaint. To prove that this is not the case will you kindly let me continue the extract which he sends you from his letter of October 2 one sentence beyond the point at which he breaks off:

I am obliged for your polite reply to my letter, but I fear you must have misunderstood it or that I did not make my point very clear.

I did not at the time write to you in complaint of the references to the libretto of "The Dollar Princess" in the "Westminster Gazette," and I would have left your critic's remarks unanswered had he not seen fit to make a further attack under cover of a notice of another play.

The portion in italics was omitted, but the remainder of the letter was quoted verbatim. No attempt whatever was made on our part to conceal the fact that Mr. Edwardes regarded the second notice as being a material part of his grievance. In that notice our critic incidentally analysed the various types of musical comedy now in vogue, without censuring any of them, and, except for the inclusion of the Daly's type in his enumeration of the types, without any reference to Mr. Edwardes or his productions. Mr. Edwardes has chosen to apply a portion of this to "The Dollar Princess," and if he thinks the cap fits, I cannot, of course, gainsay him. But in effect it makes little difference whether the original sin, for which the critic and the newspaper are to be penalised, resided in the original notice or in the constructive treason of the supposed cross-reference. I am, yours faithfully,

The Editor, "Westminster Gazette."

Neai
Anstey
Bottle put tl extra fun where Wildi gover mises story dealin
liar.
John
and al R.
the his t intro reali more rebel puni imm bene van hom tain
Hor not rich an this whi cha his fatl ser clu fin wil me hei hir
a wn
Sy tri su
an Sy
Pi
th ofi ar
th m fo si
of fe st
P
q
b t
i b o l t

a a c
c
I
e c b fc fa

w pl
"
mi
of
D
"
pla pul

THE DOLLAR PRINCESS

SUPPER,

TO

THE AUTHORS AND COMPOSER,

BY

GEORGE EDWARDES.

CARLTON HOTEL AND RESTAURANT.

SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 25.h. 1909

"THE MOUNTAINEERS."

Romantic Comic Opera, in Three Acts, Book by Guy Eden and Reginald Somerville, Lyrics by Guy Eden, Music by Reginald Somerville, Produced at the Savoy Theatre on Wednesday, Sept. 29.

SAVOY THEATRE.

Manager - - - - - - - - - - Mr. C. H. WORKMAN.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.15,

A new Romantic Comic Opera

In Three Acts, entitled

THE MOUNTAINEERS

The Book by GUY EDEN and REGINALD SOMERVILLE.
Lyrics by GUY EDEN.
Music by REGINALD SOMERVILLE.

Pierre ...	(Chief Custom House Official) ...	Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
Fritz ...	Rival Lovers of Clarice	Mr. CLAUDE FLEMMING
Conrad ...		Mr. LAURENCE LEGGE
Gustave ...	(a Custom House Officer) ...	Mr. REGINALD LAWRENCE
Sergeant Frederico		Mr. FRANK PERFITT
Louis ...	Custom House Men	Mr. A. WELLTON FORDHAM
François		Mr. SYDNEY ASHCROFT
A Priest	Passengers by the Diligence	Mr. A. EVERETTE
Citizen		Mr. D. FERGUSSON
Clarice	(Pierre's Daughter) ...	Miss ELSIE SPAIN
Annette ...	(a Village Coquette) ...	Miss JESSIE ROSE
Miss Spinifex	(a Travelling English Spinster)	Miss KATE FORSTER
Yvonne ...	Village Maidens	Miss RUBY GRAY
Armandine		Miss MABEL BURNEGE
Celestine		Miss GLADYS LANCASTER
Noelie ...		Miss HILDA VINING
Yvette ...		Miss JOSSET LEGH
Prudence ...	(Maid to Miss Spinifex) ...	Miss MARJORIE DAWES
Bridesmaids		Miss FAY TEMPLE
		Miss GIOVANNO BOTTO

Chorus of Villagers, Market Women, Custom House Officers, and Soldiers.

Acts I. and III. .. A Frontier Alpine Village (W. Raphael)
Act II. .. .. Interior of Pierre's Chalet (W. Raphael)
A few weeks elapse between Acts II. and III.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.15.

Business Manager .. .. .. Mr. Harry P. Towers.

The enthusiastic applause which was evoked by the new opera at the Savoy Theatre on Wednesday evening was an eloquent testimony to the pleasant inventions of its author and composer, and if a first-night reception be any guide as to the future fate of a piece, The Mountaineers ought to have a good run. It belongs to the class called in France opéra comique, which is something between grand opera and comic opera, having a romantic and serious story, embellished with incidental drolleries. The story is of Fritz and Conrad, lovers of Clarice, the belle of a Swiss village, the daughter of a Custom House official named Pierre. Fritz is big and burly; Conrad is refined and well-bred. It is the custom in that locality for suitors for a lady's hand to ascend the highest peak of the neighbouring mountain, and bring to her a sprig of edelweiss; and Clarice sends her two swains on the dangerous errand, though a storm is threatened and there is great risk in an ascent. Conrad goes up, but faints and falls by the way. Fritz calls at Pierre's chalet, and is asked by the father of Clarice to follow and bring back Conrad, who, Pierre says, must be half-buried in the snow that is falling. Clarice falls asleep by the fire, and dreams that she sees Fritz rescue Conrad on a mountain path. Fritz returns, having saved his rival, but he scorns Clarice's love, and with this emotional situation the second act ends.

In the third, Pierre woos and wins Miss Spinifex, a rich English spinster, who has come to the village per diligence, and Fritz and Clarice, who have been reconciled, are also to be wed. But as they come from the church after the ceremony they see a smart sergeant called Frederico, who has arrived to fetch Fritz—who is a reservist—for active service. Clarice is in despair; but Conrad repays Fritz for saving his life on the mountain by offering himself as a substitute, his sacrifice ensuring the happiness of the wedded pair.

The libretto of The Mountaineers is written in a spirit of bright pleasantry, and a cheerful current of verbal wit flows through its pages. Especially praiseworthy is the manner in which Mr. Guy Eden has supplied the lyrics. The rhymes ripple agreeably; and the verses are penned with brisk facility and happy expertness. Their excellence has, doubtless, much to do with the musicianly merit of Mr. Reginald Somerville's score. The music is most enjoyable, and frequently rises to the level of excellence which evokes encores. While no number is especially and exceptionally memorable, all creats an impression of a worker who is master of his craft.

TO-NIGHT AT 8 O'CLOCK,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

SMITH

A Comedy in Four Acts by

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

Thomas Freeman	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
Herbert Dallas-Baker, K.C.	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE
Algernon Peppercorn	Mr. A. E. MATTHEWS
Fletcher	Mr. PERCY GOODYER
Mrs. Dallas-Baker	Miss KATE CUTLER
Emily Chapman	Miss EDYTH LATIMER
Mrs. Otto Rosenberg	Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Smith	Miss MARIE LOHR

Acts I., III. and IV. ... Mrs. Dallas-Baker's Flat, Crediton Court, Kensington—The Drawing Room

Act II. ... ... The Dining Room

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. DION BOUCICAULT.

The Scenery painted by Messrs. W. HANN & SON.

The Dresses and Hats by Madam HAYWARD, New Bond Street, except Miss Cutler's Hats furnished by the MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street.

Furniture by Messrs. OETZMANN & CO., LTD., Hampstead Road.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Musical Director—Mr. HERBERT F. HAINES.

OVERTURE	"Comedy"	Oskar Borsdorf
SELECTION	"The Arcadians"	Monckton-Talbot
a. INTERLUDE	"Chinese Festival"	W. Pickard
b. MORCEAU CHARACTERISTIQUE	"The Busy Bee"	Bendix
c. HUMORESQUE
SELECTION	"Our Miss Gibbs"	Frederick Rosse
MARCH	"Dandy Dan"	Carvill
		Glover

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Acting Manager - - - - (For Charles Frohman) - - JAMES W. MATTHEWS

Stage Manager - - - - - - - - CLIFFORD BROOKE

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager - - (For Comedy Theatre) -- LEONARD LILLIES

"SMITH."

Four Acts, by W. Somerset Maugham, at the Comedy Theatre on Thursday,

...n dramatists are certainly determined ...thing in their power to increase the ...Mid-Channel is a sermon on sterility; ...erset Maugham, in his comedy entitled ... was produced at the Comedy Theatre ..., emphasises the fact that an indiffer... joys is one of the strongest signs of ... society. His apostle is Thomas Free... after failing on the Stock Exchange, ...led to Rhodesia, whence he returns ... absence. He is greatly surprised at ... which he finds have taken place in ...and customs of his relations and their ...is sister, Mrs. Dallas-Baker, is the wife ...ly barrister with a good practice, and ... be "smart." She has declined to have ..., as that would interfere with her en... and she has the usual platonic cicisbeo ...n Peppercorn, a contemptible creature, ...n the generosity of the married women ...ty he flatters by his attentions. Mrs. ...er is devoted to bridge; and amongst ... playmates at this seductive game are ...pman, now a spinster of thirty, who ...man when he lost his money on the ...hange, and Mrs. Otto Rosenberg, the ... wealthy German Jew. Mrs. Rosenberg ...—the Jews are notoriously philoprogeni... he does not nurse her baby. Freeman ...sed at the view of life taken by these ...d endeavours to convert them to a ...ne. He is not at first successful. He ... attempt to induce Mrs. Dallas-Baker to ...r Algernon; and, when he appeals to ...er for support he is met with lazy in...

The only person in the household ...eman can admire is a very pretty and ... maidservant named Smith. Mrs. Rosen... ...y falls dangerously ill, but Mrs. Dallas... ...presses the telegram that would have ... Mrs. Roseaberg from being a fourth at ...-table. When the baby dies the mother ... shocked, and resolves to renounce ... be more maternal. Emily Chapman, a ... mysterious and subtle character, has ...to get Freeman to renew his offer of ...but her better nature triumphs, and she ...hat, instead of, as she had pretended, ... to him in his absence, she has been ...ged. She gives him his liberty, and ...ustralia to do useful work. Algernon ..., having found an American girl with ...ear who is willing to marry him, leaves ...s-Baker for "metal" more attractive. ...le circle is broken up; and Freeman, re... ... his Rhodesian farm, takes with him ...o has refused to wed him for some time ...t of the difference in their respective

2242

"THE MUSICAL MARTIANS."

OR, THEN THE BAND PLAYED."

Piece, in One Act, Produced at the Aldwych Theatre on Monday, Oct. 4.

Myrene .....Miss Vera Dorian
Naxia .....Miss Dulcie Garland
Oubietas .....Mr. Niels H. Gade
Harry Rivers .....Mr. Henry Gurney
Chippers .....Mr. Arthur Leslie

Mr. Philip Yorke commenced his season at the Aldwych Theatre on Monday with the Band of the American National Guard, consisting of fifty performers. During most of the evening the band played from a position on the stage, where, at intervals, a short play was proceeded with. The "Martians"—Myrene, a young Princess, Naxia, her mother, and Oubietas, an inventor, arrive on an airship, which descends in the gardens of the International Exhibition. Harry Rivers, a bandsman, falls in love with Myrene, and wooes her, chiefly in song. Chippers, a chauffeur, chats pleasantly with the Martians, and gives them imitations of Mark Sheridan and Wilkie Bard. In this sketch Miss Vera Dorian looked pretty as Myrene, and acted with grace and archness. Miss Dulcie Garland was efficient as Naxia, and Mr. Niels H. Gade was careful and competent as Oubietas. Mr. Henry Gurney as Harry Rivers gained an encore for his fine and earnest singing of "For you alone," by Henry Gethel, and Mr. Arthur Leslie enacted Chippers with smartness and vivacity. The programme of music performed by the band included Suppé's overture "Morning, Noon, and Night in Vienna"; "Plantation Melodies," introducing "My Old Kentucky Home," "The Old Folks at Home," "Old Zip Coon," "Poor Old Joe," "Old Virginny Essence," "Dixie" (with variations), and "Massa's in de cold, cold ground"; a march, "The Tiger's Tale"; a Serenade, "When Malindy Sings"; a scena, "The Water-Melon Fête," all by Thurban; and a Suite by Sousa called "Three Quotations," including "The King of France with twenty thousand men marched up the hill and marched them down again," "I, too, was born in Arcadia," and "In darkest Africa." Mr. A. Wadsworth gave a xylophone solo, "Souvenir de bad Konigsborn," by Morgelt, which was encored, and an American sketch, by Douglas, Uncle Pete's Birthday, had the following synopsis:—Dawn, Four o'clock, Preparing for the Festivities; At the Party; A Dance; Song, "If the man in the moon were a coon"; Uncle Pete obliges with a Shuffle; song and chorus, "Shine, shine, moon"; Uncle Pete sings "Yankee Doodle"; Big-boot dance, Break-up of the party, finale. Most of these selections were of a "popular" character, and involved much sand-paper rubbing, and interjectional assistance from the members of the orchestra. The loudest applause evoked was won by the performance of Tschaikowsky's "1812," which was given with great spirit. The National Guard Band is energetic and able, and its "attack" is excellent. It performed the more pathetic selections with intense feeling and expression. It was admirably conducted by Mr. John Coughlin, and encores were numerous. A dramatic item of the entertainment was the play by Robert Hilton and Granville Bantock, entitled Salome. In this Mr. Robert Hilton enacted Herod with earnestness, dignity, and power; and Miss Mabilia Dariel displayed much dramatic and mimetic ability as the seductive Salome, especially in the scene in which she strokes with her palms the sword that has executed John the Baptist, and dances around literally "red-handed." Mr. Heath Haviland as the Astrologer pleaded the cause of decency to the infatuated monarch with much earnestness and expression.

Ended Oct 9

THE EMPIRE.

On Saturday, October 9, was produced here a dramatic ballet, in six scenes, by Lieut.-Col. Newnham-Davis and C. Wilhelm, music by Cuthbert Clarke, produced, and the dances arranged, by Fred Farren, the entire production designed and supervised by C. Wilhelm, entitled:—

8

"ROUND THE WORLD"

(IN A MONTH)

THE STORY OF A WAGER.

A New and Original Dramatic Ballet, in Six Scenes, by Lt.-Col. NEWNHAM DAVIS and C. WILHELM.
Music by CUTHBERT CLARKE. Produced and the Dances arranged by FRED FARREN.
The entire Production, designed and supervised by C. WILHELM.

Dresses executed by Miss HASTINGS and MORRIS ANGEL & Co. Machinist, W. SHILLDON
Properties by P. GRIEVESON. Electrician, C. WINTER. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Automobile by THE VINOT Co.

Stage Director - - SPENCER BARRY.

CHARACTERS.

READY (Chauffeur to Capt. Beresford) ... Mr. FRED FARREN
CAPTAIN JACK BERESFORD ... ... Mr. NOEL FLEMING
COUNT WARASDIN ... ... Mr. TOM WALLS
DON MIGUEL (of the Argentine Republic) ... ... Mr. JAMESON
DOÑA DOLORES (his Ward) ... ... Miss UNITY MORE
THE GRAND DUKE BASIL ... ... Miss F. MARTELL
TZABOR (Proprietor of a Troupe of Gipsy Dancers) Mr. L. HUNTER
DMITRI (Natalia's young Brother) ... ... Miss PHYLLIS BEDELLS
STATION MASTER ... ... Mr. GIRARD
KOMAZO (Keeper of a Tea House, Tokio) ... ... Mr. PERKINS
SATSUKI (Principal Geisha) ... ... Miss E. COLLIER
ONE-EYED JACK (a 'Frisco Desperado) ... ... Mr. B. FORD

AND

NATALIA (a Russian Gipsy Girl) ... ... Mlle. LYDIA KYASHT

Flower-Girls, Newsboys, Riviera Visitors, Russian Bridal Party, Cossacks, Gipsies, Moujiks, Moscow Populace, Mongols, Mousmées, Geisha, Rickshaw Runners, Cowboys, Coolies, &c., &c., by Misses H. EDWARDES, MACFARLANE, COURTLAND, PAVER, OSMOND, BANKS & HILL. CUNNINGHAME, G. TREE, THORPE, DAWSON, ROLLERICHT, KAYGILL, PASTON, and the Ladies and Gentlemen of the CORPS DE BALLET

Scene 1. MONACO. The Grounds of the Automobile Club, overlooking the Bay of Monte Carlo. (K. McCleery.)
Scene 2. MOSCOW. The Place Krasnaia, on the occasion of a National Fete.—(J. Harker.)
Scene 3. On the Siberian Railway. (J. Harker.)
Scene 4. TOKIO. The Garden of Ten Thousand Joys.
The Miyako-odori Cherry Blossom Festival.—(K. McCleery.)
Scene 5. 'FRISCO. "One-Eyed Jack's" Saloon.—(Julian Hicks.)
Scene 6. LONDON. Foyer of the Empire Theatre.—(A. Toovatt.)

DANCES.

Scene 1. Dance of Flower Girls and Newsboys
Scene 2. Russian Bridal Dance
Ensemble—Cossacks and Country Girls ... THE CORPS DE BALLET
Pas Seul ... Solos by Misses COURTLAND and PAVER
Gipsy Dance ... Miss PHYLLIS BEDELLS
Eccentric Dance ... Misses OSMOND, HILL, BANKS and CUNNINGHAME
Danse Tzigane (Music by Brahms) ... Mr. FRED FARREN
National Dance ... Mlle. LYDIA KYASHT
Scene 4.—Ensemble ... M. PESHKOFF
Valse Anglaise ... MOUSMÉES and RICKSHA BOYS
Pas Comique ... Mlle. LYDIA KYASHT
Festival Dance ... Mr. FRED FARREN
Fantaise Japonaise ... THE CORPS DE BALLET
Scene 5.—Duo Mexicain ... Miss PHYLLIS BEDELLS
... Miss UNITY MORE and Mr. FRED FARREN

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 12TH, 1909, AT 9 O'CLOCK,
AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING,

HERBERT TRENCH
PRESENTS

DON

A Comedy in Three Acts, by RUDOLF BESIER.

Canon Bonington, Rector of Oldwick	JAMES HEARN
Stephen Bonington, his Son	CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
General Sinclair	DAWSON MILWARD
Albert Thompsett	NORMAN MCKINNEL
Mrs. Bonington	FRANCES IVOR
Mrs. Sinclair	CHARLOTTE GRANVILLE
Ann Sinclair, her Daughter	ELLEN O'MALLEY
Elizabeth Thompsett	CHRISTINE SILVER
Fanny	AMY LAMBORN

Acts I. and II. ...	The Drawing Room, Oldwick Rectory
Act III.	The Rector's Study

The action of the Play is continuous throughout. Time—Late Afternoon.

The Play produced for HERBERT TRENCH by NORMAN MCKINNEL.
Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ. Dresses by LUCILLE and Messrs. DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
Furniture by SPILLMAN.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

GENTLEMEN OF THE ROAD

A Play in One Act, by CHARLES McEVOY.

Bill Blizzard, Lord Bashville of Bashville ...	TREVOR LOWE
Caroline Blizzard, Lady Bashville of Bashville ...	SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
"Sparrow," The Hon. Cheyne Walker ...	J. FISHER WHITE
Mr. Roger Cunningham	EDWARD RIGBY
Chauffeur	ERNEST GRAHAM
Mrs. Cunningham	ADA FERRAR
Miss Cunningham	MIRIAM LEWES
A Policeman	E. A. WARBURTON

Scene—The Roadside. Time—Late Afternoon.

The Play produced for HERBERT TRENCH by E. LYALL SWETE.
Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER. Dresses by Messrs. DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
The 25/35 h.p. Motor Car supplied by Messrs. A. DARRACQ & CO. (1905), Ltd., 27 Walnut Tree Walk, S.E. Electric Head-lamps by BLERIOT, Ltd., 53 Long Acre.

Lessee & Manager ... ... FREDERICK HARRISON

Director HERBERT TRENCH

Business Manager ... ... HORACE WATSON

Waters, J.
Plays

Mr. Rudolf Besier has written one of the cleverest, most original, and most amusing comedies that have been produced for a long time. There is a fantastic boldness about it which takes an audience by storm; and the characters are so well contrasted and so distinctly drawn that the play never ceases to interest and amuse after the preliminary dialogue has been got through, which is rather a protracted business. It was, perhaps, necessary that the audience should fully understand that Stephen Bonington, a distinguished poet, son of Canon Bonington of Oldwick, is a quite unconventional and purely philanthropic personage, who only considers the humane quality of his actions, without reference to their effect on the everyday folk with whom he is connected. Stephen is engaged to Ann Sinclair, the daughter of General and Mrs. Sinclair; and the play opens with the Canon and his wife expecting the visits of the self-important soldier and his family. They are to be met by Stephen, who has been called away to Sheffield. Into this peaceful family circle a bomb falls, in the shape of a letter from a certain Albert Thompsett, accusing Stephen of having run away with his—Thompsett's—wife. Everyone is inclined to credit the charge except Ann, who refuses to believe that Stephen has done anything dishonourable. Suddenly, he arrives with Mrs. Thompsett, a frail, sensitive, young woman, whom Stephen has charitably befriended, and who worships him, though he is absolutely indifferent to her. He insists on her being made comfortable in his own bedroom; and then tells his story. It appears that Elizabeth, who married a stern religionist because he implored her to do so, is very unhappy with him. She refuses to worship after his fashion, and lets him see that he is repulsive to her. Stephen, after hearing her story, was determined that she should leave her husband, and he took her away to Kettering, where they were detained for a night, which she and Stephen passed in her bedroom, he bathing her head. General Sinclair is highly indignant, and wants to leave the Canon's house at once; but Ann insists on having a private interview with Stephen, in which he explains that his love for her gave him an increased sympathy with women as a sex. Ann calls him an "incorrigible darling," and takes him to her arms. Then the noise of an arrival is heard. It is the terrible Thompsett, coming to demand his wife. Stephen starts to encounter him; but all the women cling to him and prevent his departure.

In the last act the plebeian Thompsett gives the poor Canon a very bad ten minutes in his study. Thompsett's idea is that Stephen was Elizabeth's lover before her marriage; and the miserable husband meditates the murder of the absolutely innocent poet. When Stephen faces him, Thompsett draws a revolver, and tells Stephen that he will shoot him unless he orders Elizabeth to return home. Stephen thinks this would be a bad course; and, in order to compel Thompsett to divorce his wife, tells him of the night passed at Kettering. But Elizabeth makes a clean breast of it, confesses that she offered herself body and soul to Stephen, and that he refused her, and says she will go home with her husband. Thompsett, softened by all he has heard, shakes hands with the poet, and departs, and Ann embraces her fiancé rapturously.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

TRENCH

Tuesday
Evening

Oct. 12

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No.

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

"GENTLEMEN OF THE ROAD."

Bill Blizzard	MR. TREVOR LOWE
Caroline Blizzard	MISS SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
Sparrow	MR. J. FISHER WHITE
Mr. Roger Cunningham	MR. EDWARD RIGBY
Chauffeur	MR. ERNEST GRAHAM
Mrs. Cunningham	MISS ADA FERRAR
Miss Cunningham	MISS MIRIAM LEWES
Policeman	MR. E. A. WARBURTON

This was a droll episode of country life. Three poachers, one of whom has been an actor in his time, are detected by a parvenu, Mr. Roger Cunningham, and his wife and daughter, who are motoring. The poachers pretend that they are people of title living the "simple life," and succeed in persuading Cunningham to lend them his motor-car to escape in. Then a policeman arrives on a bicycle in pursuit of the poachers, and the constable is put off the scent by the deluded Cunninghams.

22. 246

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

ON WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13TH, 1909, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8,

SIR WALTER RALEGH

A ROMANTIC PLAY IN FOUR ACTS, BY WILLIAM DEVEREUX.

Queen Elizabeth		Miss WINIFRED EMERY
Frances (Lady Sidney)		Miss GWENDOLINE FLOYD
Anne Charnock		Miss RUTH BOWER
Elizabeth Throgmorton		Miss LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Don Bernardino de Mendoza	(Spanish Ambassador)	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
William Cecil (Lord Burghley)		Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD
Robert Dudley (Earl of Leicester)		Mr. J. NAPPER
Robert Devereux (Earl of Essex) ...		Mr. REGINALD DANE
Sir Francis Walsingham		Mr. ARTHUR AYERS
Sir Amyas Porter ...	(Governor of the Tower)	Mr. S. B. BRERETON
Anthony Babington ...	Members of the Babington Conspiracy	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
John Ballard ...		Mr. A. E. GEORGE
John Savage ...		Mr. FRANK WOOLFE
Francis Throgmorton		Mr. SHIEL BARRY
Robert Barnwell ...		Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Henry Titchbourne ...		Mr. TOM NESBITT
Edward Windsor ...		Mr. HENRY STEVENS
Diego Alvarez		Mr. CATON WOODVILLE
The Queen's Usher		Mr. OSWALD S. BAILEY
Jeremiah Lightfoot ...	(a Puritan Minister)	Mr. HUGH B. TABBERER
Barnabas Grubb ...	... (an Inn Keeper) ...	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Ralegh's Indian Servant		Mr. E. VANDERLIP
James Longbowe ...	(Long Jim, Ralegh's Servant)	Mr. HERBERT JARMAN
Sir Walter Ralegh		Mr. LEWIS WALLER

Act I.		"The Heron's Nest" Inn
Act II.		The Palace, Greenwich
Act III. ...	Scene 1	...The Tower
	Scene 2 ...	A disused house of Leicester's in Moorfields
Act IV.		The Palace, Greenwich

There will be Intervals of 10 minutes between the Acts.

Mr. Waller has been assisted in the production by Mr. HERBERT JARMAN.

The Costumes designed by TOM HESLEWOOD.
The Fights arranged by Monsieur FELIX BERTRAND.
The Music composed by FREDERICK ROSSE.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR	MR. LEONARD CHALK
STAGE MANAGER	MR. B. CAMPLIN SMITH

Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN. Ladies' dresses by Mrs. FRECKNALL.
Scenery by R. C. MCCLEERY. Furniture by OETZMANN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 7.30. Commence at 8. Carriages at 11.
Matinee Doors open at 1.30.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

Extract from the Rules made by the London County Council.—1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 4. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 5. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 6. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 8. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

The Babington conspiracy aforesaid is skilfully employed by the author to bring Ralegh and the Queen together. In the first act she is staying at the Heron's Nest Inn, where the Spanish Ambassador, Don Bernardino de Mendoza, is conspiring against her life. The conspirators make a confidant of Ralegh, who is a poor soldier of fortune; but when he understands the object of the plot he indignantly refuses to be a party to it; and, being attacked by the leader of the gang, defeats him. Scarcely has Ralegh put up his sword when Elizabeth appears, and is charmed by Ralegh's chivalrous coat-spreading. She invites him to Court, and takes one of her many fancies to him. He, however, falls in love with Elizabeth Throgmorton, a maid of honour to the Queen; and when Don Bernardino denounces Ralegh to Elizabeth as a pirate, and the Queen at the same time discovers his love for the other "Bess," she sends him to the Tower.

Here he is visited by the Machiavellian Ambassador, who plans with the Earl of Essex to lead Ralegh on to marry Bess, and thus for ever ruin him in the Queen's favour. Mendoza also suggests to him that he shall leap from the window of his room into the Thames at high tide, a boat being ready to take him away if he escapes being drowned or suffocated in the mud. Ralegh consents to the marriage, but refuses to escape. However, Mendoza has gained one of his points, and he departs satisfied. Bess Throgmorton, who is allowed to visit Ralegh in the Tower, tells him of a letter she has seen, apparently written by the Earl of Leicester, inviting the Queen to a meeting at an old house in Moorfields. Ralegh's suspicions are aroused, and he comes to the conclusion that the letter is a forgery, and that the Queen is to be decoyed to Moorfields that she may be assassinated by Anthony Babington and his fellow-conspirators. After trying in vain to get the Governor of the Tower to warn Elizabeth, Ralegh jumps from the window into the Thames, and the act drop falls.

In the next act we see the conspirators, amongst whom a certain stalwart John Savage, is prominent, waiting in the Moorfields house for the arrival of Elizabeth in order to kill her. Ralegh enters, still wet from his swim, and pretends to sympathise with the treacherous object of the plot. Savage, however, is incredulous, and insists that Ralegh shall be left with him to await Elizabeth's arrival. Sir Walter takes a sword from a rack, forces Savage to a tremendous duel, and slays him, dragging the corpse behind some curtains. The Queen appears, expecting to see Leicester, but her danger is quickly explained to her by Ralegh. The conspirators become impatient and break in the door of the room, which Ralegh has locked; but he has prepared a trick for them. By barricading a staircase which is a cul de sac he leads them to dash up it in search of the Queen, while she and Ralegh, who have been hiding behind the curtains, escape from the apartment.

In the last act, Elizabeth, torn in different directions by national policy and natural affection, offers to marry Ralegh; but he confesses his love for Bess Throgmorton, and restores Elizabeth to a more regal frame of mind by pointing out the dangerous position of England and the need for haughty resistance to Spain. The Queen, herself again, dismisses the Spanish Ambassador, bids defiance to Philip, and joins the hands of Ralegh and his lady love.

MR LEWIS WALLER
AS
SIR WALTER RALEGH.

THE performance at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on Monday, of Mr. William Devereux's play Walter Ralegh, was turned into dumb show by the persistent interruptions of the Roman Catholic audience, who objected, apparently, to the Protestant spirit of the piece. In the third act a gentleman in the audience rose and made a protest, and some people in the pit and gallery sang "Faith of Our Fathers." Era. Oct 15 1910

MR. WEEDON Grossmith's Season (By arrangement with Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM.)

Mr. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS,

By R. C. CARTON.

Preceded at 8.20 by
Mr. HENRI DE VRIES in

"A DUMB MAN'S CURSE."

A Protean Play by J. BERNARD DICKSON. Music by Stephen Philpot.

Father Antoine	(Parish Priest)	Played by Mr. HENRI DE VRIES
Philtipe Doré	(Stone Carver, a Mute)
Madame Babillier	(Gossip)
Louis Renard	(Sergt.-Major in French Army)
Isaac Livi	(Travelling Hawker)
Jean Renouf	(Father of Marie)
Marie Doré	(Wife of Philtipe Doré)	Miss DOROTHY DRAKE

Scene—A Village in France. Time—The Present.

Programme of Music.

I.	Selection	"Our Miss Gibbs" — Monckton & Caryll
II.	Fantasia	"La Gran Via" — Chueca & Valverde
III.		"Two Light Pieces" — Percy Fletcher
IV.	Waltz	"The Dollar Princess" — Leo Fall
	Musical Director	(For SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM) — Mr. Alick Maclean

Box Office open from 10 to 10. Telephone: 3,844 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £3 3s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Family Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.

Business Manager	For MR. WEEDON Grossmith	Mr. RICHARD T. MAYNARD
Stage Manager		Mr. Frank Leach

MATINEE (OF BOTH PLAYS) EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.20.

"A DUMB MAN'S CURSE."

Protean Play, in One Act, by J. Bernard Dickson. Put on at the Criterion on Monday, Oct. 18.

The step from a suburban music hall to a first-class London theatre is a wide one, and though we were able to record the entire success of A Dumb Man's Curse on its initial production at the Peckham Hippodrome on Sept. 27, its suitability to the stage of the Criterion was a matter of speculation. The play is frankly melodramatic, and tells a story that has oft been told with many variations, but a distinct thrill is provided towards the end when a dumb man, with a knife at his wife's throat, suddenly recovers his speech. The man is a French sculptor named Philippe, who had been struck dumb when a boy while saving the life of a young girl in a carriage accident. Philippe and Marie are now man and wife, devoted to each other, and when Louis Renard, an old admirer, makes love to her, the young wife indignantly repulses him. Marie is suddenly called to the bedside of a dying brother, and Renard, seizing the opportunity for revenge, substitutes for the explanatory note which she leaves for her husband a passionately worded epistle from himself. Philippe reads the note, and without seeking explanations, seizes a table-knife, and is about to kill his wife, when the faculty of speech, which left him as the result of a shock, returns in the same remarkable manner. Explanation and reconciliation follow, even to the forgiveness of the scoundrel who had so ruthlessly endeavoured to precipitate a tragedy.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor — CHARING CROSS ROAD. — Sir Charles Wyndham.

Sole Lessee and Manager .. . . FRANK CURZON.

On THURSDAY Evening, OCTOBER 21st, at 8.45,

FRANK CURZON'S

NEW PRODUCTION

MR. CHARLES HAWTREY

And Company in a Play, in Three Acts, entitled

THE LITTLE DAMOZEL

BY MONCKTON HOFFE.

Recklaw Poole	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
The Hon. Fitzroy Lock	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Captain Neil Partington	Mr. LYLE
Walter Angel	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Papa Bartholdy	Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
Franz Pepo	Mr. ERNEST THESIGER
Abraham	Mr. CECIL ROSE
A Servant	Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
Sybil Craven	Miss GLADYS MASON
Julie Alardy	Miss MAY BLAYNEY

Acts I. and III. ... ... The Band Room of the Cafe Angelique, near Shaftesbury Avenue
Act II. ... ... Recklaw Poole's Flat, In Wimpole Street
Time ... The Present

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

PRECEDED AT 8 BY

TILDA'S NEW HAT

BY GEORGE PASTON

Mrs. Fishwick	Miss CLARE GREET
Tilda (her daughter, employed in a jam factory)	.. Miss MONA HARRISON
Daisy Meadows	Miss LORNA LAWRENCE
Walter Emerson (a bill printer)	.. Mr. ERNEST COSHAM

Scene ... Room in Tenement House, Clerkenwell Time ... The Present

Scenery by WALTER HANN.
Dresses by REVILLE & ROSSITER. Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN. Pianos by CHAPPELL & Co.

Musical Director... .. .. ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... " W. T. LOVELL

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1	MARCH	"One of the Best"	Cuthbert Clarke
2	SELECTION	"Madlle. Modiste"	Victor Herbert
3	a. INTERMEZZO	"Spangles"	J. W. Bratton
	b. VALSE	"Beauty's Shrine"	Hartley Manners
4	SELECTION	"Dear Little Denmark"	...Paul Rubens

Business Manager ... ... J. HERBERT JAY

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Grand Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.
Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD. Doors open at 7 45. Matinees 1.45. Commence at 8.15. Matinees 2.15

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The practice, not uncommon in France, of getting a poor man to marry a rich one's cast-off mistress for a consideration, forms, with certain modifications, the leading motive of Mr. Monckton Hoffe's new play, The Little Damozel, which Mr. Frank Curzon produced with so much success at Wyndham's Theatre on Thursday. Recklaw Poole is a ruined gambler who has been warned off the Turf, and is extremely "hard up." In the band-room of the Café Angélique he makes the acquaintance of Captain Neil Partington, who wants to release himself from an entanglement with a certain Julie Alardy, the Little Damozel of the piece. The Captain offers Poole £10,000 if he will marry Julie; and Recklaw agrees to do so if the Captain will "make it" £15,000. Partington is enamoured of a "real lady," Miss Sybil Craven, who was in love with Recklaw Poole before his degeneration. The Captain is careful not to let Poole know of this, and when Sybil meets Poole there are revelations and explosions. Disgusted and indignant, Sybil expresses her feelings freely; Partington is abashed, and Poole is brought to a sense of his misdoing. Of course, it all comes right in the end. It is discovered that Recklaw has insured his life in five different offices; and, as he has hooked a passage to Marseilles, on the pretence of going to China, it is evident that he intends to commit suicide, and so rid his wife of an encumbrance. The "Little Damozel's" heart is softened, and she and Recklaw are reconciled and reunited.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

252

STRAND THEATRE

Managing Director — Mr. J. A. HARRISON.

By command of the Lord Chamberlain, the proscenium safety curtain is lowered daily in the presence of the audience, about the middle of the performance, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order

Every Evening at 8.0 — Matinee Wednesdays at 2.0

A RUSTIC ROMANCE WITH MUSIC
IN THREE ACTS

THE MERRY PEASANT

("DER FIDELE BAUER")

By VICTOR LEON. — Music by LEO FALL.

ACT I.—Lindoberer's Farm ... ... OBERWANG, UPPER AUSTRIA
ACT II.—The Village Fête ... ... OBERWANG
ACT III.—Reception at General Count Von Grumow's House in Vienna.

Ten years elapse between the 1st and 2nd Acts, and two years between the 2nd and 3rd Acts.

Produced by HERBERT COTTESMORE.
Dances arranged by FRED FARREN.

The Dresses in Acts 1 and 2 designed by COMELLI.

The Costumes and Uniforms executed by J. A. HARRISON COY., LTD.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

General Manager... ... ... Mr. G. E. MINOR
Musical Director ... ... Mr. THEODORE STIER
Stage Manager ... ... Mr. SIDNEY WATSON

BOX OFFICE (S. ANDERSON) 10 TILL 10.
Private Boxes, 3 to 5 Guineas. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 3 Front Rows, 7s. 6d. Other Rows, 6s.
Upper Circle, Front Row, 5s. Other Rows, 4s.

Cast of the Play.

Mattheus Roiter	Mr. COURTICE POUNDS
Stefan	Mr. JULIUS WALTHER
Lindoberer	Mr. GEORGE GIDDENS
Vincent	Mr. LESLIE STILES
General Count Von Grumow...	Mr. FORBES DAWSON
Lieut. Kurt Von Grumow ...	Mr. HARRY TAYLOR
Randaschl	Mr. WYNDHAM GUISE
Endelshofer	Mr. FOSTER COURTENAY
Heinrich	Mr. MAXWELL STEWART
Paul	Mr. PENDERED PRICE
Gustave...	Mr. B. WHITE
Frederich	Mr. CECIL KINGSLEY
Theodore	Mr. H. A. WORTH
Master of Ceremonies	Mr. ALEC WILSON
Zopf	Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
Annamirl	Miss SYBIL ARUNDALE
The Countess Von Grumow ...	Miss ROBERTSON GRIMSTON
Freda	Miss MARIE WEST
Rosalie	Miss DOROTHY MONKMAN
Eila	Miss LILY MILLS
Estha	Miss GLADYS GAY
Amela	Mies ETHEL NEGRETTI
Victoria	Miss VIOLET HOLLAM
Louie	Miss GLORIA DENE
Estelle	Miss ENID ESSEX
Lizi	Miss FLORENCE ST. JOHN
Little Annamirl, Little Rosalie, Little Vincent }	In Act I.	{ Miss WINIFRED BERYL, Miss MARY GLYNN, Master FRANK VARNA

The National Dance in Act II. by Julius Gebhardt's Tegernseer Troupe.

Guests—Misses GLORY PEARCE, IDA BARNARD, LILIAN WILLARD, MARIE CLEMENTS, MOLLY ELLESMERE, EDITH HAMILTON, PEGGY DWYER, DELIA DREW, CLAIRE SEFTON, DOROTHY PLOWDEN, FLORA MACDONALD, ALMA EYRE, KATHLEEN HAYES.

2524

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

2525

"THE MERRY PEASANT."

Rustic Romance with Music, in Three Acts, Book by Victor Leon, Music by Leo Fall, Produced at the Strand Theatre on Saturday, Oct. 23.

The influence of a well-constructed, interesting, and amusing book on the success of a musical play has been emphasised of late by the improvement in this direction, which has been shown in many recent productions. We are returning to the old idea of comic opera, and the old-fashioned musical play in which the story disappeared in the second act in the giddy mazes of a fancy-dress ball is a thing of the past. We must either have action and interest or a constant succession of effective items—either a comedy set to music or a variety entertainment in disguise. These facts scarcely seem to have been realised by those responsible for the production of The Merry Peasant. Up to the third act the movement is tame and sluggish; and there are not, at present, sufficient items to atone for this imperfection. Did these two acts contain more details as good as the dances of Miss Mary Glynn and of the Tergernseer Troupe, the tenuity of the story might not be observed.

The book of "Der Fiedele Bauer," which has been adapted into English by an anonymous hand, is as follows:—The action opens in a picturesque village in Upper Austria. A kindly and genial old peasant named Mattheus Roiter has a clever son called Stefan. Mattheus starves and pinches and saves money to make Stefan a lawyer; and the young man justifies the sacrifice by rising in his profession and becoming popular in legal and fashionable circles in Vienna, for which city we see him start in the first act. Ten years later Stefan returns, having passed his barrister's examination and having won the heart of Freda, the daughter of General Count Von Grumow, a Viennese magnate. Mattheus is a rough diamond, and, though his son is delighted to have him at Vienna, Stefan is uncomfortable at the prospect of his parent's presence at the betrothal ceremony which is shortly coming off.

In the last act we are at Count Von Grumow's house at Vienna. Mattheus, with his daughter, Annamirl, a friend of his, Lindoberer, a timber merchant, and an elderly peasantess named Lizi, arrive to witness the betrothal ceremony, much to the annoyance of a certain Zopf, who, formerly a police official at the village, has obtained the post of butler in the Count's household. Annamirl's sweetheart, Vincent, is orderly to the Count, and there are some lively love-passages between them. When the guests are all assembled, Stefan introduces his father to the Count, who, disgusted at the idea of his daughter marrying a common peasant, declares that the ceremony shall not take place. Now, in time past, Mattheus has taken charge of a fatherless and motherless girl, Rosalie, and Lizi has been trying for a long time to find out Rosalie's parentage. The comparison of a ring which was left on the child's finger with one worn by the Count leads to the discovery that Rosalie is his son's daughter. The Count has a revulsion of feeling on learning this, and declares himself quite willing to make Stefan his son-in-law. Mr. Leo Fall's music is decidedly above the average of music play scores in quality, and is sometimes charmingly fanciful and melodious.

22 256

THE PLAYHOUSE

1/11/1909

Orch. Stall

G 19

This to be retained

FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF PERFORMANCES ONLY

Every Evening at 8.30

will be presented the Naval Comedy, in Four Acts, called

THE FLAG LIEUTENANT

By Major W. P. DRURY and LEO TREVOR.

VICE-ADMIRAL THE HON. SIR BERKELEY WYNNE, K.C.B.	...	Mr. ARTHUR HOLMES-GORE
JOHN PENROSE	(Flag Captain) ...	Mr. PETER BLUNT
RICHARD LASCELLES	(Flag Lieutenant) ...	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
CHRISTOPHER NEATE	(Admiral's Secretary) ...	Mr. C. B. KESTON
WILLIAM THESIGER	(Major, Royal Marines)	Mr. H. NYE CHART
WALTER CRUTCHLEY	(Surgeon, R.N.) ...	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
HORATIO HOOD }	Midshipmen ...	Mr. ROBERT BOTTOMLEY
EDWARD DORMER-LEE }		Mr. EDWARD COUTTS
CHARLES PENNY	(Quartermaster) ...	Mr. WILLIAM LARCOMBE
GEORGE BLOCKLEY	(Yeoman of Signals) ...	Mr. LESLIE PALMER
THOMAS STEELE	(Sergeant of Marines) ...	Mr. CHARLES HAMPDEN
JOSHUA BORLAISE	(Private of Marines) ..	Mr. CHARLES FRANCIS
JAMES SLOGGETT	(Ordinary Seaman) ...	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
GENERAL GOUGH-BOGLE	... ...	Mr. SYDNEY PAXTON
COLONEL McLEOD }	of the Campbell Highlanders	Mr. M. WETHERELL
CAPTAIN MUNRO } ...		Mr. LANE CRAUFORD
MICHAEL PALLISER	(of the Eastern Telegraph Co.)	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
MEMETI SALOS	(a Bashi-Bazouk) ...	Mr. W. PERCIVAL
MRS CAMERON	... ...	Miss MAUDE MILLETT
LADY HERMIONE WYNNE	... ...	Miss EVA KILLICK
VIOLA HOOD	... ...	Miss DOROTHY FANE
MRS. GOUGH-BOGLE	... ...	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
LADY DUGDALE	... ...	Miss AMY RAVENSCROFT

ACT I. ... MALTA. The Admiral's after Cabin, H.M.S. "Royal Edward." Three Days Elapse. [Bruce Smith
ACT II. ... CRETE. The British Camp at Kandia ... ... Six Weeks Elapse. ,, ,, ACT III. ... MALTA. Mrs. Cameron's Drawing-room in the San Giovanni Hotel. ,, ,, ACT IV. ... MALTA. Fore part of the Quarter-deck, H.M.S. "Royal Edward." (The King's Birthday.) ,, ,, Uniforms by I. & H. NATHAN, 17, Coventry Street, W. Dresses by Madame LOUISE, 19, Maddox Street.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by Messrs. OETZMANN & Co.
The Rifles supplied by CHARLES LANCASTER & Co. Ltd. (Gunmakers to H.M. The King), Panton Street, Haymarket.
Pianoforte by Messrs. CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond Street, W.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

. . THE . .

SERVANT IN THE HOUSE

A Play in Five Acts.

By CHARLES RANN KENNEDY.

"He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes . . . . . If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"—I. JOHN, ii. 9-11; iv. 20.

"The hunger for brotherhood is at the bottom of the unrest of the modern civilized world."—GEORGE FREDERICK WATTS.

James Ponsonby Makeshyfte, D.D.	J. H. BARNES
(The Right Reverend The Lord Bishop of Lancashire)
The Reverend William Smythe, the Vicar	GUY STANDING
Auntie, the Vicar's Wife	EDITH WYNNE MATTHISON
Mary, their Niece	GWLADYS WYNNE
Manson, a Butler	SYDNEY VALENTINE
Rogers, a Page-boy	BEN FIELD
Mr. Robert Smith, a gentleman of necessary occupation	HENRY MILLER

Time Now. Place Here.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: INTERVALS.

After Act I.	Three minules only.
After Act II.	No interval.
After Act III.	Ten minutes interval.
After Act IV.	No interval.

The Play has been published in book form by HARPER & BROTHERS, New York and London.

"THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE."

Play in Five Acts, by Charles Rann Kennedy, Played for the First Time In England at the Adelphi Theatre, on Monday, Oct: 25.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

256

258

There are two parts in Mr. Charles Rann Kennedy's play, The Servant in the House—which had its first London production at the Adelphi Theatre last Monday after achieving great success in America—the dramatic story and the allegorical meaning. The story is simple. A certain William Smythe, one of a family of workmen, has educated himself, entered the church, and become a Vicar. His brother, Robert, who has remained a labourer, has been neglected by William, who, when Robert took to drink after the death of his wife, sheltered his little daughter Mary and brought her up as a young lady. It is not quite clear in what way William has contributed to the degradation of Robert; and as the latter is "a scoffer, an atheist, and a miserable drunkard," intimate communion between the brethren seems to be inconvenient. After fifteen years Robert writes to say that he wants to visit the Vicar and see his child. William, however, puts him off with the excuse that the drains are out of order. Now drains are Robert's speciality.

The Vicar, whose brother Joshua is the Bishop of Benares, keeps a butler named Manson, who wears Indian attire, and has a grand air and an apostolic manner. When Robert arrives Manson takes off the labourer's wet jacket, puts on him the Vicar's black frock-coat, and makes him sit down to breakfast. The Bishop of Lancashire, a mercenary worldling, calls; and, as he is half blind, sits down to table with the rough labourer. Some capital broad comedy comes of the error, the Church of England being severely satirised. The Vicar himself calls it "a church whose every stone is reeking with the bloody sweat and anguish of the human creatures, whom the wealth of men like That"—meaning the Bishop—"has driven to despair." Robert meets his daughter, who is quite unaware of their relationship; and there is a very touching conversation between them, in which they gradually draw together, and she offers him her hand.

In the fourth act the Vicar, whose conscience keeps on gnawing at him, resolves to be honest about his relationship with Robert, and to tell Mary that the workman is her father; but the Vicar's wife puts a stop to anything of the kind, and wants to pack Robert off to Australia. Then Manson intervenes, and, assuming authority, counsels William to receive his brother "as an honoured guest." Manson then takes command of affairs, and turns the Bishop of Lancashire out of the house with scorn.

In the last act the allegorical part of the play occurs. Robert, who has the gift of detecting anything wrong with drains, comes to say that he has found out what is the matter with those of the vicarage. He has traced the drain to a spot beneath the church, and has found that the injurious gases come from a grave there, full of "rotten dead men's bones." It is dangerous to "deal with the job"; but the Vicar, roused by the news, casts off his parson's coat, rolls up his sleeves, and prepares to join Robert in further investigations. Manson then reveals his identity. He is the Bishop of Benares, Robert's long-absent brother. Mary learns of her relationship to Robert, and all ends well.

259

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

To-Night, Monday, November 8th, 1909, at 8.15,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

The Great Mrs. Alloway

A Play in Three Acts, by DOUGLAS MURRAY.

Sir Charles Hewitt-Gore, G.C.I.E., K.C.M.G. ..	Mr. FRED KERR
Lord Glaverhouse	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD (By arrangement with Mr. Herbert Trench)
George Hartland	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
The Rev. Herbert Prynne	Mr. HERBERT BUNSTON
Patrick Moore	.. Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Fletcher	.. Mr. PHILIP KNOX
Mrs. Hartland	.. Miss LENA ASHWELL
Lady Glaverhouse	Miss KATE SERGEANTSON
Mrs. Scott-Gamble	Miss MADGE McINTOSH
Mrs. Cuthbert-Jones	.. Miss JOY CHATWYN
Neska, an Ayah (Mrs. Hartland's personal Attendant)	Miss ADELINE BOURNE
Ethel Prynne	.. Miss NINA SEVENING

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

The action of the Play takes place at Canon Elms, Mrs. Hartland's Residence in Sussex.

ACT I.	.. .. ..	THE TERRACE
ACT II.	.. .. ..	THE MORNING ROOM
ACT III.	Scene 1	THE LIBRARY
	Scene 2	THE BOUDOIR

N.B.—There will be an interval of a few moments between Scenes 1 and 2, Act III.

The Play produced under the Direction of Mr. DION BOUCICAULT.

The Scenery painted by W. HANN & SON.

The Dresses worn by Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Madge McIntosh, Miss Kate Sergeantson, and Miss Nina Sevening by the MAISON LUCILE, Hanover Square, W.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Die Felsenmuhle"	Reissiger
SELECTION	"Pagliacci"	Leoncavallo
FANTASIE	"Carmen"	Bizet
NOCTURNE	Op. 37, No. 1	Chopin

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager ... . GEORGE A. HIGHLAND
Musical Director ... ... C. FENN-LEYLAND

General Manager .. (for Charles Frohman) .. W. LESTOCQ

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The new play which Mr. Charles Frohman presented last Monday at the Globe Theatre is of mixed quality, but has many merits. It might easily be improved by being overhauled by an experienced dramatist. The audience is kept too long in a state of uncertainty. In the first act we are led to expect a domestic melodrama, both by the amount of importance which is given to a certain ring containing deadly poison, and by the mysterious glidings of an ayah. The Great Mrs. Alloway is not, however, a melodrama, but a play dealing very seriously with sex relations and women's wrongs. Mrs. Alloway is the name of a notorious courtesan, who has broken hearts and ruined fortunes in a devastating career through India. Having been cruelly deceived and deserted by a man whom she loved, and who heartlessly left her just before the birth of their child, she determined to revenge on his sex the wrongs she suffered from the individual, and used her many attractions mercilessly and unscrupulously. Sated and disgusted, she has endowed an institution for the help of unfortunate women, has assumed the name of "Mrs. Hartland," has returned to England with her son George, now a young man, and has settled in Sussex. George falls in love with a clergyman's daughter, Ethel Pryane, and the marriage is about to take place, when Ethel's uncle, Sir Charles Hewitt-Gore, an elderly Indian official, returns home. He did not know Mrs. Alloway except by repute; but he was the executor of one of her victims, who shot himself after Mrs. Alloway had ruined him completely. George is very desirous of learning more about his father, and he induces Sir Charles to go to London and re-examine the papers of the deceased victim, whom "Mrs. Hartland" has admitted was a friend of the father. Sir Charles does so, and finds proof of "Mrs. Hartland's" identity with Mrs. Alloway. He does not tell George the truth, but returns and reproaches her bitterly, and demands that the marriage shall be stopped. Mrs. Alloway, in a strong scene, puts in a bitter defence of her career, and, in an interview with Ethel, confesses all, and leaves the verdict to her. Ethel, greatly affected, admits the extenuating circumstances; Sir Charles is softened; and the conclusion come to is, it appears, to leave George in ignorance, and let the young people, at any rate, be happy.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

"TRILBY" AT HIS MAJESTY'S.

Revival on Monday, Nov. 8, of the Play, in Three Acts, Dramatised by Paul M. Potter from the late George du Maurier's novel.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 8TH, TO MONDAY, NOVEMBER 15TH, AT 8.15.

TRILBY

A Play in Three Acts by PAUL M. POTTER.

Dramatised (by permission) from the late GEORGE DU MAURIER'S Novel.

Svengali		HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE
Talbot Wynne	(known as "Taffy")	EDWARD SASS
Alexander McAlister	(known as "The Laird")	J. B. GORDON
William Bagot	(known as "Little Billee")	HENRY AINLEY
Gecko		HENRY MORRELL
Zouzou	(afterwards Duc de la Rochmartel)	LEON M. LION
Dodor		WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Oliver		FRANK ESMOND
Lorimer		C. H. CROKER KING
Rev. Thomas Bagot		WILLIAM HAVILAND
Manager Kaw		HUBERT CARTER
Trilby O'Ferrall		Miss VIOLA TREE
Mrs. Bagot		Mrs. E. H. BROOKE
Mme. Vinard		Miss CICELY RICHARDS
Mimi		Miss HILDA MOORE
Honorine, Angele	Grisettes	Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY, Miss CLARE HARRIS

The Scene of the Play is laid in Paris.

Act I.

The Latin Quarter Studio of "The Three Musketeers of the Brush."

Act II.

The same—Christmas Eve.

Act III.

At the Cirque des Bashi-Bazouchs—five years later.

G 148
STALLS
Nov. 9.
1909
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

EVERY EVENING at 8.30

WILL BE ACTED

LORRIMER SABISTON, DRAMATIST.

An Original Play, in Three Acts,

By R. C. CARTON

Lorrimer Sabiston	(Dramatist)	Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Sir Henry Cheynley, M.P.		Mr. JAMES CAREW
Rev. Everard Bayne		Mr. MARTIN LEWIS
Richard Kelham	(Dramatist)	Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Noel Darcus	(Dramatist)	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Mr. Fillary	(of the "Piccadilly Gazette")	Mr. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Venning	(Sabiston's Secretary)	Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Servant		Mr. ERIK STIRLING
Alida	(Sabiston's Daughter)	Miss ROSALIE TOLLER
Lady Cheynley		Miss BERYL FABER

The Action of the Play takes place in Lorrimer Sabiston's House in Kensington.

Act I.—THE STUDY. Act II.—THE CONSERVATORY.
Act III.—SAME AS ACT I.

There is an interval of five months between Acts I. and II., and two months between Acts II. and III.

THE SCENERY PAINTED BY W. RAPHAEL.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

For the play, while it has a clear and collected story, is chiefly interesting from its modernity. Modern and up to date it undoubtedly is. In the first place, the "woman in the case," the prize which the principal male character devotes all his spare energy to winning, is a married woman. She describes her sufferings with a brutal husband in delicate, but distinct, terms. "It is not so much the quarrels that I fear as the reconciliations," she says, shudderingly. And the intense self-consciousness of both parties, the clever cold-blooded way in which they analyse their feelings and develop their intentions are distinctly modern, too. Quite advanced also is the decision of the parent to send his maidenly offspring to see a "scabrous" play for her own good, and in order to open her mind. So that there are really two sections of the play; its plot, which is not exactly novel, and might have been developed in several different ways; and its character-drawing and dialogue, which are admirable. The dramatist-lover, the cautious fore-seeing man of the world, Sabiston, is drawn with extraordinary clearness and polish; and Lady Cheynley, the intellectual woman of fashion, emancipated from all prejudices, without children, exquisitely discriminating, and determined to have a logical basis for all her actions, is another evidence of Mr. Carton's power. It is on the dialogue between these that the author has lavished his greatest skill. The delicacy with which the painful position of Lady Cheynley is handled, and the cynicism with which Sabiston treats all the questions of life, give a racy flavour to the play, and raise it to a high level of artistic subtlety and refinement. Nor is the situation of the two women who both fall in love with the supposed dramatist on the strength of his play, less suggestive and thought-compelling than the rest of this extremely acute and "intelligent" work.

Lorrimer Sabiston, a London playwright of established fame and fortune, has written a "scabrous" but "strong" play, which he is afraid to produce under his own name. To him comes an ambitious young dramatist of advanced opinions. Noel Darcus is one of the unacted, and is besides desperately "hard up." By his poverty and the plausible arguments of Sabiston, he is induced to accept the authorship of the "scabrous" piece, for which he will be allowed to draw fees, on the condition that he keeps the secret. So ends the first act.

Sabiston's play, which is called One Law for the Woman, is produced, and achieves very great success. Noel Darcus finds himself famous, rich, and admired. And yet he is not happy; for he feels the falsity of the pretence on which he has obtained admiration. Nor is Sabiston more contented with the results of his experiment. He has to express an opinion unfavourable to his own work, and to hear his substitute praised to the skies, while he—Sabiston—is reproached with always "playing for safety." He is enamoured of a married woman, Lady Cheynley, who has a brutal husband, and is essentially modern and Pagan. Sabiston has hopes of persuading her to elope with him to Italy, and the pros and cons are discussed by them very acutely. Lady Cheynley sums up the situation by suggesting that, if she had decided to take the step, she might prefer that the dance she indulged in should be "a tarantella and not a minuet"—in other words, that if she adopted the principle of all for love and the world well lost, she would like the plunge to be taken in a whirlpool of passion, and not in the almost philosophic spirit in which Sabiston makes his proposal. Another worry is created for Sabiston by the production of his "scabrous" piece. His daughter Alida—Sabiston is a widower—who was engaged to a meek young clergyman, takes a distaste for marriage, and conceives a romantic infatuation for Darcus, after seeing the terrible play, and wants her wedding with the parson postponed.

Somewhat to the surprise of the audience, they learn that love-passages have been going on between Lady Cheynley and Darcus, and she eventually runs away with him to Italy, leaving Sabiston in the lurch. He consoles himself with the reflection that Lady Cheynley is certain to find out Darcus's incapacity sooner or later, and sits down to dictate a happy ending to a play which is on the eve of production.

QUEEN'S
THEATRE.

9/11/09

STALL
10/6

No. B16

"THE LYONS MAIL" REVIVED.

At the Queen's Theatre, on Tuesday, Nov. 9, the Play, in Three Acts, Adapted by Charles Reade, from Le Courrier de Lyon, by MM. Moreau, Siraudin, and Delacour.

Joseph Lesurques ..... Dubosc	Mr. H. B. Irving
Courriol	Mr. E. Harcourt Williams
Choppard	Mr. Chas. Dodsworth
Fouinard	Mr. Tom Reynolds
Durochat	Mr. Hemstock
Jerome Lesurques	Mr. Frank Tyars
Dorval	Mr. Frank Cochrane
Didier	Mr. Stanley Howlett
Joliquet	Mr. Arthur Curtis
Guernean	Mr. H. C. Hewitt
Lambert	Mr. J. Patrick Curwen
Postmaster of Montgeron	Mr. B. A. Pittar
Coco	Mr. H. R. Cook
Commissary of Police	Mr. W. Graham
Postillion	Mr. W. Cass
Guard	Mr. P. Walder
Waiter	Mr. S. Beaumont
Julie	Miss Phyllis Embury
Marie	Miss May Holland
Niece to Postmaster	Miss E. Frances Davis
Jeanette	Miss Dorothea Baird

Ever since Lacressonnière in Paris in the fifties played Dubosc—the desperate and designing ruffian, of unparalleled audacity—doubling the part with that of Joseph Lesurques, the dual rôle, as we may call it, has been a favourite one with English actors. Charles Kean, during his brilliant career at the Princess's, Hermann Vezin, Leigh Murray, John Coleman, have all been associated with it, in different versions of Le Courrier de Lyon; and Sir Henry Irving, in his earlier years at the Lyceum, choosing the Charles Reade version of the story adopted by Charles Kean, added much to his high reputation as a creator of character by his admirable acting of the two parts. Following his distinguished sire's example, Mr. H. B. Irving has identified himself with the old-time story, and London playgoers have already stamped with the hall-mark of their approval his admirable purpose in presenting some of his father's most celebrated impersonations. There is really little or nothing to add to our former eulogy

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

"PIERROT AND PIERRETTE."

A Lyrical Musical Drama, in Two Acts, Words by W. E. Grogan, Music by Josef Holbrooke. Produced at His Majesty's Theatre on the afternoon of Nov. 11.

Pierrot ..... Mr. Albert Archdeacon
Pierrette ..... Miss Esta d'Argo
The Nurse ..... Miss Katherine Jones
The Stranger ..... Mr. Leon de Sousa

Mr. Joseph Holbrooke, composer, pianist, and conductor, has won many prizes, and has produced a large number of his works at musical festivals in the provinces, besides writing various orchestral and chamber works. He is accomplished in orchestration, and his music has the pleasing effect which is created by taste, feeling, and culture. If it seems wanting in impressive appeal and deficient in haunting melody, Mr. Holbrooke may plead that he sins—if he sins at all—in very respectable company. Fortunately, the "fable" of Pierrot and Pierrette, which was produced at the Afternoon Theatre on Thursday afternoon, does not make any very deep demands on the composer. It is a pretty anecdote, showing how Pierrot, happy in his love for Pierrette, is tempted by a Stranger in brilliant eighteenth-century costume, who comes through a door in the wall of the old-fashioned garden which is the scene of the piece, to leave his sweetheart for the delirious joys, &c., of fashion and vice. Pierrette falls fainting at the end of the first act; and in the second Pierrot, having had enough of dissipation, enters, haggard and exhausted, and sinks on the ground. Pierrette, who is only too glad to have him back on any condition, forgives him, raises him, and consoles him; and so the story ends. An elderly woman dressed in black serves as a grim "chorus" to the play. Mr. Albert Archdeacon sang and acted admirably as Pierrot; Miss Esta d'Argo put into her performance as Pierrette a charming expressiveness, a winning charm, and most delicate pathos, besides rendering her music capitally. Mr. Leon de Sousa's fine voice was heard to advantage as the Stranger, and he acted with much dignity; and Miss Katherine Jones gave a sound and effective impersonation of the Nurse. The musical drama was carefully produced by Mr. Edmund Gwenn. Pierrot and Pierrette was preceded by A Comedy, in Two Acts, by J. M. Synge, entitled

"THE TINKER'S WEDDING."

Michael Byrne ..... Mr. Jules Shaw
A Priest ..... Mr. Edmund Gurney
Mary Byrne ..... Miss Clare Greet
Sarah Casey ..... Miss Mona Limerick

The comedy appeared to be a humorous attack on the institution of marriage; and certainly the state of matrimony could hardly have been entered into in circumstances more grotesque than those in which Michael and Mary Byrne seek to become man and wife. Michael is an Irish tinker, and Mary, his fiancée, is a Wicklow beauty. They are visited in their encampment by a parish priest, who, after some haggling, consents to marry them for ten shillings and a tin can. But Michael's mother, an old drunkard, exchanges the can for two bottles of ale. When the priest discovers this he refuses to marry Michael and Mary, and even threatens to expose their pilferings; whereupon they gag him, put a sack over his head, and force him to swear not to set the police on them. They then conclude that marriage is entirely unnecessary, and the curtain falls on their derision of the "holy father." The spectacle of the latter, in full canonicals, being maltreated and ridiculed appeared to offend some of the audience, who hissed accordingly. Miss Clare Greet gave a graphic embodiment of the old hag; Mr. Edmund Gurney was, as usual, entirely efficient and excellent as the priest; and Mr. Jules Shaw and Miss Mona Limerick—whose appearance was very attractive—played the male and female tinkers quite satisfactorily. The piece was produced by Mr. Gurney very carefully, and the Wicklow scenery was strikingly beautiful.

"MIGHT IS RIGHT."

A Play, in One Act, by Netta Syrett, Produced at the Haymarket on Saturday, Nov. 13.

Cupid is commandeered by the suffragette in the little farce with which Miss Netta Syrett, the winner of a play competition some years ago, has at length secured a foothold on the regular stage. The little piece is handicapped by a trite subject, but it displays keen observation, and is well furnished with witty lines. The authoress has conceived a Prime Minister of England young and impressionable, who is lured into the clutches of a band of suffragettes by Miss Bobby Binns, a variety "star," with whom he has carried on a flirtation. Snugly immured in Lady Seaborne's house in the Adelphi, the Premier is feasted right royally by the members of the band, who take up the various rôles of cook and other domestic servants, and attend to his wants. Rigidly guarded by his captors, who are all armed with revolvers, the right honourable gentleman's movements are further hampered by a flowing dressing-gown, covered in frills, his outer garments having been temporarily annexed by the butler, who is the only male occupant of the house. The suffragettes are all society ladies, and well known to the Premier, who tries to soften the heart of the parlourmaid by a reference to his nephew, to whom she is engaged, but though the maiden is moved to tears, her devotion to the cause is proof against all blandishments. The Prime Minister himself, as we have hinted, cannot withstand the operations of the little god, and during the three days of incarceration has fallen in love with Barbara Tracy, the president of the Society. He asks her to marry him, and she agrees on condition that he signs a paper promising to bring in a Bill granting the vote to women. The Prime Minister capitulates, and when Miss "Bobby," who has defected from the "cause" on becoming engaged to Lord Archibald Eagleton, brings her bethrothed to the rescue, it is to find the suffragette triumphant.

EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK, AND ON MATINEES AT 3, HERBERT TRENCH
PRESENTS
DON
PRECEDED AT 8.15, AND ON MATINEES AT 2.15, BY
MIGHT IS RIGHT
A Play in One Act, by NETTA SYRETT.

Lady Seaborne ... ... Daisy F. England
Miss Barbara Tracy, her Niece—President of the Secret Suffrage Society Amy Brandon Thomas
Miss Millicent Leith ... ... Gillian Scaife
Miss Finch ... ... Ada Palmer
Lady Green ... ... Ada Ferrar
Miss Delafield, Secretary to the Secret Suffrage Society Doris Lytton
Miss Mowbray ... ... Madge Titheradge
Miss Bobby Binns, a Variety Actress ... ... Sydney Fairbrother
Jenkins, Lady Seaborne's Butler ... ... Edward Rigby
Montague Beauchamp, The Prime Minister ... Trevor Lowe
Sir Frederick Goring, The Minister's Nephew—engaged to Millicent Leith E. A. Warburton
Lord Archibald Eagleton, The Premier's Cousin ... Ernest Graham

Scene—A Room in the Adelphi. Time—The Future.

The Curtain is lowered for a few moments during the action of the Play to indicate the lapse of two days

The Play produced for Herbert Trench by Norman McKinnel.
Dresses by Debenham & Freebody.

General Manager ... ... Carl F. Leyel
Musical Director ... Norman O'Neill | Stage Manager ... Charles La Trobe

The Box Office (Mr. W. H. Leverton) is open daily from 10 to 10
Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £4 4s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 5s.; Upper Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.
Telephone 3344 Gerrard.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN

1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public must leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Lessee & Manager .. .. .. Frederick Harrison
Director - Herbert Trench

Business Manager ... ... Horace Watson

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees .. .. Popular Playhouses, Ltd.
Managing Directors .. .. HENRY R. SMITH and ERNEST CARPENTER

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, 17, Craven Street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Saturday, Nov. 13th, 1909, and every Evening at 8

MATINEE WEDNESDAYS at 2.30

FOR FOUR WEEKS ONLY.

EAST LYNNE

Dramatised from Mrs. Henry Wood's Novel by ERIC MAYNE.

Characters.

Archibald Carlyle ...	...	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Capt. Francis Levison ...	...	Mr. ERIC MAYNE
Lord Mountsevern ...	...	Mr. HARVEY BRABAN
Justice Hare	...	Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Richard Hare	(his Son)	Mr. SIDNEY VAUTIER
Lawyer Dill	...	Mr. SIDNEY YOUNG
Bethel	(a Poacher)	Mr. TERENCE O'BRIEN
Ebenezer Jiffin	(the Village Postman)	Mr. HUBERT WILLIS
George Hallijohn ...	...	Mr. T. R. GILLISPIE
Cornelia Carlyle ...	...	Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
Barbara Hare... ...	...	Miss MABEL MANNERING
Affy Hallijohn ...	...	Miss STELLA DE MARNEY
Joyce	...	Miss KEVILL DAVIS
Susanne	...	Miss ALICE M. COX
Little Isabel Carlyle ...	...	Miss VERA BURTON
Little Willie Carlyle ...	...	Miss OLGA HOPE
Lady Isabel (afterwards Madame Vine)		Miss FRANCES DILLON

The whole produced under the Stage Direction of
ERNEST CARPENTER.

Synopsis of Scenery.

PROLOGUE.

Scene 1. Lord Mountsevern's Garden at Castle Marling.
,, 2. A Street near West Lynne.
,, 3. Exterior of Hallijohn's Cottage, West Lynne.

(Seven years are supposed to elapse between the Prologue and Act I.

ACT I.

Scene 1. Carlyle's Drawing Room, East Lynne.
,, 2. Carlyle's Library.
,, 3. Carlyle's Drawing Room.

ACT II.

Scene 1. The Library at Justice Hare's.
,, 2. A Room in Lady Isabel's House, Grenoble.

ACT III.

Scene 1. Carlyle's Drawing Room, East Lynne.
,, 2. A Street at West Lynne.
,, 3. Willie Carlyle's Bedroom, East Lynne.

ACT IV.

Scene 1. Outside the Court House, West Lynne.
,, 2. Madame Vine's Bedroom, East Lynne.

The Scenery Designed and Painted by E. C. NICHOLLS, and Assistants.

The Floral Decorations by DICKSON & CO., Knightsbridge.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. SULLIVAN BROOKE, will play selections in the intervals, as per list overleaf.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. .. Mr. W. F. CROWE
Stage Manager .. .. Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Assist. Stage Manager .. .. .. Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG

Box Office (EDWARD HACKETT) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard
Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Dress Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. (Reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

WINDSOR CASTLE

PROGRAMME

OF

THEATRICAL PERFORMANCE

BY

SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE'S COMPANY

(From His Majesty's Theatre).

WEDNESDAY EVENING,
NOVEMBER 17th, 1909.

"TRILBY"

A Play, in Three Acts, by PAUL M POTTER

Dramatised (by permission) from the late GEORGE DU MAURIER'S Novel.

SVENGALI	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE
TALBOT WYNNE (known as "Taffy")	EDWARD SASS
ALEXANDER MCALISTER (known as "The Laird")	J. B. GORDON
WILLIAM BAGOT (known as "Little Billee")	HENRY AINLEY
GECKO	HENRY MORRELL
ZOUZOU (afterwards Duc de la Rochmartel)	LEON M. LION
DODOR	WALTER R. CREIGHTON
OLIVER	FRANK ESMOND
LORIMER	C. H. CROKER KING
REV. THOMAS BAGOT	WILLIAM HAVILAND
MANAGER KAW	HUBERT CARTER
TRILBY O'FERRALL	MISS VIOLA TREE
MRS. BAGOT	MRS. E. H. BROOKE
MME. VINARD	MISS CICELY RICHARDS
MIMI	MISS HILDA MOORE
HONORINE, ANGELE (Grisettes)	MISS MARIE HEMINGWAY, MISS CLARE HARRIS

Grisettes in the dance—

MISS GODDEN, MISS AUSTEN, MISS GREY, MISS COWIE, MISS CHESTER

The Scene of the Play is laid in Paris.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

ACT I.

The Latin Quarter Studio of "The Three Musketeers of the Brush."

ACT II.

The same—Christmas Eve

ACT III.

At the Cirque des Bash-Bazoucks—five years later

The Entr'acte Music by Mr. Casano's Orchestra.

Manager	Henry Dana
Stage Manager	Cecil King
Associate Stage Manager	Stanley Bell
Musical Director	Adolf Schmid

WINDSOR CASTLE

PROGRAMME

OF

THEATRICAL PERFORMANCE

BY

MR. H. B. IRVING'S COMPANY

From the Queen's Theatre.

FRIDAY EVENING,
NOVEMBER 19th, 1909.

2 274

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

"THE LYONS MAIL"

A Play, in Three Acts, by CHARLES READE

From "Le Courrier de Lyon" by MM. Moreau, Siraudin, and Delacour.

Joseph Lesurques (a Merchant of Paris)	Mr. H. B. Irving
Dubosc (Captain of a Gang of Robbers)	Mr. H. B. Irving
Courriol	Mr E. Harcourt Williams
Chopcard	Mr Chas. Dodsworth
Fouinard	Mr Tom Reynolds
Durochat	Mr Hemstock
(Members of the Gang of Robbers)
Jerome Lesurques (Father of Joseph)	Mr Frank Tyars
Dorval (a Magistrate)	Mr Frank Cochrane
Didier (betrothed to Julie)	Mr. Stanley Howlett
Joliquet (Jerome's Serving Boy)	Mr Arthur Curtis
Guerneau	Mr H C Hewitt
Lambert (Friends of Lesurques)	Mr J Patric Curwen
Postmaster of Montgeron	Mr B A Pittar
Coco	Mr H. R Cook
Commissary of Police	Mr. W. Graham
Postillion	Mr W Cass
Guard	Mr J B Glover
Waiter	Mr S Beaumont
Julie (Daughter of Lesurques)	Miss Phyllis Embury
Marie (a Servant)	Miss May Holland
Niece to Postmaster	Miss E Frances Davis
Jeannette	Miss Dorothea Baird

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

ACT I.

Scene 1: A Café

Scene 2: A Roadside Inn at Lieursaint

The Robbery of the Lyons Mail

ACT II.

Scene: Lesurques' House

ACT III.

Scene 1: Lesurques' House

Scene 2: Courtyard of Prison

Scene 3: A Garret overlooking the Place of Execution

The Entr'acte Music by Mr. Casano's Orchestra

Manager	Mr Austin Brereton
Stage Manager	Mr Tom Reynolds
Musical Director	Mr J Meredith Ball

STRAND THEATRE

Managing Director — Mr. J. A. HARRISON.

By command of the Lord Chamberlain, the proscenium safety curtain is lowered daily in the presence of the audience, about the middle of the performance, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order

Every Evening at 8.0 — Matinee Wednesdays at 2.0

A RUSTIC ROMANCE WITH MUSIC
IN THREE ACTS

THE MERRY PEASANT

("DER FIDELE BAUER")

By VICTOR LEON. — Music by LEO FALL.

The entirely new English adaptation by COSMO HAMILTON.

ADDITIONAL LYRICS BY ARTHUR BRANSCOMBE.

The Scenery Painted by E. GRIMANI.

ACT I.—Lindoberer's Farm ... OBERWANG, UPPER AUSTRIA (Morning).
ACT II.—The Village Fête ... OBERWANG (Evening).
ACT III.—Reception at General Count Von Grumow's House in Vienna. (A few weeks after).

Dances arranged by FRED FARREN.

The Dresses in Acts 1 and 2 designed by COMELLI.

The Costumes and Uniforms executed by J. A. HARRISON COY., LTD.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

General Manager	Mr. G. E. MINOR
Musical Director	Mr. THEODORE STIER
Stage Manager	Mr. SIDNEY WATSON

BOX OFFICE (S. ANDERSON) 10 TILL 10.

Private Boxes, 3 to 5 Guineas. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 3 Front Rows, 7s. 6d. Other Rows, 6s.
Upper Circle, Front Row, 5s. Other Rows, 4s.

Waters, J.
Plays

Cast of the Play.

Mattheus (The Merry Peasant) ...	Mr. COURTICE POUNDS
Stefan ... ... (His son) ...	Mr. STUART ALEXANDER
Lindoberer (Mayor of Oberwang) ...	Mr. GEORGE GIDDENS
Vincent ... (His Son) ...	Mr. LESLIE STILES
General Count Von Grumow ..	Mr. FORBES DAWSON
Lieut. Kurt Von Grumow ...	Mr. HARRY TAYLOR
Randaschi	Mr. WYNDHAM GUISE
Endelshofer	Mr. FOSTER COURTENAY
Heinrich	Mr. EDWARD DELFOSSE
Master of Ceremonies	Mr. ALEC WILSON
Toni	Master FRANK VARNA
Zopf ... (The Village Constable) ...	Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
Annamirl (Stefan's Sister) ...	Miss SYBIL ARUNDALE
The Countess Von Grumow ...	Miss ROBERTSON GRIMSTON
Freda ... (Her daughter) ...	Miss PEARL LADD
Ella	Miss LILY MILLS
Little Agnes	Miss A. GLYNNE
Gretchen (Annamirl's Friend) ...	Miss GLADYS GAY
Little Rosalie	Miss MARY GLYNNE
Lizi ... (Her Mother) ...	Miss FLORENCE ST. JOHN

Recruits—Messrs. P. PRICE, B. WHITE, CECIL KINGSLEY, H. A. WORTH.

Milkmaids—Misses ETHEL NEGRETTI, VIOLET HOLLAM, GLORIA DENE, ENID ESSEX.

Guests—Misses GLORY PEARCE, IDA BARNARD, LILIAN HEWETSON, MARIE CLEMENTS, MOLLY ELLESMERE, EDITH HAMILTON, PEGGY DWYER, DELIA DREW, CLAIRE SEFTON, DOROTHY PLOWDEN, FLORA MACDONALD, ALMA EYRE, KATHLEEN HAYES.

The National Dance in Act II. by Julius Gebhardt's Tegernseer Troupe.

Waters, J.
Plays

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

"BEETHOVEN."

Play, in Three Acts, by René Fauchois, freely adapted by Louis N. Parker, Produced at His Majesty's Theatre, on Thursday, Nov. 25.

A strangely thrilling and beautiful mixture of music and drama was that which Sir Herbert Tree presented to his patrons at His Majesty's Theatre on Thursday evening. The fine orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Landon Ronald, had an important share in the success of the play. The nature of the story allowed of the introduction of many of Beethoven's best compositions, three of which Mr. Schmid had ably orchestrated. Thus, when Beethoven was struggling with the inspiration of his Muse, the air passing through his brain was played, and the entr'actes were entirely composed of Beethoven music. The "atmosphere" thus created was very favourable to sympathy and sentiment; and Beethoven touched the heart of the audience deeply.

We first see the composer in some public gardens near Vienna, where, after some "sparring" with friends and admirers, he has an explanation with the pretty woman whom he worships, Giulietta Guicciardi. She tells him that her father has ordered her to marry the Count Von Gallenberg, and intimates that she intends to obey. Beethoven, disillusioned, resolves to drown his his disappointment in work and to become famous. Three years pass, and we find him in his lodgings, at the height of his Viennese success. His concert is very successful, and, though he leaves his coat, with the proceeds in one of the pockets, on a tree by the wayside, it is recovered, and he is able to lend the frivolous Giulietta, whose husband has turned gambler, enough to enable her to redeem her jewels from the pawnbroker. But Beethoven has hanging over him the terrible dread of deafness. He has already had temporary attacks, and, in a touching scene he confides his mental anguish to a friend. The blow comes when Beethoven is rehearsing a quartet at his lodgings, and on his sorrow and suffering the act drop descends.

In the last act we see Beethoven old and poor, and cut to the heart by the ingratitude of his nephew, Karl Beethoven, who rifles his desk to obtain money. In the depth of the composer's sadness he is visited in a vision by beautiful female impersonations of his nine sonatas.

Beethoven was preceded by a new piece in one act, adapted by Henry Hamilton from the Gorman by Adolph Glass, entitled

"A RUSSIAN TRAGEDY."

General Vassilievitch .....MR. EDWARD SASS
Ivan Oranieff .....MR. JULES SHAW
Paul Vanoff .....MR. HENRY AINLEY
Sonja .....MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL

This was a short, strennous story of Russian official tyranny and Nihtlist revenge. General Vassilievitch, the Governor of Petrovolsk, is a stern repressor of the latter party, and one of them attempts to assassinate him from the garden outside the house where the scene is laid. The man is arrested, and is sent by the General to be tortured, and afterwards shot. This business despatched, Vassilievitch is visited by his mistress Sonja, a beautiful married woman, whose husband he has had privately executed some time since. After much mutual caressing she learns this from him, and persuades him to let himself be chained to a pillar in the manner in which he secures his prisoners while under examination. Sonja then shoots him dead, and retires to the adjoining apartment to commit suicide.

TO-NIGHT AT 8 O'CLOCK

(AND EVERY EVENING)

BEETHOVEN

A Play in Three Acts by RENÉ FAUCHOIS.

Freely adapted by LOUIS N. PARKER.

Ludwig Van Beethoven		HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE
Archduke Rudolf of Austria		WILLIAM HAVILAND
Prince Ferdinand Kinsky		A. SCOTT CRAVEN
Prince Joseph Lobkowitz		E. R. WARD
Count Von Arnim		LESLIE HAMER
Nikolaus Van Beethoven	(Brothers to Ludwig)	EDWARD SASS
Kaspar Van Beethoven		STUART GRAHAM
Karl, Kaspar's Son	(as a boy)	BURFORD HAMPDEN
Karl, ditto	(as a man)	LEON M. LION
Le Baron de Tremont		FRANK ESMOND
Anton Schindler	(Beethoven's Friend)	HENRY AINLEY
Adolf Schimon	(A Portrait Painter)	C. H. CROKER-KING
Franz Hoffmeister	(A Music Publisher)	FREDERICK JAMES
Ignaz Schuppanzigh	(Members of Archduke Rudolph's String Quartet)	HENRY KITTS
Louis Sina		JULES SHAW
Franz Weisz		HENRY MORRELL
Zmeskall Von Domanovecz		HUBERT CARTER
Moritz Breuning	(Beethoven's Friends)	J. W. PIGOTT
Anselm Hüttenbrenner		C. HEATHERLEY
Bettina Brentano	(afterwards Countess Von Arnim)	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Giulietta Guicciardi	(afterwards Countess Von Gallenberg)	Miss HILDA ANTONY
Trude	(Beethoven's Housekeeper)	Miss ALICE MANSFIELD
Theresa	(Nikolaus Van Beethoven's Wife)	Miss ELINOR FOSTER
Johanna	(Kaspar Van Beethoven's Wife)	Miss ETHEL HODGKINS

The Eight Symphonies.—Misses Hilda Moore, Sylvia Young, Irene Smith, Laura Cowie, Elizabeth Dexter, Eva Balfour, Clare Harris, Marie Hemmingway.

The Ninth Symphony.—Miss Evelyn D'Alroy.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

ACT I.

Public Gardens near Vienna, 1809.
(Joseph Harker.)

ACT II

A Room in Beethoven's Lodgings, Vienna, 1812.
(Stanley Bell.)

ACT III

Beethoven's Room in the Old House of the Spanish Blackfriars, Vienna, 1827.
(Joseph Harker.)

PROGRAMME

The Incidental Music has been selected entirely from Beethoven's Compositions by LANDON RONALD, who will personally conduct at the first performance.

Overture, "Leonora," No. 3.

ACT I.

An die ferne Geliebte.*
The Moonlight Sonata (1st Movement).*
Sketches of the Symphony in C minor.
ENTR'ACTE.—Symphony in C minor (1st Movement).

ACT II.

Sketches of the Ninth Symphony.
Adelaïde.*
String Quartet No. 9 (op. 59).
ENTR'ACTE.— Overture to Coriolanus.

ACT III.

Suggestions of all the nine Symphonies, and Ode to Joy from the Ninth Symphony,

* Orchestrated by ADOLF SCHMID.

TO BE FOLLOWED BY

A RUSSIAN TRAGEDY

Adapted by HENRY HAMILTON from the German of ADOLPH GLASS.

General Vassilievitch	(Governor of Petrovolsk)	EDWARD SASS
Ivan Oranieff	(His Secretary)	JULES SHAW
Paul Vanoff	(A Nihilist)	HENRY AINLEY
Sonja	and	Mrs. PATRICK CAMPBELL

SCENE—Room in the Governor's House, Petrovolsk.
(Stanley Bell.)
TIME—The Present Day.

Music.

BEFORE "A RUSSIAN TRAGEDY"

Prelude C Sharp Minor ... ... Rachmaninoff

Orchestrated by ADOLF SCHMID.

The Costumes have been designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I., and executed by B. J. SIMMONS & Co.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

MATINEES: Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 2.15.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W

Mr. H. B. IRVING

On TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 30th, 1909

"The House Opposite"

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS.

By PERCEVAL LANDON.

The Right Hon. Henry Rivers, K.C., M.P. (Ex-Home Secretary)	Mr. HERBERT WARING
Sir Edward Harrowby, K.C.B. (Permanent Under Secretary of the Home Department)	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
Richard Cardyne	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Stuart Fillerby	Mr. ERIC MATURIN
Paul Sandys	Mr. ALEX. SCOTT-GATTY
Parker	Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
The Hon. Mrs. Rivers	Miss EVA MOORE
Mrs. Calthorpe	Miss MURIEL BEAUMONT
Lady Muriel Wentworth	Miss PHYLLIS EMBURY
Marie	Miss DORA BARTON
Sybil	Miss GRACE STARLING

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Act I. Scene Mrs. Rivers' Boudoir. Early Morning, May 7th

Act II. Scene Mrs. Rivers' Drawing Room
The Afternoon of the same day

Act III. Scene The Same
Seven weeks later

Act IV. Scene The Same
Three weeks later

Scenery by G. SACKMANN

Miss Moore's and Miss Beaumont's Dresses by Jay's, Regent Street
Miss [illegible] and Miss Bunbury's by Mdme Freeknall.
Furniture by Oetzmann

MATINEE on Saturday, December 4th, and every Wednesday and Saturday following.

Dress Circle [illegible] 4s. and 3s. Pit, 2s 6d. Gallery 1s.
Private Boxes [illegible] Three Guineas

200 DRESS CIRCLE SEATS at 5s. each.

Box Office Mr. [illegible] Telephone: Gerrard 9437 (two lines)

[illegible] Stage Manager Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Assistant Stage Manager Mr. H. RALEIGH COOK

GENERAL MANAGER

Mr. AUSTIN BRERETON

The main idea of The House Opposite is really excellent, and there are scenes of tense and thrilling interest in the piece; but the author, probably from inexperience, has not known how to develop the admirable "notion" which he has conceived to the very best advantage. His feeling is very often out of harmony with that of an average theatrical audience; the main plot, though strong, is not sufficient to furnish material even for two hours and a half, including waits; and as there is no underplot and little comic relief to make up the customary period of performance, the author has introduced much introspective and casuistical discussion, which is felt to be excrescent in a play which is essentially melodramatic. All this is much to be deplored, for it is seldom that we meet with such a strong motive as that of Mr. Perceval Landon's piece.

The leading male character is an unemotional Don Juan, who is supposed to fascinate women by a kind of snaky coldness combined with great fluency of speech. In the first act, which takes place in a lady's boudoir in a London house at four o'clock in the morning, we find this person—Richard Cardyne he is called—embracing Mrs. Rivers, the wife of an ex-Home Secretary. Rivers's character is distasteful to his wife, and she has started an intrigue with Cardyne. The blind of the window is not drawn down, and Cardyne turns out the electric light on the table. After more embraces, Mrs. Rivers leads Cardyne into an admission that he has only just concluded an amour with another woman, and, deeply disgusted, she breaks off her liaison with him, and goes out. When she has left the room, Cardyne notices a light in an apartment exactly opposite on the other side of the street. What he sees is not known to the audience; but he remarks, "Curious; very curious!"

In the afternoon of the same day, in Mrs. Rivers's drawing-room, we learn that a murder has been committed in the "house opposite." An old miser has been stabbed to the heart, and suspicion falls on his female housekeeper. What Cardyne noticed when in Mrs. Rivers's boudoir was a man going into the miser's bedroom with a knife. He tells Mrs. Rivers this, and explains to her that, by his evidence, he could save the unfortunate housekeeper; but this would involve the exposure of Mrs. Rivers, as Cardyne would have to account for his presence in her boudoir at four o'clock in the morning, and Mrs. Rivers cannot bring herself to consent to the sacrifice. A way out is suggested by the servant, Marie, who has been in "trouble" in the past, and has been saved from the streets by Mrs. Rivers, whom she adores. Marie offers to sacrifice herself, and to allow Cardyne to swear that he was in her bedroom when he saw the murderer opposite. The guilty pair clutch at the chance, and Cardyne, after arranging a story to fit the supposition, goes up to Marie's bedroom to observe details for his prospective perjury. He returns with the disappointing statement that there is a cornice which would prevent anyone in the bedroom from seeing into the room where the murderer was observed. The unfortunate housekeeper is found guilty, and Cardyne is determined to save her. Marie, when the case is fully explained to her, implores her mistress to face exposure and disgrace rather than let an innocent woman be hanged, and Mrs. Rivers resolves to tell her husband all. A rather subtly-conceived scene follows. Rivers holds the newspaper which he is reading between himself and his wife while she is speaking, and it is uncertain whether he understands her confession. After she has made it, he informs her that the murderer of the miser has been discovered, having been mortally injured on the vessel in which he had endeavoured to escape, and having made a full confession of his guilt. Mrs. Rivers is in doubt as to whether her husband knows or not of her adultery, and he obviously intends to torture her by holding her in uncertainty for life.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

EVERY EVENING at 9

WILL BE ACTED

The Importance of being Earnest

A Trivial Comedy for Serious People

By OSCAR WILDE

John Worthing, J.P.	of the Manor House, Woolton, Hertfordshire	Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER (His Original Character)
Algernon Moncrieffe	(his Friend)	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH (His Original Character)
Rev. Canon Chasuble, D.D.	(Rector of Woolton)	Mr. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Merriman	(Butler to Mr. Worthing)	Mr. ERIK STIRLING
Lane	(Mr. Moncrieffe's Man-servant)	Mr. T. WEGUELIN
Lady Bracknell		Miss HELEN ROUS
Hon. Gwendolen Fairfax	(her Daughter)	Miss STELLA PATRICK CAMPBELL
Cecily Cardew	(John Worthing's Ward)	Miss ROSALIE TOLLER
Mrs. Prism	(her Governess)	Miss ALICE BEET

Time - - The Present.

Act I. ... Algernon Moncrieffe's Rooms in Piccadilly

Act II. ... The Garden at the Manor House, Woolton

Act III. ... Morning-Room at the Manor House, Woolton

Preceded at 8.15 by

THE NURSERY GOVERNESS

A Play, in One Act, Translated and Adapted from M. PROVINS' "La Couvernante"

By P. G. DUCHESNE

Mr. Simpson Brigge	Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Captain Trent	Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Mrs. Trent	Miss JEAN STERLING MACKINLAY
Wilson	Miss MARJORIE WATERLOW

Scene - - Morning-Room at Mrs. Trent's House

A signal will be given from the stage by the sounding of a bell one minute before the curtain rises upon each Act.

"THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST."

A Trivial Comedy for Serious People, in Three Acts, by Oscar Wilde, Revived at the St. James's Theatre on Tuesday, Nov. 30.

"THE NURSERY GOVERNESS,"

a play, in one act, translated and adapted from M. Provins' La Gouvernonte, by P. Duchesne, which was given for the first time in the West-End by the following cast:—

Mr. Simpson Briggo .....Mr. Ashton Pearse
Captain Trent .....Mr. Harcourt Williams
Mrs. Trent .....Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay
Wilson .....Miss Marjorie Waterlow

This amusing curtain-raiser, which was produced for the first time in the London district at the Kennington Theatre on Oct. 26, last year, does not suffer from its French origin. Captain Trent, for some flimsy cause, has been divorced—in America we presume—from his charming wife; and when the curtain rises we find that she has become engaged to an elderly prig named Simpson Brizge. Trent's artful contrivances to renew his wife's love for him by fanning the flame of jealousy in the breast of Brigge furnish plenty of amusement, and the situations are always funny.

Gwendolen: Let us go into the house. They will hardly venture to come after us there."
Cicely: "No, men are so cowardly, aren't they?"

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

To-Night, Wednesday, December 1st, 1909, at 9 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will produce, for the first time, a New Comedy, in Three Acts, called

"LITTLE MRS. CUMMIN"

By RICHARD PRYCE, adapted from "The Eglamore Portraits" by MARY E. MANN.

MRS. CUMMIN	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
JULIET	Miss MARIE LÖHR
MRS. PLAIN	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
SUSY PLAIN	Miss ESMÉ HUBBARD
HARRIET	Miss DOROTHY FANE
CLARENCE EGLAMORE	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
HORACE EGLAMORE	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
CAPTAIN SANDS	Mr. CHARLES SUGDEN
MILLS	Mr. M. WETHERELL

Scene ... Drawing Room at Clarence Eglamore's Cottage. (BRUCE SMITH.)

Preceded, at 8.30, by a New Play, in One Act, entitled

"THE VISIT"

By RICHARD PRYCE, adapted from "Freddy's Ship" by MARY E. MANN.

MRS. MACMICHEL	Miss HENRIETTA WATSON
MRS. BENSON	Miss MARIE LINDEN
MAID	Miss MARIE SHIELDS
REV. G. BENSON	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
COLONEL MACMICHEL	Mr. E. MAINWARING

Scene ... Room in a Country Rectory. (BRUCE SMITH.)

Miss LOTTIE VENNE'S dresses by REVILLE AND ROSSITER, 15, Hanover Square, W.
Miss MARIE LÖHR'S dresses and hats by PAQUIN, Ltd., 39, Dover Street, W.
Other costumes by Mrs. CALEB PORTER, 175, Brompton Road.
Pianoforte by Messrs. CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond Street, W.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - Mr. ALFRED TURNER

THE PLAYHOUSE

1/12/1909

Orch. Stall

F 8

This to be returned

If any proof were needed of the immortality of ancient theatrical material it would be supplied by the laughter which was evoked by the old mother-in-law motive treated genteelly as it is in Little Mrs. Cummin. The action chiefly consists in a quarrel between two young newly-married people; but the movement is created by the manœuvres of the girl's mother, a vain, scheming, and absurdly self-complacent little person, who manages to set the hitherto loving pair by the ears. The scene is the prettily-furnished cottage to which Clarence Eglamore and his young wife, Juliet, are returning after the honeymoon. Juliet is a silly girl, fresh from school, and is easily influenced by her artful and ingenious parent, who, in Eglamore's absence, has altered the arrangement of the furniture, exchanged his favourite lounging-coat for a palm in a pot, and put the portraits of his father and mother under a bed, substituting for them on the walls of the room a couple of wretched daubs by a relative. On the question whether the portraits shall be restored to their original position the whole story turns. It is a "test case" to decide whether Mrs. Cummin or Eglamore is to rule.

Eglamore is anxious to get rid of his terrible little mother-in-law, but does not like the idea of the scandal which her sudden departure would cause in the village, so he gets an old friend of his, Susy Plain, a golfing maiden with a hearty manner, to ask Mrs. Cummin to stay with Susy's mother, Mrs. Plain. Mrs. Cummin, who has already threatened to go back to Birmingham, accepts the invitation, and instructs Juliet to let her husband think that she—Mrs. Cummin—has gone home. In the course of the quarrel about the pictures, which continues, Clarence lets out the truth about the Plains' invitation, which the mother-in-law then declines to accept, Juliet insisting that she shall remain at the cottage. Clarence, in desperation, wires to Mr. Cummin asking him politely to recall Mrs. C. to his side.

A second anxiety of Clarence's concerns his relations with his rich uncle Horace, from whom he has expectations. The old gentleman is brusque, domineering, and deaf; and, in the second act, when a bridge party takes place, the power of age combined with wealth in a small provincial community is amusingly suggested. Uncle Horace is allowed to be as rude as he likes, and Juliet refuses to "toady" him. Urged on by her mother, Juliet takes down the portraits which Clarence has restored to their original positions on each side of the fireplace, and replaces them by the daubs aforesaid, putting the portraits in the fireplace, concealed by a screen. During the whole of the play Clarence and Juliet are constantly approaching a reconciliation, only to be separated by some unlucky accident which always originates in the mother-in-law's artful interference. In the course of the bridge party Uncle Horace asks to see the portraits, and Juliet, much humiliated, has to produce them, covered with soot, from the fireplace. Then comes the rebound of Clarence's appeal to Mr. Cummin: a wire from that gentleman reading, "Come home; I want you. No cause for alarm." As Juliet says, it is impossible that Mr. Cummin could have telegraphed for his wife merely to enjoy her society; so mother and daughter come to the conclusion that he is seriously ill, and Juliet goes off with her mother to catch a train for Birmingham.

But Juliet does not get so far. The motor breaks down, and she returns home to find the portraits back in their places. Clarence, however, relents, and, unnoticed by his wife, quietly puts up the daubs again. Juliet when she discoveres the truth about the telegrams, flies into a passion and stabs the pictures with a knife, only to find she has been gashing the daubs. Uncle Horace, to give Clarence a lesson, writes him a note saying that he must expect nothing from his rich relative, and Juliet is very remorseful and repentant. Mrs. Cummin, who has had a strong letter from her husband, decides to "cease from troubling," and the young married pair are at rest.

"THE VISIT."

Mrs. Macmichel .....Miss Henrietta Watson
Mrs. Benson .....Miss Marie Linden
Maid .....Miss Marie Shields
Rev. G. Benson .....Mr. Daniel McCarthy
Colonel Macmichel .....Mr. E. Mainwaring

This was a pathetic little story somewhat on La Joie Fait Peur lines, in which the audience was interested in the attempt made to keep from an invalid news which might give her a fatal shock. Mrs. Macmichel, who, with her husband, Colonel Macmichel, has gone to live in a country village, calls on the vicar's wife, rather against the grain, and finds that Mr. Benson, the vicar, has just read in a local paper that the "destroyer" of which his son is one of the officers has gone down with all hands. While he goes to the post-office to wire for confirmation, he leaves Mrs. Macmichel to guard his wife, whose health is weak, from learning the news. Mrs. Macmichel prevents Mrs. Benson from reading the paper, keeps her from seeing a village gossip who calls, and even intercepts a telegram which arrives. The "wire," however, is to say that the son was not on the ship, and is safe, and the two women embrace with effusion.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

STAGE SOCIETY'S MATINEE.

The Stage Society, whose productions are always interesting, had a very agreeable afternoon at the Aldwych Theatre on Monday. The most eagerly-expected item was the play by Bernard Shaw, which enjoyed so much gratuitons advertisement on its prohibition by the Censor some months ago. The following was the cast of "THE SHEWING-UP OF BLANCO POSNET."

Babsy .....Miss Eileen O'Doherty
Lottie .....Miss Daisy Reddy
Hannah .....Miss Sheila O'Sullivan
Jessie .....Miss Mary Nairn
Emma .....Miss Eithne Magee
Elder Daniels .....Mr. Arthur Sinclair
Blanco Posnet .....Mr. Fred O'Donovan
Strapper Kemp .....Mr. J. M. Kerrigan
Feemy Evans .....Miss Sara Allgood
Sheriff Kemp .....Mr. Sydney J. Morgan
Foreman of Jury .....Mr. J. A. O'Rourke
Nestor .....Ma. John Carrick
Waggoner Joe .....Mr. Eric Gorman
The Woman .....Miss Maire O'Neill

When Mr. Bernard Shaw's play was produced at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, on Aug. 25, we remarked that there was nothing in it to account for the action taken by the Censor, and a hearing of the play at the Aldwych on Monday afternoon confirms us in our opinion. The Shewing-up of Blanco Posnet is exactly what it is described to be—a sermon in crude melodrama. Blanco Posnet is a half-witted ne'er-do-well, whose brain has been turned by meditatiog on religions subjects. His brother, who calls himself Elder Daniels, and is a canting formalist, has defranded Blanco of some money, and, in reveoge, the "softy" steals from Daniels a horse. Unfortunately, the animal really belongs to the Sheriff of the county. Blanco starts to get away on the horse, bnt in his flight he meets with a woman who is taking a sick child to the doctor, and lends her the animal. When the pursuing party overtake him, he is gazing at a rainbow, overpowered with the sense of the joy which he feels as the result of doing a good action. Blanco is brought back to the township; and here the play begins.

He is put upon his trial, and refuses to defend himself by explaining how he came to part with the horse. Feemy Evans, a prostitute, swears she saw Blanco ride off on the animal; but the woman whom Blanco assisted turns up with the horse in her possession, so that the Sheriff gets his own again. Her story, of course, palliates Blanco's offence; bnt the guilt of theft is not removed from him till Feemy, in an impulse of humanity, withdraws her evidence, and says that she perjured herself ont of personal spite. Blanco, at the Sheriff's direction, is found not guilty, and he gets on a table and preaches a sermon to the people, urging them to leave their wicked ways, which are a "rotten game," and to play the "great game" of honesty, purity, and brotherly love.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

THE LETHAL HOTEL.

A Grotesque in One Act by A. W. WILLNER.

Freely translated by Frederick Whelen.

Mr. X. - - - - - - - - - - EDWARD SASS
Mr. Y. - - - - - - - - - - EVELYN BEERBOHM
The Inspector - - - - - - - - - LEON M. LION
A Footman - - - - - - - - - ARTHUR CLEAVE
The Charwoman - - - - - - - - - Miss ALICE MANSFIELD

Place—A Metropolis. Time—The present.

"THE LETHAL HOTEL."

A Grotesque, in One Act, by A. W. Willner, freely Translated by Frederick Whelen, and Produced at His Majesty's on Tuesday, Dec. 7.

Mr. X. .....Mr. Edward Sass
Mr. Y. .....Mr. Evelyn Beerbohm
The Inspector .....Mr. Leon M. Lion
The Charwoman .....Miss Alice Mansfield
A Footman .....Mr. Arthur Cleave

Mr. Frederick Whelen in his adaptation from the German of A. W. Willner, entitled The Lethal Hotel, seems to have done his work exceedingly well, and the amusing conversations and clever character drawing result in an exhilarating half-hour for the early playgoer at His Majesty's. The scene is the apartment of an hotel with ominous-looking funnels. In a conversation between the inspector and Mr. X., a "littery gent" of Irish nationality, we learn that the apartment—so luxurious in its appointments—is merely the comfortable rendezvous for the members of the cultured classes who wish to end their days painlessly. The lethal methods established for the self-destruction of those suffering from the boredom of existence are simple enough. After the would-be suicide has been a quarter of an hour in the room a warning signal is given, and down comes an iron shutter; a second signal proclaims the turning on of poisonous gases; but plenty of opportunity is given those who at the last moment find life sweeter than they thought. Mr. X. is paying his fourth visit, and this time is joined by a rich young peer, who holds the doctrines of Pythagoras, and wishes at his death that his soul shall inhabit the body of a great artist. He is prodigal in his tips, giving his companion, Mr. X., £4,000 in notes and £1,000 to the inspector. The iron shutter falls, and later the red electric signal gives the necessary warning that the fumes of the lethal gases are about to be turned on. Mr. X. rushes to press the electric bell that is provided for escape. Bnt Mr. Y., the young peer, frightens him to his knees by presenting a revolver. An aged charwoman piteously implores Mr. Y. to release her that she may go and look after her poor "dorg." Before he can accede to her request there is a loud explosion. The inspector rushes in, to explain that the apparatus is completely out of order, bnt that the tickets taken by Mr. X. and Mr. Y. are available for another date. The young peer, who has expressed a wish to abolish himself, takes the charwoman to his breast, and thus typifies the union between peers and people.

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 8TH, 1909, AT 7.30,
AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING,
HERBERT TRENCH
PRESENTS

THE BLUE BIRD

A Fairy Play in Five Acts by MAURICE MAETERLINCK.
Translated by ALEXANDER TEIXEIRA DE MATTOS.

NOTE.—The BLUE BIRD, inhabitant of the pays bleu, the fabulous blue country of our dreams, is an ancient symbol in the folk-lore of Lorraine, and stands for HAPPINESS.

Mummy Tyl	MARGARET MURRAY
Daddy Tyl	E. A. WARBURTON
Tyltyl	OLIVE WALTER
Mytyl	PAULINE GILMER
The Fairy Bérylune	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Bread	EDWARD RIGBY
Fire	WILLIAM VOKES
Tylô, the Dog	ERNEST HENDRIE
Tylette, the Cat	NORMAN PAGE
Water	INA PELLY
Milk	DORIS LYTTON
Sugar	H. R. HIGNETT
Light	ENID ROSE
Gaffer Tyl	WILLIAM FARREN
Granny Tyl	DAISY ENGLAND
Night	SABA RALEIGH
Time	C. V. FRANCE
The Oak	J. FISHER WHITE
Neighbour Berlingot	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Neighbour Berlingot's Little Daughter	LEONORA CALDWELL

The Wolf	R. P. LAMB	The Elm	ERNEST GRAHAM
The Pig	E. GILBURT	The Beech	JOSEPH O'BRIEN
The Bear	E. J. SULLEY	Oak-Sapling	DOROTHY MACREADY
The Cow	ROY TRAVERS	The Lime	LEONARD CALVERT
The Bull	E. A. WARBURTON	The Birch	R. H. LEVERETT
The Sheep	J. CASSELS COBB	The Chestnut	GUY O'NEAL
The Cock	STEPHEN THOMAS	The Ivy	K. DENNYS
The Rabbit	CHARLIE THOMAS	The Poplar	J. DICKSON-KENWIN
The Horse	ARTHUR WEBSTER	The Willow	W. R. HUTTON
The Ass	FRANCIS CHAMIER	The Goat	F. M. KELLY
Boy Lover	JOAN HAYES	The Blue Child	MARJORIE BURGESS
Girl Lover	NONNY LOCK	Cold-in-the-Head	BLANCHE DAVIDSON

Hours, Stars, etc.: Misses COVENTRY, CAREW, LAKE, SWIFT, BARTON, DENVERS, ELLAM, CALDWELL, FARREN, FURNIVALL, and DAW.

Leaves, Rays, Stuffs, etc.:—Misses HOOPER, BURGESS, GORDON, HARRISON, VOAKES, HALES, ROCHFORD, FISCHER, MACREADY, ELKA NORD, MORRIS, DAVIDSON, SYMES, ISRAEL, PAGE, GROVES, KARENTZ, WATTS, MORANDI, FORSYTHE, GOTTGETREU; and Masters JOSEPH WILLMENT, JAMES HORNE, and HEREWARD KNIGHT.

All omissions and alterations of the text have been made with the express sanction of M. MAETERLINCK.
The Play produced for HERBERT TRENCH by E. LYALL SWETE.
Dances arranged by Miss INA PELLY.

Act I.	Scene		The Woodcutter's Cottage
Act II.	Scene	1	The Fairy Bérylune's Palace
	Scene	2	The Land of Memory
Act III.	Scene	1	The Forest
	Scene	2	Before the Wall
	Scene	3	The Kingdom of the Past
Act IV.	Scene		The Kingdom of the Future
Act V.	Scene		The Palace of Night
Act VI.	Scene	1	The Leavetaking
	Scene	2	The Awakening in the Woodcutter's Cottage

There will be an interval of seven minutes after Acts I., II., III., ten minutes after Act IV., and seven minutes after Act V.

General Stage Director ... ... NORMAN MCKINNEL

Music specially composed by NORMAN O'NEILL.
Scenery designed by F. CAYLEY ROBINSON, S. H. SIME, and JOSEPH HARKER.
Scenery and Act Drop painted by JOSEPH HARKER.
Properties by EDWARD BRUNTON, F. C. LABHART, and H. ELLIOTT. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Costumes designed by F. CAYLEY ROBINSON, and executed by Messrs. SIMMONS and Mesdames LAYCEY & LAYCEY.
Electrical Effects by Mr. T. J. DIGBY.

MATINÉE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.

General Manager ... ... CARL F. LEYEL

MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... NORMAN O'NEILL | STAGE MANAGER ... CHARLES LA TROBE

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Box Office (Mr. W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10
Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £4 4s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 5s.; Upper Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.
Telephone 3344 Gerrard.

Mr. HERBERT TRENCH begs to announce that he has transferred Rudolf Besier's Comedy DON, with the entire Cast, to the CRITERION THEATRE, where it is now being performed every Evening, and at Matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN

1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

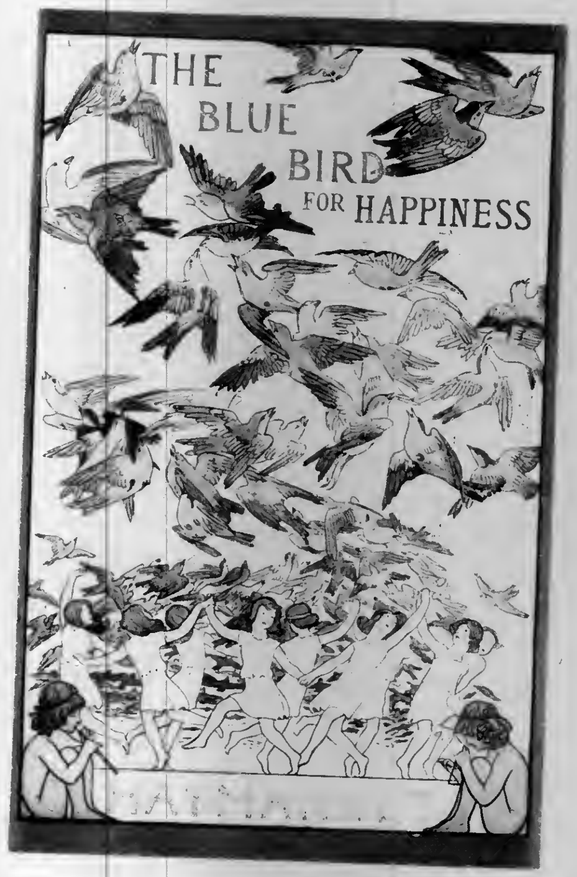
Lessee & Manager .. .. .. FREDERICK HARRISON

Director - HERBERT TRENCH

Business Manager ... ... HORACE WATSON

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON
TRENCH



Wednesday
Evening
Dec. 8

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No.

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

Tyltyl and Mytyl, children of a woodcutter, are visited by an old fairy, called Béryinne, who asks them to go and find for her a certain Blue Bird, in order to please the fairy's daughter, who is sick. The Fairy gives Tyltyl a hat with a diamond, by pressing which he is able to see the inside of things. Thus the "souls" of the Cat, the Dog, and Bread, Water, Milk, and Sugar are materialised; and, escorted by the Spirit of Light, the children start on their search for the Blue Bird. They first visit the Land of Memory. It appears that, whenever we think of the dead they live again; and thus the children meet their grandfather and grandmother, and many of their former child-companions. The bird which they find in this land is not, however, the real thing. Meanwhile, the Cat, who has heard that, should the children succeed in their search for the Blue Bird, —which, being interpreted, means Happiness—everything will die, has been advising the animals and trees to kill the children, and were it not for the Dog they would fare ill in the Forest, where the Ivy ties them up and the brutes threaten them. With the aid of Light, who tells them to turn the diamond so that they no longer perceive the inner feelings of the beasts and the trees, Tyltyl and Mytyl are saved.

They next make an excursion into the Kingdom of the Future, where the children who are about to be born are waiting for Time to take them away in his ship. After much playful and symbolical talk, the vessel is filled with little passengers and weighs anchor. Then Tyltyl and Mytyl visit the Palace of Night, and are allowed, in search of the Blue Bird, to inspect Night's different dungeons. In one of these are the Ghosts, in another the Sicknesses, in another the Wars, and in a fourth glowworms and the songs of nightingales. But there is a big door at the back which Night warns Tyltl against unlocking. He persists at his peril, and, the door opening, reveals a beautiful fountain, around which are many blue birds. This act ends with the party carrying off many of them.

In the last act, when the children return home, they find that their own dove, which they left behind them when they went on the search for Happiness, has turned blue in their absence, the moral being that Happiness is often to be found at home when we seek it far and wide in the world.

5724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

SATURDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 11TH, AT 8.15,
WILL BE PRODUCED

WHERE CHILDREN RULE

A Fantasy in Four Acts,
By SYDNEY BLOW and DOUGLAS HOARE.
Lyrics by DOUGLAS HOARE. Music by EDWARD JONES.

David Pennyfather ..	(a Boy Scout) ..	Master BOBBIE ANDREWS
		(By arrangement with Mr. WILLIAM GREET)
Elizabeth Pennyfather		.. Miss BELLA TERRY
Mr. Pennyfather		.. Mr. CLAYTON GREENE
Mrs. Pennyfather		.. Miss CYNTHIA BROOKE
Uncle Josiah		.. Mr. PERCY MARSHALL
Jane		.. Miss MINNIE SAUNDERS
Mr. Brown		.. Mr. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Watkins		.. Mr. LYTTON GREY
Miss Watkins		.. Miss WINIFRED RAE
Mr. Jorrocks	Grown ups of the land where Children Rule.	Mr. REGINALD CROMPTON
Colonel Rossiter		Mr. LAURENCE CAIRD
Mr. Bagot		Mr. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Dr. Garlick		Mr. SYDNEY PAXTON
Mr. Smith		Mr. HENRY KERR
Mr. Pullinger		Mr. H. C. HEWITT
Mr. Harbinger		Mr. A. J. BARBER
Robinson		Mr. JOHN E. NURSE
Miss Dicky Bird		Miss CELIA LORRAINE
Miss Primrose		Miss ROSALIND GREY
Miss Mallet		Miss EVELYN SHAW
Miss Price		Miss WINIFRED SCOTT
Miss Straun		Miss MAISIE FLEMING
Miss Truslove		Miss E. ALEXANDER
Her Majesty the Queen ..	Children of the land where Children Rule	Miss MARJORIE DANE
Harold		Master ERIC RAE
Walter		Master CHARLES OLDFIELD
William		Master GEORGE JERVIS
Adolphus		Master CYRIL DERINGTON TURNER
Daphne		Miss DULCIE GREATWICH
Ruth		Miss ELSIE AGAR
Captain		Master GEORGE BURTON
Felix		Master SIDNEY SHERWOOD
Rosalys		Miss EFFIE BYRNE
Vernon		Master WILLIE WEST
Black Rod		Master SIDNEY LEVMAN
Martha		Miss ROSE LANDOR

Soldiers, Courtiers, Grown ups, Attendants, etc., etc.

Solo Dances by Miss MAUDIE OLMAR.

Drum and Fife Band of the 2nd Battalion Grenadier Guards, by permission of Col. the Hon. W. E. CAVENDISH.

SCENES.

Act I. ..	Scene 1	The Pennyfather's Kitchen, Sloane Street
	Scene 2	Outside the Land
Act II. ..	.. .. ..	Inside the Land
Act III. ..	.. .. ..	The Hill inside the Land
Act IV. ..	.. .. ..	Dormitory Wood

The Action takes place in Four Hours.

Dances and Musical Numbers arranged by HARTLEY MILBURN

The Play Produced by CHARLES ROCK.

Scenery by PHILIP HOWDEN and T. J. BULL. Dresses by LIBERTY, Miss GLOAG, and "MOIRA." Uniforms by the GENERAL THEATRICAL BUREAU. Electrical Effects by DIGBY and BAINBRIDGE REYNOLDS Chocolates by FULLERS. Toys by GAMAGE. Wigs and Dresses by CLARKSON. Flying Effects by G. KIRBY & SONS. The Vocal Score, Book of Lyrics and separate Songs are published by FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER. Scenery and Costumes designed by DETMAR BLOW.

On this occasion the Orchestra will, by kind permission of Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, be conducted by the COMPOSER.

The Box Office (Mr. A. R. BRITTEN) is open daily from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone 9513 Gerrard.

BUSINESS MANAGER	Mr. THOMAS STEVENS
STAGE MANAGER	Mr. FRANK KINGSTON
ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER	Mr. WALLETT WALLER
MUSICAL DIRECTOR	Mr. EDMOND RICKETT
TREASURER	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE
ACTING MANAGER	Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.15

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

GARRICK
THEATRE

11/12/09

Orch. Stall

Row F

No 2

An entertainment intended for children should certainly be childish; and the simplicity of the plan and idea of Where Children Rule is, from a juvenile point of view, entirely in its favour. It is well described as a "fantasy." The notion of a number of grown-ups under a spell by which they are obliged to obey a colony of children is very fantastic; and the development of the idea is equally eccentric.

The first act takes place in the kitchen of Mr. and Mrs. Pennyfather, who are temporarily without a servant, and whose house bells have been allowed to get out of order. David Pennyfather is a Boy Scout. He and his sister Elizabeth, a bright and lively little girl, are great allies, and as David has heard of a certain land where children have power, he starts with his sister to seek it.

In the second scene of the first act they arrive before the gates of the land. A party of children, straying outside its boundaries, have been captured by a schoolmaster named Watkins, who has chained each of them by the leg. David heliographs to the Land an appeal for a rescue party, which arrives in military uniform; but, being outside the frontier, they are under the dominion of their elders, and are obliged to obey Watkins, who, however, has a desire to explore the children's territory, and does so disguised as his nephew, and in company with the unsuspecting juveniles.

And now, of course, Watkins is a spy in the enemy's country; and he conspires with a boy whose voice is breaking to remove the spell. It is caused, it appears, by the flying about of dandelion seed; and, if all the seed in the district can be collected, the spell would be broken, and the grown-ups would regain predominance. As it is, they are treated like children, a Mr. Jerrocks being slapped for his cruelty to animals, and an elderly gentleman being ignominiously put to bed. Mr. and Mrs. Pennyfather arrive in search of their offspring, and find themselves under the spell and obliged to obey. Watkins's plot is discovered, and an attempt is made to seize him; but he escapes by means of an aeroplane, and we find him, in the next act, busily collecting dandelion seed in a sack, having tied and gagged David, and confined him in a cottage. The children come to his rescue, and let a knife down the chimney on the end of a string, David escaping by the same outlet, and assisting them to attack Watkins, who comes seeking a second sack for his seed. In the end the schemes of the wicked schoolmaster are defeated, and the rule of the children is made stronger than ever. The leading situation is amusingly developed; the elders conspire to dethrone the diminutive princess—who holds her throne by right of having the most beautiful dimples—by making imitation dimples on a baby pretender. They have to undergo such punishments as skipping, leapfrog, and hunt-the-slipper classes, besides those for kiss-in-the-ring and cats'-cradle.

SAVOY THEATRE.

Manager - - - - - - - - - - Mr. C. H. WORKMAN.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1909, and EVERY EVENING at 8.15,

An Original Opera

In Two Acts, entitled

FALLEN FAIRIES

Or, THE WICKED WORLD.

Written by W. S. GILBERT.

Composed by EDWARD GERMAN.

FAIRIES.

Ethais	... ...	Mr. CLAUDE FLEMMING
Phyllon	... ...	Mr. LEO SHEFFIELD
Lutin	(a Serving Fairy) ...	Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
Selene	(The Fairy Queen) ...	Miss NANCY McINTOSH
Darine ...	... ...	Miss MAIDIE HOPE
Zayda	... ...	Miss JESSIE ROSE
Locrine	... ...	Miss ETHEL MORRISON
Neodie	... ...	Miss ALICE COX
Fleta	... ...	Miss MARJORIE DAWES
Zara	... ...	Miss MABEL BURNEGE
Leila	... ...	Miss RUBY GRAY
Cora	... ...	Miss RITA OTWAY
Maia	... ...	Miss GLADYS LANCASTER
Chloris	... ...	Miss MIRIAM LYCETT
Ina	... ...	Miss ISABEL AGNEW

MORTALS.

Sir Ethais	Hunnish Knights	Mr. CLAUDE FLEMMING
Sir Phyllon		Mr. LEO SHEFFIELD
Lutin ...	... (Sir Phyllon's Henchman) ...	Mr. C. H. WORKMAN

3724
1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Scene - - - - - Fairyland (Joseph Harker)

(On the upper side of a cloud.)

There will be an interval of 15 minutes between the Acts.

The Dresses designed by Mr. Percy Anderson, and executed by Miss Fisher, 26 Bedford Street, W.C., and Messrs. B. J. Simmons & Co., 7 & 8 King Street, Covent Garden, W.C.
Wigs by Clarkson.

Dances arranged by Mr. John D'Auban.
Sword Combat arranged by Monsieur Felix Bertrand.

The Music and Libretto of the Opera is published by Messrs. Chappell & Co., 50 New Bond Street, W.

On this occasion the Opera will be conducted by the Composer.

Musical Director .. .. .. Mr. Hamish MacCunn.
Stage Manager .. .. .. Mr. W. Simms Bull.

Private Boxes, £5 5s., £3 3s., and £2 2s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; First Circle (Reserved), Front Row 5s., other Rows 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office (Mr. R. Weaver) open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.
Telegrams, "NEWSAVO, LONDON." Telephone 2602 Gerrard.

Please note that Carriages must set down and take up at the Embankment Entrance of the Theatre.

Extract from Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play-bill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of each performance by all exit and entrance Doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Business Manager .. .. .. Mr. Harry P. Towers.

A good many things have happened since The Wicked World was produced at the Haymarket Theatre on Jan. 4, 1873, with Mr. and Mrs. Kendal as Ethais and Selene, Mr. Buckstone as Lutin, Miss Litton as Zayda, and Miss Amy Roselle as Darine; but the merits of Sir W. S. Gilbert's poem—its clear and delicate phrasing, its broad and literary humour, its almost fierce sarcasm, and its happily-turned verse—are as evident as ever. The story of The Wicked World is now forgotten by many of our readers, and it can do no harm to recapitulate it. The scene of the first act is in Fairyland, where the Fairy Queen, Selene, and her attendants, Darine, Zayda, and Locrine, are discussing the differences between the fairy and the real—and "wicked"—worlds. The inhabitants of the latter have, it appears, one great advantage—

> With all their misery—with all the sin—
> With all the elements of wretchedness
> That teem on that unholy world of theirs,
> They have one great and over-glorious gift
> That compensates for all they have to bear!

This gift is love, which is denied to the fairies; and, of course, they are all anxious to taste it. It seems that—

> There's a half-forgotten law which says
> That, when a fairy quits his fairy home
> To visit earth, those whom he leaves behind
> May summon from that wicked world below
> That absent fairy's mortal counterpart,
> And that that mortal counterpart may stay
> In Fairyland, and fill that fairy's place
> Till he return.

This expedient the fairies proceed to employ. They send two male fairies, Ethais and Phyllon, to earth, and in their place a pair of brawling knights of the same name come fighting into Fairyland. They swear a truce, however, when they behold the beautiful fays, and proceed to instruct them in the mystery of kisses "placed preferably," as one of the couplets says, "just below the nose." Lutin, a servant fairy, who has been on a visit to the earth, warns the female fairies against the two men; but he is dismissed, and Selene falls in love with Ethais, who is sick from the effects of a wound.

Selene cannot comprehend why she loves Ethais; and Darine, who is also enamoured of the knight, is desperately jealous of the Queen, and endeavours to inspire the same feeling in Phyllon, who is much more philosophical. Selene summons to Fairyland the mortal counterpart of Lutin, who is Sir Ethais's squire. He exults in the escape from the vigilance of his wife, whose fairy counterpart is the jealous Darine. To her Lutin gives a phial containing a potion for the cure of Ethais's wound. With this Darine tries to buy the love of Ethais, who, with brutal indifference, gives her his ring as a love token, drinks the potion, and becomes at once restored to health and vigour. Darine has poisoned Ethais's mind against Phyllon by lies, and the two men are about to fight again, when the fairies enter and denounce their Queen, whom they order to abdicate in favour of Darine. When Selene sees Ethais's ring on Darine's finger she is in great distress. It is now time for the fairy counterparts to return and for the knights to descend to earth. They do so, in spite of the entreaty of Selene, who says:

> No, no! Thou shalt not go—thou shalt not go:
> My hope—my shattered hope, but still my hope!
> My love—my blighted love, but still my love!
> My life—my ruined life, but still my life!
> I'll work and toil for thee—I'll be thy slave—
> Thine humble, silent, and submissive slave!
> Nay, but I'll hold thee back! I have the strength
> Of fifty women! See, thou canst not go!
> Nay, but I'll wrest thy love away from thee
> And fetter it in bondage to my heart!
> I will be one with thee; I'll cling to thee,
> And thou shalt take me to that world of thine!

To which Ethais answers:

> Take thee to earth? I love the world too well
> To curse it with another termagant!
> We have enough of thee. Release me, fool—
> Away from me! I go to that good world
> Where women are not devils till they die!

Then all is happiness in the fairy world, Selene concluding "love is for mankind and not for us . . . we will not have this love!"

Waters, J.
Plays

"A WHITE MAN" AT THE NEW THEATRE.

On Thursday, Dec. 16, Revival of the Romantic Play, in Four Acts, by Edwin Milton Royle, entitled "A WHITE MAN."

Six Special Matinees, Thursday and Friday, December 16 and 17; Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, December 27, 28, 30, 31, at 2.30, revival of

"A WHITE MAN."

A Romance of the West.

BY EDWIN MILTON ROYLE.

Captain James Wynnegate, V.C. (afterwards Jim Carston)	Mr. HERBERT SLEATH
Earl of Kerhill (his Cousin)	Mr. E. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Sir John Applegate	Mr. HAROLD RICHARDSON
Mr. Chiswick (Private Secretary)	Mr. CHARLES MAUNSELL
Bates	Mr. JACK ROGERS
Malcolm Petrie	Mr. W. F. GRANT
Lieut. Henry George	Mr. JOHN STIRLING
Lieut. Alex. Leslie	Mr. ALFRED LESLIE
Lieut. Charles Magrath	Mr. DAVID DOUGLAS
The Dean of Trentham	Mr. HAMPTON GORDON
Big Bill, Foreman	Mr. R. A. BRANDON
Shorty — Jim Carston's Cow Punchers	Mr. GERALD VALENTINE
Andy	Mr. T. AMBROSE FLOWER
Grouchy	Mr. JAY ELLIS
Baco White, Interpreter	Mr. MARTIN THORNTON
Taba-wana (Peace Chief of the Utes)	Mr. ERIC HUDSON
Cash Hawkins	Mr. FRANK MAYO
Nick (Bar Keeper)	Mr. ASPLAND
Bud Hardy (The County Sheriff)	Mr. HENRY HARE
Clark (his Deputy)	Mr. ARTHUR GUIRE
M'Sorley (Engine Driver)	Mr. PERCY PARRY
Parker (Conductor)	Mr. ALEXANDER WILLS
Pete	Mr. ARTHUR GORDON
Parson	Mr. WILLIAM DEMPSEY
Punk (a Chinaman)	Mr. CHARLIE HOLDEN
Mr. Hiram Doolittle	Mr. FRED STONE
Little Hal	Miss KITTIE ROGERS
The Dowager Lady Kerhill	Miss EMMA GWYNNE
Lady Mabel Wynnegate	Miss KATHLEEN MAUDE
Mrs. Hiram Doolittle	Miss CICELY GRAY
Nat-u-ritch	Miss VIOLET VORLEY
Countess of Kerhill	Miss ENID SASS
Cowboys, Sheriff's Posse, Passengers, &c.

Act 1 ... 1898 Maudsley Towers, Norfolk, England

Act 2 ... 1900 The "Long Horn" Saloon at Maverick in Wyoming

A Shipping Point for Cattle, but not usually a Stopping Place for Passenger Trains.

Act 3 ... 1907 Jim Carston's Ranch on Green River, Utah

AUTHOR'S NOTE.—Green River was the excuse for Carston's Ranch, and even Green River is in low spirits. Through the long day the alkali plains have cracked under the withering sun. The scrub oak and sage bush, Nature's imitation of asbestos, are still radiating heat. Across the River to the West they have given up in despair, and the "Bad" Lands stretch lifeless to the foothills of the snow-capped Uinta Peaks.

Act 4 ... Jim Carston's Ranch (the following morning)

NOTE.—In the Indian Scenes in Acts 3 and 4 the Ute tongue is spoken. The difficulty of putting an unwritten language upon the stage was finally overcome through the services of Baca White, the United States Government Interpreter for the Ute tribes, and an Indian who had been educated in the Government School.

General Manager .. .. Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

"PINKIE AND THE FAIRIES."

The Fairy Play, in Three Acts, for Children, Revived at His Majesty's Theatre on Thursday, Dec. 16.

Every Evening at 8 until Saturday, January 22nd, 1910.

Pinkie and The Fairies

A Fairy Play for Children and Others.—1910 Edition.

Produced by HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

Uncle Gregory	Mr. EDWARD TERRY
Aunt Imogen	Baroness VON HUTTEN
Aunt Caroline	Miss AUGUSTA HAVILAND
Tommy	Master PHILIP TONGE
Pinkie	Miss IRIS HAWKINS
Molly	Miss HILDA ANTONY
Elf Pickle	Miss PATTY JACOBS
Elf Whisper	Miss MIMI CRAWFORD
Elf Twinkle	Miss OLGA HOPE
Herald	Master BURFORD HAMPDEN
Prince Frog	Master ROBERT CHARLTON
The Queen of the Fairies	Miss FLORRIE LEWIS
Cinderella	Miss GWENNIE BROGDEN
Dick Whittington	Miss DOREEN WAYLISS
The Cat	Master J. WESSEN
Puss in Boots	Master A. WESSEN
Sleeping Beauty	Miss MILLICENT FIELD
Beauty	Miss MAY LESLIE STUART
Daffodil	Miss ISABEL JONES
The Beast	Mr. WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Mr. Irons	Mr. SMITHSON
Telegraph Boy	Master J. OLIVER
Mr. Bunny	Master H. BROWN

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE

Beethoven

Herbert Beerbohm Tree

Waters, J.
Plays

304

Alhambra Theatre

CHARING CROSS ROAD AND LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON.

Managing Director—ALFRED MOUL.

PROGRAMME.

Subject to Alteration at the Discretion of the Management.

Programme for Monday, December 20th, 1909.

10. ## ON THE HEATH 10.20

BALLET REVUE

Produced by Miss ELISE CLERC.
From a Scenario arranged by FRED BOWYER.
Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by GEORGE W. BYNG
Costumes by ALIAS from designs by COMELLI. Scenery by E. H. RYAN

Miss Elise Clerc Miss Julia Seale
Miss Rita Leggiero

Messrs. TOM COVENTRY, MAX MARTINI, E. BELCHER, and the full Corps de Ballet of the Alhambra Theatre.

Presented under the personal direction of ALFRED MOUL.

SCENE—On the Heath.

Arline / Russian Danseuse	Miss M. SKELLY
Three Sisters Wise and Tall	Miss ELISE CLERC Miss JULIA SEALE Miss LILLIE LAURI
Coster Girl / Suffragette / Naval Officer	Miss ELISE CLERC
Showman's Son / Russian Dancer / Scout Leader	Miss JULIA SEALE
Little Gipsy	Miss RITA LEGGIERO
Scotch Lassie	Miss L. BRYANT

Tarantelle Danced by Misses Belle Davis, Annie Mortimer, Pattie Ryder, Florrie Rowe.

Costers, Boy and Girl Scouts, Lassies, Policemen, Peers and Beauties Suffragettes, Sailors, &c., &c.

3057

D. Y. T.

20/12/1909

Orch. Stall

A 2

No

Peter Pan		Miss PAULINE CHASE
Jas. Hook	(The Pirate Captain)	Mr. ROBB HARWOOD
Mr. Darling		Mr. WALTER PEARCE
Mrs. Darling		Miss SYBIL CARLISLE
Wendy Moira Angela Darling		Miss HILDA TREVELYAN
John Napoleon Darling		Master HARRY DUFF
Michael Nicholas Darling		Master HERBERT HOLLOM
Nana		Mr. EDWARD SILLWARD
Tinker Bell		Miss JANE WREN
Tootles	Members of Peter's Band	Miss DOROTHY MINTO
Nibs		Miss NELLIE BOWMAN
Slightly		Mr. A. W. BASKCOMB
Curly		Miss GERTRUDE LANG
First Twin		Miss DAGMAR WIEHE
Second Twin		Miss BERTHA STEWART
Smee	Pirates	Mr. GEORGE SHELTON
Gentleman Starkey		Mr. CHARLES TREVOR
Cookson		Mr. CHARLES MEDWIN
Mullins		Mr. CHRIS WALKER
Cecco		Mr. FREDERICK ANNERLEY
Jukes		Mr. JAMES ENGLISH
Noodler		Mr. JOHN KELT
		Messrs. SAKER, BELL & SPENCER
Great Big Little Panther	Redskins	Mr. HUMPHREY WARDEN
Tiger Lily		Miss MARGARET FRASER

Braves and Squaws—Miss L. McINTYRE, Miss ELSA MAY, Miss JEAN GRANT, Miss BELLEW, Miss JESSON

Mermaid		Miss ALICE ROBINSON
Baby Mermaid		Miss TESSIE PARKE
Liza	(Author of the Play)	Miss TESSIE PARKE
Crocodile		Masters D. SEARLE & W. CHILD
Ostrich		Master MARINI

Pack of Wolves—Masters W. ANDERSON, C. BARNES, G. CARR, P. GRATA, B. ROSE, A BROCKNOR

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

LYCEUM THEATRE

essees .. .. Popular Playhouses, Ltd.
anaging Directors .. .. HENRY R. SMITH and ERNEST CARPENTER.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

THURSDAY evening, DECEMBER 23, 1909, at 7.30, and Twice Daily at 2 & 7.30, until further notice.

THE XMAS PANTOMIME

ALADDIN

The Book and Lyrics Written by Mr. & Mrs. ERNEST CARPENTER
The Music Composed and Arranged by H. SULLIVAN BROOKE
The Topics and Scene to (South Pole) specially Written by HERBERT SHELLEY
The Pantomime Invented and Produced by ERNEST CARPENTER

Characters:

Aladdin		Miss DOROTHY CRASKE
Princess Badroulbadour		Miss EVA KELLAND
Pekoe		Miss SIMETA MARSDEN
Pitti Sing		Miss MARIE FREE
The Slave of the Lamp		Miss MARJORY CARPENTER
Genie of the Ring...		Miss VICTORIA SIEVERS
Widow Twankey		Mr. SCOTT BARRIE
Smut-tee ... ...(Her maid-of-all-work)		Miss FLORENCE SMITHERS
Abanazar ... ... (The Magician)		Mr. ARTHUR POOLE
Wishee Washee		Mr. ARCHIE ROVER
The Emperor of China		Mr. FRANK HEMMING
The Polar Bear		Mr. HARRY GARDNER
Saw-See		Miss KITTY FIELDER
Ah-Sing		Miss BELLE HAMILTON
So-Fli		Miss MABEL CROUCH
Nicee-Nicee		Miss MAUD LEONARD
E-Tuk-is-Ook ... ...}	Eskimos	Master BERT BOLDER
Blubber-Blubber ...}		Master ALEC OAKLEY
Goodwill ... ...}	Spirits of the Cave	Miss RITA RICARDO
Trueheart ... ...}		Miss VIOLET BLYTH
Gentle Thoughts ...}		Miss MAUD GARNER
Helping Hand ... ...}		Miss EDNA LUDLOW
The Queen of the Little Fairies ...		Miss ANNIE BEVINGTON
Fairy Heather Bell		Miss LIZZIE OPHIR

FAIRIES, TEA-BOYS, FRUIT-SELLERS, PRINCESS'S ATTENDANTS, SPIRITS OF THE CAVE, EMPEROR'S GUARD, LAUNDRY-BOYS AND GIRLS, AERONAUTS, GUESTS, ETC.

BALLETS and EVOLUTIONS Invented and Arranged by Mdlle. ROSA
The AEROPLANES used in Scene 9 are copies of those made by Messrs. BLERIOT

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Synopsis of Scenery:

PART I.

Scene 1. Fairy Land.
,, 2. The Market Place, Pekin.
,, 3. The Imperial Baths.
,, 4. The Wisteria Grove.
,, 5. Outside the Cave.
,, 6. The Golden Cave.

PART II.

Scene 7. Widow Twankey's Laundry.
,, 8. The Emperor's Tea-House.
,, 9. The Gardens of Aladdin's Palace.
,, 10. The South Pole
,, 11. Aladdin's Garden Party.

The Lewis-Martel Duo, Xylophone Experts.

The Scenery by E. C. NICHOLLS, and Assistants

THE HARLEQUINADE (at Matinees only.)

(Arranged by HARRY GARDNER.)

Clown	Mr. HARRY GARDNER
Pantaloon	Mr. LESLIE DIGBY
Harlequin	Mr. WALTER CAPES
Policeman I.C.U.	Mr. JACK WILLIAMS
Old Woman	Mrs. KNOWALL
Columbine	Mdlle. ROSA

Scene 1.—SOMEWHEREINPARTICULAR.

Scene 2.—A QUEER NEIGHBOURHOOD (A real bit of Old-fashioned Pantomime).

THE GIANTS BY THE HARRY GARDNER TROUPE.

Augmented Orchestra under the direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.

Costumes by Mme. STAFFORD and ELKAN BROS. The Costumes for the Cave-Scene designed by Mr. ROBT. CRAFTER. Floral Decorations by J. BAUMLER & CO. Wigs by C. H. FOX. Mechanical Effects by A. R. GEORGE and Assistants. Properties by W. MOUNTAIN and Assistants. Electrical Effects by F. B. FIDGE. Special Songs introduced by permission of the various Publishers.

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. Mr. W. F. CROWE
Stage Manager .. Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Assist. Stage Manager .. Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG

PRICES—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., £2 2s., & £1 11s. 6d.; Stalls, 5s. & 3s. (reserved); Dress Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. (reserved); Pit Stalls, 2s.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery 6d. Special Prices for Children at Matinees—Stalls, 4s. & 2s.; Dress Circle, 3s. & 2s. (reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.

Box Office (EDWARD HACKETT) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it most be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL COURT THEATRE

Proprietor ... ... Mr. J. H. LEIGH.

Under the Management of Messrs. J. H. LEIGH and R. T. E. NEEVES.

STEDMAN'S SEASON.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 27th, 1909,

And twice daily until further notice.

Alice in Wonderland.

Founded on LEWIS CARROLL'S Delightful Stories "ALICE IN WONDERLAND" and "THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS."

Book by H. SAVILLE CLARKE. Music by WALTER SLAUGHTER.

ACT I.

Alice's Adventures in Wonderland.

Mad Hatter	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
Mock Turtle	Mr. TOM GRAVES
Gryphon	Mr. EDGAR K. FAVELLE
March Hare	Miss DORIS WALKER
White Rabbit	Miss BERTHA SCHWARTZ
Caterpillar	Mr. DAN LENO, Junr.
Duchess	Miss AMY FANCHETTE
Cook	Miss YVONNE SCHOFIELD
Cheshire Cat	Miss GIRLIE LE CLAIRE
Dormouse	Miss GLADYS BARNARD
First Lobster	Miss DOROTHY EDWARD
Second Lobster	Miss PHYLLIS MUNRO
First Fairy	Miss ADA DANKS
King of Hearts	Mr. EDMUND GOULDING
Queen of Hearts	Miss ELLA ANDERSON
Knave of Hearts	Mr. ROY JEFFRIES
Executioner	M. H. H. H. CAMERON
Alice ... ... AND	Miss IVY SAWYER

ACT II.

Through the Looking Glass.

Mad Hatter	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
White Queen	Miss ELLA ANDERSON
White King	Mr. ROY JEFFRIES
Lily	Miss ADA DANKS
Rose	Miss CRYSTAL HETHERINGTON
Red Queen	Miss AMY FANCHETTE
Red King	Mr. DAN LENO, Junr.
First Oyster	Miss GLADYS BARNARD
Second Oyster	Miss BERTHA SCHWARTZ
Sailor Boy	Miss DORIS WALKER
Tweedledee	Mr. EDGAR K. FAVELLE
Tweedledum	Mr. TOM GRAVES
Carpenter and Humpty-Dumpty ...	Mr. H. H. H. CAMERON
Walrus	Mr. EDMUND GOULDING
Unicorn	Master JOE CARR
Lion	Master TOM HALL
Jabberwock	Mr. ARCHIE GORDON
Alice ... ... AND	Miss IVY SAWYER

Licensee] # NEW ROYALTY THEATRE

DEAN STREET, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W. [MR. TOM B. DAVIS.

MR. BRANDON THOMAS'S SEASON.

ON BOXING DAY AT 3 AND 8.45, AND TWICE DAILY,

THE FAMOUS COMEDY,

"CHARLEY'S AUNT"

BY BRANDON THOMAS.

CHARACTERS.

Col. Sir Francis Chesney, Bart. (late Indian Service) ...	Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Stephen Spettigue (Solicitor, Oxford) ...	Mr. ROY BYFORD
Jack Chesney ...	Mr. HUGH ARDALE
Charley Wykeham } Undergraduates at	Mr. ROBERT BURNETT
Lord Fancourt Babberley } St. Olde's College	Mr. ARTHUR CHESNEY

ACT I. JACK CHESNEY'S ROOMS IN COLLEGE.

ACT II. GARDENS OUTSIDE JACK CHESNEY'S ROOMS.

ACT III. DRAWING ROOM IN SPETTIGUE'S HOUSE.

TIME—THE PRESENT. COMMEMORATION WEEK, OXFORD.

Preceded each Evening at 8 by a One-Act Play—

"THE COLOUR SERGEANT"

BY BRANDON THOMAS.

William Honour	Bob Atkins ... ... Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Henry Havelock Honour	A Boy ... ... Mr. ROBERT BURNETT
Charley Tucker	Nellie ... ... Miss FIFIELD
Scene	A Barber's Shop in the East End of London, overlooking the Thames. ... Miss SYLVIA MORRIS

"When Pious Frauds are Dispensations."—Huddibras.

"While there's Tea there's Hope."—Pinero.

"Dinner Lubricates Business."—Boswell.

3/3 21

THE ALDWYCH THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager ... ...

3/5-21

1909 Waters, J. Plays

As a matter of fact, the "bad girl of the family" is more sinned against than sinning, and after following her thrilling adventures through four acts and eighteen scenes the packed audiences found at the Aldwych twice daily this week have gone home absolutely head over heels in love with the Bad Girl as played so delightfully by Miss Violet Englefield. Mr. Melville stretches points to get good curtains, and even situations, but he knows his audiences, and his fare satisfies them from start to finish. It does more—it gluts them. What matters it that some of the situations are on the verge of the impossible: the audiences like them—so why argue? The weirdest things happen, and such are the vicissitudes, the vagaries, the happenings, and the melodramatics of this four-act drama that no sober pen can describe the story. The drama has one outstanding scene, reckoned by the standard of sensationalism—the Bedroom scene—in which a number of shop girls who "live in" attack and utterly rout a trio of policemen with pillows, bolsters, and what not.

The story, briefly repeated, shows how Bess Moore falls a victim to the wiles of Harry Gordon, the manager of a large draper's establishment. Gordon refuses to marry Bess because he wishes to wed Gladys, the pretty daughter of Lord Erskine, who has got into the clutches of old Goreni, a Jew moneylender, and is compelled to consent to sacrifice his child to save his estates. Gladys has a lover, Lieut. Richard Marsh, who is unsympathetic by Lord Erskine as a husband for Gladys. Dick has to rejoin his ship for foreign service, and Gladys is kept a close prisoner at Erskine Hall, her father being determined that persistent commands, Gladys at length consents for the ceremony when Bess, who has escaped from custody, appears armed with a wedding dress exactly like the one in which Gladys is arrayed. A hurried consultation is made, the changes are ingeniously rung, the bride goes to the altar, and after the service is completed Gordon finds that it is Bess, and not Gladys, that he has espoused. Having received news of Gladys' peril, Dick leaves his ship and forces his way into the hall on the wedding night, which is also selected by a burglar named Jerry Holmes for a nefarious expedition. Dick and Lord Erskine meet, and the latter tries to shoot Dick, who manages, however, to get hold of the weapon, and in the struggles Lord Erskine falls mortally wounded. Dick is charged with the crime, and sentenced to death. His visited in the condemned cell at Dartmoor by Gladys, and the prison chaplain appearing opportunely on the scene, the convict and his betrothed are made man and wife. Subsequently Dick and Jerry make a daring escape from prison in a provision cart, and secure the train to London, where Dick makes his way to Gladys' home. Gordon call in the authorities, and Jerry confesses that it was his revolver that killed Lord Erskine, and is thereupon stabbed by Gordon, who is taken away by the police.

THE TWO BRIDES.

ACT III. ... Scene 1 ... ... THE MARRIAGE NIGHT
The Unwelcome Bride—The Lover's Parting—The Quarrel—The Murder—Who killed Lord Erskine?

Scene 2 ... ... THE GROUNDS AT ERSKINE HALL
The chase for the Murderer—"You can swear you saw Lieutenant Marsh kill Erskine!"

Scene 3 ... ... BESS'S BEDROOM
A refuge for Gladys—Bess's Story—A Fiendish Proposal—Gladys's Dilemma

ACT IV. ... Scene 1 ... ... DARTMOOR. THE PRISON
Convict Life—He is going to his Death—"I swear I will be by your side day and night until you become my Wife or Mistress"—The Convict's Marriage—Jerry to the Rescue

Scene 2 ... ... THE CONDEMNED CELL
"Waiting for Death"—The Plan to Escape—A Dive for Freedom

Scene 3 ... ... THE PRISON YARD
The Storm—Escape in Provision Van

Scene 4 ... ... ON THE MOORS
The hue and cry—Discovered—A Race for Life

Scene 5 ... ... COUNTY RAILWAY STATION
The Man Hunt—The Blood Marks in the Snow—Dick and Jerry take their Tickets

Scene 6 ... ... HOME AGAIN. XMAS EVE
The Prodigal's Return—Denouement

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... ... THOMAS P. FISH.

OVERTURE ... "Banditen Streiche" ... ... Suppé
INTERMEZZO ... ... "Suzette" ... ... Von Brach

SELECTION ... ... "Faust" ... ... Gounod
VALSE ... ... "Lilian" ... ... Francis

The Silver Plate, Ornaments, &c., supplied by SANDERS & CO., The Leading London Goldsmiths, Brixton
The Organ used in this production is supplied by The BELL PIANO & ORGAN CO., Ltd., 46 Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C. Telephone 4926 Central Piano by STROHMENGER & SONS, 256 Goswell Road, E.C.
The Palms and Plants used in this Theatre are supplied by CHAS. BOATWRIGHT, Shakespeare Road Nurseries, Herne Hill, S.E.
JEYES' SANITARY FLUID used exclusively at this Theatre.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. WALTER PEMBERTON

POPULAR PRICES:—Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. (4 persons). Stalls, 5s. and 3s. Dress Circle, 3s., 2s. 6d. and 2s. Upper Circle, 1s. 6d. Pit, 1s. Gallery, 6d.
Box Office (ARTHUR SHREAD) open from 10 to 10. Phone 2315 Gerrard.

SECRETARY AND BUSINESS MANAGER ... ... Mr. WILL TAYLOR

3/4

316

T.R.D.L.

27/12/1909

Retain this portion which is the Voucher for One Seat only, and does not admit to the Theatre.

Row | No.

E | 1

Orches. Stall

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE

LIMITED

Managing Director - ARTHUR COLLINS

ø ø ø ø ø

THE CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

ALADDIN

BY

Sir F. C. BURNAND, J. HICKORY WOOD and ARTHUR COLLINS

ø ø ø

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

ø ø ø

Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by J. M. GLOVER

Waters, J.
Plays

On BOXING-NIGHT, Monday, December 27th, at 7.30

THE CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

ALADDIN

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

Mr. WILKIE BARD ...	as	Widow Twankay
Mr. WILLIAM DOWNES ...	,,	Emperor of China
Mr. ERNEST LANGFORD...	,,	Grand Vizier
Mr. GEORGE ALI	,,	Bolo, the Dog
Mr. ARTHUR CONQUEST	,,	Kassarac
Mr. SALAMBO	,,	Slave of the Lamp
Mr. GEORGE GRAVES ... AND	,,	Abanazar
Miss IDA RENÉ	as	Princess Badroulbadour
Miss TRULY SHATTUCK ...	,,	Prince Pekoe
Miss NELLIE STRATTON	,,	Ittl Sing
Miss MENA BRAE ...	,,	Sau-Cee
Miss DORIS TREVELYAN	,,	Spirit of the Ring
Miss JIMMIE JAMES ...	,,	Imperial Town Crier
Miss MARIE GEORGE ... AND	,,	Aladdin
Mr. BERT MONKS	,,	Bam Boo
Mr. FRED PENLEY ...	,,	Bob Bi
Mr. EDWARD MORGAN ...	,,	Corki Waxi
Mr. HAROLD BELCHER ...	,,	Olrac

Mesdames MARIE LOVELL, D. MURRAY WOODS, M. MURRAY WOODS, NAN HOLMES, EDITH BARRINGTON, L. HEWITSON, B. THORPE, E. SUSINI, CARRIE MURRAY

Messrs. JACK CAPEL, SIDNEY MCALPINE, HARRY FREEMAN, WILLIAM ELAGERT, JOHN PERRY, JAMES MCLEOD, FREDERICK CHRISTIE, EDWARD WATSON.

THE TILLER TROUPE.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

PART I.

Scene 1. OLRAC'S HOME [Henry Emden

Scene 2. MARKET PLACE IN PEKIN [Henry Emden

Scene 3. THE SEA-SHORE [R. McCleery

Scene 4. WIDOW TWANKAY'S APARTMENTS [R. McCleery

Scene 5. ON THE MOUNTAINS [Henry Emden

Scene 6. a. The Cave b. The Temple of Gods [Henry Emden

c. THE GARDEN OF LIGHT [Henry Emden

PART II.

Scene 1. WIDOW TWANKAY'S LAUNDRY [Bruce Smith

Scene 2. WIDOW TWANKAY'S RICH HOME [Bruce Smith

Scene 3. STREET IN PEKIN [Bruce Smith

Scene 4. THE PALACE GARDENS [Bruce Smith

Scene 5. THE NORTH POLE [R. McCleery

Scene 6. ALADDIN'S PALACE [R. McCleery

HARLEQUINADE

Scene 1. A STREET
Scene 2. A RAILWAY STATION } Bruce Smith

Clown - - - BOB PENDER

Pantaloon, WILL PENDER — Columbine, MAGGIE PENDER
Harlequin, JOE PENDER — Sergeant, WILL COMPO
Policemen, T. & G. PENDER

All the Costumes Specially Designed and Supervised by COMELLI

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Acting Manager. C. F. TAYLOR Secretary, R. H. LINDO
Business Manager - SIDNEY SMITH

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

EVERY EVENING AT 7.45

THE HOUSE OF TEMPERLEY

(A Melodrama of the Ring)

By ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

Sir Charles Temperley		Mr BEN WEBSTER
Captain Jack Temperley	(his younger Brother)	Mr CHARLES MAUDE
Sir John Hawker		Mr CHARLES ROCK
Jakes	(a Bookmaker) ...	Mr SPENCER TREVOR
Ginger Stubbs	(Capt. Temperley's soldier servant)	Mr EDMUND GWENN
Lord Ruffon		Mr STRATTON RODNEY
The Duke of Broadwater ...		Mr A. S. HOMEWOOD
Col. Dacre		Mr FRANK RIDLEY
Jerry		Mr ARTHUR BURNE
George	(Corinthians) ...	Mr A. CORNEY GRAIN
Mr. Poyntz		Mr FREEMAN H. MAY
Sir Charles Banbury		Mr H. FORD
Sir George Gascoigne		Mr ARCHIBALD FORBES
Mr. James Parton West... ...	(a Magistrate) ...	Mr A. G. CRAIG
General Cranford	... ...	Mr CHARLES COMBE
Tom Cribb (Champion of England)		Mr BASSETT ROE
Joe Berks		Mr A. S. HOMEWOOD
Tom Belcher		Mr HUBERT WILLIS
Gloster Dick		Mr REGINALD DAVIS
Gentleman Jackson		Mr STANLEY TURNBULL
Buckhorse		Mr O. P. HEGGIE
Dutch Sam		Mr WILTON ROSS
Bul Richmond	(of the Fives Ring) ...	Mr W. WALLACE
Jack Scroggins		Mr E. C. BARTON
Tom Molineaux		Mr GEO. WELSH
Dan Mendoza		Mr V. LUSK
George Cooper		Mr E. CRESEAN
George Maddox...		Mr FRANK EMERY
Caleb Baldwin		Mr R. J. BELL
Jack Randall		Mr W. COATS BUSH
Tom Spring		Mr ARTHUR F. THORNE
Hopkins	(Servants at Temperley Manor)	Mr CHARLES COMBE
Smith		Mr FRANK RIDLEY
Mercer		Mr O. P. HEGGIE
Sergeant Holden		Mr J. BYRON
Stable Lad	... ...	Mr ARTHUR BACHNER
Waiter	(at Cribb's Saloon) ...	Mr GEORGE SHELLEY
Footman	(at Walter's Club) ...	Mr GEOFFREY HILL
Lady Temperley	... ...	Mrs RUSS WHYTAL
Ethel Morley	... ...	Miss DOROTHEA DESMOND
Lucy	(Maid at Temperley Manor)	Miss POLLIE EMERY
Mary	(Bar-Girl at Cribb's Saloon)	Miss JOYCE FRANCIS
Mrs. Barnet	... ...	Miss HETTA BARTLETT

Pugilists, Soldiers, Ostlers, etc., etc.

Act I.	TIME - - -	1812.
	... ...	Temperley Manor
Act II. Scene 1	Tom Cribb's Saloon, "The Union Arms," Panton St., Haymarket
Scene 2	... ...	The Same
Act III. Scene 1	... ...	Glen Cottage, Three Bridges, Sussex
Scene 2	... ...	"The George" Inn at Crawley
Scene 3	... ...	Hammer's Farm. The Ring Side at Crawley Down
Act IV. Scene 1	... ...	Committee Room of Watier's Club
Scene 2	... ...	In the Trenches before a Spanish Fortress

Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ.

The Play Produced by Mr. HERBERT JARMAN

(by kind permission of Mr. Lewis Waller).

Costumes, Uniforms and Dresses designed by Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD, and executed by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., King Street, Covent Garden, and by Mrs. ERICKNELL, 31 Maddox Street, W. Wigs by CLARKSON. The Fights Produced under the supervision of F. BINNINGTON, Boxing Instructor to the London Rifle Brigade, First Surrey Rifles, etc.

Programme of Music.

Musical Director BRIGATA BUCALOSSI.

OVERTURE	"Old English Melodies" ...	... Godfrey
	Before Act II.
SELECTION	"Songs" ...	Sir Henry Bishop
	Before Act III.
SONGS	"Ye Olde English"	Bucalossi
	INTERVAL.
SONG	"Oh, Ruddier than the Cherry"	—
	Before Act IV.
(a) LARGO	... ...	... Handel
(b) GAVOTTE	... "Otho"	... Handel
	INTERVAL.
MINUET	... ...	... Haydon
MARCH	... "Scipio"	... Handel

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 4s., £5 5s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, First Four Rows, 7s. 6d. Other Rows, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephones—2645 Gerrard, 8886 Gerrard.

BOX OFFICE (MR. A. P. OXLEY) open 10 to 10.

Acting Manager ...	(for Mr. George Edwardes) ...	Mr. CHARLTON MANN
Stage Manager		Mr. W. W. KEENE

THE CHARGE FOR THIS PROGRAMME IS 6d

1959
Waters, J.
Plays

"THE HOUSE OF TEMPERLEY."

A Melodrama of the Ring, by Arthur Conan Doyle, Produced at the Adelphi Theatre on Monday, Dec. 27.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, encouraged by the success of his adaptation of his novel of the Nile, has drawn on "Rodney Stone" for suggestions for a spirited and exciting play of pugilism which was received at the Adelphi Theatre on Monday with enthosiastic acclamations, the author being called for at the close, and warmly applauded. Sir Charles Temperley, a nobleman of the days of the Prince Regent, has almost ruined himself by gambling; and the house of Temperley itself is in danger from the mortgagees. His brother, Jack, a Captain in the Army, tries to wean him from these extravagances, and makes him promise not to touch a card again, and an heiress, Ethel Morley, who is secretly in love with Jack, is willing to wed Sir Charles to save the estates. The baronet has been systematically cheated by a certain Sir John Hawker, who tries to swindle him by cutting a pack of cards for a high stake. A bookmaker called Jakes gets hold of the cards, and finds that the kings are marked. He blackmails Sir John, and gets him to sign a paper mentioning the price of his—Jakes's—"silence." Jack gets Sir Charles to consent to a match between a "novice" discovered by Hawker and a nominee of Sir Charles's, name unknown. This is Ginger Stubbs, Jack's soldier servant, an ex-pugilist; but just before the fight comes off Stubbs is kidnapped by a conspiracy between Jakes and Hawker, and Jack, who is a fine amateur pugilist, takes Stubbs's place, goes into the ring, and beats the "novice"; Hawker, in a rage, giving Jakes a sound thrashing. In revenge, Jakes charges Sir John with cheating, and the case is heard by a committee of Watier's Club, by whom, after a furious defence, Hawker is found guilty, and expelled from the club. As we learn in the last act, which takes place in the Peninsula, Sir Charles kills Hawker in a duel, and he sacrifices his misspent life to save his brother's in a storming party, leaving Jack free to marry Ethel.

HOME GUARDS AT THE THEATRE

Fourteen hundred soldiers of the County of London Territorial Force were present at the Adelphi Theatre last night to witness the performance of "The House of Temperley," all of them the guests of a nobleman who sees a great lesson for the country in this sporting drama of the prize-ring.

Mr. Haldane, Secretary of State for War, Lord Esher, Lord Lucas, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle were together in a private box. The officers, representing every unit of the London Territorial Forces, were in the stalls, while circles, pit, and gallery were filled with uniformed men, who followed with tense interest every incident of this exciting drama that illustrates the fighting and sporting instincts of the nation at the period of the Napoleonic wars.

Lord Esher in a preface to a special illustrated souvenir of the performance says that in Sir A. Conan Doyle's play there is "the best kind of modern sermon, performed in a theatre, which is our modern substitute for the church and chapel."

D.-H. 12/2/1910

STRAND THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to John Arthur Harrison, Lauderdale House, Maida Vale, W.

By command of the Lord Chamberlain, the proscenium safety curtain is lowered daily in the presence of the audience, about the middle of the performance, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order

THREE SPECIAL MATINEES.

December 28th, 30th and 31st, at 2.15.

SELECTION BY THE ORCHESTRA.

CONCERT MARCH IN C. - - - - - - Moritz Lutzen

Conducted by THE COMPOSER.

Mr. HARRY LAMBART presents

CINDERELLA

A Fairy Play, in Three Acts, by

MR. AUSTIN FRYERS.

COMPOSED BY

MASTER MORITZ LUTZEN,

The World's Youngest Child Composer.

The play produced and dances arranged by Mr. SIDNEY WATSON

PRINCE ...	... ...	Miss ROSIE FITZGERALD
DANDINI	... ...	Miss CLARA COOPER
BARON ...	... ...	MASTER HARRY DEAN
ORYNTHIA, ERMYNTRUDE	The two Ugly Sisters and The Barons Daughters	Miss MABEL WALL Miss MINNIE DEAN (From The Merry Peasant.)
CHAMBERLAIN ...	... ...	Miss CYNTHIA ECKERT
FAIRY GODMOTHER	... ...	Miss AGNES GLYNNE (From The Merry Peasant.)
	AND
Cinderella	... ...	Miss MARY GLYNNE (From The Merry Peasant.)

Fairies, Pages, Huntsmen, Woodcutters, Courtiers and Footmen.

ACT I.—The Fairy Glen. ACT II.—The Baron's Kitchen.
ACT III.—The Prince's Palace.

1909
Waters, J.
Plays

Part II.

SELECTION BY THE ORCHESTRA.

Conducted by the Composer, MORITZ LUTZEN.

A SCREAMING HARLEQUINADE

PRODUCED BY

MR. ARTHUR RICKETTS.

HARLEQUIN	MR. FOWER THATCHER
COLUMBINE	MISS VIOLET GELLERS
PANTALOON	MR. J. W. BRADBURY
POLICEMAN	MR. CHAS. SEYMOUR
	AND
CLOWN	MR. ARTHUR RICKETT

SCENE 1.

Butcher's, Dentist and Barber.

SCENE 2.

Ye Olde Fashion Shadow Pantomime.

The Marionette Show in the Second Act is performed by Mrs. VICTOR'S "We Are Seven" Company of Juveniles.

Wigs and Costumes by W. CLARKSON.

Scenery by HELMSLEY and LEOLYN HART.

Properties by DAVES and W. CLARKSON.

The piano used by Master Moritz Lutzen in the Palace Scene is an Allison "Grandette."

The sedan chair specially made for the production by W. Clarkson.

General Manager	Mr. HARRY LAMBART.
Stage Manager	Mr. SIDNEY WATSON.
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. ALEC WATSON.

BOX OFFICE (S. ANDERSON) 10 TILL 10.

Private Boxes, 3 to 5 Guineas. Stalls, 10s. 6d.

Dress Circle, 3 Front Rows, 7s. 6d. Other Rows, 6s.

Upper Circle, Front Row, 5s. Other Rows, 4s.

CHILDREN HALF PRICE.

KINGSWAY
THEATRE. Gt QUEEN St.
Lessee MISS LENA ASHWELL

HERBERT TRENCH'S SEASON
EVERY EVENING at 9 o'clock

DON

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS
BY RUDOLF BESIER

Norman McKinnel — James Hearn
Charles Quartermaine — Dawson Milward
Ellen O'Malley — Charlotte Granville
Frances Ivor — Christine Silver

Matinees Wednesday & Saturdays at 2.30.

"The Finest Comedy in London" — Punch

Waters, J.
Plays

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Mr. H. B. IRVING

EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AFTERNOONS AT 3

"The House Opposite"

PRECEDED BY MATINÉES AT 2.15. EVENINGS AT 8.15

(BY ARRANGEMENT WITH MR. FRANK RICHARDSON)

Dec 28

"For the Soul of the King"

AN EPISODE OF THE TERROR

From the story of Honoré de Balzac.

The Stranger	Mr. H. B. IRVING
The Abbé de Mayral	Mr. HENRY VIBART
Mdlle. de Langeais (Sister Agatha)	Miss RUTH MAITLAND
Mdlle. Michalet (Sister Martha)	Miss DORA BARTON

Scene – An Attic in the Faubourg St. Martin, 21st Jan., 1793.

The new playlet, produced "by arrangement with Mr. Frank Richardson," is an "Episode of the Terror," taken from the story of Honoré de Balzac, and is entitled

"FOR THE SOUL OF THE KING."

The Stranger .....Mr. H. B. Irving
The Abbé de Mayral .....Mr. Henry Vibart
Mlle. de Langeais .....Miss Ruth Maitland
Mlle. Michalet .....Miss Dora Barton

The new piece is picturesque rather than dramatic, time being expended in creating an atmosphere of mystery that serves only to overpower the real interest. It is, however, well, and even poetically, written, and contains several poignantly effective moments. To a house in the Faubourg St. Martin, Paris, where two nuns and a priest have sought refuge in the Reign of Terror, comes a crimson-coated individual, who has terrified one of the inmates by following her about for days. He is, however, no enemy, but desires to beg a favour. It is that the priest shall say a Mass for the repose of the soul of the King, who has just been guillotined. The stranger is sure it was the King, for he was close to the victim when the knife fell. He noted the rush of the crowd for relics of the dead, but they are the perquisites of the executioner, and none but he may touch them. The man is evidently deeply moved, and seems indeed to need the ministrations of the Church more than the martyred monarch. The priest attempts in vain to get his visitor to disclose his identity, and it is not until he hands him a handkerchief dipped in the royal blood that he realises that he is no other than the headsman. The room is prepared for the ceremony and the priest, stoled and vested, takes his place at the altar as the stranger leaves. An apotheosis gives a view of the guillotine with the King engaged in prayer and the headsman standing grimly by.

Waters, J.
Plays

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1910.

THE THEATRICAL YEAR.

SOME FACTS AND FIGURES.

By JAMES WATERS.

Another theatrical year has come to an end, and on the whole the London managers gauged accurately the taste of the public. The season was financially a successful one. There were instances, it is true, in which managements lost money, but to some extent the losses were due to the breaking up of the season through the death of King Edward and the period of mourning that followed. Other plays lost money through bad judgment, for no one can fairly insist that luck has anything to do with keeping on a piece that the public will not pay to see. One play produced in the last season was run until something like fifteen thousand pounds were lost over it, and there are instances of others being kept in the bill at a weekly loss for a considerable number of weeks.

The remarkable plays produced last year were not numerous. They never are. The public does not express the same opinion always about all remarkable plays. That fact will explain the varying measure of patronage extended to "Mid-Channel," "False Gods," "The Blue Bird," and "Justice." The promise of happiness in a play is worth more money to an author than the unpalatable truths of life, so we can assume that our public goes to the theatre in search of the promises.

The productions and revivals, including those of the Repertory Theatre and Shakespeare Festival, for 1909-1910 were as follows:

Plays of two or more acts	49
Musical plays	10
One-act plays	26
Pantomimes and children's plays	4
Revivals of plays of two or more acts	28

The list given below includes all the new plays of the season, given in the order in which they were produced. From it are excluded all one-act pieces, and also such plays as were produced by stage societies or for special performances.

THE NEW PLAYS.

Two plays still running that are not included in the list of productions are "Our Miss Gibbs" and "The Arcadians," both of which made their appearance in the previous season and have run uninterruptedly ever since.

The Best People, Wyndham's	65
The Pin and the Pudding, Comedy	20
Arsène Lupin, Duke of York's	199
A Sense of Humour, Playhouse	38
Madame X., Globe	59
Dear Little Denmark, Prince of Wales	109
Mid-Channel, St. James's	58
The Proud Prince, Lyceum	77
The Whip, Drury Lane	—	389
Making a Gentleman, Garrick	97
False Gods, His Majesty's	62
The Great Divide, Adelphi	40
The Brass Bottle, Vaudeville	244
The Dollar Princess, Daly's	—	428
The Mountaineers, Savoy	61
Smith, Comedy	165
Don, Haymarket	203
Sir Walter Raleigh, Lyric	131
The Little Damozel, Wyndham's	191
The Merry Peasant, Strand	70
The Servant in the House, Adelphi	45
The Great Mrs. Alloway, Globe	25
Lorimer Sabiston, St. James's	20
Beethoven, His Majesty's	23
The House Opposite, Queen's	60
Little Mrs. Cummin, Playhouse	83
The Blue Bird, Haymarket	274
Where Children Rule, Garrick	41
Fallen Fairies, Savoy	51
Aladdin, Lyceum	89
The Bad Girl of the Family, Aldwych	—	450
Aladdin, Drury Lane	107
The House of Temperley, Adelphi	161
Cinderella, Strand	15
Captain Kidd, Wyndham's	37
Dame Nature, Garrick	122
Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Queen's	96
The Strong People, Lyric	16
The O'Flynn, His Majesty's	54
Tantalizing Tommy, Playhouse	—	254
The Balkan Princess, Prince of Wales (to end Aug. 19)	176
The Tenth Man, Globe	65
The Climax, Comedy	13
The Fighting Chance, Lyceum	61
The Way the Money Goes, Royalty	36
Two Merry Monarchs, Savoy	61
The Toymaker of Nuremberg (matinées only), Playhouse	20
Alias Jimmy Valentine, Comedy	150
The Naked Truth, Wyndham's	—	167
The Islander, Apollo	114
Parasites, Globe	24
The Dawn of a To-morrow, Garrick	89
Judge Not —, Queen's	17
The Speckled Band, Adelphi	—	169
The Girl in the Train, Vaudeville	—	340
Glass Houses, Globe	47
Billy's Bargain, Garrick	52
Priscilla Runs Away, Haymarket	—	192

The plays presented through Mr. Charles Frohman's spirited enterprise by the Repertory Theatre at the Duke of York's Theatre were (with their number of performances) as follows: "Justice," 26; "Misalliance," 11; Triple bill of one-act plays, 6; "The Madras House," 10; "Trelawny of the 'Wells'" (revival), 42; "Prunella" (revival), 17; "Helena's Path," 2; "Chains," 15. A total number of 129 performances.

The following were the season's revivals, with the number of performances given of each:—"The Bells," Queen's, 50; "The Flag Lieutenant," Playhouse, 31; "Trilby," His Majesty's, 18; "The Lyons Mail," Queen's, 41; "East Lynne," Lyceum, 29; "The Importance of Being Earnest," St. James's, —; "A White Man," New, 6; "Pinkie and the Fairies," His Majesty's, 62; "Peter Pan," Duke of York's, 85; "Alice In Wonderland," Court, 40; "Charley's Aunt," Royalty, 48; "Henry of Navarre," New, 76; "When Knights Were Bold," Criterion, 148; "Richelieu," Strand, 4; "The Scarlet Pimpernel," New, 154; "The Rivals," Lyric, 59; "The Fires of Fate," Adelphi, 2; "Louis XI.," Queen's, 18; "The Prince and the Beggar Maid," Lyceum, 24; "Robert Macaire," Queen's, 17; "Don Cesar de Bazan," Lyric, 33; "The Case of Rebellious Susan," Criterion, 53; "The Breed of the Treshams," Lyceum, 30; "Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner," Lyric, 28; "A White Man," Lyceum, —

Waterp, J.
Plays

SHAKESPEARE REVIVALS.

In 1908-1909 eleven of Shakespeare's plays were given, the total number of performances being 213. In the season just ended the total number of performances of the twelve works given was 140. Of these Sir Herbert Tree gave "The Merry Wives of Windsor," 14; "Julius Cæsar," 6; "Twelfth Night," 6; "Hamlet," 3; "Merchant of Venice," 4; and "Richard II.," 2; Haymarket Theatre Company, "King Lear," 35; Mr. H. B. Irving, "Hamlet," 4; Mr. Arthur Bourchier, "Merchant of Venice," 1; Mr. Lewis Waller, "Henry V.," 1; Mr. F. R. Benson, "The Taming of the Shrew," 1; and "Coriolanus," 1; the Elizabethan Stage Society, "Two Gentlemen of Verona," 1; Mr. Arthur Phillips, Court Theatre, "Merchant of Venice," 33; Mr. Martin Harvey, Lyceum Theatre, "Richard III.," 28.

Of the year's output ten plays were adapted from the French—namely, "Arsène Lupin," "Madame X," "False Gods," "Beethoven," "The Blue Bird," "Dame Nature," "Tantalising Tommy," "Parasites," "Judge Not——," and "Glass Houses." From American authors we took five: "The Great Divide," "The Strong People," "The Climax," "The Toymaker of Nuremberg," and "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Seven of the year's plays, "The Brass Bottle," "Little Mrs. Cummin," "The House of Temperley," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Helena's Path," "The Speckled Band," and "Priscilla Runs Away," were based on stories published before the plays were written. If we deduct the above twenty-two adaptations and importations from the forty-nine new plays produced the prizes and honours to be divided among the vast army of people who write plays are very few.

Ladies can claim to have done better as dramatists in the past season than in the previous one, when the number of plays in which they had a hand was but four—all of them unsuccessful. In 1909-1910 they were concerned in six plays—namely, "A Sense of Humour" (in which Miss Beryl Faber collaborated with her husband), "Little Mrs. Cummin" (which was adapted from a novel written by Mrs. Mary E. Mann), "The Way the Money Goes" (Lady Bell), "Chains" (Miss Elizabeth Baker), "The Dawn of a To-morrow" (Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett), and "Priscilla Runs Away" (Countess Arnim). They also had six one-act plays produced as compared with five in the previous season.

MR GEORGE ALEXANDER IN "THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST" AT THE ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

Admiral Speaks. The 277

Alias Jimmy Valentine 77.

Alice in Wonderland 259

Balkan Princess. The 30.

Beau Brocade 279

Behind the Veil 219

Between the Soup and the Savoury 212.

Billy's Bargain 139

Bishop's Son. The 197

Blue Bird. The 250

Bolt From the Blue. a 167

Breed of the Treshams. The 141

Captain Kidd 3

Captain of the School. The 245

Case of Rebellious Susan. The 122. 185

Chains 106

Charley's Aunt 260

Chocolate Soldier. The 171

Cinderella 269

Climax. The 46

Company For George 207

Convict on the Hearth 216.

Cost of Conjuring 202.

Count Hannibal 214

Crisis. The 157.

Dame Nature 8. 112

Dawn of a Tomorrow. The 109

D'arcy of the Guards 193

Dark Lady of the Sonnets. The 239

Decorating Clementine 242

Den'in (Lab) 240

Dollar Princess. The 191

Don Caesar de Bazan 120

Dream Flower. The 24

Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde 12

Eccentric Lord Comberdene 236

Eternal Question. The 153

Femina. (Ballet) 119

Fighting Chance. The 52

Fires of Fate 114

Folkestonay. The 278

Girl in the Train. The 126

Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning. The 264

Glass Houses 130

Grace 210.

Great Game. The 133
Hamlet- 98
Happy Mistake. a 63
Helena's Path- 100
Henry of Navarre 1
His Loving Image 177
Hullo London (Revue) 32
Inconstant George 200
Islander. The 92
Jack and the Beanstalk 272
Judge Not- — 115
Justice 33
Just Married 227
Kingdom of Kennaquhair. The 203
King Henry VIII 159
Lady Betty 56
Lancashire Sailor. The 261
Liars. The 218
Louis XI 94
Lyons Mail. The 136
Lysistrata 205
Madras House. The 57
Man From Mexico. The 177
Man from the Sea. The 188
Manders of Nets. The 231
Merchant of Venice. The 29
Merciful Soul. The 227
Midnight Meeting. a 113
Millie's Mother 6
Misalliance 37
Mrs Elizabeth's Prisoner 145
Mount Pleasant- 241
Mrs Skeffington 216
Mystery of the Walled up Well. The 262
Railroad Trunk. The 89
Nobody's Daughter 165
O'Flynn. The 18
Old Friends 50
Our Little Cinderella 252
our Miss Gibbs 134
Outcome of Agitation. The 220
Parasites 102
Parents' Progress. The 11
Peter Pan 257
Pigeon House. The 186
Piper. The 255
Place Hunter Pursued. a 202

Plumbers. The 13
Polar Star. The (Ballet) 48
Pot of Caviare. a 91
Portrait. The 238
Prince and the Beggar Maid. The 95
Princess Clementina. The 247
Priscilla Runs away 142
Prunella 88
Quaker Girl. The 221
Raven's Cry. The 74
Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary. The 150
Richard III 118
Richelieu 23
Rivals. The 80
Robert Macaire 116
Scarlet Pimpernel. The 62
Sentimentalists. The 50
Single Man. a 225
Sins of London. The 179
Sister Anne 169
Speckled Band. The 124
Strong People. The 15
Tantalising Tommy 26
Tenth Man. The 43
Toymaker of Nuremburg. The 63. 212
Traps. The 131
Trelawney of the Wells 83
Twelve Pound Look. The 50
Two Hunchbacks. The 232
Two Merry Monarchs. 60. 96
Unwritten Law. The 234
Vice Versa 229
Way the Money Goes. The 55
When Knights were Bold. 6
Whip. The 65. 175
White Man. a 149
Wife of the Widow. The 148
Young Fernald. 195
Woman's Way. a 182

Bogus Management 25
Capacity of Little Theatre 206
Closing Theatres for King's death 105
Counter attack 144
Follies. The 156
Friday Plays 109

over

Lord Jarmouth acting 182
Malinee Hall 31. 283.
Palladium opened 267
Pinero (Sir Arthur) defends his play 85
Repertory Season 137
Scene in a theatre 277
Shakespeare Festival 66
Shakespeare Memorial Matinee 239
Shaw. G. B. on his critics 39.
one-act plays 259

Would the young man or young woman from the office or the shop be any better for a full, strong dose of pathological drama in which all the naked horrors of the hospital were laid before them? Ask the thousands who regard a visit to the theatre as a form of enjoyment and recreation in a greyish world which brings them face to face with many of the problems Mr. Shaw discourses. They would, we fancy, cry out at once for one of those "popular" plays he so wittily derides. This is not by way of defending the box-office test, though in spite of everything that Mr. Shaw and his friends may say this test must hold good for a manager who wishes to keep out of the bankruptcy court.

The Sayings of Shaw.

As usual, "G. B. S." rams his points home in the characteristic manner. Here are some of his sayings about the drama and dramatists:—

> The manufacture of well-made plays is not an art; it is an industry.
>
> "Art for art's sake" is the formula of the well-made play, meaning in practice "Success for money's sake."
>
> It was in the nineteenth century that the demand for manufactured plays was extended to drawing-room plays in which the Forest of Bondy and the Aubergedes Adrets, the Red Barn and the Cave at Midnight had to be replaced by Lord Blank's flat in Whitehall Court and the Great Hall, Chevy Chace Playgoers being by that time mostly poor playgoers wanted to see how the rich live; wanted to see them actually drinking champagne and wearing real fashionable dresses and trousers with a neatly ironed crease down the knee.
>
> The majority of those who in France and England make a living by writing plays are unknown, and as to education all but illiterate.
>
> To a great section—perhaps the largest section—of the people of England and France, all novels, plays and songs are licentious; and the habit of enjoying them the mark of a worthless character.

NEW THEATRE

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, W.C.
Proprietor, SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.

On Monday, January 3rd, 1910, and every evening at 8,
A Romantic Play in Four Acts, entitled:

"HENRY OF NAVARRE."

By WILLIAM DEVEREUX.

Charles IX. (King of France)	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
Henry de Bourbon (King of Navarre)	Mr. FRED TERRY
Henry (Duc de Guise)	Mr. PHILIP MERIVALE
Henry (Duc d'Anjou)	Mr. HARRY F. WRIGHT
Arthur de Mouhy (a Huguenot Leader)	Mr. WALTER EDWIN
Cosmo Ruggieri (an Astrologer)	Mr. HORACE HODGES
Marshal de Tavannes	Mr. J. CARTER-EDWARDS
Chancellor de Birague	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Duc de Retz	Mr. MAURICE TOSH
Duc de la Rochefoucauld	Mr. J. L. DALE
M. des Valles	Mr. MAURICE ELVEY
M. de Besme	Mr. R. V. BRAMBLE
Nancey (Captain of the King's Guard)	Mr. SIDNEY PORTER
Page	Mr. R. EASTEN PICKERING
Catherine de Medici (the Queen Mother)	Miss TITA BRAND
Marie Belleforet	Miss PHILLIDA TERSON
Charlotte de Suave	Miss GLADYS GARDNER
La Belle Dayole	Miss EVA STUART
Mdlle. de Montmorenci (La Belle Fosseuse)	Miss DORA JESSLYN
Mdlle. de Torigni	Miss BEATRICE MANNING
Marguerite de Valois	Miss JULIA NEILSON

Courtiers, Soldiers, Servants, etc.: Misses Terry, Morley, Haase, Mason, Barry, Montague, Vanderzee; Messrs. Rhaden, Power, Cunningham, Yates, Parker, Gordon, Dane and Millar.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act I.—July 8th .. .. .. Ante-Room in the Louvre
Act II.—August 21st .. .. Room in the Louvre
Act III.—August 21st, evening—Marguerite's Apartments in the Louvre
Period, 1572.

Act IV.—Scene I.—August 23rd—Charles IX.'s Private Room
Scene II.—August 23rd
Marguerite's Apartments in the Louvre
An Interval of ten minutes between each Act.

Miss JULIA NEILSON's Dresses specially designed and executed by Mrs. NETTLESHIP, Wigmore Street, W. Other Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN Coventry Street.
Furniture by Messrs GILL & REIGATE.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Scenery by R. C. McCLEERY. The Dance in the Second Act arranged by Mr. JOHN D'AUBAN.

The Play produced under the direction of FRED TERRY.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Programme of Music.

Overture	"Henry of Navarre"	Sydney Ffoulkes
AFTER ACT I.	Ballet Russe	Luigini
AFTER ACT II.	Selection—"Il Trovatore"	Verdi
AFTER ACT III.	Entr'acte—"Cinderella"	Herbert E. Haines

The entire Music to the Play composed by SYDNEY FFOULKES.

Stage Manager	MR. JOHN R. TURNBULL	Assistant Manager	MR. H. V. BROOKES
Assistant Stage Manager	MR. GOODWIN NOCK	Advertisement Manager	MR. ALFRED W. POPE
General Manager			MR. ARTHUR GARRETT

Friday, January 28th, 1910
Dancing at 11 p.m.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor — CHARING CROSS ROAD — Sir Charles Wyndham.

Sole Lessee and Manager — FRANK CURZON.

On WEDNESDAY, 12th JANUARY, 1910, and EVERY EVENING at 8 o'clock,

FRANK CURZON'S

NEW MUSICAL PRODUCTION

ELLALINE TERRISS
SEYMOUR HICKS

And Company in a Musical Play, entitled

CAPTAIN KIDD

By SEYMOUR HICKS.

Adapted from Richard Harding Davis's successful Play, "The Dictator."

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS. Additional Lyrics by GEORGE ARTHURS.

Music by LESLIE STUART.

Viscount Albany ...	(alias Captain Kidd) ...	Mr SEYMOUR HICKS
Simpson	(his Valet, alias Jim Dodd) ...	Mr HUGH E. WRIGHT
Dick Hyne	(Wireless Telegraph Operator for the Red C. Line)	Mr EVELYN BEERBOHM
Colonel John T. Bowie	... (U.S. Consul at Porto Banos) ...	Mr JOHN CLULOW
Duffy	... (a Secret Service Detective) ...	Mr FRED LEWIS
Rev. Arthur Bostick	... ...(a Missionary)... ...	Mr CYRIL ASHFORD
General Santos Campos	... (President of San Mañana) ...	Mr FRANK WILSON
Samuel Codman ...	... (Captain of the Bolivar) ...	Mr FRANK VIGAY
Dr. Vasques ...	... (Health Officer at Porto Banos)	Mr J. J. HOOKER
Lieutenant Perry ...	... (H.M.S. Invincible) ...	Mr CHARLES BRADLEY
Colonel Garcia Lieutenant Manuel	(Aides-de-Camp to Campos)	Mr FRANK AIMES Mr F. F. HOLT
Teresa Glond ...		Miss ROSIE CHESNEY
May Pole		Miss MAY KENNEDY
Grace Hufnagle ...		Miss DORIS STOCKER
Rose Flipmaguilder		Miss MARIE BRENDA
Amy Striapolo ...	(Broadway Belles)	Miss CARINA CLIFF
Lily Friedenhamar ...		Miss LAURIE OPPERMAN
Anne Tique ...		Miss NELLIE PRYOR
Olga Comoff ...		Miss NANCIE FREYNE
Emmie Palorompins		Miss ASTA FLEMING
Sarita		Miss FLORENCE THURSTON
Mrs. John T. Bowie		Miss SYLVIA BUCKLEY
Senorita Juanita Arguilla	(The Star of Panama) ...	Miss HILDA GUIVER
Aggie Shrubb ...	(Chief Stewardess of the Bolivar)	Miss IVY ST. HELIER
Mme. Ducrot ...	(Proprietress of the Hotel del Prado)	Miss MOLLIE LOWELL
	AND
Lucy Sheridan	...(a Missionary)... ...	Miss ELLALINE TERRISS

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY SEYMOUR HICKS.

The Dances arranged by FRED FARREN.

The Lyric of "The Constant Lover" in Act II. by Mr. BERT LEE.

Act I. ... Deck of the Steamer "Bolivar" at anchor in the Harbour of Porto Banos
Act II. ... ... The American Consulate at Porto Banos (Three hours later)
Act III. ... ... The same (Six hours later)
Time—The Present. Place—Porto Banos, Republic of San Mañana, Central America.

Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER. Miss Terriss's Costumes by LUCILE, Ltd.
Uniforms and Costumes designed by KARL and executed by L. & H. NATHAN, and Ladies' Modern Dresses by ROBINSON & CLEAVER, Ltd Cameras used in Act I. by KODAK, Ltd. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Floral Decorations throughout the Auditorium by the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.

The Orchestra under the direction of FRANK E. TOURS.

Business Manager ... ... J. HERBERT JAY
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Grand Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.
Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD. Doors open at 7.30. Matinees 1.30. Commence at 8. Matinees at 2.

Captain Kidd has one great advantage—it starts with an excellent story. Mr. Richard Harding Davis's play, The Dictator, which was performed on May 3, 1905, at the Comedy Theatre by an American company, headed by Mr. William Collier, is a good example of the comedy of adventure. By the time that this is in print the performance of the piece will have been reduced to convenient limits, and the dialogue and incidents curtailed and condensed. Captain Kidd is the name adopted by young Viscount Albany, who, having been insulted by a cabman in New York, has knocked him down, and left him for dead. Flying to the States to escape arrest for murder, he embarks on the Bolivar, a ship bound for Porto Banos, a town in Central America. On board of the vessel is a charming young lady named Lucy Sheridan, who is going out to Porto Banos to marry the Rev. Arthur Bostick, a pale and plain clergyman. On the voyage Viscount Albany falls in love with her, and she is favourably impressed by his boldness, vivacity, and unfailing good humour. A certain Colonel John T. Bowie has been appointed American Consul of Porto Banos, and has arranged, in order to obtain power, for a revolution to take place on his arrival. Unfortunately, his local partisan is overpowered by a rival, Santos Campos, and Bowie is afraid for his life to land. Albany, on his side, has been frightened by the appearance on the ship of a secret service detective, named Duffy, who has been ordered by cable to arrest the Viscount for the affair of the cabman; so Albany and Bowie exchange identities, and the former goes on shore as the Consul of Porto Banos. Before he leaves the ship, however, he almost estranges Miss Sheridan from him by—in his character of Colonel Bowie—embracing Mrs. Bowie, a young and attractive female.

In the next scene we are at the American Consulate. The clergyman has been arrested by mistake as Viscount Albany, and has been chained to the short and sprightly stewardess of the Bolivar, who has been taken for his accomplice. Santos Campos, now general and president of the state, arrives with his troops, and bullies the pretended Consul, whom, however, he dares not attack in the sacred shelter of the Consulate. Albany, who has plenty of money, hires an army and prepares for resistance. His anxieties are increased by the menacing attitude of a certain passionate and revengeful Central American, Senorita Juanita Arguilla, an old flame of Bowie's. But Miss Sheridan, whose loyalty to her clerical fiancée weakens when she learns of his incarceration with the stewardess, is still favourably disposed towards the Viscount. In the end, of course, he triumphs, gets through his difficulties, and marries Lucy, the Rev. Arthur pairing off with the Senorita, who will assist him in converting the natives.

5

6

JAMES WELCH'S SEASON.

Monday, January 17th, and every evening at 8.50.

An Original Farce in Three Acts, entitled:

When Knights were Bold

By CHARLES MARLOWE.

Sir Guy de Vere, Bart.	Mr. JAMES WELCH
Wittle	Mr. GEORGE F. TULLY
Barker	Mr. GORDON TOMKINS
Hon. Charles Widdicombe	Mr. HENRY J. FORD
Sir Brian Ballymote	Mr. H. K. AYLIFF
Isaac Isaacson	Mr. A. CLIFTON ALDERSON
Rev. Peter Pottleberry, D.D.	Mr. GUY LANE
A Herald	Mr. H. AGAR LYONS
Hon. Mrs. Waldegrave	Miss MABEL YOUNGE
Lady Millicent Eggington	Miss MAEV O'HEA
Lady Marjorie Eggington	Miss EVELYN CECIL
Kate Pottleberry	Miss PEGGY KENNEDY
Miss Sarah Isaacson	Miss DAISY CORDELL
Alice Barker	Miss ANNIE CHIPPENDALE
Lady Rowena Eggington	Miss AUDREY FORD

Knights, Pages, Attendants, &c.

ACT I.	"The Knights' Room," Beechwood Towers, 1906.	"Forty Winks."
ACT II.	710 years pass backwards. The Battlements, 1196	"A Dream of ye Good Old Times."
ACT III.	710 years pass forwards. "The Knights' Room, 1906."	"Wide Awake."

Preceded at 8.20 by

MILLIE'S MOTHER,

By F. HOWELL EVANS.

Bertie Gaunt ... Mr. GEORGE DESMOND
Dr. Joliffe (his Friend) Mr. HARRY AGAR LYONS
Millie (his Wife) Miss MAEV O'HEA
Mrs. Grimston (his Mother-in-Law) Miss MABEL YOUNGE
Scene Morning Room in Gaunt's Country House.

Scenery by BRUCE SMITH. Costumes and Wigs by CLARKSON. Miss AUDREY FORD'S Dresses by VIOLA, other Ladies' Dresses by Madame IDA COLE, 41, Edgware Road. Jester's Song in Act III. by PERCY GREENBANK. Incidental Music by BRIGATA BUCALOSSI.

Programme of Music.

Marche des Moujiehs	Renelle
The Dance of the Hours (Gioconda)	Ponchielli
Overture "When Knights were Bold"	Brigata Bucalossi
Entr'acte I. (a) Selection, "The Mountaineers"	Reginald Somerville
(b) Two Dances from "The Conqueror"	Edward German
Entr'acte II. (a) "Humoreske"	Dvorak
(b) Valse "Rowena"	Brigata Bucalossi

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.15.

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £6 6s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.; Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; other Rows, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d. Box Office (Mr. Hollingshead) open daily, 10 to 10. Telephone: No. 3844 Gerrard.

Acting Manager Mr. J. HAROLD CARSON
Stage Manager Mr. LEONARD BUTTRESS
General Manager
Assistant Stage Manager Mr. W. HARBERD
Musical Director Mr. ALICK MACLEAN
Mr. ARTHUR WHITTAKER

"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD."

The Original Farce in Three Acts, by Charles Marlowe, performed at the Criterion Theatre on Monday, Jan. 17.

When Knights Were Bold was preceded on Tuesday by a new play in one act, by F. Howell Evans, entitled

"MILLIE'S MOTHER."

Bertie Gaunt .....MR. LEOPOLD PROFEIT
Dr. Joliffe .....MR. HARRY AGAR LYONS
Millie .....MISS MAEV O'HEA
Mrs. Grimston .....MISS MABEL YOUNGE

This short and amusing sketch dealt with the eternal mother-in-law difficulty in a new way. Mrs. Grimston, much to her annoyance, finds herself "buried down in the country" with her newly-married daughter and son-in-law, Bertie Gannt, and in order to induce him to live in town she makes Millie pretend to talk in her sleep, and express yearnings for the Metropolis. Bertie discovers the trick, and reproaches his wife, who agrees that they shall both seem to sleep on separate sofas, and shall let Mrs. Grimston know their real wishes by feigning to discourse in slumber. The plan answers admirably. The mother-in-law leaves the house in high dudgeon; and the young couple's happiness is assured. Miss Mabel Yonnge gave a telling performance as the imperious mother-in-law; Miss Maev O'Hea was a pleasing and refined Millie; Mr. Leopold Profeit was smart and satisfactory as Bertie Gaunt; and Mr. Harry Agar Lyons played a young doctor with ease and jndgment. Millie's Mother evoked much langhter, and well served its purpose as a preliminary piece.

JAMES WELCH

MONDAY, JANUARY 17th, 1910

THE GARRICK
THEATRE

20/1/1910

Orch. Stall

N 1

THURSDAY, JANUARY 20TH, 1910, AT 8 O'CLOCK, AND EVERY EVENING,

DAME NATURE

A New Play in Four Acts,
Adapted from HENRY BATAILLE'S "La Femme Nue"
By FREDERICK FENN.
(By Arrangement with Mr. GILBERT PORTEOUS).

Robert Bertram	Mr. ERNEST LEICESTER
The Prince de Chabran	Mr. NORMAN FORBES
James Ridgeway	Mr. FRANK COOPER
Paul Garford	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Henry Greville	Mr. F. KINSEY PEILE
Chaillard	Mr. CHARLES HAMPDEN
Arnheim	Mr. CHARLES DODSWORTH
Rivett	Mr. RICHARD HATTERAS
Certin	Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Ernest Taubman	Mr. H. ASHETON TONGE
Sadler	Mr. BERTRAM STEER
Taylor	Mr. REGINALD EYRE
Roussell	Mr. GEORGE BEALBY
Johnson	Mr. JOHN CASTLE
Harvey	Mr. EDMOND BREON
Princess de Chabran	Miss NANCY PRICE
Mimi	Miss MINNIE TERRY
Emma	Miss VERITA VIVIEN
Madame Certin	Miss FLORENCE NELSON
Madame Moulzi	Miss WINIFRED HARRIS
Isadora Lorenz	Miss MABEL HUNT
Suzon Cassagne	Miss PAMELA GAYTHORNE
Mrs. Garford	Miss AGNES HEWITT
AND
Lolette	Miss ETHEL IRVING

Artistes and Guests: Misses IVY WILLIAMS, EVELYN MARTHEZE; Messrs. J. A. BENTHAM, HAROLD HOLLAND, CHARLES TERRIC, W. LEIGHTON, VALENTINE PENNA, DAVID DARRELL, H. BAYNTON AUGUST STANLEY, SIDNEY BUCKLAND, KEITH J. SHEPERD.

Act I. .. .. Cafe at the Salon in Paris
Act II. .. .. Robert Bertram's House in London
Act III. .. .. .. Room at the Prince de Chabran's House, London
Act IV. .. .. Garford's House at Chelsea

Produced by F. DE FOS.

Dresses by REDFERN, Ltd. and MARGAINE-LACROIX.
Hats by Madame DYAR-SMITH. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Furniture by SPILLMAN. Scenes by McCLEERY.
Pianoforte by STEINWAY. MUSTEL CELESTA-ORGAN.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE ... ... "Le Roi d'Yvetot" ... ... Adam

After Act I.

a. INTERMEZZO ("Cavalleria Rusticana") ... ... Mascagni
b. SELECTION ... ... "Tannhäuser" ... ... Wagner

After Act II.

a. DANSE DES MIRLITONS ("Casse Noisette") ... ... Tschaikowsky
b. VISION AND DANCE OF WITCHES ("Faust") ... ... Coleridge Taylor

After Act III.

a. CAVATINA ... ... Raff
b. SLAVISCH TANZ, No. 8 ... ... Dvorák

ACTING MANAGER ... ... } For Mr. Gilbert Porteous { ... ... Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE
STAGE MANAGER ... ... } { ... ... Mr. REGINALD EYRE

The Box Office (Mr. A. R. BRITTEN) is open daily from 10 to 10.
Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone 9513 Gerrard.

BUSINESS MANAGER ... ... Mr. THOMAS STEVENS
STAGE MANAGER ... ... Mr. WILLIAM BURCHILL
MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... ... Mr. EDMOND RICKETT
ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 26th, AT 2.30.

Mr. Frederick Fenn, who has so cleverly dramatised M. Henry Bataille's play La Femme Nue, has had plenty of experience as a dramatist. He is, perhaps, best known in connection with the libretto of the comic opera Amasis, which was produced at the New Theatre in 1906, but a more seriously artistic effort of his was The Convict on the Hearth, a realistic one-act play of humble life, which was presented in the same year at the Court. Mr. Fenn has dealt very judiciously with La Femme Nue, which was first performed at the Paris Renaissance in the February of 1908, with M. Guitry in the part of Pierre Bernier.

Dame Nature is the tragedy of unsophisticated affection in opposition with worldly craft and sensual corruption. A few alterations have been made in the names of the characters in Mr. Fenn's adaptation, but the main story has not been much changed. Robert Bertram, a struggling artist, has married his model Lolette. She has shared his poverty and troubles and has been his model for his painting "La Femme Nue"; and when that work receives the gold medal at the Champs Elysées Salon, Robert makes Lolette his wife. A few years elapse. Robert, famous and rich, has become the painter à la mode, and then the snob that lurked in him comes to the fore. Whereas at one time he only saw Lolette's qualities, he now blushes for her ignorance; for, whilst he has risen to the level of a society man, she has remained the girl of the people. He then falls violently in love with the Princesse de Chabran. He is captivated by her imperious beauty and her aristocratic airs. Yet he ought to have known that these aristocratic airs are anything but genuine, considering that the Princess is the daughter of a rich German financier, and that her husband, an old ruined nobleman, only married her for her immense dowry. The Princess loses her heart to the talented young artist, and Lolette arrives at the inopportune moment when Robert clasps the would-be aristocratic lady in his arms. The Prince is quite willing to let his wife divorce him—for a consideration, of course; and the Princess has made up her mind to marry Bertram, who is only too anxious to rid himself of Lolette. She, however, refuses to part with her husband and to destroy her happiness. She has violent scenes with Robert and the Princess, and tries in vain to awaken better feelings in them. Pitiless because they love, they coolly overlook Lolette's feelings in the affair. In the end, Lolette is vanquished. Not wishing to prove an obstacle in Robert's way, she leaves him to return to a former friend, whom she left when she made Robert's acquaintance.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee and Manager .... FRANK CURZON.

Every Evening at 9 o'clock,

FRANK CURZON'S
NEW PRODUCTION

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
And Company in a New and Original Play in Three Acts, entitled

THE LITTLE DAMOZEL
By MONCKTON HOFFE.

Preceded at 8.15 by THE PARENTS' PROGRESS. By GEORGE PASTON.

Mr. Hoskins ... ... Mr. T. GIDEON WARREN
Bert ... ... Mr. ERNEST THESIGER
George Bunning ... ... Mr. GUY H. ADDISON
Em ... ... Miss MARY LESLIE
Miss Williams ... ... Miss RUBY MILLER
Mrs. Hoskins ... ... Miss CLARE GREET

Scene ... Parlour at the Hoskins' Villa "Chatsworth," Balham. Time ... The Present.

Scenery by WALTER HANN. Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., LTD. Dresses by KEVILLE & KOSSITER.
Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN Pianos by CHAPPELL & Co.

The Pathephone used in "The Parents' Progress" by Pathé Frères, 64, Regent Street.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 3.

The Orchestra, under the Direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:

1. ENTR'ACTE ... ... "There once was an Owl" ... ... J. W. Bratton
2. OVERTURE ... ... "The Fortune Teller" ... ... Victor Herbert
3. SELECTION ... ... "The Singing Girl" ... ...
4. a. GRACEFUL DANCE ... ... "Little Damozel" ... ... } Ernest Bucalossi
   b. VALSE ... ... "Avatteuse" ... ... }

Musical Conductor ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... EDWARD SHALE.

Prices—Boxes, £1 11s 6d. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open daily from 10 to 10. Telephone No. 7482 Gerrard. Doors open at 7.45. Matinees 2.30. Commence at 8.15. Matinees 3.

General Manager .. .. T. B. VAUGHAN.

"THE PARENTS' PROGRESS."

Play, in One Act, by George Paston, Produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, on Tuesday, Jan. 25.

Mr. Hoskins ..... MR. GIDEON WARREN
Mrs. Hoskins ..... MISS CLARE GREET
Bert ..... MR. ERNEST THESIGER
Em ..... MISS MARY LESLIE
George Bunning ..... MR. G. H. ADDISON
Miss Williams ..... MISS RUBY MILLER

Miss E. M. Symonds, better known by her pen-name of "George Paston," the authoress of The Pharisee's Wife, Clothes and the Woman, and Tilda's New Hat, has written a one-act piece which admirably supplies its purpose as a merry prelude to The Little Damozel, which now goes better than ever. The "parents" in question are Mr. and Mrs. Hoskins, a suburban couple, whose children, Bert and Em, modern and pretentious, are impatient at their parents' deficiencies. They complain that Mr. and Mrs. Hoskins do not dress up to date, and that they are behind the times in many ways. The old people take counsel together, and the result is that at a little tea party given by their critical children, the elders appear in extraordinary guise, having dressed themselves in cheap and smart finery belonging to their offspring. They assume a lively and sportive manner, talk slang, feign an exaggerated vivacity, and altogether present such caricatures of smart people that the young ones, sadder and subdued, beg the parents to return to their old clothes and their old customs.

QUEEN'S THEATRE
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Mr. H. B. IRVING

ON SATURDAY, JANUARY 29th, 1910, AT 8.30
A NEW PLAY IN FOUR ACTS, BY
J. COMYNS CARR
Founded on the Story by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde

Dr. Jekyll ... ... Mr. H. B. IRVING
Mr. Hyde ... ... Mr. H. B. IRVING
Sir Danvers Carew ... ... Mr. CHARLES SUGDEN
Dr. Lanyon ... ... Mr. ELLIS NORWOOD
Mr. Utterson, the Lawyer ... ... Mr. HENRY VIBART
Mr. Enfield ... ... Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
James Wedderburn, an Indian Army Surgeon ... Mr. H. MARSH ALLEN
Mr. Ramsbread ... ... Mr. H. LAWRENCE PEYTON
Inspector Newcomen ... ... Mr. ALEX SCOTT GATTY
Poole, Dr. Jekyll's Butler ... ... Mr. FRANK TYARS
Mr. Guest, Utterson's Clerk ... ... Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
Dick Fairfax-Shaw ... ... Mr. KING BORDHAM
Mgee Barham ... ... Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
Reginald Brent ... ... Mr. STUART MUSGROVE
Count Vaksoff, the Ambassador ... ... Mr. W. HEMSTOCK
Evans, a Detective Officer ... ... Mr. J. SYNGE
Monson, Butler to Sir Danvers Carew ... Mr. W. GRAHAM
Lanna Lyell, Wife of Dr. Jekyll ... Miss DOROTHEA BAIRD
Lady Colder, Holden ... ... Miss CYNTHIA BROOKE
Mrs. Leopold, a Lon Lady ... ... Mrs. STANISLAUS CALHAEM
Waiting Mrs. Jekyll's Maid ... ... Miss MAY HOLLAND
Lucy Carew ... ... Miss LITTELL BRUNE

Act I. Scene 1. Terrace to Dr. Jekyll's House
Scene 2. The Laboratory.
Act II. Scene. Drawing Room in the House of Sir Danvers Carew. The next night
Act III. Scene 1. Dr. Jekyll's Library. The next afternoon.
Scene 2. Hyde's Lodging in Soho. The evening of the same day
Act IV. Scene. The Laboratory. A month later

NOTE.—Between the first and second Scenes of Act I. an interval of one hour is supposed to elapse.

The other intervals in the play are:—
Between Act I. and Act II. one day
" Act II. " III. one day
" Act III. " IV. one month.

Scenery by G. SACKMANN.

PRECEDED BY (MATINEES AT 2, EVENINGS AT 8)

The Plumbers

Written by HARRY GRATTAN.

Mr. Saunders (a Plumber?) ..	Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
Mrs. Drake	Miss EMILY SPILLER
Martha (the Cook)	Miss BLANCHE DORIS
"Erb"	Mr. HARRY GRATTAN

Scene: Breakfast Room at Mrs. Drake's.

OVERTURE	"The Vampire"	Marschner
ENTR'ACTE	"The Night Winds"	Wallace
SONG	"The Wanderer"	Schubert
SUITE	"The Tempter"	German

Musical Director, Mr. J. MEREDITH HALL

Dresses by Jay's, Regent Street, and by Madame Frecknall; Furniture by Oetzmann; Scientific Instruments kindly lent by Messrs. Angus, 83, Wigmore Street, W.

FIRST MATINEE, Saturday, February 5th, at 2.
Matinées every Wednesday & Saturday following.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 5s.; Upper Circle, 4s. and 3s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s; Private Boxes, One to Three Guineas.

200 DRESS CIRCLE SEATS at 5s. each.

Box Office (Mr. J. W. SHEPPARD) Now Open. Telephone: Gerrard 9437 (two lines).

Acting Manager and Treasurer	Mr. J. B. GLOVER
Stage Manager	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. H. RAE COOK

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - Mr. AUSTIN BRERETON

In 1888, when Robert Louis Stevenson's story was thrilling all readers of fiction with its weird fascination, there were four versions made of it. Two were produced in London; one by Mr. Daniel Bandmann, at the Opera Comique, in the August of the year, and another by T. Russell Sullivan, in the same month, at the Lyceum, with Mr. Richard Mansfield, in the dual rôle. In this latter adaptation, there was a Sir Danvers Carew, but he was the prospective father-in-law of Dr. Jekyll, and was murdered by him in the character of Hyde. On this faint suggestion, and on the incidents of the novel, Mr. Comyns Carr has, with surpassing skill, based a very thrilling and enthralling play. He has used all that is dramatic in the Stevenson story, and has added to it a great deal of his own invention. We presume that the book is still firmly fixed in the memories of our readers, who will recognise the cleverness displayed by Mr. Carr in practically writing a new drama.

The supernatural almosphere is cleverly created in the first act by a conversation at Dr. Jekyll's house, from which we understand that Jekyll, who is married to a young wife whom he has accidentally blinded in one of his experiments, has in the past engaged in an intrigue with Lady Carew, the wife of an elderly and dissipated diplomatist. Some letters from Jekyll to the lady have been stolen by a discharged butler who has begun to blackmail Lady Carew. In fear of exposure and ruin, she has tried to poison her husband; but the attempt has been discovered by Jekyll's friend, Dr. Lanyon, who has put Sir Danvers, vaguely, on his guard. Jekyll has already commenced the practice of dividing his nature into two persons, and occasionally inhabiting the body of the repulsive Hyde, and the worser nature is trying hard to gain the mastery over the higher, with the result that Jekyll resolves to "remove" both the men who imperil his reputation and that of Lady Carew.

The second act takes place in the drawing-room of her house, where there is a gathering of diplomatists and society people. With the key to the garden door, which he has often used in the course of his amour, Jekyll, in the form of Hyde, obtains admittance to the room after the guests have departed, and, after taunting Sir Danvers with his vicious habits, strangles him and stabs him till he dies.

And here, by a vastly ingenious invention, Mr. Carr makes the wanton who has fascinated Jekyll the means of his detection. Lady Carew caught a glimpse of the murderer as he fled, and recognised him as Hyde, and she sets the police on his track. And now—as in the book—the Hyde begins to overwhelm the Jekyll. In vain does the latter soul struggle against the tyranny, in vain does he send for fresh drugs with which to re-transform himself into Jekyll. In a touching scene, he induces his wife to hand him in, at the window of the room where he has fortified himself, a quick poison taken from his shelves. The police, led by Lady Carew, come hot on Hyde's track. They break open the door, and Hyde rushes out, takes the poison, falls dead, and again becomes the blameless Jekyll, his wife fondly kissing the forehead of the corpse.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

ON MONDAY, JANUARY 31ST, 1910, AT 8; AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.15,

THE STRONG PEOPLE

AN ORIGINAL PLAY IN FOUR ACTS, BY

C. M. S. McLELLAN.

Richard Murray	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Colonel John Pontifex, U.S.A.	Mr. LYN HARDING
Jack Borinski	Mr. GUY STANDING
Conrad Borinski	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Lieutenant Trench	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Lieutenant Goodrich	Mr. W. CRONIN WILSON
Judith Grant	Miss DOROTHY DIX
Meda Borinski	Miss MARJORIE DAY

TIME—THE PRESENT.

Act I.	Temporary Headquarters of Colonel Pontifex, Minetown, Pennsylvania, U.S.A.
Act II.	Conrad Borinski's Shop, Minetown
Act III.	Colonel Pontifex's Sitting-Room at Headquarters
Act IV.	Judith Grant's Lodgings, Minetown

There will be intervals of 10 minutes between the Acts.

Mr. Waller has been assisted in the production by Mr. HERBERT JARMAN.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Lestocq"	Auber
a. GAVOTTE AND MUSETTE		Raff
b. PRELUDE		Rachmaninoff
SELECTION	"Ivanhoe"	Sullivan
a. PRELAUDIUM		Jaronefeldt
b. VALSE	"Reve"	Ambrosio

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR	MR. LEONARD CHALK
STAGE MANAGER	MR. B. CAMPLIN SMITH

Scenery by R. C. McCLEERY. Furniture by OETZMANN. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Miss Dix's Dresses by Mrs. NETTLESHIP.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, FEB. 5th, AT 2.15.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s., Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s., Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 7.45 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier). Commence at 8.15. Carriages at 11.
Matinee Doors open at 1.45.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The weak point of The Strong People is its ethics; the effective value of it is in the vivid humanity of its personages and the earnestness of purpose and energy with which they have been endowed by the author. The condition of things at the commencement is that an American manufacturing company, competing with a rival in the city of Minetown, has ruined its opponents utterly. Their works are closed, the men are thrown out of work, and they are not employed at the new factory which has been built by the conquerors. But a similar state of things might have been created by a fire or by a new invention. The plight of the workmen thus disengaged is a painful one, but it does not justify them in an attack on the successful factory, or, indeed, in any kind of violence. Mr. McLellan's sympathies, however, appear to be with the men of Minetown in their lawless action and against Richard Murray, one of the partners in the victorious company; and, perhaps, from a popular playwright's point of view, the author of The Strong People is wise. There is now so much indignation felt on both sides of the Atlantic with trusts and syndicates that is is safe to attack them in play or book. To the impartial eye, however, it appears that Murray has merely been fighting the business battle on business lines, and that the men were decidedly wrong in rioting. This is the opinion of Colonel Pontifex, of the United States Army, who is sent to Minetown to quell the disturbance. The leader of the workmen is Jack Borinski, who is eager for a fight, and is quite willing to take the consequences. His father, Conrad Borinski, is an old shoemaker, cautious, shrewd, and moderate, and a prominent person on the side of the people is Judith Grant, formerly secretary to the defeated manufacturer, who has committed suicide in despair. In order to induce her to cease her inflammatory harangues, Pontifex invites her to his headquarters, where she meets Murray, who has come, under the name of Brandon, to see what is going on at Minetown. Presenting himself as a pressman, he gets the entrée everywhere; and Pontifex takes him into his confidence. The Colonel, who holds stock in the successful company, is quite ready to bring on an émeute; and, as Jack Borinski is equally eager for the fray, there is certain to be much bloodshed, unless time can be gained for the workmen's passions to evaporate. This time, however, Pontifex refuses to give; and, as a foretaste of the horror of civil war, shows Judith the corpse of her brother, who has just fallen in the street skirmish.

In the second act, Murray goes to Conrad's shop to try and get Jack Borinski to come to terms; but the popular leader is adamant, and sends back an insolent message to the commander of the troops. War to the knife is imminent; and, as the troops have machine-guns and the populace only rifles, there can be little doubt of the result of the struggle, which can only be prevented, Judith thinks, by the death of Pontifex. She goes to the Colonel's headquarters with a knife to kill him, but is prevented from doing so by Murray, who tells her he will deal with the difficulty himself. He does so by defying the Colonel, telling him that he (Murray) has arranged that, in the event of his death, the Colonel's connection with the successful company and his motives in forcing on a combat will be published in all the papers, which it appears will result in the ruin of Pontifex by the force of public opinion. The Colonel "caves in," and postpones his attack on the workmen; and the act ends with the realisation by Judith of the identity of the generous journalist with her bête noire, Richard Murray.

The last act is occupied with an argument between him an Judith for and against her marrying him. In the end she is overcome, and consents to be his wife on the understanding that they shall remain in Minetown and watch over the happiness of his workpeople.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

THE O'FLYNN

BY JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY.

EVERY EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK.

On Tuesday, 1st February at 8 o'clock.

THE O'FLYNN,

A Tale of Love and War.

(An Original Play derived from many sources)

By JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY.

Conacher O'Rourke	(King of Munster and Body Servant to the O'Flynn)	W. G. FAY
James II.	King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith.	C. H. CROKER-KING
Richard Talbot, Duke of Tyrconnel	(Viceroy of Ireland)	SYDNEY PAXTON
Philip Defford, Earl of Sedgemouth		HENRY AINLEY
Lord Fawley	(Followers of James)	FRANK ESMOND
Sir George Mayhew		FREDERICK JAMES
Captain Scully		HARRY C. HEWITT
Luitprand Van Dronk	(General in the Service of King William III.	EDWARD SASS
Hendrigg	(A Williamite Spy)	WILLIAM HAVILAND
Lieut. Trusham	(In the Service of King William III.)	SCOTT CRAVEN
The O'Flynn	(Captain of Austrian Dragoons, Chevalier of the Order of the Rose of Lithuania, Knight Commander of Poland, Ambassador Extraordinary from His Majesty Conacher the 52nd, King of Munster)	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE
Coin	(Process Servers—afterwards of O'Flynn's Own)	J. W. BRAITHWAITE
Gosling		EDMUND GURNEY
Bandy	(Landlord of the "Isle of Cyprus" Inn in Dublin)	HENRY MORRELL
A Tailor		WILSON GUNNING
Burden	A Company of Actors travelling as "The Riverside Fellowship of Players"	HUBERT CARTER
Conamur		SHIEL BARRY
Winshaw		By arrangement with J. E. Vedrenne.
Tulpin		JULES SHAW
Beggles		NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Mrs. Oldmixon		WILLIAM MACKINTOSH
Fancy Free		Miss ELINOR FOSTER
		Miss AURIOL LEE
Frances Jennings Talbot, Duchess of Tyrconnel		Miss HELEN FERRERS
The Lady Benedetta Mountmichael		Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Lady Belinda Fanshaw		Miss HILDA MOORE
Lady Barbara Jarmyn		Miss HEMINGWAY

Courtiers, Populace, and Soldiers of O'Flynn's Own.

The action takes place in Ireland in the year 1690.

ACT I.

Hall of The O'Flynn's Castle.—Joseph Harker.

ACT II.

"The Isle of Cyprus" Inn, Dublin.—Walter Hann.

ACT III.

SCENE 1.—In the trenches before Knockmore Castle.—Joseph Harker.

SCENE 2.—General Van Dronk's quarters in Knockmore Castle.—H. W. Owen.

ACT IV.

SCENE 1.—The Presence Chamber in Dublin Castle.—Joseph Harker.

SCENE 2.—The same.—Joseph Harker.

SCENE 3.—Hall of The O'Flynn's Castle.—Joseph Harker.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE	"Shamus O'Brien"	Sir C. Villiers Stanford
	AFTER ACT I.
2nd Movement from "The Irish Symphony"		Sir C. Villiers Stanford
	AFTER ACT II.
a. INTERMEZZO		Joseph Holbrooke
b. DANSE Characteristique		J. St. A. Johnson
	AFTER ACT III.
SUITE	"Old Irish Airs and Dances"	Adolf Schmid

The Incidental Music has been arranged from traditional Melodies by ADOLF SCHMID.

The Costumes have been designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I., and executed by B. J. SIMMONS & Co.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

FIRST MATINEE—SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 5th, at 2.

And every following WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Theatre has now been fitted throughout with the Ozonair System of Ventilation for the constant supply of pure fresh air, by Messrs OZONAIR LTD., 96, Victoria Street, S.W.

The Safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING. ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL

MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s.
Unreserved Seats: Pit 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. Telephone: GERRARD 1777.

Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy describes his work as a "tale of love and war," and "an original play derived from many sources." It is a free, dashing, breezy, active historical melodrama, with a decided tendency towards Jacobitism, and a leading part which Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree must enjoy playing, that of a dauntless poetical, romantic soldier of fortune. We find The O'Flynn in the first act in his ruined castle, where there is plenty of home-distilled whisky but nothing to eat. He has just returned from the Continent, where he has been serving as a soldier of fortune, and, on his way home, has rescued a beautiful heiress, Lady Benedetta Mountmichael, from the attack of a highwayman. She comes to thank him, and he makes love to her ardently and poetically. She is an earnest supporter of King James II.—the date of the play in 1690—and is betrothed to Phillip Defford, Earl of Sedgemouth. Benedetta believes Defford to be the soul of honour, and regards him as a paragon; but he is really a traitor, in the pay of King William. In order to help James and win Benedetta's favour, the O'Flynn goes to Dublin with a company of strolling players, getting their business man to advance to him the cash necessary for a new suit of clothes on the strength of a story about buried treasure at Castle O'Flynn.

In the second act, at a Dublin inn, the O'Flynn hears Sedgemouth speaking disrespectfully of the Lady Benedetta, and fights a duel with him, in which the Earl is slightly wounded. Lady Benedetta, not knowing the provocation given, bitterly reproaches the O'Flynn, who remains deeply in love with her, and raises a regiment to assist King James. In the third act, in the trenches before Knockmore Castle, which is held by William's general, Luitprand Van Dronk, the O'Flynn, in order to spare Benedetta's feelings, takes upon himself the discredit of an amour with a courtesan called Fancy Free, who is really the mistress of the Earl of Sedgemouth. O'Flynn also obtains admission into Knockmore Castle by pretending to be a deserter, is invited by Van Dronk to sit down to a drinking-bout, drugs the General's wine, and putting on his wig, impersonates him when Sedgemouth arrives on a mission of treachery to King James. After obtaining written evidence of the Earl's duplicity, the O'Flynn pulls up a rope ladder to the window by a string, and admits his soldiers, who seize the castle by a coup de main, and arrest the garrison.

In the last act The O'Flynn is in high favour at James's Court at Dublin Castle, and Sedgemouth is conspiring to force James to sign his abdication, and to kidnap him afterwards. This scheme is frustrated by The O'Flynn, who substitutes himself for the King, the conspirators being worsted, and Sedgemouth being disgraced and shot dead by a soldier as he rushes to assassinate the O'Flynn. The Lady Benedetta, correctly informed of the villainy of her unworthy fiancé, and of the chivalrous devotion of his rival, confesses that she has always loved the O'Flynn, and is taken by him to his heart.

"RICHELIEU."

Lord Lytton's Drama, in Four Acts, Revived at the Strand Theatre on Thursday, Feb. 10.

Lord Lytton's play Richelieu; or, The Conspiracy was first performed at the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden, under the management of Macready, on Thursday, March 7, 1839, with Macready as the Cardinal, Phelps as Joseph, and Helen Faucit as Julie de Mortemar. Henry Irving, who had made his first appearance on the stage in the small part of Gaston, Duke of Orleans, revived Richelieu with great success in the Lyceum season of 1879.

EVERY EVENING AT 9.

LORD LYTTON'S

RICHELIEU

In Four Acts.

Cardinal Richelieu	...	ROBERT HILTON
Louis XIII	...	Mr. GILBERT YORKE
The Chevalier de Mauprat	...	Mr. LIONEL ATWILL
Gaston, Duke of Orleans (Brother of the King)	...	Mr. NORMAN WRIGHTON
Count Baradas (Favourite of the King)	...	Mr. FREDERICK SARGENT
The Sieur de Beringhen (Attached to the King)	...	Mr. FRED GROVE
Clermont	...	Mr. HUGH ARDALE
1st Secretary of State	...	Mr. T. F. NYE
2nd Secretary of State	...	Mr. GERALD LINDLEY
Captain of the Archers	...	Mr. C. HARDINGHAM
Groom of the Chamber	...	Mr. H. MALIGNY
Father Joseph	...	Mr. J. H. BARNES
Francois	Of the Cardinal's Household	Mr. GEORGE ROBINSON
Huguet		Mr. R. BESANT
Pages		Mr. CYRIL BRUCE Mr. CEDRIC PERCIVAL
Marion de L'Orme	(Mistress of Orleans, but in Richelieu's pay)	Miss SOPHIE HARRISS
Julie De Mortimar (Richelieu's Ward)	...	Miss MARIE POLINI

Ladies of the Court, Courtiers, Conspirators, Pages, Guards, Priests, etc. :—

Misses—Sinclair, M. Marsdene, M. Lacy, Varre, K. Ruskin, R. Grey, G. Wren, M. Lloyd, L. A. Leveson, English, V. Luddington, L. Hay, V. Foster, Good, Gilruth, Patrice.

Messrs.—A. Onslow, R. Carlton, G. Oliver Smith, O. Powell, H. Wentworth-Fane, J. Thacker, R. Manning, J. Richter, L. Toole, W. Worsley, S. Lynn, H. Rogan.

ACT I.

Scene 1—Home of Marion de L'Orme. (Paris.)
" 2—The Cardinal's Palace. (Paris.)
Scene 3—De Mauprat's House. (Paris.)
" 4—The Cardinal's Palace. (Paris.)

ACT II.

Richelieu's Castle at Ruelle.

ACT III.

Terrace Garden of the Louvre. (Paris.)

ACT IV.

Interior of the Louvre. (Paris.)

The action of the play occupies four days. The minuet danced in Act 4 arranged by Miss Daniell.
Mr. Hilton's Robes by Nadine, Lower Grosvenor Place. Costumes by Harrison's, Ltd.
Scenery by Leolyn Hart. Wigs by Clarkson.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

A Wordless Phantasy

THE DREAM FLOWER

by

Miss AIMÉE LOWTHER. Music by R. BURNHAM.

A Sculptress	...	Miss VALERIE WINGATE
Pierrette	...	Miss MARIE ELLIS
and
Pierrot	...	Miss MABILIA DANIELL

SCENE—A Studio.

Dresses by Nadine. Dance arranged by Mdlle. Rosa of the Royal Opera.

The Programme of Music

Musical Director, ... Mr. NORFOLK MEGONE

Will be varied every evening, and will be selected from the following pieces. A card will be displayed in the Orchestra corresponding with the number of the piece on the programme :—

1. OVERTURE ... ... "Rienzi" ... ... Wagner
2. PRELUDE ... ... Jarnefelt
3. SUITE from Ballet ... "The Wiles of Love" ... ... Glazounow
   1. Danse des Paysans. 2. Grand Valse. 3. La Fricassée.
4. IDYLL for Strings—Norwegian Folk Song ... ... Svendsen
5. PRELUDE ... ... Rachmaninoff
6. SUITE ... ... "Ballet Russe" ... ... Luigini
   1. Scène des Moujicks. 2. Serenade Amoureuse.
   3. Mazurka. 4. Valse Idyllique.
   5. Marche Russe.
7. INTRODUCTION to ACT III. ... "Lohengrin" ... ... Wagner
8. LULLABY for Strings ... ..."Rêve D'Enfant"... ... ... Sinding
9. OVERTURE ... ... "Robespierre" ... ... Litolff
10. FANTASIA from the Spanish Opera "La Gran Via" ... ... Valverde
11. BARCAROLLE from... ... "Les Contes D'Hoffman" ... ... Offenbach
12. SUITE ... ... "Sylvia" ... ... Delibes
    1. Diane Chasseresse. 2. Valse Lente.
    3. Pizzicato. 4. Cortège de Bacchos.
13. PROLOGUE TO ... ... "The Dream Flower" ... ... R. Burnham
14. PRELUDE TO ... ... "Richelieu" ... ... Russell Phillips

The Overture and Incidental Music for "Richelieu" specially composed by RUSSELL PHILLIPS.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. A. C. SHREAD) OPEN 10 TILL 10. Telephone: 3830 GERRARD.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Machinist—A. ARNOTT. Electrician—P. SHERIDAN.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

3-DAY THEATRE SEASON.

ABRUPT END OF THE RUN OF "RICHELIEU."

Mr. Robert Hilton's season at the Strand Theatre, which began, with "Richelieu," last Thursday evening, came to an end last night. When the performers arrived at the theatre they found the following typewritten notice on a board inside the stage door:

"There will be no performance to-night, the run of 'Richelieu' being closed. All communications must be addressed in writing to the general manager."

Including the actors, actresses, auxiliaries, musicians, and stage hands, 150 people are thrown out of employment by the closing of the theatre.

No information about the future could be obtained last night. On a sheet of paper on the front doors it was stated that "owing to the indisposition of Mr. Robert Hilton there will be no performance to-night."

THE PLAYHOUSE

15/2/1910

Orch. Stall

H 17

This to be retained

To-night (Tuesday), February 15th, 1910, at 8.30

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will produce, for the first time, a New Comedy, in Four Acts, called

"TANTALIZING TOMMY"

By PAUL GAVAULT and MICHAEL MORTON.

JAMES COTTENHAM	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
HARRY KILLICK	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
THOMAS H. PEPPER	Mr. FRED LEWIS
MR. EUSTACE TATHEM	Mr. JOHN BEAUCHAMP
LORD ENDERBY	Mr. ROBERT AVERELL
JENNINGS	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
JACK MASON	Mr. M. WETHERELL
FRANK RICKETTS	Mr. A. G. ONSLOW
SIMPSON	Mr. C. B. KESTON
ELSIE TATHEM	Miss SYBIL RUSKIN
BERTHA	Miss MAIDIE HOPE
MAID	Miss EVA ROWLAND
TOMMY	Miss MARIE LÖHR

ACT I.	Jimmy's Country Cottage ...	Monday.
ACT II.	The same	Tuesday.
ACT III.	A Room in the Colonial Office ...	Wednesday.
ACT IV.	Harry Killick's Studio	The following Wednesday

INTERVALS: After Act I., Five Minutes; after Act II., Ten Minutes; after Act III., Eight Minutes.

Scenery painted by Mr. BRUCE SMITH.
Miss MARIE LÖHR'S dresses by PAQUIN, Ltd., 39, Dover Street, W.
Other costumes by Mrs. CALEB PORTER, 175, Brompton Road, S.W.
Pianoforte by Messrs. CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond Street, W.

The following Programme of Music will be played during the evening:

OVERTURE - - "Tantalusqualen" - -	Suppé	"WOODLAND DANCE" - - - - - -	H. E. Haines
"SERENADE BADINE" - - - - - -	G. Marie	SONG - - "Within your eyes, love" - -	Lincke
VALSE - - - "Babette" - -	Gustave Colin	ENTR'ACTE - - "La Cinquantaine" - -	G. Marie
"THREE LIGHT PIECES" - - - -	Percy Fletcher	MARCH - - - "The Light Horse" - -	Von Blon

Matinee Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30

PARTS I HAVE PLAYED—Mr. CYRIL MAUDE. May be had of any of the Attendants Price 1s.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - - - Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
Musical Director - - - - - - - - - - - - Mr. JOHN ANSELL

Opera Glasses, by Negretti & Zambra, can be hired from the Attendants at a charge of 6d. for the performance.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Management, and all Wines and Spirits are of the best quality. Ices by the Horton Ice Cream Co.

No charge is made for the use of the Cloak Rooms, and no Gratuities are allowed.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the Audience by kindly removing their Hats.

Toilet Table appointments throughout the Theatre by Hinde's, Ltd.

Assistant Business Manager ... Mr. H. M. THORBURN.

Box Office Open 10 to 10 under the direction of Mr. H. C. HOOPER.

Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Stalls, 10/6 Balcony Stalls, 7/6 Balcony, 5/- Upper Boxes, 2/6 Gallery, 1/-

All Seats, including Gallery, can be booked.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - Mr. ALFRED TURNER

M. Paul Gavault's comedy, La Petite Chocolatière, which was produced at the Renaissance Theatre, Paris, on Oct. 23 last year with Miss Marthe Regnier in the leading female part, bears adaptation well, and Mr. Michael Morton has done his work neatly and judiciously. Though some alterations may have been made, the general idea and the main incidents are identical with those of the play as described by our French correspondent after the Paris production of M. Gavault's piece. Tantalizing Tommy is a bright, lively, and amusing play, with plenty of innocent diversion in it, and it receives at the Playhouse the admirable representation which is indispensable to its success. The heroine is a pretty and bewitching young lady, who is used to having her own way in everything, is bored to death by the adoration she receives from everybody, and falls in love with the first man who scolds and bullies her. This revival of the old Taming of the Shrew motive is combined with some droll incidents, in which James Cottenham, a rather opinionated clerk in the Colonial Office, figures amusingly. The first scene is a room in a pretty country cottage. Cottenham and his friend Killick, an artist, are preparing for bed, when Tommy's motor-car breaks down outside, and she comes in to rest while it is being mended. Killick, knowing that Tommy is the only daughter of a very rich tea merchant named Pepper, manages, on pretence of repairing the tyre, to injure the others, and make it impossible for her to leave that night. She makes herself very much at home, and occupies Cottenham's bedroom, he having to pass the night on a chair. Next morning, Cottenham's prospective father-in-law, and official superior, Eustace Tathem, arrives on a long-promised visit with his daughter Elsie, a vapid and silly young person, who faints on the least excuse. Meeting Tommy, Tathem takes her for Cottenham's mistress, and indignantly departs, after breaking off the engagement between the Civil Service clerk and Elsie. Cottenham's dislike for Tommy increases with his annoyance, until, at the end of the second act, he bursts out into a violent denunciation of her egoism and wilfulness.

In the third act, Cottenham is in his room at the Colonial Office. By explaining to Tathem in a lengthy document the presence of Tommy at the cottage, he has partially reinstated himself in Tathem's good graces; but his troubles recommence when Tommy, who is now deeply in love with him, calls at the office. Convinced by the artful diplomacy of Killick that "Jimmy" adores her, and is only concealing his passion for fear of being taken for a fortune-hunter, she encourages him in every way, until at last, after a glass of brandy, he goes so far as to swear friendship with her, and kiss her hand. But Tommy's wilfulness spoils all. Cottenham's telephone is "rung up" in his absence, and Tommy answers the Chief of the Department in such impertinent style that Cottenham is called down to the Chief's room, and ordered to send in his resignation. He does so, denouncing Tommy even more bitterly than before. Tathem now casts him off for ever as a son-in-law, but Cottenham has at last fallen in love with Tommy.

In the last act, which takes place at a studio hired by Killick to paint the portrait of the rich tea-dealer—who is so struck by the result that he decides to place a copy of the picture on each packet of his tea—Tommy appears dressed in a nun-like costume, and assumes an air of pious resignation. Killick fancies that he has a chance of winning the heiress, but she and Cottenham quickly come to an understanding, and the usual embrace ends the comedy.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE

Proprietor ... ... Mr. J. H. LEIGH.
Under the Management of Messrs. J. H. LEIGH and R. T. E. NEEVES.

Mr. ARTHUR PHILLIPS' Season.

EVERY EVENING at 8.

Matinee Every WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 2.30.

Shakespeare's Comedy,

'The Merchant of Venice.'

The Duke of Venice		Mr. CYRIL VERNON
Prince of Morocco, Prince of Arragon	Suitors to Portia	Mr. LESLIE PALMER, Mr. RUPERT HARVEY
Antonio, a Merchant of Venice ...		... Mr. JAMES BERRY
Bassanio, Antonio's Friend and Suitor to Portia		Mr. CYRIL KEIGHTLEY
Salanio, Salarino, Gratiano	Friends to Antonio and Bassanio	Mr. E. STUART VINDEN, Mr. RICHARD FIELDING, Mr. E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Lorenzo, in love with Jessica ...		Mr. SCOTT SUNDERLAND
Shylock, a rich Jew		Mr. ARTHUR PHILLIPS
Tubal, a Jew, his Friend ...		... Mr. VERRIL
Launcelot Gobbo, Servant to Shylock ...		Mr. ROSS SHORE
Old Gobbo, Father to Launcelot		... Mr. ARTHUR FAYNE
Leonardo, Servant to Bassanio ...		Miss ETHEL AMIEL
Balthasar, Stephano	Servants to Portia	Miss REGINA LAURENCE, Miss NITA MINARDS
Clerk of the Court		... Mr. J. T. BRIGGS
Portia		Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS
Nerissa, Portia's Waiting Maid ...		... Miss DORA HOLE
Jessica, Daughter to Shylock ...		Miss CHRISTIE LAWS

Magnificoes of Venice, Officers of the Court of Justice, Gaoler, Servants to Portia and other Attendants:—

Mesdames OGILVIE, PRICHETT, DAY, CURRAN, SHEPHERD, MACDONALD MARTIN, FLOWERDEW, FIELDEN. HUNTER, LAWTON, ELLIS.
Messrs. HASTINGS, TEMPEST, GRESHAM, SEAMORE. FANCOURT, HINE, SMITH, DARRELL, PALMER, JAMES.

Musical Director		Mr. VERDI FAWCETT
Stage Manager ...	For Mr. Arthur Phillips.	Mr. ALFRED RIVERS
Assistant Stage Manager		Mr. RUPERT HARVEY
General Manager		... Mr. A. S. PIGOTT

General Manager (for Mr. J. H. LEIGH) Mr. JAMES ANNING

COURT
THEATRE.

19/2/1910

Orch. Stall

No. G14

P.W.T.
—
19/2/1910
—
Orch. Stall
H22
To be retained
NoBonnetsallowed

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee and Manager .... FRANK CURZON.

Every Evening at 8 o'clock,

FRANK CURZON'S
NEW PRODUCTION

"The Balkan Princess,"

A MUSICAL PLAY IN THREE ACTS.
By FREDERICK LONSDALE and FRANK CURZON.
Lyrics by PAUL A. RUBENS and ARTHUR WIMPERIS. Music by PAUL A. RUBENS.

The Grand Duke Sergius		Mr. BERTRAM WALLIS
Count Boethy	(Prime Minister of Balaria)	... Mr. WILLIAM LUGG
Captain Radomir		Mr. RIDGWELL CULLUM
Lieutenant Varna		Mr. C. MORTON HORNE
Max Hein	(alias "Prince Boris of Matalia")	... Mr. CHARLES BROWN
Blatz	(his Confederate) ...	... Mr. LAURI DE FRECE
Lounger at the "Bohemian Restaurant"		Mr. NORMAN A. BLUME
Emil	(Proprietor of the "Bohemian Restaurant")	... Mr. PETER BLUNT
Hermann ...	(Commissionaire at the "Bohemian Restaurant")	Mr. BARRY NEAME
Henri	(a Waiter) ...	... Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Magda	(Charwoman at the Palace) ...	Miss MABEL SEALBY
Olga	(Maid of Honour) ...	... Miss HAZEL DAWN
Sofia	(a Habituée of the "Bohemian Restaurant")	Miss MABEL GREEN
Paula		... Miss MARGARET ISMAY
Tessa		Miss MADGE KIRKHAM
Carmen	(other Habituées)	Miss PEGGY LORRAINE
Margherita		Miss BABS CAPELLE
Teresa		Miss SYLVIA BERESFORD
Cashiers at the "Bohemian Restaurant"		Miss MARJORIE BLYTHE, Miss ALETHEA ALLARDYCE

AND

Princess Stephanie of Balaria ... ... Miss ISABEL JAY

Five Nobles of Balaria:—Messrs. HERBERT SHARP, HARRY LESLIE, JOHN HAMILTON, HUGH WEYBRANCE, and VINCENT LAWSON.

Chorus of Court Ladies, Officers, Footmen, Habituées at the Restaurant, etc., etc.

Act I. ... ... Reception Room at the Palace. (Joseph Harker).
Act II. The "Bohemian Restaurant," the Next Evening. (Hugo Baruch & Co.).
Act III. ... ... The Garden of the Palace, a Week later. (Joseph Harker).

The Uniforms, Costumes and Dresses executed from the Designs of Mr. PERCY ANDERSON:—
Uniforms and Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., King Street, Covent Garden. Ladies Dresses by NETTLESHIP & Co., Ltd., Wigmore Street Miss ISABEL JAY'S Dresses by REVILLE & ROSSITER, Ltd, Hanover Square. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Play Produced by FRANK CURZON.

Dances Arranged by FRED FARREN.

Musical Conductor	I. A. DE ORELLANA
Stage Manager	J. FARREN SOUTAR

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s od. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle. First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit. 2s. 6d Gallery 1s.

General Manager .. .. T. B. VAUGHAN.

31

The atmosphere of that newly-discovered country Balaria is exhilarating indeed. Here most of the inhabitants seem to consider themselves favoured rather than otherwise by the "rule absolute" of that pretty tyrant, the Princess Stephanie. She is not in any way harsh or capricious when we first see her—only pensive, and wondering at the outcome of the strange decree that is to determine her future. Love has not yet entered her heart, yet she has to choose a husband by midnight on a certain date or abdicate. There are restrictions, too, in her choice. She must find a partner among the six tallest dukes who own her sway. When ordered up for inspection one of them is missing. This is Sergius, who heartily sympathises with the proletariat, and thinks his chief offence is "rank." At any rate, his writings have fostered discontent, and being something of a revolutionary—like his father, who was banished from the Court—he objects to be trotted up for inspection. The quintet of aspirants to the hand of the Princess in turn boast of their wealth and advantages, but she is curious to meet the Duke Sergius. He interests her, and she determines that he shall not escape her fascinations.

In the second act we find her in very mixed company at the Bohemian Restaurant, where she is dining incognita. It is unnecessary to say that Sergius, on seeing her, is at once enslaved by her charms, and engages himself to her for every dance in the adjacent ballroom. Sofia, a former sweetheart of Sergius, becomes jealous of her rival, is determined to put an end to her lover's infatuation; and, learning the identity of the new favourite, suggests to the Duke that he shall drink the old toast, "Down with the Princess Stephanie!" Just as he is about to do so, the Princess declares herself, and in a flash of indignation orders his arrest. This forms an excellent finale to the second act. In the last it only remains for the lovers to come together. But she signs away the throne, and thus once again becomes the simple girl with whom Sergius fell in love at the restaurant. Such self-sacrifice appeals to him, and he is more than ever infatuated. He tears up the deed of abdication; Stephanie no longer resists the promptings of her heart; and the two will rule together. There is an under-plot that concerns the escapades of Max Heiu, who calls himself Prince Boris of Matalia, and his confederate, Blatz, who plot with the Palace charwoman, Magda, to steal the Princess's jewels. Magda's long-lost husband turns out to be the comic waiter, Henri, who is so much in evidence in the Restaurant Scene.

6/4/1910

At the Prince of Wales' Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, just before the end of the first act of The Balkan Princess, two ladies, one of whom was Mrs. Blanche Eardley, the novelist, entered the theatre, taking seats in the third row of the stalls. Both were wearing large black hats. At the end of the act two gentlemen who were sitting behind the ladies went out and complained to Mr. Curzon that the ladies "refused to take off their ridiculous hats."

Mr. Curzon then sent a messenger to Mrs. Eardley and her companion. The ladies went out into the corridor, and Mr. Curzon asked them if they would object to removing their hats. Both ladies refused. "Then I must ask you to take your money back and leave the theatre," said Mr. Curzon. Mrs. Eardley and her friend insisted on going in and seeing the play.

Mr. Curzon, however, refused to let the ladies pass unless they took off their hats. Eventually the ladies left the theatre—Mrs. Eardley leaving her card. Mr. Curzon at once sent a guinea cheque and a letter to Mrs. Eardley by special messenger. The cheque was returned to Mr. Curzon, with a note from Mrs. Eardley, stating that the matter was to be put in the hands of her solicitors. Mr. Curzon hopes that any action that may follow will settle the interesting problem, "Can a theatre manager exclude a lady from his theatre if she refuses to take off her hat?"

Mrs. Eardley presents her side of the case in a letter to the Press, in which she says: "We made our way direct to the stalls, intending to remove our hats, but before we were actually seated a gentleman (?) said: 'Take off those ridiculous hats.' I was annoyed at the unnecessary note of rudeness in his manner, and we did not do so. At the end of the act, he again made the offensive remark, and I made up my mind that, though I disliked being discourteous to other members of the audience, I would keep my hat on, and establish a woman's right to keep her head covered in public if she wishes. Hitherto I have made it a rule to remove my hat at matinées."

Mr. Frank Curzon was summoned at Bow-street on Friday for assault by Mrs. Blanche Eardley, who insisted on wearing a big matinée hat at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. After hearing evidence, the magistrate dismissed the case, with five guineas costs against the complainant.

2a 16 April

See page 283

EMPIRE THEATRE.

6

"HULLO . . . LONDON!"

REVUE, in 3 Scenes,

By GEORGE GROSSMITH, Junr.

Lyrics by C. H. BOVILL.

Music Composed and Arranged by CUTHBERT CLARKE.

Produced by SPENCER BARRY and FRED FARREN.

The Costumes supervised by C. WILHELM.

Dresses executed by Miss HASTINGS, MORRIS ANGEL & CO., and PETER ROBINSON.

The Chanticler Dresses by CLARKSON, facsimiles of the Paris creations.

Machinist, W. SHELDON.

Properties by P. GRIEVESON. Electrician, C. WINTER. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Mr. J. F. McARDLE
AS
A Military Dramatist, Mr. Instead. A Coterer—Mr. Cody.

Miss MILLIE LEGARDE
AS
Lily Philligabs.

Mr. WILL GANE
AS King Karalonga.

Mr. B. ANSELL
AS Van Bellow, a Musician.

Miss FRANCES KAPSTOWNE
AS
The Guinea Fowl.

Mr. DAVY BURNABY
AS
The Duke of Streatham—Dr. Bodie—Chanticler.

SCENES:

Scene 1.—London West.
Scene 2.—The Seashore.
Scene 3.—Le Cefé du Monde.

F. M. McCleery.

"She only said 'Bad Boy.'"—"A little girl like me."—"Hullo . . . London!"—(Wilmark and Son.
"I've got rings on my fingers."—"Shine on, Harvest Moon."—Francis Day and Hunter.
"My Wife's gone to the Country."—(Ted Snyder Publishing Co.)

"HULLO . . . LONDON!"

Revue, in Three Scenes, by George Grossmith, jnn., Lyrics by C. H. Bovill, Music by Cuthbert Clarke, Produced at the Empire Theatre, on Feb. 19.

NEW EMPIRE "REVUE."

London surely cannot be half so dull as the new revue produced at the Empire Theatre on Saturday night would have it. There was a competition among the audience to guess at the identity of the characters, supposed to be London's public men, and the suggestion was thrown out that "it might be well to label them."

The scenery of "Hullo! London" is original. The first scene, described as "London West," might as well be Kidderminster as London, for all the likeness it bears to any public thoroughfare in either place. Scene 2 carries us to the sea coast, and the third and last scene brings us back late at night in time for supper to a café where even the tables and chairs dance.

Miss Millie Legarde, charming actress and singer, did the little she had to do delightfully; she was perfect. Mr. J. F. McArdle, a clever comedian, received a very slender chance to score. Miss Frances Kapstow had one good number. But apart from these nobody said anything, or did anything, that was interesting, amusing, or new.

D. M.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

JUSTICE

A TRAGEDY IN FOUR ACTS

BY

JOHN GALSWORTHY

MONDAY, 21st FEBRUARY, 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

CHARLES FROHMAN presents

JUSTICE,

A TRAGEDY IN FOUR ACTS BY JOHN GALSWORTHY.

Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

JAMES HOW	SYDNEY VALENTINE
WALTER HOW	CHARLES MAUDE
ROBERT COKESON	EDMUND GWENN
WILLIAM FALDER	DENNIS EADIE
SWEEDLE	GEORGE HERSEE
WISTER	LESLIE CARTER
COWLEY	C. E. VERNON
THE JUDGE	DION BOUCICAULT
COUNSEL FOR THE PROSECUTION	OSCAR ADYE
COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENCE	CHARLES BRYANT
THE CLERK OF ARRAIGNS	C. C. CALVERT
AN USHER	TALBOT HOMEWOOD
FOREMAN OF THE JURY	R. OSSULTON-RICHE
THE GOVERNOR OF THE PRISON	GRENDON BENTLEY
THE CHAPLAIN	HUBERT HARBEN
THE DOCTOR	LEWIS CASSON
THE CHIEF WARDER	FREDERICK LLOYD
A WARDER INSTRUCTOR	BENEDICT BUTLER
MOANEY	ROBERT PATEMAN
CLIPTON	O. P. HEGGIE
O'CLEARY	WHITFORD KANE
RUTH HONEYWILL	EDYTH OLIVE

A number of Barristers, Solicitors, Spectators, Ushers, Reporters, Jurymen, Warders and Prisoners.

Act I.	-	The Office of James & Walter How. Morning. July.
Act II.	-	The Assizes. Afternoon. October.
Act III.	-	A Prison.
Scene 1		The Governor's Office.
Scene 2		A Corridor.
Scene 3		A Cell. December.
Act IV.	-	The Office of James & Walter How. Morning. March, two years later.

The scenery has been designed by MACDONALD GILL and painted by W. HANN.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE...	Caprice de Roi	Gustave Michiels
ENTR'ACTE	1. Les Joyeuses Commères de Windsor	Otto Nicholai
MARCH	2. Romaine	Justin Clérice
IDYLLE	3. Sur L'Oude Argentée	Emilio Pizzi
SELECTION	1. Tannhäuser	Wagner
ENTR'ACTE	2. Waria Czardas	G. Michiels
SPANISH DANCES	1. Allegro Brioso	Moritz Moszkowski
	2. Moderato
	3. Allegro Con Moto
	4. Allegro Commodo
	5. Bolero...

Business Manager - - - JAMES W. MATHEWS
Stage Manager - - - DUNCAN MCRAE
Musical Director - - - - JOHN CROOK

TOMORROW, TUESDAY, 22ND FEBRUARY - - - - JUSTICE (2nd Performance)
WEDNESDAY, 23RD FEB. - MISALLIANCE, a new play by BERNARD SHAW (1st Performance)
THURSDAY, 24TH FEBRUARY - - - - - - - - - JUSTICE (matinée)
JUSTICE (evening)
FRIDAY, 25TH FEBRUARY - - - - - - - MISALLIANCE (2nd Performance)
SATURDAY, 26TH FEBRUARY - - - - - - - MISALLIANCE (matinée)
JUSTICE (evening)

A further fortnight's announcements are made upon the back of this programme.

General Manager - - - - - - - - - W. LESTOCQ.

ICES, TEA AND COFFEE can be had of the Attendants.

Mr. Charles Frohman commences his Repertory Theatre season at the Duke of York's Theatre with a play of stern, gloomy strength by that extremely advanced author Mr. John Galsworthy, the author of The Silver Box and Strife. Mr. Galsworthy has written a play calculated to wring one's heart if it be made of penetrable stuff; and to witness Justice leaves one with a tremendously strong sense of the sadness and suffering which exist, and with a resolve to be more merciful in our judgment on human acts and motives. We may infer a criticism of our present law of divorce in the situation with which the play commences. Falder, senior managing clerk to Messrs. James and Walter How, solicitors, has fallen in love with a married woman named Ruth Honeywill, whose husband is a drunkard and a brutal blackguard. Unable, according to our divorce law, to release herself from him, she consents to elope to America with Falder. Money, however, is required for the purpose, and the young man—he is only twenty-three—commits a forgery to get it, with the idea that on the other side of the Atlantic he will be able to earn and repay the sum he has stolen.

The forgery is discovered, and the two partners of the firm discuss how Falder shall be treated. The junior partner, Walter How, leans to the side of mercy; but his father does not believe in overlooking even first offences, and Falder is sent for trial.

Scenes in courts of justice have always been effective on the stage, and the poignant realism of Falder's trial at assizes, with the speech of counsel, the judge's summing up, and the verdict of the jury create a dramatic agony intense and sustained. In the end Falder is sent to penal servitude for three years. The point, of course, which the author, by the mouth of Falder's counsel, makes is that our administration of the law does not sufficiently consider extenuating circumstances such as those which surround Falder's crime. The hardness of the senior partner in refusing to overlook the clerk's first offence is paralleled by the judge's mechanical summing-up and the verdict of a jury insensible to the finer shades of guilt.

Falder goes to prison, and a leaden depression and despair take possession of his soul. The prison system grinds out of him all that is hopeful, resilient, and active. He is set free at the end of the three years, a mere sullen wreck of a man. In the meantime Ruth also has degenerated. After trying hard to earn a living as a sempstress, she has become the mistress of her employer. Falder determines to ask the Howe to take him back, and they agree to do so. But the forgery of a reference by which he obtained a former position has been discovered, and a detective comes to arrest him for it. As Falder is being taken away he throws himself out of a window and is killed.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager - - - - CHARLES FROHMAN.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

MISALLIANCE,

A DEBATE IN ONE SITTING,

BY

BERNARD SHAW.

WEDNESDAY, 23rd FEBRUARY, 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 23rd, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

CHARLES FROHMAN presents

MISALLIANCE,

A Debate in One Sitting,

By BERNARD SHAW.

John Tarleton, Junior - - -	FREDERICK LLOYD
Bentley Summerhays - -	DONALD CALTHROP
Hypathia Tarleton - - - -	MIRIAM LEWES
Mrs. Tarleton - - - -	FLORENCE HAYDON
Lord Summerhays - - -	HUBERT HARBEN
John Tarleton - - - -	C. M. LOWNE
Joseph Percival - - -	CHARLES BRYANT
Lina Szczepanowska - - -	LENA ASHWELL
Julius Baker - - - - -	O. P. HEGGIE

As the debate is a long one, the curtain will be lowered twice. The audience is requested to excuse these interruptions, which are made solely for its convenience.

The debate takes place at the house of John Tarleton, on Hindhead, Surrey, on the 31st May, 1909.

The Play is Produced by the Author.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1910.

"MISALLIANCE."

FEATURES OF MR. SHAW'S NEW PLAY."

Mr. Bernard Shaw, in a casual conversation yesterday about theatrical matters in general, was induced to say something about his new play "Misalliance," and its possible effect. "Misalliance" is in the list of new plays to be produced at the Repertory Theatre (Duke of York's).

"You may remember," said Mr. Shaw, "that the campaign against my plays culminated nearly two years ago in an unprecedented outburst of denunciation when my 'Getting Married' was produced at the Haymarket Theatre. One London daily paper described the curtain as falling amid a storm of hisses, the bald fact being that there were six curtain calls and no hisses. The effect was, for the moment, very serious. The booking at the Haymarket Theatre went down to the lowest point ever reached in the recorded history of the theatre. I immediately released all the managers who had undertaken to produce the play elsewhere.

NO MALICE TO CRITICS.

"The pressure which had been put on me for some years in Germany to produce my plays there in the first instance, and so avoid the reports of disastrous failure which invariably follow my London productions, was redoubled. It seemed for the moment impossible to expect any newspaper reader to go to a play so furiously denounced as intolerable. Fortunately a curious thing happened. All the people who saw the first performance kept coming again and again, until the word passed round that I had fooled the Press again—though I protest I had no intention of doing it. The situation was saved, and the play pulled through handsomely.

"I now wish it to be known as widely as possible that "Misalliance' is just like 'Getting Married,' only much more so. I have carefully cherished, repeated, and exaggerated every feature that the critics denounced. I have again gone back to the classic form, preserving all the unities—no division into acts, no change of scene, no silly plot, not a scrap of what the critics call action, nothing but Shaw and some very good acting. I shall be sorry to see my old colleagues leaving the theatre angry, weeping, broken men. But it does them good, and as they will spend the rest of the year sedulously advertising me as the most brilliant of beings I bear no malice."

The scene of Mr. Shaw's piece is laid in the Villa at Hindhead of Mr. John Tarleton, whose successful manufacture of Tarleton's underwear has made him very rich. John Tarleton, junior, who holds an important position in the firm, is a strong, commonplace person of limited intellect. Tarleton's daughter, Hypathia, is by nature adventurous, amorous, and erratic, and she chafes angrily at her monotonous life and the insipidity of the young men who come courting her. Mrs. Tarleton, her mother, is a motherly, middle-class woman, with reminiscences of early married life on a small income. Hypathia is engaged to a neurasthenic, hysterical young man named Bentley Summerhays. He is the son of Lord Summerhays, a retired Indian official, who, in a moment of passion, has proposed marriage to Hypaithia, who has refused him with ridicule.

The action opens with John Tarleton, junior, bullying Bentley, who cries and screams like a child, and brings in Mrs. Tarleton and Hypathia, who carry him out consoling. Two other personages drop into the story, literally "from the skies." They are Joseph Percival, a young man with wealthy connections, and Lina Szczepanowska, a female trapezist and juggler. They have descended into Tarleton's garden on an aeroplane, on which Lina has embarked to keep her nerves in order. Lord Summerhays, in time past on the Continent, made improper proposals to Lina, who is a dashing and attractive personage; and, soon after her arrival, John Tarleton senior, who boasts of his "exuberant vitality," offers to make her his mistress, while Tarleton junior offers her marriage. She scornfully refuses. Then Hypathia makes obstinate and aggressive love to Percival. He resists her overtures for some time, but when she entreats him to "chase her amongst the heather," he yields, and they go out together for that purpose. The conversation between them has, however, been overheard by Julius Baker, a sickly and embittered clerk, whose mother was for some time Tarleton senior's mistress. Baker has been driven half mad by bad health, novel reading, sedentary work, and genteel poverty, and he comes to shoot Tarleton for seducing his—Baker's—mother. The elderly draper treats the matter very prosaically, and points out that it was with the money which he gave to his mistress when they parted that she was able to purchase a husband. This does not pacify Baker, who still threatens Tarleton senior with a revolver; but his life is saved by Lina, who comes in and catches Baker by the wrist, and twists it until he gives up the weapon. Baker, in his bitterness, remarks on the "goings on" of Hypathia and Percival, and the latter, taking high ground, denies everything, and forces Baker, in fear of physical chastisement, to write a confession withdrawing his remarks. Mrs. Tarleton, however, who knew and loved Baker's mother, takes the poor clerk's part, and expresses her belief in the truth of his statements. The blame now falls on Percival, who asks Hypathia to explain that she made overtures to him, which the young lady declines to do. So in the end, therefore, he has to expose her in order to clear his character. Tarleton gives Baker a glass of sloe gin, the effect of which is to make him instantly aggressive, and to set him talking rabid Socialism about retribution and "the writing on the wall"; and he goes off saying he does not "give a damn" for anyone. Lina denounces the stuffiness of life at Hindhead, and the pre-occupation of the well-to-do with sexuality, and complains that almost every man in the house has made love to her—the weeping Bentley has become her slave since she carried him out by the scruff of his neck when he was in a fit of hysterics. She exalts the advantages of being a trapezist and earning one's own living, and departs, shaking the dust of Hindhead from her feet. Percival consents to be married to Hypathia if Tarleton senior will "come down" handsomely; and the piece ends.

The story was embellished with a number of arguments, observations, and jokes. The arguments were on the following subjects:—The difficulty of parents explaining sexual facts to their children; the restraint inflicted on middle-class girls by dull respectability; the objections to clerking as an occupation; the gulf in thought and feeling between youth and age; and many other topics too numerous to mention. The jokes were of various kinds and qualities, but most of them elicited laughs or titters. Tarleton senior's trick of referring to some well-known author in illustration of an argument always evoking a responsive roar. Scarcely a minute passed without a laugh, and sometimes the merriment was prolonged for several seconds. Misalliance was received with every evidence of success.

LYRIC
THEATRE.

22/2/1910

Orchestra
Stall.

E20

SICILIANS AT THE LYRIC.

Greeting of the most cordial character was given to the Sicilian actors who are revisiting London, and opened a four weeks' season at the Lyric on Tuesday. All the artists were warmly welcomed by a crowded house in which the foreign element was conspicuous, and it was quite a sight to see Signor Grasso, the lion of two years ago, take the stage and respond to the ovation in which British cheers were mingled with Italian bravos. The enthusiasm thus began was continued throughout the evening, and it is evident that Mr. Robert Arthur's enterprise in bringing our interesting neighbours again to these shores will be liberally rewarded.

For the opening piece reliance was placed on the three-act drama, by Angelo Guimera, entitled Feudalismo (Low Lands), which was seen during the season of the troupe at the house opposite last February twelvemonth. How a poor, simple-minded Catalonian shepherd marries a pretty peasant girl at the behest of the Squire; how he learns that his wife had been the mistress of the Squire; and how he waits upon that gentleman when he comes to renew his illicit intimacy and kills him by biting his throat is told with many thrills and constant rise and fall of emotions.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

TO-NIGHT, Thursday, February 24th, at 8 o'clock

CHARLES FROHMAN & ARTHUR BOURCHIER

PRESENT

THE TENTH MAN

A Play in Three Acts

BY

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

George Winter..	(M.P. for Middlepool) ..	Mr. BOURCHIER
Lord Francis Etchingham		Mr. EDMUND MAURICE
Lord Perigal		Mr. A. HOLMES-GORE
James Ford		Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Rt. Hon. Robert Colby, M.P.		Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Frederick Bennett		Mr. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Colonel Boyce (formerly in the Volunteers)..		Mr. FRANK ATHERLEY
Rev. William Swalecliffe		Mr. GEORGE BEALBY
Teddy O'Donnell		Mr. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Thompson		Mr. DALLAS CAIRNS
Lady Francis Etchingham		Miss KATE SERGEANTSON
Anne .. .. / Catherine Winter	her Daughters	Miss DAISY MARKHAM / Miss FRANCES DILLON

Acts I. and II. - The Drawing Room of Lord Francis Etchingham's House in Norfolk Street, Park Lane

Act III. - - - A Sitting Room in the Palace Hotel at Middlepool

In the Third Act the curtain will fall for two minutes, during which twelve hours are supposed to elapse.

Scenes by HARFORD. Dresses by BAROLET.

Programme of Music.

Musical Director—HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON.

1	OVERTURE ...	... "Gasperone"	...	Millöcker
2	HUNGARIAN SUITE	... ...	...	Michiels
3	MARCH ...	... "Bunch of Roses"	...	Chapi
	ENTR'ACTE ...	... "Sizilietta" (Celeste Solo)	...	Von Blon
	VALSE... ...	... "The Grenadiers"		Waldteufel

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30

Acting Manager ... / Stage Manager ... ... for Mr. Bourchier ... Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY / Mr. WILLIAM BURCHILL

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. W. LESTOCQ

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Mr. Charles Frohman and Mr. Arthur Bourchier deserve great credit for presenting Mr. W. Somerset Maugham's play. The Tenth Man is not only a strong and effective drama, admirably invented, constructed, and written; it is a piece with a thesis and a moral. The thesis is that while nine men out of ten have their prices, an obstacle in the way of the able and unscrupulous rascal will always be found in the tenth, who is incorruptible. The rascal in Mr. Maugham's play is George Winter, a self-made man who, from being a clerk in a "bucket-shop," has become a great company promoter and speculator. He has married Catherine, the daughter of Lord Francis Etchingham, a foolish old man who fancies he has a genius for finance, and has been taken by Winter into partnership. In the first act Catherine, who can endure Winter's glaring infidelity no longer, leaves him and returns to her father's house. She has fallen in love with a young politician named Robert Colby, and is resolved to divorce Winter and marry him.

But Winter explains that this course is out of the question. He has gained possession of a love-letter from Colby to Catherine; and he threatens, if she enters an action for divorce, to bring a counter action. As the seats of both Winter and Colby are held on precarious tenures the scandal which would follow would ruin both. Colby's whole soul is in politics, and he hopes to attain a high position in the Cabinet. So Catherine has to choose between bearing her fate as Winter's wife and spoiling the career of the man she loves. She takes the former course. When a deputation from the provincial town of Middlepool, for which Winter is M.P., arrives to demand from her a direct denial of any intention to divorce her husband, she gives the assurance at once.

The troubles of the Etchingham family are not at an end. Winter, in order to purchase a mine in Central America, has embezzled over £80,000 of Trust Bonds, and has made Lord Francie an innocent accomplice in the crime. The mine turns out to be worthless, and penal servitude stares Lord Francis, Winter, and his subservient clerk, Frederick Bennett, in the face. Lord Francis's first instinct is to go to Scotland Yard, but he is persuaded to keep quiet by Winter, who proceeds to turn the worthless mine into a company.

All these threads of interest are combined in the last act, which takes place in the private room of a provincial hotel, with the sound of trams passing periodically. Winter's election is going splendidly, when a London financial paper finds out that the mine is a swindle, and exposes Winter in a stinging article. A paragraph in this excites the suspicion of a hard, stern provincial man of business, James Ford, who is an exception to the rule that everyone can be bought at a price. He goes to London, looks into matters, and discovers the embezzlement. Winter, by bold "bluffing," has neutralised the effect of the article and has won his election by a narrow majority. When he finds that nothing can alter Ford's resolve, he poisons himself, and so the play ends.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.30.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE CLIMAX

A Play in Three Acts by

EDWARD LOCKE.

(By arrangement with JOSEPH WEBER.)

John Raymond	- - - -	GUY STANDING
Luigi Golfanti	- - - -	RUSS WHYTAL
Pietro Golfanti	- - - -	EFFINGHAM PINTO
	AND
Adelina Von Hagen	- - -	MARIE DORO

Scene - Luigi Golfanti's Studio, New York City.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Musical Director—Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

OVERTURE	"Die Felsenmuhle"	Reissiger
a. "BERCEUSE DE JOCELYN" ...	... ...	Godard
b. TARENTELLA IN A MINOR ...	... ...	Haines
c. "SALUT D'AMOUR	... ...	Elgar
a. "MEDITATION"	... ...	Gounod
b. "A CHINESE FESTIVAL" ...	... ...	Pickard
c. "SONG OF THE SOUL" ...	... ...	Brasil

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Business Manager - - -	(For Charles Frohman) -	JAMES W. MATHEWS
Stage Manager - - - - - -	-	CLIFFORD BROOKE

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls. 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows 4s Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager - - (illegible) - LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 26
Sole Lessee,
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
26/2/1910
STALL
H22
To be retained
DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, BELFAST, &c.

The Climax, which Mr. Charles Frohman presented at the Comedy Theatre on Saturday evening, is hardly strong enough to draw the London public, especially as Miss Marie Doro is a stranger to them; but it is surprising how much interest is created from the simple and rather scanty theme by the author's realistic and sincere treatment, and by the artistic acting of the performers. Mr. Edward Locke's play deals with the opposition between the domestic affections and the artistic temperament. Adelina von Hagen is a young girl from an American country town, who has "a voice," and is ambitious of operatic fame. She is living with an elderly teacher of music, Luigi Golfanti, and his son Pietro, a composer, in a shabby flat in New York. All three are poor; but Adelina is happy, for her hopes of success are strong. A young doctor named Raymond has fallen in love with her; but, engrossed in her dreams, she treats his affection as lightly as she does that of Pietro, who adores her hopelessly. A touch of originality is given to the piece in the fact that Adelian's singing-lessons are actually heard. Miss Marie Doro has an agreeable voice, and she cleverly mimics the errors and improvements of an earnest pupil. The Climax is altogether more realistic than most pieces of its kind, the representative of Pietro being a skilled pianist.

There is something the matter with Adelina's throat, and an operation is inevitable. Now Dr. John Raymond is absolutely convinced that the musical stage is no place for a good girl, and he implores Adelina to relinquish the object of her life, and marry him. She refuses to do anything of the kind; and the young doctor descends to deception. In the second act we find Adelina, after the operation, not allowed to talk, but anticipating a great improvement. But when she tries to sing, she finds that her high notes have "gone," and the doctor, deceiving her, leads her to believe that her voice is ruined permanently. She is so deeply distressed that she is going to stab herself, when she is prevented by Luigi.

In the last act Adelina has consented to marry Raymond, and is about to start for the church in her bridal dress, when she tries to sing, and finds that her voice is better than ever. She is rapturously delighted; and when Raymond confesses his deception, and is cursed by Luigi—and almost assassinated by Pietro—she refuses to marry the doctor. He goes out sorrowfully; but it appears from Adelina's reception of Luigi's remarks about the preciousness of love that a compromise may be arrived at.

Alhambra Theatre

CHARING CROSS ROAD AND LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON.

Managing Director—ALFRED MOUL.

The National Variety Theatre.

anager & Secretary, Woodford.
Treasurer, E. Corrick.
ge Manager, rence Hunt.

Maître de Ballet, Signor Alfredo Curti
Musical director, Geo. W. Byng.
Sub-Conductor and Leader Julian Jones.

PROGRAMME.

Subject to Alteration at the Discretion of the Management.

Programme for week commencing February 28th, 1910.

10.6 THE POLAR STAR 10.10

A NEW BALLET

Arranged and Produced by Miss ELISE CLERC.
Music composed by GEORGE W. BYNG.
Costumes by ALIAS from designs by COMELLI. Scenery by E. H. RYAN.
Master Machinist, A. WILLIAMS. Electric Effects by J. WARREN.
Properties by A. WILLIAMS and ALIAS. Wigs by GUSTAVE.

Susan, the Maid	Miss ELISE CLERC
Geoffrey (a young Explorer)	Miss JULIA SEALE
His Mother	Miss LOUIE BRYANT
His Father	Mr. TOM COVENTRY
His Chum	Miss G. EDWARDS
Page Boy	MASTER BERT CLERC
Baby Penguin / Young Eskimo	Miss RITA LEGGIERO
Stella's Father	Mr. R. VALLIS
STELLA ... AND	The Spirit of the Polar Star

Mlle. BRITTA

Supported by the ALHAMBRA CORPS DE BALLET.

SCENE I.—The Old Hall.

After the Ball—Meeting of Stella and Geoffray—Their Engagement forbidden unless Geoffrey can become famous—His vision of Stella, and departure for the Frozen Regions.
Housemaids and Footmen.—Flirtation Dance.
Eccentric Duo—Susan and Page Boy (Miss Elise Clerc and Master Bert Clerc).

SCENE II.—Geoffrey's Despair.

SCENE III.—Icebound.

Dance of Penguins.—Penguin Solo, Miss Rita Leggiero—
Geoffrey arrives exhausted—The Spirit of the Polar Star (Mlle. BRITTA) appears and rescues Geoffrey.
Dance of the "Spirits of the Ice"
Arrival of Geoffrey's Parents—Dance of Eskimos—
Solo, Eccentric Penguin Dance.
Pas Seul. Mlle. BRITTA.
FINALE.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager - - - - CHARLES FROHMAN.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

OLD FRIENDS,

By J. M. BARRIE.

THE SENTIMENTALISTS,

By GEORGE MEREDITH.

THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK,

By J. M. BARRIE.

TUESDAY, 1st MARCH, 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, MARCH 1st, at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN presents

OLD FRIENDS.

A Play in One Act, by J. M. BARRIE.
Produced by DION BOUCICAULT.

STEPHEN BRAND	SYDNEY VALENTINE
MRS. BRAND	LENA ASHWELL
CARRY	DOROTHY MINTO
REV. J. CARROLL	HUBERT HARBEN

THE SENTIMENTALISTS,

An unfinished Comedy by GEORGE MEREDITH.
Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

HOMEWARE	DENNIS EADIE
ARDEN	CHARLES MAUDE
SWYTHIN	HUBERT HARBEN
OSIER	LEWIS CASSON
PROFESSOR SPIRAL	C. E. VERNON
ASTRAEA	FAY DAVIS
LYRA	MARY JERROLD
DAME DRESDEN	MAY WHITTY
VIRGINIA	PENELOPE WHEELER
WINIFRED	SYBIL THORNDIKE
LADY OLDLACE	EVA KILLICK

A Garden - The first scene in the morning.
The second in the evening.

The Dresses designed by WILLIAM ROTHENSTEIN and made by L. & H. NATHAN.
The Scene designed by NORMAN WILKINSON and painted by W. T. HEMSLEY.

THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK.

A Comedy in One Act, by J. M. BARRIE.
Produced by DION BOUCICAULT.

SIR HARRY SIMS	EDMUND GWENN
LADY SIMS	MARY BARTON
KATE	LENA ASHWELL
TOMBES	C. C. CALVERT

"OLD FRIENDS."

Stephen Brand .....Mr. Sydney Valentine
Mrs. Brand .....Miss Lena Ashwell
Carry .....Miss Dorothy Minto
Rev. J. Carroll .....Mr. Hubert Harben

This was a gruesome and impressive dramatic homily on heredity, and the descent of the sins of the fathers upon the children. Stephen Brand, now sober and prosperous, was at one time a moderate, but steady, drinker. A clerk in an office, he knew exactly how much he could take without preventing him from turning up at 9 a.m. with a clear head for work; and for years he thus cultivated the vice of alcoholism until it had entered into his blood. The result is that his daughter Carry has in her an irresistible desire for drink; and when Brand locks up the liquor in a cabinet in the hall Carry comes downstairs in her nightdress, steals the keys from her father's pocket as he sits asleep in his armchair, and is about to procure drink when Brand wakes up and discovers her. After trying in vain to screen herself by lying, Carry confesses to an irresistible craving for drink. Mrs. Brand, who knows all about Brand's past intemperance, has concealed it from her daughter; but Brand insists that Carry shall know all. He declares that he has conquered his vice; but Mrs. Brand tells him, rather cruelly perhaps, that he deceives himself—his vice left him instead of his vanquishing it. However, they agree to watch Carry night and day in the hope that her tendency may be overcome.

"THE SENTIMENTALISTS."

Homeware .....Mr. Dennis Eadie
Arden .....Mr. Charles Maude
Swythin .....Mr. Hubert Harben
Osier .....Mr. Lewis Casson
Professor Spiral .....Mr. C. E. Vernon
Astræa .....Miss Fay Davis
Lyra .....Miss Mary Jerrold
Dame Dresden .....Miss May Whitty
Virginia .....Miss Penelope Wheeler
Winifred .....Miss Sybil Thorndike
Lady Oldface .....Miss Eva Killick

George Meredith's style is better suited to the printed book, in the perusal of which it is possible to pause and appreciate the quaint felicities of expression, than to the acted play in which the rapid continuation of the delivery of the author's lines causes much of the literary merit to be lost. The delicate flavour of the piece was quite perceptible, but one could not help feeling that a "book of the words" or a slower delivery, and even an exaggerated distinctness of enunciation would have revealed even more of the beauties of the text. The "vehicle" of the stage performance seemed, somehow, inadequate in the case of an author of so much preciosité. Arden, a poetical and ardent young man, is in love with the beautiful widow, Astræa, who is inclined to remain faithful to her husband's memory. Arden pleads his suit earnestly, and the comedy is created by the contrast between the artificially high plane on which she keeps the discussion and the natural and quite feminine feelings which eventually, so we are led to hope, will secure the success of Arden's suit, one of the most effective influences to that end being the fact that the company at the country house where she is staying have seen her and Arden in attitudes suggesting loving converse.

"THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK."

Sir Harry Sims .....Mr. Edmund Gwenn
Lady Sime .....Miss Mary Barton
Kate .....Miss Lena Ashwell
Tombes .....Mr. C. C. Calvert

The Twelve-Pound Look was both humorous and sarcastic, and was heartily enjoyed. Sir Harry Sims is a successful man of business of the brutal type. When the play commences he is rehearsing, with his submissive wife, the ceremony of knighthood, which honour is about to be conferred on him as a rich and influential personage. He is completely self-satisfied, dense, and narrow-minded. He has ordered a type-writer to come to the house, to prepare copies of a letter which he is sending out saying how unexpected was the honour which he has received, and Lady Sims, after a talk with the "young person," leaves her and Sir Harry together. Sixteen years since there was an episode in Sir Harry's life which he has almost forgotten. His wife, Kate, the daughter of a country clergyman, left him suddenly and mysteriously in circumstances which allowed him to divorce her. It was never known with whom she had eloped, and Sir Harry is still in ignorance when she turns up with her typewriter to make the copies. After ridiculing him merrily, Kate tells him that she went off, quite by herself, in sheer weariness of the life led by him and his rich, dull associates. For some time, she explains, she wore a "twelve-pound look," as she had resolved that only when she had earned that sum by her own labours could she take the step of leaving her husband. Sir Harry is enraged at being "chaffed," and is still less pleased when his present wife, whom he keeps in a state of sad subjection, seems to envy the typewriter her cheerfulness and liberty.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Ltd.
Managing Director ... ... HENRY R. SMITH.
Chairman ... ... FRED. W. CARPENTER.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

Saturday, March 5th, 1910, and every Evening at 8

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2.30

THE FIGHTING CHANCE

BY

EDWARD FERRIS & B. P. MATTHEWS.

Characters.

Stephen Blanchard (the General's Brother) - Mr. Frederick Ross
Captain Jim Blanchard (the General's Son) - Mr. Robert Minster
Captain Philip Rivers (Jim's Cousin) - - Mr. Eric Mayne
General Sir Christopher Blanchard, G.C.B. - Mr. Arthur Royston
Dr. John Vorland, R.M.C.S. . - - - Mr. Halliwell Hobbes
Colonel Paget - - - - - - Mr. Geo. P. Poisson
Captain Fraser (of the Gordons) - - Mr. Cecil Kinnaird
Lieutenant Chisholm (of the Guides) - - Mr. Cecil Saunders
Lieutenant Brabazon (of Jim's Regiment) - Mr. Hastings Lynn
Lieutenant Neyland (of Jim's Regiment) - Mr. Vivian Gilbert
Larry O'Brien (General's Soldier Servant) - Mr. Hubert Willis
His Highness the Maharajah of Daulatpore - Mr. A. V. Bramble
Izra Mahomet Khan (Chief of the Tongiris) - Mr. Percy Rhodes
Yasseen Khan (his Brother) - - - - Mr. Frank George
Ali Khan - } (Headmen of the Darelis) { Mr. Sidney Vautier
Yussif Beg - } { Mr. Edward Pollard
Native Hospital Orderly - - - - Mr. Wilton James
Sergeant - - - - - - - - Mr. Frank Stone
Joan Fieldi ng - - - - Miss Phyllis Relph
Mrs. Effie Mackintosh - - - - - Miss Blanche Stanley
Mrs. Vanstart .. - - - - - Miss Mary Forbes
Marjorie Vorland - - - - - - Miss Marjorie Chard
Ethel Hardy - - - - - - - Miss Ruth Maitland

Guests, Native Servants, Soldiers, and Tribesmen.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.

Reception Room at General Blanchard's town house. Evening.

ACT II.

Morning Room, General Blanchard's house. Next morning.

ACT III.

Officers' Room in Native Fort at Ghizeh, on the Indian Frontier. Evening, a year later.

ACT IV.

In the Shundar Pass. Night.

The Scenery Designed and Painted by E. C. NICHOLLS, and Assistants.

The Military Uniforms by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN.

The Dresses designed and executed by Madame STAFFORD, Lyceum Theatre.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. SULLIVAN BROOKE, will play selections in the intervals, as per list overleaf.

Manager and Treasurer	Mr. W. F. CROWE
Stage Manager	Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG

Box Office (EDWARD HACKETT) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard

Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Dress Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. (Reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The Fighting Chance, up to the end of the second act, is a model of construction, and in its entirety the piece is an example of popular melodrama. The authors, however, have not obeyed the rule of melodrama—and, indeed, of all drama—to contrive to keep the hero, heroine, and villain before the audience up to the end of the play. The hero of The Fighting Chance almost disappears in the third act; and the villain, who is usually allowed to live and develop his wicked schemes until about a quarter to eleven is prematurely cut off in so pitiful a plight that a reaction almost takes place in his favour in the hearts of the audience. The play, however, is full of dramatic movement, and its merits decidedly outweigh its defects. We start with the always effective motive of jealousy to urge the villain on his path of crime. Captain Philip Rivers is in love with Ethel Hardy; but she prefers his cousin, Jim Blanchard, whom Rivers at once resolves to ruin. He has already played false with Joan Fielding, the fiancée of Stephen Blanchard, the brother of the General of the regiment. The girl was placed in Rivers's care by her sweetheart when he went abroad; and he seduced her. Rivers manages to put upon Jim a false charge of cheating at cards, and the young man is forced to send in his papers just as the regiment is ordered on active service. However, he determines to enlist and trust to time to clear his character. He departs, and Rivers persuades Stephen that Jim is Joan's seducer.

In the third act we are on the Indian frontier with an English regiment in a fort, surrounded by natives whom Rivers's cruelty has raised to the point of rebellion. Rivers insists on the execution of a prominent Tongiri on very uncertain proofs of guilt; but the fellow escapes, and news comes that Joan and Ethel, who have become military nurses, have been captured by the natives, and will be tortured unless Rivers is handed over to them to be dealt with instead. Stephen, who has also been captured, and has been cruelly tortured, is sent to the fort with this ultimatum. Rivers, however, cannot face the prospect, and shoots himself, after confessing his villainies.

But Jim Blanchard, in order to gain time, dresses up as Rivers, and is brought by an escort with a flag of truce to the Tongiris in the Shundar Pass. Anxiety is strained to the utmost, till at last the British troops arrive to the rescue. There is a spirited combat, and much firing; but in the end the Tongiris are vanquished, and General Blanchard clasps his son's hand with pride.

"LADY BETTY."

Comedietta, in One Act, by F. E. Fretwell, Produced at the Royalty on Monday, Feb. 14.

Lady Betty Fountaine ..... Miss May Congdon
Pamela ..... Miss Ely Malyon
Eustace ..... Master Wm. H. Brown
Lord Altringham ..... Mr. Douglas Gordon

Those unconscionable fathers of the eighteenth century who were limned in the novels of Fielding, Fanny Burney, and Richardson, and in the comedies of Sheridan, were always so anxious to assure the matrimonial future of their daughters and sons that one is tempted to ask whether any of them ever thought that Cupid could be held in leash by clauses in wills or by parental customary. The joining of family estates was often a pretext for the betrothal of children, and though a journey to Gretna Green of two runaway lovers oft upset the expectations of ancient families, the romance incidental to the elopement formed the basis of many a legitimacy trial and many a comedy. It is the eighteenth century atmosphere that tinctures the slight imbroglio of Lady Betty, produced on Monday at the Royalty. The lovers in this case are sisters' children, who have been betrothed from an early age. They are not to see each other again until of age, and then if each takes a fancy to the other a marriage will be arranged. Lord Altringham, who is a strategist apparently in love affairs, tries to hide his identity by assuming the character of his manservant, Miles Wentworth. But my Lady Betty's ruse soon exposes the deception, and his mistress, in a temporary fit of pique, passes herself off as her maid, Pamela. This pretty little game of cross purposes cannot last long, and my lord is more attracted by the new maid's simplicity of manner—natural to my lady—than by the assumed disdain of the masquerading Pamela, who affects a liking for the excitements of town life, which is quite foreign to Lady Betty. Mutual confessions end the misunderstandings, and the little piece ends in the conventional manner.

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensee] DEAN STREET, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W. [Mr. Tom B. Davis.

MONDAY, MARCH 7th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30

(FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF PERFORMANCES)

THE WAY THE MONEY GOES

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS

BY LADY BELL

The Persons of the Play in order of their appearance.

Mrs. Riggs	Miss AGNES HILL
Mrs. Holroyd	Miss HELEN HAYE
Mrs. Tarlton	Miss MAY CONGDON
Slark	REGINALD DANE
Mrs. Burrows	Miss MABEL ADAIR
Mrs. Smithson	Miss ESTELLE STEAD
Mrs. Dale	Miss L. M. REVELL
Mrs. Molony	Miss EILY MALYON
A Policeman	ALFRED HARDING
John Holroyd	H. NYE CHART
Vincent	DOUGLAS GORDON
Sally Holroyd	Miss EVELYN KIRKBY
Jack Holroyd	GUY HELBROUGH
A Hawker	D. J. WILLIAMS
Mary Ann Jones	Miss MAY KENDAL
Mrs. Jones	Miss HELEN BOUCHER
Tom Tarlton	FRANK COCHRANE
Jim Bates	HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Yock Denny	REGINALD DANE
A County Court Bailiff	HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Newspaper Boy	WILLIAM H. BROWN

Men and Women in Crowd.

ACT I.		A Street in a Manufacturing Town. Friday Morning.
ACT II.	Scene 1	Mrs. Holroyd's and Mrs. Tarlton's Cottages. Friday Evening.
	Scene 2	A Street on the Borders of the Town. Saturday Afternoon.
ACT III.		Mrs. Holroyd's Cottage. Six Months later.

The Play Produced by E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS.

MATINEES THURSDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

During the Evening Selections will be played by a Quintette under the direction of WALTER B. NORRIS.

PRICES: Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s., and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 5s. Upper Circle, 4s.
Pit (unreserved), 2s. 6d. Gallery (unreserved), 1s. Seats may now be Booked. Doors open at 8.

Stage Manager ... ... VAL CUTHBERT | Business Manager ... ... E. TAYLOR PLATT

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF A. E. DRINKWATER.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

THE MADRAS HOUSE,

A COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS.

BY

GRANVILLE BARKER.

WEDNESDAY. 9th MARCH. 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

TO-NIGHT. WEDNESDAY. MARCH 9th, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

THE MADRAS HOUSE,

A Comedy, in Four Acts, by GRANVILLE BARKER.

Produced by the Author.

Henry Huxtable ...	E. W. GARDEN
Catherine Huxtable ...	FLORENCE HAYDON
Laura Huxtable ...	ADA MARIUS
Minnie Huxtable ...	ELIZABETH CHESNEY
Clara Huxtable ...	JOY CHATWYN
Julia Huxtable ...	VICTORIA ADDISON
Emma Huxtable ...	SYBIL THORNDIKE
Jane Huxtable ...	NELL CARTER
Major Hippisley Thomas ...	CHARLES BRYANT
Philip Madras... ...	DENNIS EADIE
Jessica Madras ...	FAY DAVIS
Constantine Madras ...	SYDNEY VALENTINE
Amelia Madras ...	MAY WHITTY
Eustace Perrin State ...	ARTHUR WHITBY
Marion Yates ...	MARY JERROLD
Mr. Brigstock ...	LEWIS CASSON
Mrs. Brigstock ...	MARY BARTON
Miss Chancellor ...	GERALDINE OLLIFFE
Mr. Windlesham ...	CHARLES MAUDE
Mr. Belhaven ...	DONALD CALTHROP
Three Mannequins ...	ASTA FLEMING, MAIR VAUGHAN, MARY BRENDA
A Maid at Denmark Hill ...	MILLIE EMDEN
A Maid at Phillimore Gardens	EVANGELINE HILLIARD

Act I.	Denmark Hill.
Act II.	Roberts & Huxtable's.
Act III.	The Madras House.
Act IV.	Phillimore Gardens.

One of the most successful of Mr. Charles Frohman's presentments at the Duke of York's Theatre is certainly The Madras House, which was received by a delighted audience on Wednesday last with almost uproarious delight. According to the most up-to-date fashion in plays, it is somewhat straggling in construction, and consists chiefly of discussions; but the conversations are so humorous, the situations are so odd, and the characters so cleverly sketched, that no one could wish the piece other than it is. The Madras House is a satire on modern feminism and an essay in favour of polygamy. We are first shown the consequences of monogamy in actual life. Mr. Huxtable, an old-fashioned tradesman, partner in the great firm of Roberts and Huxtable, milliners and dressmakers, is seen in his home at Denmark Hill, with his garrulous elderly wife and six unmarried daughters. The first act is devoted to depicting the dullness of the family and the soured resignation of the girls. An enthusiastic American, Eustace Perrin State, has made an offer for the business called "The Madras House"; and Mr. Huxtable is considering whether he ought to attend a meeting for negotiations, at which he is certain to meet his brother, Constantine Madras, with whom he has for long not been on speaking terms. Constantine is a philosopher, and he has turned Mohammedan, separated from his wife Amelia, and started a harem on the Euphrates. Old Huxtable is also worried about another matter. One of the employees at the Madras House, Marion Yates, is enceinte. The matron of the establishment, Miss Chancellor, has seen a salesman, Mr. Brigstock, kissing Miss Yates, and when that lady's condition is discovered, suspicion falls on Brigstock, who, by the way, is entirely innocent.

All this prepares us for a most amusing second act, in which Philip Madras, one of the partners, holds a formal enquiry into the Marion Yates affair. The scene is very diverting, with the unbending respectability of Miss Chancellor, the hysterical violence of Mrs. Brigstock, who demands a public apology for the slur on her husband's character, and the bright originality of Miss Yates, who is unashamed and impenitent, and resolved not to disclose the name of her companion. In the end matters are smoothed over after some very droll altercation.

In the third act a meeting is held to negotiate the sale of the Madras House to State. It becomes a kind of symposium. State is an exuberant and eccentric personage, a poetical man of business, who pours forth conventional sentiment by the yard, but his scheme of a new establishment in a great provincial town, at which the ladies are all served by handsome young athletes, and the men by well-mannered and attractive girls, is, he says, a great success. After State has had his say—and, though verbose, he is always amusing—and the pretty mannequins have displayed the latest fashions, some of which have been invented by notorious foreign cocottes, Constantine Madras holds forth against the feminisation of modern society, and praises highly the Mahommedan system. He points out to Huxtable how much better for him it would be if he could get one man to take all his daughters off his hands; and says that the whole system of modern female adornment is one of sexual allurement and irritation. Eventually the talk ends, and the sale of the business is concluded. In the last act Philip Madras, whose friend Major Hippisley Thomas, a married man with a family, has asked Philip, as a favour, not to invite him to his—Philip's—house so much, as he—Thomas—feels certain that he will end by making love to Mrs. Madras, tells his wife what Thomas has said. She is at first very angry; but she admits that, when she has been bored at times she has flirted with the Major, and the act ends with a serious conversation between her and Philip, in which he says that social reform and not self-indulgence should be the object of all humane and educated people. The act ends with a better understanding between the couple.

SAVOY THEATRE.

Manager - - - - - - - - - - Mr. C. H. WORKMAN.

THURSDAY, MARCH 10th, 1910,

And Every Evening at 8.15,

A new Musical Play

In Two Acts, entitled

TWO MERRY MONARCHS

The Book by ARTHUR ANDERSON and GEORGE LEVY.
Lyrics by ARTHUR ANDERSON and HARTLEY CARRICK.
Music by ORLANDO MORGAN.

Rolandyl ...	Postmaster-General and Assessor of Taxes	Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
King Paul of Esperanto	... ...	Mr. ROBERT WHYTE, Junr.
King Utops of Utopia	... ...	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
Prince Charmis ...	(Governor of Police)	... Mr. ROLAND CUNNINGHAM
Helvanoise	(a Herald)	... Mr. LESLIE STILES
Mandamus ..	(Lord Chief Justice of Utopia)	Mr. NEVILLE GEORGE
Head Flunkey	(at the Palace)	... Mr. FRANCIS PATER
Princess Cynthia	(adopted Daughter of King Paul)	Miss DAISY LE HAY
Iris	(Principal Lady-in-Waiting)	Miss ALMA BARBER
Caroline... ...	(a Public Agitator)	... Miss MAYNE YOUNG
Dorothy...	Ladies-in-Waiting to Princess Cynthia	Miss AILEEN PEEL
Hermia ...		Miss MARIE WEST
Gretchen		Miss LAURIE OPPERMAN
Jean ...		Miss JOAN ADAIR
Carmenita		Miss BETTY HEAPS
Celeste ...		Miss ADELINE WATERLOW

Trumpeters ... Messrs. BROWNE and FRENCH.

Chorus of Populace, Flunkeys, Utopian Bodyguard, Wreath Bearers, Guests, etc.

Messrs. Edward Arundell, Arthur Bourne, Rix Curtis, George Gregson, Jack Hulcup, Frank Melville, Leslie Owen, Harold Slade, Henry Sanders, Alexander Sinclair, Walter Scollick, Fred Tooze, and Frank Walsh.

Mesdames Violet Beryl, Gwladys Clarke, Mona Campbell, Ella Daincourt, Belle Fairley, Ruby Gray, Norah Gourlay, Dolly Germaine, Ray Golden, Yvonne Ingram, Josset Legh, Vivien Maxwell, Eveline Pearce, Elsie Reamer, Kathleen Severn, Ruth Trafford, Fay Temple, Maidee Tomlinson, Ivy Vernon, and Dora Woodroffe.

ACT I. ... COURTYARD OUTSIDE THE ROYAL PALACE AT ESPERANTO (Alfred Terraine)

ACT II. ... ANTEROOM TO THE BALLROOM AT THE PALACE (McCleery)

There will be an interval of 15 minutes between the Acts.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY AUSTEN HURGON.

The Dresses designed by PERCY ANDERSON.

Ladies' Costumes in Act I. and the Gentlemen's in Acts I. and II. executed by Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8 King Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

The Ladies' Dresses in Act II. by Madame NETTLESHIP, 28 & 30 Wigmore Street.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

Properties by J. FRASER.

Musical Director	Mr. T. Silver.
Stage Manager	Mr. W. Simms Bull.
Assistant Acting Manager	Mr. Bernard L. Braithwaite.

Private Boxes, £5 5s., £3 3s., and £2 2s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; First Circle (Reserved), Front Row 5s., other Rows 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office (Mr. R. Weaver) open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.

Telegrams, "NEWSAVO, LONDON." Telephone 2602 Gerrard.

Please note that Carriages must set down and take up at the Embankment Entrance of the Theatre.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.15.

Extract from Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play-bill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of each performance by all exit and entrance Doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Business Manager .. .. .. Mr. Harry P. Towers.

The story of Two Merry Monarchs is of one King Paul of Esperanto, who, nearly a thousand years since, discovered the elixir of life. His assistant in his alchemical studies was one Utops, who also partook of the drug which endows the drinker with longevity. Paul determines to put Utops out of the way, and so invents a plan which is ingenious if a little uncertain in the working out. He inoculates his daughter Cynthia so thoroughly with a certain deadly poison that anyone kissing her must die. Paul then puts forth an edict strictly forbidding oculation in his kingdom for a year. Then Utops is betrothed to Cynthia, Paul's expectation being that, when the fiancées meet and embrace, Utops will fall down dead.

But the handsome young Governor of Police, Prince Charmis, is in love with Cynthia, and she with him; and when Utops comes to Esperanto to claim his promised bride, and is going to kiss her, Charmis steps forward, and, in the name of the law, prevents the oculation. The story becomes less easy to follow as the play proceeds; indeed, it serves as a thread on which to string musical numbers, dances, and dialogue. It is, however, necessary to mention that Rolandyl, Postmaster-General and Assessor of Taxes of Esperanto, and the confidant of all King Paul's trickeries and villainies, pervades the piece like a kind of Puck, enjoying the troubles and annoyances of others, and playing his own game in a most amusing manner.

NEW THEATRE

On SATURDAY, March 12th, 1910, and Every Evening at 8.

THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL

By BARONESS ORCZY and MONTAGUE BARSTOW.

Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.)	Mr. PHILLIP MERIVALE
Sir Percy Blakeney	Mr. FRED TERRY
Sir Andrew Ffoulkes ..	Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Lord Anthony Dewhurst ..	MALCOLM CHERRY
Lord Grenville	Mr. J. L. DALE
Chauvelin (French Envoy) ..	Mr. HORACE HODGES
The Comte de Tourna ..	Mr. H. HUMBERSTON WRIGHT
The Vicomte de Tournai	Mr. R. EASTEN PICKERING
Armand St. Just	Mr. MAURICE ELVEY
Hebert	Mr. WALTER EDWIN
Jellyband (Landlord of the "Fisherman's Rest")	Mr. FREDERICK GROVES
Jimmy Pitkin	Mr. NORMAN YATES
Harry Waite	Mr. GUY CUNNINGHAM
Brogard (Landlord of the "Lion d'Or")	Mr. J. CARTER EDWARDS
Captain of the Guard ..	Mr. HERMANN GRIFFITHS
Mr. Hempseed	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Servant	Mr. GOODWIN NOCK
Aristocrat	Mr. KNOTT CUMMING
Chepy	Mr. WALTER ARMSTRONG
Citizen	Mr. BROUGHTY FERRIE
Messenger	Mr. HUGHBERT DANE
The Comtesse de Tournai	Miss CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT
Suzanne de Tournai ..	Miss EILEEN BEATRICE
Sally Jellyband	Miss DORA JESSLYN
Mere Brogard	Miss MARION STERLING
Lady Portarles	Miss STUART INNES
Lady Blakeney	Miss MIRIAM LEWES

Guests, Citizens, Soldiers, Servants.

Misses Montague, Jennings, Manning, Haase, Stewart, Vanderzee, Gardner; Messrs. Tosh, Parker, Drayton.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I., Scene 1. The West Barricade, Paris. Scene 2. "The Fisherman's Rest," Dover.

ACT II. ... ... Lord Grenville's Ball, London

ACT III. (The Next Afternoon) ... ... Sir Percy and Lady Blakeney's House, Richmond

ACT IV. ... ... The "Lion d'Or," near Calais

(FIVE DAYS ELAPSE).

PERIOD 1792.

An Interval of Ten Minutes between each Act.

The Dance in the Second Act arranged by Mr. JOHN D'AUBAN.
Scenery by R. C. MCCLEERY.

The Costumes by Messrs. J. HARRISON & Co., Ltd.
Wigs &c., by CLARKSON.

The Play produced under the Direction of Mr. FRED TERRY.
The entire Music for the Play specially written by Mr. RAYMOND ROZE.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

THE PLAYHOUSE
MA

15/3/1910

Orch. Stall

H 16

This to be retained

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will produce, by arrangement with Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN, for a SERIES OF SIX MATINEES at Three o'clock, on

TUESDAYS: March 15th, April 5th and 12th
THURSDAYS: March 17th, 31st and April 7th

A New and Original Play, in Three Acts, called

"THE TOYMAKER OF NUREMBERG"

By AUSTIN STRONG

THE TOYMAKER	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
THE SERGEANT	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE By permission of Gilbert Porteous, Esq.
THE OLD ACTOR	Mr. FRED LEWIS
THE STRANGER	Mr. A. HOLMES GORE By permission of Arthur Bourchier, Esq.
THE BOY	Mr. SHIEL BARRY By permission of Sir H. Beerbohm Tree
THE BOY'S FRIEND	Master BOBBIE ANDREWS
THE EMPLOYER	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN By permission of H. B. Irving, Esq.
THE LAMPLIGHTER	Mr. M. WETHERELL
THE STREET CLEANER	Mr. C. B. KESTON
THE SENTRY	Mr. A. G. ONSLOW
THE AUCTIONEER	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
THE MOTHER	Miss ELSIE CHESTER
THE GIRL	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
THE COOK	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS

Children, Girls, Soldiers, etc.

The Scene is laid in Nuremberg. Time: The Present.

ACT I. .. Scene I. Outside the Walled Garden.
Scene II. The Toymaker's.
ACT II. .. Inside the Walled Garden.
ACT III. ... The Toymaker's again.

The Incidental Music and Songs composed by Mr. JOHN ANSELL.

Preceded at Each Matinee, at 2.30, by

THALES and Mlle. MASSILIA

(Of Le Grand Guignol and Les Capucines, Paris)

In a Wordless Play, with Music, called "A HAPPY MISTAKE."

Mr. Austin Strong's pretty play has a flavour of Dickens, when the sentimental stop was out; and Mr. Strong almost out-Dickenses Dickens in the supreme simplicity of some of his characters. But the system of trusting to the sympathy of an audience with the weak and affectionate, with the poetical and the improvident, is generally successful; and it certainly was so on Tuesday afternoon, when many present at the Playhouse were "visibly affected," and pocket-handkerchiefs were freely used during the sad scenes. Mr. Strong has done his work very cleverly. He has given Mr. Cyril Maude a splendid part; and he has contrived a little pathetic poem with great ingenuity. By placing the locality of his piece in Nuremberg, a city of associations, he has added to the effect of his poetic inventions; and the expedient by which he saves his simple folk from the results of their foolishness is excellent.

An old Toymaker has been all his life making dolls, when his employer, who is only the middleman between the maker and a big toy merchant in Kansas City, who is known as the "Teddy-Bear King," wants the old man to leave off making dolls and do bears. The Toymaker at first refuses, but yields when he learns that his son is in love with the Employer's daughter. Of course, when the Employer hears of it, he denies his consent; and when two of the Toymaker's friends, an old Sergeant and an elderly actor, pawn their most cherished possessions to raise funds to enable the young couple to elope, the Employer flies into a furious rage, denounces the Toymaker—who has refused to be a party to the elopement scheme—and takes away his "job." Then, in the last act, just as the Toymaker and his son are preparing to go out to America and make their fortunes, who should arrive from Kansas City but the great Teddy-Bear King, who is the Toymaker's elder son, and the "boss" of the Employer, and soon sets matters right. And after a couple of hours of charming, amusing unreality, the piece ends.

TELEPHONES:
14042 } CENTRAL 14043 }
3970 GERRARD

LESSEE AND MANAGER Mr. Cyril Maude. THE PLAYHOUSE NORTHUMBERLAND AVENUE W.

Every Evening at 8.30. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

"Tantalizing Tommy"
"Laughter all the way."—Daily Telegraph.
CYRIL MAUDE
KENNETH DOUGLAS and MARIE LÖHR.

Special Matinees every Tuesday & Thursday at 3
"THE TOYMAKER OF NUREMBERG."
"A delightful blend of fantasy, pathos and humour."
Daily Mirror.
CYRIL MAUDE
J. D. BEVERIDGE, ELSIE CHESTER
A. HOLMES-GORE, MARGERY MAUDE

MR. CYRIL MAUDE
Caricature by Miss Margery Maude.

CYRIL MAUDE AS "THE TOYMAKER"
Caricature by Miss Margery Maude.
MILES, PRINTERS, LONDON.

BOX OFFICE OPEN 10 to 10. All Seats, including Gallery, can be booked.

T.R.D.L.

26/3/1910

Retain this portion which is the Voucher for One Seat only and does not admit to the Theatre.

Row	No.
D	7

Orches. Stall

DRURY LANE THEATRE.

On Saturday, March 26, Revival of the Drama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, entitled

"THE WHIP."

Rev. Verner Haslam .....Mr. Basil Gill
Tom Lambert .....Mr. George Barrett
Captain Grenville Sartorys .....Mr. Cyril Keightley
Hubert, Earl of Brancaster .....Mr. Vincent Clive
Joe Kelly .....Mr. Charles Rock
The Marquis of Beverley .....Mr. Alfred Bucklaw
Harry Anson .....Mr. Cecil Cameron
Tom Foster .....Mr. Austin G. Melford
Captain Rayner .....Mr. Charles Blackall
The Hon. Mrs. Beamish..Miss Fanny Brough
Lady Diana Sartorye ....Miss Jessie Bateman
Mrs. D'Aquila .....Miss Nancy Price
Myrtle Anson .....Miss Madge Fabian
Lady Antrobus .....Miss May Warley

Mr. Arthur Collins revived The Whip at Drury Lane Theatre on Saturday evening with a success

Diary

Herbert Beerbohm Tree

begs to announce

The Sixth Year of the

London Shakespeare Festival

28th March to 30th April, 1910

His Majesty's Theatre

London Shakespeare Festival, 1910.

Committee.

F. R. BENSON.
ARTHUR BOURCHIER.
MARTIN HARVEY.
H. B. IRVING.
CYRIL MAUDE.
WILLIAM POEL.
OTHO STUART.
FRED TERRY.
HERBERT TRENCH.
LEWIS WALLER.
Mrs. KENDAL.
Miss ELLEN TERRY.
HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE (Chairman)

Stage Manager—Cecil King Associate Stage Manager—Stanley Bell

Musical Director—Adolf Schmid

General Manager . . . HENRY DANA

London Shakespeare Festival [Second Week

Monday April 4 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor	HENRY AINLEY, HUBERT CARTER, W. G. FAY, LYN HARDING, WILLIAM HAVILAND, C. H. CROKER-KING, NIGEL PLAYFAIR, E. M. ROBSON, EDWARD SASS, JULES SHAW, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, Miss IRIS HOEY, Miss KATE PHILLIPS, Miss ELLEN TERRY, Lady TREE
Tuesday April 5 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor
Wednesday April 6 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor
Thursday April 7 Afternoon	Twelfth Night	HENRY AINLEY, SHIEL BARRY, HUBERT CARTER, NORMAN FORBES, GERALD LAWRENCE, EDWARD SASS, FRED TERRY, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, Miss ESMÉ HUBBARD, Miss PHILLIDA TERSON, Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS
Thursday April 7 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor
Friday April 8 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor	HENRY AINLEY, HUBERT CARTER, W. G. FAY, LYN HARDING, WILLIAM HAVILAND, C. H. CROKER-KING, NIGEL PLAYFAIR, E. M. ROBSON, EDWARD SASS, JULES SHAW, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, Miss IRIS HOEY, Miss KATE PHILLIPS, Miss ELLEN TERRY, Lady TREE
Saturday April 9 Afternoon	Merry Wives of Windsor
Saturday April 9 Evening	Twelfth Night	HENRY AINLEY, SHIEL BARRY, HUBERT CARTER, GERALD LAWRENCE, EDWARD SASS, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, Miss ESMÉ HUBBARD, Miss PHILLIDA TERSON, Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS

London Shakespeare Festival [First Week

Monday March 28 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor	HENRY AINLEY, HUBERT CARTER, W. G. FAY, LYN HARDING, WILLIAM HAVILAND, C. H. CROKER-KING, NIGEL PLAYFAIR, E. M. ROBSON, EDWARD SASS, JULES SHAW, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, Miss IRIS HOEY, Miss KATE PHILLIPS, Miss ELLEN TERRY, Lady TREE
Tuesday March 29 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor
Wednesday March 30 Afternoon	Merry Wives of Windsor
Wednesday March 30 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor
Thursday March 31 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor
Friday April 1 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor
Saturday April 2 Afternoon	Julius Cæsar	HENRY AINLEY, SHIEL BARRY, J. W. BRAITHWAITE, HUBERT CARTER, LYN HARDING, WILLIAM HAVILAND, EDWARD SASS, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, Miss ELINOR FOSTER, Miss IRIS HOEY, Miss EVELYN MILLARD
Saturday April 2 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor	HENRY AINLEY, HUBERT CARTER, W. G. FAY, LYN HARDING, WILLIAM HAVILAND, C. H. CROKER-KING, NIGEL PLAYFAIR, E. M. ROBSON, EDWARD SASS, JULES SHAW, HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, Miss IRIS HOEY, Miss KATE PHILLIPS, Miss ELLEN TERRY, Lady TREE

London Shakespeare Festival [Fourth Week

Monday April 18 Evening	The Taming of the Shrew	F. R. Benson, Mrs. Benson and their Shakespearean Company Alfred Brydone — H. O. Nicholson Murray Carrington — Miss Elinor Aickin John Howell — Miss Violet Farebrother J. Moffat Johnston — Miss Nora Lancaster Eric Maxon — Miss Geneviève Ward
Tuesday April 19 Afternoon	Coriolanus	Henry Ainley — C. H. Croker-King — Herbert Beerbohm Tree Hubert Carter — Nigel Playfair — Miss Iris Hoey W. G. Fay — E. M. Robson — Miss Kate Phillips Lyn Harding — Edward Sass — Miss Ellen Terry William Haviland — Jules Shaw — Lady Tree
Tuesday April 19 Evening	Merry Wives of Windsor	The Elizabethan Stage Society Company, under the direction of William Poel
Wednesday April 20 Evening	Two Gentlemen of Verona	Lewis Waller and Lyric Theatre Company including J. H. Barnes — Halliwell Hobbes — Mrs. Tapping Shiel Barry — William Mollison — Miss Madge Titheradge William Devereux — Alec. F. Thompson A. E. George — Frank Woolfe
Thursday April 21 Afternoon	King Henry V.	Henry Ainley — Gerald Lawrence — Miss Esmé Hubbard Shiel Barry — Edward Sass Hubert Carter — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Thursday April 21 Evening	Twelfth Night	Henry Ainley — Nigel Playfair — Miss Evelyn D'Alroy Hubert Carter — Edward Sass — Miss Helen Haye Lyn Harding — Norman Trevor William Haviland — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Friday April 22 Evening	Twelfth Night	Henry Ainley — Lyn Harding — Miss Elinor Foster Shiel Barry — William Haviland — Miss Iris Hoey J. W. Braithwaite — Edward Sass — Miss Evelyn Millard Hubert Carter — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Saturday April 23 Afternoon	Hamlet
Saturday April 23 Evening	Julius Cæsar

London Shakespeare Festival [Third Week

Monday April 11 Evening	Hamlet	Henry Ainley — Nigel Playfair — Miss Evelyn D'Alroy Hubert Carter — Edward Sass — Miss Helen Haye Lyn Harding — Norman Trevor William Haviland — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Tuesday April 12 Afternoon	King Lear	Herbert Trench's Haymarket Company including Charles V. France — Norman McKinnel — Charles Quartermaine James Hearn — Dawson Milward — J. Fisher White H. R. Hignett — Norman Page — Miss Ellen O'Malley
Tuesday April 12 Evening	Julius Cæsar	Henry Ainley — Lyn Harding — Miss Elinor Foster Shiel Barry — William Haviland — Miss Iris Hoey J. W. Braithwaite — Edward Sass — Miss Evelyn Millard Hubert Carter — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Wednesday April 13 Afternoon	The Merchant of Venice	Arthur Bourchier and Company including Miss Dorothea Baird A. E. George — Godfrey Tearle — Miss Muriel Braumont A. Holmes-Gore — Arthur Wontner — Miss Enid Sass
Wednesday April 13 Evening	Julius Cæsar	Henry Ainley — Lyn Harding — Miss Elinor Foster Shiel Barry — William Haviland — Miss Iris Hoey J. W. Braithwaite — Edward Sass — Miss Evelyn Millard Hubert Carter — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Thursday April 14 Afternoon	Hamlet	H. B. Irving and Queen's Theatre Company including Charles Allan — Frank Tyars — Miss Dorothea Baird A. E. George — Henry Vibart — Miss Dora Barton Eille Norwood — Arthur Wontner — Miss Esmé Beringer Tom Reynolds
Thursday April 14 Evening	Julius Cæsar	Henry Ainley — Lyn Harding — Miss Elinor Foster Shiel Barry — William Haviland — Miss Iris Hoey J. W. Braithwaite — Edward Sass — Miss Evelyn Millard Hubert Carter — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Friday April 15 Evening	Julius Cæsar
Saturday April 16 Afternoon	Hamlet	Henry Ainley — Nigel Playfair — Miss Evelyn D'Alroy Hubert Carter — Edward Sass — Miss Helen Haye Lyn Harding — Norman Trevor William Haviland — Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Saturday April 16 Evening	Twelfth Night	Henry Ainley — Gerald Lawrence — Miss Esmé Hubbard Shiel Barry — Edward Sass — Miss Phillida Terson Hubert Carter — Herbert Beerbohm Tree

London Shakespeare Festival [Fifth Week

Monday April 25 Evening	The Merchant of Venice	HENRY AINLEY W. G. FAY Miss EVELYN D'ALROY SHIEL BARRY WILLIAM HAVILAND Miss MARGARET BUSSÉ J. W. BRAITHWAITE NIGEL PLAYFAIR Miss HILDA MOORE HUBERT CARTER EDWARD SASS W. R. CREIGHTON HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE
Tuesday April 26 Evening	The Merchant of Venice
Wednesday April 27 Evening	King Richard II.	HENRY AINLEY LYN HARDING JULES SHAW SHIEL BARRY WILLIAM HAVILAND HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE HUBERT CARTER EDWARD SASS Miss IRIS HOEY
Thursday April 28 Evening	King Richard II.
Friday April 29 Afternoon	Special Bill, including (a) An Act from Othello (b) An Act from Macbeth (c) An Act from The Clandestine Marriage (d) A Recitation	(a) Othello - HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE Iago - H. B. IRVING Emilia - Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER (b) Macbeth - ARTHUR BOURCHIER Lady Macbeth Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH (c) Lord Ogleby CYRIL MAUDE (d) Mrs. KENDAL has kindly consented to recite on this occasion.
Friday April 29 Evening	The Merchant of Venice
Saturday April 30 Evening	The Merchant of Venice	HENRY AINLEY W. G. FAY Miss EVELYN D'ALROY SHIEL BARRY WILLIAM HAVILAND Miss MARGARET BUSSÉ J. W. BRAITHWAITE NIGEL PLAYFAIR Miss HILDA MOORE HUBERT CARTER EDWARD SASS W. R. CREIGHTON HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE

STRAND THEATRE.

LESSEE AND MANAGER ... ... MR. J. A. HARRISON.

March 29th, 30th & 31st, 1910,

AT 8.15 O'CLOCK.

"The Raven's Cry"

A TURKISH ROMANTIC DRAMA IN THREE ACTS BY D. JANITSCH.

CHARACTERS:

SULTAN MURAT	MR. FRED WILSON
ALI PASHA (Grand Vizier)	MR. E. H. BROOKE
MUSTAFA PASHA	MR. A. LLEWELLYN
IBRAIM PASHA	MR. FRED SAMPSON
MILAN OF TOPLITZA	MR. PHILIP CUNINGHAM
RAIKO (Toplitza's Servant)	MR. HARRY PAULTON
BILKILL PASHA	MR. KENYON MUSGRAVE
ZULIEKA (His Daughter)	MISS MARIE POLINI
SELIM BEY (His Son) ...	MR. LANGHORNE BURTON
ALIJA BEY (The Grand Vizier's Son)	MR. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
A MESSENGER	MR. ALBERT WAINWRIGHT
FATIMA (Zulieka's Attendant)	MISS POLLIE MARSHALL
MILOSH (A Soldier)	MR. GEORGE DE LARA
A MUSICIAN	MR. J. M. WATSON
VLATKO	MR. E. H. BROOKE
ZORKA (Sister to Vlatko)	MISS IVY WILLIAMS
A MONK	MR. CHARLES GOODHART
A PEASANT	MR. JOCELYN HOPE

SOLDIERS, PEASANTS, ETC., ETC.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. SCENE 1. Adrianople. Reception Room in Sultan's Palace.
SCENE 2. Sofia. Garden adjoining Bilkill Pasha's Palace.
SCENE 3. A Plain outside Sofia.

ACT II SCENE 1. Same as Act I., Scene 2.
SCENE 2. A Prison in Sofia.

ACT III. A Plain in Servia on the Turkish Border.

12 Minutes' Interval between each Act.

The Play produced by Mr. Edward O'Neill.

Costumes by J. A. HARRISON, LTD., Leicester Square.

Music by KARL KEFERT.

Scenery by W. T. HEMSLEY and E. C. BANKS.

ORCHESTRA UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MR. J. KATTAUN.

PRICES :—Boxes, £5 5s. and £4 4s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. DUNCAN DRUCE.
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. ALBERT WAINWRIGHT.

Telephone 3830 Gerrard. Doors open at 7.30.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any otherobstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

BUSINESS MANAGER - - MR. HERBERT HIGGINS.

The Raven's Cry, performances of which have been given this week at the Strand Theatre in aid of the Hairdresser Victims of the Parisian floods, is a simple, straightforward melodrama, with a plain and continuous plot, and distinct and well-defined characters. Though not without occasional absurdities, it held the interest of the audience from commencement to conclusion, having the advantage of being excellently acted.

The hero—and he is a hero in every sense of the word—is Milan of Toplitza, a tall warrior, and a "man of his hands." Milan is a Serb, and while on a mission to the Sultan Murat at Adrianople, he is asked by that magnate to become a Turk and the Soldier of the Crescent. Milan indignantly refuses, and the Turkish soldiers bar every outlet from the apartment. Then a comic servant of Milan's, named Raiko, suddenly enters the room by means of a secret panel, and leads his master to comparative safety. Milan, without revealing his identity to a certain Bilkill Pasha, his host, has won the affections of the Pasha's daughter Zulieka. Top'litza appears to be received by Bilkill as a Turk; and, in company with the villain of the play, Alija Bey, and the Pasha's son Selim, the hero starts in pretended pursuit of Milan, on whose head a heavy price has been placed. When the trio come to a convenient spot, Milan declares his identity, and easily overcomes Alija, who attacks him. The hero then turns to deal with Selim, and Alija tries to stab him in the back, but fails, and Milan easily escapes.

In the next act, Milan arranges with Zulieka that they shall elope at midnight, the signal for their departure being an imitation of the cry of a raven. But their plans are discovered, and Milan is arrested and thrown into a dungeon with his faithful follower. Toplitza, who is very strong, breaks his chains and those of Raiko; and Selim, who has conceived a regard for Milan, finding remonstrance with his father useless, comes to the dungeon, sets the captives free, and enables them and Zulieka to escape.

The last act takes place in Servia on the Turkish border. Selim arrives and entreats the Servians to go to the rescue of Milan, who is hotly pursued by the Turks; Bilkill Pasha, who appears on the scene of action, is recognised by his brother, a Servian monk, as a renegade from Christianity, who became a Mohammedan for love of a woman; Alija Bey, who also ventures on to Servian soil, is promptly slain by Raiko; and there remains no obstacle to the lovers' happiness.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

Alias JIMMY VALENTINE

By PAUL ARMSTRONG.

Suggested by O. HENRY'S Short Story, "A Retrieved Reformation."

Doyle	(a Detective)	GUY STANDING
Miss Webster Mrs. Moore	of the Gate of Hope Society ..	GRACE MURIELLE FLORENCE HARWOOD
Rose Lane ..	(Niece of Robert Fay) ..	ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
Bill Avery ..	(an Old Offender) ..	HARRY NICHOLLS
Red Joclyn ..	(Valentine's Pal) ..	C. M. HALLARD
Blickendolfenbach	(a German Inventor) ..	HERMAN DE LANGE
Handler ..	(Warden of Sing Sing Prison) ..	LYSTON LYLE
Smith	(His Clerk)	GISSING WALTERS
Robert Fay ..	(Lieutenant-Governor of New York) ..	HERBERT BUNSTON
"Blinky" Davis ..	(a Forger)	D. J. WILLIAMS
"Dick the Rat" ..	(a Sneak Thief)	FRED CREMLIN
William Lane ..	(Rose's Father, an Illinois Banker) ..	T. GIDEON WARREN
Bobby Lane ..	(Rose's Younger Brother) ..	FRANK THORNDIKE
Kitty Lane ..	(a Younger Sister) ..	MARJORIE DANE
	AND
Lee Randall	Doing 10 years for burglary under the name of "Jimmy Valentine"	GERALD DU MAURIER

Time ... ... Present.

Act I. ... ... Warden's Office, Sing Sing Prison, New York

Act II. ... ... Parlour in Hotel, Albany, New York. A month later

Act III. ... Scene 1 — Assistant Cashier's Office, First National Bank, Springfield, Illinois. About three years later

Scene 2 ... ... Interior of the Bank. Five minutes later

ORCHESTRA under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, APRIL 2nd, at 2.30, and every WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY following.

Business Manager - - - (For Charles Frohman) - - JAMES W. MATHEWS
Stage Manager - - - - - - - CLIFFORD BROOKE

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager - - (For Comedy Theatre) - LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 29
Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
29/3/1910
STALL
H22
To be retained
David Allen & Sons, Ltd., London, Harrow, Bucks

Alias Jimmy Valentine, which was produced in Chicago, and was well received in New York, adds another to the list of plays in which the hero is a thief; but the adventures of Lee Randall, who is gifted with a marvellous power of opening the "combination" locks of safes by the sense of touch alone, create legitimate sympathy, because, soon after we first meet him he determines to reform, and adheres to his resolve in the face of discouraging difficulties. His adherence to the path of honesty involves the telling of a number of lies; but Randall's heart is in the right place, and by his concluding act of heroism he completes his popularity with the audience.

The piece is remarkable for the realistic representation which is given in the first act of an office in Sing-Sing Prison, New York, its officials, and the prisoners under their control. Handler, the warden, is a disbeliever in the innocence which is claimed by so many of the inmates, and his scepticism is justified in the case of a young man named Lee Randall, who has been fortunate enough to save from the attack of a thief Rose Lane, the niece of the Lieut.-Governor of New York, who comes to inspect the prison. Randall is brought in, and explains away the circumstantial evidence which led to his conviction. It appears, we may mention, that he was guilty not only of this crime but of a burglary on a bank at Springfield, Massachusetts. The Lieut.-Governor, in gratitude for the rescue of his niece, procures a pardon for Randall, and in the next act he appears, properly clothed, at the Hotel Albany, New York.

Here he is exposed to severe temptation. He has not yet expiated the bank robbery, and a detective named Doyle threatens that, unless Randall will play informer with respect to an old convict named Bill Avery, he (Doyle) will have him re-arrested for the Springfield crime. Randall refuses; and then Avery and another old pal of his called Red Joclyn arrive, and almost succeed in inducing him to return to a career of crime. But his love for Rose gives him strength to resist, and her father secures for him a post in a bank in Illinois.

Here we find him in the third act, after an interval of three years, in which he has risen to be cashier, having installed Red Joclyn, whom he has converted to honesty, as watchman. But Doyle, who has been on Randall's track, has discovered his place of refuge, and calls upon him at the bank. Randall, however, is prepared to deny his identity with the criminal Jimmy Valentine. He has collected a number of newspaper cuttings relating to the doings of a namesake of his during the last three years, and has induced Bill Avery, whose son-in-law is a photographer, to represent him, by a double negative, seated at a public banquet on the very date on which Jimmy Valentine left Sing-Sing. He has also managed to remove a certain distinctive scar on his right arm; and when Doyle arrives the detective is completely "bluffed" by Randall's coolness and readiness.

But in the end Doyle is not deceived. Rose's younger sister, Kitty, a charming child, is locked up by accident in the safe which stands in the cellar of the bank, and, to save her life, Randall consents to exercise his old sensitiveness of touch. After he has released little Kitty, he turns to find Doyle watching him with amusement; but the detective is so much affected by the love and grief of Rose Lane when she learns that Randall is to be again imprisoned, that he offers to forget the Springfield burglary, and thus leave Randall free to continue the practice of honesty and marry his employer's daughter.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

ON MONDAY, APRIL 4TH, 1910, AT 8.15, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

THE RIVALS

A COMEDY BY SHERIDAN.

Captain Absolute	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Sir Anthony Absolute	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
Faulkland	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
Acres	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
Sir Lucius O'Trigger	Mr. LEONARD BOYNE
Fag	Mr. HERBERT JARMAN
David	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Thomas	Mr. ROBERT BOLDER
Mrs. Malaprop	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Lydia Languish	Miss KATE CUTLER
Julia	Miss DOROTHY DIX
Lucy	Miss BEATRICE FERRAR

The Action of the Play takes place at Bath.

Act I. ...	Scene 1	Whitehall Stairs—South Parade
	Scene 2	... Mrs. Malaprop's House
	Scene 3	Captain Absolute's Lodgings
Act II. ...	Scene 1	Whitehall Stairs—South Parade
	Scene 2	... Mrs. Malaprop's House
	Scene 3	... ... Acre's Lodgings
Act III. ...	Scene 1	... Mrs. Malaprop's House
	Scene 2	... ... A Street
	Scene 3	King's Mead Fields

There will be intervals of 10 minutes between the Acts.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Si j'etais Roi"	Adam
	AFTER ACT I.
FANTASIA	"Monsieur Beaucaire"	Rosse
	AFTER ACT II
THREE OLD ENGLISH DANCES ...	... ...	Cowen

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... ... MR. LEONARD CHALK

STAGE MANAGER ... ... MR. B. CAMPLIN SMITH

The Costumes designed by Mr. T. HESLEWOOD, and executed by Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & Co., King Street, Covent Garden.

Scenery by R. C. McCLEERY. Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by J. S. LYON.

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 8 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier). Commence at 8.30. Carriages at 11.

Matinee Doors open at 2.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

Extract from the Rules issued by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The Rivals has so rarely been seen by the present generation that, to all intents and purposes, it is new to many playgoers. It was produced at Covent Garden Theatre on Jan. 17, 1775, withdrawn for alterations after two performances, put on again in ten days after revision, and acted with pronounced and prolonged success. Sheridan's play was a protest against the sentimental comedy which at that time was fashionable. In the prologue which he substituted for the original one on the tenth night of The Rivals, Sheridan, referring to the mask of Thalia in the proscenium of the theatre, said:—

"Look on her well—does she seem formed to teach?
Should you expect to hear this lady preach?
Is grey experience suited to her youth?
Do solemn sentiments become that mouth?
* * * * * * *
Must we displace her? and instead advance
The goddess of the woeful countenance—
The sentimental muse! Her emblems view,
The 'Pilgrim's Progress' and a sprig of rue!
View her—too chaste to look like flesh and blood—
Primely portrayed on emblematic wood!
There, fixed in usurpation should she stand,
She'll snatch the dagger from her sister's hand."

The racy animation of The Rivals, its high spirits, and its unflagging vivacity, appeal to audiences of all periods and all classes. The characters are alive, animated, and amusing. Sheridan was accused of many plagiarisms in connection with this work, but most of his borrowings are trivial, the conveyance of Mrs. Malaprop from his mother's unpublished "Journey to Bath" being excusable as keeping the "notion," at any rate, in the family.

"The Rivals," writes Mr. Walter Sichel, in his admirable life of the author, "is the sole play by Sheridan where the humour exceeds the wit, and on that account it is the more lovable. We laugh with his characters more than we smile at their sayings. The wit lacks the steely-brightness of The School for Scandal, and the humour has a modern turn. When Mrs. Malaprop illustrates her maxim that in matrimony 'tis safest to begin with a little aversion,' by 'I am sure I hated your poor dear uncle before marriage as if he had been a blackamoor,' we seem to catch the voice of Dickens. The short interlude where Fag mimics the spleen of his master and vents it on the footboy is humour Thackerayan. And when the uncle rages at his cool nephew with 'None of your passion, sir, none of your violence, if you please,' and tells him to 'get an atmosphere and a sun of his own,' we realise our distance from the Georgian drama."

The comedy was twice revived in the early nineties, was acted in 1797, and was included in the Drury Lane performances of September, 1816. A memorable revival of the piece was that given by the Bancrofts at the Haymarket on May 3, 1884, with Sir—then Mr.—A. W. Pinero as Sir Anthony Absolute, Mr. Alfred Bishop as Sir Lucius O'Trigger, Mr. Forbes-Robertson as Captain Absolute, Mr. Bancroft as Faulkland, Mr. Lionel Brough as Bob Acres, Mr. Charles Brookfield as David, Mrs. Stirling as Mrs. Malaprop, Mrs. Bernard Beere as Julia, Miss Calhoun as Lydia Languish, and Miss Julia Gwynne as Lucy. Strange to say, in spite of this superb cast, the play only ran for a few weeks.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER : CHARLES FROHMAN

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

TRELAWNY OF THE "WELLS."

A COMEDIETTA IN FOUR ACTS.

BY

ARTHUR PINERO.

TUESDAY. 5th APRIL. 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

TO-NIGHT. TUESDAY. APRIL 5th. AT 8 O'CLOCK.

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

TRELAWNY OF THE "WELLS"

A Comedietta, in Four Acts, by ARTHUR PINERO.

THE PERSONS OF THE PLAY.

THEATRICAL FOLK.

JAMES TELFER	of the Bagnigge-Wells Theatre	SYDNEY VALENTINE
MRS. TELFER (Miss Violet Sylvester)		MARIE SAKER
AUGUSTUS COLPOYS		EDMUND GWENN
FERDINAND GADD		GERALD LAWRENCE
TOM WRENCH		DENNIS EADIE
AVONIA BUNN		HILDA TREVELYAN
ROSE TRELAWNY		IRENE VANBRUGH
IMOGEN PARROTT	(of the Royal Olympic Theatre)	FAY DAVIS
O'DWYER	(Prompter at the Pantheon Theatre)	WHITFORD KANE
MEMBERS OF THE COMPANY OF THE PANTHEON THEATRE		C. C. VERNON LEWIS CASSON EVA KILLICK MAIR VAUGHAN
HALL-KEEPER AT THE PANTHEON		R. O. RICHE

NON-THEATRICAL FOLK.

VICE-CHANCELLOR SIR WILLIAM GOWER, KT.		DION BOUCICAULT
MISS TRAFALGAR GOWER	(Sir William's Sister)	MAY WHITTY
ARTHUR GOWER	(his Grandchildren)	CHARLES MAUDE
CLARA DE FŒNIX	(his Grandchildren)	NELL CARTER
CAPTAIN DE FŒNIX	(Clara's Husband)	O. P. HEGGIE
MRS. MOSSOP		FLORENCE HAYDON
MR. ABLETT		E. W. GARDEN
CHARLES		AUBREY FITZGERALD
SARAH		MARY JERROLD

Act I. - Mr. and Mrs. Telfer's Lodgings at No. 2, Brydon Crescent, Clerkenwell. May.

Act II. - At Sir William Gower's, in Cavendish Square. June.

Act III. - Again in Brydon Crescent. December.

Act IV. - On the Stage of the Pantheon Theatre. A few days later.

PERIOD—Somewhere in the Early Sixties.

The Costumes designed by PERCY ANDERSON and made by L. & H. NATHAN.

NOTE.—BAGNIGGE-(locally pronounced Bagnidge) WELLS—formerly a popular mineral spring in Islington, London—is situated not far from the better remembered Sadler's-Wells. The Gardens of Bagnigge-Wells were at one time much resorted to; but, as a matter of fact, Bagnigge-Wells, unlike Sadler's-Wells, has never possessed a play-house. Sadler's-Well's Theatre, however—always familiarly known as the "Wells"—still exists. It was rebuilt in 1876-77.

Trelawny of the 'Wells' was first performed at the Court Theatre on Jan. 20, 1898, with Mr. Gerald Du Maurier as Ferdinand Gadd, Mr. Paul Arthur as Tom Wrench, Miss Pattie Browne as Avonia Bunn, Miss Irene Vanbrugh as Rose Trelawny, Mr. Richard Purdon as O'Dwyer, Mr. Dion Boucicault as Sir William Gower, Miss Isabel Bateman as Miss Trafalgar Gower, Mr. Sam Sothern as Captain de Fœnix, Miss Le Thiere as Miss Mossop, Mr. Fred Thorne as Mr. Ablett, Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald as Charles, and Miss Polly Emery as Sarah. The plot is simple. A young actress, Rose Trelawny, is engaged to be married to a timid young man named Arthur Gower, grandson of Vice-Chancellor Sir William Gower, an elderly bully and domestic tyrant. She is asked to stay at the latter's house in Cavendish-square, where Arthur, who is Sir William's grandchild, Clara de Fœnix, and her husband, Captain de Fœnix, are sorely oppressed by Sir William's domination. Some of Rose's theatrical friends arrive, and she lets them into the house after the other inmates have retired. The noise which they make arouses Sir William, who appears in high dudgeon. Rose returns to her former surroundings, but she has tasted the sweets of respectability, she is in love, and her acting falls off. Sir William, who has, in his time, been a great admirer of Edmund Kean, visits Rose, and she shows him some relics of the great actor. He indulges in excited reminiscences; and finally agrees to finance the production of a play by an unsuccessful actor named Tom Wrench—an admitted sketch of the late Tom Robertson—and becomes reconciled to the idea of Rose marrying his grandson.

"An interesting correspondence has been going on between Mr. William Farren and Sir Arthur Pinero, apropos of Trelawny of the Wells. Mr. Farren has written:—After reading the article with the above title in to-day's paper, will you allow an actor of what you call "the old school of rodomontade" to assert that Trelawny of the Wells is distinctly not a true picture of London life on the stage in the Victorian sixties? The picture presents possibly a very funny view of the actor's calling, but its taste and tone may certainly be called into question when one remembers that the artist was himself at one time an actor. The other "true pictures of London life" may, or may not be equally distorted. I never had the honour of acquaintance with a Vice-Chancellor, and if the hectoring, bullying vulgar personage in Trelawny of the Wells is a "true picture," then the legal profession will scarcely feel gratified; but I had the acquaintance of actors of all ranks in the sixties, and the actor who scraped his boots on the chair rail, and who used the dinner napkin as a pocket-handkerchief was a personage whose vulgarities never would have been tolerated by Samuel Phelps, whose work at Sadler's Wells Theatre many still hold in honourable remembrance.

Sir Arthur Pinero writes in reply:—"In spite of his objection to Trelawny of the Wells as a picture of theatrical life in the early sixties, Mr. Farren instances two pieces of stage 'business' which he describes as vulgar and untrue. Perhaps Mr. Farren will allow me to inform him that these vulgarities neither appear in the book of the play nor were suggested by me at rehearsal. He must attribute their introduction to the 'taste and tone' of a member of his own calling, not to the author. And may I remind Mr. Farren that Trelawny of the Wells professes to deal with Sadler's Wells Theatre in its days of decay, and not as it was during Mr. Phelps's distinguished management; and that, moreover, the piece is designed to appeal to persons with some sense of humour?"

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

PRUNELLA,

A PIERROT PLAY. IN THREE ACTS.

BY LAURENCE HOUSMAN & GRANVILLE BARKER.

The Music by JOSEPH MOORAT.

AND

THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK

A COMEDY. IN ONE ACT.

BY J. M. BARRIE.

WEDNESDAY. 13th APRIL. 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

TO-NIGHT. WEDNESDAY. APRIL 13th, AT 8.15.

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

PRUNELLA,

A Pierrot Play, in Three Acts, by
LAURENCE HOUSMAN and GRANVILLE BARKER.
The Music by JOSEPH MOORAT.
Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

PIERROT	CHARLES MAUDE
SCARAMEL	ARTHUR WHITBY
KENNEL	O. P. HEGGIE
CALLOW	HAROLD CHAPIN
MOUTH	FREDERICK LLOYD
HAWK	HUBERT HARBEN
DOLL	MARY JERROLD
TAWDRY	EVANGELINE HILLIARD
COQUETTE	NELL CARTER
ROMP	SYBIL THORNDIKE
PRIM	FLORENCE HAYDON
PRIVACY	PENELOPE WHEELER
PRUDE	AGNES HILL
QUEER	ADA MARIUS
QUAINT	MARY BARTON
FIRST GARDENER	WHITFORD KANE
SECOND GARDENER	LESLIE CARTER
THIRD GARDENER	E. W. GARDEN
BOY	DONALD CALTHROP
STATUE OF LOVE	LEWIS CASSON
PRUNELLA	DOROTHY MINTO
CONDUCTOR	THEODORE STIER

Scene - - - A Dutch Garden.

The Mummers' costumes designed by PAMELA COLMAN SMITH and made by LORNA BURN-MURDOCH.

AT 10.15.

THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK

A Comedy in One Act, by J. M. BARRIE.
Produced by DION BOUCICAULT.

SIR HARRY SIMS	EDMUND GWENN
LADY SIMS	MARY BARTON
KATE	LENA ASHWELL
TOMBES	CHARLES CALVERT

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor — CHARING CROSS ROAD — Sir Charles Wyndham.

Sole Lessee and Manager ... . FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON

On THURSDAY, APRIL 14th, 1910, and Every Evening at 9 o'clock,

MR. CHARLES HAWTREY

And Company in a New Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled

THE NAKED TRUTH

By GEORGE PASTON & W. B. MAXWELL.

Bernard (Bunny) Darrell	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
James Darrell (his Uncle)	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Mr. Hayter	Mr. ERIC LEWIS
Teddie Lestrange	Mr. ERNEST THESIGER
Dr. Masters	Mr. LYLE
	(By kind permission of Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN)
Prosser	Mr. GEORGE BELLAMY
Mr. Sawyer	Mr. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Mr. Freeman	Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS
Mrs. Darrell (Bunny's Mother)	Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Mrs. Hayter	Miss MAUDE CRESSALL
Norah Creighton	Miss PHYLLIS EMBURY
Madame Favre	Miss VERA MAITLAND
Mrs. Duckett	Miss CLARE GREET
Hammond	Miss GWYNNE HERBERT

Act I. ... . The Drawing Room of the Darrells' House at Hampstead
Act II. ... The Board Room of the Syrian Cement Company in Queen Victoria Street Act III. ... ... The Garden of the Darrells' House

Time ... The Present.

There is an Interval of one day between Acts I. and II., and one day between Acts II. and III.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

The First Act Scene and Furniture by Messrs. FRYERS, Ltd., 6 Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square.
The Second and Third Act Scenery by WALTER HANN, and Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., Ltd
Dresses by REVILLE & ROSSITER. Pianoforte by CHAPPELL & Co., Ltd. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd., 28 Haymarket.

PRECEDED AT 8.15 BY

THE PARENTS' PROGRESS

By GEORGE PASTON.

Mr. Hoskins	Mr. H. LAURENT
Bert	Mr. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
George Bunning	Mr. GUY H. ADDISON
Em	Miss MARY LESLIE
Miss Williams	Miss RUBY MILLER
Mrs. Hoskins	Miss CLARE GREET

Scene ... Parlour at the Hoskins' Villa, "Chatsworth," Balham. Time .. The Present.

The Pathéphone used in "The Parents' Progress" by Pathé Frères, 64 Regent Street.

FIRST MATINEE ON WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20th AT 3.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music —

1.	"March of the Giants" - - - - - -	Hermann Finck
2.	SELECTION - - - "Gran Via" - -	Chueca y Valverde
3.	VALSE - - - "The Balkan Princess" -	Paul Rubens
4.	"Danses Espagnole" - - - - - -	Moskowski
5.	ENTR'ACTE" - - - "The Butterfly" - -	Bendix

Musical Director ... . ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION :—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 7.45. Matinees 2.30. Commence at 8.15. Matinees 3.

Business Manager ... ... J. HERBERT JAY

The idea of persons naturally unveracious being forced by some magic spell to speak the truth has been frequently used on the stage, Sir W. S. Gilbert's Palace of Truth being a famous example. The Naked Truth, by George Paston and W. B. Maxwell, which was produced at Wyndham's Theatre on Thursday, is based on the supposition that a curious old ring can make anyone who wears it speak the whole truth. On whom is the obligation of veracity forced by the magic of the ring? On a suave, persuasive, plausible young man, named Bernard Darrell, otherwise "Bunny," the son of an adoring mother. Mrs. Darrell has devoted herself since her husband's death to the bringing up of her boy, and he is satisfactorily engaged to a nice young lady named Norah Creighton. He is conventionally agreeable, untruthful, and flattering. But "Bunny" has a weakness for flirtation, and has entangled himself with a certain Mrs. Hayter, the wife of an elderly and indifferent Oriental student. She turns up jealous and troublesome, and it is at this juncture that "Bunny's" Uncle James, who has made a fortune in India, gives "Bunny" the magic ring. With this upon his finger, the young man is compelled to speak the exact truth. He tells the directors of the Syrian Cement Company, of which he is secretary, exactly what a fraud the concern is, and there is a storm of indignation and abuse; he dictates honest replies to would-be investors, he reproves Mrs. Hayter for her immorality, he finds fault with his ouncée's features and his mother's false hair, and is bluntly rude to his rich uncle. Mrs. Hayter arrives in a state of excitement, and talks most compromisingly to "Bunny," while Norah is listening in the next room. "Bunny" would fain defend himself by prevarication, but, like George Washington, he cannot tell a lie, and "all the fat is in the fire." His servants leave on account of his remorseless truth-speaking, and poor "Bunny" is in despair. Fortunately Mr. Hayter, who is a student of Oriental literature, discovers the secret of the ring, and Norah, to make certain that there shall be no more inconvenient veracity, drops it into the garden well.

APOLLO THEATRE.

HENRY LOWENFELD - - - - - - SOLE PROPRIETOR.

TOM B. DAVIS - - - - - - - - - Sole Lessee and Manager.

SATURDAY, APRIL 23rd, 1910, AT 8.15,

MR. ALEX. HENDERSON'S PRODUCTION.

A New Musical Comedy in Two Acts,

THE ISLANDER

By Major MARSHALL. Music by PHILIP MICHAEL FARADAY.

Captain Alderson Jarrett	Mr SAM WALSH	Sir William Pickerton, K.C.I.E. ...	Mr LAURENCE CAIRD
Lieut. the Hon. D'Arcy Langton, D.S.O.	Mr FRED ALLANDALE	Mirza Makh Ali Khan (Pasha) ..	Mr NEIL KENYON
Lieut. Reginald Hume	Mr LAURENCE LEGGE	Hakim Sirdar (High Treasurer and Commander-in-Chief) ..	Mr REGINALD LAWRENCE
Midshipman Jackson Mauleverer ..	Master BOBBIE ANDREWS	Mahmoud (Page to the Princess Haidee) ..	Master P. HERON
Capt. Grant, R.M.L.I.	Mr WILFRED SEAGRAM	Boatswain	Mr CARYLL STORRS
Lieut. Maxwell	Mr PERCY CLARIDGE	Quartermaster	Mr MURRI MONCRIEFF
Lieut. Bailey	Mr OTTO ALEXANDER	Steward	Mr WILLIAM GUILBERT
Lieut. Fergusson	Mr MONTAGUE SYRETT	Kubardar (the Spy)	Mr HARRY DANBY
Lady Birkenhead (a Globe Trotter) ..	Miss ETHEL MORRISON	The Hon. Gwendoline Cholmondeley	Miss STEPHANIE STEPHENS
Wilhelmina .. (her Daughters) ..	Miss MARY DIBLEY	The Princess Haidee	Miss MABEL BURNEGE
Georgina .. (her Daughters) ..	Miss ELAINE INESCORT	Sister Katherine	Miss LESLEY EVERELL
Kitty Mclan .. (an Orphan) ..	Miss ELSIE SPAIN	Zeeba	Miss EDRIS COOMBS

Ladies of the Court:—Miss Isabel Lidster, Miss Vivian Carter, Miss Dahlia Gordon, Miss Rita Otway, Miss Lilian Cooper, Miss S. Bellew, Miss Hilda Harris.

Diplomatic Corps, Sailors, Marines, Guards, and Courtiers.

THE SOLO DANCE IN ACT II. BY Miss SYBIL WARREN.

The Orchestra will be Conducted by the Composer at this Performance.

The Solo on the Saxophone in the Intermezzo is played by Mr. J. PARK.

ACT I. .. .. On British Territory.

ACT II. .. Somewhere in the Persian Gulf. 51° 32′ North Latitude, 0° 5′ 12″ West Longitude.

The Play Produced by HARRY GRATTAN.

"A POT OF CAVIARE."

Tragedy, in One Act, by Arthur Conan Doyle, Produced at the Adelphi Theatre, on Tuesday, April 19.

PRECEDED AT 8 BY

A POT OF CAVIARE

(A Tragedy)

By ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

Professor Mercer	(an Entomologist) ...	Mr. MURRAY CARSON
Colonel Mannering	... ...	Mr. STRATTON RODNEY
James Ainslie	... (of the Civil Service) ...	Mr. CLAUDE KING
Mr. Patterson ...	... (a Missionary) ...	Mr. A. G. CRAIG
Father Pierre ...	(a French Catholic Priest)	Mr. A. CORNEY GRAIN
English Naval Officer ...	... ...	Mr. ARTHUR BURNE.
Ching ...	(a Chinese Christian Servant)	Mr. ARTHUR F. THORN
Mrs. Patterson	... ...	Miss HETTA BARTLETT
Jessie Patterson	... ...	Miss DOROTHEA DESMOND

TIME—Boxer Insurrection, 1900. SCENE—The Professor's Bungalow in the besieged European Quarter in Ichau, China.

NOTE.—BOTH PIECES WILL BE PLAYED AT EVERY PERFORMANCE.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Musical Director—BRIGATA BUCALOSSI.

PRELUDE	...	Beethoven
OVERTURE (Before Act I.) ... ... "Old English Melodies" ...	...	Godfrey
SELECTION (Before Act II.) ... ... "Songs ...	...	Sir Henry Bishop
MELODIES (Before Act III.) ... ... "Ye Olde English" ...	...	Basquit
AIRS (Before Act IV.) ... ... "Scottish" ...	...	Myddleton
MARCH ... ... "Selpio" ...	...	Haydn

MATINEES WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30

Acting Manager ... (for Mr. George Edwardes) ... Mr. CHARLTON MANN

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. W. W. KEENE

THE CHARGE FOR THIS PROGRAMME IS 6d

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's play, which was put on at the Adelphi Theatre, on Tuesday, in front of The House of Temperley, touches on the very nice point how near to certain death and torture one should be before committing suicide or Insurescmurder. The time is that of the Boxer Insurrection of 1900, and the scene is the bungalow of Professor Mercer, an entomologist, in the besieged European quarter in Ichau, China. Gathered together in the bungalow, and waiting for rescue to arrive in the shape of an English regiment, are Colonel Mannering, James Ainslie (of the Civil Service), Mr. Patterson (a missionary) and his wife and daughter, Father Pierre (a French Catholic priest), and a Chinese Christian servant. A dying Chinaman, who has been brought in, asks to see the Colonel, and tells him that the promised relief cannot arrive before three days. As there is no hope of keeping back the Boxers for more than a few hours, the Europeans are obviously doomed to death by slow torture; so the Professor poisons a pot of caviare and induces them all to eat of it. One by one they fall into the sleep of death, the Professor succumbing the last; but before he is quite dead there is a noise of firing, and a detachment of English troops enter. "Don't eat any of the caviare," cries the Professor, and then dies.

the scene of the first act of The Islander is remarkably realistic and complete. Two long guns, which have an illusive appearance of solidity, protrude from an armoured fort, practicable ladders lead up to decks on which stand officers and look-out men, and the whole effect is most imposing. It appears that the mission of this magnificent ironclad is the annexation of a certain island in the Persian Gulf. But Sir William Pickerton, the local Commissioner, has lost the despatches which contained the instructions which were to direct the movements of the captain of the vessel, who consequeatly takes action on his own responsibility. A party of English ladies come on board, including Lady Birkenhead, a globe-trotter; Wilhelmina and Georgina, her daughters; and Kitty McIan, her ward.

Scarcely have these been shown over the ship when the approach is announced of Mirza Makh Ali Khan, the local Pasha, who, after receiving much diplomatic compliment, reveals himself as a canny Scotsman who has obtained the position of Pasha by marriage. Captain Jarrett explains the object of his mission, and the Pasha agrees to do a "deal" for the island, if the captain and his officers will come and dine with him on shore. In the course of this act there are frequent love-passages between Lieut. the Hon. D'Arcy Langton and Kitty, and Lieut. Reginald Hume and the Pasha's daughter, the Princess Haidee, an artless but beautiful Oriental.

The second act takes place in the beautiful gardens of the Pasha's Palace, where the ladies of the harem are singing, dancing, and reposing. It was the Pasha, it appears, who caused Sir William's papers to be purloined, and he is going to drive a hard bargain for his share of the spoil. In this he succeeds admirably, especially as the island has belonged to England all the time. He recognises in Kitty his daughter by his first wife, and she consequently becomes a Princess. The young people pair off prettily, and the merry musical comedy concludes.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Mr. H. B. IRVING

On SATURDAY, APRIL 30th, 1910,

And Every Evening at 8.30.

SATURDAY MATINÉES at 2.30.

"LOUIS XI."

Adapted by Dion Boucicault, from the play by Casimir Delavigne.

Louis XI., King of France	Mr. H. B. IRVING
The Dauphin, afterwards Charles VIII.	Miss DORA BARTON
Duc de Nemours	Mr. EILLE NORWOOD
Philip de Comines	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
Jacques Coitier, the King's Physician	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Tristan L'Ermite, Grand Provost ..	Mr. FRANK TYARS
Oliver le Dain	Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
François de Paule	Mr. HENRY VIBART
Cardinal d'Alby	Mr. CHAS. A. SLAITE
Count de Dreux	Mr. STUART MUSGROVE
Monseigneur de Lude	.. Mr. H. ROBINSON
Count de Dunois	Mr. C. TREVOR ROPER
Montjoie, Herald of France ..	Mr. ALEX SCOTT-GATTY
Toison D'or, Herald of Burgundy ..	.. Mr A. SYNGE
Marcel	Mr. CLIFFORD BOWN
Richard	Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
Officer of the Royal Guard	Mr. W. H. GRAHAM
King's Attendant	Mr. ROLAND PERTUIS
Martha	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
AND
Marie de Comines	Miss DOROTHEA BAIRD

Burgundian Knights, Nobles, Royal Guard, Pages, Peasants, &c.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Ltd
Managing Directors ... ... HENRY R. SMITH and FRED W. CARPENTER

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Henry R. Smith, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

Saturday, April 30, 1910, and every Evening at 8

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30

Revival of

THE PRINCE AND THE BEGGAR MAID

By WALTER HOWARD,

Author of
"HER LOVE AGAINST THE WORLD," "THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING," &c.

Characters.

Prince Olaf of Sylvania		Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Hildred (his Brother, the reigning Prince)		Mr. ERIC MAYNE
Michael (his Brother)		Mr. HALLIWELL HOBBES
Capt. Hector	Commanding the Princess's Bodyguard	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Lieut. Karl Stromberg		Mr. HASTINGS LYNN
Col. Wellenberg	of the Sylvanian Army	Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Capt. Karsburg		Mr. HERBERT LESTER
Capt. Schwartz		Mr. SIDNEY VAUTIER
Capt. Sudermann		Mr. HENRY POLLARD
Lieut. Welder		Mr. J. R. GILLESPIE
Lieut. Schultz		Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG
The Bishop of Illyria		Mr. COWLEY WRIGHT
Nathan (a Dumb Servant)		Mr. ARTHUR POOLE
Viola (Capt. Hector's Sister)		Miss MAXINE HINTON
Camiola		Miss ETHEL PATRICK
Princess Monica of Illyria		Miss ANNIE SAKER

The play produced under the direction of the Author.

STRAND THEATRE.

(ALDWYCH.)

Manager - - - - - - - - - - AUSTEN HURGON

EVERY EVENING AT 8

A new Musical Play

In Two Acts, entitled

TWO MERRY MONARCHS

The Book by ARTHUR ANDERSON and GEORGE LEVY.
Lyrics by ARTHUR ANDERSON and HARTLEY CARRICK.
Music by ORLANDO MORGAN.

Rolandyl ...	Postmaster-General and Assessor of Taxes	"SMITH"
King Utops of Utopia	... ...	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
King Paul of Esperanto	... ...	Mr. ROBERT WHYTE, Junr.
Helvanoise ...	... (a Herald)	... Mr. LESLIE STILES
Mandamus ...	(Lord Chief Justice of Utopia)	Mr. NEVILLE GEORGE
Head Flunkey ...	... (at the Palace)	... Mr. FRANCIS PATER
Princess Cynthia	(adopted Daughter of King Paul)	Miss DAISY LE HAY
Iris	(Principal Lady-in-Waiting)	Miss ALMA BARBER
Caroline... ...	... (a Public Agitator)	... Miss LILY MILLS
Dorothy...	Ladies-in-Waiting to Princess Cynthia	Miss AILEEN PEEL
Hermia ...		Miss ELLA DAINCOURT
Gretchen		Miss JOSSET LEGH
Jean ...		Miss JOAN ADAIR
Carmenita		Miss BETTY HEAPS
Celeste ...		Miss ADELINE WATERLOW

Prince Charmis (Governor of Police) AND Mr. C. HAYDEN COFFIN

Chorus of Populace, Flunkeys, Utopian Bodyguard, Wreath Bearers, Guests, etc.

STRAND THEATRE
30 4/1910
STALL
D 3
No.
To be

ACT I. ... COURTYARD OUTSIDE THE ROYAL PALACE AT ESPERANTO (Alfred Terraine)

ACT II. ... ANTEROOM TO THE BALLROOM AT THE PALACE (McCleery)

There will be an interval of 15 minutes between the Acts.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY AUSTEN HURGON.

The Dresses designed by PERCY ANDERSON.

Ladies' Costumes in Act I. and the Gentlemen's in Acts I. and II. executed by Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8 King Street, Covent Garden.

The Ladies' Dresses in Act II. by Madame NETTLESHIP, 28 & 30 Wigmore Street.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

Properties by J. FRASER.

Musical Director	.. Mr. Leonard Hornsey
Stage Manager	.. Mr. Arthur Bailey
Business Manager	.. Mr. Kay Draco
Assistant Acting Manager ..	.. Mr. Bernard L. Braithwaite

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

PRIVATE BOXES, £2 2s., £1 1s.
STALLS, First three Rows, 6s.; other Rows, 5s.
DRESS CIRCLE, First three Rows, 4s.; other Rows, 3s.
PIT STALLS, 3s.
UPPER CIRCLE, 2s. 6d.
All the above are bookable (Free of Charge).
PIT, 1s. 6d.; Early doors, 2s.
AMPHITHEATRE, 1s.; Early doors, 1s. 6d.
GALLERY, 6d.; Early doors, 9d.

THE QUEEN'S.

On Wednesday Afternoon, May 4, Revival of "HAMLET."

Claudius	MR. FRANK TYARS
Hamlet	MR. H. B. IRVING
Polonius	MR. CHARLES ALLAN
Laertes	MR. ARTHUR HOLMES-GORE
Horatio	MR. EILLE NORWOOD
Osric	MR. STUART MUSGROVE
Rosencrantz	MR. STANLEY HOWLETT
Guildenstern	MR. J. PATRIC CURWEN
Marcellus	MR. H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Bernardo	MR. KING FORDHAM
Francisco	MR. ROLAND PERTUIS
Reynaldo	MR. W. GRAHAM
First Player	MR. FRANK COCHRANE
Second Player	MR. ALEX. SCOTT-GATTY
Priest	MR. H. R. COOKE
First Gravedigger	MR. TOM REYNOLDS
Second Gravedigger	MR. ARTHUR CURTIS
Ghost of Hamlet's Father	MR. HENRY VISART
Gertrude	MISS ESME BERINGER
Ophelia	MISS DOROTHEA BAIRD
Player Queen	MISS DORA BARTON

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

HELENA'S PATH,

A COMEDY, IN THREE ACTS.

BY ANTHONY HOPE & COSMO GORDON LENNOX.

AND

THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK

A COMEDY, IN ONE ACT.

BY J. M. BARRIE.

TUESDAY, 3rd MAY, 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, MAY 3rd, AT 9.

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

HELENA'S PATH,

A Comedy in Three Acts, by

ANTHONY HOPE and COSMO GORDON LENNOX.

Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

Lord Lynborough	CHARLES BRYANT
Roger Wilbraham	CHARLES MAUDE
Leonard Stabb	ARTHUR WHITBY
Mr. Stillford	O. P. HEGGIE
Col. Wenman	FREDERICK LLOYD
John Goodenough	LESLIE CARTER
Mr. Peters	WHITFORD KANE
Green	C. E. VERNON
A Photographer	W. WILLIAMS
A Yokel	E. SIDNEY
Footman at Nab Grange	HAROLD CHAPIN
The Marchesa di San Servolo	IRENE VANBRUGH
Lady Norah Mountliffey	MARY JERROLD
Miss Gilletson	MARY BARTON

Acts I. and III. — The Boundary of the Nab Grange Estate.

Act II. — The Village Cricket-ground at Fillby.

Preceded at 8.30 by

THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK

A Comedy in One Act, by J. M. BARRIE.

Produced by DION BOUCICAULT.

Sir Harry Sims	EDMUND GWENN
Lady Sims	MARY BARTON
Kate	HILDA TREVELYAN
Tombes	CHARLES CALVERT

Helena's Path is a very pretty, bright, pleasant, vivacious, and agreeable entertainment of the stage. The story is slight, but it is not felt that it is too thin for the dialogue until near the conclusion, where a certain tendency to over-elaboration and an exaggeration of fantasy caused a feeling of strain, and on Tuesday drew some rude comments from persons in the gallery. It was, no doubt, a breach of good manners for a "god" to remark "and so say all of us!" at the end of the reading of a manifesto from one of the lovers to the other; but the authors had themselves partly to thank for the interruption. Up to that point the piece had been very favourably received, and if they can modify the "solemn-ridiculous" spirit which does undoubtedly pervade this part of the play, it will be even more certain to be repeated with success.

The Marchesa di San Servolo, a most gracious and fascinating lady, has bought the beautiful Nab Grange Estate, and we see her there with her solicitor, her companion, Miss Gilletson, her female friend, Lady Norah Mountliffey, and her military admirer, Colonel Wenman. But there is a crumpled leaf on her bed of roses. Through her garden runs a right of way, a footpath which has been used for years by the local population. The Marchesa determines to close it, barricades the gate with furze, has a large padlock affixed, and erects a notice-board stating that the garden is "Private." Her neighbour, Lord Lynborough, an adventurous "original," who has travelled in foreign parts, and is a lover of women, has been accustomed to use the path on his way to bathe, and he writes protesting against the Marchesa's high-handed proceedings. She replies in a hostile spirit, and the two parties, as her lawyer says, "join issue." Lord Lynborough has the padlock carefully removed, and sends it to the Marchesa by messenger. He then presents himself at the gate, and when Lady Norah tries to prevent his entrance by standing inside and refusing to move, he jumps over her head, and thus places himself in the garden. A stalwart retainer of the Marchesa's is ordered to arrest his progress; but his lordship throws him off his guard, pushes him down on the ground, and, having overcome all obstacles, goes calmly on his way to the bathing-place.

In the second act, on the village cricket-ground at Pillby, the parties continue their contest. Lord Lynborough, by insidious courtesy and by the temptations of a luxurious luncheon-tent, wins Miss Gilletson and the Colonel to his side, and the Marchesa, by her personal fascinations, detaches from their allegiance Lynborough's antiquarian chum, Leonard Stabb, and his secretary. Meanwhile, love has sprung up in the hearts of Lynborough and the Marchesa, neither of whom, however, will give in, though he certainly has right on his side. In the last act, he sends to her a mock-heroic document, in which he proposes to come and see her personally. When he arrives, he kneels at her feet, and finally, after pourparlers, takes her in his arms and kisses her.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

Lessee and Manager - - - - - CHARLES FROHMAN

TO-NIGHT (Thursday), MAY 5th, 1910, AT 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN & ARTHUR BOURCHIER

PRESENT

PARASITES

A Play in Four Acts

from "La Rabouilleuse" by EMILE FABRE, adapted by PAUL M. POTTER, which was founded on a story by Balzac.

Colonel Philippe Bridau	Mr. BOURCHIER
Jean Jacques Rouget	Mr. A. E. GEORGE
Commandant Max Gilet	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
Joseph Bridau	Mr. ACTON BOND
Borniche	Mr. DRELINCOURT ODLUM
General Carpentier	Mr. BERTRAM FORSYTH
Captain Potel	Mr. FREDERIC SARGENT
Captain Renard	Mr. FRANK ATHERLEY
Commandant Mignonnet	Mr. GEORGE BEALBY
Ors' Anto	Mr. OSCAR ADYE
Kouski	Mr. DALLAS CAIRNS
Flora Brazier	Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER
Madame Bridau	Miss MARIE LINDEN
La Vedie	Miss ROSE DUPRE

The Action of the Play passes at Issoudun, near Bourges, in 1824.

Half-an-Hour is supposed to elapse between Acts I. and II., Twelve Hours between Acts II. and III., and Twelve Days between Acts III. and IV.

The Play Produced by GUSTAV von SEYFFERTITZ, of the Empire Theatre, New York.

Miss CONSTANCE COLLIER's Dresses by LUCILE, LTD.
Uniforms by MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Coute d'Avril"	...	Widor
VALSE LENTE	"Songe d'ete"	...	Brunet
a ENTR'ACTE	"Bijou"	...	Antreassian
b. MARCH	"Le Regiment de Sembre et Meuse"	...	Turlet
SUITE	"La Feria"	...	Lacome

Organ and "Celesta" by MUSTEL & Co., 80 Wigmore Street, W.
Pianoforte by STEINWAY, Lower Seymour Street.

Musical Director — HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

Acting Manager ... ... — Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY
Stage Manager ... ... — Mr. WILLIAM BURCHILL

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. — W. LESTOCQ
Business Manager ... ... — OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary

When a play has started by being a French philosophical satire, has been transformed into a Parisian dramatic success, and, finally, has become a rousing comedy with a predominant part for the principal performer, it is not necessary to catalogue it too carefully. We have simply to take it for what it is worth at present; and certainly Mr. Paul M. Potter's workmanlike adaptation of M. Emile Fabre's version of Balzac's Ménage de Garçon fulfilled all the functions of amusement up to the end of its third act. The infatuation of an old man for a pretty woman young enough to be his daughter is always effectively comic on the stage, and this is the leading motive of Parasites. Old Jean Jacques Rouget has taken to himself as mistress and housekeeper a handsome young peasant, Flora Brazier, and she has obtained complete command over him. The old man's avarice, however, is at war with his infatuation with Flora, and she has to work hard in order to get him even to consider the notion of making over to her his personal property. This once attained, Flora intends to run away to Paris with a good-looking young officer, Commandant Max Gilet, who frequents Rouget's house. When affairs are in this state, Madame Bridau, Rouget's sister, comes to Issondun and asks him to advance a sum of money to help her son, Colonel Phillppe Bridau, who is in prison awaiting his trial for an alleged conspiracy against the Government. On being refused, Madame Bridau reproaches her brother with his subjection to Flora, and alludes to the latter's intrigue with Gilet. Flora, however, asserts her influence on old Rouget, and by feminine wiles, furious protestations, and hysterics, makes him promise to have nothing to do with his relatives. The latter are entirely defeated, and Max and Flora are triumphant, when, at the end of the first act, Colonel Philippe Bridau, who has been acquitted on the charge of conspiracy, arrives on the scene. He is a Napoleonic swashbuckler, all vigour, audacity, aculeness, and bluster, and he demands to see his uncle.

It now becomes a duel of wits between Flora and Philippe, and the contest is very brisk and spirited. In order to soften Rouget, Flora, at the advice of Max, pretends to run away to Bourges, where Rougot's notary lives, so that the old man may follow her and be induced to make the desired arrangement as to his personal property. But she has reckoned without Philippe, who explains to his uncle the character and intentions of Flora, and informs him of her relations with Gilet. Philippe also extracts from Rouget information as to the extent to which his uncle's senile credulity has already gone, and obtains possession of a will leaving Flora everything. He meets every move of her's and Max's with a clever counter-stroke, and at the end of the second act remains master of the situation.

It is evident to Max that his audacious enemy must be "removed," and this Max proposes to do by a duel. Philippe has given out—quite falsely—that his sword-arm has grown weak, and Max thinks that if he can manage so that he shall be the insulted party, he may get the choice of weapons, and select swords

In the third act old Rouget has conceived a bitter hatred for Max, and implores Philippe to kill him, which Bridau is quite ready to do. Some of the exiled Napoleon's old officers are the guests of Rouget; and, as they are carousing, Bridau enters, and is introduced. He is warmly received as a martyr to the cause; but Max, at the first opportunity, picks a quarrel with him. Philippe is quite ready to take offence, and insults Gilet unmistakably. A duel is arranged, Max having the choice of weapons. Flora, who fears for her lover, tries all her tricks to soften and delude Philippe, who lets her exercise her most seductive fascinations, and then laughs at her.

The last act strikes a weak and unexpected note. Flora, whose hatred for Philippe is now intense, encourages Max's faithful servant Ors' Anto to assassinate Bridau as he is approaching in a fog. A shot is heard, and Philippe enters, making the dry remark that "there is a man outside who requires attention." And then he turns Flora out of doors, and sits down to dinner with his uncle and his mother.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, MAY 7, 1910.

KING EDWARD VII.

With grief inexpressible the nation will learn to-day of the terrible blow that has fallen upon it. Our beloved King has passed away, and sleeps with the mighty dead. In the words of the Highland coronach, he is gone "like a summer-dried fountain, when our need is the sorest." So swiftly, so suddenly has the hand of Death descended that his people will read the tragic news to-day before they even knew that his precious life was in danger.

KING GEORGE & THEATRES.

REOPENING TO-MORROW AT HIS MAJESTY'S REQUEST.

King George, with a gracious and thoughtful consideration for the interests of the theatrical profession, informed the managers of the London theatres yesterday that it was his wish that the theatres should be opened except on the day of King Edward's funeral. The communication, which was sent to Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. George Alexander, was addressed from the Lord Chamberlain's office, St. James's Palace, and was as follows:

The Lord Chamberlain has received the King's orders to the effect that in view of the number of people who would be thrown out of employment by a prolonged closing of the theatres his Majesty wishes that the theatres should be opened, except on the day of his late Majesty's funeral.

A meeting of managers was called, and in their reply to the Lord Chamberlain they stated:

"We need hardly say how deeply this gracious and thoughtful act of his Majesty is appreciated by the London managers and by all the theatres throughout the country. We desire to assure your lordship that the managers as a body intended as a voluntary act of loyalty to close their theatres until after the funeral of our late beloved Sovereign.

"May we ask you to convey to his Majesty our deep appreciation of his kind consideration? The West End theatres will re-open from next Wednesday."

By reason of many actors and others directly interested in plays that were running last week having gone out of London all the theatres cannot be reopened to-morrow, but with the exception of the Adelphi, the Playhouse, and perhaps one or two others, business will generally be resumed on that day. The Lyceum and Aldwych Theatres will reopen to-night, and the Crystal Palace will also reopen to-day. The Beecham Opera Comique season at His Majesty's Theatre, which on Saturday had to be suddenly postponed until further notice, will be inaugurated on Thursday evening.

Sir Herbert Tree, who had abandoned all intention of appearing at Dublin until after the funeral of King Edward, leaves for the Irish capital with his company to-day.

Another result of the thoughtful action of King George is that the restaurants generally will resume the employment of their musicians, and give work to many hundreds of men thrown temporarily out of work.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

CHAINS,

A PLAY. IN FOUR ACTS.

BY

ELIZABETH BAKER.

TUESDAY. 17th MAY. 1910.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE

TO-NIGHT. TUESDAY. MAY 17th, AT 8.30.

CHARLES FROHMAN PRESENTS

CHAINS,

A Play, in Four Acts, by ELIZABETH BAKER.

Produced by DION BOUCICAULT.

CHARLIE WILSON	DENNIS EADIE
FRED TENNANT	FREDERICK LLOYD
MORTON LESLIE	ARTHUR WHITBY
PERCY MASSEY	DONALD CALTHROP
ALFRED MASSEY	EDMUND GWENN
WALTER FOSTER	HUBERT HARBEN
FENWICK	LEWIS CASSON
LILY WILSON	HILDA TREVELYAN
MAGGIE MASSEY	SYBIL THORNDIKE
MRS. MASSEY	FLORENCE HAYDON
SYBIL FROST	DOROTHY MINTO

Acts I., II. and IV. Charlie Wilson's House, 55, Acacia Avenue, Hammersmith.

Act III. - - - Alfred Massey's House, Chiswick.

The favourable notice which we printed of the original performance of Miss Elizabeth Baker's piece after its production by the Play Actors at the Comedy Theatre on April 18 last year was fully justified by the reception which was given to Chains at the Duke of York's in connection with Mr. Frohman's Repertory Theatre on Tuesday. Miss Baker has chosen for study the lower middle class, the class of the clerk and the small tradesman, which she treats in soberly realistic fashion, embellished with delightful humour, and represents without caricature. Such plays are not too popular with the general public, who prefer the idealised picture presented by less conscientious artists than Miss Baker, whose truth of treatment is uncompromising. The characters are capitally drawn, and the dialogue, dealing as much of it does, with the little things that are great to little men, is faithfully studied from the real conversation of the class. The slight story is decidedly interesting; and so truly are the characters drawn, so sharply do they appeal to us as real and living individuals, that we follow with interest the humble hopes and projects of the dramatis personæ, and are distressed when the first turn out to be baseless, and the latter are found to be futile. As is the fashion nowadays, Chains ends on a note of depression, the doctrine of renunciation being strongly preached when the hero, who has stuff in him that might lead to success in the Colonies, consents to remain a drudge at the entreaty of his wife and the prospect of a "babe unborn."

The action opens in the sitting-room of a lower middle-class family, consisting of Charlie Wilson, a City clerk, his wife Lily, and a lodger, Fred Tennant, also a clerk. The "atmosphere" of Acacia-avenue, Hammersmith, is cleverly created, the dialogue being always soberly realistic. Excitement is soon created by the announcement on the part of the lodger that he is weary of office drudgery, and has resigned his berth in the City in order to go to Australia. There is a good deal of discussion pro and con Tennant's proposed step; and Wilson, whose salary has been reduced owing to the lessened profits of the firm by which he is engaged, is almost convinced of the wisdom of Tennant's proposed course, and thinks of accompanying him.

A character who has a serious amount of influence on the play is Wilson's father-in-law, Alfred Massey, a plumber. He is a somewhat cynical philosopher, who does his plumbing doggedly, and sleeps away Sunday on a sofa. He is the father of Lily, and he cannot comprehend why anyone should throw up a safe berth and exchange a certainty for an uncertainty. Another opponent of any adventurous action on Charlie's part is his wife. When she learns that he proposes to go out to Australia alone, she fancies that he is tired of her, and tells her relations and friends so. His father-in-law and his mother-in-law are both against his emigrating; but Charlie has a sympathiser in his sister-in-law, Maggie Massey, a restless, revoltant girl, who promises to look after her sister till he returns, or until he is in a position to send for her to come out to him. So Charlie determines to get away secretly, and tells Tennant he will meet him at Southampton. But Lily has a last card to play. She informs Charlie that she is to be a mother; and, vanquished by this information, he resigns himself to his fate and to life-long clerkdom.

GARRICK THEATRE

CHARING CROSS ROAD. W.C.

Lessees and Managers ... Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. HERBERT SLEATH, Dormy Cottage, Woking.

FRIDAY, MAY 13TH, AT 8.30,

Miss GERTRUDE ELLIOTT

(LIEBLER & CO., MANAGERS)

IN A NEW PLAY

. . THE . .

DAWN OF A TO-MORROW

By FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

Sir Oliver Holt	Mr. HERBERT WARING
Mr. Oliver Holt	Mr. JAMESON LEE FINNEY
Sir Bowling Burford	Mr. J. H. BARNES
Dr. Heath	Mr. JAMES HEARN
Dr. Satterley	Mr. JAMES GELDARD
Lord Tommy Dartmore	Mr. PHILIP LESLIE
Dandy	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
The Thief	Mr. J. PARISH ROBERTSON
Barney	Mr. FRANK BERTRAM .
Jem	Mr. JOHN TRESAHAR
The Bat..	Mr. GREIGHTON HALE
The Kid	Master GEORGE HUGHES
Bedell	Mr. ERNEST C. JOY
Powell	Mr. SAM PEARCE
Inspector Barnes	Mr. CHARLES WEIR
Policeman	Mr. EDWARD CHESTER
Butler	Mr. CHARLES KING
Bet	Miss ADA DWYER
Polly	Miss JANE COMFORT
Feathers	Miss MARIE BOYD
Mimi	Miss MAUDE BUCHANAN
Suzanne	Miss MAGDALEINE COTTA
Manette	Miss VIOLET CRAGIE
Madge Delorme	Miss PORTIA KNIGHT
AND
"Glad"	Miss GERTRUDE ELLIOTT

Act I. ..	Scene 1	Library at Sir Oliver Holt's.	Early Evening
	Scene 2	Apple Blossom Court, East End.	Later

There will be an interval of two minutes between Scenes 1 and 2 in Act I.

Act II. ..	.. "Glad's" Garret in a house in Apple Blossom Court.	Night
Act III.	Mr. Oliver Holt's Chambers.	Dawn

The Play staged by Mr. HUGH FORD.

Scenery by HEMSLEY, HANN, and SCHMITZ.

Programme of Music.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. HERBERT FOX, will play the following Selections:—

OVERTURE	"Lysistrata"	Lincke
BETWEEN ACTS I. & II. ...	"Masque Music"	German
BETWEEN ACTS II. & III. ...	"Petite Suite"	Borowski

MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

EXTRA MATINEE WHIT MONDAY AT 2.30.

The Box Office (Mr. A. R. BRITTEN) is open daily from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.

Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone 9513 Gerrard.

GENERAL MANAGER (for Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Mr. Herbert Sleath) Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM

ACTING MANAGER ... ... } for Liebler & Co., Ltd. { Mr. A. PENLEY

STAGE MANAGER ... ... } for Liebler & Co., Ltd. { Mr. ERNEST C. JOY

It opens in the library in the house of a rich man named Sir Oliver Holt, who, broken down with nerves and insomnia, given up by the doctors, and tired of life, is determined to commit suicide. He gives out that he is going to Paris, but purchases an old suit of workman's clothes, and starts for the East End, where, in disguise, he intends to put an end to himself in some wretched garret. The only person whom Sir Oliver has depending on him is his nephew, Mr. Oliver Holt, a mean, heartless reprobate, who has succeeded in concealing his vices from his rich relative.

In the second scene of the act we see, through a fog darkly, Apple Blossom-court, a criminal colony in the East End. Gradually the fog clears away, and the local population appears. It seems that three recent inhabitants of the court have engaged in a burglary, which has ended in a murder, and that two of them have been arrested. The third, Dandy, is in hiding somewhere in the vicinity. Sir Oliver enters in disguise, and comes in contact with a strange, original girl, "Glad," who, despite the temptations of Apple Blossom-court, has preserved her reputation, both for virtue and honesty. "Glad's" nature is essentially optimistic. She believes in the efficacy of prayer, and her vitality and cheerfulness have an excellent effect on Sir Oliver, drawing his mind away from his own troubles. In the end he becomes deeply interested in the girl and in the people in the court.

In the second act we find Dandy seeking refuge in "Glad's" garret. He really had no part in the burglary, having fallen behind his comrades and abandoned the enterprise; but they, in revenge, swore that he was with them, and Dandy is in danger of the death penalty. The only person who can prove an alibi for him is Mr. Oliver Holt, who met him on the night of the murder at the very time when it was being committed. "Glad" conceals Dandy in a cupboard under the roof, and he manages to get down to the basement and hide before the garret is searched by the police.

And now "Glad" determines to put her faith in prayer to the test. She will go to Mr. Oliver, and will ask him to come forward and prove an alibi for Dandy, though it is unlikely that he will do so, as he wants "Glad" for himself, and would be willing to see his rival out of the way. She goes to his chambers, and asks him to come forward and save Dandy. Holt refuses, but eventually promises to prove the alibi if "Glad" will become his mistress. She agrees to do so if nothing happens in answer to a prayer which she makes for help. Oliver threatens her with violence, but she rings up the police on the telephone, and Sir Oliver's arrival on the scene alters the situation entirely. Oliver swears to the alibi, Dandy promises to lead an honest life in future, and Sir Oliver is entirely cured by his experience and adventures.

TERRY'S THEATRE.

Sole Proprietor . . . . . Mr. EDWARD TERRY.

Under the Management of Mr. GILBERT PORTEOUS.

May 21

EVERY EVENING AT 8.15

DAME NATURE

A New Play in Four Acts,

Adapted from HENRY BATAILLE'S "La Femme Nue"

By FREDERICK FENN.

Robert Bertram	Mr. ERNEST LEICESTER
The Prince de Chabran	Mr. NORMAN FORBES
James Ridgeway	Mr. FRANK COOPER
Paul Garford	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Henry Greville	Mr. F. KINSEY PEILE
Chaillard	Mr. CHARLES HAMPDEN
Arnheim	Mr. CHARLES DODSWORTH
Rivett	Mr. RICHARD HATTERAS
Certin	Mr. KEITH J. SHEPERD
Ernest Taubman	Mr. H. ASHETON TONGE
Sadler	Mr. BERTRAM STEER
Taylor	Mr. RICHARD CARFAX
Roussell	Mr. J. A. BENTHAM
Johnson	Mr. JOHN CASTLE
Harvey	Mr. EDMOND BREON
Princess de Chabran	Miss LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Mimi	Miss MINNIE TERRY
Emma	Miss VERITA VIVIEN
Madame Certin	Miss FLORENCE NELSON
Madame Moulzi	Miss WINIFRED HARRIS
Isadora Lorenz	Miss MABEL HUNT
Suzon Cassagne	Miss PAMELA GAYTHORNE
Mrs. Garford	Miss AGNES HEWITT
AND
Lolette	Miss ETHEL IRVING

Artistes and Guests: Miss IVY WILLIAMS; Messrs. HAROLD HOLLAND, A. JONES, CHARLES TERRIC, VALENTINE PENNA, DAVID DARRELL, SIDNEY BUCKLAND.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

TO-NIGHT AT 9 O'CLOCK,

CHARLES FROHMAN & ARTHUR BOURCHIER

PRESENT

PARASITES

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

A MIDNIGHT MEETING

A Comedietta by CUTHBERT MORLEY.

Cecily	.. Miss ENID SASS
Kate	.. Miss JEAN HARKNESS
A Burglar	.. Mr. GEORGE BEALBY

The Scene occurs in a Bedroom of a country house near London.

"A MIDNIGHT MEETING."

Comedietta, by Cuthbert Morley, Produced at the Globe Theatre, on Saturday, May 21.

Cecily .....MISS ENID SASS
Kate .....MISS JEAN HARKNESS
A Burglar .....MR. GEORGE BEALBY

The story of a burglar's complete seriousness is generally set out in three acts; it is in the one-act pieces in which his reserve is thrown aside, and he becomes either the cynic, the pessimist, or the humorist. He is all three in Cuthbert Morley's little play produced on Saturday evening in front of Parasites at the Globe. Cecily and Kate are chatting in the former's bedroom before retiring for the night. Cecily is a leader of the Suffragist movement, and will speak on the morrow at the Caxton Hall. There is nothing angular or unattractive about her; but nevertheless she poses as a strong-minded female, and has wagered a new hat with a male friend that she would not faint at the sight of a burglar. During the conversation she toys with an unloaded revolver, frightening her friend, but unconsciously giving the cue to a burglar concealed behind the curtains of the French windows. Kate having said good-night, Cecily goes off to sleep while reading a speech antagonistic to the Votes for Women movement—a speech that she hopes to answer triumphantly in her speech on the morrow. A noise made by the cracksman awakens her, and she finds herself in darkness with the door locked and the key gone. At once concluding that a practical joke has been played upon her, she calls upon her male friend to come out of his hiding place. But she discovers her mistake when the brutal countenance of the burglar faces her revolver quite calmly and tells her it is not loaded. He appropriates the contents of her jewel case, her friend's diamond ring, her bracelets, and detaches a necklet by force. He considers himself an expert in jewels with advanced political views, and is quite a lady's man. Cecily behaves very pluckily, but when the burglar leaves her, after giving expression to his enjoyment of a very pleasant evening, she faints. On her recovery the thief has got clear away with the swag, and Cecily runs in terror from the room, calling her friend.

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE
23 May, 1910
Orch. Stall
No. B 5
THIS PORTION TO BE RETAINED
MORNING

Monday, May 23rd, at 2.30 p.m. (and Monday and Friday Matinees until further notice) :

"FIRES OF FATE"

BY

ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

Colonel Cyril Egerton, D.S.O., 53rd Bengal Lancers ...	Mr. BEN WEBSTER
The Rev. Samuel Roden, Minister of Clayview Congregational Church, Hackney	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
James Roden, M.D., F.R.C.S. ...	Mr. BASSETT ROE
Mr. Thomas Belmont, of Dublin...	Mr. ARTHUR BURNE
Mr. Cecil Brown, of London ...	Mr. SPENCER TREVOR
Mr. Brodie, of Edinburgh ...	Mr. ALEC. F. THOMPSON
Mons. Octave Fardet, of Paris ...	Mr. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Rudkin, Dr. Roden's Butler ...	Mr. CHARLES COMBE
Abdulla, a Dragoman	Mr. A. S. HOMEWOOD
Captain Jack Archer, Bimbashi, Egyptian Camel Corps ...	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
Sidi Mohamed, a Dervish Spy ...	Mr. W. CRONIN WILSON
Ali Wad Ibrahim, an Arab Chief...	Mr. FRANK WOOLFE
Abdurrahman do. ...	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
A Dervish	Mr. A. CATON WOODVILLE
Mrs. Belmont	Miss DOROTHEA DESMOND
Miss Adams } of Massachu-	Miss AGNES THOMAS
Miss Sadie Adams } setts, U.S.A.	Miss RUTH BOWER

Soudanese Soldiers, Negroes, Arabs, etc.

Time ... ... The Winter of 1894

Act I. ... ... Dr. Roden's Consulting Room
Act II. ... ... A Tourist Steamer on the Nile
Act III. ... ... The Abousir Rock
Act IV. ... ... The Oasis of Abouteh

The curtain will be lowered for 30 seconds during Act IV. to mark lapse of time

There will be Intervals of 10 minutes between the Acts

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Mr. H. B. IRVING

On SATURDAY, MAY 28th, 1910

And Every Evening at 8.30

MATINÉES: Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30

Will be acted (by arrangement with Mr. George Alexander)

"JUDGE NOT—"

A Play in Two Acts, from the French of GEORGES HENRIOT.

Translated by P. G. DUCHESNE.

The Examining Magistrate	Mr. H. B. IRVING
The Attorney General	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
The Counsel for the Defence	Mr. HENRY VIBART
The Doctor	Mr. FRANK TYARS
The Magistrate's Clerk	Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
The Prisoner	Mr. EILLE NORWOOD
The Prisoner's Wife	Miss EDYTH OLIVE

Scene:

A Magistrate's Private Room in a French Provincial Town.

Time: The Present.

An Interval of One Day is supposed to elapse between the Acts.

(There will be an actual interval of five minutes only, during which time it is requested that the audience will remain seated).

FOLLOWED BY

ROBERT MACAIRE

A Drama in Two Acts (Fechter's Version).

Robert Macaire	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Jacques Strop	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Germeuil	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
Dumont	Mr. HENRY VIBART
Charles	Mr. ALEX. SCOTT-GATTY
Pierre	Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
Serjeant Loupy	Mr. FRANK TYARS
Louis	Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
François	Mr. ROLAND PERTUIS
Gendarmes	Messrs. A. GRENFELL and W. H. GRAHAM
Marie	Miss ESMÉ BERINGER
Adele	Miss GLADYS BAIRD

Act I., Scene: The Exterior of a Roadside Inn.
Act II., Scene: The Interior of the Inn.

The Dance arranged by M. EDOUARD ESPINOSA.

Dancers: Misses Irene Browne, E. Sinclair, and E. Videau; Messrs Musgrove, Roper, and Robinson.

Scenery by G. SACKMANN.

Overture	"Hebrides"	Mendelssohn
Ballet Music	Selected
Overture	"Robert Macaire"	J. Meredith Ball
Selection	"Gypsy Suite"	E. German

Musical Director, Mr. J. MEREDITH BALL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 5s.; Upper Circle, 4s. and 3s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s; Private Boxes, One to Three Guineas.

Box Office (Mr. J. W. SHEPPARD) Now Open. Telephone: Gerrard 9437 (two lines).

Acting Manager and Treasurer	Mr. J. B. GLOVER
Stage Manager	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. H. RAE COOK

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

GENERAL MANAGER — Mr. AUSTIN BRERETON

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Saturday, May 28th, 1910, and every Evening at 8.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2-30.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY'S PRODUCTION OF

SHAKESPEARE'S

RICHARD III.

Characters.

King Edward IV.	Mr. ERIC MAYNE
Edward, Prince of Wales	Miss BRENDA GIBSON
Richard, Duke of York	Miss ETHEL PATRICK
George, Duke of Clarence	Mr. OWEN ROUGHWOOD
Richard, Duke of Gloucester (afterwards King Richard III.)	Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
The Duke of Buckingham	Mr. CHARLES GLENNEY
The Duke of Norfolk...	Mr. C. GEORGE
Earl Rivers	Mr. E. J. FRASER
Lord Stanley	Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Henry, Earl of Richmond	Mr. PHILIP NEWLAND
Lord Hastings	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Marquis of Dorset	Mr. LEONARD CRASKE
Lord Grey	Mr. DAVID BAIN
Lord Lovel	Mr. S. MCCARTHY
Sir William Brandon	Mr. D. HOLM
Sir William Catesby	Mr. ALFRED MANSFIELD
Sir Richard Ratcliffe	Mr. EDWARD COMBERMERE
Lord Mayor of London	Mr. DENHOLM MUIR
Sir James Tyrrel	Mr. B. A. PITTAR
The Bishop of Ely	Mr. A. WILSON
Sir James Blount	Mr. F. PERCY
Sir Robert Brackenbury	Mr. H. GRAVES
1st Murderer	Mr. GEORGE COOKE
2nd Murderer	Mr. PERCY FOSTER
1st Messenger	Mr. PAUL BARRY
2nd Messenger...	Mr. A. B. MCKAY
3rd Messenger...	Mr. C. LEONARD
Queen Margaret	Miss MARY RORKE
Queen Elizabeth	Miss SYBIL WALSH
Duchess of York	Mrs. A. B. CROSS
Page to Richard	Miss BESSIE ELDER
Lady Anne	Miss N. DE SILVA

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act 1—An Open Place Outside the Tower -	William Telbin
Act 2, Scene 1—A Room in the Palace -	George Dodson
Scene 2—A Dungeon in the Tower -	William Telbin
Scene 3—Another Room in the Palace	George Dodson
Scene 4—An Open Place Outside the Tower - - - -	William Telbin
Act 3, Scene 1—A Chamber in the Tower -	George Dodson
Scene 2—Baynard's Castle - -	George Dodson
Act 4, Scene 1—Before the Tower - -	George Dodson
Scene 2—The Throne Room in the Palace	George Dodson
Scene 3—Another Room in the Palace	George Dodson
Scene 4—Outside the Palace - -	George Dodson
Act 5, Scene 1—Bosworth Field - - -	George Dodson
Scene 2—Outside Richmond's Tent -	George Dodson
Scene 3—Richard's Tent at Bosworth Field	George Dodson
Scene 4—Outside Richmond's Tent -	George Dodson
Scene 5—Richard's Tent at Bosworth Field	George Dodson
Scene 6—Bosworth Field - - -	George Dodson

The Dresses designed and executed by Miss D. CARLETON SMYTH.
The Fighting arranged by ALFRED MANSFIELD.
The Heraldry under the supervision of the Rev. E. E. DORLING.
The Overture and Incidental Music by WILLIAM HUDSON, who will conduct on the first night.

The Orchestra, under the direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE, will play selections during the intervals, as per list overleaf.

Acting Manager (for Popular Playhouses, Ltd.) - Mr. W. F. CROWE.

Business Manager - - - - Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL.
Stage Director: Mr. JOHN KURKAMP. For Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
Assistant Stage Manager: Mr. DAVID BAIN.

Box Office (EDWARD HACKETT) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard.
Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Dress Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. (Reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Playwrights across the Channel have before dealt very effectively with French methods of administering justice, and one remembers the strong little tragedy taken from La Robe Rouge, and presented by Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh at the Garrick a few years since. Even more powerful in the thrilling denouement is the version by Mr. Duchesne of Georges Henriot's piece L'Enquête, entitled Judge Not — which was produced by Mr. Henry B. Irving at the Queen's on Saturday evening, before a deeply interested audience. The scene of the play is the room of an examining magistrate. A particularly brutal murder has been committed. A highly respected and popular judge has been done to death, and the ferocity of the attack has been such that the body is covered with bruises caused by some blunt instrument, such as a loaded stick or a life-preserver. It cannot have been the work of a prowling Apache, for the watch and chain of the victim have been found upon him. The judge and examining magistrate had been both guests at a dinner party on that fatal evening, and strange to relate, the victim's companion on the walk home was the very man now conducting the criminal investigation. He had left the judge at the corner of the Rue Victor Hugo, and was horror-struck to read the announcement of his violent death in the next morning's papers. In the search of the murdered man's house, among the contents of a bureau is discovered a bundle of letters from a Madame Moreau—letters clearly establishing a liaison between her and the deceased. The examining magistrate, on this documentary evidence, comes to the conclusion that revenge has been the motive of the crime, and obsessed with this idea, he conducts a ruthless cross-examination of the unhappy Moreau, a passionately jealous man, solely with the view of forcing him to confess. Madame Moreau is then persecuted with questions; but she does not help the theory of the judge when she indignantly asserts that her husband never knew anything of her guilt, and, therefore, had no motive whatever for the crime which the torturing questioner is only too anxious to bring home to him.

In the second act a different complexion is put upon the whole matter by a skilful counsel for the defence of Moreau, who is now a prisoner. He makes it pretty clear that the judge was murdered before his companion on that fatal night—i.e., the examining magistrate—had left him, and the tables are turned when the magistrate's stick, with its formidable silver knob, is examined, and found to be dented. A doctor then takes up the examination, and, by a series of questions, elicits the awful truth that the magistrate is subject to fits of epilepsy. He cannot recall the actual parting from the murdered man, nor the words he addressed to him at their leave-taking. His distress and anxiety are growing every moment more painful, and all of a sudden he utters a terrible cry and falls in a fit. As the doctor kneels down and loosens the collar of the convulsively twitching form, the curtain falls. The magistrate is the murderer, and Moreau is innocent; but he is a broken man, for during his terrible ordeal he has had to listen to his wife's confession of her guilt.

In deep contrast to modern French tragedy was presented the oft-adapted L'Auberge des Adrets, under the title of

"ROBERT MACAIRE."

Robert Macaire	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Jacques Strop	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Germeuil	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
Dumont	Mr. HENRY VIZARD
Charles	Mr. ALEX. SCOTT-GAITY
Pierre	Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
Sergeant Loupy	Mr. J. PATRIC CUSWEN
Louis	Mr. FRANK TYARS
François	Mr. ROLAND PERTUS
Marie	Miss BERT BRAINGER
Clementine	Miss GLADYS BAIRD

The particular version, chosen was the one used by Fechter, who played it as The Roadside Inn at the Lyceum on Jan. 21, 1865, with Widdicombe as Jacques Strop. In the art of depicting picturesque roguery Mr. Irving once more triumphed. The affectation of the manners of the fastidious gentleman in the tatters of the tramp was always amusing, and there was care taken that every attitude mimicked to the general effect of the impersonation. The final fall down the staircase, and the pathetic recognition of wife and son, rounded off a great success.

Alhambra Theatre

CHARING CROSS ROAD AND LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON.

Managing Director—ALFRED MOUL.

The National Variety Theatre.

Business Manager & Secretary, H. Woodford.
Treasurer. A. E. Corrick.
Stage Manager. Clarence Hunt.

Maitre de Ballet, Signor Alfredo Curti
Musical director, Geo. W. Byng.
Sub-Conductor and Leader Julian Jones.

PROGRAMME.

Subject to Alteration at the Discretion of the Management.

Programme for Week, commencing Monday, May 30th, 1910.

9 "FEMINA" 9.50

A NEW GRAND SPECTACULAR BALLET

By SIGNOR ALFREDO CURTI.

Music composed, selected, and arranged by GEORGE W. BYNG with the music of the fourth scene by Senor VALVERDE.
Costumes by ALIAS from designs by COMELLI.
Scenery by AMABLE of Paris and E. H. RYAN.
Master Macbinist, A. WILLIAMS. Electric Effects by J. WEBBER.
Wigs by GUSTAVE.

Presented under the Personal Direction of ALFRED MOUL.

The Spirit of Vanity	Mlle. BRITTA
Spanish Espada	Senor FAICO
Spanish Dancer	SENORA LOLA La PLAMENCA
High Priest	CHARLES RAYMOND
Keeper of the Posada	TOM COVENTRY
An Old Chief	R. VALLIS
AND
FEMINA	Mlle. LEONORA

Supported by the ALHAMBRA CORPS DE BALLET.

SCENE 1.—THE FIRST GARDEN.
Dance—The Creation of Fashion.
Mlle. BRITTA and LEONORA.
Dance of the Daughters of Eve.

SCENE 2.—THE STONE AGE.
Dances of the Warriors. The Ri-Tchave Troupe. And Members of the Corps de Ballet.

SCENE 3.—ANCIENT ASSYRIA.
Grand Bachanale.
Dance of Mystery—Mlle. LEONORA.
Dances—Europeans, Asiatics, Egyptians and Amazons.

SCENE 4.—SPAIN.

Dance Tango Gitana	LOLA La FLAMENCA
„ La Farruca	Mlle. LEONORA
„ Danza Salvage Gitana	SENOR FAICO
„ Habanera Tango	SENOR FAICO and Mlle. LEONORA

SCENE 5.—THE KINGDOM OF FASHION.
APOTHEOSIS
THE WEB OF VANITY.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

ON TUESDAY, MAY 31ST, 1910, AT 8.30 O'CLOCK,

DON CESAR DE BAZAN

Adapted from DUMANOIR & D'ENNERY'S Play of that name by

GERALD DU MAURIER.

Don César de Bazan	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
The King of Spain	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Don Jose de Santarem	Mr. WILLIAM HAVILAND
The Marquis de Montefiore	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Captain of the Guard	Mr. FRANK WOOLFE
Governor of the Prison	Mr. H. B. TABBERER
A Waterman	Mr. A. BAXENDELL
An Old Man	Mr. HENRY STEVENS
Perez	Mr. CATON WOODVILLE
First Exquisite	Mr. CRONIN WILSON
Second Exquisite	Mr. LEWIS BROUGHTON
Third Exquisite	Mr. REGINALD DANE
Gaoler	Mr. PATRICK DIGAN
An Officer	Mr. ARTHUR ANSELL
Pedro	Miss BERYL MERCER
The Marchioness de Montefiore ...	Miss MINNIE GRIFFEN
Marita	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE (By arrangement with Mr. HERBERT TRENCH)

	Scene	Spain.
Act I. ...	Scene 1	... A Street in Madrid
	Scene 2	A Guard Room in a Fortress
Act II. ...	... ...	The Palace of the Marquis de Montefiore
Act III. ...	... ...	Don Jose's Villa in the Forest of Aranjuez

Mr. Waller has been assisted in the production by Mr. HERBERT JARMAN.

"DON CESAR DE BAZAN."

On Tuesday, May 31, the Play, in Three Acts, adapted from Dumanoir and D'Ennery's Play of the same name by Gerald du Maurier, Originally Produced at the Coronet and Duke of York's Theatres as A Royal Rival in 1901.

Don César de Bazan.....Mr. Lewis Waller
The King of Spain....Mr. Leon Quaatermaine
Don José de Santarem..Mr. William Haviland
Marquis de Montefiore ..Ma. A. F. Thompson
Captain of the Guard ....Mr. Frank Woolfe
Governor of the Prison ....Mr. H. B. Tabberer
A Waterman .....Mr. A. Baxendell
An Old Man .....Ma. Henry Stevens
Perez .....Ma. Caton Woodville
First Exquisite .....Ma. Cronin Wilson
Second Exquisite .....Mr. Lewis Broughton
Third Exquisite .....Mr. Reginald Dane
Gaoler .....Mr. Patrick Dioan
An Officer .....Mr. Arthur Ansell
Pedro .....Miss Beryl Mercer
Marchioness de Montefiore.Miss Minnie Griffen
Marita .....Miss Madge Titheradge

Don César de Bazan is quite an old stage favourite, and the story will ever be associated with the melodious strains of W. Vincent Wallace in the still popular Maritana. The original French piece was produced at the Porte St. Martin, with Lemaitre in the title-rôle, on July 30, 1844; and in the first anglicised version, by Gilbert Abbott à Beckett and Mark Lemon, which was produced at the Princess's on Oct. 8, 1844, Mr. James Wallack was the Don César and Mrs. Stirling the Maritana. On the 14th of the same month in the same year Ben Webster brought out another version, by himself and Dion Boucicault, at the Adelphi, and other adaptations were to be seen in the same week at the Haymarket and Surrey. There were thus no fewer than four versions of the play running at the same time in London.

Mr. Lewis Waller is well served by Mr. Gerald Du Maurier's adaptation, which was produced at the Duke of York's in August, 1901, under the title of A Royal Rival.

CRITERION THEATRE.

On WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1st, 1910, and every evening at 8.30
Will be presented the Comedy in Three Acts:—

THE CASE OF REBELLIOUS SUSAN.

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

Sir Richard Kato, K.C.	CHARLES WYNDHAM
Admiral the Hon. Sir Joseph Darby	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
James Harabin	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Fergusson Pybus	Mr. LESLIE HAMER
Lucien Edensor	Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE (By kind permission of Herbert Trench, Esq.)
Mr. Jacomb	Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Kirby	Mr. KING FORDHAM
Footman	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
Hotel Waiter	Mr. S. BOND
Mrs. Quesnel...	Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS
Lady Darby	Miss MARIE ILLINGTON
Elaine Shrimpton	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
and
Lady Susan Harabin	Miss MARY MOORE

ACT I.	Morning Room at Mr. Harabin's in Mayfair
	Ten Months Pass.
ACT II. ..	Sir Richard Kato's Sitting-Room at the St. Mildred's Hotel, Westbay
	Fifteen Months Pass.
ACT III.	Sir Richard Kato's House In Harley Street

Stage Manager	Mr REGINALD WALTER
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
Musical Director	.. Mr. ALICK MACLEAN
Business Manager	..Mr J. W. LETHBRIDGE

Lady Susan Harabin, it will be remembered, has discovered her husband's infidelity, and is determined to leave him, and import a little romance into her life. This project she carries out in Cairo, where she meets an impressionable youngster named Lucien Edensor, who takes her to church, and in the second act proposes an elopement. The very good friend of everybody in the comedy prevents any such catastrophe, and as guardian of Lady Susan takes her under his immediate care. Her young lover becomes disillusioned on his voyage out to New Zealand, falls in love with somebody else; and when Lady Susan receives back in a piece of wedding cake the ring which she has given him as a token, she decides to take her husband back.

Sir Charles Wyndham plays with the same charm of manner and delightful ease that have always marked his rendering of the slightly cynical and tender-hearted man of the world. Sir Richard does the right thing all the time, and appeals to us both in his humour and his seriousness. Miss Mary Moore is just the froward, wilful, perverse, and winning Lady Susan that we have admired on previous occasions, and we are ready to believe the best of rebellious Susan as presented by her.

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.45,

THE SPECKLED BAND:

An Adventure of Sherlock Holmes,

By ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

Dr. Grimesby Rylott	a retired Anglo-Indian Surgeon, owner of Stoke Place	Mr. LYN HARDING
Enid Stonor	(Dr. Rylott's Step-daughter) ..	Miss CHRISTINE SILVER
Mrs. Staunton	(Housekeeper to Dr. Rylott) ..	Miss AGNES THOMAS
Rodgers ..	(Butler to Dr. Rylott) ..	Mr. A. S. HOMEWOOD
Ali, an Indian	(Valet to Dr. Rylott) ..	Mr. WILTON ROSS
Mr. Scott Wilson	(engaged to Enid's Sister) ..	Mr. ARTHUR BURNE
Mr. Armitage	(the Village Grocer) ..	Mr. SPENCER TREVOR
Mr. Longbrace ..	(Coroner)	Mr. J. J. BARTLETT
Mr. Brewer	(Foreman of the Jury) ..	Mr. FRANK RIDLEY
Inspector Downing ..	.. .. ..	Mr. GEOFFREY HILL
Coroner's Officer ..	.. .. ..	Mr. GEORGE LAUNDY
Mr. Holt Loaming ..	Clients of Mr. Sherlock Holmes	Mr. A. G. CRAIG
Mrs. Soames		Miss GWENDOLEN FLOYD
Mr. James B. Montague		Mr. A. CORNEY GRAIN
Mr. Milverton ..		Mr. FRANK RIDLEY
Billy ..	(Page to Sherlock Holmes) ..	Master CECIL F. LOWRIE
Dr. Watson ..	.. .. ..	Mr. CLAUDE KING
Peters	(a Butler)	Mr. C. LATER
Mr. Sherlock Holmes	.. .. ..	Mr. H. A. SAINTSBURY

Jurors at the Inquest.

Act I.	.. ..	The Hall of Stoke Place, Stoke Moran
		(Two years are supposed to elapse.)
Act II. ..	Scene 1	.. .. Dr. Rylott's Study, Stoke Place
	Scene 2	Mr. Sherlock Holmes' Rooms, Upper Baker Street, London
Act III. ..	Scene 1	.. .. .. The Hall of Stoke Place
	Scene 2	.. .. .. Enid's Bedroom, Stoke Place

Acting Manager ...	(for Mr. George Edwardes) ... Mr. CHARLTON MANN
Stage Manager ...	... ... Mr. W. W. KEENE
Assistant Stage Manager	... ... Mr. A. BACHNER

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE
4 June, 1910
Orch. Stall
I 5
THIS PORTION TO BE RETAINED

125

One at least of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories has been already dramatised with success. Mr. William Gillette, in his season at the Lyceum in the September of 1901, produced a drama with the detective's name as its title, he and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle having collaborated in adapting "The Strange Case of Miss Faulkner." In this, Holmes was by far the most prominent figure, and the struggle of intellects between him and the arch-criminal, Professor Moriarty, formed the theme of a most exciting play. In The Speckled Band, which was produced with complete success at the Adelphi Theatre last Saturday, the detective does not by any means occupy the whole of the stage, though he has an important influence on the action of the drama. The predominant personage is the villain, who is a great deal before the audience, and who is a bold, big, and emphatic individual.

Out of his short but thrilling story of cunning crime Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has evolved a highly-sensational and enthralling drama of crime and its detection, which, as soon as the interest of the audience has been engaged by a demonstration of affairs, holds them in a grip of iron, and leaves them at the close in a state of excited satisfaction. Sir Arthur winds into his subject gradually, with an inquest in the first act on the death of the sister of Enid Stonor, the heroine. The young lady has mysteriously and suddenly expired in her bedroom, and no cause can be assigned for her death, either by medical and other evidence. But at the end of the act we are left with a strong suspicion that Dr. Grimesby Rylott, a retired Anglo-Indian surgeon, the step-father of the girl, has had a hand in her murder in order that he may inherit a legacy left to her by her mother. As a similar legacy has been left to Enid, who, like her dead sister, lives with Rylott at his lonely country house, we feel anxious about her safety.

Two years elapse. Enid has become engaged, and refuses to sign a paper which would make over her money to Rylott. Fearing that she may share her sister's fate, she calls, in London, on Sherlock Holmes, to whom she has been recommended by her mother's friend, Dr. Watson. Holmes at once takes up her case, and promises to come to her rescue if she should be in imminent danger. In this act those in the audience who have not read the book get an inkling of the means by which Enid is to be done to death, for the curtain descends at the end of one of the scenes on the Doctor enticing a horrible puff adder out of his basket.

In the last act Rylott returns home from London, where he has engaged a new butler. The rapid and resourceful Holmes, who is on the spot, manages, at a critical moment, to assume the new menial's identity, to save Enid from Rylott's immediate brutality, and to shoot the savage dog which he keeps to guard the house. When night comes on Holmes and Watson overpower the Indian servant who watches outside Enid's window, enter her bedroom, and wait. Then through a ventilator in the wall and down a sham bell-rope comes the adder on his mission of death. The horrid thing, startled by a blow of Holmes's cane, glides back through the ventilator, and Dr. Rylott, who sent it on its deadly visit from the adjoining room, rushes in with the irritated reptile round his neck, and expires from its bite.

THE SNAKE ACTOR.

The snake which plays a realistic part in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's drama "The Speckled Band," at the Adelphi Theatre, is no imitation of the real creature, but a very formidable speckled python engaged for the run of the piece in spite of the fact that his name does not appear on the programme.

Every night the snake, coiled up in a box, makes his journey from the East End to the theatre, where he allows anyone to stroke him or lift him out of his box. The python is quite six feet long and very strong, yet at no time has he shown any disinclination to be put through the aperture in the scene of the last act, where he is supposed to enter the girl's room and attempt to strike her with his fangs.

He is the property of a naturalist and snake dealer, and in playing the name-part in the Adelphi drama is making his first acquaintance with a theatre audience.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

Sole Lessees and Managers ... ... A. & S. GATTI.

Under the Management of
Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

On SATURDAY EVENING, JUNE 4th, 1910,
At 8.15 o'clock,

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

New Production,

The Girl in the Train

("DIE GESCHIEDENE FRAU")

A Musical Play, in Two Acts.

Adapted from the German of VICTOR LEON. Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS

Music by LEO FALL.

Characters.

Karel Van Raalte - - -	Mr. ROBERT EVETT
Lucas Van Tromp - - -	Mr. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Cornelius Scrop - - -	Mr. FRED EMNEY
Willen Kronwevliet - - -	Mr. PERCY DAVISON
Councillor Van Lieje - -	Mr. ALEC FRASER
Councillor Van Dender - -	Mr. PAUL PLUNKET
AND
President Van Eyck - -	Mr. HUNTLEY WRIGHT
Jana Van Raalte - - -	Miss CLARA EVELYN
Martje Kronwevliet - - -	Miss KATE WELCH
Adeline - - - - -	Miss MADELINE SEYMOUR
AND
Gonda Van der Loo - -	Miss PHYLLIS DARE

On this occasion the ORCHESTRA will be under the direction of Mr. IVAN CARYLL.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. - - Court of Justice, Amsterdam.
(Alfred Terraine)

ACT II. - - Drawing Room, Van Raalte's House.
(Alfred Terraine)

Stage Production by EDWARD ROYCE.

Costumes designed by Signor ATILLO COMELLI.

Dresses made by MARGAINE LACROIX, Madame HERBERT and B. J. SIMMONS & Co.

Hats worn by Miss Phyllis Dare designed and made by ZYROT ET CIE, 14, Hanover Square, W.

The Gentlemen's Costumes by BURKINSHAW & KNIGHT, JOHNS and BONHAM.

Uniforms and Character Dresses by MORRIS ANGEL & SON.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Piano supplied by CHAPPELL & Co., Ltd.

Music published by ENOCH & SONS, 14, Great Marlborough Street, W.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. A. E. DODSON

General Manager (for Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES) Mr. HERBERT RALLAND

Ices, Tea, and Coffee can be had of the Attendants.

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd., of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

Matinee every Wednesday at 2.15 o'clock.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 1.45 and 7.45. Commence at 2.15 and 8.15.

Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.

Box Office (Mr. ARTHUR FRYE) open from 10 to 10.

Business Manager (for Messrs. A. & S. GATTI) Mr. HERBERT CLARK

The stage heroines discovered by Mr. George Edwardes have varying degrees of charm, and of them it may truly be said, "another and another still succeeds, and each is as welcome as the former." The latest "girl," indeed, is a most fascinating creature, and all London will be following in her "train," for she may be said to float on a current of sweet melody, stirred only by occasional zephyrs of sentiment and breezes of humour. M. Victor Leon, the original writer of Die Geschiedene Frau, deals with the inconsistency of the "eternal feminine" in a way that is invariably piquant and exhilarating; and the freshness of the score, its flood of tune, and the delicacy and refinement of the whole thing will captivate London and the provinces for a long time to come.

When Karel Van Raalte was about to start upon a journey to Amsterdam he little thought that Miss Gonda Van der Loo would enter his compartment and make herself very much at home. His behaviour was perfect in the circumstances, for he never kissed the alluring little syren, an actress, who regards the whole affair in the light of a pleasant adventure. Not so the wife, who is beset with all the pangs of raging jealousy, and will accept no explanation, especially when she hears that the young couple have been locked in by the blundering car conductor. She brings an action for divorce, and it is while this is proceeding that the play opens. The court scene bears some resemblance to Trial by Jury. We have a judge who will flirt with any pretty witness, while prejudicing the defendant with the most outrageous (comic opera) statements. Though he says that the husband, Van Raalte, "seems to have behaved like a perfect ass" in not kissing the pretty co-respondent, he gives the verdict against him, and grants the petitioner a divorce. This decision is a surprise to both husband and wife, whose separation is followed by that of their faithful servitors Willem and Martje Kronwevliet.

In the second act further misunderstandings widen the breach between the couple, neither of whom is happy; but there seems to be some prospect of reconciliation with the arrival of Lucas Van Tromp, the father of Frau Van Raalte. He has heard nothing whatever of the divorce proceedings, and insists on his daughter and son-in-law behaving like turtle-doves. He is a jolly old buck, and he, too, has had an adventure in the train. The inevitable reconciliation is brought about by Gonda, who arranges a "blind man's buff" waltz, in which the conditions are that the man who removes his handkerchief will have to marry his partner in the dance. Gonda settles that Karel Van Raalte shall choose his own wife for partner, and—their hearts attuned to a pretty waltz melody that is bound to capture London—the "separatists," happily reconciled, fall into each other's arms.

Mr GEORGE EDWARDES'
COMPANY

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK,

CHARLES FROHMAN & ARTHUR BOURCHIER

PRESENT

GLASS HOUSES

A Comedy in Three Acts,

Adapted, by Kenneth Barnes, from "Connais-toi",

By PAUL HERVIEU.

General Sir Paul Carteret	Mr. BOURCHIER
John (his Son)	Mr. HERBERT SLEATH
Captain Bernard O'Brien	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
Ralph Goring	Mr. GEORGE BEALBY
Giles	Mr. DALLAS CAIRNS
Mrs. Goring	Miss MURIEL BEAUMONT
AND
Lady Carteret	Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH

The events, which pass within eight hours, happen at Sir Paul Carteret's house near Salisbury.

"GLASS HOUSES."

Comedy, in Three Acts, Adapted by Kenneth Barnes from Paul Hervieu's Connais-toi, Produced at the Globe Theatre on Monday, June 6.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

THE TRAP

A Play in One Act by ARTHUR ECKERSLEY and ARTHUR CURTIS.
(By arrangement with HERBERT SLEATH.)

Bill Parsons	Mr. JAMES LINDSAY
"Needle" Barnes	Mr. WILLIAM BURCHILL
Nell	Miss DAISY MARKHAM
An Old Woman	Miss MAY HOLLAND

Scene - A room in a mean street.

Miss Violet Vanbrugh's Dresses by LUCILE, LTD.
Miss Muriel Beaumont's Dresses by ALEXANDRA.
Hats by ZYROT ET CIE.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Venus on Earth"	Lincke
SELECTION	"Coppelia"	Delibes
a. VAUDEVILLE	"Lalun"	Percy Godfrey
b. ENTR'ACTE	"Bijou"	Antreassian
c. TWO-STEP	"The Frolic"	Haines
a IDYL	"Whispering of the Flowers"	Blon
b. VALSE	"The Divorced Wife"	Fall

Organ and "Celesta" by MUSTEL & Co., 80 Wigmore Street, W.
Pianoforte by STEINWAY, Lower Seymour Street.

Musical Director ... HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

Acting Manager ... } for Mr. Bourchier { ... Mr. S. ARDEN GODFREY
Stage Manager ... { ... Mr. WILLIAM BURCHILL

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager ... W. LESTOCQ
Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

It did not need the information on the programme that Glass Houses was adapted from M. Paul Hervieu's Connais-toi to tell me that the play was taken from the French. It is French in its subject, French in its treatment, and French in the excellent effectiveness of its construction. If the play has a moral, it certainly tends to a more indulgent view of female adultery than is fashionable in England. We hardly knew, indeed, whether to take the piece as a drama or as a comedy; it vibrated between the two. Certainly, to English ideas, matters were made decidedly serious by the implied adultery of one of the ladies in the first act. It is not distinctly stated that Mrs. Goring has "gone wrong"; she may possibly have been only imprudent; but the author of the play seems to consider that it is of small consequence whether she has actually "sinned" or not as long as she has "compromised" herself. On the supposition that she has only been imprudent, the desire of her husband to hear her explanation and make it up is creditable to him; but most Englishmen will take the old General's view that, if actual adultery has taken place, there is no alternative but divorce.

The action takes place at the house of Sir Paul Carteret, near Salisbury. Sir Paul is a big, overbearing martinet, who worships his wife in secret, but cannot abandon his habit of imperious command in addressing her. Exactly the opposite fault is that of a younger husband, Ralph Goring, a weakling whose wife is carrying on an intrigue with John, the son of the General. How far this intrigue has gone, whether Mrs. Goring has broken the seventh commandment or not is not distinctly stated; but an interesting young man called Captain Bernard O'Brien has lent the pair his bungalow for purposes of assignation. The result is that one morning, when the General is out riding with Goring, they see a woman running away from the bungalow, chase her, and finally discover that she is Mrs. Goring.

Goring, who is very much attached to his wife, is inclined to forgive her; but when he consults the General the latter takes high ground, and gives Goring to understand that, unless he puts his wife away friendship between him and the General—and Lady Carteret—must cease. Now the marriage of the latter pair was one of convenience on the lady's side; and as the General has certainly not worked to win his wife's affection since their union Lady Carteret's heart is, so to speak, unoccupied. Captain Bernard O'Brien, a protégé of the General's, who hates him for his benevolent tyranny, is madly in love with Lady Carteret. She is at first only harmlessly interested in him; and her principles are so far firm that she is very hard on Mrs. Goring for her liaison with John. But when Lady Carteret learns that O'Brien, who is suspected of being Mrs. Goring's lover, is going to hold his tongue in order to shield John, she begins to entertain a sentimental feeling for him.

And now the difficulty of the position increases. The General has called in O'Brien, and has made him write a letter asking to be transferred to Bermuda. On the top of this O'Brien makes a declaration of love to Lady Carteret, who repels him reproachfully. O'Brien mentions that one reason why he was accepting his exile was the consciousness that he had better leave England and put the seas between himself and Lady Carteret before mischief should come of his passion for her. And so she is on the horns of a dilemma. She now feels herself guilty of, at any rate, an affection for another man than her husband; and she cannot therefore take the same attitude towards Mrs. Goring's faux pas.

Then the real offender, young John Carteret, comes into the action. He is determined not to let O'Brien suffer for another's fault, and he is ready, when the usual divorce is obtained, to marry Mrs. Goring. When John makes confession to his father, the General is at first incredulous, and then furious. He has a serious quarrel with his son, and ends by turning him out of the house. But O'Brien does not want to leave England without something warmer passing between him and Lady Carteret than mere conversations. He has an aggressive love scene with her, grapples with her, and ends by forcibly kissing her. At this moment the General enters, turns O'Brien out, and reproaches his wife with having given the young man encouragement. She retorts by telling him that his bullying has made her hate him, and that it is now too late to try and win her affection. The General realises his folly, and collapses at the idea of losing his wife. Then Goring returns from town, having seen his solicitor, and arranged to sue for a divorce. Both the General and Lady Carteret are now on the other side of the argument; and Goring is justly irritated at the former's change of front. However, in the end he consents to condone his wife's offence, and Lady Carteret, when the General has shown himself sufficiently abased and repentant, gives him hope that he may yet win her love. O'Brien, however, is safely despatched to Bermuda.

Photo] Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Norman Trevor and Miss Violet Vanbrugh in "Glass Houses" [Foulsham & Banfield

133

LYRIC THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager—Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

EVERY EVENING AT 9 O'CLOCK,

DON CESAR DE BAZAN

Adapted by

GERALD DU MAURIER.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

June 7

THE GREAT GAME

A Trifle by

W. CRONIN WILSON.

J. Marsh	... ...	(a Detective)	... Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Bill Hamlin	... ...	(a Burglar)	... Mr. W. CRONIN WILSON
Snippy...	... ...	(a Thief)	... Mr. STANLEY LOGAN

Scene - A Basement in a House at Tilbury.

Very strong meat is the new melodramatic one-act play which on Tuesday was put on at the Lyric in front of Mr. Lewis Waller's splendid production of "Don César de Bazan." The new playlet is entitled and is the work of Mr. Cronin Wilson, a clever member of Mr. Waller's company. Put briefly, it is the story of a quaint little detective's clever capture of a burglar who has in the exercise of his profession also became a murderer. The wretched Bill Sikes-like criminal is in biding with a fellow-crook in a Tilbury garret, waiting for a chance to cross the water. After displaying a considerable amount of pawky Scottish humour, the little 'tec throws off the Caledonian, and by a smart subterfuge compels the other crib-cracker to handcuff his murderer pal. The little drama is cleverly acted by the author, as the murderer; Mr. Stanley Logan, as his pal; and Mr. A. F. Thompson, as the droll detective whose catch-word forms the title.

"A Great Game,"

MANAGING DIRECTOR: MR GEORGE EDWARDES.

GAIETY THEATRE

Every Evening at 8,

"OUR MISS GIBBS,"

By JAMES T. TANNER. Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS and PERCY GREENBANK.
Music by IVAN CARYLL and LIONEL MONCKTON.

The Honourable Hughie Pierrepoint (an Amateur Criminal) Mr. GEORGE GROSSMITH, Jnr.
The Earl of St. Ives (Lord Eynsford's Father) Mr. ARNOLD LUCY
Slithers ... (a Professional Crook) ... Mr. ROBERT HALE
Mr. Toplady ... (Manager at Garrod's) Mr. ARTHUR HATHERTON
Lord Eynsford ... (in love with Mary) Mr. J. EDWARD FRASER
Mr. Beavis ... (the Earl's Family Solicitor) Mr. A. J. EVELYN
A Taxi Cabby ... ... Mr. F. PAYNE
Mr. Amalfy ... ... Mr. H. B. BURCHER
Youri (a Japanese Wrestler) Mr. W. RICHARDSON
AND
Timothy Gibbs ... (Mary's Yorkshire Cousin) Mr. EDMUND PAYNE

Madame Jeanne ... (Modiste at Garrod's) Miss JEAN AYLWIN
Lady Elizabeth Thanet (engaged to Lord Eynsford) Miss OLIVE MAY
The Duchess of Minster ... (Lady Elizabeth's Mother) Miss GLADYS HOMFREY
Mrs. Farquhar ... (an Impecunious Woman of Fashion) Miss MAISIE GAY

So-Shi, Fan-Fan, Si-Klop — Mousmes of the Jap-Anglo Exhibition — Miss MARIE MITCHELL, Miss ALICE HATTON, Miss EDITH STANDEN

Lady Connie	Miss Gertie Thornton	Lady Gwen ...	Miss Phyllis Barker
Lady Sybil ...	Miss Blanche Stocker	Lady Beryl	Miss Gertie Murray
Lady Trixie ...	Miss Enid Leslie	Lady Edith ...	Miss Connie Stuart
Lady Angela...	...Miss Crissy Bell	Lady Jane	Miss Lena Leibrandt
Lady Muriel	Miss Dorothy Selbourne	Lady Nora ...	Miss Chice O'Hara

AND

Mary Gibbs ("Our Miss Gibbs") Miss GERTIE MILLAR

Girls at the Stores:—Mesdames Nancy More, Madge Melbourne, Gladys Carrington, Pattie Wells, Irene Warren, Shirley Power, Marjorie Michie, Marjorie Napier, Ruby Kennedy, Gertrude Birch, Nellie Hobson, Babs Taylor, Milicent Field, Ruby Artrey, Pauline Twenlow, May Flower, Rhona Dalvy, Olive Tempest, May Kennedy, Maud Percival.

Dudes:—Messrs. G. Grundy, T. C. Maxwell, J. Redmond, S. Lyndon, E. Camp, F. W. Pedgrift.

ACT I. ... ... Garrod's Stores (Joseph Harker).
ACT II. ... ...A Japanese Garden at the Jap-Anglo Exhibition (Joseph Harker).

The Play produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES and Mr. EDWARD ROYCE.

Costumes designed by SIGNOR COMELLI

Stage Manager, Mr. EDWARD ROYCE

Musical Director ... ... CARL KIEFERT

BOX OFFICE (... DAILY, from 10 till 10.

The Bars in this Theatre are under the c... anagement, and all articles sold are specially selected a... he finest quality.

GAIETY THEATRE

Saturday Evening, June 11th

STALL, 10/6

Row F No. 15

This portion to be retained.

MR. EDMUND PAYNE.

RETURN TO GAIETY THEATRE AFTER SIX MONTHS' ILLNESS.

The Gaiety Theatre was its real self again on Saturday when, after a six months' absence through a dangerous illness, Mr. Edmund Payne, cheery and well, returned to play his part in "Our Miss Gibbs." What a cheer the crowded house gave him! In the nature of things he must have expected a kindly reception, but the warmth of the welcome took him by surprise. The first words he got a chance to speak set the house in a roar, and from then to the end of the play there was continuous laughter when he was on the stage.

To celebrate Mr. Payne's return and also, perhaps, because "Our Miss Gibbs," has now a total of nearly 500 performances to her credit, Mr. Edwardes has made many changes in the "business"—mostly in the second act—of this popular Gaiety piece. A charming Japanese garden now takes the place of the Court of Honour, and a more picturesque scene has never been set on the Gaiety stage.

Saturday night's performance was a great success. Valses, character songs, songs with a chorus of charming bridesmaids, headed by pretty Miss Enid Leslie, a valse for Miss Millar and Mr. George Grossmith, a song called "Angelina" for the latter that puts out "Yip-i-addy-i-ay," and a burlesque for Mr. Grossmith and Mr. Payne on the topics of the day, including the invasion of Russian dancers, were things to delight everybody.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Mr. H. B. IRVING

On MONDAY, JUNE 13th, 1910

And Every Evening at 8.45

MATINÉE: EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.45

THE LYONS MAIL

A Play in Three Acts, by CHARLES READE.

From "Le Courrier de Lyon," by MM. Moreau, Siraudin, and Delacour

Joseph Lesurques (a Merchant of Paris)	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Dubosc (Captain of a gang of Robbers)
Courriol	... Mr. ERIC MAXON
Choppard ... ... (Members of the	Mr. CHAS. DODSWORTH
Fouinard ... ... Gang of Robbers)	... Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Durochat	Mr. STUART MUSGROVE
Jerome Lesurques (Father of Joseph) ...	... Mr. FRANK TYARS
Dorval (a Magistrate)	... Mr. HENRY VIBART
Didier (betrothed to Julie)	Mr. STANLEY HOWLETT
Joliquet (Jerome's Serving Boy)	...Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
Guerneau (Friends of Lesurques)	Mr. ALEX. SCOTT-GATTY
Lambert (Friends of Lesurques)	Mr. J. PATRICK CURWEN
Postmaster of Montgeron	... Mr. J. B. GLOVER
Coco	... Mr. H. R. COOK
Commissary of Police	... Mr. W. GRAHAM
Postillion...	... ... Mr. W. CASS
Guard	Mr. ROLAND PERTUIS
Waiter	... Mr. S. BEAUMONT
Julie (Daughter of Lesurques)	... Miss GLADYS BAIRD
Marie (a Servant)	... Miss MAY HOLLAND
Niece to Postmaster	Miss E. FRANCES DAVIS
Jeannette	Miss ESMÉ BERINGER

MR. FROHMAN'S PLANS.

COST OF REPERTORY THEATRE.

ANOTHER SEASON IN 1911.

Mr. Charles Frohman feels so convinced that there is a public for the Repertory Theatre that he is going on with his arrangements for its reopening, after this season ends, next February.

"My plans when I made my original announcement of this scheme a year ago were to give a repertory season at the Duke of York's Theatre immediately following 'Peter Pan,' and to run it on into the summer. I am keeping that promise, and I renew it for next February. I hope that the authors will assist me to do as well then as I have done this season, and that the public will help me to do better. My part of the contract will, if endeavour counts for anything, be better done each year.

"It is to the interest of the English theatre and of the British playgoer to have a repertory theatre. It is an influence good in both directions. Even this one season at the Duke of York's Theatre has brought forward many players. It has had a good effect generally on the English-speaking stage, and that is a gain.

"I have been asked if the cost is in excess of the price the public pays. My answer is, 'I do not count alone on profit and loss.' I believe in the immense usefulness of a repertory theatre, and I will give one for a portion of each year. Look at opera, an acquired taste. Well, it has been made an annual feast. A repertory theatre is a novelty, too, in London. I believe in its future, and I am glad to have been able to offer it. I want to do for the theatre in England what The Daily Mail has done for airmanship. Naturally, it will cost money. The expenses of a company numbering fifty-three actors are much in excess of the ordinary expenses of a theatre, but I can say that the receipts have been fully equal to the receipts of a successful theatre.

"Take some of our plays—'Trelawney of the Wells,' for instance. If I gave that now without interruption, it would run for at least 150 continuous performances. But I cannot give it such a run; we must keep to our plan of constant change.

"If I had not inaugurated the Repertory Theatre I might not have had the chance to put on 'Chains,' and now I say that I never felt prouder of anything than of producing this piece. Nothing has ever pleased an audience better; and if the author, Miss Baker, is denied her reward here, she will certainly get it in America. All this adds to the interest of a repertory theatre. I am crazy about it, and I believe I am justified in standing by it."

May 28

PRACTICAL ENCOURAGEMENT.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—I see that Mr. Frohman, the American theatrical manager, announces that he would like "to do for the theatre in England what The Daily Mail is doing for airmanship."

Everyone knows that what The Daily Mail is doing is to offer a superb prize to European aviators. Can you inform me whether Mr. Frohman is offering any such prize (£10,000, I believe, was the amount of the last Daily Mail prize) to the theatre to encourage the greater daring and best achievements of its workers, and what are the conditions of entering for the competition?

Arena Goldoni, Florence. GORDON CRAIG.

"PRACTICAL ENCOURAGEMENT."

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—I have read with pleasure Mr. Gordon Craig's letter in The Daily Mail, and I am most eager to comply with the fine suggestion made by him with reference to The Daily Mail airship prize that I should give a £10,000 prize "to encourage the greater daring and the best achievements of workers for the stage."

I think it is a capital idea, and I believe in encouraging such an idea; therefore, I endorse it—but, alas, I have not £10,000.

CHARLES FROHMAN.

Globe Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1910.

MR. FROHMAN'S SURPRISE.

CLEVER SATIRICAL PLAY BY AN ANONYMOUS AUTHOR.

Mr. Charles Frohman gave a special matinée of "Chains" for the theatrical profession at the Duke of York's Theatre yesterday, and provided them also with an agreeable surprise for their own special amusement.

The surprise was a new short play. It did not appear on the printed programme, but Mr. Dion Boucicault came before the curtain to explain. He said that as there were a few minutes to spare some of the junior members of the Repertory Theatre would produce for that afternoon a short example of the uncommercial drama, which they called "A Slice of Luck." The name of the author was not given, but the amusing skit was so clever and droll that no one could be blamed for thinking that Mr. J. M. Barrie had written it.

The three "junior" members who formed the cast were Mr. Gerald Du Maurier, Miss Cecilia Loftus, and Miss Irene Vanbrugh.

From first to last the performance is a funny burlesque of the modern problem play. It burlesques author, stage manager, and actor. Everything that can be thought of is made funny—the modern method of telling the story in the first act of a comedy, even the anxiety of the actors to acknowledge applause when they enter.

Miss Loftus as the servant was capital. She had a splendid part to play and she excelled in it, giving right through the piece a kindly imitation of Mrs. Patrick Campbell's method in a comedy.

The performance convulsed the audience, but Mr. Barrie, who sat in a box, only allowed himself one short smile.

* * *

The end of the present repertory season at the Duke of York's came on Friday night. Throughout the evening a crowded house followed with intense interest the performance of "Chains," by Miss Baker. At the close of the piece there was an enthusiastic demonstration more in keeping with a première than a last night. The curtain had to be raised time after time in response to continuous applause, but Miss Baker did not respond to the insistent calls for author.

* * *

"PRACTICAL ENCOURAGEMENT."

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—I have only to-day read Mr. Frohman's answer in The Daily Mail to my letter asking for further information about the £10,000 which he implied it would cost "to do for the theatre in England what The Daily Mail has done for airmanship."

Mr. Frohman now writes: "Alas! I have not £10,000," and at the same time conveys a wrong impression by the following passage:—"I am most eager to comply with the fine suggestion made by Mr. Craig with reference to The Daily Mail airmanship prize."

The suggestion was not mine at all; it was Mr. Frohman's. His words in the original interview are: "I want to do for the theatre in England what The Daily Mail is doing for airmanship. Naturally, it will cost money." And then he goes on to talk about his Repertory Theatre and how much it costs.

But the running of a theatre for commercial purposes in London is in no way to be compared with The Daily Mail's offer of a sum of money to encourage daring and the highest achievements, and therefore Mr. Frohman cannot be thinking of his Repertory Theatre when he makes his fine suggestion. Besides this, the Repertory Theatre, run in at all a practical manner, with such practical and spirited men as there are in London, would be a success from the day it opened—though here success must not imply a dividend.

If Mr. Frohman cannot make good his words he should withdraw the entire passage in the interview, and should announce that he only wishes to "do for the theatre" what every other commercial manager in London is doing to-day.

GORDON CRAIG.

Arena Goldoni, Florence, June 13.

GARRICK THEATRE

CHARING CROSS ROAD, W.C.

Lessees and Managers ... Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, 26 Langham Street, and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH, Dormy Cottage, Woking.

Under the Management of

Messrs. WENTWORTH CROKE, MILTON BODE and EDWARD COMPTON.

Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH'S SEASON

Under the Direction of Mr. RICHARD T. MAYNARD.

ON THURSDAY, JUNE 23RD, 1910, AT 8.30

WILL BE PRODUCED A SENSATIONAL FARCE IN THREE ACTS, ENTITLED

BILLY'S BARGAIN

By ROBERT LASCELLES.

J. K. Rotterford ...	of Binghampton, U.S.A.; Clare Court, Surrey, & Corinthian House, Mayfair, London	Mr. JOHN CLULOW
Billy Rotterford ...	(his Son)	Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Aubrey Colpoys ...		Mr. WILFRED FORSTER
Alf. K. Kelly	(of Cincinnatti)	Mr. OSWALD MARSHALL
Sir Richard Mulberry ...		Mr. ARTHUR B. MURRAY
Col. Brazier		Mr. HUGH ARDALE
Hon. "Toffy" Dillingham		Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON
Bertie Allerton ...	of Black's Club	Mr. RICHARD NEVILLE
Freddie Western ...		Mr. T. A. BRAIDON
Algy Ripton (of Ripton)		Mr. B. BURLEIGH
Percy Tifton		Mr. JAMES GELDERD
Edwards	(Butler at Corinthian House)	Mr. EDWIN H. WYNNE
Mr. Polting		Mr. FRANK H. DENTON
"Baron Harper" ...	(a Money Lender)	Mr. SEBASTIAN SMITH
Crossing Sweeper ...		Mr. HENRY NIXON
Reporter		Mr. LYONEL WATTS
Policeman		Mr. CECIL McGUINESS
Warner	Footmen at Corinthian House	Mr. FRED PAUL
Fitzgerald		Mr. A. RHADEN
Mrs. J. K. Rotterford ...	(Rotterford's Second Wife)	Miss FORTESCUE
Lady Mulberry ...		Miss LYNN FONTANNE
Lady Ballater ...		Miss JEAN BLOOMFIELD
Dolly Catarack ...		Miss GWENDOLEN WREN
Judy Johnson ...	... of the Adwych Theatre ...	Miss BEATRICE AINLEY
Popsy Hockit		Miss VIOLET RADCLIFFE
Belle Bateman ...		Miss JANE TOUSSAINT
Kitty Chatteris ...		Miss EMILY REYNOLDS
Nurse Fairmead ...		Miss MARJORIE DORÉ
Madam Garvarnavitch ...	(a Tartar Lady)	Miss ANNIE HILL
Landlord	(at Hotel Caspian)	Mr. FRANK LEACH
Zampassa (the Chief) ...		Mr. ARTHUR CHESNEY
Vanderhousan (Second in command)		Mr. HENRY LATIMER
Davitts (Italian) ...		Mr. GEORGE G. COLE
GavondaVritz (Armenian)	Gentlemen of the Mountains	Mr. H. J. VINE
Aga Kingerlinsky ...		Mr. A. PAULAUVE
Ching Lightenzen Fungza (Croatian)		Mr. SIDNEY LAURIMER
Baga Linkskingz (Tartar)		Mr. JAMES GING
Adgybydzky		Mr. GUY SMETHURST
Idjzakitch ...		Mr. A. E. ACKERMAN
Vera Vanderhousan ...	(Wife of Vanderhousan)	Miss OLGA MORRA

Bosnians, Croatians, Servians, Tziganes, &c.

Act I. .. Corinthian House, Mayfair, J. K. Rotterford's Town House. End of August

Act II. .. Scene 1 Hotel Caspian, near the Caspian Sea. End of September

Scene 2 Zampassa's Fortress near the Caucasus. End of November

Act III. .. The Hall at Clare Court, J. K. Rotterford's Country House. Christmas Eve

The Play produced by the Author, assisted by Mr. Frank Harding.

THE DANCES ARRANGED BY ESPINOSA.

Incidental Music by GEORGE F. FORD.

Principal Dancers in the Kola, Messrs. ROKER & COWLEY; Mesdames K. DENTON & D. RAY.

Programme of Music.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. KNIGHT PEARCE, will play Selections from the following:—

OVERTURE	"Billy's Bargain"	Geo. F. Ford
BALLET SUITE	"La Source"	Leo Delibes
VALSE DE ROSES	... ...	Haines
INTERMEZZO	"Suzette"	Bruch
INTERMEZZO	"Muzette"	Neil Moret
MAZURK (Op. 103)	... ...	B. Godard

All Ladies' Dresses in Act I. by the ÉLITE DRESS CO., Grosvenor Mansions, Victoria Street.
Miss Fortescue's Dresses by ELISE KREUTZER, Hanover Square.
The Guns and Ammunition supplied by ALFRED W. KNIGHT, Upper St. Martin's Lane.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

The Box Office open daily from 10 to 10.

Telephone 9513 Gerrard.

Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle (Bonnets Allowed), 6s. Upper Circle (Bonnets Allowed), 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under Shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

BUSINESS MANAGER { for Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode and Edward Compton } MR. LAWSON LAMBERT

WIGHTMAN MOUNTAIN & ANDREWS, LTD., Printers, 31 & 33, Victoria Street, S.W.

Technically the performance of Billy's Bargain at the Garrick Theatre was not its "first in London," for Mr. "Robert Lascelles'" piece, under the title of Billy Rotterford's Descent, was tried at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, on May 11, 1908, after being produced at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, on Oct. 25, 1907, under the title of Among the Brigands. Mr. Weedon Grossmith is no novice as a playwright, and his pieces A Commission and The Night of the Party are well known for their cleverness and their success. In Billy's Bargain Mr. Grossmith has given his imagination a free rein, and the result is a very amusing, and at times vigorously exciting, entertainment.

Billy Rotterford, the son of an American millionaire, is in serious financial difficulties, and meditates bankruptcy, when his friend, Aubrey Colpoys, a sharp and enterprising young man, suggests a plan by which the amount of Billy's debts may be extracted from Rotterford père. Colpoys has met in London a certain Vanderhousan, the second in command of a band of brigands in the Caucasus. Colpoys suggests that Billy, who is about to travel with his father and step-mother in those mountains, shall be captured by the band, and a large ransom demanded of his father, half of which will be sufficient to pay Billy's debts.

The next act shows us the Rotterfords in a very primitive hotel near the Caspian Sea. The food is execrable, the wine is undrinkable, and the other guests are an egoistical invalid and a Russian lady who flies into passions and kicks people's legs. Billy is hourly expecting to be kidnapped by the brigands, and excites his father's suspicion by the preparations he makes for his departure. Vanderhousan and his friends arrive, and Billy, assuming an heroic attitude, assumes his father's identity and is dragged away; but not without J. K. Rotterford seeing through the trick.

In the second division of this act we see Billy in the brigands' fortress in the mountains. He does not realise the seriousness of his position, and flirts gaily with Vera, the wife of Vanderhousan, making himself quite popular with the brigands. But business is business, and when it appears that Rotterford père is adamant, and that no ransom is forthcoming, Billy is bidden to prepare for death. Jealousy arises between Vanderhousan and Zampassa, the chief of the brigands, and the latter makes the whole of his men disarm. This annoys the second in command, and he engages in a duel with Zampassa, who, by pretending to be dying, distracts Vanderhousan's attention, and then shoots him dead from behind. This incident, however, does not prevent Billy from being seized by the brigands and thrown over a high precipice.

In the last act, having miraculously escaped death by descending amidst a flock of geese, and then falling on some soft snow, Billy returns to his parents, who are mourning for him in London. Billy disguises himself as a brigand, raids his father's house, forces him to disgorge his wealth, and regains his favour. Vanderhousan's death leaves Vera free to marry Billy; she comes to London, and they are betrothed. Billy's father, of course, relents, and all ends happily.

THE LYCEUM.

On Saturday, June 25, the Revival of the Drama, in Four Acts, by John Rutherford, entitled "THE BREED OF THE TRESHAMS."

Lieut. Beresby, "The Rat" ..... Mr. Martin Harvey
Viscount Dorsington ..... Mr. Philip Hewland
Col. the Hon. Clement Hungerford ..... Mr. Charles Glenney
Col. Sir Henry Curwen ..... Mr. Eric Mayne
Col. Bagshaw ..... Mr. S. Major Jones
Capt. Stanhope ..... Mr. Edward Combermere
Capt. Rashleigh ..... Mr. Alfred Mansfield
Lieut. Willoughby ..... Mr. Denholm Muir
Cornet the Hon. Francis Tresham ..... Mr. Leonard Craske
Cornet Pit Keyton ..... Mr. Percy Foster
Corporal Lumsford ..... Mr. George Cooke
Corporal Saxton ..... Mr. A. B. McKay
Will Lumsford ..... Mr. B. A. Pittar
Jevons ..... Mr. A. Wilson
Servant ..... Mr. David Bain
Hon. Margaret Hungerford ..... Miss Brenda Gisson
Mrs. Bagshaw ..... Miss Bessie Elder
Helena Pierrepoint ..... Miss Sybil Walsh
Betty ..... Miss N. de Silva

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON
TRENCH
Tuesday
Evening
June 28
Orchestra Stl 10/6
No. K 21
This to be retained
This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, JUNE 28TH, 1910,
AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.30,

HERBERT TRENCH
PRESENTS

PRISCILLA RUNS AWAY

A Comedy in Four Acts by ELIZABETH ARNIM.

Herr Fritzing ..	(Grand Ducal Librarian)	.. Mr. E. Lyall Swete
Dr. Billetson ..	(Grand Ducal Body Physician)	.. Mr. Edward Rigby
Baron Osterman ..	(Grand Ducal Chamberlain)	.. Mr. E. A. Warburton
Henry, Prince of Lucerne ..		.. Mr. Charles Maude
The Grand Duke of Lothen-Kunitz		.. Mr. Charles V. France
Robin Morrison ..		.. Mr. Louis Goodrich
Sir Augustus Shuttleworth		.. Mr. Donald Calthrop
A Plumber ..		.. Mr. J. Fisher White
A Carpenter ..		.. Mr. H. R. Hignett
A Clerk ..		.. Mr. R. W. Hutton
Mr. Price ..		.. Mr. Norman Page
1st Footman ..		.. Mr. J. Dickson-Kenwin
2nd Footman ..		.. Mr. Arthur Webster
The Princess Priscilla of Lothen-Kunitz		.. Miss Neilson-Terry
The Grand Duchess of Gerstein ..		.. Miss Helen Haye
Annalise ..	(The Princess's Maid)	.. Miss Amy Lamborn
Mrs. Jones ..		.. Miss Sydney Fairbrother
Mrs. Morrison ..		.. Miss Agnes Thomas
Lady Shuttleworth		.. Miss Frances Ivor
Emma Jones ..		.. Miss Victoria Addison
A Nurse ..		.. Miss Margaret Murray
A Maid ..		.. Miss Enid Rose

Guests at the State Ball:—Mesdames F. Celli, M. Caldicott, M. Lake, V. Whitaker. Messrs. J. Kelly, Roy Travers, J. O'Brien, O. Bailey.
Footmen:—Messrs. E. Sully and R. H. Leverett.

The Play produced for Herbert Trench by NORMAN McKINNEL.

Act I. .. Scene .. Library in the Grand Ducal Castle of Lothen-Kunitz
Act II. .. Scene .. Living Room in Creeper Cottage, Symford. (Two days later)
Act III. .. Scene .. .. .. Same as Act II. (Ten days later)
Act IV. .. Scene .. .. .. Same as Act I. (Two days later)

INTERVALS:—After Act I. 8 minutes; after Act II. 5 minutes; after Act III. 8 minutes.

The Scenery, Costumes and Appointments have been designed and arranged by F. CAYLEY ROBINSON.
Scenery painted by JOSEPH HARKER.
Miss Neilson-Terry's Dresses by PAQUIN, others by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY.
Uniforms by NATHAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

General Stage Director .. .. NORMAN McKINNEL

Programme of Music.

1. OVERTURE AND BALLET MUSIC FROM "ROSAMUNDE" ... ... Schubert
2. a. VALSE ... ... "Priscilla" ... ... Norman O'Neill
   b. MORRIS DANCES ... ... Geoffrey Toye
3. a. MINUET ... ... Schubert
   b. HUMORESKE ... ... Dvorák
4. a. MINIATURE SUITE ... ... Debussy
   b. VALSES ... ... Brahms

MATINÉE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... NORMAN O'NEILL | STAGE MANAGER ... CHARLES LA TROBE

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Box Office (W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £4 4s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 5s.; Upper Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s. Telephone 3344 Gerrard.

Opera Glasses can be hired from the Attendants at a charge of 6d. for the performance.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberla n. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Lessee & Manager .. .. FREDERICK HARRISON
Director - HERBERT TRENCH

Business Manager .. .. .. HORACE WATSON

A beautiful young Princess runs away from home with her tutor, Herr Fritzing, to avoid a marriage arranged for her without her consent with a certain Prince of Lucerne.

Priscilla and Herr Fritzing get safely to England, and select a village called Symford as their dwelling place. The Princess, of course, knows nothing of real life, and her amiable errors are very amusing. She offers to buy a pretty cottage, which is inhabited by the only invalid in the village, Mrs. Jones, a peevish, petted old woman. Sir Augustus Shuttleworth, the young and timid son of the Lady Bountiful of the place, and Robin Morrison, the rather vulgar offspring of the Vicar and his severe spouse, come to the cottage bearing gifts for Mrs. Jones, and meet Priscilla, who has taken a false name, and has introduced Herr Fritzing as her uncle. Sir Augustus falls in love with her at first sight; and Robin Morrison pesters her with impudent attentions. Mrs. Jones imposes on Priscilla's ignorance as far as to induce her to send for a bottle of rum, on the plea that it is her "medicine." Then the Princess indulges in reckless liberality to the villagers, to whom she gives a treat on the Sabbath.

The reckoning comes ten days later, in the third act. The rum proves to have been the worst thing possible for Mrs. Jones, who becomes hysterical and troublesome; the children are all ill from overeating at the treat; the lady's maid breaks out into open mutiny; and, worst of all, the money which Fritzing brought from Lothen-Kunitz has all been spent, and the local tradesmen come clamouring for their money. Morrison tries to kiss Priscilla, and she boxes his ears; Sir Augustus proposes marriage to her, and is told that it is out of the question; and, humbled and harrassed on all sides, the poor Princess almost breaks down. Fritzing rushes out to chastise Morrison, and is locked up by the police; and, in the midst of all these misfortunes, Prince Henry, who has kept himself informed of Priscilla's movements, appears with money and renewed devotion. Horrified by a chorus of indignation, in which the vicar's wife, the tradesmen, and Mrs. Jones join, Priscilla snatches the money, puts on her hat and cloak and starts for Lothen-Kunitz, the Prince's announcement of his and her rank astounding the Symfordians immensely. There is some amusing comedy in the last act, in which the inevitable result of Priscilla's repentance and acceptance of Prince Henry is attained.

COUNTESS ARNIM'S PLAY.

HOW IT WAS WRITTEN.

The production of "Priscilla Runs Away" at the Haymarket Theatre next Tuesday evening has brought the authoress, Countess Arnim, to London from her home in Pomerania, for it is her first play, and it means more to her, in sentiment, than any of her books, more even than her famous first story, "Elizabeth and her German Garden."

Countess Arnim is an Englishwoman, with a slight, girlish figure, a frank, expressive face, crowned with brown, curling hair. A winning smile adds to the charm of her conversation.

"It is curious that my present visit to London should be for the rehearsal of a play by me," she said yesterday. "I had never seen a rehearsal before. I knew nothing of the working of a theatre before, and I never knew anyone on the stage. After my story of 'Princess Priscilla's Fortnight' was published some friends said I ought to make a play from it, and so I tried and the result will be seen in a few days.

EXCITED DAUGHTERS.

"In this as in other stories of mine I have been suspected of writing from life, taking the characters from people I know. That I have never done except in my first two stories. In 'Elizabeth and her German Garden' you will see my three little girls, something of my husband and myself, much of our home and garden. My best audience for my stories are my daughters, all three schoolgirls here in England, excited and thrilled beyond description because they are to be taken to see my first play next Tuesday.

"For me these rehearsals are ceaseless wonders. To go to the theatre and find one's thoughts embodied—that is an experience so strange, for in some instances the living characters I see there are exactly as I had pictured them in my imagination."

SIR AUGUSTUS:
"Can I be of any use to you?"

PRISCILLA:
"Yes; if this is your cottage, I wish to live in it."

SIR AUGUSTUS:
"Live in it?"

PRISCILLA:
"It's all so truly sweet outside. The prettiest in the village. The roof is the roof I've wanted all my life. And the creepers are exactly in the right places."

MRS. JONES:
"I don't take in no lodgers, Miss!"

Lessee and Manager.
Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

LYRIC THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE,
LONDON, W.

On Thursday, June 30th, 1910, at 9 o'clock,

"Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner"

BY

ROBERT NEILSON STEPHENS and E. LYALL SWETE

Capt. Harry Peyton (of Lee's Light Horse) ...	Mr LEWIS WALLER
Major John Colden (King's New Jersey Volunteers) ...	Mr FRANK WOOLFE
Serjeant Carrington (of Lee's Light Horse) ...	Mr CRONIN WILSON
Mr Valentine	Mr HERBERT JARMAN
John Edwards	Mr CATON WOODVILLE
Black Sam	Mr G. WELSH
Cuff	Mr C. KEENE
Mistress Sarah Williams	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Molly Edwards	Miss GORDON LEE
Miss Elizabeth Phillipse	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE

The Action of the Play takes place in the Phillipse Manor House, near New York.

Period ...	...	Late Autumn, 1778.
Act I. ...	The Hall.	(Late Afternoon)
Act II. ...	The Parlour.	(The Same Evening)
Act III. ...	The Hall.	(A Week Later—Afternoon)

Preceded at 8.30 by

"THE GREAT GAME"

MISS ELIZABETH'S PRISONER

A Romantic Comedy in Three Acts
By ROBERT NEILSON STEPHENS and E. LYALL SWETE

Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Miss LOTTIE VENNE Miss MADGE TITHERADGE

Every Evening at 9.
Matinees: Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30.

When Miss Elizabeh's Prisoner was first produced, we remarked in our critique that the play was frankly theatrical, with a first act full of stir and movement, and one very cleverly-devised situation; a rather weak second act; and a third act that brought on the inevitable happy ending without any undue strain upon the probabilities. The series of exciting and romantic incidents which result in the union of Miss Elizabeth Phillips and Captain Harry Peyton need not be re-described by us in detail; suffice it to say that the chivalry of Peyton, the impulsiveness of Miss Phillips, and the cruelty and cowardice of Major John Colden created as much pleasure in the audience at the Lyric Theatre on Thursday as they did when Mr. Robert Neilson Stephens and Mr. E. Lyall Swete's play was first performed at the Imperial Theatre on April 16, 1904. On that occasion Mr. Lewis Waller was the Captain Harry Peyton, Mr. Norman McKinnel the Major John Colden, Mr. Owen Roughwood the Sergeant Carrington, Mr. E Lyall Swete the Mr. Valentine,, Miss Lottie Venne the Mistress Sarah Williams, Miss Constance Walton the Molly Edwards, and Miss Grace Lane the heroine. We need only remind the reader that the pivot of the plot is the affection which young Captain Hugh Peyton pretends to feel for the young lady, Miss Elizabeth Phillips, who has taken him prisoner, in order to induce her to assist him to escape. Afterwards he becomes really in love with his fair captor; but she hears from a tattling friend in whom Peyton confided his first stage of feeling that he has only been tricking her; and she is correspondingly indignant. However, in the end, the young people come to an understanding, and the piece ends happily.

"AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION OF THE POPULAR REVUE."

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor — CHARING CROSS ROAD. — Sir Charles Wyndham.

Sole Lessee and Manager ... ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON

Every Evening at 9 o'clock,

MR. CHARLES HAWTREY

And Company in a New Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled

THE NAKED TRUTH

PRECEDED AT 8.15 BY

THE WILES OF THE WIDOW

BY KATHLEEN C. LION.

Betsy Pye (a Widow) .. .. Miss CLARE GREET
Mary Beasley (Sister to James) .. .. .. Miss JOY CHATWYN
James Beasley (Skipper of the "Mary Jane") .. Mr. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Daniel John Scatt (the Village Policeman) .. Mr. HUBERT DRUCE

Place ... ... A Small Fishing Village in Yorkshire.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 3.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1. OVERTURE ... ... "The Owl" ... ... Victor Herbert
2. SELECTION ... ... "Princess of Kensington" ... ... Edward German
3. SELECTION ... ... "The Balkan Princess" ... ... Paul Rubens
4. { a. BARCAROLLE ET VALSE "Contes d'Hoffmann" ... ... Offenbach
   { b. DANCE OF THE GRASSHOPPERS ... ... Ernest Bucalossi

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 7.45. Matinees 2.30. Commence at 8.15. Matinees 3.
Business Manager ... ... J. HERBERT JAY

WYNDHAM'S
THEATRE

11/7/1910

Orch. Stall

F 114
To be retained

"The Wiles of the Widow,"

which had its first London representation at Wyndham's Theatre on Monday evening. When Betsy buried her "first" she bought a grave for three, and thinking it would be a pity to waste it, and feeling lonely, she looked about for a second. She found him in James Beasley, skipper of the Mary Jane. James was bashful, and never once showed a coming-on disposition. He had promised his mother that while his sister Mary lived he would never bring another woman into the house to interfere with her domestic arrangements. The widow, being wily, schemed to bring about a match between Mary and the policeman, who was her own very bold wooer. He loved Betsy much, but he loved hot cakes and pickled pork more, and the widow persuaded him that Mary was an expert in the preparation of both. And "the wiles of the widow" were successful. The policeman proposed to Mary, and was accepted with rapture, and James came along to make the widow his wife.

* * *

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

Wednesday, July 20th, 1910, and every Evening at 8.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2-30

Extra Matinee, August Bank Holiday Monday, August 1st, at 2-30.

A White Man

A ROMANCE OF THE WEST,

BY

EDWIN MILTON ROYLE.

Characters.

Captain James Wynnegate, V.C. (afterwards Jim Carston)	Mr. HERBERT SLEATH
Earl of Kerhill (his Cousin)	Mr. ERIC MAYNE
Sir John Applegate	Mr. FRANK ELLIOTT
Bates	Mr. WILTON JAMES
Mr. Chiswick (Private Secretary)	Mr. HENRY ASHMEAD
Malcolm Petrie	Mr. WILLIAM F. GRANT
Lieutenant Henry George	Mr. WILLIAM HEAL
Lieutenant Alex. Leslie	Mr. SYDNEY HOPE
Lieutenant Charles Magarth	Mr. GEORGE NORTON
The Dean of Trantham	Mr. HARRY CANE
Big Bill (Foreman)	Mr. R. A. BRANDON
Shorty	Mr. GERALD VALENTINE
Andy	Mr. STANLEY WARMINGTON
Grouchy	Mr. HUGH TAYLOR
Baco White (Interpreter)	Mr. F. THORNTON
Tab-y-wana (Peace Chief of the Utes) ...	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Cash Hawkins	Mr. FRANK MAYO
Nick (Barkeeper)	Mr. J. FLOYD
Bud Hardy (the County Sheriff)	Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Clark (his Deputy)	Mr. DAVID DOUGLAS
McSorely (Engine Driver)	Mr. JOHN BELL
Parker (Conductor)	Mr. JACK COUTTS
Pete	Mr. GERALD EARLE
Parson	Mr. JOHN ROGERSON
Punk (a Chinaman)	Mr. ALFRED GORDON
Mr. Hiram Doolittle	Mr. W. FLETCHER
Little Hal	Little KITTY ROGERS
The Dowager Lady Kerhill	Miss DORA MORDANT
Lady Mabel Wynnegate	Miss GLADYS STOREY
Mrs. Hiram Doolittle...	Miss LILIAN TWEED
Music Hall Artiste	Miss DOROTHY DUNCAN
Nat-u-rich	Miss VIOLET VORLEY
Countess of Kerhill	Miss GEORGINA WYNTER

Cowboys, Sheriff's Posse, Passengers, &c.

TERRY'S THEATRE.

Sole Proprietor ... Mr. EDWARD TERRY.

Lessee ... L. S. SIRE.

Bijou Theatre, New York.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30

MATINEE WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30,

Mr. SIRE presents

MAY ROBSON

IN

THE FARCICAL COMEDY

The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary

By ANNE WARNER.

John Watkins, Jr. ..	(Denham "Jack")	.. JACK STOREY
Mitchell ..	.. Jack's Chums ..	PAUL DECKER
Robert Burnett		ARTHUR DEERING
Clover ..		JOHN McMAHON
Joshua	(Aunt Mary's Hired Man)	.. C. C. GWYNNE
James	(the Burnetts' Butler)	.. GEORGE F. HALL
Mr. Stebbins ..	(Aunt Mary's Lawyer)	.. LESTER WALLACE
Messenger Boy ..	.. .. ..	.. HARRY JONES
Betty Burnett .	(Burnett's Sister)	.. FAYE CUSICK
Lucinda ..	(Aunt Mary's property body and soul)	NINA SAVILLE
The Girl from Kalamazoo	.. .. ..	.. LILLIAN WESTNER
Mrs. Daisy Mullens	.. (a Villager) ..	.. LOTTA BLAKE
Betty's Maid ..	.. .. ..	.. ROSE FANTUSZ
Ruth	.. (a Villager) ..	.. BY HERSELF

AND

Aunt Mary Watkins .. .. MAY ROBSON

TERRY'S

THEATRE

—

AUG.

22

—

Orch. Stall

No. D16

To be retained

Act I. .. Just before dawn, June morning. Aunt Mary's New England home
Time: Present.

Act II. .. .. .. Bob Burnett's home, New York City. Three weeks later

Act III. .. .. Aunt Mary's home. Three weeks later

The Song introduced by Mr. Jack Storey in Act II. written especially for this play.
Lyrics by EARLE C. JONES. Music by HERMAN AVERY WADEA.

Produced under the Stage Direction of E. F. BOSWICK.

Scenery, Acts I. and III., by FRANK D. ORMSTON.
Act II., by YOUNG BROTHERS & BOSS.

Programme of Music.

OVERTURE	"Columbia"	Leonard Gautier
INTERMEZZO ALLA MAZURKA...		Walter Slaughter
THE TERRAPIN TWO-STEP		J. M Gallatly
PICCOLO SOLO	"The Lark's Festival" ... ... Mr. A. E. LUMLEY-HOLMES.	M. A. Brewer
CHARACTERISTIC PIECE ...	"The Butterfly"	Theo. Bendix

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their Hats.

The Box Office (G. WILLIAMS) is open daily from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone 2702 Gerrard

Executive Staff for L. S. SIRE.

MANAGER	R. A. RODEL
MUSICAL DIRECTOR	L. GAUTIER
STAGE MANAGER	G. F. HALL
MASTER MECHANIC	CHRISTIAN PORTER
MASTER OF PROPERTIES	F. WEST
ELECTRICIAN	RICHARD CARTER

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1910.

"THE REJUVENATION OF AUNT MARY."

PARLOUR MELODRAMA.

John Watkins, Jr.	Jack Storey.
Mitchell	Paul Decker.
Robert Burnett	Arthur Deering.
Clover	John McMahon.
Betty Burnett	Faye Cusick.
Lucinda	Nina Saville.
The Girl from Kalamazoo	Lillian Westner.
Ruth	By Herself.
Aunt Mary Watkins	May Robson.

America must be a country of endless resources to be able to spare us so curious an entertainment as "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" for the opening of the London dramatic season at Terry's Theatre last evening. Farcical comedy seems a quite inadequate description for a romp seasoned highly with sentiment. Parlour melodrama would not be a wholly misleading classification. Three acts made one wonder why the story was not told in two, and the curious ceremony of presenting bouquets to Miss May Robson at the end of the second act might fittingly have brought the play to an end.

There is no complicated plot in this latest importation to worry the mind of the tired business man in search of an entertainment. It is all about Aunt Mary, a rich old maiden lady, and her scapegrace nephew Jack. The latter beats a cabman, shoots a cook, breaks windows, and the aunt pays the bill every time. When he is drawn into a breach of promise case his relative cuts him off with a dollar, and Jack is faced with the terrible alternative of having to work. Some friend, however, writes to the old lady that Jack has measles, and, although the story is untrue, it brings her up to see him in New York. Jack, of course, is forgiven. He is saved from the misery of having to work for a living; and to add to his responsibilities a girl consents to marry him, and his aunt, grown young again through tasting the pleasures of New York roof garden theatres, threatens to live next door to him and have a good time.

The play was acted as well as it deserved—much better, in fact. Some of the scenery stood badly in need of a fresh coat of paint. Some of the jokes were much the worse for wear.

J.V.

GARRICK THEATRE

CHARING CROSS ROAD, W.C.

Lessees and Managers ... Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, 26 Langham Street, and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH, Dormy Cottage, Woking.

Season under the Management of Messrs.

WENTWORTH CROKE, MILTON BODE, and EDWARD COMPTON.

On SATURDAY, AUGUST 27th, AT 8,
AND EVERY EVENING

WILL BE PRODUCED

THE ETERNAL QUESTION

BY

HALL CAINE.

Music specially composed by PIETRO MASCAGNI.

Baron Bonelli (Prime Minister of Italy)	GUY STANDING
David Rossi (Member of the Chamber of Deputies) ..	VERNON STEEL
Pope Pius XI.	HALLIWELL HOBBES
Bruno Rocco (a Sculptor's Assistant and Rossi's Friend)	OSCAR ADYE
Commendatore Angelelli (Chief of the Roman Police)	EDWARD SORLEY
General Morra (President of the Military Tribunal) ..	RIDGWELL CULLUM
Major Doria (Public Prosecutor of the Military Tribunal)	WALTER RINGHAM
Colonel Cavalli (Governor of the Castle of St. Angelo)	EDWARD DURRANT
Charles Minghelli (a Police Spy)	WILFRED E. PAYNE
Felice (Major Domo to Bonelli)	GEORGE ROWLANDS
Father Pifferi (a Capuchin Friar)	ORLANDO BARNETT
Maestro de Camera	RICHARD NEVILLE
Joseph (Bruno's Son)	Miss ANNA CUKA
Secretary of the Court	BERNARD A. LESLIE
Donna Roma Volonna (a Sculptor)	Miss TITTELL-BRUNE
Elena (Bruno's Wife)	Miss MARIE HOUSLEY
Nattalina (Roma's Maid)	Miss RITA CARR

Students, Peasants, Prelates, Pontifical Guards, Swiss Guards, Warders, Carabineers:—
LOUIS SEALY, Jr., GILBERT ESMOND, LANGFORD REED, CECIL SAUNDERS, C. FIELDING, A. NIELD, LESLIE OSWELL, WILLOX CADOGAN, CAMPBELL STERNE.

The Play produced by CREAGH HENRY.

Act I. ..	Scene 1	The Loggia of the Baron Bonelli's Palace, overlooking the Piazza of St. Pietro
	Scene 2 ..	The Apartment of David Rossi in the Piazza Navona
Act II. ..	.. ..	.. Donna Roma's Studio
Act III. ..	Scene 1	A Hall in the Castle of St. Angelo
	Scene 2	The Pope's Garden at the Vatican
Act IV. ..	Scene 1	.. Donna Roma's Studio
	Scene 2	A Cell in the Prison of Regina Coeli

There will be an interval of Ten Minutes between each Act.

The Entire Production is under the Direction of
G. RALPH HALL CAINE, Managing Director of "THE ETERNAL QUESTION, LIMITED."

BUSINESS MANAGER ...	for "The Eternal Question, Limited"	... Mr. W. F. CROWE
STAGE DIRECTOR		... Mr. FRANK COLLINS
STAGE MANAGER		... Mr. BERNARD A. LESLIE
MUSICAL DIRECTOR		... Mr. E. WOODVILLE

Scenery by W. T. HEMSLEY and J. T. BULL & SON. Wigs by GUSTAVE.
Costumes and Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN. Furniture and Upholstery by J. S. LYON.
Gramophone Effects by THE GRAMOPHONE COMPANY, 21 City Road, E.C.
The Costumes and Hats worn by Miss Tittell-Brune executed and designed by LAURETTE, 15 Maddox Street, Bond Street, W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

The Box Office (A. R. BRITTEN) open daily from 10 to 10. Telephone 9513 Gerrard.
Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under Shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserves to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

BUSINESS MANAGER { for Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode, and Edward Compton } Mr. LAWSON LAMBERT

WIGHTMAN MOUNTAIN & ANDREWS, LTD., Printers, 31 & 33, Victoria Street, S.W.

153
155

Having thus laid down his thesis, the author carries on his arguments, pro and con, principally by means of three characters—David Rossi, Baron Bonelli, and Donna Roma Volonna, and he does so powerfully and interestingly. The play, indeed, as a piece of theatrical work shows that the author has advanced much as a stage craftsman. His incidents are presented vividly; his situations are strong; his ensemble, if we may use the word, is picturesque; and his dialogue always good, if occasionally too didactic. It certainly needs no polemics on the stage to prove that the attitude of the world towards the repentant Magdalen is governed more by the severity of Mosaic law than by the message of the grand Exemplar of Love and Faith—"She hath done what she could"; but in the polemics of Hall Caine the public are particularly interested just now, and if future audiences at the Garrick will scarcely be filled with admiration at his character drawing, they will be able to listen to a play that always holds the attention and is never dull.

The early meeting between David Rossi and Donna Roma, sculptress, is in the toggis of her protector, Baron Bonelli's palace—the scene of the first act—from which she hears the young Socialist Deputy addressing the populace and denouncing the ruling classes: "We have two sovereigns in Rome, brothers, a great State and a great Church, but a perishing people. We have soldiers enough to kill us, and priests enough to tell us how to die, but no one to tell us how to live." (Shouts of "Corruption!") "Corruption, indeed, brothers, and who is there among us to whom the corruption of our rulers is unknown? Who cannot point to the Ministers who allow their mistresses to meddle in public affairs, and to enrich themselves by the ruin of the poor?"

Roma is furious at this outburst, and to the impassive Bonelli she says, "Leave the man to me. Within a month, within a week, he shall lie as tamely to my hand as a ripe apple on a wall. With his angel face he shall sit to me—he shall sit for Judas among the figures about my fountain." In their first interview Roma lies to Rossi. She says: "I am a sculptor, and I have nothing but what my work brings me"; but at the end of the first act it is made quite clear that hero and heroine are destined for mutual love and self-sacrifice. The love confession comes in the second act, when Roma says nothing of her past life, accepting with some misgiving Rossi's description of their happiness: "Our sky is blue, our sun is shining, and we can laugh at everything."

Retribution comes swiftly, however. Bruno Rocco, Rossi's friend, takes his little son, Joseph, to the procession of the people going up to the Coliseum. Bonelli has given instructions to the police to disperse the crowd, if needs be, by means of the soldiers, who fire and kill the child. Bruno Rocco is arrested, and rather than betray his leader, Rossi, he stabs himself with a dagger.

The influence of the Pope is brought to bear on Roma, in order to make her betray Rossi, who has freely spoken of his past life to the woman he so implicitly trusts. She alone knows of his connection with a so-called political crime committed by him when passing under the name of his father, Leone, who is now the sovereign Pontiff. The lovers meet again in the first scene of the fourth act, and in the hearing of Bonelli Roma explains her apparent treachery to the distracted Rossi, saying that her action was due to her love for him. The Prime Minister stigmatises Roma's statement as a lie. Rossi then learns for the first time of the relations that have existed between Bonelli and Roma, who is at length denounced as a harlot by her fiercely jealous paramour. This is too much for Rossi, who strikes the Baron. The latter draws his revolver, and in the struggle for its possession the weapon is discharged, and Bonelli is killed. Rossi departs with a volley of curses hurled at Roma's head; the police rush in; and to the question "Who killed his Excellency?" Roma replies "I did. In the final scene—the Prison—Rossi comes to Roma in the disguise of a friar. The chivalrous young Socialist is ready to take her with her life behind her. They are in a blind alley; but there is a way out. He says: "We will let the law of man do what it will with us. And if we may not seek to unite our lives in this world we will do so in the next!" They go out to their trial together, and the play ends.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD . . . . . SOLE PROPRIETOR.
TOM B. DAVIS . . . . . Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING AT 8.30. MATINEES—THURSDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.30.
August 30 1910
THE FOLLIES
H. G. PÉLISSIER,
MORRIS HARVEY
DAN EVERARD
DOUGLAS MACLAREN
AND LEWIS SYDNEY
GWENNIE MARS
MURIEL GEORGE
EFFIE COOK
AND
ETHEL ALLANDALE

NEW THEATRE

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, W.C.

Proprietor, SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM

Wednesday, August 31st, 1910, and every evening at 8.15,

An Adaptation from Pierre Berton's "La Rencontre," by Rudolf Besier,

Entitled:

THE CRISIS.

Camille de Lançay	Miss EVELYN MILLARD
Renée Serval (Serval's Wife)	Miss SARAH BROOKE
A Maid	Miss E. MARTHEZE
Canuche	Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
Raymond de Brévannes	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Armand Vivien (Serval's Secretary)	Mr. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Adrien Serval	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL

Act 1 .. .. At Serval's House, Paris.

Acts 2 & 3 .. .. At Serval's House, Ville d'Avray.

Fourteen days elapse between Acts II. and III.

The Play produced by NORMAN McKINNEL.

Scenery by Walter Hann and F. L Schmitz. Dresses by Madame Handley-Seymour, 47, New Bond Street.
Hats by Michée Zac, 2, Hanover Court, Hanover Street.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY.

ORCHESTRA UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MR. EDMOND RICKETT.

Overture	"The Merry Wives of Windsor" Nicolai
After Act I. Selection	"Sylvia" Delibes
After Act II.	(a) Chant sans Paroles Tschaikowsky
	(b) Pizzicato—Polka Strauss

Business Manager .. Mr. WALTER MAXWELL

Stage Manager .. Mr. FRANK HARDING

"What is the use of being a pretty woman if you don't make the man fall in love with you?" asks pretty Renée Serval of her friend Camille de Lançay. Renée has successfully exploited her own charms to her great personal advantage; they have gained her a husband, a successful lawyer of humble origin—whom she despises—of immense wealth, in which she delights, and of a social position which she values very highly. It is for his position and his money that she has condescended to marry him. She loves him not at all, nor does she pretend to do so, for Renée's heart is the cold, calculating organ of the mondaine. Her liaison with Raymond de Brévannes serves rather to gratify her vanity than her senses; and Raymond is a bird of the same feather, a bon viveur whose outlook on life is one of undiluted materialism. To the home of Renée comes an old school friend, Camille de Lançay. The friends have not met for six years, and during that time both have married. Camille's marriage has ended disastrously. We gather that her husband has been an "unmitigated brute" (fortunately we are spared details). Camille is a lovely, sympathetic woman; Serval is one of the "strong, silent men" of the newspaper feuilleton. The inevitable happens. At their first meeting (is this La Rencontre of the original title?) we see a mutual attraction dawning. In the fortnight which elapses between Acts I. and II. they have fallen madly in love with one another. Serval is strong, but not quite so silent. He confesses his love, and Camille reduces him to silence again. They are to be friends—nothing more; she will leave his house in the morning. Serval goes off to Paris that night, and the moment he is safely out of the way Raymond enters clandestinely, and Camille is the unseen spectator of passionate embraces between him and Renée. As the pair retire to Renée's room Camille emerges from her hiding place to confront Serval, who has returned unexpectedly. Camille at first believes that he also has been a spectator of the lovers' meeting; but she finds that she is wrong—he is entirely unsuspicious of any deception on the part of his wife. In an agony of apprehension Camille sees him going towards the door of his wife's room, and to prevent this she falls back on a last resource. As she stands on the threshold she utters a frantic cry. He turns; she holds out her arms to him. She loves him, she is his; and he catches her in his arms.

The best scene in the play occurs in the last act. Camille and Serval have agreed to pass the sponge of oblivion over the episode between them, but Renée discovers that her lover is on the eve of marriage with an heiress, and her wounded vanity turns her into a Fury. A chance word awakens her suspicions that there is more than friendship between Camille and her husband. She cannot satisfy her desire for vengeance on Raymond, as to do so would be to defy the only god she worships—conventionality; but someone must pay for her bedraggled pride. If Camille and her husband are guilty they shall be the victims of her wrath. So she sets a poor tool of hers to spy on them. His report confirms her suspicions, and, in a blind rage, she accuses Camille, who has posed as her high-minded, noble friend, of having stolen her husband from her. She heaps scathing scorn and vitriolic abuse on Camille's head until the worm turns, and Renée is in her turn annihilated by the knowledge that Camille is aware of her liaison with Raymond, and that she has only to communicate it to Serval for the altar at which Renée worships to be demolished. But Camille's nobility of character is so great that she will sacrifice her own happiness, and incidentally Serval's, for the sake of her friend. As he enters she goes slowly and sadly away; and as she goes she conveys to his wife that there will be no exposure and that the secret will be kept.

The Weekly Dispatch

LONDON: 2, Carmelite Street, E.C.

MANCHESTER: Deansgate.

Artificial and Unconvincing.

At this period of the year first-night audiences are not often distinguished, but I must confess I have rarely seen one so uninteresting as that which gathered at the New Theatre on Wednesday evening for the first performance, in English, of Pierre Berton's "La Rencontre," in the adaptation, "The Crisis." Strange faces were everywhere, and one of the unaccustomed first nighters, a young gentleman—wearing white gloves, too—came into the stalls smoking a cigarette which he, with "careless gaiety," dropped on the floor when about to make his way into Row J. The play was, however, well matched to the audience in that it possessed little distinction. The double intrigue, husband and wife each in love with someone else, was poor artificial stuff, bearing no resemblance to reality, having no life in it, and never for one instant convincing us that the people on the stage were doing anything other than working hard at their profession.

Some Wonderful Costumes.

There must be something very wrong with a play when Mr. Norman McKinnel fails to make a success. He can carry a strong part, a grim, determined man, as no other English actor can, but here all his efforts to appear convincing failed. Now when he, much the ablest player appearing in "The Crisis," did not convince us, what need be said of the others? Miss Evelyn Millard and Miss Sarah Brooke, as the rivals with lovers, had a wordy battle that got a titter, but to me they both seemed so impressed with the beauty of their costumes that the intrigue mattered less. Anyhow, their costumes were wonderful creations, which is more than can be said of plays like "The Crisis." By the by, I wonder if the three girls who sat in the front row of the pit giving a top-note, like an American college yell, to the entr'acte applause are to be a feature of this season's first nights.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

SHAKESPEARE'S

KING HENRY VIII.

EVERY EVENING

"HENRY VIII." AT HIS MAJESTY'S.

On Thursday, Sept. 1, Revival of Shakespeare's Play.

TO-NIGHT AT 7 O'CLOCK.

(Subsequent Performances will commence at 8.15)

SHAKESPEARE'S

KING HENRY VIII.

King Henry VIII.		ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Cardinal Wolsey		HERBERT TREE
Cardinal Campeius	(Legate from the Pope)	S. A. COOKSON
Cranmer	(Archbishop of Canterbury)	CHARLES FULLER
Duke of Norfolk		A. E. GEORGE
Duke of Buckingham		HENRY AINLEY
Duke of Suffolk		EDWARD O'NEILL
Earl of Surrey		GERALD LAWRENCE
Lord Chamberlain		EDWARD SASS
Gardiner	(Bishop of Winchester)	WILLIAM BURCHILL
Lord Abergavenny		CLARENCE DERWENT
Lord Sands		WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Sir Henry Guildford		EDMUND GURNEY
Sir Thomas Lovell		HENRY C. HEWITT
Sir Nicholas Vaux		CHARLES JAMES
Thomas Cromwell	(Secretary to Cardinal Wolsey)	REGINALD OWEN
Griffith	(Usher to Queen Katharine)	HENRY MORRELL
1st Gentleman		CYRIL SWORDER
2nd Gentleman		CHARLES HOWARD
Garter King at Arms		CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Surveyor to the Duke of Buckingham		ACTON BOND
Sergeant-at-Arms		ARTHUR GASKILL
Servant		W. B. ABINGDON
A Crier		EDMUND GOLDING
A Scribe		FRANCIS CHAMIER
Jester		ROSS SHORE
Queen Katharine		Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH
Anne Bullen		Miss LAURA COWIE
An Old Lady		Mrs. CHARLES CALVERT
Patience	(Waiting Maid to Queen Katharine)	Miss LILA BARCLAY

Act I.

Scene 1.—The Cloisters.
Scene 2.—The Council Chamber.
Scene 3.—The Banqueting Hall, Wolsey's Palace.
(Designed by Percy Macquoid, R.I.)

Act II.

Scene 1.—The River Gate.
Scene 2.—The Gallery.
Scene 3.—The Pleasaunce, Windsor.
Scene 4.—A Hall in Blackfriars.

Act III.

Scene 1.—The Pleasaunce.
Scene 2.—Ante-Chamber with adjoining Chapel.
Scene 3.—Kimbolton.
Scene 4.—Westminster Abbey

The Scenery has been painted by Joseph Harker.
The Dances have been arranged by Miss Margaret Morris.

The Furniture and Costumes have been designed by Percy Macquoid, R.I., and the latter carried out by B. J. Simmons & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C. Wigs by W. Clarkson.

The Overture, Entr'actes and Incidental Music have been selected from the original Music of EDWARD GERMAN,
by whom several new Incidental Numbers have been composed for the present production.

Note.—The Tunes sung to the Morris Dance in Act I., Scene III, are traditional, and the Part Song "Pastime and Good Company," which occurs in the same scene, was written and composed by King Henry VIII.

The Overture, Entr'actes and Incidental Music, by arrangement with the Executors of the late Sir Henry Irving.

Musical Director—ADOLF SCHMID.

Sir Herbert Tree wishes to express his gratitude to Louis N. Parker for his valuable help in the production and pageantry of the play; and to Percy Macquoid, R.I., for his inspiring archæological advice.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY, at 2.15.

In connection with this production, Sir Herbert Tree has written a little volume entitled "Henry VIII. and his Court." This book, published by Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd., is on sale at all booksellers, or can be procured at the Box Office of the Theatre and from the attendants, price 1/- net.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Theatre has now been fitted throughout with the Ozonair System of Ventilation for the constant supply of pure fresh air, by Messrs. Ozonair Ltd., 96, Victoria Street, S.W.

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.
Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager—CECIL KING. Associate Stage Manager—STANLEY BELL.

General Manager - - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. Watts) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. Telephone Gerrard 1777.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1910.

A PAGEANT PLAY.

MY VIEW OF "HENRY VIII."

By SIR HERBERT TREE.

"Bluff King Hal" was of the eternal type adored by the people. The genial adventurer with sporting tendencies and large-hearted proclivities is always popular with the mob. He had a certain outward and inward affinity with Nero. Like Nero, he was corpulent; like Nero, he was red-haired; like Nero, he sang and poetised; like Nero, he was a lover of horsemanship, a master of the arts, and a slave of his passions. If his private vices were great, his public virtues were no less considerable. There was something baffling and terrifying in the mysterious bonhomie of Henry. In spite of Cæsar's dictum, it is the fat enemy who is to be feared.

In the play of "Henry VIII.," which we revive to-morrow night at His Majesty's Theatre, the author or authors (for to Shakespeare is ascribed only a portion of the drama) have given us as impartial a view of his character as a due regard for truth on the one hand and a respect for the scaffold on the other permitted. We must remember the times Henry lived in; he was born into an inheritance of blood and blackmail. Men murdered to live—the axe and the sword were the final Court of Appeal.

Nor does the old order change appreciably in the course of a few hundred years. For in international politics, as in public life, self-interest sends Christianity to the wall. To-day we grind our axes with a difference. A more subtle process of dealing with our rivals obtains.

HENRY VIII. AND WOLSEY.

Commendation or condemnation must always depend upon our point of view. We must judge by results, for the truest expression of a man is his work; his greatness or his littleness is measured by his output. Henry produced great results, though he may have been the unconscious instrument of Fate. He was a stern moralist in regard to the conduct of others, but he had an indulgence towards himself which enabled him somewhat freely to interpret the Divine right of kings as "Le droit de seigneur." So strong was he in his self-assurance that he made even conscience his slave. He had the power of gathering round him the great men of his time, and their learning he turned to his own account with that adaptiveness which is the peculiar attribute of genius.

In Wolsey Henry appreciated the mighty Minister, and this, indeed, is one of his claims to greatness, for graciously to permit others to be great is a sign of greatness in a King.

If Henry was a great King, Wolsey was a mighty statesman. It was the custom for many years to regard Wolsey as the type of the arrogant and ambitious ecclesiastic, of the man of humble origin who had used the Church as a means of fulfilling his astounding ambition and rising to a state of power from which his fall was like that of Lucifer, never to rise again. But now we have learnt to realise the great claim of Wolsey as a statesman. He was the first great patriot with a desire for bringing England into the highest circle of European politics. He has been called the greatest statesman England ever produced. Had Wolsey been able to fulfil his own ideals, had he been the head of a Republic and not the servant of a King, his public record would no doubt have been on a higher ethical plane. But he was better as a patriot than as a royal servant, and with regard to the divorce which was the cause of his fall we must remember that a first-rate man cannot do second-rate things well. Henry and Wolsey were two giants littered in one day. Wolsey realised his possibilities of power before Henry. But when Henry once learnt how easy it was for him to get his own way "the nation, which had trembled before Wolsey, learned to tremble before the King who could destroy Wolsey with a breath."

CALCULATED DISPLAY.

Wolsey's magnificence, the pomp and circumstance of his life, surpass description. Shakespeare in his banqueting scene in "Henry VIII." reproduces the cardinal's lavish splendour almost word for word as recorded by Cavendish. But we must remember that Wolsey surrounded himself with such worldly vanities less from any vulgarity in his nature than from a desire to work upon the common mind, ever ready to be impressed by outward show. The lives of great men compose themselves dramatically; Wolsey's end is, indeed, a fit theme for the dramatist. The King had become more masterful. It was impossible for two such stormy men to act permanently in concord. As Anne Boleyn's power over the King grew, Wolsey's influence waned. Well might he say in the day of his downfall, "Had I but served my God as diligently as I have done the King, He would not have given me over in my grey hairs."

It is this struggle between these two dominant characters that Shakespeare has treated in his play, and which gives it such a human interest.

With regard to the production of the play, it is sometimes necessary to state the obvious. All those who have preceded me in setting the play of "Henry VIII." before the public have recognised the necessity of presenting the play as a chronicle of the time, and they have all presented it with all the resources their generation afforded them.

Shakespeare and Burbage, Betterton, Colley Cibber, the Kembles, the Keans, Phelps, Calvert, and Henry Irving as artists recognised that that was the one and only way to treat the play. It is pleasant to sin in such good company.

From the descriptions recognised of that time it will be seen that the period of "Henry VIII." was characterised by great sumptuousness: indeed, the daily life of the Court consisted largely of revels, masques, and displays of splendour.

And so "Henry VIII." is largely a pageant play. As such it was conceived and written, as such we shall endeavour to present it to the public. Indeed, it is obvious that it would be far better not to produce the play at all than to present it to the public without those adjuncts by which alone the action of the play can be illustrated. Of course, it is not possible to do more than indicate on the stage the sumptuousness of the period of history covered by the play; but it is hoped that an impression will be conveyed to our own time of Henry in his habit as he lived, of the people, of the architecture, and of the manners and customs of that great age.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

Proprietor — CHARING CROSS ROAD. — Sir Charles Wyndham

Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

On SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1910, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30,

NOBODY'S DAUGHTER

A Play in Four Acts, by GEORGE PASTON

Mr. Frampton	Managing Director of the Wolverswyck Pottery Works	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Mrs. Frampton		Miss GILLIAN BRAITHWAITE
Col. Torrens	Commanding the Regimental Depot at Wolverswyck	Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE
Mrs. Torrens		Miss HENRIETTA WATSON
Jim	(their Son)	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Honora May		Miss ROSALIE TOLLER
Christine Grant		Miss MARY RORKE
Teresa Hollyd		Miss DOROTHY BEEL
Sir Lester Richmond		Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Will Lorrimer		Mr. H. MARSH ALLEN
Maid		Miss MARY TESTE

Act I. — Christine Grant's Cottage at Brambleside (Three days elapse)

Act II. — The Drawing Room of the Framptons' House on the outskirts of Wolverswyck (Three months elapse)

Act III. — The Framptons' Garden (One day elapses)

Act IV. — The Framptons' Drawing Room

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by L. A. Fraser.

Furniture supplied and arranged by KINDELMAN, 26 Goodge Street, W.C.

Dresses designed by ROBERT, SPEDDAL, Miss GRAY, Miss SPEAIGHT and VERO.

Wigs by C. Wilkinson. Floral Decorations and Foliage in Act III by A. & L. CHUMAN.

Four Grand Pianos kindly lent by the Agents for the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra under the direction of ERNEST BUTALOSSI will play the following Music:—

Before Act I.		Selection, "Romeo et Juliette"	Gounod
Before Act II.	a.	"Hungarian"	Brandt
	b.	"Le Colin Tampon"	Neal
	c.	"Nocturne"	Victor Herbert
Before Act III.	a.	Waltz, "Heartsease"	Zuro
	b.	Ballet "La Source"	Delibes
Before Act IV.	a.	"In Hungarian Mountains"	Egan
	b.	"Serenade"	Pierne

Musical Director ... ERNEST BUTALOSSI

Stage Manager ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Grand Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.

Doors open at 8. Matinees at 2. Commence at 8.30. Matinees 2.30.

Business Manager ... J. HERBERT JAY

Ladies' and Gentlemen's Cloak Rooms. The name of a beautiful and reasonable Manager of the Theatre can be obtained on application. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by any of the doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a Pay Box Screen to the Entrance Doors, it is requested that a Programme be exhibited during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. All Doors must be unlocked while Audience are present. All gangways passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Mr. Frank Curzon and Mr. Gerald du Maurier can be heartily congratulated on the success of their first production under joint management. There is every possibility that Nobody's Daughter, by George Paston, produced at Wyndham's Theatre on Saturday, Sept. 3, will be "Everybody's Child," for a play so fresh, of such delightful simplicity, with so strong a human interest, and withal so happily cast, is likely to become a universal favourite. "We are only children wandering over the moor," is the summing-up of John Frampton's view of life. Helen Frampton, his wife, had gone astray from the path of virtue twenty years before the play begins, before she had ever met the man she marries. She and young Jim Torrens had been madly in love with one another and too poor to marry. The result of their brief period of madness, a baby girl, has been handed over to the care of a Calvinistic old nurse, Christine Grant, and the unfortunate episode has been kept carefully hidden. Jim Torrens is sent to India, and in twelve months he finds a rich wife, and the mother of his child marries a wealthy man with whom she is genuinely in love. There is nothing to recall the brief period of their infatuation but the little Honora May, to whom they pose as guardians and family friend. The child is well looked after, well cared for, but her companions belong to the working classes, and from them she takes her ideas and her general tone.

When she reaches the age of nineteen her self-appointed guardians come to the tardy conclusion that her surroundings and associates are unfitted for one of her birth. In the meantime the Torrenses have returned from India and are on terms of intimate friendship with the Framptons. It is suggested that Honora shall go into a "nice" family for two years, but the girl, who is unaware of her parentage, refuses. She has made her own plans, she has given her heart to an ambitious young chauffeur, and she is going to marry him. They will sail together for Australia, where Will's chance in life is to be found. The mother is horrified at the idea of her daughter marrying a working-man; she will save Honora from such a marriage at all costs. As Honora refuses to go to a "nice" family, Helen will take her into her own home for six months, hoping that in a different atmosphere and surrounded by congenial society the vision of the young chauffeur will fade away. So Honora goes unwittingly to her mother's home. There now appears on the scene John Frampton, Helen's husband, a charming, boyish middle-aged man, devoted to his wife, happy in the friendship of Jim Torrens. He is delighted at the advent of his wife's protegée, his one regret being that they are childless; and, on finding that poor Honora occasionally frets because of her lack of "real" relations, he in an idle moment sets himself the task of discovering the secret of her antecedents.

He succeeds only too well for the peace of mind of everybody concerned. It is, of course, on the woman, his wife, that his anger is chiefly concentrated. That she has been a loving, faithful companion to him for seventeen years counts not at all; she has deceived him, she has abjured her motherhood, she is altogether vile, she must be cast away. And who induces him to take a more rational view of the matter and is principally instrumental in bringing about a reconciliation? Who but the wife of the other man, a woman of beautiful character, sane, broad-minded, with a heart quick to feel, and a brain clear to judge rightly, a woman who "knew it all the time," and had kept silence until the time came for her to speak.

167

D. Y. T.

6/9/1910

Orch. Stall

F18

No

Tuesday, September 6th, at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

A BOLT FROM THE BLUE,

A Play, in Three Acts,

By M.M. TRISTAN BERNARD and ALFRED ATHIS.

Adapted by COSMO HAMILTON.

Claude Brévin	ARTHUR WONTNER
Doizeau	DENNIS EADIE
Valtier	LESLIE FABER
Gabriel	A. HOLMES-GORE
Gomez	HERBERT ROSS
Père Tabac	EDMUND GWENN
Chémard	HAROLD CHAPIN
Le Baron de Rouget	A. G. ONSLOW
Chagnard	HERBERT BUNSTON
Sauvalin	HUBERT HARBEN
Boissonet	J. H. BREWER
Doullens	WALTER KINGSFORD
La Tanche	A. SCOTT-CRAVEN
Le Nantais	ERNEST YOUNG
Ferdinand	HAROLD WEST
Julian	ARTHUR ELDRED
Achille	CHARLES VERNON
Le Concierge	DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Manager of the Hotel	P. L. JULIAN
Arsène	RICHARD HAIGH
Adèle	LYDIA BILBROOKE
Agathe	FRANCES DILLON
Eugénie	AGNES MILLER
Clorinde	LILY McINTYRE
Mme. Sauvalin	MINNIE GRIFFIN
Ginette	EVANGELINE HILLIARD
Valentine Gay	ANN CLEAVER
Julia Varin	SHEILA HESELTINE
Jeanne Dargens	THEODORA GERARD
AND
Irma Lurette	IRENE VANBRUGH

168

Act I. ... ... A Cafe-Restaurant in the Quartier des Epinettes, Paris.
Act II. ... ... The Foyer of an Hotel, Paris.
Act III. ... ... Irma Lurette's Flat.

The Play Produced under the Direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

Furniture by Messrs. OETZMANN, Hampstead Road.

During the vacation this Theatre has been entirely re-decorated and re-upholstered by Messrs. HAMPTON & SONS, Pall Mall.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

1.—OVERTURE ...	"Preciosa" ...	Weber
2.—VALSE LENTE MARCHE RUSSE TWO STEP ...	"Ballet Russe" ... ..."Our Flag" ...	Luigini Hadyn Wood
3.—BALLET ... MAZURKA DANSER ... SYRINGA BLOSSOMS	"Tom Jones" ... "La Montagnarde" ... "Valse" ...	Ed. German Ed. Filippucci F. C. Hayes

General Manager ... ... (for Charles Frohman) ... ... W. LESTOCQ.

First Matinee, Saturday next, at 2.30; and every Thursday and Saturday following.

COMEDY THEATRE.—Will re-open September 14th, when CHARLES FROHMAN will present "A Woman's Way," a New Play, in Three Acts, by THOMPSON BUCHANAN.

Business Manager	JAMES W. MATHEWS.
Stage Manager	DUNCAN McRAE.
Musical Director	JOHN CROOK.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d; Dress Circle, 6s.; Upper Circle, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s

Box Office 10 to 10. Telephones, GERRARD 312, 313, 314.

ICES, TEA AND COFFEE can be had of the Attendants.

6/9/10

Irma Lurette, a beautiful and attractive Parisian actress, has in her possession some compromising letters which will prove fatal to the peace of mind of a certain noble family if, as Irma threatens, she makes them public property. To prevent this at all costs, the matter is placed in the unprincipled hands of an unscrupulous old villain, Doizeau, who sees no alternative but the murder of Irma as a prelude to the theft of the papers. To find a man who, for a suitable consideration, will stop at nothing, not excepting homicide, Doizeau visits a café-restaurant in the Quartier des Epinettes, kept by one Père Tabac, a favourite haunt of the Apaches, where we are shown some weird and horrible specimens of humanity.

The first man chosen for the task is a creature ready to commit any atrocity for money, but he fights shy when he learns that as a preliminary it will be necessary for him to make himself attractive to the woman he is to murder. He confesses that he has always had an invincible repugnance to feminine society, and that, so far as he is concerned, the job is "off." But the restaurant keeper, Père Tabac, who is an ally of Doizeau's, has another card up his sleeve. He has had a visit that same day from a man whom he had formerly befriended to the extent of granting him a loan of 2,000 francs, and who has returned to his old haunts, after trying ineffectually for a year or so to earn an honest living. Claude Brévin is a gentleman by birth, who, finding the burden of life too heavy for him, is on the point of ending it, when the thought of his debt to the man who had done him a good turn causes him to pause. He goes to Père Tabac famished in body and broken in spirit, and implores him to come once again to his—Brévin's—aid. Père Tabac rises to the occasion. He gives Claude food and drink, and then tells the revived and grateful man that he has found him work to do. It is dirty work; he must make no objection if his hands are soiled; but if he consents he will find himself the richer by 10,000 francs.

The prospect of possessing this sum decides the penniless Claude to agree to anything; he is introduced to Doizeau, and the plot is laid before him. He is to accompany Doizeau to an hotel where a reception is to be held in honour of the hundredth performance of the play in which Irma is appearing. He will be introduced to her, and is to set himself the task of attracting her sufficiently to persuade her to permit him to accompany her to her flat, where he is to murder her and obtain possession of the papers. As the whole villainous scheme is unfolded, Claude realises its infamy and wavers. At first he refuses the job; but eventually he remembers his desperate condition and the promised reward, and consents to do the deed.

The plans of the conspirators are entirely successful. Irma takes a violent fancy to Claude, apparently because he makes her lose her temper within five minutes of their meeting. Within another fifteen she has accepted a valuable sapphire ring from him, and in half an hour she has agreed to take him with her to a tête-à-tête supper at her flat. He is hardly to be blamed for thinking the charming actress "no better than she ought to be" when he finds himself alone with Irma in her rooms, her maid Eugénie having been hurriedly called away by a "bogus" telegram; and she, preparatory to changing into something "soft and loose," asks him to undo the top hook of her evening frock. It is a surprise to others besides Claude to find that, in spite of her Bohemian tendencies, Irma has an invincible prejudice for remaining "straight." However, straight or otherwise, Claude has come to murder her. She retires to her room to don a teagown, and he turns out the light and waits her return with unclasped knife. But another is before him. Into the darkened room creeps an Apache who seizes Irma by the throat. Claude dashes to her rescue, the Apache is overpowered and kicked out, and Irma falls in the arms of the man who has saved her life—by accident. He confesses all to her. She forgives him, hands over the letters, refusing to accept in payment for them the 10,000 francs which were to have been the price of her murder, and invites him to join the company to which she belongs—an offer which Brévin gladly accepts.

"SISTER ANNE."

MME. ALBANESI'S NEW PLAY AT THE CORONET THEATRE.

David Barostan ..... Mr. Norman Trevor.
Basil Barostan ..... Mr. Frederic Sargent.
Mark Wallingford ..... Mr. C. Aubrey Smith.
Miss Rainham ..... Miss Rosina Filippi.
Pamela Brookdale ..... Miss Ruth Bower.
Anne Brookdale ..... Miss Marion Terry.

Plays made from books have a curious knack of coming through the process in a manner that is rarely satisfactory to those who are only concerned with seeing them acted. "Sister Anne"—a dramatised version of a novel of the same name—by Mme. Albanesi, produced at the Coronet Theatre last evening, is not one of the few fortunate exceptions.

"Sister Anne" suffers from the manifest disadvantage of being anything but a cheerful narrative, and is served up under a torrent of words heavy enough to damp the ardour even of those accustomed to such things.

The lady whose name gives the play its title suffered for the sin of being an altruist. Self-sacrifice with her was more than a hobby; it was a passion, and when her sister's disregard for a promise to love a certain young man for all time led the young fellow to commit suicide, Anne came between the avenging brother of the dead man and the thoughtless girl. She took on her own innocent shoulders all the blame for the broken pledge, and when the avenger demanded the curious penalty that she should marry him and take the place of his brother in his life, Anne consented. In the end, of course, Anne discovered that she loved her husband, discovered too that he had always loved her. A story that in a book should make a satisfactory narrative seemed heavy and actionless in the form of a play. Miss Marion Terry, Miss Ruth Bower, Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, and Mr. Norman Trevor sustained the four leading parts, and Mr. Norman Trevor, who had much the best part, did—naturally—better than the others.

J.W

Mr. ROBERT ARTHUR'S First Autumn Production

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 7th, 1910, and every evening at 8.30.
First Matinee, SATURDAY, Sept. 10th, at 2.30.
And Matinees each succeeding THURSDAY and SATURDAY.

MR. ROBERT ARTHUR
PRESENTS
MISS MARION TERRY
IN THE NEW PLAY IN FOUR ACTS—ADAPTED FROM THE NOVEL—ENTITLED:

SISTER ANNE

By Madame ALBANESI.

DAVID BAROSTAN	.. MR. NORMAN TREVOR
BASIL BAROSTAN	MR. FREDERIC SARGENT
MARK WALLINGFORD	MR. C. AUBREY SMITH
PARSONS	.. MR. HENRY KITTS
FARM LAD	.. MR. ARTHUR CLEAVE
MISS RAINHAM	.. MISS ROSINA FILIPPI
PAMELA BROOKDALE	.. MISS RUTH BOWER
MURIEL PEYTON	.. MISS VIVA BIRKETT
GRACE PEYTON	MISS WINIFRED BEECH
SPEED	MISS MARION ASHWORTH
MRS. GARSTAN	MISS AMY RAVENSCROFT
ANNE BROOKDALE	.. MISS MARION TERRY

ACT I. .. .. The Orchard—Hutley Court
September.

ACT II. .. .. .. The Drawing Room—Hutley Court
One week later.

ACT III. .. .. .. Tyethorne Farmhouse, Yorkshire
Three days later.

ACT IV. .. .. The Same
Four months later.

The Scenery painted by W. T. HEMSLEY.
Miss Marion Terry's Dresses by Reville and Rossiter, 15, Hanover Square.
Antique Furniture from the Esmond Gallery, Thackeray Street, Kensington.

General Manager—Mr. EADE MONTEFIORE. Stage Manager—Mr. SLAINE MILLS.

Coronet Theatre
Evenings 8.30
Wednesday Mat. 7
Orch.
No. D 16
This to be Retained
Has not signed.

LYRIC THEATRE

Lessee and Manager ... ... Mr. WILLIAM GREET.

Season under the Direction of Mr. ALEX. HENDERSON.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 10TH, 1910, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

Mr. F. C. WHITNEY

Will present a Comic Opera in Three Acts, entitled

...THE...

CHOCOLATE SOLDIER

With apologies to Mr. BERNARD SHAW for an unauthorised parody on one of his Comedies.

Music by OSCAR STRAUS.

Written by BERNAUER & JACOBSON. English Version by STANISLAUS STANGE.

Characters in the Opera in the order in which they appear :—

Nadina ..	(Daughter of Col. Popoff)	.. Miss CONSTANCE DREVER
Aurelia ..	(Wife of Col. Popoff)	.. Miss AMY AUGARDE
Mascha ..	(Aurelia's Cousin)	.. Miss ELSIE SPAIN
Bumerli ..	(Lieut. in the Servian Army)	.. Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
Massakroff ..	(Sergt. in the Bulgarian Army)	.. Mr. LEMPRIERE PRINGLE
Stephan ..	(Servant to Col. Popoff)	.. Mr. MURRI MONCRIEFF
Mernosk ..	.. .. ..	.. Miss ISOBEL LIDSTER
Jecko ..	.. .. ..	.. Mr. A. HARDING
Laska ..	.. .. ..	.. Miss MORRISON
Marinska ..	.. .. ..	.. Miss MAY CLARKE
Poski ..	.. .. ..	.. Mr. HAROLD DENNIE
Mernitz ..	.. .. ..	.. Mr. W. G. KETRAM
Katinka ..	(Housemaid to Col. Popoff)	.. Miss M. BURNEGE
Alexis Sparidoff	(Major in the Bulgarian Army)	. Mr. ROLAND CUNNINGHAM
Casimir Popoff	(Col. in the Bulgarian Army)	. Mr. TOM A. SHALE

Officers, Soldiers and Flag-bearers in the Bulgarian Army, Townspeople, Peasants, &c.

The Opera produced by Mr. STANISLAUS STANGE.

ACT I. Nadina's Boudoir in the House of Col. Popoff, situated in a small village in the Balkan Pass.

ACT II. .. .. The Courtyard, Gardens and Exterior of Col. Popoff's House

ACT III. .. .. Same as Act II.

The entire Scenery and Costumes specially designed and made by HUGO BARUCH & Co., London, Berlin & New York.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Dances arranged by Mdlle. ROSA. Floral Decorations in Foyer by RUSSELL. Lighting by DIGBY.

usiness Manager Treasurer ... Stage Director ... Stage Manager ... Musical Director General Agents ...	... ... For Mr. F. C. WHITNEY	Mr. FRED J. TURNER ,, J. D. McLAREN , WILLIAM GIFFARD ,, C. A. MAYNARD ,, JACQUES HEUVAL MAPLESON & CO., Ltd.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 14, and EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s ; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 8 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees at 2; Commence at 8.30; Matinees at 2.30.
Box Office (Mr. A Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... (For Mr. Alex. Henderson) ... ... MR. TOM PITT

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberla n. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure it's being in proper working order 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1910.

"CHOCOLATE SOLDIER."

MUSICAL PARODY OF MR. SHAW'S PLAY.

Nadina ..... Miss Constance Drever.
Aurleia ..... Miss Amy Augarde.
Mascha ..... Miss Elsie Spain.
Bnmerli ..... Mr. C. H. Workman.
Massakroff ..... Mr. Lempriere Pringle.
Alexis Sperdoff ..... Mr. Roland Cunningham.
Casimir Popoff ..... Mr. Tom Shale.

The programme of "Tho Chocolate Soldier," presented at the Lyric Theatre on Saturday evening, contained a harmless apology to Mr. Bernard Shaw "for an unauthorised parody of one of his comedies." The story in this musical play is based on Mr. Shaw's "Arms and the Man," and Mr. Shaw's consent had been obtained long before the production in Vienna, more than a year ago.

The musical comedy version has arrived in London from the Continent via New York, with an adaptation prepared in America. Mr. F. C. Whitney, who presents it, is no doubt satisfied that "The Chocolate Soldier" is both a comic opera and a parody—the programme calls it both—but when all is said and done the piece will stand on the music of Mr. Oscar Straus, and not on the feeble attempt at wit and humour now hung on the story of "Arms and the Man." The three adaptors might apologise to Mr. Shaw for witticisms on the absence of garments, thought good enough to repeat again and again. This sort of thing, no doubt, is part of the parody, but whether it comes from Vienna or New York goodness only knows.

The setting of the musical play is not nearly so effective as in the revival of Mr. Shaw's play at the Savoy Theatre about three years ago, and although Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker were content then with an entirely English production, it made a more picturesque display than the German-made scenery and costumes used in Saturday evening's musical version.

If, however, the comic genius of Mr. Bernard Shaw is wholly missing from "The Chocolate Soldier," it can boast of a musical score far more delightful than anything given to the London public for a very long time. Supremely graceful and refined, it never failed to charm. The three acts were knit by the delightful melodies of Mr. Oscar Straus, exquisitely orchestrated—valses that London will want to sing and dance, a "Good-bye" duet in which Miss Constance Drever made one of her several successes, an exquisite number, "My Life is Lonely," in the first act, and a fragment in the third act, a letter-writing episode it might be called.

Mr. Straus has done even much better than in "A Waltz Dream," and, although receiving little help from the libretto and not in every instance from the company that had to sing his music, his delightful work asserted itself in spite of difficulties and charmed everybody. It accounted for the warmth of the reception accorded "The Chocolate Soldier," which, in addition to its melodious score, was the medium on Saturday evening of discovering that Miss Constance Drever is an artiste of the first rank in musical comedy. Her success was one of the features of the evening.

J. W.

The Chocolate Soldier

2ND YEAR OF "THE WHIP."

CELEBRATION OF A DRURY LANE RECORD.

Drury Lane Theatre celebrated the anniversary of its drama "The Whip" last evening with an audience to witness it as enthusiastic as that which was present at the first performance on September 9 last year.

New costumes on the stage and a picture souvenir for the audience gave Messrs. Raleigh and Hamilton's drama a fresh start on its second autumn season, and at the end of the third act, when the principal players had taken their call, Mr. Arthur Collins and Mr. Cecil Raleigh had to appear twice and make their bow.

This autumn drama, the run of which was only interrupted by the pantomime season, has easily beaten all Drury Lane Theatre records. Perhaps this had something to do with the epidemic of stage fright which at the last moment seized on all the professional jockeys who had promised to take part that evening in the race on the stage.

The plays that have been running in London since last year, with the dates of their first performance, are:

Our Miss Gibbs	January 23, 1909.
The Arcadians	April 28, 1909.
The Dollar Princess	September 25, 1909.
The Importance of Being Earnest	November 30, 1909.
The Bad Girl of the Family	December 27, 1909.

THE COLLISION.

THE KENNELS.

"THE MAN FROM MEXICO."

Farce, in Three Acts, by H. A. du Souchet, Performed for the First Time in the West End at the Strand Theatre, on Saturday, Sept. 10.

The Man from Mexico is practically a version of MM. Gondinet and Besson's Voyage d'Agrément, which was presented in English shape at the Criterion Theatre by Sir Charles Wyndham in the March of 1882, under the title of Fourteen Days. London audiences, however, have had a good many years in which to forget all about Fourteen Days, and, judging by the hilarity excited by The Man from Mexico at the Strand Theatre, the fact that the story has been used before is not likely to weigh for a moment with the public against the intensely droll and diverting incidents and smart dialogue of this screamingly funny piece.

The basis of so many farces—a husband's desire to enjoy himself independent of his wife's society, Fitzhugh, a married man, who has been "out on the spree," is recovering from its effects and expecting its consequences. He has visited a certain fast restaurant, and there committed an assault in resisting a raid which has been made on the premises. "With" Mr. Fitzhugh, as they say of barristers in the Courts, is his obliging and resourceful friend, Mr. Roderick Majors, who does his best to pull Benjamin through his troubles. But justice is on the track in the person of a big and bitter detective, Timothy Cook, who pursues Fitzhugh relentlessly. In the end, the unlucky man becomes the prey of his pursuer, and is led off to prison.

How is he to account to his wife for his absence from home during the period of his incarceration? A story of a trip to Mexico is invented, and is duly told to Mrs. Fitzhugh. And now the scene we should call the prison governor—in an American personage; and one of the most eccentric things in the farce is the entrance of a detachment of prisoners stepping to a quaint and haunting air. To complicate matters, the Warden, who is a very susceptible personage, has fallen in love with a lady whom Benjamin recognises, from a portrait, to be Mrs. Fitzhugh. She calls at the gaol with some other ladies with a philanthropic object, and the Warden pays her attentions which Fitzhugh is obliged to witness, but is unable to resent. The officious Roderick Majors has been working hard, but in vain, to straighten out affairs, and, at the end of the act, a rising of the prisoners spoils all his plans.

Having "done his time," Fitzhugh has to present himself to his wife plausibly and effectively. He does so in Mexican attire, and tells an extravagantly absurd story. His struggles with the situation, and his difficulties with the Spanish language, a smattering of which he has acquired from a phrase-book, are as excruciatingly droll as the rest of the piece. As Mrs. Fitzhugh was herself at the restaurant, which she visited in a spirit of curiosity on the night of the raid, she is disposed to be indulgent, and the performance concludes with everyone—including the audience—entirely contented.

The Man from Mexico was preceded by the pretty little Dutch play from the pen of Mr. Stanley Cooke, with music by Arthur Wood, entitled "HIS LIVING IMAGE."

The Figure and Jan .....Mr. Wyn Weaver
Jake .....Mr. Chris Walker
Gretchen .....Miss Amy Francis

The story is simple. The father of a Dutch girl, Gretchen, has constructed a mannequin which he has named the perfect man. In his memoirs he states that owing to his mistrust of the modern man, he has made a perfect husband for his only child. The figure will come to life under the influence of an all-inspiring love. Jake, a fisherman, "chaffs" Gretchen about her mock husband, adding that a certain Jan is dying for love of her. But she will have none of him, believing in the resuscitation of her manequin. Jan then arrives to plead his cause in person, but to no purpose. Then, as a last resource, he decides to smash the figure to atoms, and take its place. Gretchen is considerably startled on seeing the puppet come to life; but she is disillusioned by Jake, who shows her the remains of the broken image. After several pretty songs and dances, all ends happily.

STRAND THEATRE.

Lessee ... ... Mr. JOSEPH WATERFIELD

Under the Management of Mr. STANLEY COOKE.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.45,

THE MAN FROM MEXICO

A Farce in Three Acts

By H. A. DU SOUCHET.

Benjamin Fitzhugh	Mr. STANLEY COOKE	O'Mullins .. (of the New York Police) ..	Mr. ELDRETT GULSON
Roderick Majors (his best friend) ..	Mr. GEORGE GIDDENS	Googan .. .. (a Prison Warder) ..	Mr. ARTHUR G. LEIGH
Timothy Cook .. (a New York Detective) ..	Mr. CECIL A. COLLINS	Louis .. .. (a Waiter from Cleopatra) ..	Mr. TOM TINDALL
Von Bulow Bismarck Schmidtz ..	Mr. HARRY PARKER	Clementina Fitzhugh	Miss OLA HUMPHREY
William Loveall (Warden of Blackwell's Island Goal)	Mr. KINSEY PEILE	Sally Grace .. (her Sister) ..	Miss JEAN HARKNESS
Edward Farrar .. (Attorney) ..	Mr. KING FORDHAM	Nettie Majors (Roderick Majors' Daughter)	Miss FAITH CELLI
Richard Dornton (Architect) ..	Mr. ERIC LEIGHTON	Miranda .. .. (a Maid) ..	Miss GLADYS HARVEY

Act I. - Inner Hall at Benjamin Fitzhugh's House, Gramercy Park, New York (F. L. Schmitz) - - - - ICE WATER
Act II. - Warden Loveall's Office at Blackwell's Island Goal (F. L. Schmitz) - - - - - - - - WARM WATER
Act III. - Same as Act I. - HOT WATER

Incidental Music composed by Theo Ward.

Preceded at 8 o'clock by an Original little Dutch Play, in One Act (with music),

HIS LIVING IMAGE

Written by Stanley Cooke. Music by Arthur Wood.

The Figure and Jan	Mr. WYN WEAVER
Jake .. .. (a Fisherman)	Mr. CHRIS WALKER
Gretchen	Miss AMY FRANCIS

Scene Gretchen's Cottage on the Island of Marken, Holland (Philip Howden)

Business Manager	Mr. Graham Morrison
Stage Manager	Mr. Wyn Weaver
Musical Director	Mr. Theo Ward

MATINEES (both pieces) SATURDAYS AT 2.30.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

THE NEW AUTUMN DRAMA.

Wednesday, September 14th, and every Evening at 8.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

THE ENTIRELY NEW & ORIGINAL PLAY

(for the first time on any stage)—

The Sins of London

By WALTER MELVILLE.

Play produced by the Author. Music composed by H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.
Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, E. C. NICHOLLS, RICHARD DOUGLASS, and Assistants.
Mechanical Effects by A. GEORGE. Electrical Effects by FRANK FIDGE.
Properties by W. MOUNTAIN.

Characters:

Jack Pemberton	Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Samuel Owen (Clerk at Crawford & Co.)	Mr. HARRY CANE
Bobby Blake (Steward S.S. "Alabama")	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Julian Crawford (Financier)	Mr. J. C. AUBREY
Charles Crawford (His Son)	Mr. ERIC MAYNE
Captain Digby (S.S. Alabama") ...	Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Joseph Manter (Stoker)	Mr. GERALD EARLE
Arthur Buckley (Passenger)	Mr. F. MARTIN THORNTON
Mrs. Eliza Parker	Miss POLLY MARSH
Trixie Parker	Miss EVA DARE
Gertie Coleman	Miss AURIOL LEE
Maudie Holton (Limberg's Friend) ..	Miss VASHTI WYNNE
Van Limberg	Mr. E. VASSALL-VAUGHAN
Tina May	Miss EDITH BLANCHARD
Phyllis Travers	Miss DORA WILLIAMS
Rev. Henry Wilson	Mr. F. ELSWORTHY
Inspector Maitland	Mr. GORE LINTON
Bill Hooker	Mr. RICHARD F. SYMONS
and
Millie Anderson	Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.
Scene 1.—The Office of Crawford & Co. (F. Woolfall).
Scene 2.—Saloon of the S.S. "Alabama" (E. C. Nicholls).
Scene 3.—DECK OF THE "ALABAMA" (Richard Douglas).

ACT II.
Scene 1.—Gertie Coleman's Flat (H. K. Browne).
Scene 2.—The Office of Crawford & Co. (E. C. Nicholls).
Scene 3.—THE ISLAND (H. K. Browne).

ACT III.
Scene 1.—TRIXIE'S HOME (Lyceum Studio).
Scene 2.—Sitting Room in Millie's House
Scene 3.—Crawford's Mansion } (Richard Douglas).
Scene 4.—MILLIE'S BEDROOM

ACT IV.
Scene 1.—Trixie's Home.
Scene 2.—A Disused Cellar (Lyceum Studio).
Scene 3.—Crawford's Mansion.
Scene 4.—The Church (E. C. Nicholls).

Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN BROOKE.
The following Selections may be varied with Lyceum Orchestra Repertoire (see list).

1. OVERTURE—"THE SINS OF LONDON" H. Sullivan-Brooke.
2. (a) ALASKAN LOVE SONG ... ... Reeves.
   (b) ORIENTAL SCENE ... ... Lebec.
3. SELECTION—"HADDON HALL" ... ... Sullivan.
4. VALSE—"SONGE D'AUTOMNE" ... ... Joyce.

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... Mr. LESLIE HUGHES
Stage Manager ... ... Mr. S. MAJOR JONES

Box Office (EDWARD HACKETT) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 Gerrard.
Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Dress Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. (Reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1910.

"THE SINS OF LONDON."

MANY VILLAINS IN NEW LYCEUM DRAMA.

Jack Pemberton .....Mr. Frederick Ross.
Samuel Owen (Clerk at Crawford and Co.) Mr. Harry Cane.
Bobby Blake (Steward S.S. Alabama) Mr. Herbert Williams.
Julian Crawford (Financier) .....Mr. J. C. Aubrey.
Charles Crawford (His Son) .....Mr. Eric Mayne.
Trixie Parker .....Miss Eva Dare.
Gertie Coleman .....Miss Auriol Lee.
Van Limberg .....Mr. [illegible] Vassall-Vaughan.
Bill Hooker .....Mr. Richard F. Symons.
Millie Anderson .....Miss Amy Brandon Thomas.

The outstanding feature of Mr. Walter Melville's new drama "The Sins of London," played for the first time at the Lyceum Theatre last evening, was the abnormal proportion of villains it showed compared with just men. The proportion was nearly 45 per cent. It is to be hoped that Mr. Melville in this ultra-modern drama has not gone to real life for his characters, and that "The Sins of London" is not a sign of the times.

The audience was prepared cheerfully to witness any amount of crime, but the real business got very little further than a forgery or two and an attempted murder in a cellar. It is, however, true that Mr. Melville gave us an explosion in an ocean-going steamer and a mutiny. Out of the danger of the seas escaped the senior villain, Julian Crawford, financier, to claim the property of his lovely ward, Millie Anderson, reckoned as drowned in the foundered steamer. London, with its sins, was good enough for this Napoleon of crime until Millie and her brave sweetheart Jack, after a long exile on a tropical island, came home to settle accounts.

The majority of authors at that period of the story would have finished the tale, but Mr. Melville only then began a new series of thrills. The financier had a whole bagful of crimes unexhausted. He spirited away the hero to a noisome cellar, and having drugged Millie sent her away to a church to be married to his son.

But an awful retribution was close at hand, for Jack escaped in the nick of time from the cellar, and just when the clergyman was about to marry "the drug-stricken bride" the brave fellow leaped into the church to take his place beside the girl he loved. How the music crashed out the glad welcome, how the house cheered, how the actors bowed, and bowed again, is now history. Certainly "The Sins of London" has its attractive side.

J. W.

THE

COMEDY THEATRE.

Sole Lessee • Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14th, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

A WOMAN'S WAY

A Comedy in Three Acts,

By THOMPSON BUCHANAN.

Alan Waldron	CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
General Sir Harry Dundas, K.C.B.	EDMUND MAURICE
Clive Hatton	CHARLES BRYANT
Otho Dundas	ERIC MATURIN
Frederick Rowley	ATHOL STEWART
Ralph Blennerhasset .. (of the Press Supply Association) ..	FREDERICK LLOYD
Wilson	FREDERICK VOLPE
Lady Dundas	KATE SERJEANTSON
The Hon. Mrs. Waldron	HELEN ROUS
Norah Dundas	NINA SEVENING
Margaret Rowley	MADGE MURRAY
Mrs. Verney	MARGUERITE LESLIE
A Maid	EVELYN BEAUMONT
Effie Waldron	ALEXANDRA CARLISLE

Act I. Alan Waldron's House in Green Street, Grosvenor Square. Morning
Act II. .. .. The same. Evening, some days later
Act III. .. .. The same. The Drawing Room. Two hours later

The Dresses have been made by Madame HAYWARD, New Bond Street.
The Scenery painted by W. HANN & SON.

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Musical Director—HERBERT E. HAINES.

Overture	... ...	"Si j'etais Roi"	Adams
(a) Valse	... ...	"Asthore"	Haines
(b) Oriental Dance	... ...	... ...
Selection	... ...	"The Girl in the Train"	Fall
March	... ...	"The Children of the Regiment"	Fucik

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, SEPTEMBER 17th, AT 2.30, AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY FOLLOWING.

Business Manager - - (For Charles Frohman) - - JAMES W. MATHEWS
Stage Manager - - - - - - - - CLIFFORD BROOKE

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager - - (For Comedy Theatre) - LEONARD LILLIES

184

CRITERION THEATRE.

Next door to Piccadilly Circus Tube Station. Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.

On MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 19th, 1910, and every evening at 8.50

Will be presented the Comedy in Three Acts:—

THE CASE OF REBELLIOUS SUSAN.

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

183

How should a young married woman deal with a husband who, neglecting her and going his own way, has got into a habit of flirting with other ladies? This is the interesting problem that Mr. Thompson Buchanan has set himself the task of solving in his play produced at the Comedy on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Effie Waldron is the young lady whose married life seems likely to be wrecked by the indefensible conduct of her husband, and who by the ingenious and decidedly bold scheme she successfully carries out may be said to furnish an excellent lesson to neglected wives. Alan Waldron, the grandson of a peer, has but a damaged arm would not matter so much, not alone when the accident happened, his companion being a lady who was not his wife. A Woman's Way was originally produced in America, and has, we understand, been in some respects altered so as to make it more suitable for the English stage. We know that in America a matters that the newspapers devote columns to, being expected to ferret out all the spicy details of the case. And so when the play opens Alan Waldron's house is besieged by newspaper men anxious to get as much as possible about the latest society scandal. But only one of them, Ralph Blennerhasset, of the Press Supply Association, gains admission to the house, and his methods can journalist in search of sensational copy. Alan Waldron is furious at the publicity given to his awkward motor accident, but his wife faces the situation in a way that proves she is a woman of common sense, and in her the inquiring newspaper man meets more than his match. But how is she to win her foolish husband back again to the domestic fold from which he has strayed? She does not make the mistake of ignoring her formidable rival—the "beautiful Mrs. Verney," a widow—but invites her to dinner to meet the members of her own and her husband's family. When Alan discovers that two of the young men guests are in the habit of calling the object of his still more disgusted when he discovers his wife carrying on a flirtation with a former admirer, one Clive Haston, who has, it should be explained, promised to help her in her little scheme. Though she is at first a little doubtful as to its wisdom, her husband's jaunting experiment ultimately proves even more successful than she expected, and Alan again becomes a devoted, loving husband, the "beautiful Mrs. Verney" being free to seek some other victim to her charms. A Woman's Way is a bright, exhilarating little play that provides a merry evening's entertainment.

Sir Richard Kato, K.C.	CHARLES WYNDHAM
Admiral the Hon. Sir Joseph Darby	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
James Harabin	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Fergusson Pybus	Mr. LESLIE HAMER
Lucien Edensor	Mr. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Mr. Jacomb	Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Kirby	... Mr. J. H. IRVINE
Footman	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
Hotel Waiter	Mr. S. BOND
Mrs. Quesnel...	... Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS
Lady Darby	Miss VANE FEATHERSTON
Elaine Shrimpton	... Miss DAISY MARKHAM
and
Lady Susan Harabin	Miss MARY MOORE

ACT I. .. .. Morning Room at Mr. Harabin's In Mayfair

Ten Months Pass.

ACT II. .. Sir Richard Kato's Sitting-Room at the St. Mildred's Hotel Westbay

Fifteen Months Pass.

ACT III. .. .. Sir Richard Kato's House In Harley Street

Preceded at 2.30 and 8.30 by

Miss DOROTHY VARICK,

Character Recitals at the Piano.

Programme of Music.

Fantasia	(a) "Adrienne Lecouvreur"	Cilèa
	(b) "Mizella"
Entr'acte I.	(a) Valse, "To and Fro"	Gounod
	(b) Selection, "Jocelyn"	Cecilia Girardin
	(a) "Malaguena"	Godard
Entr'acte II.	(b) "To the Spring"	Moszkouski
	(c) Norwegian Dance	Grieg

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £6 6s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Telephone No. 3844 Gerrard. Box Office (Mr. Mills) open from 10 till 10.
Doors open at 8. Commence at 8.30.

Miss Moore's Dresses by MAROAINE LACROIX, 19, Boulevard Hausmann, Paris.
Miss Jeffrey's Dresses by Madame HANDLEY SEYMOUR, 47, New Bond St., W. Hats by ZYROT ET CIE, 14, Hanover Sq., W.

Stage Manager	Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
Musical Director	.. Mr. ALICK MACLEAN
Business Manager	..Mr. J. W. LETHBRIDGE

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor ... ... Mr. J. H. LEIGH.
Under the Management of Messrs. J. H. LEIGH and R. T. E. NEEVES.

On Monday, Sept. 19th, and every evening at 8. and Wed. and Sat. Matinee at 2.30.

MR. ERIC HOPE'S COMPANY

IN THE

PIGEON HOUSE,

A COMEDY, WITH MUSIC, IN THREE ACTS.

Written and Composed by the EARL OF YARMOUTH.

From a Story by MOLLIE ELLIOT SEAWELL. Produced by EDWIN BRYAN.

Paul Bouchard (a Lawyer)	Mr. IVAN BERLYN
Victor de Meneval (a Young Captain)	Mr. ERIC HOPE
Major Fallieres (his Friend)	Mr. JOHN T. MacCALLAM
Vicomte de Chantecler	Mr. HADDON CAVE
Dr. Deleasse (an Alienist)	Mr. E. HERBERT
Pierre (Paul's Valet)	Mr. A. J. NICKOLLS
Francois (Head Waiter at "The Pigeon House") ...	Mr. A. WALKER
Jacques (Victor's Servant)	Mr. CORAM SMART
First Gendarme	Mr. ALFRED LEE
Second Gendarme	Mr PERCY WEST
Concierge	... Mr. T. DILLON
Madame Vernet (a Little Widow)	Miss JANE EYRE
Mademoiselle Celeste Bouchard (Paul's Sister)	... Miss AMY FANCHETTE
Aglaia (a Dancer)	Miss VIOLET DENE
Elise (Pierre's Wife)	Miss MARY HAY
Olga ... }	Miss EDITH GREY
Louise ... } Dancers at "The Pigeon House"	Miss ELSIE EYRE
Pepita ... }	Miss F. GARTHORNE
AND
Leontine de Meneval (Victor's Wife)	Miss IRIS HOEY

Ladies—Norah Bennett, Ida Chichester, Elsie Eyre, Edith Grey, F. Garthorne, Mary Hay, Ethel Kenyon, Dorothy Moulton, Lil Leslie, Elsie Miller, Elsie Sanderson, Marion Hargrave and Rosa Irene.
Men—A. Downes, T. Dillon, A. Grahame, Ronald Grahame, George Rodney, George Henri, Coram Smart, Alfred Lee, Percy West and C. S. Austin.

ACT I.	Paul's Flat, Rue Bassano.
ACT II.	"The Pigeon House."
ACT III.	Victor's Rooms.

Lyrics by ERIC HOPE, with additional numbers by HUGH WRIGHT, W. B. PARKER, and A. SULLIVAN.

Business Manager (for Mr. Eric Hope)	... ...	Mr. W. H. WILLATS
Stage Director	... ...	... Mr. EDWIN BRYAN
Stage Manager	... ...	... Mr. A. J. NICHOLLS
Advance Representative	... ...	... Mr. C. A. CORMICK
General Manager (for Mr. J. H. LEIGH)		Mr. JAMES ANNING

In accordance with the requirements of the London County Council

(a) The public may leave at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, and such doors must at that time be open.

(b) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept entirely free from chairs or any other obstructions.

(c) Persons must not be permitted to stand or sit in any of the intersecting gangways; and if standing be permitted in the gangways at the sides and rear of the seating, sufficient space must be left for persons to pass easily to and fro.

(d) The safety curtain must be lowered about the middle of the performance so as to ensure its being in proper working order

LORD YARMOUTH.

ACTOR, MANAGER, AUTHOR, AND COMPOSER.

The Earl of Yarmouth, with an enthusiasm not often displayed by his order in the practical affairs of the theatre, presented at the Court Theatre, London, last evening a musical play written and composed by himself. To add to his responsibilities he was his own manager, and, veiling his identity behind the name of "Eric Hope," assumed the leading male part in the entertainment.

"The Pigeon House," as this new three-act musical piece is called, is a quite harmless affair, of simple incidents, with a surprising number of halts for musical numbers. Much of the music is tuneful, of a very friendly—reminiscent—character, with no attempt at making it illustrate in any way what the author offers in the form of plot.

It would be no easy undertaking to set out this plot, no easy task to guess the business of all who appeared in it, but hero and heroine, Mr. "Eric Hope" and Miss Iris Hoey, seemed quite happy in its meshes, and not one whit less happy was the adventuress, played with a great deal of spirit and ability by Miss Jane Eyre. The entertainment pleased a very friendly audience, anxious to see a nobleman in the position of manager, actor, author, and composer.

J. W.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1911.

LORD YARMOUTH'S DEBTS.

LOANS FROM MONEY-LENDERS AND STAGE LOSSES.

The statutory first meeting of creditors was held at Bankruptcy Buildings yesterday under the receiving order made against the Earl of Yarmouth, described as of an address in Regent-street, W.

MUSICAL COMEDY LOSS.

The loans were obtained, according to the debtor's statement, in the belief that he was still entitled to the reversion under his grandfather's will, he being unaware of the effect of the order of court of June 1900. He added that he had only received in respect of his present liabilities £6,000, and presumed that he had recourse against the parties to certain bills upon which the money was raised. Last year he ran a stage company to play the "Pigeon House," a musical comedy, which involved him in a loss of £800.

The chairman added that no statement of affairs had yet been filed, but the debtor disclosed in the shape of assets some furniture valued at £300 and poultry which had realised £12.

No proposal for the payment of a composition was submitted. A resolution for bankruptcy was passed.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

Lessee .. .. Mr. H. B. Irving.

Under the Management of Mr. J. E. VEDRENNE, 52, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W.

Tuesday Evening, September 20th, 1910, at 8 o'clock

THE MAN FROM THE SEA

A Play in Four Acts by

WILLIAM J. LOCKE.

The Play Produced by Mr. ROBERT LORAINE.

CAST.

Jan Redlander	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
The Dean	Mr. ARTHUR LEWIS
Mark Averill, M.D. ..	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Pontifex Pye	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
The Rev. Canon Blayde..	Mr. GERALD MIRRIELEES
Monks	Mr. JULES SHAW
Burford	Mr. EDWARD Y. RAE
Jack	Mr. FREDERIC WORLOCK
Marion Lee ..	Miss NINA BOUCICAULT
Daphne Averill ..	Miss BERYL FABER
Ruth Clavering ..	Miss GWLADYS GAYNOR
Daisy	Miss MOLLY PRESTON
Maid	Miss OLIVIA ELTONE

The action takes place in Durdleham, a Cathedral Town, in England. The First act in the garden of the Dean's house, the second and fourth acts in the Dean's library, and the third act at the house of Mrs. Lee. Eight days pass between Acts II. and III.

Business Manager .. .. .. Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

"When you are jammed up against a stone wall by ordinary morality," says the "man from the sea," "and you can't jump over the stone wall, you've got to jump over the ordinary morality." The "stone wall" in the case of Daphne Averill is a husband of the most undesirable type, whose iniquities have ultimately earned for him a sentence of four years' imprisonment. To his most unhappy wife salvation has come in the guise of a rising doctor, Mark Averill, whose love and tenderness are as healing balm to her torn and lacerated heart. He takes her away from Sydney, the scene of her wretchedness, and, after a year or two of wandering, they settle down to married life in the primmest and most conventional of cathedral towns, which proves a haven of refuge to poor Daphne. She becomes the idol of the clerical set and the dearest friend of Marion Lee, a woman who is "good" in the accepted meaning of the word, because she has never known temptation, who possesses "that hardest thing in the world, a crystallised conscience."

To the placid, untroubled, sleepy atmosphere of the cathedral close comes a disturbing element, a vitalising breath which blows through the dusty corners, dislodging the cobwebs of tradition, recharging the stale air with the oxygen of youth and progress. Jan Redlander—the very name has the sound of a breeze—the Dean's brother-in-law, after twelve years of wandering on sea and land, comes back to Dardleham ostensibly on a visit to his sister, in reality to carry away his old love Marion Lee to his coral island somewhere in the South Seas. His coming is a tremendous shock to Daphne, who fears for her secret, as Jan knew and befriended her in her days of misery. She makes an appeal to him for silence, which he grants readily and heartily, but by one of the rather too obvious stage devices referred to earlier, their conversation is overheard by Pontifex Pye, a typical product of a cathedral town, who promptly relates it to Marion Lee. Pontifex is terrorised into silence by Jan and a partially-tamed creature, half-monster, half-man, whom he has brought home with him; but Marion's conscience is a more difficult problem to tackle. As a Christian it is her duty to denounce Daphne, even at the sacrifice of her feelings and the promptings of her heart. Daphne's entreaties are useless; the utmost she can gain is a week's respite. The week passes, and Marion's decision is unaltered, and Daphne is driven to the verge of suicide, when the "man from the sea" comes to her rescue. He loves Marion, and to her he has always been the one man in the world; but he tells her he must leave her, they must say "good-bye" for ever, there is an impediment to their union in the shape of a hopelessly insane wife, he must be for ever lonely on his coral island, and Marion must grow old, and withered, and grey alone in Dardleham. But Marion cannot let him go. Her "crystallised conscience" melts in the warmth of her love; the woman in her calls for love and life, and rejects the stagnation of spinsterhood. She throws herself into his arms; he must take her with him at any cost, she cannot live without him. And then there comes to Marion the thought of Daphne, "to know all is to pardon all." She knows, she understands, she can pardon.

The last act, which is excellently written, is occupied with the recovery of Marion's letter of denunciation to the Dean, Daphne's confession to the big-hearted cleric, the arrival of a cable carrying the news of the death of the undesirable husband, and a delightful scene between Marion and Jan when she discovers that his mad wife is a myth invented by him for his own purposes. In a fit of womanly pique she declares she will never forgive him, and refuses to marry him. He laughs, and tells her that they have their own way of treating refractory women in the South Sea Islands, and when she asks for an explanation he picks her up in his arms and carries her off willy-nilly.

DALY'S THEATRE

By command of the Lord Chamberlain, the proscenium safety curtain is lowered daily in the presence of the audience, about the middle of the performance, so as to ensure the arrangements being in proper working order.

SATURDAY, 24th SEPTEMBER, 1910.

First Anniversary Performance.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

PRODUCTION

—THE—

DOLLAR PRINCESS

A Musical Play in Three Acts by

A. M. WILLNER and F. GRÜNBAUM.

Adapted for the English Stage by BASIL HOOD.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS. Music by LEO FALL.

ACT I.—Conder's House, New York ... ... ALFRED TERRAINE.
ACT II.—Garden Court, Conder's House ... ... JOSEPH HARKER.
ACT III.—Freddy's Bungalow, California ... ... ALFRED TERRAINE.

Musical Director ... ... MR IVAN CARYLL

Stage Production by MR. EDWARD ROYCE.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. W ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes, £2 12s. 6d. to £5 5s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle (Bonnets allowed) Front, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Cast of the Play.

FREDDY FAIRFAX		Mr. ROBERT MICHAELIS
Mr. BULGER	(Confidential Clerk to Conder) ...	Mr. W. H. BERRY
DICK	(Cousin to Conder) ...	Mr. CRANSTON NEVILLE
JOHN, EARL OF QUORN	(Groom to Conder) ...	Mr. ALEC FRASER
Sir JAMES McGREGOR	(Footman to Conder)	Mr. WILLIE WARDE
DUKE OF STONEHENGE	(Butler to Conder) ...	Mr. NORMAN GREENE
VICOMTE DE BRESAC	(Chef to Conder) ...	Mr. GARNET WILSON
Sir ANTHONY	(Valet to Conder) ...	Mr. GUY STRUTHERS
	AND
HARRY Q. CONDER	(a multi-Millionaire)	Mr. JOSEPH COYNE

OLGA	(a Lion Queen) ...	Miss ELIZABETH FIRTH
DAISY	(Dick's Sister) ...	Miss GABRIELLE RAY
DULCIE DU CROS ..	(a Californian Girl)	Miss HAZEL DAWN
SADIE VON TROMP ...	(her Friend) ...	Miss GLADYS GUY
Lady AUGUSTA		Miss DORIS STOCKER
Lady DOROTHY		Miss MAY HOBSON
Lady GWENDOLINE		Miss GERTRUDE GLYN
Lady MURIEL		Miss CARINA CLIFFE
	AND
ALICE	(Conder's Sister) ...	Miss LILY ELSIE

193

"D'ARCY OF THE GUARDS."

Comedy, in Four Acts, by Louis Evan Shipman, Produced at the St. James's Theatre on Tuesday, Sept. 27.

EVERY EVENING at 8.30

WILL BE ACTED

D'ARCY OF THE GUARDS

A Comedy, in Four Acts,

By LOUIS EVAN SHIPMAN

Captain and Colonel The Hon. John D'Arcy	of the First Regiment of Foot-Guards, on the Staff of Lieut.-General The Earl Cornwallis	Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Brigadier-General Sir Edward Jennison, K.B.	Commanding the Brigade of Foot-Guards	Mr. STEPHEN T. EWART
Captain and Colonel Dalrymple	(of the First Regiment of Foot-Guards)	Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Captain and Lieut.-Colonel Dacier	Company Commanders of the First Regiment of Foot-Guards	Mr. RUPERT LISTER
Captain and Lieut.-Colonel Kelter		Mr. DAVID DARRELL
Captain and Lieut.-Colonel De Courcy		Mr. JOHN HOOD
Captain and Lieut.-Colonel Pollock		Mr. ROBERT ANDERSON
Captain and Lieut.-Colonel Walsh		Mr. HENRY CLEMENTS
Captain and Lieut.-Colonel Farquhar		Mr. NORMAN GREENE (By arrangement with Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES)
Dr. Gregory	(Surgeon of the First Regiment of Foot-Guards)	Mr. J. H. BARNES
Sergeant Tripp		Mr. GERALD AMES
Captain Millhausen	Hessian Officers	Mr. T. WEGUELIN
Captain Raab		Mr. STUART DENNISON
Captain Henry Townshend	of the Philadelphia Dragoons, on the Staff of General Washington	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE
Samuel Davis	(of the Society of Friends)	Mr. ARTHUR ROYSTON
Sambo	(Servant at the Townshends')	Mr. S. SPENCER
Mrs. Townshend		Mrs. G. KEMMIS
Pamela Townshend	(her Daughter)	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Cynthia Deane	(her Niece)	Miss MARGERY MAUDE

Act I. Garden of the Townshend House, Philadelphia. Afternoon

Act II. ... Sitting-room of the Townshend House ... Morning

Two months have elapsed.

Act III. ... The Same ... ... The same night

Act IV. ... The Same ... ... Morning

Five weeks have elapsed.

The entire action of the play takes place in Philadelphia during its occupation by the British troops, under General the Hon. Sir William Howe, K.B., and Lieut.-General The Earl Cornwallis, in the autumn and winter of 1777-8. General Washington and the American army were encamped twenty miles from Philadelphia at Valley Forge.

NOTE—It was the privilege of officers of the Foot-Guards at this period to hold a superior rank in the Army to their regimental rank, Captains, for instance, being Colonels or Lieut.-Colonels in the Army.

The Scenery and Costumes from designs by Mr. PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.

THE SCENERY PAINTED BY MR. W. RAPHAEL.

196

According to a foot-note on the programme "the entire action of the play takes place in Philadelphia during its occupation by the British troops, under General the Hon. Sir William Howe, K.B., and Lieut.-General the Earl Cornwallis, in the autumn and winter of 1777-8. General Washington and the American Army were encamped twenty miles from Philadelphia at Valley Forge." Captain the Hon. John D'Arcy, an Irishman, of the First Regiment of Foot Guards, on the staff of the Lieut.-General, and Dr. Gregory, surgeon of the regiment, are quartered at the house of Mrs. Townshend, whose son, Harry, is a Captain of the Philadelphia Dragoons on the staff of General Washington. Mrs. Townshend's household consists of herself, her daughter Pamela, and her niece Cynthia Deane, betrothed to Harry. Mrs. Townshend is in feeble health, and the entire management of the house is in the dainty hands of beautiful, high-spirited Pamela, who bitterly resents the necessity which makes two British officers her unwelcome guests.

From their very first meeting, however, her prejudice begins to abate. They arrive at an opportune moment, just in time to save her from insult and a lovable old Quaker, Samuel Davis, from probable death. As for Captain D'Arcy of the Guards, Pamela's beaux yeux bring him into subjection from the outset, and, in the usual way of Irish heroes, on the stage at least, he makes tender love to her from first to last, unabashed by her rebuffs, for Pamela, though attracted to the man, loathes the uniform he wears. But Captain D'Arcy soon has strong claim on her affections. Harry, greatly daring, comes through the enemy's lines in disguise to see his sweetheart. He is traced to his mother's house, and is in grave danger of being hanged as a spy, when the gallant Captain comes to the rescue, and puts Pamela for a second time in his debt by saving her brother's life. And how does Pamela reward him? By a piece of culpable negligence on the part of the British General, she obtains possession of some documents of the highest importance, giving details of a surprise attack on Valley Forge. She determines to prevent the attack coming as a surprise; but her designs are thwarted by the arrival of Captain D'Arcy. At his refusal to allow her to leave the room, she fires at him, and he falls at her feet. Then, and not till then, does the proud Pamela realise her love for D'Arcy. She cannot desert him in his extremity, so she sends an old negro servant off with the news of the attack to Washington's army. She falls weeping by his body, discovers that he still breathes, nurses him back to life, and in five weeks is more hopelessly in love with him than ever, so that when he promises to resign his commission she capitulates, and D'Arcy takes the little rebel into custody for life.

NEW THEATRE

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, W.C.
Proprietor, SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM

Wednesday, September 28th, 1910, at 8.30.

"YOUNG FERNALD."

A Modern Romantic Comedy

By E. G. SUTHERLAND and B. M. DIX.

Carey Fernald	Miss EVELYN MILLARD
Penelope Carruth	Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Enid Lowne	Miss MARY JERROLD
Trippitt	Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
Derrick Lowne	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL
Lionel Lowne	Mr. ROBERT HORTON
Robert Lowne	Mr. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Bennett	Mr. NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Elroyd	Mr. LEVESON LANE
Act 1	Moorfield Lodge, Nr. Allerdale, Yorkshire.
Act 2	The same.
Act 3	The same.
Act 4	The Railway Station, Allerdale Junction.
Time	The Present.

The Play produced by FRANK VERNON.

Scenery by Philip Howden and W. T. Helmsley. Dresses by Gooch's, Ltd., Brompton Road. Coats by Burberry. The Typewriter supplied by the Empire Typewriter Co., and the Weighing Machine by the British Automatic Co., Ltd.

MATINEE WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

ORCHESTRA UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MR. EDMOND RICKETT.

Overture	Lysistrata	Lincke
After Act I.	(a) Humoresque (b) Slavische Tanze. No. 6	Dvorák
After Act II. Walzer	Du und Du	Strauss
After Act III. Japanese Dance		Clayton Thomas

Business Manager	Mr. WALTER MAXWELL
Stage Manager	Mr. FRANK HARDING

"Why haven't I married?" says Derrick Lowne, "perhaps because I didn't want to become a woman-hater." When we coolly consider the women of his own family, we can forgive his lack of gallantry. There is Aunt Penelope Carruth, a bigoted, voluble old maid, and his brother's newly wed wife, Enid, a silly little woman, ready to be aggrieved at a moment's notice, perpetually on the verge of ill-timed tears. Enid and her husband, Lionel Lowne, are on their honeymoon, and finding the romantic cottage in which they had proposed to spend the first few weeks of their married life unbearable, they have come to the isolated old house belonging to Derrick, on the Yorkshire moors, believing it to be unoccupied. On their arrival they are surprised to find that Derrick and his younger brother Robert have taken up their abode at Moorfield Lodge with the purpose of completing the final chapters of a history on which Derrick, who is a writer of some renown, is working. In spite of their mutual distaste for each other's company, the parties decide to make the best of it, but in a very short time Enid's sillinesses have goaded Derrick to exasperation. There is a scene, and Enid, her husband, and Aunt Penelope leave the house, accompanied by Trippitt, the cook, who has quarrelled with the butler.

Derrick congratulates himself that, the women having departed, a reign of peace has begun. He is expecting the arrival of a secretary, one Carey Fernald, also an historian in a small way. The secretary arrives, and, to Derrick's overwhelming disgust, Carey Fernald turns out to be a woman. In his bitter disappointment he tells her brutally that he has no place for a member of the class of woman-workers; he considers them useless, unreliable, and inefficient. Young Fernald retorts that he is unfair and prejudiced, that he doesn't "play the game," and then, undeterred by a violent snowstorm which is raging, she prepares to tramp over the moors, back to the station. No sooner has she gone than Derrick's conscience pricks him, and he and Robert start out in pursuit. But the girl turns the tables on them; it is she who finds Robert with a sprained ankle in a ditch, who helps him home, cooks him an omelette, mothers him, wins over Bennett the butler, and altogether makes herself mistress of the situation. Only from Derrick does she hold aloof, and treats his overtures of friendship with scant courtesy. Finally, he begs for a truce, and the girl, who clearly sees the real worth of the man behind his bear-like roughness, gives him the comradeship he asks. Derrick talks of his ambitions, of a manuscript burnt by foolish Enid in a fit of "tidying up," and finds young Fernald's sympathy sweet. She proposes that they rewrite the work then and there, and they sit down to eight hours' "hard labour."

It is seven o'clock the next morning when the curtain goes up on Act III. Young Fernald is pretty well played out, a fact of which Derrick becomes aware when, after a few minutes' absence from the room, he returns to find her in a dead sleep in front of the fire. "Poor little chap—poor, tired, plucky little girl," he cries. We think that Derrick begins to realise that Young Fernald is a woman after all, and our opinion is confirmed when Enid, Aunt Pen, and Lionel return, prepared to forgive and forget his "brutality," and give poor Carey Fernald a very mauvais quatre d'heure. Their vile insinuations are more than she can stand. "This time," she says, "she will go really, never to return"; although Aunt Pen, finding at the point of Carey's departure that she is the niece of a Lady Somebody, an intimate friend of her own, undergoes a revulsion of feeling, and implores Young Fernald to stay. But her pride has been stung too deeply; she tramps to the railway station, only to be followed by Derrick, who has found the one woman who can make him happy. There is practically no love-making; but "You know it is all right, don't you?" says Derrick; and Young Fernald, from the depths of his overcoat, in which he has muffled her, answers simply "Yes; I know."

197

GARRICK THEATRE

CHARING CROSS ROAD, W.C.

Lessees and Managers ... Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, 26 Langham Street, and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH, Dormy Cottage, Woking.

ON WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th, AT 8, AND EVERY EVENING

WENTWORTH CROKE, MILTON BODE, and EDWARD COMPTON

PRESENT

HALL CAINE'S

LATEST PLAY

THE BISHOP'S SON

Gilchrist Mylrea	(Bishop of Sodor and Man)	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Daniel Mylrea ..	(his Son) ..	Mr. BRANSBY WILLIAMS
Thorkell Mylrea	(Deemster (Judge) of Man)	Mr. ERNEST LEICESTER
Ewan Mylrea ..	(his Son) ..	Mr. HALLIWELL HOBBES
Davy Fayle ..	(Dan's Servant) ..	Mr. SHIEL BARRY
Hommy-beg ..	(Deemster's Servant) ..	Mr. THOMAS BARRY
Father Dalby ..	(Priest) ..	Mr. E. M. COMPTON
Quayle, the Gyke ..	(Coroner) ..	Mr. SYDNEY FRANCIS
Billy Quilleash Phil ..	Fishermen ..	Mr. W. KINGSFORD Mr. ARTHUR DILLON
First Officer ..	.. .. ..	Mr. GEORGE LACEY
Second Officer ..	.. .. ..	Mr. P. W. STEVENS
Kerry ..	(the Bishop's Housekeeper)	Miss ALMA MURRAY
Liza	(Mona's Maid) ..	Miss SHELLEY CALTON
Molly Crennel ..	.. .. ..	Miss ELSIE GWYNNE
Mona Mylrea	(the Deemster's Daughter)	Miss ELAINE INESCORT

Choristers:—Messrs. SINCLAIR, LESTER, BENTHAM and GEORGE.

Act I. ..	Scene 1	The Deemster's House
	Scene 2	Dan's Cabin
Act II. ..	Scene 1	The Deemster's House
	Scene 2	The Tynwald Hill
Act III. ..	Scene 1	The Bishop's House
	Scene 2	Dan's Cabin
Act IV. ..	Scene 1	The Bishop's House
	Scene 2	The Tynwald Hill

The Curtain will be lowered for Two minutes between the Scenes in each Act.

Period—About 1764. Place.—The Isle of Man.

STAGE MANAGER ... ...
MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... } for Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode and Edward Compton { ... Mr. THOMAS BARRY ... Mr. WOLESLEY CHARLES
BUSINESS MANAGER ... Mr. LAWSON LAMBERT

Wightman Mountain & Andrews, Ltd., Printers, 31 & 33, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

In his author's note to the printed copy of The Bishop's Son, Mr. Hall Caine refers to the well-known Princess's play, Ben-my-Chree, produced at that house on May 17, 1888, and generally understood to be a dramatisation of his novel "The Deemster"—admirably revised and arranged for the stage by the late Mr. Wilson Barrett—and states that the second half of the drama departed entirely from the scheme of the story, while the first half had many important differences. Mr. Hall Caine also assures us that The Bishop's Son is in no way a revised version of the novel mentioned, but an entirely new play founded on that novel. We may be sure that the general public will not trouble themselves about these details and explanations, but will judge the Garrick drama entirely on its merits as an entertainment of the stage. It was produced on Wednesday evening amid every encouragement from an interested audience, and there were loud and insistent calls for the author and chief actors at the conclusion.

Dan Myirea, the son of Gilchrist Myirea, is, according to the dictum of his uncle, Thorkell Myirea, the Deemster, a bad lot. The older man is much angered, too, when he learns that in spite of being forbidden the house the prodigal pays secret visits to Mona, the Deemster's daughter. Ewan Myirea, Mona's brother, is enjoined by their father to tell Dan that if he comes prowling about after dark he'll shoot him like a dog, and the audience is prepared for a tragedy when Ewan, who is a young clergyman of twenty-three, talks of threatening Dan. He is roused to fury when misinterpreting a chance phrase of Mona's he puts the worst construction on Dan's secret assignations with her, and going to Dan's hut demands of him an interview alone. Ewan accuses him of dishonouring Mona; the two men fight; and Dan, blind with passion, deals his adversary an unlucky blow that kills him. The fisher pair of Dan propose to take the body out to sea and bury it; but the unhappy homicide will have no concealment of his crime and gives himself up.

In the next act the poor old Bishop urges his guilty son to fly from justice; but Dan will take the punishment of the law. He "will go through with it to the end." The punishment is pronounced on the Tynwald Hill, the ancient law mount of Man, a bare place in the middle of the mountains. It should be explained that the Bishop in the Isle of Man formerly held certain rights of separate judicature, whereby he was entitled to take a felon who was a tenant of his Barony out of the hands of the civil judge, and try and sentence the criminal himself. It is made evident during the rather extraordinary judicial proceedings that the Deemster would pronounce for the death of the unhappy prisoner, who has confessed his guilt; but the venerable Bishop claims jurisdiction, and condemns his son to perpetual banishment from the society of men. "Let no tongue speak to him; let no eye look upon him; let none give him meat. Alone let him live; alone let him die."

At the opening of the third act we learn that the island is stricken with plague, and the people put down the cause of the affliction to the judgment, and appeal to the Bishop to remove it. They are strengthened in their action by the Deemster, who also pleads for the removal of the sentence. The good Bishop, in refusing, tells his people that he has sent to Ireland for a holy man, a Roman Catholic priest, Father Dalby, before whom the sickness will fly. The father is on his way to the island. The vessel in which he comes is wrecked, and he, the sole survivor, severely hurt, knocks at Dan's cabin for shelter and succour. Feeling that his last moments are come, Father Dalby, after pronouncing absolution over Dan, gives him a miraculous powder, before which the sickness will vanish like mist before the sunbeams. The repentant outlaw, blest by the dying priest and wearing his cassock and crucifix, comes out of the loneliness of death to succour and save his people and to live in the joy of doing good. He is instrumental in saving the Deemster's life. At last he is recognised by his father and Mona, and out of the miasma of shame and disgrace enters into the fulness of life and love.

"THE BISHOP'S SON."

MR. HALL CAINE'S NEW VERSION OF AN OLD PLAY.

If a story that carries with it an almost unbroken atmosphere of gloom is to make the theatre popular, then surely Mr. Hall Caine is more than justified in the new version of "The Deemster," presented with the new title of "The Bishop's Son," at the Garrick Theatre last evening.

Four acts, of eight scenes in all, go to the making of a play from which the note of anguish is rarely absent. The family quarrel of the Mylreas, the absurd suspicion of Ewan that his cousin Daniel has wronged his sister, the fight between the two men, and the death of Ewan, gave to the first act some movement. But there the action and chief interest end, to be succeeded by three acts of mournful reference to an event that sent into banishment the unintentional slayer.

Mr. Hall Caine's sense for characterisation saves, to some extent, these succeeding scenes from the tedium that long speeches and repeated references to one incident are calculated unintentionally to foster. His skill for characterisation could not, however, lift from the play the atmosphere of oppression that lay upon this community and made one wonder if it were possible that life could have been so joyless even in the Isle of Man 150 years ago. It was certainly a relief to find at last that justice could find time to come there and, by lifting the ban from the severely punished Daniel, bring happiness to him and the woman who loved him.

Mr. Bransby Williams, with occasional tendencies to be reminiscent of several well-known actors, played with much sincerity the part of the hero, and Miss Elaine Inescort, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Shiel Barry and Mr. Thomas Barry were all good. But not by any means the smallest success of the evening was made by a clever little terrier, who rejoiced in the name of Tim.

J. W.

"INCONSTANT GEORGE."

Comedy, in Three Acts, Adapted by Gladys Unger from the French of Robert de Flers and Armand Caillavet, Produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Saturday, Oct. 1.

PRINCE of WALES THEATRE

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr EDGAR BR CE

Lessee .. .. FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON.

To-night at 8.30,

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S New Production

(By arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN),

Inconstant George,

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,

Adapted from the French of ROBERT DE FLERS & ARMAND CAILLAVET;

By GLADYS UNGER.

Georges Bullin		Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Lucien de Versannes		Mr. C. AUBREY SMITH
Merange		Mr. ERNEST THESIGER
Adolphe		Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
Giraud ... ... (Georges' Valet)		Mr. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Butler ... ... (Lucien's Gardener)		Mr. HENRI LAURENT
Page Boy		Mr. WILLIAM WEST
Odette de Versannes ... ... (From the Casino)		Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Fernande Chantal		Miss VERA MAITLAND
Vivette Lambert		Miss HILDA MOORE
Madame de Lamond ... ... (A Music Hall Singer) ...		Miss GERALDINE BAILLIE
Baroness Stecke		Miss JOAN LANGDALE
Louise		Miss MOLLY O'FARRELL
Micheline ... ... (Vivette's Maid)		Miss DORIS LYTTON
ACT I.		Drawing Room in Lucien de Versannes' Villa.
ACT II.		Bedroom in Georges Bullin's Villa—ten days later.
ACT III.		Sitting Room in Georges Bullin's Villa the next evening.

The action takes place at St. Lunaire, a fashionable Watering Place in Brittany.

The Play Produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Ladies' Dresses and Head-dresses by Messrs. REVILLE & ROSSITER, 15, Hanover Square.
Furniture and Scenic Decorations by Messrs. FRYERS, Ltd., 6 Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.
Artificial Flowers by Messrs. A. & L. CHIMANS, 171 and 173, Farringdon Road, E.C. Wigs by CLARKSON

Preceded at 7.45, by

THE WILES OF THE WIDOW.

By KATHLEEN CRIGHTON LION.

Betsy Pye ... ... (a Widow)		Miss CLARE GREET
Mary Beasley ... ... (Sister to James)		Miss JOY CHATWYN
James Beasley ... ... (Skipper of the "Mary Jane")		Mr. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Daniel John Scatt ... ... (the Village Policeman)		Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
Place		A Small Fishing Village in Yorkshire.

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music:—

1 OVERTURE ... ... "Voices of Spring" ... ... Joh. Strauss
2 SPANISH BALLET ... "Suite" ... ... Desormes
3 (a) Danse du Paraguay ... ... Valverde
(b) Intermezzo ... "Serenade des Mandolines" ... Desormes
(c) Valse ... ... "Sunset" ... ... Brunet
4 (a) Chanson Napolitaine "Ma Blonde Amie" ... ... Valenti
(b) Intermezzo ... "Spoontime" ... ... Von Tilzer
(c) Valse ... "The Chocolate Soldier" ... Oscar Straus

The Mustel Organ and Celesta by MUSTEL & Co, 80, Wigmore Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by Bluthner, 13, Wigmore Street, W.

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... F. W. TARVER

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s 0d to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s 6d Balcony Stalls 7s. 6d Upper Circle First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s
Pit, 2s 6d Gallery 1s Box Office open 11 to 10 Telephone No Gerrard 7455.

General Manager .. ... T. B VAUGHAN

Miss Gladys Unger's adaptation of MM. De Flers and Caillavet's L'Ane de Buridan, which was produced at the Paris Gymnase on Feb. 19, 1909, with Mlle. Marthe Regnier as Micheline, is decidedly amusing and undeniably French, and contains a part very suitable to Mr. Charles Hawtrey. It hinges on the old legend of Buridan, who declares that if a donkey were placed between a couple of haystacks, each of equal attractiveness, it would starve to death from being unable to make up its mind from which to eat. In Inconstant George, the hero, Georges Bullin, suffers from "anæmia of the will," and an inclination to make love to every woman he meets. Nor can he ever feel certain which lady engages his affections the most entirely. It is difficult to discover the reason of Georges's successes; perhaps his idleness and his constant susceptibility may account for them. At any rate, he is popular with the fair sex. He flies from Paris to St. Lunaire to escape from a quadruple intrigue, and soon becomes entangled with three ladies, Odette de Versannes, the wife of his friend, Lucien de Versannes; a lady named Fernande Chantal, and Vivette Lambert, a singer.

The two bunches of hay of Buridan are represented by Odette and Fernande. Bullin, who, it appears, is in the habit of having his supper in his bedroom, tells Vivette that as far as his heart is concerned she is out of the running; on which the enraged singer smashes a vase and goes away. Then Lucien de Versannes arrives, and has a diplomatic discussion with Georges. Lucien has in his possession two love letters written by Bullin to Odette and Fernande. At three o'clock in the morning, Lucien asks Bullin to take his choice between the two bundles of hay. If he wants to marry Fernande, there can be no possible difficulty; if he decides to wed Lucien's wife, the disinterested friend will divorce her so as to afford Georges every facility. But Lucien is the guardian of a young painter of "emancipated" habits, an orphan, and very self-willed and attractive. Her name is Micheline, and she is as determined to marry Bullin as Anne is to wed Tanner in Man and Superman; and Lucien is resolved she shall.

Then we have a scene in which Micheline, like Anne, forces Bullin to make up his mind. She comes into Georges's bedroom by the window in the early morning, on pretence of taking him on a shrimping expedition. Micheline is bold, unconventional, and free from reticence. She soon lets Georges know that she loves him, and that fact she regards as "his best quality." She does not attempt to account for her feelings. As she says, her falling in love with him was "like a cab accident." But Georges has no taste for a maiden without experience, a raw ingénue, and so Micheline invents a story of a love affair which she says she has had, and offers to show him a picture of her lover. The face is familiar to Bullin, but he cannot decide to whom it belongs. In the end, Micheline confesses that there was no lover in her case. "Whose picture is this, then?" asks Bullin. "It's Mr. Bernard Shaw," says Micheline; and the audience roars with laughter. Her originality and audacity conquer. Lucien has attained his end. By giving Bullin his choice between Odette and Fernande he has prevented him from taking either; and in the state of starvation in which his indecision places Georges, Micheline steps in and secures him.

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE

Under the Sole Management of Mr. W. H. C. NATION.

ON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8th, AND FOLLOWING NIGHTS,

Will be presented a New Farce in One Act,

Adapted and Modernized from LE SOLLICITEUR, OÙ L'ART D'OBTENIR LES PLACES,

By EUGÈNE SCRIBE,

Originally produced at the Théâtre des Variétés, Paris, entitled:—

A PLACE HUNTER PURLED

Pertinax Quiller ...	Mr. TOM SEYMOUR
Ernest Fairways ...	Mr. KELSO HENDERSON
Sagely ...	Mr. CHARLES LUDLOW
Mrs. Custance ...	Miss IDA LAURENCE
Mrs. Jobson ...	Miss UNA BRUCKSHAW

Scene—A Ministerial Office in Downing Street.

To be followed by a New Comedy, in Two Acts,

Adapted from MAITRE CORBEAU,

By HIPPOLYTE RAYMOND and MAURICE ORDONNEAU (Author of "La Poupée," &c.), Originally produced at the Théâtre de l'Odéon, Paris, entitled:—

THE
COST OF CRINGING

Ernest Maynard ...	Mr. HENRY AINSWORTH
Sawney Glosedon ... (a Paper Mill Owner) ...	Mr. TOM SEYMOUR
Squire Harkaway ...	Mr. CHARLES LUDLOW
Bluntly ... (Glosedon's Business Manager)	Mr. KELSO HENDERSON
John ... (Glosedon's Servant) ...	Mr. TERRY HURST
Minnie ... } Glosedon's Daughters {	Miss MAY HOLLOM
Evelyn ... } Glosedon's Daughters {	Miss RUBY FORBES
Mrs. Stroker ...	Miss UNA BRUCKSHAW

Scene—Glosedon's House, adjoining a Paper Mill in Kent.

Seats may be booked in advance to all parts (except Pit and Gallery).

POPULAR PRICES.

Stalls, 5s.; Circle, 4s. and 3s.; Upper Circle, 2s.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

DOORS OPEN 7.15. COMMENCE AT 7.45. MATINEES SHORTLY ANNOUNCED.

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER	MR. T. H. FRIEND
MUSICAL DIRECTOR AND CONDUCTOR	MR. NAPOLEON LAMBELET
ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER	MR. TERRY HURST
MACHINIST	MR. A. ARNOTT

To be followed by a Musical and Satirical Play, in Three Scenes, by V. PARK, introducing several New Songs by W. H. C. NATION, entitled:—

The Kingdom of Kennaquhair

Costumes by Messrs. WALLER & SON. Wigs by GUSTAVE. Furniture by Messrs LYONS.

Squire Addlepate ...	...	Mr. TOM SEYMOUR
Sophron ...	(his Steward)	Mr. CHARLES LUDLOW
Ernest Wilmot	...	Mr. KELSO HENDERSON
Flutter ...	(the supposed Lord)	Miss UNA BRUCKSHAW
Bouncer ...	...	Miss MAY HOLLOM
Aminta ...	...(the Squire's Daughter)...	Miss LILIAN BELL
Beatrix ...	...	Miss MABEL TUKE

Domestics and Harvesters by Misses IDA LAURENCE, CLARK, KNUTH, JOHNSTON, SINCLAIR, FORBES, LUNGO, WINIFRED HANES.

That Indomitable and irrepressible fine old "Man of Devon," Mr. William Hamilton Codrington Nation, after his lengthy autumn and winter season during the last four years at Terry's, the Scala, and the Royalty, has bobbed up again serenely at the last-named theatre, which he re-opened on Saturday with a triple bill. This was made up of two of his new adaptations of old French plays and of that rather mild, musical and satirical piece, The Kingdom of Kennaquhair, which Mr. Nation produced at the Royalty, on Boxing Day, 1908. The opening item, entitled A Place Hunter Purled (meaning Foiled, we presume), had been adapted and modernised by the veteran manager from Le Solliciteur ou l'Art d'Obtenir les Places, by Eugène Scribe, originally produced at the Paris Variétés. In this form the piece proved to be a moderately effective exposition of the shifts and disappointments employed and incurred by the professional place hunter. Thus, Pertinax Quiller, after making his way by a stratagem into the presence of the almost inaccessible Prime Minister, Lord Oldacre (Mr. Nation is fond of semi-political themes), and obtaining from the great man the promise of an appointment, finds that he has presented the wrong petition, and that the post is going to Ernest Fairweye, the Minister's unpaid and "very much Under" secretary.

As noted before, by far the best part of the entertainment derived from The Kingdom of Kennaquhair comes, not from the book of V. Park, but from the graceful and melodious songs written and in some cases imitated from the French by Mr. Nation, other composers concerned being William Corri and Mr. Napoleon Lambelet, again Mr. Nation's musical director at the Royalty. Of these, the florid "Song of Fair Women" (Nation and Corri) and "Song of the Bird" (same author and composer) were rendered very brightly and with some skill in execution

Next came a two-act comedy, entitled The Cost of Cringing, adapted by Mr. Nation from that Odéon piece of Hippolyte Raymond and Maurice Ordonneau, Maître Corbeau. Here, again, the adapter has introduced many pointed hits against corrupt practices in high quarters, and has also treated of the harm done by frankness and candour to a man who wants to get on. Attributing to those laudable traits his failure at the Bar and in the Civil Service, Ernest Maynard determines to try the effect of cringing and of laying on "the butter thick," when a shower of rain drives him to take refuge at the house of Sawney Glosedon, a paper mill owner, who dismisses his manager bluntly for speaking his mind too freely. Making himself a persona gratu with Glosedon, and thus obtaining the vacant post, Maynard lays the butter on too thickly in trying to interest Mrs. Stroker, an M.P.'s widow, and the mill owner's younger daughter Evelyn, in his love affairs with the elder sister Minnie, supposed to be engaged to the sporting Squire Harkaway. Hence Maynard angers widow, sister, and father, and temporarily loses both place and love. However, in the end he makes Minnie convinced of the sincerity of his love; Harkaway consoles himself with Evelyn; and Glosedon, again refused by Mrs. Stroker, is told by both his prospective sons-in-law that they do not want to see much of him in the future.

THE LITTLE THEATRE.

(Portrait by JOHN S. SARGENT, R.A.)

GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Exquisite taste is shown in the decoration of Miss Gertrude Kingston's "Little Theatre," in John-street, Adelphi. The lines are of classical simplicity, and the colours soft and restful to the eye. One passes through the "Adams" vestibule into a lovely little foyer, in the middle of which stands a bronze statue of Phryne. Round the walls are delightful specimens of German art. The smoke room is of a subdued lavender shade and Turkey carpeted. The tea room has walls of soft yellow, which form an admirable background for some choice Japanese prints. The auditorium is of Wedgwood blue, with a couple of medallions in white on the walls, while the rich red of the curtain takes away any possible suggestion of chilliness. The attendants are also gowned in Wedgwood dresses, and wear pretty ribbons to match in their hair. The stalls are square in shape and exceedingly comfortable, the back of each being provided with a large square silk bag, in which all "portable luggage" may safely be stowed. Altogether the Little Theatre is a gem.

It opened its doors to the public on Tuesday night with an adaptation of Lysistrata, the famous comedy by Aristophanes, "a political satire in favour of peace," which was played in Athens 412 B.C. The play, in its adapted form, is a proof for, notwithstanding its antiquity, it stands just as much for a political satire of the present day as it did apparently over 2000 years ago, though whether it be in favour of peace to-day is an open question. Certainly it is an argument in favour of the peace desired by the large body of militant suffragettes, for it ends on a decisive note of equal political rights for the sexes, and may certainly be called up to date."

There is very little action in the play and the characterisation is shadowy, but there is much poetic language, and the colour effects of the dresses against the exquisite background of grey marble and sky are extremely beautiful.

The women of Greece have a grievance. Their husbands and their lovers spend their time away fighting, and wives and sweethearts are left at home to await the occasional flying visits of their lords and masters. The women are in a state of rebellion. Their existence is monotonous, but they are powerless to alter it, until there arises a leader in their midst, Lysistrata, a woman strong to rule, a born strategist, with the power of enforcing her commands. She formulates a plan, and calls the women of Greece at dawn of day to a meeting place—a street in Athens with steps leading to the Acropolis—that she may lay a proposition before them. They come more or less reluctantly, sleepy and apathetic; but Lysistrata whips their flagging energies into life with the recital of their wrongs, and then shows them how it is in their hands to end the useless war. When their husbands next return they shall find no loving, obedient wives to comfort and cherish them. The women shall withhold themselves from their husbands, denying them even the solace of their lips until they have their promise that peace shall be restored.

At first the women hesitate; the terms are too hard. But eventually Lysistrata gains her way, and they all take a solemn oath that it shall be as she has willed it. The remainder of the play consists of the ineffectual efforts of the men, who are represented as singularly weak and foolish to reassert their vanished authority, and of a repetition of arguments in favour of the rights of women, such as "We women strive to serve the State as well as men"; "I am a woman yet of sense and brain equal to yours"; "We conquer but to serve"; "Men bear arms, women bear sons and daughters." Ultimately, of course, the women prove the stronger. Peace is declared; and having proved their right and gained their point, the women return to their husband's arms.

"LYSISTRATA."

An Adaptation from the Greek of Aristophanes' Play, Produced at the Little Theatre, on Tuesday, Oct. 11.

Amongst the limited liability companies and syndicates recently registered are the Little Theatre, Limited, with a capital of £10,000 in 97 ordinary shares of £100 each and 300 founders' shares of £1 each, to carry on the business of theatre and music-hall proprietors, etc. The first directors are G. Ashton and Miss Gertrude Kingston; [redacted] company, with a capital of £3,000 in £1 shares, to carry on the business of theatre proprietors and managers, and to acquire from Mr. Wenworth Croke certain rights in Kit Carlton.

Sat. 28/7/10

EVERY EVENING at 8.45, MATINEE SATURDAY at 2.30.

LYSISTRATA

An adaptation from the Greek of Aristophanes.

Lysistrata ...	GERTRUDE KINGSTON
Calonice, Myrrhina (Athenians)	MARGARET WATSON, DOROTHY MINTO
First Athenian Woman ...	GRACE ELBERT
Second ,, ,, ...	MARY MALONE
Third ,, ,, ...	MARIAN MEYNELL
Strattylis	MARGERY DORÉ
Lampito (a Spartan Woman)	MAUD CRESSALL
(By arrangement with Mr. Charles Hawtrey)
Corinthian Woman ...	SUZETTE COTTA
Boetian Woman ...	FRANCES LEIGHTON
First Leader of Women	GWLADYS MORRIS
Second ,, ,,	JEAN BLOOMFIELD
Third ,, ,, ...	JANE SAVILE
Fourth ,, ,,	MILDRED GILBERT
Strymodorus ...	CHARLES DANVERS
Second Leader of Men ...	ARTHUR FAYNE
First ,, ,, ...	A. E. FILMER
Third ,, ,,	A. C. FOTHERINGHAM LYSONS
Commissioner ...	THOMAS SIDNEY
Chorus	ISABELLE MERSON
Cinesias	GUY RATHBONE
Child	CHRISTINE JENSON
Manes	H. W. BENTHAM
Herald	HERBERT STANDING
First Spartan Ambassador	JAMES GELDARD
Second ,, ,, ...	A. R. DIGHT
First Athenian ...	EVERARD VANDERLIP
Second ,, ...	ROBERT HARCOURT
Dancers ...	ANNIE & IRENE SPONG
Peace	ALMA DUDLEY

The characters are placed in the order in which they speak.

Act I. A Street in Athens, with steps leading to the Acropolis (at dawn).
Act II. ... ... The Same (later).

The period of the Play is B.C. 418.

INTERVAL OF TWENTY MINUTES.

Play Produced by CAVENDISH MORTON.

Greek Dance arranged by ANNIE SPONG. Greek Music arranged by BRIGATA BUCALOSSI.

Decorations and Furnishing by WARING & GILLOW.
Foyer, Tea Rooms, and Passage Draperies by BURNET & Co. Wigs by CLARKSON.

This Theatre may be engaged for Afternoon Concerts, or Theatrical Matinees on any days except Wednesdays and Saturdays. All applications should be made to the Booking Agents, ASHTON'S ROYAL AGENCY, 33, Old Bond Street, W.

A Gong will be sounded before the rise of the Curtain.

BUSINESS MANAGER - - - - - - ARTHUR PENLEY.

205

Kingsway Theatre.

Proprietress - Miss LENA ASHWELL.

"COMPANY FOR GEORGE,"

By WARREN BELL.

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF

Miss MAY PALFREY AND Miss LENA ASHWELL.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15TH, AT 8.30.

COMPANY FOR GEORGE

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts

By WARREN BELL.

GEORGE BIRCH (of "Wee Neste," Bishop's Dale)	Mr. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
GAY BIRCH (his wife)	Miss EVA MOORE
WILLIAM CLAYPOLE (of Cambridge University)	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS (By kind permission of Mr. Cyril Maude)
DOCTOR HORNE (Local Practitioner)	Mr. HERBERT BUNSTON
LYDIA NEALE (his half sister, a hospital nurse)	Miss HILDA ANTONY
SEPTIMUS SPRING (a man of many interests)	Mr. HALLIWELL HOBBES
COLONEL SPRING (his brother)	Mr. WINDHAM GUISE
LORD MICHAELMAS (an impoverished landowner)	Mr. GUY CARY
MARY P. COWPIT (a lady explorer)	Mrs. CULLING
FANNY (maid at "Wee Neste")	Miss ESME HUBBARD
AUSTIN (garden boy at "Wee Neste")	Mr. PERCY GODDYEAR
DUNN (footman to Lord Michaelmas)	Mr. FRANK LEACH

Act I.—Morning Room at "Wee Neste." (Morning.)
Act II. Lawn at "Wee Neste." (Afternoon.)
Act III.—Same as Act II. (Next Morning.)

Produced by Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE
(By permission of Mr. Charles Frohman).

Preceded at 8.10 by MISS HELEN MAR.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC

Orchestra under the direction of Mr. ALBERT FOX will play the following Selections:

1. OVERTURE - - - - - - - - - - Lincke
2. ENTR'ACTE - - - "Rendez-vous" - - Meller
3. (a) "SIZILETTA" - - - - - - E. von Blon
   (b) WALTZ - - "Reve de Rosette" - - Grimshon
4. SELECTION - - "Our Miss Gibbs" - - Caryl

Organ by UNITED ORGAN CO.

Miss Eva Moore's and Miss Hilda Antony's dresses by Mdme. KREUTZER. Other costumes by SIMMONS, GARROULD and Mrs. CALEB PORTER.

Costumier, MORRIS ANGEL.

Wigs by FOX: Scenery by HANN and Furniture by LYON.

Floral and Garden Appointments by GAMAGE.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Management.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer at Matinees during and after the performance.

Opera glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

THE BOX OFFICE IS OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.

TELEPHONE 4032 GERRARD (two lines)

Business Manager for Miss Palfrey - - Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM.
Business Manager for Miss Ashwell - - Mr. ARTHUR PENLEY.
Box Office - - - - - Mr. STUART ANDERSON.

Mr. Warren Bell, the new aspirant for honours as a playwright, has the sense of the theatre, and can write excellent dialogue—always to the point and often smart and amusing; but his farcical comedy comes a little too late. It should have been produced in the days when such pieces as The Private Secretary had a vogue at the West-End. Nevertheless, there is plenty of fun in Company for George, and we may expect Mr. Bell to give us one day a comedy written with a nearer approach to the spirit of modernity that rules our West-End audiences. We learn from his dramatic effort that he has no high opinion of Cambridge divinity students. William Claypole, who has been invited to stay at Wee Neste, the country residence of Mr. George and Mrs. Gay Birch, is studying for the Church; but it does not prevent him acting fraudulently, and swindling a motorist out of a five-pound note by alleging that he has killed a favourite dog, whose stuffed form is placed in the way of his car. We admit that such a proceeding may be taken as a practical joke—quite admissible in farcical comedy, and that it creates plenty of laughter; but the author himself, on reflection, seems to have realised the naked shabbiness of the trick, for he makes his protagonist throw away four-fifths of his ill-gotten five-pound note.

Claypole, we may add, too, is a facile, but always a droll, liar. As a guest at Wee Neste he has long outstayed his welcome, and, to get rid of him, his host, George Birch, sends telegrams to various relatives to come and pay long-promised visits. Claypole alters these telegrams, alleging in one case as a cause of postponement that the village is flooded, and in another that the house is burnt down. The host has another stratagem to get rid of his pertinacious guest. His little girl has a slight illness, and though a trained nurse is not necessary, the good doctor readily agrees to recommend his half-sister, Lydia Neale, a hospital nurse. George Birch is jubilant at the idea. Nurse will occupy the spare bedroom and Claypole will have to go; but the trouble only becomes more acute. He has met Lydia before, and desiring to renew a pleasant flirtation, the "undesirable" suggests the erection of a tent on the lawn as a temporary bedroom.

Eventually Claypole is driven out only to occupy the summer-house in the last act, when the catastrophes foreshadowed by him in his telegrams really happen. A flash of lightning has set fire to Wee Neste; Mr. and Mrs. Birch are on the lawn, wearing dressing gowns over their night attire; and the terrific storm has made the river overflow its banks and the village is flooded. Claypole has been undisturbed by the happenings. He has had a good night in the summer-house, and is in the pink of condition. Not so his unhappy hostess, who gladly accepts his offer of the shelter of the summer-house. Finally, Claypole deals very effectively with an old busybody, Septimus Spring, who has brought a charge of fraud against him; and, rejoicing in a windfall that comes through a lottery ticket, the troublesome "guest" takes Lydia to his arms, and vows that he will live in the neighbourhood still, to be "company for George."

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

Every Evening, at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

GRACE,

A Play, in Four Acts,

By W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

Claude Insole	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Rev. Archibald Insole	Mr. LESLIE FABER
Henry Cobbet	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Gann	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Moore	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Grace Insole	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH
Mrs. Insole	LADY TREE
Miss Vernon of Foley	Miss LILLAH McCARTHY [By arrangement with the Scottish Repertory Theatre.]
Miss Hall	Miss MARY BARTON
Edith Lewis	Miss NINA SEVENING
Margaret Gann	Miss GERTRUDE LANG

The action of the Play takes place at Kenyon-Fulton, Claude Insole's place in Somersetshire.

Acts I., II. and IV.	The Drawing Room.
Act III.	The Dining Room.

The Play Produced under the Direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

"GRACE."

Play, in Four Acts, by W. Somerset Maugham, Produced at the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday, Oct. 15.

Mr. Somerset Maugham has written a play which is far above the average in intellectual quality, which abounds in situations which thrill, excite, and enthrall by their cleverly contrived intensity, and in lines which delight by their wit and humour. And, best of all, the serious interest, the humanity, and the pathos of the piece are all cumulative.

"There are three rules that should be followed in this life, my dear," says Helen Vernon to her friend Grace Insole. "Never sin—that's best; but if you do sin, never repent—that's bravest; and if you do repent, never confess—that's wisest."

Mr. Maugham's heroine Grace Insole had sinned deeply, repented bitterly, and she yearned for the comfort of confession. Ten years before the play begins she—a nobody—had married Claude Insole, "of the county," had been bored by her husband's unfailing devotion, by her duties as the wife of a large landowner, and by a truly awful mother-in-law, who was for ever drumming into her ears her husband's importance and her own (Grace's) lack of family. Grace's nerves give way, and she grasps wildly at any prospect of relief from her boredom. This comes in the shape of Henry Cobbett, in whom Grace vainly imagines she has found a kindred spirit; and too late she discovers that an attractive exterior covers nothing but a shallow brain and a selfish mind. Unconsciously at first, she begins to contrast the lover with the husband, and to realise that she has been grasping the shadow of happiness and ignoring the substance. This brings her to repentance, which becomes poignant when she finds that her husband is banishing a gamekeeper from the estate, although the man has been his servant for forty years, because his daughter, Margaret Gann, has slipped from the paths of virtue, and the father refuses to separate himself from his erring daughter. This brings her own sin home to Grace, and she pleads earnestly and passionately with her husband to allow the Ganns to remain. Loving her devotedly, hating to refuse any request she makes, he tells her that he would have set aside the law of the "county" for her sake; but he sets his wife so high that he must deny her what she asks, for he cannot endure that she should come into contact with the unfortunate woman. Grace is horrified at his words. She sees that she can only save the girl from expulsion by confessing her own guilt; but as the words tremble on her lips the gong sounds for dinner, and her husband hurrying away to dress her opportunity passes by.

To save her father from loss of employment and subsequent destitution, Margaret Gann commits suicide. The gamekeeper, maddened by misery and drink, comes to his master's house with the intention of shooting him; but the coolness and pluck of "The Squire" send him away sobered. The scene between them, of which Grace is a witness, increases her admiration and love of her husband, and naturally deepens her unhappiness at having deceived him. She goes for advice to her husband's brother, the Rev. Archibald Insole, who gives her the orthodox teaching of the Church, "Repent, confess, and you shall be forgiven." Eager to rid her heart of its load of misery, Grace gives instructions that a letter disclosing the truth shall be given to her husband immediately on his return to the house, and it has already left her hands when Helen Vernon, a woman who at thirty-five was still unmarried because of her lifelong love for Claude Insole, enters and learns how matters are shaping. Helen, who has known of Grace's guilt for some time, admonishes her. What does it matter, she asks, if Grace be unhappy? Let her suffer that Claude may keep his ideal and his happiness, for without the first the second becomes impossible. Let her suffering expiate her sin, let her life be an atonement. Confession may relieve her heart, but will break her husband's; and Grace, foreseeing the greatness of the sacrifice she is called upon to make, refrains from confession. Her husband enters with the letter unopened. She takes it from him with an excuse and destroys it, the curtain falls on a re-united pair, and one is left to ponder if indeed "ignorance is bliss" and it is really "folly to be wise."

To-night and Every Evening at 9

"THE TOYMAKER OF NUREMBERG"

A New and Original Play, in Three Acts,

By AUSTIN STRONG

THE TOYMAKER	Mr CYRIL MAUDE
THE SERGEANT	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
THE OLD ACTOR	Mr. FRED LEWIS
THE STRANGER	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
THE BOY	Mr. SHIEL BARRY
THE BOY'S FRIEND	Master BOBBIE ANDREWS
THE EMPLOYER	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
THE LAMPLIGHTER	Mr. C. B. KESTON
THE SENTRY	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
THE AUCTIONEER	Mr. PETER BLUNT
THE MOTHER	Miss KATE RORKE
THE GIRL	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
THE COOK	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS

Children, Girls, Soldiers, etc.

The Scene is laid in Nuremberg. Time: The Present.

ACT I., Scene I. Outside the Walled Garden.
Scene II. The Toymaker's.
ACT II. ... Inside the Walled Garden.
ACT III. ... The Toymaker's again.

The Incidental Music and Songs composed by Mr. JOHN ANSELL.
The Song in Act II., sung by Miss MARGERY MAUDE, and "The Toymaker of Nuremberg" Valse, price 1/6 each, can be obtained of the Attendants.

Preceded at 8.30 by a New Play, in One Act, called

"BETWEEN THE SOUP AND THE SAVOURY"

By G. E. JENNINGS.

THE COOK	... ...	(Maria) ...	Miss MARGARET MURRAY (By permission of Herbert Trench, Esq.)
THE PARLOURMAID		(Ada) ...	Miss MAUDE BUCHANAN
THE KITCHENMAID		(Emily) ...	Miss ETHEL ROSS

Scene: The Kitchen. Time: During Dinner.

"THE TOYMAKER OF NUREMBERG" REVIVED.

Oct 19

For a limited number of nights Mr. Cyril Maude revived at the Playhouse on Wednesday evening Austin Strong's delightful play of sentiment and fancy The Toymaker of Nuremberg, produced here on March 15, and since played at a number of matinées. The cast is fortunately practically the same as at the original performance, Mr. Maude repeating his splendid study of the simple-minded, kind old toymaker—the best loved man in Nuremberg—who is so upset when told that there is now no demand for dolls, and he will have to manufacture Teddy Bears or have his salary reduced. Mr. Maude's irresistible creation—a delightful blending of the pathetic and humorous—of the patient, unselfish, romantic old man is certainly one of the most artistic portrayals he has given us, and one that the many admirers of this versatile and accomplished actor should not miss. And there are also the sweetly simple and natural impersonation of the Girl by Miss Margery Maude, who plays admirably throughout, and Mr. Shiel Barry's ardent and poetic portrayal of the Boy, the scenes between the ingenuous young couple being splendidly played. Mr. J. D. Beveridge and Mr. Fred Lewis are also again available for the two old cronies, the Sergeant and the Actor—two fine, mellow, and quietly humorous enactments, particularly effective being the scene when each determines to sacrifice some cherished possession to the pawnbroker to enable the young people to elope. Mr. Daniel McCarthy is now playing the part of the Employer, originally undertaken by Mr. Charles Allan, and gives an excellent portrayal of the prosperous, worldly, but not altogether unkind father of the Girl; and Mr. Ernest Mainwaring does capitally as the Stranger. Master Bobbie Andrews as the Boy's Friend gives an earnest, natural, and very attractive performance; and Mr. E. B. Keston, Mr. John Harwood, and Mr. Peter Blunt as the Lamplighter, Sentry, and Auctioneer all submit clever little studies of character. Miss Kate Rorke now plays the part of the Mother, originally portrayed by Miss Elsie Chester, and, needless to remark, this gifted actress plays it with the necessary tenderness and sincerity—an admirable portrayal throughout; and Miss Emma Chambers repeats her capital impersonation of the authoritative yet kindly Cock. The play had an enthusiastic reception, and there were many curtain-calls, and it should pack the Playhouse till its withdrawal, announced for Saturday evening, Nov. 5. On Wednesday it was preceded by a new play in one act by G. E. Jennings, entitled

"BETWEEN THE SOUP AND THE SAVOURY."

The Cook .....Miss Margaret Murray
The Parlourmaid .....Miss Maude Buchanan
The Kitchenmaid .....Miss Ethel Ross

This play was given a trial performance at the Albert Hall Theatre on May 31 last. As we then said, there is something pathetic in the story of the plain but romantic kitchenmaid who, tired of the taunts of her fellow-servants as to the improbability of her ever having a sweetheart, purloins a couple of her young mistress's love-letters and reads them to the cook as her own, in order to prove that she has a young man. There is a good deal, too, that is funny, chiefly in the remarks of a chic parlourmaid with decided views on the character of master and mistress. The interesting trifle is well written, and owes much of the success to its really excellent representation by Miss Margaret Murray as the kind-hearted cook Maria; Miss Maud Buchanan as the pert parlourmaid Ada, and Miss Ethel Ross as the romantic kitchen drudge Emily—a clever and unexaggerated portrayal of a difficult part. The little piece had a decidedly cordial reception.

NEW THEATRE

ST. MARTIN'S LANE, W.C.
Proprietor, SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.

Thursday, October 20th, 1910, and every evening at 8.15,

A new Romantic Play in Four Acts, entitled:

COUNT HANNIBAL

By STANLEY WEYMAN.

Adapted from his popular Novel by Norreys Connell and Oscar Asche.

CATHOLICS.

Charles IX.	HERBERT GRIMWOOD
Monsieur de Guise	EWAN BROOK
Count Hannibal de Tavannes	OSCAR ASCHE
Rambouillet (Captain of the King's Bodyguard)	GEORGE RELPH
Father Pezelay	CALEB PORTER
Chicot	ERNEST HENSHAW
Nancay (Captain of the Swiss Guard)	G. FITZGERALD
A Page	A. GALE
The Provost of Paris	F. ANNERLEY
A Cripple	GORDON HARKER
Jacques (A Starving Man)	R. F. ANSON
Badelon, Bigot (Count Hannibal's Troopers)	ATHOL FORDE, J. FRITZ RUSSELL
The Landlord at Angers	E. GILBURT
The Provost of Angers	ARTHUR TRANTOM
The Archdeacon of Angers	A. L. BURKE
Madame St. Lo	ELFRIDA CLEMENT

HUGUENOTS.

Rochefoucauld	REGINALD IAN PENNY
Tignonville	BEN WEBSTER
La Tribe (Protestant Minister)	CHARLES A. DORAN
Perrot	TRIPP EDGAR
Carlat (Steward to the Lady of Vrillac)	FRANCIS SERLE
Clotilde (The Lady of Vrillac)	LILY BRAYTON
Javette, Madame Carlat (Servants to the Lady of Vrillac)	MURIEL HUTCHINSON, BESSIE MAJOR

Courtiers, Swiss Guards, Troopers, Citizens of Paris, Citizens of Angers, Catholics, Huguenots, etc.

ACT I., Scene 1	An Ante-Room in the Louvre, Paris	ACT III., Scene 1	The Riverside. On the Road to Angers
Scene 2	The House next the Golden Maid, Paris	Scene 2	A Glade by the Roadside
Scene 3	The Hotel of the Lady of Vrillac, Paris	Scene 3	The King's Inn, "La Flèche"
ACT II., Scene 1	Clotilde's Room, Paris	ACT IV., Scene 1	An Inn at Angers
Scene 2	The Hotel of the Lady of Vrillac, Paris	Scene 2	The Castle at Vrillac

The Play produced by OSCAR ASCHE.

Overture, Preludes, and Incidental Music for "Count Hannibal" specially composed by Christopher Wilson.

Costumes designed by Percy Anderson, executed by Messrs. B. J. Simmons. Scenery designed and painted by Joseph Harker.
Fight in Act ii. arranged by Felix Bertrand. Wigs by Clarkson.

MATINÉES WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

General Manager		Assistant Stage Manager	CARL F. LEYEL
Business Manager	A. S. PIGOTT
Stage Manager	J. FRITZ RUSSELL	Chief Mechanician	JOHN FLANAGAN
Musical Director			Mr. M. J. COVERDALE
			CHRISTOPHER WILSON.

The drama follows the book pretty closely. We find Clotilde and Tignonville, both of whom are Huguenots, at the Court of Charles IX., in Paris, where Count Hannibal de Tavannes, a Catholic, and Captain of the King's bodyguard, sees and falls in love with her. Then the struggle between the Count and Tignonville commences. The massacre of St. Bartholomew is going on, and the fiancé of the Lady of Vrillac, in order to save his life, puts on a Catholic badge, and goes to the hotel where Clotilde is staying. But here he meets Count Hannibal, who is willing to save the lady and her household if she will promise to become his wife. Clotilde, in this desperate strait, agrees to the proposal on condition that she shall be married by a minister of her own faith.

Tignonville is not only over-mastered by the strength of Count Hannibal's position, and by the extreme difficulty of the situation; he frequently diminishes our sympathy by conduct which is almost dishonourable. But each of his attempts to induce Clotilde to break her word are foiled by Tavannes, who makes Tignonville promise to procure a Protestant minister to perform the marriage ceremony, which eventually takes place. But the Count is not the kind of man to enjoy forced submission in a wife. He is determined, in the end, to win Clotilde's affection, and the incidents which follow work towards that conclusion.

Religion and politics often cross the track of the plot during the progress of the play. The Count, with his newly-wedded wife, and his men at arms, starts on a ride to Angers, bearing with him letters from the King. The Huguenot sympathies of Clotilde are touched when she discovers that these letters are the death-warrant of the people of her faith in Angers, who will be massacred like their friends in Paris. So she steals the papers from Count Hannibal while he sleeps; but she will not consent to the assassination of the Count by Tignonville. In all this manœuvring, Clotilde's sympathy is gradually veering round to Tavannes. By her purloining the letters, she puts the Count in the position of having to fly from the wrath of the Catholic party in Angers, and brings other trouble upon him, for which she naturally feels remorseful. Tignonville misleads the party, so that they fall into an ambush, and finally, with their dead and wounded, take refuge in Clotide's castle of Vrillac. By this time, she has had time to appreciate the noble nature which the Count has concealed under an assumed harshness and brutality, and has come to love him deeply. So that the play concludes with their forced marriage becoming, on her side, a most willing tie to her conquerer. The incidents with which the plot is embellished are many, and thrilling; the movement is constant and active; there are combats, a duel, a secret passage, and other adjuncts of the romantic drama; but, withal, Count Hannibal is no mere theatrical machine. It has the clash of character and the opposition of interests which are the essence of all real drama.

LILY BRAYTON
AS CLOTILDE

QUEEN'S THEATRE

Lessee .. .. Mr. H. B Irving.

Under the Management of Mr. J. E. VEDRENNE, 52, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 21st, 1910, at 8 o'clock.

THE CONVICT ON THE HEARTH

A One-Act Play of Low Life, by FREDERICK FENN.

George Midden ..	(Convict 96) ..	.. Mr. ARTHUR CHESNEY
Thomas Midden	(his Father) ..	.. Mr. RICHARD HAIGH
Mrs. Midden	(his Mother) ..	Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Jenny Midden	(his Sister) ..	.. Miss ESTELLE WINWOOD
Percy Kitchener Midden ..	(his Brother) ..	.. Mr. ROBERT LAWLOR
Joseph Peterson	(his Uncle) ..	Mr. GERALD MIRRIELEES
Amy Watersmith ..	.. (his Betrothed) ..	.. Miss MOLLY PRESTON
Jim Watersmith ..	.. (his Sister's Betrothed) ..	.. Mr. WALTER KINGSFORD
Miss Harcourt ..	.. (his District Visitor) ..	.. Miss EVELYN WEEDEN
Rev. Cartwright Dade	.. (his Spiritual Adviser) ..	.. Mr. HUBERT HARBEN

A Room in Corporation Buildings, Kennington Butts.

At 9 o'clock.

MRS. SKEFFINGTON

An Episode in Cavalry Barracks, by
COSMO HAMILTON.

General Sir Gresham Thurlow ..	.. ..	.. Mr. ARTHUR LEWIS
Colonel Ranulph Thynne ..	(23rd Dragoons) ..	Mr. A. HOLMES-GORE
Major John Skeffington ..	do. ..	Mr. DAWSON MILWARD
Captain Cecil Lindsay ..	do. ..	Mr. FREDERIC WORLOCK
Ivo Ward	do. ..	Mr. CHARLES VERNON
Noel Dacre	do. ..	Mr. H. ROBERT AVERELL
Hugh Pellew	do. ..	.. Mr. MAX LEEDS
Willoughby Pellew ..	(Mag. Coll., Oxon.) ..	Mr. ARTHUR G. ONSLOW
Trooper Beales	(23rd Dragoons) ..	Mr. ARTHUR CHESNEY
Trooper Howe	do. ..	Mr. RICHARD HAIGH
Trooper Saffrey	do. ..	Mr. W. D. FAZAN
Lady Thurlow	.. .. ..	Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Mrs. Thynne	.. .. ..	Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
Effie Thynne	.. .. ..	Miss GWLADYS GAYNOR
Hobson	.. .. ..	Miss ESTELLE WINWOOD
Kathleen Lindsay ..	.. .. ..	Miss BERYL FABER

Act I. .. .. .. The Drawing Room at the Colonel's Quarters
Act II. .. .. The Ante-Room (following afternoon)
Act III. .. .. .. The Drawing Room (a few minutes later)

Mrs. Skeffington, the heroine of Mr. Cosmo Hamilton's "episode," produced at the Queen's Theatre on Friday last week, has a happy knack of insinuating herself into the affections of everyone with whom she came into contact: she charms, she amuses, she promotes good temper all round. Mrs. Skeffington is a very delightful play, possessing all the attributes which ensure a pleasant and amusing evening. An interesting plot, brilliant dialogue, excellent mounting, and first-class acting combine to create an agreeable impression.

Mrs. Thynne is the flighty little wife of Colonel Ranulph Thynne, commanding officer of the 23rd Dragoons, who is of a very jealous disposition. Disapproving of the friendship between his wife and Major John Skeffington, an officer in his regiment, the Colonel forbids her either to correspond with or to be seen about alone with the Major, a command which Mrs. Thynne ignores. Major Skeffington, unaware of the Colonel's prohibition, invites Mrs. Thynne to visit his racing stables, and together they motor up from London, where Mrs. Thynne has been on a visit. On their way back to the barracks, rather late in the evening, the car unfortunately breaks down at a tiny hamlet, and they are forced to spend the night at the village inn there.

On the impulse of the moment Mrs. Thynne, anxious to avoid scandal, passes herself off to the landlady as Mrs. Skeffington, and on her return home next day tells her husband that she has spent the night with some friends in town. Her husband's suspicions being aroused, he soon discovers that her story is false; and, having proof that she has lied to him, he allows his jealousy to master him, and his wife, to her horror, learns that a detective is to be employed to track her movements on the eventful night. Mrs. Thynne, in imagination, sees herself already in the Divorce Court, and is at the point of complete collapse when help comes from an unexpected quarter. Kathleen Lindsay, sister of Captain Cecil Lindsay, of the 23rd, comes on a flying visit to her brother, whom she has not seen for many years, and, on hearing the facts of the case, has an inspiration. She will pass herself off to the Colonel as Mrs. Skeffington, the mysterious lady of the inn, about whom gossip is already wagging its tongue. This she does chiefly that the career of John Skeffington, with whom she has been in love since the days of her childhood, shall not be ruined; and her plan is at first a complete success. When complications arise she manages to avert catastrophe with so much tact and skill and charm that the heart of the Major is captured, and Kathleen promises to become Mrs. Skeffington in reality.

CRITERION THEATRE.

On THURSDAY, OCTOBER 27th, 1910, and every evening

THE LIARS

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

Colonel Sir Christopher Deering... ...	...	CHARLES WYNDHAM
Edward Falkner		Mr. THALBERG CORBETT
Gilbert Nepean	...(Lady Jessica's Husband) ...	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
George Nepean	... (Gilbert's Brother) ...	Mr. BERTRAM STEER
Freddie Tatton	(Lady Rosamund's Husband)	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Archibald Coke	... (Dolly's Husband) ...	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
Waiter at "The Star and Garter" ...		... Mr. HERBERT DANSEY
Taplin	(Sir Christopher's Servant)	Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Gadsby ...	(Footman at Freddie Tatton's)	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
Footman at Cadogan Gardens		... Mr. RICHARD NEVILLE
Mrs. Crespin		...Miss NORMA WHALLEY
Beatrice Ebernoe		...Miss DOROTHY THOMAS
Dolly Coke	... (Cousin to Lady Jessica)	...Miss LETTICE FAIRFAX
Ferris	...(Lady Jessica's Maid) ...	Miss FRANCES VINE
Lady Rosamund Tatton AND Lady Jessica Nepean	... (Sisters)	Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS Miss MARY MOORE

"BEHIND THE VEIL."

A Modern Legend, in Three Acts, by Cecil Raleigh, Produced at the Coronet Theatre on Tuesday, Nov. 1.

Prince Maurice Le Noir.....Mr. Philip Desborough
Lady Margaret Courtenay.....Miss Mildred Cottell
Margaret Courtenay.....Miss Viva Birkett
Madge Guthrie.....Miss Ruth Bower
Blanche Giberne.....Miss Gladys Mason
Nelly Anson.....Miss Beatrice Ainley
Sister Marie.....Miss Winifred Beech
Sister Therese.....Miss Muriel Dole
Sister Adela.....Miss Mary Miers
Marthe.....Miss Constance Bachner
Joan.....Miss Aline Earl
Leonie.....Miss Florence Jackson
Lulu.....Miss Marion Ashworth
Victor Descloux.....Mr. John Tresahar
Doctor Anceloe.....Mr. William Lugg
Doctor Besnnier.....Mr. Owen Roughwood
Baptiste.....Mr. J. H. Brewer
Achille.....Mr. Charles E. Dering
Durant.....Mr. Derlincourt Odlum
Cavarral.....Mr. William Rokeby
Laurent.....Mr. Arthur Cleave
Etienne.....Mr. Frank Saker
Gauthier.....Mr. Arthur E. Maskell
Fabien.....Mr. Ernest Cresfan
Stephanie.....Miss Dora Thornbaugh
Celeste.....Miss Muriel Mason
Clarice.....Miss Dorothea Moss
Amelie.....Miss Margaret Munro
Josephine.....Miss Nina Hiast
Suzanne.....Miss Adela Mavie
Felice.....Miss Phyllis Wallis
Julie.....Miss Hilda Moss
Mathilde.....Miss Kathleen Russell
Laure.....Miss Ida Southern
Jacqueline.....Miss Doris Marshall
Gabrielle.....Miss Gladys Mason
Rosaline.....Miss Peggy Gay
Valerie.....Miss Audrey Bruce
Angelique.....Miss Ada Lauderdale
Helene.....Miss Minnie Lancaster
Pauline.....Miss Amy Holland
Nanette.....Miss Alice Clifton

It is difficult, after seeing Mr. Cecil Raleigh's play, Behind the Veil, which was presented by Mr. Robert Arthur at the Coronet Theatre on Tuesday, to decide whether the dramatist has done his work in a spirit of contemptuous cynicism with a view to crude provincial consumption, or whether he was really inspired with the idea which it contains, and elaborated it in all sincerity. In his previous work, Mr. Raleigh has shown himself as the practical dramatist par excellence, free from illusions, absolutely sane, and powerfully realistic. In Behind the Veil he launches on the sea of the mystic and supernatural, and the result is a piece which it is not easy to analyse, and somewhat difficult to describe.

According to the author's own account of his work, the hero, Prince Maurice Le Noir, "in his wanderings from the faith, seeks in the nightmares of science the light of truth, listening one day to an Eastern fairy tale, the next to some dream of apes and atoms, now with the chemist, now with the hypnotist, now with the charlatan, driven terrified from craze to craze, from doubt to doubt." Such a character—especially when, as in this instance, he is addicted to morphia—is obviously like Voltaire's Habakkuk, capable de tout, and accordingly the Prince believes himself to possess peculiar powers. He imagines that he is able to restore to his cousin, an elderly lady, the Mother Superior of a convent near Paris, her departed youth and beauty. Margaret, a young and pretty girl, also his cousin, has been trying on a new dress, which the girls of the convent school have been making for the Mother Superior, and when Margaret appears, radiant and attractive, and throws off the costume, the Prince believes that he has transformed the old woman into the young one. He falls in love with the latter, and she, returning his affection, resolves to save his soul.

The Prince has been forced to accept a challenge to fight a duel, in consequence of a chivalrous act on his part in protecting a lady—who, unknown to him, was his cousin Margaret, who had visited a bal masqué in a spirit of frolic—from the insults of one of the masquers. He is wounded, and is brought in almost insensible, and in this condition he sees the Mother Superior, and is horrified, imagining that his supernatural power was a dream. The Prince gets over the effects of his wound; but an eminent specialist states that his brain is affected, and that the only chance of his cure is for Margaret to throw herself into the life of his former associates. So she joins a party of his Parisian friends, and theatens to take part in their orgies. The Prince is horrified at the contrast of her purity with so much vice. Margaret then announces her intention of returning to the convent, to which the Prince follows her; but there he comes face to face with the Mother Superior, and endeavours by the exercise of his supposed supernatural power to change her form to that of his younger cousin. Of course, he fails, and the shock restores to him his reason. Thus all ends well, and at the end of the play the Prince and Margaret are seen kneeling at the steps which lead to the convent chapel, while the organ peals out and the nuns' voices are heard chanting hymns.

KINGSW
GT. (
MISS MAY PALFRE
Saturday
Matinee
Nov. 5
Stall
G 18
This to be retained

Every Evening at 9 and Saturday, Matinee at 3.

COMPANY FOR GEORGE

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts

By Warren Bell.

Preceded Every Evening at 8.30 and Saturday, Matinee, at 2.30 by

"THE OUTCOME OF AGITATION"

Play in One Act by James A. Douglas.

Alec. Stern ... ... Herbert Bunston
Harcourt Stern ... ... (his Brother) ... Guy Cary
Hickman ... ... (a man in possession) Windham Guise
Elsie Stern ... ... (Alec's Wife) ... Miss Cicely Charlton

ROYAL ADELPHI THEATRE.

STRAND, W.C.

Proprietors ... ... Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

Sole Lessee : Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.

Manager (for Mr. George Edwardes): Mr. J. A. E. MALONE.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 5th, at 8.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

PRODUCTION

THE QUAKER GIRL

A Musical Play in Three Acts, by

JAMES T. TANNER.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS and PERCY GREENBANK.

Music by LIONEL MONCKTON.

Stage Production by J. A. E. MALONE.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. CARL KIEFERT

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2 O'CLOCK.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £5 5s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Baleony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Cirele, First Two Rows, 5s. ; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Gallery, 1s. Telephones—2645 Gerrard, 8886 Gerrard.
BOX OFFICE (Mr. A. P. OXLEY) open 10 to 10.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

. . . Cast of the Play. . . .

Captain Charteris	(King's Messenger)	Mr. C. HAYDEN COFFIN
Jeremiah	(a Quaker)	Mr. JAMES BLAKELEY
Monsieur Duhamel	(Minister of State)	Mr. HERBERT ROSS
Prince Carlo	(Affianced to Princess Mathilde)	Mr. G. CARVEY
Monsieur Larose	(Chief of Police, Paris)	Mr. D. J. WILLIAMS
William	(Waiter at "The Chequers")	Mr. E. H. WYNNE
Nathaniel Pym	(a Quaker)	Mr. HENRY KITTS
Jarge	(a Village Crier)	Mr. GEORGE BELLAMY
	AND
Tony Chute	(Naval Attaché at American Embassy, Paris)	Mr. JOSEPH COYNE

Phœbe	(Maid to Princess Mathilde)	Miss GRACIE LEIGH
Princess Mathilde	(an Exiled Bonapartist Princess)	Miss ELSIE SPAIN
Diane	(a Parisian Actress)	Miss PHYLLYS LE GRAND
Madame Blum	(of the Maison Blum, Paris)	Mlle. CAUMONT
Mrs. Lukin	(Landlady of "The Chequers")	Miss LUNA LOVE
Rachel Pym	(a Quakeress)	Miss JENNIE RICHARDS
Toinette	Employees of Maison Blum	Mlle. GINA PALERME
Gaby		Miss IRENE WARREN
Cleo		Miss KITTY MELROSE
Liane		Miss MABEL DUNCAN
Louise		Miss MARIE WEST
	AND
Prudence	(a Quaker Girl)	Miss GERTIE MILLAR

ACT I. ... ... An English Country Village
ACT II. ... ... Madame Blum's Dressmaking Saloon, Paris
ACT III. ... ... The Pre-Catalan—Outside Paris

Acting Manager ... (for Mr. George Edwardes)... Mr. CHARLTON MANN

Dresses by Mesdames ALEXANDRA ; NETTLESHIP & Co. : LUCILE, LTD. ; and PAQUIN.
Messrs. BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS ; B. J. SIMMONS & Co. ; and MORRIS ANOEL & SONS.
Hats by Mrs. ANSELL, 175 New Bond Street ; and CORAL, 55 Sackville Street.

Dresses designed by Mr. PERCY ANDERSON.

Dances and Chorus Business arranged by WILLIE WARDE.

When such an experienced craftsman as Mr. James T. Tanner prepares the book which is to be set before the patrons of a musical play, the result is sure to be appetising; and when his outline is embellished by the contributions of Messrs. Adrian Ross and Percy Greenbank as lyricists, and by the melodious charms of Mr. Lionel Monckton's music, the success of the production can easily be prophesied. Mr. Tanner is too old a hand to waste much pains upon a complicated story. His theme is slight and simple. In old comedy, the Quakers were coarsely misunderstood, and treated with almost brutal ridicule. Their formalism was reckoned downright hypocrisy, and they were derided and reprobated severely. Nowadays, we do not go beyond gently objecting to their opposition to amusement. As the strict Quakers do not go to the theatres, and as the people who go to the theatre know nothing whatever about the modern Quakers, a playwright's hand is left pretty free, and Mr. Tanner has given full play to his fancy in the creation of his heroine. Prudence Pym, a pretty young Quakeress, who is bored and wearied with the restraints laid upon her by her parents and her sect, has quarrelled with them, and wishes to experience all the frivolous delights of freedom. While in this disposition she meets Mme. Blum, of the Maison Blum, Paris, who takes a fancy to Prudence, thinks she sees her way to starting a new Quaker costume craze, and asks the girl to come with her to la ville lumière. So Prudence, in the second act of the piece, appears as a mannequin or show-girl at the Blum establishment. Another lady who masquerades in the same way is the Princess Mathilde, an exiled Bonapartist, who, having married Captain Charteris, a King's Messenger, in the first act, is spending her honeymoon in Paris, and is wanted by the Parisian police, and who conceals her identity in the Blum establishment. Monsieur Larose, the Chief of Police, in his search after Mathilde, assumes various disguises. Others mixed up in the plot are Tony Chute, a dashing young American, who is in love with Prudence, and Jeremiah, a Quaker on the mother's side only, who is enamoured of Phœbe, the Princess's lively maid.

In the second act, Prudence, to save the Princess from being identified by the rather dissolute Prince Carlo, who is asked to assist the Chief of Police, consents to go to a ball which the Prince is giving, though much against her will, as she has previously given her promise to Tony Chute not to go. In the end, after many amusing incidents and adventures, the principal characters pair off properly, and the easy-going entertainment ends.

"QUAKER GIRLS" IN PARIS.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES AND THEIR FRENCH ADMIRERS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday.

Paris has been taken by storm by the galaxy of English beauty appearing in the Adelphi Theatre production of "The Quaker Girl," which has been drawing record houses to the Chatelet Theatre this week for a special Coronation season.

Frenchmen are dazzled by the freshness and the prettiness which, it must be admitted, splendidly maintain the reputation of English musical comedy in that direction. The newspapers indulge in pæans of praise at the stateliness, the grace, and delicate features of the "Quaker Girl" chorus. One critic refers to the "fantastic loveliness" of one actress.

The fame of the beauty and the charm of the "Quaker Girl" chorus had preceded the company to Paris, and on the night of the dress rehearsal the stage, during the entr'actes, was invaded by a host of admirers desirous of paying their homage. Mr. George Edwardes "put his foot down" and insisted on the London custom of keeping the stage sacrosanct. Guardians are posted at the stage door, and the gilded youth of Paris can only catch a glimpse of the Quaker Girls as they enter or leave the theatre.

GRANDE SAISON DE PARIS

THÉATRE DU CHATELET

DIRECTION : G. ASTRUC et Cie.

DU 10 AU 30 JUIN 1911

A l'occasion des Fêtes du Couronnement

DE S. M. LE ROI D'ANGLETERRE

DIX REPRÉSENTATIONS EXTRAORDINAIRES DE

"MUSICAL COMEDY"

Présentée par

M. GEORGE EDWARDES

Directeur Général du Daly's, du Gaiety et de l'Adelphi Theatre de Londres

THE QUAKER GIRL

Comédie musicale à grand spectacle, en 3 actes

de JAMES T. TANNER

Poésies de ADRIAN ROSS et PERCY GREENBANK

Musique de LIONEL MONCKTON

Mise en scène de J. A. E. MALONE

Orchestre de 60 musiciens.

Chœurs, Corps de ballet et Figuration de l'Adelphi Theatre

(150 personnes)

AVEC

TOUTES LES ÉTOILES DE LA TROUPE

TABLEAU DE LA TROUPE

G. CARVEY
GEORGE GREGORY
ROBERT NAINBY
BASIL FORSTER
G. WILLIAMS
W. LUGG
and
JOSEPH COYNE

MDLLE. CAUMONT clara Evelyn
MABEL SEALBY
PHYLLIS LE GRAND
IRENE VERONA
CLAIRE LYNCH
and
PHYLLIS DARE

ACT I. - - Un Village en Angleterre

ACT II. - - Les Salons de Couture de Madame Alice Blum à Paris

ACT III. - - - - - Le Pré Catelan

Acting-Manager - KAY DRACO
Musical Director - T. TUNBRIDGE
Stage Manager - - - SOMERS BELLAMY

To-night and Every Evening at 9

An Entirely New Comedy, in Four Acts, called

"A SINGLE MAN"

By HUBERT HENRY DAVIES

ROBIN WORTHINGTON	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
HENRY WORTHINGTON	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
DICKY COTTRELL	Mr. LYONEL WATTS
LADY COTTRELL	Miss FLORENCE HAYDON
MAGGIE COTTRELL	Miss DULCIE GREATWICH
MISS HESELTINE	Miss HILDA TREVELYAN
ISABELLA WORTHINGTON	Miss MARY JERROLD
LOUISE PARKER	Miss NANCY PRICE
BERTHA SIMS	Miss DOROTHY DAYNE
THE HOUSEKEEPER	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
THE PARLOURMAID	Miss VERA COBURN
THE NURSE	Miss DIANA SELLICK

Act I. ... Robin Worthington's Study ... Bruce Smith
Act II. ... Robin Worthington's Drawing-Room ... ,, Acts III. & IV. Robin Worthington's Study ... ,,

Miss HILDA TREVELYAN'S Costumes by Mrs. NEVILLE, Connaught Street.
Miss NANCY PRICE'S Costumes by REDFERN, LTD., 26, Conduit Street.
Miss FLORENCE HAYDON'S Costumes by MARIAN ALDRIDGE, 40, York Place, Portman Square
All other Costumes by LOUISE & MELVILLE, 19, Maddox Street.

Preceded at 8.30 by a New Play, in One Act, called

'BETWEEN THE SOUP AND THE SAVOURY'

By G. E. JENNINGS.

THE COOK	... ... (Maria)	...	Miss MARGARET MURRAY (By permission of Herbert Trench, Esq.)
THE PARLOURMAID	(Ada)	...	Miss MAUDE BUCHANAN
THE KITCHENMAID	(Emily)	...	Miss ETHEL ROSS

Scene: The Kitchen. Time: During Dinner.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - - Mr. ALFRED TURNER

"A SINGLE MAN."

Comedy, in Four Acts, by Hubert Henry Davies, Produced at the Playhouse on Tuesday, Nov. 8.

Roars, and, at times, screams of laughter accompanied the performance of A Single Man at the Playhouse on Tuesday last. Mr. Hubert Henry Davies may have written plays in which he has dived more deeply beneath the surface of humanity than he has done in this case; but, judging by its reception, he has never written anything calculated to appeal more strongly to the tastes of an English audience. The Playhouse is the playground of the children of a larger growth who, very properly from their own point of view, refuse to worry themselves about problems, or trouble themselves with tragedies, and are satisfied with sportiveness, sentiment, and even a certain amount of joyful silliness.

The oft-used theme of a middle-aged man fancying himself "still young"—or, at any rate, young enough to marry a girl very much his junior, is dealt with by Mr. Davies in a fresh and original way. Robin Worthington is a clever author, who, in the first act of the play, is so exhilarated by the spring and by the spectacle of the domestic happiness of his sister-in-law, Isabella, and her husband, that he hurries—not to say rushes—into an engagement with a young and lively young lady named Maggie Cottrell. But Mrs. Worthington has in her mind a more suitable match for Robin, and she invites to visit her a spinster of uncertain age named Louise Parker, who comes on the distinct understanding that she is to marry Robin. But before Louise arrives he has become betrothed. Using his quiet, sensible type writer, Miss Heseltine—whom he regards, from habit only, as a helpful assistant—as go-between, he ascertains that the thoughtless, shallow Maggie is ready to marry him; and then the comedy begins. We see Robin trying hard to live up to the pace of Maggie and her friends, to emulate their inexhaustible activity and imitate their childish recklessness. He fails, and is beginning to find his engagement rather a trial, when Miss Parker makes a "dead set" at him. Robin has not the least inclination towards her, and snubs her without hesitation. But he is strangely perturbed when Miss Heseltine announces that she will have to leave his service when he marries. She will not explain why her departure is necessary, but leaves him to imagine the cause, which, unless he is extremely dense, he can hardly fail to do. In the last act he is dining alone, when she enters, having gone without a meal in order to type an important article of his. He insists that she shall share his beefsteak and champagne, and she consents—it is to be her last happy time with him. Then, by degrees, comes their rapprochment. Gradually her love for him dawns upon Robin, and he realises that she, and she alone, is the one woman in the world that he should marry. Their embrace is seen by Louise, who at once sniffs an immoral intrigue, and makes a scandal. Robin's friends, when he tries to explain, merely praise his chivalry, but decline to believe him. The difficulty is solved by Maggie, who saves the situation, and straightens things out for Robin, by declaring that she finds him too old for her, and that their engagement must be broken off. And so, happily, as it should, the pretty comedy ends, amidst the applause of an audience which has enjoyed its progress from beginning to end.

THE LITTLE THEATRE.

Lessees, THE LITTLE THEATRE CO., Ltd. Managing Director, GERTRUDE KINGSTON

EVERY EVENING at 8.45, MATINEE SATURDAY at 2.45.

JUST TO GET MARRIED,

A Comedy in Three Acts.

Frances Mellship	...	DORA BARTON
Mrs. Macartney	...	MAUD CRESSALL
Georgina Vicary	(Lady Catherine's Niece)	GERTRUDE KINGSTON
Daphne Grayle	(Sir Theodore's Daughter)	DOROTHY MINTO
Tod Grayle	(Sir Theodore's Son)	EVERARD VANDERLIP
Lady Catherine Grayle	(Sir Theodore's Wife)	ROSINA FILIPPI
Sir Theodore Grayle		THOMAS SIDNEY
Adam Lankester		GODFREY TEARLE
Butler		A. C. FOTHERINGHAM LYSONS
Dobbins	(A Railway Porter)	ARTHUR FAYNE

Act I. ... Drawing Room at Sir Theodore Grayle's Country House (evening).
Act II. ... Library at same (afternoon, two months later).
Act III. ... General Waiting Room at Buckeridge Station (same night).

On November 8th, followed by, and on subsequent evenings preceded by

THE MERCIFUL SOUL,

A Play in One Act.

Hugh	(Basil's child by former marriage)	VIOLET B. HUCALOSSI
Colomba	(Sister of Basil's first wife)	ISABEL MERSON
Annet	(Basil's child by former marriage)	CHRISTINE JENSON
Fiordelisa	(Basil's young wife)	DOROTHY MINTO
Geoffrey	(Basil's nephew)	EVERARD VANDERLIP
Richard	(Warder of the Castle)	JAMES GELDARD
Old Man		A. E. FILMER
Basil of the Iron Hand	(A Knight)	CAVENDISH MORTON

Scene ... Servants and Men-at-Arms.

The Hall of the Castle.

The characters are given in the order in which they appear.

Miss Kingston's dresses by POWER, LTD., Sloane Street. Miss Cressall's dresses by Madam SONIA, 14, South Molton Street.
Third Act furniture kindly lent by S.E. & C. Railway. Picture in 1st Act lent by Mr. HOLDER, Brewer Street, S.W.
Antique Furniture by F. G. HALLIDAY, LTD., Minehead, Somerset, etc., who will shortly open a London Branch in Mayfair.
Decorations and Furnishing by WARING & GILLOW. Stage Lighting installed and controlled by W. E. SIDAY.
Foyer, Tea Rooms, and Passage Draperies by BURNET & Co. Wigs by CLARKSON,

This Theatre may be engaged for Afternoon Concerts, or Theatrical Matinees on any days except Wednesdays and Saturdays. All applications should be made to the Booking Agents, ASHTON & MITCHELL'S ROYAL AGENCY, 33, Old Bond Street, W.

A Gong will be sounded before the rise of the Curtain.

BUSINESS MANAGER ... ARTHUR PENLEY.
PLAY PRODUCER ... CAVENDISH MORTON.

THE LIT
JOHN ST
Manageress

Tuesday
Evening
Nov. 8

Stall

No. C 8

This to be retained

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1910.

"JUST TO GET MARRIED."

ENTERTAINING COMEDY AT THE LITTLE THEATRE.

If it had nothing else to recommend it the new three-act play called "Just to Get Married," which Miss Gertrude Kingston produced at the Little Theatre last evening, has the merit of being a woman's frank opinion of a certain class of matchmaking which has for its only object the "getting off" of a dowerless girl.

It is no secret that the author of last night's play is Miss Cicely Hamilton, author of "Diana of Dobson's," and here again she gives us a woman vehemently protesting against her environment. There is a difference of environment, it is true, for Georgina Vicary, instead of being a victim of the "living-in" system in a suburban shop, is the dowerless niece of a baronet's lady who is conspiring to get her married to a rich man invited down from town to become a victim to the girl's charm.

"What is a perfectly useless woman to do but marry?" she asks, and therefore when the man proposes she accepts him. A two months' engagement sets Georgina thinking. The fear of being looked upon as a failure if she does not marry grows less. She begins to see that a husband as a means of livelihood is not a very pleasant prospect. To the horror, then, of her uncle and aunt, the wedding guests, and her fiancé, she throws him over on the eve of the marriage, and, grabbing the newly arrived "going away" hat and cloak, starts off in the dark to catch a train to London, where she can meet a girl friend and try for work.

Of course, the discarded young man happened to meet her half an hour later at the country station. He, too, was going to London. He was unhappy and hopeless, and Georgina, finding him in that pitiable condition, softened her heart and proposed to him.

It was a concession to popular sentiment perhaps that induced the author to marry her heroine. It was a concession tempered, however, by the fact that when an effective proposal was at last made it was the girl, and not the man, who made it. "Just to Get Married" is a really entertaining little comedy.

It was followed by a poetic tragedy in one act by Miss Lawrence Alma-Tadema, entitled "The Merciful Soul." It is a weird little piece, a story of olden time, wherein a knight, learning that his young wife has ceased to love him, sends home to her his dead body as a gift. J. W.

By arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

MR. ARTHUR HARDY'S PRODUCTION.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 10th, at 8.30

A Farcical Fantastic Play entitled

VICE VERSÂ

By F. ANSTEY.

Founded by the Author on his own Novel of the same name.

Paul Bultitude ...	Colonial Produce Broker, of Mincing Lane and 170 Westbourne Terrace; afterwards, except in appearance, his Son Dick	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE
Dick Bultitude ...	his Son; afterwards, except in appearance, his Father, Paul	Mr. SPENCER TREVOR
Barbara Bultitude ...	... (his Daughter) ...	Miss AGNES GLYNNE
Marmaduke Paradine	... (his Brother-in-Law) ...	Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Dr. Grimstone ...	Principal of Crichton House School, Market Rodwell, Herts.	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Dulcie	... (his Daughter) ...	Miss PHYLLIS EMBURY
Mr. Blinkhorn, M.A., Oxon	Senior Assistant Master at Crichton House School	Mr. LEVESON LANE
Mr. Tinkler, B.A., Camb.	... (Junior Assistant do.). ...	Mr. BRIAN EGERTON
Tipping	...	Mr. W. BRISCOE-OWEN
Jolland	...	Master PHILIP TONGE
Chawner	...	Master BOBBIE ANDREWS
Biddlecombe... ...	... Boys at Crichton House	Master JOSEPH VICTOR
Coker	...	Master F. THORNDIKE
Coggs	...	Master JACK HOBBS
Kiffin	...	Master SIDNEY SHERWOOD
Boaler	(Butler at 170 Westbourne Terrace)	Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE
Rhoda	(Parlourmaid at 170 Westbourne Terrace)	Miss MAY TAVERNER
Ellen	(Housemaid at 170 Westbourne Terrace)	Miss JEAN BLOOMFIELD
A Nurse	... ...	Miss LILLIAN BRENNARD
Cecily	...(a small friend of Barbara's)	Miss MARJORIE DANE
Peter	... (her younger brother)	Master BURFORD HAMPDEN

Scholars at Crichton House School:—Masters A. L. BROCKNER, PERCY DYER, PHILIP LLOYD, F. REYNDERS, C. ST. JOHN, H. P. STEWART, R. J. WALKER.

ACT I. Scene 1 ... ... Mr. Bultitude's Library at 170 Westbourne Terrace

The curtain will remain down 3 minutes between Scenes 1 and 2 of Act I., during which the Audience are requested to remain seated.

Scene 2 ... ... Class Room at Crichton House

ACT II. ... ... Class Room at Crichton House. (Some days later)

ACT III. ... ... Mr. Bultitude's Library. (Three hours later)

The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES. Incidental Music arranged by BRIGATA BUCALOSSI.
Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ. Wigs by CLARKSON. Dresses designed and executed by Mrs. CALEB PORTER.

FIRST MATINEE, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16th.

Acting Manager - - -	For Mr. Arthur Hardy	Mr. FRED PEMBERTON
Stage Manager - - -		Mr. W. W. KEENE
Assistant Stage Manager - -		Mr. OSWALD STRONG

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. ARTHUR HARDY.

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager - - (For Comedy Theatre) - LEONARD LILLIES

It was on April 9, 1883, that Mr. F. Anstey's first version of his amusing novel Vice Versâ was played for the first time in London at the Gaiety Theatre at a matinée for the benefit of Mr. W. H. Griffiths. It was described as a dramatic sketch, in three tableaux, the adaptation being done by Mr. E. Rose. Mr. C. H. Hawtrey was Mr. Bultitude's Body, Mr. Edward Rose Dick's Body, and Miss Laura Linden Dulcie: The piece, which was originally performed at the Theatre Royal, Reading, and had a short run at the Opera Comique Theatre, was substantially the same as the adaptation by Mr. Anstey which was produced with absolute and unmistakable success at the Comedy Theatre on Thursday, though some delightful additions and improvements have been made by the author.

Mr. Anstey's version is in three acts. In the first the position of affairs between the irritable and tyrannical Mr. Bultitude and his son, Dick, is stated, and sympathy is created with the boy, who is obviously a good average example of youthful humanity, while his father is much too hard on him. The "bad egg," Marmaduke Paradine, arrives from India, where he has been given by a fakir a certain magic stone which allows its possessor to have two wishes gratified. Bultitude, in a moment of false enthusiasm, wishes that he were Dick, and the transformation immediately takes place, the spirit of the prodnce-broker inhabiting the body of the boy, and the boy's soul entering the physical frame of his father. Dick is delighted, and completes the effect of the change by wishing that his father should return to school in his—Dick's—stead.

So poor Mr. Bultitude appears, in the second scene of the act, at Crichton House Academy. The boys cannot understand his manner and his opinions, so different from those of Dick as they knew him before the holidays. His attempts to explain what has happened are baffled again and again, and his disloyalties to the code of schoolboy honour and esprit de corps are hotly denounced. His schoolmaster, Dr. Grimstone, is completely puzzled, too. The new Dick "takes on" all the responsibilities of the previous one, including a love affair with Dulcie Grimstone, the schoolmaster's daughter, and a flirtation with another young lady, who throws billets doux over the wall to him. Mr. Bultitude is too elderly in spirit to cope with the emergencies thus created. He is bored by Dulcie's advances, and refuses to fight for her with Tipping, the "cock" of the school. He "sneaks" of a boy who is sucking peppermints, and in his own playbox is found a store of the odoriferous lozenge. Dick's correspondence with the former young lady is discovered, and the new Dick is on the point of being expelled. This is exactly what he would like, for he would thus be able to return home; but, unfortunately for him, Dulcie intercedes in his favour, and it is settled that he is to be flogged instead. Before this terrible indignity is done to him, however, he escapes from the school with the aid of a good-natured boy, named Jolland, and arrives home to find that in his absence Dick, in Bultitude's body, has fallen into the toils of the unprincipled Paradine, who has almost succeeded in cashing a big cheque on Bultitude's bankers. However, the father arrives in time to stop any serious injury being done to him in his absence; by the use of the magic stone the souls of the father and son resume their original habitations; and, Bultitude père having learnt what school life really is, the relations between him and his son become much more humane.

COMEDY THEATRE 10

Sole Lessee.
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh

10/11/1910

STALL

H22

To be retained

DAVIS, ALLEN & ROSS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, PERIVALE.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

Lessee .. .. Mr. H. B Irving.

Under the Management of Mr. J. E. VEDRENNE, 52, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

At 9 o'clock.

MRS. SKEFFINGTON

An Episode in Cavalry Barracks, by
COSMO HAMILTON.

Preceded at 8.15 by

THE MENDERS OF NETS

A One-Act Play, by PHILIP GIBBS.

Bess	Miss BERYL FABER
Mrs. Tregarth	Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
John	Mr. A. HOLMES-GORE
Pete	Mr. FREDERIC WORLOCK

The Scene is laid in a Fishing Village in Cornwall.

The attractiveness of Mrs. Skeffington is materially enhanced by contrast with the first piece, The Menders of Nets, which was placed in the bill on Saturday. The little play was originally produced under the title of The Escape of John Merchant at the Duke of York's on July 10, 1906, when its authorship was attributed to Messrs. Philip Gibbs and Cosmo Hamilton, and afterwards revived as A Mender of Nets at the Court on Dec. 31, 1907, with Mr. Cosmo Hamilton figuring alone as author. In the present production Mr. Hamilton has retired, leaving Mr. Gibbs in sole possession of the playwright honours. The play is a gloomy little piece, but with considerable dramatic grip and quite painful intensity. Nothing is gained by the change of title, as no significance exists beyond the fact that the action is laid in a house where the net-mending industry is carried on. Its mistress, Bess, has been married for some two years to the intemperate Pete, who had been the victim of a furious attack by his rival, John Merchant, now languishing in gaol for the offence. John had exacted from Bess a promise to wait for him, but she had yielded to the wooing of Pete, and has ever since been tormented by the prospect of the return of John Merchant. When the boom of a gun announces the escape of a prisoner, Bess instinctively divines that it is John who has got free. Sure enough John makes his appearance while Pete has gone to fetch the doctor for his little son, who lies ill in the adjoining room, and Bess responds to his embraces, afraid to reveal the fact that she is married. After an affecting scene, in which John Merchant draws a picture of their future happiness, Pete returns intoxicated; but Bess keeps up the illusion that she is still single, and bids him leave. Pete has a wholesome fear of John, and decides to obey, but as he will not take his hand, the convict declares that he means to inform on him. He forces Pete into the bedroom, but a startled cry leads John to enter, to find the child dead. John thus learns the bitter truth, but, pitying the grief of the mother, resigns himself to the warders, who have been fetched by Bess's mother, giving a parting warning to Pete to behave better in view of the prisoner's ultimate release.

QUEENS THEATRE
Saturday, Nov. 12
Orch. Stall
Ten Shillings and Sixpence
Row G
No. 15
TO LEFT DUPLICATE UNAVAILABLE

SAVOY THEATRE.

Manager ... ... Mr. G. A. RICHARDSON
Secretary Savoy Theatre & Operas, Ltd.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 14th, at 7.45.
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, at 8.
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, at 8.
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, at 8.
THURSDAY, DECEMBER 1st, at 8.
FRIDAY, DECEMBER 2nd, at 8.
MATINEES { WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16th / TUESDAYS, NOVEMBER 22nd and 29th } at 2.30.

HANDEL'S ALLEGRO

To be Followed by

THE TWO HUNCHBACKS

A Fairy Tale in Three Acts and Five Scenes,
By EMILE CAMMAERTS, translated from the French by TITA BRAND.

Jack		Mr. VERNON STEEL
Marianne		Miss TITA BRAND
Mathurin		Mr. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Trinette		Miss ALICE ARDEN
Richard		Mr. H. K. AYLIFF
Julie ..	Two Servants	Miss MARTHEZE
Elise ..		Miss PAULINE D'ARCY
Pit ..	(King of the Elves)	Mr. GUY GRIFFINHOOFE
Zit ..	(Queen of the Elves)	Miss NONNY LOCK
Little Pit ..	(Prince of the Elves)	Miss MAVIS YORKE
Agaric		Mr. HERBERT PORTER
Boletus		Mr. A. COLLET

Peasants:—Misses DILLON, WEIR, WESTERHOUT; Messrs. EARLY, HARDING, PYLE.
Pits (Elves of the Woods):—Masters BARKER, BATES, BUTLER, FOWLE, GREENHILL, HADDOCK, SHAW, SPIRO, WOODGATE.
Zits (Elves of the Fields):—Misses BINDON, BLOCK, BROWN, FAITHFUL, GILL, JONES, LEITH, LEVY, OSLAND, SEPPING, SIMPSON, TAHAN.

The Scene is laid in the Belgian Ardennes.

Act I.	... ...	...Before Mathurin's Cottage
Act II.	Scene 1	A Pinewood
	Scene 2	The Cottage
Act III.	Scene 1	A Pinewood
	Scene 2	The Cottage

Entr'acte Music composed by Mr. FRANK BRIDGE on Belgian Folk Melodies.
Scenery designed by Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD; executed by Mr. F. L. SCHMITZ.
Fairy Costumes by Miss E. CULL. Genuine Peasant Costumes from the Ardennes.
Mortal Scenes produced by Miss TITA BRAND.
Fairy Scenes produced and Children trained by Miss ITALIA CONTI.

On the EVENINGS of Thursday, Nov. 17th; Saturday, Nov. 19th; Mondays, Nov. 21st & 28th.
MATINEES: Tuesday, Nov. 15th, and Wednesday, Nov. 23rd.

Gluck's ORPHEUS

Business Manager	for Miss Marie Brema	Mr. CECIL BRETON
Stage Manager		Mr. CYRIL CATTLEY
Assistant Stage Manager		Mr. STANLEY GROOME

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Business Manager (for Savoy Theatre) Mr. HARRY P. TOWERS

SAVOY
THEATRE

14 NOV.

EVENING

STALL

No D20
TO BE RETAINED

DAVIS ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, HERTARD, &c.

Handel's cantata was followed by a Fairy Tale, in three acts, by Emile Cammaerts, translated from the French by Tita Brand, entitled

"THE TWO HUNCHBACKS."

Jack .....Mr. Vernon Steel
Marianne .....Miss Tita Brand
Mathurin .....Mr. Michael Sherbrooke
Trinette .....Miss Alice Arden
Richard .....Ma. H. K. Ayliff
Julie .....Miss Martheze
Elise .....Miss Martheze
Pit .....Miss Pauline D'Arcy
Zit .....Mr. Guy Griffinhoofe
Little Pit .....Miss Nonny Lock
Agarie .....Miss Mavis Yorke
Boletus .....Mr. Herbert Porter
.....Mr. A. Collet

The story of M. Cammaerts's little play is simple yet pleasing. Jack, the Hunchback, is in love with Marianne, but on account of his deformity does not declare his passion. Now, Jack is a clever violinist, and passing through a pine-wood at night, he meets a number of the Elves, headed by their King and Queen. When he plays to them the Elves are charmed, and as Jack also renders them another service they are full of gratitude, and offer him any reward. Poor Jack does not want riches, but only strength and delivery from his hump, which he thinks beyond their powers. The little folk, however, are quite equal to this task, and Jack finds himself a strong fine man and the hump gone for ever. In the next scene Jack declares his love to Marianne's willing ears. All are surprised at the change in his appearance; but a rich rival to the hand of Marianne hears the strange story of the Elves, and secretly determines to try his luck. Richard, however, does not possess Jack's art of pleasing, and meeting the Elves in the wood at night only irritates the Fairies, who, in revenge, make him a hunchback.

"THE UNWRITTEN LAW."

Play, in Three Acts, Founded by Laurence Irving on Dostoieffski's "Crime and Punishment," Produced at the Garrick Theatre on Monday, Nov. 14.

The torture of a criminal on the rack of cross-examination by an examining magistrate has been often used in fiction and the drama. It forms one of the strongest scenes in Balzac's "Grand Homme de Province à Paris"; it is the essence of M. Eugene Brieux's Robe Rouge, done in England as The Arm of the Law; and it always lends itself effectively to dramatic treatment. Never in our memory, however, has such a terribly intense use of the material been made as in The Unwritten Law, which was played for the first time in London at the Garrick Theatre on Monday last. Nothing could have prevented the triumph of this scene; it was certain to succeed, and the drop-curtain, indeed, fell on an audience wrought up to the highest pitch of interest and excitement.

The Unwritten Law, however, is much more than a strong, theatrical drama. It has its philosophic side, and the author handles the social system in a spirit of bitter indignation. The murderer is influenced by such admirable instincts that we hardly know whether to sympathise with him or to desire his detection. Rodion Raskolnikoff, a student who lives in a big block of flats in St. Petersburg, argues verbally and in print against the sanctity of human life; for many lives must be sacrificed, he maintains, in the cause of Progress. From these theories to the murder of the rascally manager of the flats, who tries to extort from a poor girl named Sonia Martinova, one of the lodgers, compliance with his vile desires under penalty of being turned into the street, is a short step. Rodion kills the brute with an axe which has been left in his room by a servant, and suspicion at first falls upon a couple of ignorant workmen, who were at the time of the murder engaged in repairing the building. But an examining magistrate named Bezak, whose speciality is extorting confessions from murderers, suspects Rodion of the crime. The student, in order to save the innocent prisoners, calls on Bezak while the latter is installed in the room next to the one in which the crime was committed. The Examining Magistrate, by "reconstituting" the incidents of the murder and forcing Rodion to repeat his actions up to a certain point, reduces him to the pitch of abject helplessness and confession. At this moment one of the workmen comes in, and in order to save his comrade takes upon himself the guilt of the crime, thus baffling Bezak completely, and permitting Rodion to escape, pro tem., from his torturer's grip. In the last scene, however, by the influence of Sonia and her sister, Raskolnikoff's heart is softened and his religious instincts awakened, and he voluntarily accepts the punishment of his crime—three years in Siberia.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees and Managers ... Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.
Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. Arthur Bourchier, 26 Langham Street, and Mr. Herbert Sleath, Dormy Cottage, Woking.

Under the Management of Messrs.
WENTWORTH CROKE, MILTON BODE, and EDWARD COMPTON.

LAURENCE IRVING'S SEASON.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30

Mr. LAURENCE IRVING and Miss MABEL HACKNEY

In the New and Original Play

THE UNWRITTEN LAW

Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the ...

A Play in Three Acts, by

LAURENCE IRVING

Founded on Dostoleffski's "Crime and Punishment."

The Characters are put down in the order in which they appear on the Stage.

Kashkin ...	(Student of the Technological Institute)	Mr. FRANK ESMOND
Zosimoff	(a young Doctor)	Mr. RUPERT HARVEY
Nastasia	(a Servant Girl)	... Miss BEATRICE SMITH
Rodion Raskolnikoff	(Student of the University of St. Petersburg)	Mr. LAURENCE IRVING
Sonia Martinova	... ...	... Miss MABEL HACKNEY
Gromoff ...	(Manager of the House in which Raskolnikoff lives)	Mr. JAMES SKEA
Doonia
Pulcheria	(Raskolnikoff's Sister)	... Miss LEONORA OAKFORD
Katya	(Raskolnikoff's Mother)	... Miss ALICE INMAN
Ivan	(Sonia's little Sister)	... Miss MABEL NELSON
Keller	(a Dvornik) ...	... Mr. W. BARNETT
Koltzoff	(District Attorney)	... Mr. WENTWORTH FANE
Dmitri	(Inspector of Police)	... Mr. CHARLES SEYMOUR
Mikolka	... (a Workman) ...	... Mr. MONTAGUE LANE
Bezak	(another Workman)	... Mr. A. FIELD FISHER
Boolitch	(Examining Magistrate)	... Mr. DALZIEL HERON
Zorn	Students of the Corps de Pages, Lyceum, Naval School, &c.	... Mr. C. ROBERTS
Platoff		... Mr. A. DODD
Levitski		... Mr. P. SIMMONDS
Goobchitz		... Mr. J. WOODHOUSE
Zimmerman		... Mr. CLIVE TERRANCE
Doordina		... Miss MAY EDISS
Olkina		... Miss DORIS VAILE
Karpova		... Miss DREW
		... Miss VERA WALLACE

A Lady		... Miss CHARLEYE COURTLAND
Lobko	(Inspector of Police)	... Mr. I. JONES
Policeman		... Mr. J. ARNOLD
Solski	(Bezak's Clerk) ...	... Mr. HENRY ELMORE
Mashenka	(Sonia's Youngest Sister)	... Miss DOROTHY HILL

Policemen, Cossacks of the Imperial Body Guard, Cossacks of the Don, Officers, Women.

Act I. ..	Scene 1	Raskolnikoff's Room, towards Evening
	Scene 2	The same the following Morning
	(Ten Minutes Interval.)
Act II.		Pleasure Gardens on an Island on the Neva
	(Ten Minutes Interval.)
Act III. ..	Scene 1	Gromoff's Sitting Room
	Scene 2	Sonia's Room

The Play takes place within the space of 26 hours in and near St. Petersburg at the present day.

Programme of Music.

After Act I. "Chant sans paroles" ... ... Tschaikowsky
After Act II. "Prelude" ... ... Rachmaninoff

Uniforms by NATHAN. Scenery by SCHMIDT. Properties by SMIRNOFF.
Music arranged by Mr. YEARSLEY from the works of Tschaikovski, Glinka, and Scroff.
The Cigarettes smoked by Mr. Irving in "The Unwritten Law," are imported direct from Russia by W. H. NEWMAN, LTD., Tobacconists, 106 New Street, Birmingham.
Other Cigarettes by the ABDULLA CO., LTD.
Typewriter supplied by the REMINGTON TYPEWRITER CO.

General Manager ... } For Mr. Laurence Irving { Mr. SYDNEY PAXTON
Stage Manager ... } { Mr. CHARLES SEYMOUR
Musical Manager ... } { Mr. C. BLAKESLEY YEARSLEY

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

The Box Office (A. R. BRITTEN) open daily from 10 to 10. Telephone 9513 Gerrard.
Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under Shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

BUSINESS MANAGER ... { for Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode and Edward Compton } Mr. LAWSON LAMBERT

"ECCENTRIC LORD COMBERDENE."

Novelette, in Three Chapters, by R. C. Carton. Produced at the St. James's Theatre, on Saturday, Nov. 19.

EVERY EVENING

WILL BE ACTED

ECCENTRIC LORD COMBERDENE

A NOVELETTE, IN THREE CHAPTERS,

BY R. C. CARTON

The Earl of Comberdene		.. Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Prince Melikoff		.. Mr. ARTHUR ROYSTON
Lieutenant Corfield	of H.M.S. "Irresistible"	.. Mr. STUART DENNISON
Lieutenant Armytage ..		.. Mr. G. TREVOR ROLLER
Hon. Hugh Chilvers		.. Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Brook Farlowe, M.P.		.. Mr. FRED LEWIS
Joseph Radburn		.. Mr. LYSTON LYLE
Rev. Alwyn Pilbrow		.. Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Captain Clamp		.. Mr. J. H. BARNES
Grugger		.. Mr. T. WEGUELIN
Scoyle		.. Mr. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Winton .. .. (Lord Comberdene's Valet) ..		.. Mr. GERALD AMES
Hotel Clerk		.. Mr. JAMES STANDISH
Waiters .. .. (at the Imperial Hotel) ..		{ Mr. W. PILLING Mr. FRANK RORKE Mr. FRANK ARUNDEL
The Marchioness of Glenmoray	(travelling as Mrs. Adair)	.. Miss COMPTON
The Grand Duchess Ina Drovinski	(travelling as her maid Stephanie)	.. Miss RITA JOLIVET
Madame Pigache	(of Pigache et Cie., Paris)	.. Miss RUTH MAITLAND
Daphne Farlowe		.. Miss MARJORIE WATERLOW

Visitors, Hotel Servants, Waiters at the Imperial Hotel, Sailors, etc.

Chapter 1.
The Lounge of the Imperial Hotel, Shingleford Bay .. Afternoon

Chapter 2.
Room No. 57, First Floor, Imperial Hotel .. .. .. Evening

Chapter 3.
The Deck of "The Morning Star" .. .. .. Early Morning

Mr. R. C. Carton's latest play can only be described as "whimsical"; and its failure or its success will depend on the whim and fancy of the public. It cannot accurately be described a satire or a burlesque. There is nothing in it which might not have happened, and stranger things have been reported in the newspapers. It is a comedy of incident and adventure; and we imagine that a large proportion of the audience at the St. James's on Saturday were genninely concerned for the success of the honest folk and the defeat of the gang of thieves who form such an important part of the dramatis personæ. Nor must this attitude be attributed to any special density on the part of the public. It was the natural result of the uncertain, though witty and clever, treatment of the theme by the author.

The gang in question includes a swell mobsman named Radburn, a rogue who wears the cloth of a clergyman as a disguise, and a certain nautical rascal called Captain Clamp. There are two boxes in the play, and it is important to distinguish between them. One is that which contains some important Foreign Office papers, and the other is a box containing £20,000-worth of jewels, which have been stolen from a London shop by one of the thieves' gang. Three of these thieves are staying at the hotel at the seaside resort of Shingleford; and here also comes the Marchioness. She goes under the name of "Mrs. Adair," as she has the delicate diplomatic mission of restoring to her country the Grand Duchess Ina Drovinski, who has been carried off by Nihilists, and is still in dread of them. So Ina pretends to be "Mrs. Adair's" maid. Now the Marchioness and the thieves both wanted to buy a certain yacht, the Morning Star—the thieves in order to get away with the jewels, and the Marchioness in order to convey the Duchess to an ironclad in the "offing." The yacht, however, has been bought by a very rich young man with a strong taste for romantic adventure, the Earl of Comberdene, who is also staying at the hotel; and the thieves induce him to engage Clamp as his captain. Now comes the complication with regard to the two boxes above-mentioned. One of the gang, Scoyle, brings the jewels in a box to the hotel, and hands them over, in mistake, to the Marchioness, who is expecting the other box with the despatches. In the second act the rogues are coming after nightfall to the Marchioness's room to recover the box; but Comberdene first lowers her and the Duchess down from the balcony with the box, and then, when Radburn and Pilbrow have entered the vacant bedroom, locks them in, leaves a written explanation for the night-watchman, and conveys the two ladies on board his yacht. Of course, Clamp and his crew of mercenary ruffians declare themselves when the yacht is at sea; but the indomitable Marchioness runs up a signal of distress, which brings help from a British battleship, and the malefactors are overpowered and arrested. The box is found to contain the jewels—they happen to be the Marchioness's heirlooms—complications are unravelled, and the satisfaction of the audience is complete.

PRINCE of WALES'S THEATRE

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF
FRANK CURZON.
To-Day at 2.30,
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S New Production

Inconstant George,

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,
Adapted from the French of ROBERT DE FLERS & ARMAND CAILLAVET

Preceded at 2 by
"THE PORTRAIT,"
A Dance Play in One Act, Written and Composed by DORA BRIGHT

Claude Duvernoy ... ... (An Artist) ... Mr. GORDON CLEATHER
His Friend ... ... Mr. HENRI LAURENT
The Spanish Dancer ... ... Miss MONA HARRISON
Costumes by Messrs. J. & H. NATHAN, Coventry Street, W. Scene:—Duvernoy's Studio, about 6 p.m. on a late September evening.
Play Produced by Mr. FRED TARREN

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music:—

1 Valse ... ... "Voices of Spring" ... ... Strauss
2 (a) Overture ... ... "Romantique" ... ... Kela-Bela
(b) Two-Step ... "Dutch Kiddies" ... ... Tompkins
3 (a) Danse du Paraguay ... ... Valverde
(b) Intermezzo ... "Celeste" ... ... Metra
(c) Valse ... ... "Sunset" ... ... Brunet
4 (a) Chanson Napolitaine "Ma Blonde Amie" ... ... Lincke
(b) Intermezzo ... "Spicentina" ... ... Von Blon
(c) Valse ... ... "The Chocolate Soldier" ... ... Oscar Straus
The Mustel Organ and Celesta by MUSTEL & Co, 80, Wigmore Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by Bluthner, 18, Wigmore Street, W.

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... E. W. TARVER

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. 0d. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7483.

General Manager ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN.

"THE PORTRAIT."

A Dance Play, in One Act, Written and Composed by Dora Bright, Produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 24.

Claude Duvernoy .....Mr. Gordon Cleather
His Friend .....Mr. Henri Laurent
The Spanish Dancer .....Miss Mona Harrison

A new line in curtain-raisers is exploited in The Portrait, which was put on at a matinée at the Prince of Wales's on Thursday in readiness for the evening bill. The title is scarcely a happy one, for not only has it been used several times before, but it gives little indication of the character of the piece, which is a wordless dance play embellished by song. The story shows how a young Parisian artist falls in love with a picture he has painted, and expresses his devotion in a ballad. The portrait lacks one shoe, and the artist prepares to supply it, but is interrupted by the arrival of a friend, who invites him out to dinner. Lighting a cigarette, the painter falls asleep in his armchair, whereupon the figure emerges from the frame, and, like many another fabled heroine in similar circumstances, conceives an affection for the man who created her. She dances before him, and imprints a kiss on his lips, but is startled by the sound of voices, and returns to her gilt environment. Meanwhile the artist has awakened, and, seeing the shoe on the floor, concludes that the vision was a reality, but the shoe is suddenly transported to the picture, and when the artist's friend returns the former tries in vain to convince him that the incident was not a dream, and is himself left in a state of perplexity.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1910.

MR. SHAW'S NEW PLAY.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S APPEAL FROM THE STAGE.

If short plays were forthcoming with but a tithe of the charm, and wit, and humour, and sparkle of the little piece by Mr. Bernard Shaw, which was performed for the first time yesterday afternoon at the Haymarket Theatre, there might be hope of once again attracting people to the theatre to see a "curtain raiser." The one regret associated with the performance was, that it was all over in less than a half-hour. "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" was written by Mr. Shaw as an appeal on behalf of the proposed Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre, and was part of a programme of four one-act plays presented in aid of the fund for that object.

SHAKESPEARE'S TRYST.

Beautifully written, with the humour never concealing the sincere purpose of the author, the appeal was feelingly and charmingly set out. The background to the little play is the Terrace of Whitehall Palace in a flood of summer moonlight, the sky alive with twinkling stars, and in the shade a Yeoman of the Guard on his lonely watch. Then out of the darkness came a gallant, William Shakespeare, play-writer and actor, to keep a tryst with a lady of the court, one Mary Fitton, only to find himself challenged by the sentry, whose keen sense of observation compelled the bard to take notes, at the cost of finding himself dubbed "a snapper up of unconsidered trifles." Mr. Shaw did not resist a temptation to allow his lines to point out the humours of criticism: Yet it was always a kindly lapse into a tracing of resemblances.

Shakespeare's unexpected meeting with the veiled lady—Queen Elizabeth taking the air before retiring for the night—and his conquest of the proud monarch were conducted with rare skill, and when the lady gently and graciously expressed a wish to "speak across the ages to my people," and Shakespeare led her down the terrace in order that she might speak across the orchestra, it was impossible to miss the wit and charm with which the appeal on behalf of the National Memorial Theatre had been effected by Mr. Shaw in his little play.

It need only be added that Mr. Granville Barker played his part as Shakespeare with a full sense of the humour of the lines and the situation, and that the dignity and power of Elizabeth had an excellent exponent in Miss Suzanne Sheldon. The programme will be repeated this afternoon.

J. W.

SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL MATINEES.

Two special matinées are to be given at the Haymarket Theatre on Thursday and Friday, the 24th and 25th inst., in aid of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre. The programme will consist of four one-act plays, particulars of which are appended:

THE DARK LADY OF THE SONNETS.
An Interlude, by Bernard Shaw.

The Warder	Mr. Hugh B. Tabberer.
William Shakespeare	Mr. Granville Barker.
Queen Elizabeth	Miss Suzanne Sheldon.
Mary Fitton	Miss Mona Limerick.

On the Terrace, Whitehall Palace: Midsummer Night.
Period: The spacious times of great Elizabeth.

THE KISS, by George Paston (based on "Der Kuss," by Ludwig Hana).

Catherine Hervey	Miss Alexandra Carlisle.
Humphrey Wharton	Mr. Eric Lewis.
The Stranger	Mr. Guy Standing.
Mrs. Budgen	Miss Florence Harwood.

The scene is laid in Bath about the year 1777.

STUFFING. By George Paston.

Cast.—Miss Agnes Thomas and Miss Sydney Fairbrother, Miss Clare Greet and Mr. Arthur Chesney.

A SLICE OF LIFE. By J. M. Barrie.

Cast.—Mr. Gerald du Maurier, Miss Lena Ashwell, and Miss Hilda Trevelyan.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON
TRENCH
Thursday
Matinee
Nov. 24
Orch. Stl £2/2/0
No
This to be retained
This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

EVERY EVENING at 9, MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY at 2.45.

JUST TO GET MARRIED,

By CICELY HAMILTON (Authoress of "Diana of Dobson's")

Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.45, Evening at 8.30, a new first piece,

"DENTON (LAB.)"

Sir George Egerton ... ... THOMAS SIDNEY
Denton ... ... (his Man-Servant) ... ... A. S. HOMEWOOD

Scene—Study at Sir George Egerton's Country House at Homefield. Time—The Present.

Miss Kingston's dresses by POWER, LTD., Sloane Street. Miss Cressall's dresses by Madam SONIA, 14, South Molton Street.
Third Act furniture kindly lent by S.E. & C. Railway. Picture in 1st Act lent by Mr. HOLDER, Brewer Street, S.W.
Antique Furniture by F. G. HALLIDAY, LTD., Minehead, Somerset, etc., who will shortly open a London Branch in Mayfair.
Decorations and Furnishing by WARING & GILLOW. Stage Lighting installed and controlled by W. E. SIOAY.
Foyer, Tea Rooms, and Passage Draperies by BURNET & Co. Wigs by CLARKSON,

Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON is pleased to announce that she has been able to arrange for the "EUGENE MEIER TRIO" to play in the Foyer during the Intervals.

This Theatre may be engaged for Afternoon Concerts, or Theatrical Matinees on any days except Wednesdays and Saturdays. All applications should be made to the Booking Agents, ASHTON & MITCHELL'S ROYAL AGENCY, 33, Old Bond Street, W.

A Gong will be sounded before the rise of the Curtain.

BUSINESS MANAGER - - - - - - ARTHUR PENLEY.
PLAY PRODUCER - - - - - - CAVENDISH MORTON.

THE LIT
JOHN STR
Manageress -
Saturday
Matinee
Nov. 26
Stall
D 3
This to be retained

There is just an amusing touch of topsy-turvey-dom in the interesting curtain-raiser produced on Saturday, the 26th ult, at the Little Theatre, in front of Just to Get Married. With the rapid growth of Socialism we may become, in the near future, quite familiar with such situations as supply the clou of Denton (Lab.). Denton has served Sir George Egerton for years faithfully, even devotedly; but his ambition has been fired by reading Karl Marx, Henry George, Robert Blatchford, and other advanced Socialists. He aspires to the rôle of agitator, and has become a fervid platform speaker in the cause of the worker, though his political activities are quite unknown to Sir George. This stiff-backed Tory landowner, who has done some service for his party in the House, is somewhat taken aback when Denton informs him that he must leave his service, as he has been asked to stand for the Labour party in the neighbouring borough of Highfield. Gentle argument fails to move the enthusiastic Denton from his purpose. He intends to organise all classes of domestic servants and to bring them into line with other workers. The baronet evidently thinks that his valet does not possess the aptitude to govern that is alleged to be the special gift of the leisured classes, but he does not get the best of the controversy, which is carried on by Denton with perfect sangfroid and with no lack of deference. It is only when Sir George tells him that the Unionist candidate is to be his son Geoffrey that Denton's resolve is weakened. He could scarcely oppose Master Geoffrey, whom he had idolised as a kiddy; and he decides to ask the Labour organisers to find him another constituency. It is then that Sir George plays his last card. He has consulted a specialist recently, and has been told that he has but six months to live. Surely his faithful Denton does not wish to desert him. The appeal to the Labour candidate is too strong to be resisted. He will stay to the end; and for the present his career as Denton (Lab.) has to be postponed.

By arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

MR. ARTHUR HARDY'S PRODUCTION.

EVERY EVENING AT 9

A Farcical Fantastic Play entitled

VICE VERSÂ

By F. ANSTEY.

Founded by the Author on his own Novel of the same name.

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY A PLAY IN ONE ACT, ENTITLED

MOUNT PLEASANT

By Mrs. HERBERT D. COHEN.

Mrs. Harris ... Miss CLARE GREET
Mrs. Green ... Miss MAY TAVERNER

Gladys Harris ... Miss MARJORIE DAY
Alfred Harris ... Mr. THOMAS PAUNCEFORT

Scene—No. 13 Mount Pleasant, Cambridge Heath, London. Time—The Present.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Acting Manager - Mr. FRED PEMBERTON. Stage Manager (For Mr. Arthur Hardy) - Mr. W. W. KEENE.
Assistant Stage Manager (For Mr. Arthur Hardy) - Mr. OSWALD STRONG.

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. ARTHUR HARDY.

Business Manager - - (For Comedy Theatre) - LEONARD LILLIES

Secondary school scholarships, it has been said, instead of equipping their holders for the battle of life, serve to educate them too far beyond their station of life to be of practical use. The force of this contention is brought home thoroughly, though perhaps unintentionally, in the new one-act play which was produced at the Comedy on Saturday. It is a piece of honest, homely sentiment, with many gleams of humour, but leaves the problem at which we have hinted untouched.

Mount Pleasant is a Cambride Heath slum, wherein dwells the hard-working Mrs. Harris. She is decking out her kitchen in readiness for the home-coming of her only daughter, Gladys, who was sent by charitable friends to a boarding-school in the country on the death of her father some years before. During her stay at school Gladys had been given to understand that Mount Pleasant was of the salubrious character that its name implied, and, on arriving home, is appalled at the squalor of the neighbourhood and the poverty-stricken character of her future home. Gladys gives way to tears, and reproaches her mother for bringing her to such a place, where her education will all be thrown away. She was "top girl" in the school, and, had she known it, would never have come home. Mrs. Harris, at first indignant, breaks down and declares she was pining for the return of her daughter, and for that reason misrepresented her circumstances. She would have worked her fingers to the bone for her daughter, but she sees her error, and offers to send the girl out to service. But Gladys has been touched by the depth of her mother's love, declares she will stay and make her happy, and, throwing off her sadness, cheerily sits down to the winkles from which she had previously turned with disgust.

COMEDY 26
THEATRE
Sole Lessee
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
26/11/1910
STALL
F19
To be retained

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

To-night, Monday, November 28th, 1910, and Every Evening at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

A Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled

DECORATING CLEMENTINE

From the French of "Le Bois Sacré," by

ARMAND DE CAILLAVET and ROBERT DE FLERS.

Adapted into English by GLADYS UNGER.

Paul Margerie		RICHIE LING
Monsieur Morel	(Director of Fine Arts)	LOUIS MASSEN
Fargette		ERNEST LAWFORD
Courlot	Attaches at the Ministry of Fine Arts	GUY ADDISON
Magnel		WARBURTON GAMBLE
Vauvert		JOSEPH ALLENTON
Durien	(Commissioner of Historic Relics)	DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Benjamin	(Servant at the Ministry)	CHARLES LANGLEY
Victor		CHARLES BISHOP
A Journalist		GEORGE LESTOCQ
Peter		GISSING WALTERS
An Author		J. H. BREWER
Dourakine	(Count Zakouskine's Valet)	ROBERT MILASCH
Clementine Margerie		HATTIE WILLIAMS
Adrienne Morel		DORIS KEANE
Mme. De Ternay		WINIFRED HARRIS
Mme. Fauchel		FLEMING NORTON
Louise		GRACE MOORE
	AND
Count Zakouskine		G. P. HUNTLEY

Act I. .. .. At Clementine Margerie's Flat in Paris. The Study.
Act. II. .. .. At the Ministry of Fine Arts. The Directors' Room.
Act. III. .. .. At Clementine Margerie's Flat. The Drawing Room.

Miss Hattie Williams' Dresses by Madame HAYWARD.
Miss Doris Keane's Dresses by Madame LUCILE.

Produced under the Stage Direction of GUSTAV VON SEYFFERTITZ, of the Empire Theatre, New York.

Programme of Music.

Orchestra under the Direction of EDWARD JONES.

OVERTURE	"Le Brasseur de Preston"	...	Adam
FANTASIE	... "Veronique"		Messager
MORCEAU	"Lettre de Manon"		Gilet
UNGARISCH TANZ	... ...		Brahms

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.30.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. W. LESTOCQ
Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberla n. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every perfo mance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, pas-ages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Decorating Clementine is a curious mixture of philosophic satire and ordinary French farce, with its wives who are openly wanton and its husbands who are at the same time unfaithful and deceived. The kind of comedy which exposes a phase of contemporary life has always been enjoyed on the other side of the Channel. The aim of MM. Caillavet and De Flers appears to have been to satirise the system by which the allotment of the Legion of Honour in France is influenced by the amorous propensities of an official or officials. But, presumably because they did not consider this sufficient to furnish material for an evening's entertainment, they have tacked on to it a number of incidents familiar to the students of what used to be called "Palais Royal pieces." It cannot be said with truth that the result is agreeable. Decorating Clementine falls between the two stools of rollicking, irresponsible absurdity and cynically realistic representation of life. The incidents at the Ministry of the Fine Arts, the sordid pressure put by the unscrupulous director on the women who come to solicit his influence, and the petty jealousy between the literary women are slices of social satire; the character of the lady-killing Count and much of the other matter are farcical and fantastic. The outrageous behaviour of the erratic married woman who throws herself into the arms of each attractive man whom she meets is offensive in its brazen audacity; and the efforts of the ambitious female novelist to conciliate the sensual official without sacrificing her self-respect are absolutely painful. Plays with a decidedly French flavour have succeeded in England when the irresistible fun of the incidents has drawn away attention from the immorality in which the action originated, but the objectionable scenes in Decorating Clementine are offensive without being intensely amusing. The best thing in the play is the dialogue, some of which is decidedly smart, though here, of course, we are in doubt how much merit is due to the French authors and how much to the accomplished lady who has taken on herself the difficult duty of doing their piece into English. Perhaps, however, a description of the piece will be the best criticism.

Paul Margerie is a healthy, simple-minded sportsman, who has married a female novelist. Clementine Margerie has a sincere affection for her husband, and is faithful to him. They are completely happy until Mme. Margerie hears that a rival novelist, Mme. Verlay is to become one of the Legion of Honour. Clementine pretends that she does not care, but ends by resolving to apply for the decoration herself. Thus commences the satirical plot of the play. Interwoven with it is the farcical relief. A fatuous Russian-Italian, Count Zakouskine, who fancies that he possesses a fatal charm for the fair sex, calls on Clementine, and indulges in various extravagances of silly conceit. She is also visited by Mme. Morel, the wife of the director of Fine Arts, an official who has a great deal to do with the allotment of the Cross of the Legion. Mme. Morel is thoroughly "unmoral." She takes a fancy to every attractive man whom she meets, and her present lover is the egregious Count Zakouskine. The first act ends with the determination of Clementine to interview M. Morel and gain his support for her candidature.

In the second act, which takes place at he Ministry of Fine Arts, we find Morel, an absurdly fussy and pretentious personage, worrying his attachés, and complaining of being so "very busy." Clementine calls on him to solicit his good offices, and there is a scene, in which the Director after making gradual approaches, puts his arm round her waist and kisses her. She slaps his face and immediately repents—has she not destroyed her chance of obtaining the Cross? She soon, however, conceives another plan. Mme. Morel has taken one of her fancies to the handsome Paul; and Clementine urges him to flirt with the Director's wife, and thus secure the support of the Director. Mme. Morel, however, has no idea of mere flirtation. In a scene which reminds one strongly of that between the Grand Duchess and Fritz in Offenbach's opera, "only more so," she leads Paul on till his head is turned, and they rapturously embrace. Clementine enters and becomes violently jealous. Then the Director prepares, with agreeable anticipations, to receive the novelist who is Mme. Margerie's rival in the competition for the Legion of Honour. A shabby little man enters, and explains that he writes under a female name. The act ends with the disgust and wrath of the disappointed Director. In the end, of course, all is well. Clementine concludes that even a Cross may be bought too dearly, so she abandons ambition, and returns to conjugal happiness

MANAGING DIRECTOR: MR GEORGE EDWARDES.

GAIETY THEATRE

To-Night at 8.45,

Mr. FREDK. MOUILLOT'S SEASON,

The Captain of the School,

A Story of Public School Life, in Three Acts,

By EDWARD A. PARRY and FREDK. MOUILLOT.

Tom Brant		LIONEL MACKINDER
Rev. Joseph McIntyre, D.D.	(The Umpire)	CHARLES MACDONA
Martin Leonard, B.A.		E. F. MAYEUR
George Lister, M.A.		ARTHUR ELDRED
Archibald Brant, M.D., F.R.S.	(the Bishop)	T. GIDEON WARREN
Daniel Corbett	(the Sleuth Hound)	CHAS. CONNOUGHT
Morley Murray	(Sneaky)	HARRY E. DUFF
James Thurlow		J. EVELYN SWINBURNE
Sergeant O'Flaherty		ALFRED S. BARBER
The Toastmaster		A. J. NICHOLLS
Mrs. Bessie Higgins		Mrs. MOUILLOT
Mrs. Brown		Miss LUCY EDWIN
Rhoda McIntyre		Miss DOROTHY PARRY
Schoolboys		STEDMAN'S SCHOOL CHOIR

The Action takes place at Birchester College.

Act I.	Brant's Room in the Doctor's House	Scene 2	The School Gardens
Act II.—Scene 1	Brant's Room in the Doctor's House	Scene 2	The Class Room
Act III.—Scene 1	Brant's Room in the Doctor's House	Scene 2	The School Dining Hall

During the evening the Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Louis Hillier, will play the following:—

OVERTURE	"Captain of the School"	Arthur Wood
SELECTION	"La Bohême"	Puccini
a. MARCH	"Turkish March"	Mozart
b. MELODY	"Chant sans paroles"	Tchaikovski
c. WALTZ	"Sourire d'Amour"	Frank Lambert

Special Scenery by E. EGERTON and FRED KARNO'S Studios.
The Play Produced by the Authors, assisted by CHARLES MACDONA.
Music arranged by ARTHUR WOOD.

Stage Director	CHARLES MACDONA
Business Manager for Mr. FREDK. MOUILLOT	W. T. CUNNINGHAM

BOX OFFICE (J. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY, from 10 till 10.

The Bars in this Theatre are under the d[irection] selected ar[t] [ma]nagement, and all articles sold are specially [of] finest quality.

GAIETY THEATRE

Saturday Evening, Dec. 10th

STALL, 10/6

Row F | No. 5

This portion to be retained.

The scene of the story is laid at Birchester College a couple of days before the end of the summer term. The boys are busy with the final rehearsals of Romeo and Juliet, which is being stage-managed by Tom Brant, the school captain, a general favourite with boys and masters, with the exception of an assistant-master, Martin Leonard, who is Tom's rival in the affections of Rhoda McIntyre, the Headmaster's daughter, who, in some private theatricals, is to play Juliet to Tom's Romeo. A rehearsal of the love scenes between the pair brings about a declaration of the state of Tom's affections and a confession from Rhoda that he has won her maiden heart. The avowal is overheard by the "sneak" of the school, James Thurlow, who goes off hot-foot to Mr. Leonard with his news, with the result that poor Tom incurs the wrath of the Head, and is publicly denounced. Infuriated by Leonard's sneer, Tom loses control of himself, knocks the master down, gives him a black eye, and is, in consequence, expelled.

But, like all public school heroes, Tom is a boy of immense resource and gigantic "cheek." His uncle, Professor Brant, is expected that day at Birchester College. Tom decides to kidnap him and take his place, and does so with complete success and tremendous effect. Everyone is deceived, with the exception of two of Tom's particular pals—who, of course, aid and abet him—and Rhoda and her aunt, Mrs. Higgins, who, unknown to Tom, discover the trick, and determine to get all the fun they can out of the discovery, which, as Mrs. Higgins is an old sweetheart of the Professor's, is not difficult. In the character of the Professor, Tom ingratiates himself with the Head, settles all old scores with Leonard, makes love to Mrs. Higgins, and delights and mystifies the boys by his knowledge of their individual tastes and eccentricities. The real professor, in the meantime, has been inveigled into Tom's bedroom, and has been kept a prisoner there by the simple expedient of depriving him of his nether garments. A capital climax is reached in the last act, the scene of which is a beautiful picture of the school dining-hall of the old College, where the Head, his family, the masters, and the boys are dining together for the last time. The boys are heard singing the familiar "Dolce Domnm" before the curtain rises, and there is a first-rate speech by the Head—to which, in the absence of the captain, Thurlow, the sneak, and the holder of the Good Conduct prize, tries to respond, only to be "howled down" by the boys—and a humorous speech by the mock Professor, in the middle of which the real Professor bursts into the hall with a bedspread doing duty for his trousers. Tom is exposed, scolded, and finally forgiven all round; and the boys call for a speech from their captain.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Lessee .. .. MR. H. B. IRVING

On WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 14th, 1910,

Mr. H. B. IRVING

Will produce, for the First Time in London,

The Princess Clementina

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS,

By GEORGE PLEYDELL and A. E. W. MASON,

From A. E. W. Mason's Novel, "Clementina."

James Stuart, the "Pretender"	Mr. EILLE NORWOOD
Cardinal Origo, the Pope's Legate at Bologna	Mr. CHARLES ALLAN
Prince of Baden	Mr. NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Count Otto von Ahlen	Mr. FRANK TYARS
Sir John Hay	Mr. ROLAND PERTUIS
Charles Wogan	Mr. H. B. IRVING
Major Richard Gaydon } Officers of }	Mr. HENRY VIBART
Captain John Misset } Dillon's }	Mr. FREDERICK LLOYD
Captain Lucius O'Toole } Regiment }	Mr. ERNEST H. RUSTON
Harry Whittington	Mr. ARTHUR WHITBY
Mr. Ballard	Mr. J. PATRIC CURWEN
M. de Chateaudoux	Mr. ARTHUR CURTIS
A Magistrate	Mr. STANLEY HOWLETT
Usher	Mr. C. A. STAITE
Innkeeper of "The Pilgrim" Inn	Mr. L. LOWDER
Landlord of "The Green Cross" Inn	Mr. C. TREVOR ROPER
First Corndealer	Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Second Corndealer	Mr. H. ROBINSON
Third Corndealer	Mr. W. H. GRAHAM
Princess Clementina Sobieska, Daughter of the King of Poland,	Miss STELLA PATRICK CAMPBELL
The Princess-Mother	Miss HELEN ROUS
Lady Featherstone	Miss GRACE CROFT
Jenny	Miss DOROTHEA BAIRD
A Landlady	Miss MARY FOSTER

Act I., Scene 1 – James Stuart's Audience Chamber at Bologna. Autumn, 1718.
Scene 2 – The Green Cross Inn on the Road to Innsprück. Two days later.
Act II., Scene 1 – A Villa at Innsprück. Four months later.
Act III., Scene 1 – On the Brenner Road. Three days later.
Scene 2 – An Inn at Peri. The same night.
Scene 3 – A Hut on Monte Scanupia. The same night.
Act IV., Scene 1 – The Pilgrim Inn at Bologna. A few days later.
Scene 2 – The Altar of St. Joseph at Bologna.

The chief characters in this play are not due to the invention of the authors. Wogan, with the help of his friends, Gaydon, Misset, and O'Toole, liberated the Princess Clementina in the spring of 1719, as the action of this piece describes. Even Jenny has her place in history. Wogan and Gaydon each wrote a narrative of the affair, and these, with the addition of some other contemporary accounts and letters, were published in Dublin in 1804.

At the period of the play, James Stuart, known as the "Pretender," the son of James II., the exiled king of England, kept up, to the best of his means, a Royal State in Bologna, where his adherents paid him homage as King James III. He was a serious menace to King George I. and emissaries from Walpole, King George's minister, continually found a way into his Court to spy upon and thwart his plans.

The Song sung in Act II. specially composed and written by Madame LIZA LEHMANN.

Incidental Music by J. MEREDITH BALL.

Costumes designed by Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD, and executed by Madame L. H. FRECKNALL, Miss ARCHER, and Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS & Co.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by Messrs. ORTZMANN.
Scenery by C. SACKMANN.

OVERTURE .. Merry Wives of Windsor
GAVOTTE .. .. "Ranelagh" ..
SUITE .. .. Woodland Dances ..
SUITE .. .. "Irish" ..

Musical Director, Mr. J. MEREDITH BALL

MATINÉES: Saturdays, Dec. 17th, 24th and 31st, and Every Saturday.

SPECIAL MATINÉES: Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 26th and 27th.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 5s.; Upper Circle, 4s. and 3s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s; Private Boxes, One to Three Guineas.

Box Office (Mr. J. W. SHEPPARD) Now Open. Telephone: Gerrard 0437 (two lines).

Acting Manager and Treasurer .. .. Mr. H. B. FITZGIBBON
Stage Manager .. .. Mr. TOM REYNOLDS
Assistant Stage Manager .. .. Mr. H. KAE COOK

GENERAL MANAGER .. Mr. AUSTIN BRERETON

Quite recently we told the story of The Princess Clementina, after its production at the New Theatre, Cardiff, on the first of this month; so it is hardly necessary to repeat in detail our correspondent's scenario of the very successful piece. It is a strong and agreeable "blend" of active melodrama and romantic sentiment. At first incident and adventure predominate. We see the faithful Jacobite, Charles Wogan, start from the Pretender's Court at Bologna, to bring, as a bride to "King" James, the Princess Clementina Sobieska, the daughter of the King of Poland, a marriage with whom would greatly strengthen James Stuart's claim to the English throne. The Princess has been arrested and sent to Innsbruck, where she is kept in what amounts to imprisonment, the local magistrate being responsible for her detention in her villa. Wogan takes with him a written authority from James, and a traitorous courtier, called Whittington, and his accomplice, Ballard, are determined to take the document from the traveller. Assisted by three ruffians, Ballard attacks Wogan at an inn. He is wounded in the scuffle which follows, but they do not get the paper, which, anticipating their assault, Wogan has burnt in lighting his pipe. Then he appears at the Innsbruck villa, and helps the Princess to escape. When the inspecting magistrate arrives he is shown a female in bed, who only replies to him with moans. A servant named Jenny is the substitute for the Princess, who by this contrivance gets off safely.

This and much that follows is stirring melodrama; the deeper appeal of the play comes later. Wogan and the Princess have fallen in love with each other, and the truth comes out when, after more adventures, they meet in a hut on a mountain-side. It is a struggle between love and loyalty. Wogan resists the temptation, but he has a greater trial yet to bear. He is commanded to marry the Princess by proxy; he goes through the ceremony, and is left kneeling, alone, before the altar.

TWICE DAILY AT 2 AND 7.30, for Six Weeks only.

HERBERT TRENCH

PRESENTS

THE BLUE BIRD

By MAURICE MAETERLINCK,

Translated by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos,

To Music by Norman O'Neill; and with a new Act—"The Palace of Happiness."

NOTE.—The BLUE BIRD, inhabitant of the pays bleu, the fabulous blue country of our dreams, is an ancient symbol in the folk-lore of Lorraine, and stands for HAPPINESS.

Mummy Tyl	MADGE MCINTOSH
Daddy Tyl	E. A. WARBURTON
Tyltyl	ERIC RAE
Mytyl	PAULINE GILMER
The Fairy Bérylune	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Bread	EDWARD RIGBY
Fire	HARRY GRIBBEN
Tylô, the Dog	ERNEST HENDRIE
Tylette, the Cat	NORMAN PAGE
Water	ATHENE SEYLER
Milk	GLADYS BURGESS
Sugar	H. R. HIGNETT
Light	GLADYS MASON
Gaffer Tyl	WILLIAM FARREN
Granny Tyl	DAISY ENGLAND
Night	SABA RALEIGH
Time	C. V. FRANCE
Neighbour Berlingot	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Neighbour Berlingot's Little Daughter	ESME WYNNE
The Luxury of Being Rich	E. A. WARBURTON
The Joy of Maternal Love	MADGE MCINTOSH
The Happiness of Being Well	AMY LAMBORN
The Joy of Being Just	GLADYS HARVEY
The Boy Lover	RUSSELL WRAY
The Girl Lover	ESME WYNNE
The Blue Child	MARJORIE BURGESS
Cold-in-the-Head	BLANCHE DAVIDSON
The Unborn Tyl	DOROTHY BURGESS

Hours, Stars, etc.:—Misses PAGE, CAREW, SWIFT, ELLAM, FARREN, M. CALDICOTT, DREW, FOREMAN, DAY, CUNNINGHAM, L. CALDICOTT, BRUHLING, BLAKE, N. CALDICOTT.

Joys and Luxuries, etc.:—Misses SULLIVAN, SINCLAIR, HOPCRAFT, ROBINSON, V. WHITAKER. Messrs. DICKSON-KENWIN, E. LEVERETT, H. BAYNTON, G. W. HEWETSON, R. P. LAMB, KENNETH BLACK, E. J. SULLEY, HATTON SINCLAIR, A. ACKERMAN, G. WILKINSON, ROY TRAVERS, J. M. KELLY, A. WEBSTER, J. O'BRIEN, O. BAILEY.

Loaves, Rags, Stuffs, Little Happinesses, etc.:—Misses LINDLEY, AUSTIN, KARENTZ, MORANDI, MACREADY, J. VOAKES, MAHONEY, FORSYTHE, KNOWLES, WATTS, FISCHER, ROCHEFORT, HALES, HORNER, HOOPER, LEISTER, SYMES, GROVES, BASSAN, MORRIS, SHIELDS, CRAWFORD, HAYDEN, WRAY, CROWDEN, ALLEN, SMITH, MENDOZA, G. VOAKES, SCOTT-WATSON, and Masters ROY CROWDEN, GORDON GAY, and JAMES HORNE.

The Play produced for HERBERT TRENCH by E. LYALL SWETE.

Dances arranged by Miss INA PELLY.

All omissions and alterations of the text have been made with the express sanction of M. MAETERLINCK

Act I. ..	.. Scene ..	..	The Woodcutter's Cottage
Act II. ..	.. Scene 1 ..	..	The Fairy Bérylune's Palace
	Scene 2 ..	..	The Land of Memory
	Scene 3 ..	..	Before the Wall
	Scene 4 ..	..	The Kingdom of the Past
Act III. ..	.. Scene ..	..	The Kingdom of the Future
Act IV. ..	.. Scene ..	..	The Palace of Night
Act V. ..	.. Scene ..	..	The Palace of Happiness
Act VI. ..	.. Scene 1 ..	..	The Leavetaking
	Scene 2 ..	..	The Awakening in the Woodcutter's Cottage

There will be an interval of seven minutes after Acts I., II., III., ten minutes after Act IV., and seven minutes after Act V.

Lessee and Manager .. .. .. FREDERICK HARRISON
Director .. HERBERT TRENCH.

BUSINESS MANAGER ... ... HORACE WATSON.

"THE BLUE BIRD" REVIVED.

Dec 19

The beauties of The Blue Bird were added to on Monday, when Macterlinck'a enthralling fairy play, plus an entirely new act, was revived for a short season at the Haymarket. The new scenes, which pass in the Palace of Happiness, are conceived in the same fantastic spirit as the other portions of the play, and open upon a banqueting hall, wherein the Luxuries are indulging in bacchanalian revels. There are the Luxury of Being Rich, the Luxury of being a Landowner Satisfied, the Luxury of Eating When Not Hungry, and of Drinking When Not Thirsty, the Luxury of Knowing Nothing, all revelling together in an orgie that never ends. Tyltyl is invited to join in the feast, and only with the greatest difficulty is prevented by Light; even the faithful Dog yielding to the temptations of a succulent bone and rebelling against his young master. But Tyltyl turns his ring, and speedily the Luxuries, shorn of their fine clothes, are changed into Miseries, who in turn give way to the Joys—the Joy of Seeing and the Joy of Understanding fraternising with the Joy of Pain and the Joy of Being Just. The peerless Joy of Maternal Love comes on the scene in the person of the children's mother, who clasps her offspring in her arms, thus realising the crowning Happiness of Home.

To-day, Tuesday, December 20th, at 2.30, will be presented for the First Time

An Entirely New and Original Play, with Music, called

"OUR LITTLE CINDERELLA"

By LEO TREVOR

Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS Music by HERMANN LÖHR

LORD PUNTERFIELD		Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
THE PRINCE		Mr. HUBERT BROMILOW
HURLINGHAM		Mr. ROBERT AVERELL
ROEHAMPTON	(Of the Life Guards Green)	Mr. NEVILLE KNOX
RANELAGH		Mr. RIX CURTIS
MASSENGER	(Servant to Lord Punterfield)	Mr. HENRY J. FORD
LORD CHAMBERLAIN		Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
MRS. BLOOMER	(A rich widow)	Miss MAIDIE HOPE
MARATHON	(His Lordship's step-daughters)	Miss ETHEL MORRISON
CRECY		By permission of F. C. WHITNEY, Esq. Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
WITCH HAZEL		Miss DOROTHY DAYNE
CINDERELLA		Miss MARGERY MAUDE

FAIRY TEENIE WEE	Miss RENEE MAYER	FAIRY TINYMITE	Miss BEATRICE GRIFFITHS
FAIRY ICKLESING	Miss NORA ROYLANCE	FAIRY WIGGLEY WOG	Miss DOROTHY TURNER
FAIRY SQUIBS	Miss MARCELLE KREUTZ	COACHMAN	Miss DOLLY SUMMERS

Fairies, Guests, Huntsmen, Trumpeters, etc.:—

Miss LILIAN DREW	Miss KATHLEEN HAYES	Miss MURIEL HALL
Miss NORA LAMING	Miss EVA ROWLAND	Miss GERTRUDE HANNE
Miss HILDA BARITA	Miss DOROTHY LANE	Miss DORIS CHAMPNEYS
Miss VIOLET LINGARD	Miss LILIAN BELL	Miss CLARISSA BATCHELOR
Miss ELSIE SPENCER	Mr. PATRICK MURRAY	Mr. PERCIVAL THORNE
Mr. WILFRED ESSEX	Mr. KINGSFORD SHORTLAND	Mr. ALBERT DERRICK
Mr. CHARLES STEDMAN	Mr. GEORGE GREGSON	Mr. OTTO ALEXANDER

The Scene is laid in Fairyland, and the period "Once upon a Time."

The Musical Numbers and Dances arranged by Mr. HARRY GRATTAN.
Orchestra under the direction of Mr. JOHN ANSELL.

THE PLAYHOUSE
MA
20/12/1910

Orch. Stall

II 18

This to be retained

Act I. Lowater Hall. The Seat of Lord Punterfield. Bruce Smith
Act II. Anteroom in the Prince's Palace ... Bruce Smith
Act III. Garden at Lowater Hall ... ... W. T. Hemsley

The Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN, from designs by KARL.
Corsets by "SANDOW'S PATENT AND PERFECT CORSET" Co., 32, St. James's Street, S.W.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

Stage Manager - - - - - Mr. JOHN HARWOOD

"OUR LITTLE CINDERELLA"

FOR MATINEES ONLY

WILL BE PRESENTED

On Thursday next, December 22nd, and on MONDAYS THURSDAYS
TUESDAYS FRIDAYS } at 2.30

The Music, which is now in the press, will shortly be Published by Messrs. CHAPPELL & CO.
ALL SEATS CAN NOW BE BOOKED.

Every Night and Every Evening at 9

"A SINGLE MAN"

CYRIL MAUDE

ERNEST MAINWARING
VERA COBURN

"BETWEEN

Matinee of both pla

SAVOURY"

& Saturday at 2.30

GENERAL MANAGER

Mr. ALFRED TURNER

People whose tastes are just a trifle fastidious are apt to feel a little "out of it" at the pantomime season. Delicate digestions cannot endure big dinners, and prefer lighter and more delicate repasts. They will find at the Playhouse a pantomime more ethereal and no less amusing than the more elaborate productions of the "festive season." In the first place, the book has been rewritten in quite a pleasing spirit. There are touches throughout of real art; as, for instance, Cinderella's brief account of her first interview with the Prince—a "lightning sketch" of both their characters. Of course, it would have been mere waste to provide subtle dialogue for ordinary pantomime purposes; but the clever author of the "book," Mr. Leo Trevor, knew whom he was writing for, and wrote accordingly. He has managed to retain the ideas of the regulation Cinderella "Annual" and to develop them in an artistic spirit that is very acceptable. Mr. Arthur Wimperis's lyrics are remarkably neat and smart; and Mr. Hermann Löhr's music is just what is required for the purpose. The result is the achievement of complete success.

The fairy story is pretty closely followed; and though, of course, no attempt is made at gorgeous spectacle, what is done in the way of dressing and mounting is done in the most perfect way. Whether it is the fairy godmother descending from over the fireplace, or a bevy of Court ladies passing under the joined swords of their gallants, there are an attention to detail and a liberality in the supply of it which are quite worthy of Mr. Maude's reputation for these qualities. Charming accessory notions—such as Cinderella's assistance by trained pigeons—crop up at times; and it is evident that a pleasant fancy has presided over the whole production. Cinderella, it should be stated, first meets the Prince not at the ball, but in the forest, where he falls in love with her; and his difficulty is that, unless he marries almost immediately his kingdom will pass to his younger brother. It is the fairies who try to get Cinderella away in time from the ball, and Lord Punterfield, the equivalent of the Baron, has once been a Court official, and has lost his money betting on the Turf. These are trifles, but they help to give to the new Cinderella much of its modern charm.

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S S.W.

SPECIAL CHRISTMAS MATINEES

Mr. F. R. BENSON (by arrangement with Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER) will give a MATINEE EVERY AFTERNOON at 2.30 (Saturdays excepted), commencing TO-DAY (WEDNESDAY), DECEMBER 21st, 1910, of

THE PIPER

(THE PIPER OF HAMELIN)

By JOSEPHINE PRESTON PEABODY

The Piper	Strolling Players	Mr. F. R. BENSON
Michael (the Sword Eater)		Mr. ERIC MAXON
Cheat-the-Devil		Mr. ALFRED WILD
Jacobus (the Burgomeister)	Men of Hamelin	Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE
Kurt (the Syndic)		Mr. J. M. JOHNSTON
Peter (the Cobbler)		Mr. WILFRID CAITHNESS
Hans (the Butcher)		Mr. HARRY CAINE
Axel (the Smith)		Mr. JOHN HOWELL
Martin (the Watch)		Mr. JOHN MACLEAN
Peter (the Sacristan)		Mr. NIGEL BARRIE
Anselm (a Young Priest)		Mr. MURRAY CARRINGTON
Old Claus (a Miser)		Mr. J. FRASER OUTRAM
Town Crier		Mr. FRANK GROWCOTT
Jan	Children	Miss HETTY KENYON
Hansel		Miss KATHLEEN YORKE
Ilse		Miss CLARISSA FELTOUN
Trude		Miss MARIE SEWELL
Rudi		Master CHARLES EVANS
Veronika ... (Wife of Kurt) ...		Miss MARION TERRY
Babara ... (Daughter of Jacobus) ...		Miss VIOLET FAREBROTHER
Wife of Hans the Butcher		Miss MARJORIE PATTERSON
Wife of Axel the Smith		Miss FIELDEN KAYE
Wife of Martin the Watch		Miss ETHEL McDOWALL
Old Ursula		Miss ELINOR AICKIN

Solos in Acts II. and III. by Mr. DENNIS DREW.

Act I. ... ... The Market Place in Hamelin
Act II. ... ... Inside the "Hollow Hill."
Act III. ... ... The Crossways
Act IV. ... ... The Market Place in Hamelin

One quite sees the difficulty that Miss Peabody faced when she attempted to turn the old story of the "Piper of Hamelin" into a four-act drama. Browning, in his well-known poem, got all there was to get out of the anecdote. The authoress of the Stratford "Prize Play"—which was first performed in that city in July last, after winning the prize offered by the Committee of the Festival for the best play worthy of production at the Shakespeare Commemoration—in order to make matter for the four acts, has had to invent a love interest and to much elaborate the character of the Piper. It is greatly to her credit that she has managed to sustain the interest of the audience to the end. This is chiefly to be attributed to the Piper in her hands becoming a striking and interesting personage. He belongs to the class of born Bohemians, the people who would live where there are "No walls, no hedges,

No tolls, no taxes—rats nor aldermen. . . .
Along with squirrels, and bright fish
And bubbling water."

He has a loving memory of his mother, a wretched woman who, as he says,

"Was a thing so trodden, lost, and sad
I cannot think that she was ever young
Save in the cherishing voice. . . .
She starved and sang;
And like the wind, she roved and lurked and shuddered
Outside your lighted windows, and fled by,
Storm-hunted, trying to outstrip the snow."

When such a character comes into contact with hard, grasping Hamelin people like the Burgomaster Jacobus, and the Syndic Kurt, there must be conflict. The Piper is the proprietor of a portable theatre, in which mystery plays are performed, and this is made the excuse for refusing to him the reward which he has been promised for ridding the city of rats. As the authorities say,

"He is a stroller,
A wastrel, and the shadow of a man.
. . . . . Nothing is his.
He may not carry arms; nor have redress
For any harm that men should put on him."

So they offer him only fifteen guilders for the great service which he has rendered to the city. In revenge, the Piper plays a tune which none can resist, and the citizens' children, in a body, follow him into a cave in a hill.

Here the material supplied by the old story is exhausted, and the authoress has recourse to her invention. One of the players, Michael, has fallen in love with Barbara, the Burgomaster's daughter, and she returns his affection. When the citizens find that their children are gone, they decide to make a kind of Iphigenia of Barbara by dooming her to confinement in a convent. She implores Michael to induce the Piper to restore the children. Michael, however, is true to his chief, and says he is "helpless to save her."

But if Michael will not plead for the parents there is one of them who will. Veronika, a sweet, affectionate woman who has married the churlish Kurt for the sake of maintenance for herself and her child, prays to the Piper to give her back her little lame boy, Jan, who has already found a soft place in the Piper's heart. He answers her bitterly:

"What's breath and blood—what are the hearts of children
To Hamelin, while it heaps its money-bags?
. . . . . that town
Stands as the will of other towns, a score,
That makes us wandering poor the things we are!
It stands for all, unto the end of time,
That turns this bright world black and the sun cold,
With hate, and hoarding; all-triumphant greed
That spreads above the roots of all despair,
And misery, and rotting of the soul.
Now shall they learn—if money-bags can learn—
What turns the bright world black, and the sun cold;
And what's that creature that they call a child,
. . . I save the children—yes, I save them, so."

In a scene which is perhaps better left unanalysed, the Piper pleads with the figure on the Crucifix in the market-place that he—the Piper—may be allowed to keep the children. The meaning of this scene is not very clear. The Piper's act appears to have been a matter of revenge for ill-treatment in connection with a business transaction, and his address to our Saviour thus seems to border on irreverence. Possibly there is some deeper meaning which we may have overlooked, but that is the impression created on us by the passages. They could not, however, be easily eliminated, as they form the turning-point of the plot. The Christ is silent; and the Piper bows to the implied command to restore the children, which he does in the last act of the play.

Duke of York's Theatre.

Sole Lessee and Manager - - - CHARLES FROHMAN.

Monday, December 26th, 1910, at 2 o'clock prompt,

CHARLES FROHMAN presents

PETER PAN

Or, THE BOY WHO WOULDN'T GROW UP.

By J. M. BARRIE.

The Music Composed by John Crook.

Peter Pan		PAULINE CHASE
Jas. Hook	(The Pirate Captain)	E. HOLMAN CLARK
Mr. Darling		DONALD CALTHROP
Mrs. Darling		VIVA BIRKETT
Wendy Moira Angela Darling		GERTRUDE LANG
John Napoleon Darling		HERBERT HOLLOM
Michael Nicholas Darling		CHARLES THOMAS
Nana		EDWARD SILLWARD
Tinker Bell		JANE WREN
Tootles	Members of Peter's Band	DOROTHY MINTO
Nibs		FRANCES KAPSTOWNE
Slightly		A. W. BASKCOMB
Curly		MARY GLYNNE
1st Twin		GWENDOLEN BROGDEN
2nd Twin		DORIS MACINTYRE
Smee	Pirates	GEORGE SHELTON
Gentleman Starkey		CHARLES TREVOR
Cookson		CHARLES MEDWIN
Mullins		CHRIS WALKER
Cecco		FREDERICK ANNERLEY
Jukes		JAMES ENGLISH
Noodler		JOHN KELT
		E. YOUNG, A. WADE and S. SPENCER
Great Big Little Panther	Redskins	HUMPHREY WARDEN
Tiger Lily		MARGARET FRASER
Braves and Squaws	(Redskins)	LILY McINTYRE, ROLLO DEAS; GLADYS JESSON, RUBY BLYTHE, DORA SEVENING
Mermaid		FLORENCE PIGGOTT
Baby Mermaid		STEPHANIE BELL
Liza	(Author of the Play)	STEPHANIE BELL
Crocodile		D. SEARLE & S. P. NAGLE
Ostrich		E. MARINI
Pack of Wolves		W. ANDERSON, W. SCOTT, G. CARR, J. CHILD, W. CHILD, A. H. KENT

Act I. OUR EARLY DAYS. Scene, The Nursery.

Act II. THE NEVER, NEVER, NEVER LAND.
Scene, The House we built for Wendy.

Act III. MAROONER'S ROCK, OR THE MERMAID'S LAGOON.
(Showing an average ten minutes in Peter's life)

Act IV. OUR HOME UNDER THE GROUND.

Act V. HOME, SWEET HOME.
Scene 1. The Pirate Ship.
Scene 2. A last glimpse of the Redskins.
Scene 3. The Nursery.
Scene 4. Outside the House.
Scene 5. The Tree Tops.

The Scenery Painted by W. Hann & Son.

The Play Produced under the Direction of Dion Boucicault.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1910.

RETURN OF "PETER PAN."

SIXTH ANNUAL REVIVAL.

"Peter Pan" having come to be regarded as the property of that large section of the public classed as "playgoers" was, in accordance with their demand, revived for the Christmas holidays (and a few weeks longer) at the Duke of York's Theatre yesterday. This is the sixth consecutive year that the true and honest account of Peter's capture of the Darling family has come to be played on the stage of the Duke of York's Theatre.

Whatever may be the plans that Mr. Frohman has for this theatre, "Peter" comes along at the invitation of the British People and takes possession of it. Mr. Barrie, the very discoverer and true biographer of the gallant young fellow who refused to grow up, is just as powerless now to silence "Peter" as Mr. Frohman is. It is the adventurous life of the Never-Never-Land that has made the play. The sense of adventure in the youth of the British Isles makes Peter the ideal hero of the stage, and Captain James Hook, a villain bad enough to be deprived of jam at breakfast.

The young people may not understand Peter's immortal saying, when his life is in sore danger—"to die will be an awful big adventure"; but they do understand that Peter, or Mr. Barrie perhaps, knew a lot about flying years and years ago. There is not a child anywhere, even those who have left school more years than are good for them, who does not wish he could have had an invitation to spend an evening in that Home under Ground, to be watched over also by brave Red Skins, and to anticipate flying home in the Moonlight across the wide country and over sleeping villages to where Mrs. Darling sat up waiting for the wanderers.

Everybody acted splendidly yesterday. Miss Pauline Chase, Miss Gertrude Lang, Mr. Holman Clark, Mr. Baskcomb, Mr. Donald Calthrop, Miss Viva Birkett, and above all Mr. George Shelton as the immortal pirate Smee.

J. W.

SAVOY THEATRE.

Manager ... ... Mr. G. A. RICHARDSON.
Secretary Savoy Theatre & Operas, Ltd.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 26th (Boxing Day) and Daily at 2 p.m. until further notice.

Messrs. STEDMAN'S MAGNIFICENT CHRISTMAS PRODUCTION

ALICE IN WONDERLAND

Founded on LEWIS CARROLL'S Delightful Stories, "ALICE IN WONDERLAND" and "THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS."

Book by H. SAVILLE CLARKE. Music by WALTER SLAUGHTER.

ACT 1. ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.

Mad Hatter	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
Mock Turtle	Mr. ROLAND HENRY
Gryphon	Mr. LEEDAM STANLEY
March Hare	Miss DORIS WALKER
White Rabbit	Miss CHRISTINE JENSEN
Caterpillar	Mr. DAN LENO
Duchess	Miss MAISIE RIVERSDALE
Cook	Miss YVONNE SCHOFIELD
Cheshire Cat	Miss BERTHA SCHWARTZ
Dormouse	Miss MATTIE BLOCK
First Lobster	Miss HILDA BOOT
First Fairy	Miss VIOLET DENZEL
King of Hearts	Mr. BRYAN O'SULLIVAN
Queen of Hearts	Miss ELLA ANDERSON
Knave of Hearts	Mr. ROY JEFFERIES
Executioner	Mr. ALEX. M. LEE

ALICE - - - - AND Miss IVY SAWYER

ACT 2. THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS.

Mad Hatter	Mr. FRANKLYN VERNON
White Queen	Miss ELLA ANDERSON
White King	Mr. ROY JEFFERIES
Lily	Miss ELAINE LEA
Rose	Miss WINIFRED LINDER
Red Queen	Miss MAISIE RIVERSDALE
Red King	Mr. DAN LENO
Oyster Queen	Miss HILDA BOOT
First Oyster	Miss BERTHA SCHWARTZ
Second Oyster	Miss CHRISTINE JENSEN
Tweedledee	Mr. ROLAND HENRY
Tweedledum	Mr. LEEDAM STANLEY
Carpenter and Humpty Dumpty	Mr. ALEX. M. LEE
Walrus	Mr. BRYAN O'SULLIVAN
Unicorn	Master FRISTON
Lion	Master BOARD

ALICE - - - - AND Miss IVY SAWYER

SAVOY THEATRE.

Manager ... ... Mr. G. A. RICHARDSON
Secretary Savoy Theatre & Operas, Ltd.

MR. BRANDON THOMAS'S SEASON.

BOXING NIGHT and EVERY EVENING at 8.45

The Famous Comedy

CHARLEY'S AUNT

By BRANDON THOMAS.

Characters:

Colonel Sir Francis Chesney, Bart. (late Indian Service) .. Mr. THEO. McCAUSLAND STEWART
Stephen Spettigue (Solicitor, London) .. Mr. HENRY HARE
Jack Chesney .. } Undergraduates at St. Olde's College { Mr. CECIL KERR
Charley Wykeham .. { Mr. ROBERT BURNETT
Lord Fancourt Babberley { Mr. HUGH WAKEFIELD
Brassett (a College Scout) .. .. Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON
Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez (from Brazil) Miss AUDREY STAFFORD
Kitty Verdun (Spettigue's Ward) .. Miss BERTHA NORTHAM
Amy Spettigue (Spettigue's Niece) .. Miss PHYLLIS BACK
Ela Delahay (an Orphan) .. .. Miss SYLVIA MORRIS

Act 1 .. .. .. Jack Chesney's Rooms in College.
"When Pious Frauds are Dispensations."—HUDIBRAS.

Act 2 .. .. Gardens Outside Jack Chesney's Rooms.
"While there's Tea there's Hope."—PINERO.

Act 3 .. .. Drawing Room in Spettigue's House.
"Dinner Lubricates Business."—BOSWELL.

TIME—THE PRESENT. Commemoration Week, Oxford.

Preceded each evening at 8 by a One-Act Play—

The Lancashire Sailor

By BRANDON THOMAS.

Ralph Ormerod (a Farmer)	Mr. HENRY HARE
Erasmus Ellerby (a Solicitor)	Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON
Alfred (adopted by Ormerod)	Mr. STANLEY HARRISON
Alice (Ormerod's Daughter)	Miss BERTHA NORTHAM
Martha Remnant (Housekeeper)	Miss NANCY HARDING

SCENE—THE OLD FARM.

During the Evening the Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. W. DEVIN, will perform—

OVERTURE ... ... "La Sirène" ... ... Auber

SELECTION ... ... "College Songs" ... ... arranged by J. W. Ivimey

1. Carmen Etonense. 2. Wanderer—University. 3. Songs—Harrow.
4. Ducker—Harrow. 5. Eton Boating Song. 6. Left Right Harrow.
7. Forty Years On—Harrow. 8. Willow the King—University.
9. Io Triomphe—University. 10. Floreat Rugby.
11. Old Tow'er—University. 12. Dulce Domum—Winchester.
13. John Peel—University. 14. There is a Tavern—Yale.
15. Updee—Harvard. 16. Carmen Herodium Wellington.

SELECTION ... ... "Mignon" ... ... Thomas

SELECTION ... ... "The Dollar Princess" ... ... Fall

PRICES OF ADMISSION.

Boxes, £2 2s. and £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Stalls, 6s. Pitt Stalls, 3s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 5s. First Circle, 4s. and 3s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

CHILDREN HALF-PRICE TO RESERVED SEATS.

General Manager } (for Mr. Brandon Thomas) { Mr. CECIL BARTH
Acting Manager } { Mr. W. G. BOTELL
Stage Manager { Mr. ROBERT BURNETT
Business Manager (for Savoy Theatre) Mr. HARRY P. TOWERS

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE

Under the Sole Management of Mr. W. H. C. NATION.

EVERY EVENING AT 8,

Will be produced a New and Powerful Drama, in Three Acts,
Adapted from "LA CITERNE d'ALBI," by D'ENNERY,
Author of "Paillasse" (the French version of "Belphegor, the Mountebank"), entitled

THE MYSTERY OF THE WALLED-UP WELL

Hubert ..	.. (called the Catalonian)	.. Mr. HENRY AINSWORTH
Lalouette ..	.. (Postillion) ..	.. Mr. GEORGE DELAFORCE
M. Delalonde	.. .. ..	.. Mr. CHARLES LUDLOW
Jules Dervilliers	.. (a young Doctor) ..	.. Mr. CYRIL DANE
Francois ..	} Postillions {	.. Miss BABBS JOHNSON
Auguste ..	} {	.. Miss WINNIFRED HAYS
Toni ..	} {	.. Miss IDA LAURENCE
Madame Delporte	.. (Landlady of an Inn)	.. Miss UNA BRUCKSHAW
Madame Leblanc	{ a Rich Widow, Proprietress of the "Post House" }	Miss RUBY FORBES
Jeannette ..	.. (Servant of Madame Leblanc)	.. Miss VIOLET CLARK
Antoinette ..	.. (Daughter of Madame Delporte)	.. Miss MAY HOLLOM

Postillions, Villagers, &c.

Act I. .. .. A VILLAGE GREEN AND POST HOUSE
Act II. .. ..THE FARM OF THE RED GRANGE
Act III. .. .. A ROOM IN MADAME DELPORTE'S INN

THE SCENE IS LAID NEAR MONTPELLIER.

Places Booked to All Parts of the House (except Pit and Gallery).

☛ POPULAR PRICES. ☚

Stalls, 6s. and 5s.; Circle, 4s. and 3s.; Upper Circle, 2s.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

DOORS OPEN AT 7.30. COMMENCE AT 8.

ACTING MANAGER AND TREASURER	MR. T. H. FRIEND
MUSICAL DIRECTOR AND CONDUCTOR	MR. NAPOLEON LAMBELET
ASSISTANT STAGE MANAGER	MR. TERRY HURST
MACHINIST	MR. ALEX. ARNOTT
PRESS REPRESENTATIVE...	MR. R. THURSTON HOPKINS

264

THE ALDWYCH THEATRE.

Lessee and Manager ... ... FREDK. MELVILLE.

BOXING DAY, DEC. 26th, at 2.30 & 7.45. TWICE DAILY CHRISTMAS WEEK at 2.30 & 7.45.

AFTER CHRISTMAS WEEK,

3 Matinees Weekly WEDNESDAY. THURSDAY AND SATURDAY at 2.30.

EVERY EVENING AT 7.45,

WALTER MELVILLE

Presents the "People we meet every day" Play,

THE GIRL WHO TOOK THE WRONG TURNING

Written by WALTER MELVILLE. Music by EDWARD REEVES.

Scenery by H. K. BROWNE, and Assistants. Mechanical and other Effects by TOM REES. Play produced by WALTER MELVILLE.

Willie Mason ...	... (a British Tar) ...	... Mr. H. E. HERBERT
Jack Fenton, Lucy's Husband	(a Stableman)	... Mr. E. VASSALL VAUGHAN
Johnny Walker	(a Racing Man, afterwards Married)	... Mr. FRED INGRAM
Joe Fletcher ...	Employed at	... Mr. JOHN WILSON
Peter	Lord Summer's	... Mr. G. BRACKLEY
Sandy ...	Stable	... Mr. JACK CLARKE
Davis	(a Milkman) ...	... Mr. T. EDWARDS
Mr. Dough ...	... (a Baker) ...	... Mr. GEORGE WRIGHT
Mr. Grabball ...	... (Taxes) ...	... Mr. G. LACEY
Bill Slater ...	(a Man with a Past)	... Mr. SYDNEY SARL
Richard Fenton	(a Retired Gentleman)	... Mr. ELLIS J. PRESTON
James Harcourt	(an Undiscovered Criminal)	... Mr. H. LANE BAYLIFF
John Mathews	Servants of Richard Fenton	... Mr. C. CARTER
Maggie	Servants of Richard Fenton	... Miss ALICE BENTON
P.C. Sharp	(not a Bad Sort) ...	... Mr. WALTER THORNTON
Poppit	(a Pickpocket) ...	... Mr. FRANK NORMAN
Poppy Slater	afterwards Poppy Fitzgerald, the Music Hall Star	Miss MARIE WRIGHT
Vesta Le Clere ...	(the Mysterious Rich Lady)	... Miss OLIVE WARNE
Lucy Coventry	(the Girl who took the Right Turning) AND	... Miss ALICE BELMORE
Sophie Coventry	(the Girl who took the Wrong Turning)	Miss AURIOL LEE

263

To be followed by a Musical and Satirical Play, in Three Scenes, by V. PARK, introducing several New Songs by W. H. C. NATION, entitled

The Kingdom of Kennaquhair

129TH TIME

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE.

On Boxing Night, Dec. 26, a Drama, in Three Acts, Adapted from La Citerne d'Albi by D'Ennery, entitled

"THE MYSTERY OF THE WALLED-UP WELL."

Hubert .....Mr. HENRY AINSWORTH
Lalouette .....Mr. GEORGE DELAFORCE
M. Delalonde .....Mr. CHARLES LUDLOW
Jules Dervilliers .....Mr. CECIL DANE
François .....Miss BABS JOHNSON
Auguste .....Miss WINNIFRED HAYS
Toni .....Miss IDA LAURENCE
Madame Delporte .....Miss UNA BEFORSHAW
Madame Leblanc .....Miss RUBY FORBES
Jeannette .....Miss VIOLET CLARK
Antoinette .....Miss MAY HOLLOM

Produced on Boxing Night by Mr. W. H. C. Nation, the English adaptation of D'Ennery's play should suit the taste of admirers of sensational drama. In three short acts is unfolded a story of treachery and attempted murder, but the pervading gloom is eventually lightened by a happy ending. The villain of the piece is Hubert, also known as the Catalonian. He is a postillion, but, discontented with his humble position in life, he aspires to the hand of Mme. Leblanc, a rich widow, and proprietress of the village "Post House." But having already promised to marry Antoinette, the daughter of Mme. Delporte, the landlady of an inn, he finds his ambitious plans checked. He thereupon attempts to murder the girl, and disposes of what he believes to be the dead body by placing it in a disused well. But Jules Dervilliers, a young doctor, hearing a groan from the well, discovers the apparently dying girl and restores her to health. Mme. Delporte, who has been told in a dream that her daughter did not die of consumption, as was reported, is overjoyed at seeing her alive, while the would-be murderer is arrested for this crime.

Melville melodrama is again the holiday attraction at the Aldwych, and the thrilling situations, effective curtains, and funny comedy contained in Mr. Walter Melville's sensational "people we meet every day" play—first produced at the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, on Oct. 1, 1905—are likely to draw large audiences for many months to come, judging by the crowded houses and enthusiastic receptions which have ruled this week. The girl who takes the wrong turning is, it will be remembered, pretty Sophie Coventry, who, discontented with her simple life in the country, easily falls a victim to the alluring picture conjured up by the vicious Vesta Le Clere, who tells her that such a pretty girl as Sophie may lead a life of luxury in London if she will follow her instructions. Vesta, in association with James Harcourt, "an undiscovered criminal," carries on a gambling club; and it is to this undesirable place that Sophie is taken by Vesta, where she is seen fashionably attired, engaged in wheedling money from an elderly half-intoxicated roué, which is handed to Vesta. Jolly British tar, Willie Mason, returns home and learns the truth as to her disappearance, and also when he meets her in London, and is so scornfully treated by Sophie. Finally, of course, she takes her life of pleasure, and returns to her sister Lucy's cottage, where the erring girl is freely forgiven by Willie and Lucy, to whom she had also behaved most cruelly. There is another hero besides Willie, Jack Fenton, who has been cast off by his wealthy father for marrying Lucy against his wish, and who is accused by the villain—the actual perpetrator of the crime—of murdering the old man, and is imprisoned. Bill Slater, "a man with a past," is, however, able to frustrate the scoundrelly Harcourt, who is eventually taken off to durance vile, and Jack is reinstated to his long-suffering wife, the vicious Vesta being killed in a terrific struggle in trying to prevent Sophie from escaping from her infamous house.

ACT I. ... Scene 1 ... THE RACING STABLES, NEWMARKET

THE POOR GIRL AND THE RICH LADY.

Her Face is her Fortune—The Fascination of a Skirt—The Sailor's Present.

The Gates of Hell are open day and night, smooth the descent and easy the way.—DRYDEN.

Scene 2 ... ... "The Rutland Arms," Newmarket

Bill Slater in the Web—All women are good, some good for something, some good for nothing—The Sailor's Gift.

Scene 3 ... ... Jack Fenton's Cottage

SILKS, SATINS, AND RAGS. THE SISTERS.

With fingers weary and worn, with eyelids heavy and red,
A woman sat in unwomanly rags, plying her needle and thread.

A Poor Girl's Temptation—"Let me take you out of this life into a new one"—"Now you look like a Lady"—The Quarrel—The Parting of the Way—The Accusation.

Act II. ... Scene 1 ... ... OUTSIDE THE COTTAGE

The Relentless Father—The Man who marries the Girl he Loves—Three Marriages, More Trouble—The Busy Bees—The Sailor's Home-coming—She Promised to Marry me when I Returned.

Scene 2 ... ... Vesta Le Clere's House in London

The New Life—A Painted Face—The Wrong Turning—The Sailor and his Lass—Something amiss.

Scene 3 ... ... Richard Fenton's Mansion in Maida Vale

The Cruel Father—Making of a New Will—Doing a Friend a Good Turn—Your Life's in Danger—Too Late—The Old Fox in Hiding—He has Killed his own Father.

Act III. ... Scene 1 ... ... THE MUSIC HALL STAR AT HOME

Married Life—The Old Fox burns the Will—The Sailor's Love for a Lost Woman—This Cross once belonged to me—The Results of Matrimony—Off to the Alhambra.

Scene 2 ... Vesta Le Clere's House, near Tottenham Court Road

Bill Slater plays to Win—The Old Fox at Work—Money, how Women can get it.

Scene 3 ... ... Outside Vesta Le Clere's House

The Sailor's Lament—The Lost Woman—The Light in the Window.

Scene 4 .. ... LEICESTER SQUARE—Life in London

THE MEETING OF THE SISTERS. RICH AND POOR.

A Charge of Robbery—The Poor Sister finds a Friend.

Act IV. ... Scene 1 ... ... VESTA LE CLERE'S HOUSE

A Ray of Light—The Path you've taken must continue.

THE FIGHT FOR LIFE. DEATH OF VESTA. TURNING BACK.

I loved—but those I loved are gone; How cheerless feels the heart alone,
Had friend—my early friends are fled: When all its former hopes are dead.—BYRON.

Scene 2 ... ... "The Fox and Goose Inn," near Newmarket

Bill Slater plays his Last Card—Trapped.

Scene 3 ... ... The Old Home, Newmarket

Did Spring last ever, 'twould lose its sweetness; 'Tis change that makes the world's completeness—
If flowers bloomed always, we'd cast them by: The sweetest laugh succeeds the sigh.—O'CONNELL.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR - - - THOMAS P. FISH.

OVERTURE ... ..."The Girl who Took the Wrong Turning"... ... ... Reeves
RAMONA (Lily of the Prairie) ... "Intermezzo" ... ... Johnson

SELECTION ... ... "Pélissiana Songs" ... ... Pelissier
VALSE ... ... "Princess May" ... ... Waldteufel

Miss AUDIOL LEE's Dresses by Madame HARBOUR, 91 Oxford Street.

All Refreshments of the Best Quality and at POPULAR PRICES.

POPULAR PRICES:—Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s. & £1 1s. (4 persons). Stalls, 5s., & 3s. Dress Circle, 3s., 2s. 6d. & 2s. Upper Circle, 1s. 6d Pit, 1s. Gallery, 6d.
Box Office (G. WILLIAMS) open from 10 to 10. Phone 2315 Gerrard.

ACTING MANAGER ... ... Mr. HARRY A. CHAPPELL
STAGE MANAGERS ... ... Mr. ELLIS J. PRESTON and Mr. EDMUND F. KENNEDY

265

THE PALLADIUM,

Argyll Street, Oxford Circus, W.

At the opening of each Performance Afternoon and Evening, December 26th, the management have arranged for a special vocal rendition of the National Anthem by Madame Maud Santley, the celebrated Prima Donna of the Royal Opera, Covent Garden.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

TWICE DAILY, AT 2 & 7-30.

THE PANTOMIME,

ENTITLED

Cinderella

By A. NEWMAN.

Music composed and arranged by H. SULLIVAN BROOKE, who will direct the Orchestra at each performance.

Special Songs introduced by permission of the following publishers:—FRANCIS, DAY & HUNTER, THE STAR PUBLISHING CO., B. FELDMAN & CO., M. WITMARK & SONS, The Ted Snyder Music and Publishing Co.

The whole produced under the direction of W. & F. MELVILLE.

Cast of Characters:

Prince Paragon	Miss JANE EVRE
Cinderella	Miss IRIS HOEY
Dandini (Valet to the Prince)	Miss SIMETA MARSDEN
Baron de No Cash	Mr. ARTHUR POOLE
Flipper and Flopper (the Baron's Retainers)	FOREMAN and FANNAN
Clorinda, Thisbe — The Ugly Sisters	Mr. K. SCOTT BARRIE, Miss FLORENCE SMITHERS
Godmother (The Fairy Crystal)	Miss JOSEPHINE SULLIVAN
Spirit of the Slipper	Miss MARJORY CARPENTER
Demon Malvino (a bad Spirit)	Mr. GRIFFITHS MOSS
Hate, Malice, Greed, Jealousy — His Demoniacal Imps	Mr. J. K. BIRTWISTLE, Mr. ALEX. SOUTHCLIFFE, Mr. BERT LEVERTON, Mr. HENRY COLLINS
Gold Stick, Silver Stick, Copper Stick, Walking Stick, Sugar Stick, Drum Stick, Candle Stick, White Stick — The Prince's Attendants	Miss OLIVE TEMPEST, Miss FLO GARNER, Miss MABEL CLIFFORD, Miss VIOLET BELLEW, Miss MARJORY BATTIS, Miss BLANCHE THORPE, Miss EVELYN AYLES, Miss FLORENCE ELLIOTT
The Giraffe, The Monkey, Mrs. Monkey, MasterMonkey, Bear, The Elephant, Lion	THE DONALDSON TROUPE
Motor Driver
Johnny Woggle	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK.
Buttons	Mr. HARRY GARDNER.
	Mr. HARRY WELDON

Courtiers, Bridesmaids, Foresters, Pages, Huntsmen, etc., etc.

"CINDERELLA" AT THE LYCEUM.

Produced on Boxing Day.

Scenery by R. G. OLDHAM, D. G. HALL, and LYCEUM STUDIO.
Costumes by Mrs. WHELAN, Miss WHELAN and Assistants,
Miss FISHER, JOHN HYMAN & SON, and ALIAS.
Floral Decorations by J. BAUMLER & Co.
Wigs by C. H FOX. Mechanical Effects by TOM REES.
Properties by H. GREEN and Assistants.
Electrical Effects by FRANK B. FIDGE.
The Ballets invented and arranged by Mdlle. ROSA.
Miss LOTTIE STONE'S TROUPE OF LADY DANCERS.
Solo Dances by Miss MARJORY CARPENTER.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Part I.

SCENE 1.—The Realms of Fancy. The Demon Forge.
SCENE 2.—A GLADE IN THE FOREST.
SCENE 3.—The Baron's Study.
SCENE 4.—The Baron's Kitchen.
SCENE 5.—DREAMLAND.
The Evolution of Magic Coach and Ponies from Pumpkin, Rats and Mice.

INTERVAL.

Part II.

SCENE 6.—Outside the Zoo.
SCENE 7.—THE ZOO.
SCENE 8.—Exterior of Prince's Palace.
SCENE 9.—THE BALL ROOM.
SCENE 10.—The Haunted Heath.
SCENE 11.—Exterior of the Baron's Mansion.
SCENE 12.—THE WEDDING IN FAIRYLAND.

CHILDREN'S COMIC

HARLEQUINADE.

Clown ... ... Mr. HARRY GARDNER

Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

LYCEUM THEATRE
STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

T.R.D.L.
26/12/1910
Retain this portion while in the Theatre for One Hour after Play and deliver up when required to do so by the Officials.
Row K | No. 16
Orches. Stall

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE, LIMITED

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS.

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of

J. W. James Waters, 's

Presence on

BOXING-NIGHT

Monday Evening, Dec. 26, 1910

At 7.30 o'clock

To witness the Production of

THE CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

ENTITLED

Jack and the Beanstalk

BY

J. HICKORY WOOD, FRANK DIX and ARTHUR COLLINS.

Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by J. M. GLOVER.

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH.
Business Manager.

On BOXING-NIGHT, Monday, December 26th, at 7.30

THE CHILDREN'S PANTOMIME

JACK AND THE BEANSTALK

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

Mr. GEORGE GRAVES	as	Mrs. Halleybut
Mr. HARRY RANDALL	,,	Prince Spinach
Mr. GEORGE BARRETT	,,	Rupert Halleybut
Mr. BARRY LUPINO	,,	Alexis, The Page
Mr. JOHNNY DANVERS	,,	King Rat-a-Tat II.
Mr. ARTHUR CONQUEST	,,	Priscilla, the Cow
Mr. WILLIAM DOWNES	,,	Professor Hypno
Mr. ERNEST LANGFORD	,,	Dr. Lanky
BENNETT & MARTELL	,,	Nim and Rod
Miss DOLLY CASTLES	as	Jack Halleybut
Miss JULIA JAMES	,,	Princess Dorothy
Miss MAUDIE THORNTON	,,	Marjorie, the Maid
Miss ANITA EDIS	,,	Puck
Miss HILDA PLAYFAIR	,,	Titania
Miss KITTY EMSON	,,	Moth
Miss BETA EMSON	,,	Mustard Seed
Miss LOVELL	,,	Cobweb
Miss L. GRAHAM	,,	Peas-Blossom
Miss JIMMIE JAMES	,,	The Lord Chamberlain
Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD	,,	Uncle Tom Cobbley
Messrs. WILL & JOE PENDER	,,	Horace and Percy
Mr. CLARKE	,,	The Giant
Mr. E. MORGAN	,,	Scout-Master
Mr. WILL COMPO	,,	An Old Woman

Mesdames LEWIS, PRAGNELL, C. MURRAY, R. MURRAY, BARRINGTON, GRIMALDI.

Messrs. KEMP, BREAN, DELFOSSE, FREEMAN, REYNOLDS, BALDWIN.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

PART I.

Scene 1.	LEITH HILL, SURREY	[Henry Emden
Scene 2.	THE KING'S RECEPTION ROOM	[Henry Emden
Scene 3.	SOUR MILK FARM	[Henry Emden
Scene 4.	THE TRYSTING TREE	[Henry Emden
Scene 5.	WIDDICOMBE FAIR	[R. McCleery
Scene 6.	THE FAIRY POOL	[Henry Emden
Scene 7.	THE ENCHANTED GROVE	[Henry Emden
Scene 8.	TITANIA'S BOWER	[Henry Emden

PART II.

Scene 1.	MRS. HALLEYBUT'S COTTAGE	[Bruce Smith
Scene 2.	THE BEANSTALK	[Bruce Smith
Scene 3.	THE GIANT'S GARDEN	[Bruce Smith
Scene 4.	DUNGEON IN THE CASTLE	[Bruce Smith
Scene 5.	AT THE FOOT OF THE BEANSTALK	[R. McCleery
Scene 6.	LOVE'S TRIUMPH	[R. McCleery
Scene 7.	THE SLEEPER WAKES	[Henry Emden

HARLEQUINADE:

Scene 1. A STREET
Scene 2. AT THE DENTIST'S } Bruce Smith

Clown - - BOB PENDER

Pantaloon, WILL PENDER — Columbine, MAGGIE PENDER
Harlequin, JOE PENDER — Sergeant, WILL COMPO
Policemen, T. & G. PENDER

All the Costumes Specially Designed and supervised by COMELLI.

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Acting Manager - C. F. TAYLOR — Secretary - R. H. LINDO
Business Manager - - - SIDNEY SMITH

DRURY LANE

The Childrens Pantomime

JACK & THE BEANSTALK

1910-11

Written & Invented by
J. MICKORY WOOD, FRANK DIX
and ARTHUR COLLINS.

Photo by Dover Street Studios.

Miss ANITA EDIS.

By arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

MR. ARTHUR HARDY'S PRODUCTION.

EVERY AFTERNOON AT 2.30.

A Farcical Fantastic Play entitled

VICE VERSÂ

By F. ANSTEY.

Founded by the Author on his own Novel of the same name.

TO BE FOLLOWED BY A PLAY IN ONE ACT, ENTITLED

THE ADMIRAL SPEAKS

By MAJOR W. P. DRURY.

Francis Egerton (Lieutenant, R.N.)	Mr. ARTHUR HOLMES GORE
Violet Egerton (his Wife)	Miss CHRISTINE SILVER
Prentice (a Parlourmaid)...	Miss MAY TAVERNER
The Figurehead of Nelson	Mr. O. P. HEGGIE

Scene—Drawing Room of the Egertons' Cottage at Porchester. Time—The Evening of Trafalgar Day, Present day.

MATINEE DAILY AT 2.30.

Acting Manager - Mr. FRED PEMBERTON. Stage Manager (For Mr. Arthur Hardy) - Mr. W. W. KEENE.
Assistant Stage Manager (For Mr. Arthur Hardy) - Mr. OSWALD STRONG.

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. ARTHUR HARDY.

Business Manager - - (For Comedy Theatre) - LEONARD LILLIES

A PATRIOTIC PLAY.

A new one-act play, "The Admiral Speaks," by Major W. P. Drury, produced at the Comedy Theatre yesterday, was preceded by a short address delivered by Mr. Percy Gates, advocating the principles of the National Service League, on behalf of which the performance was given.

Between the hissing and booing of a section of the audience who wished to see the play and the applause of the majority who wished to hear the speech, it was difficult for Mr. Gates to make himself heard. The tumult gradually subsided and the play was produced.

"The Admiral Speaks" describes how a naval lieutenant's wife, having been spoken to by the ghost of Nelson, not only withdraws her opposition to her husband continuing to remain in the Service, but tells him that his duty lies in his ship. It was effectively acted by Mr. Arthur Holmes Gore and Miss Christine Silver as the husband and wife, and by Mr. O. P. Heggie as the ghost of Nelson.

D. N. Dec 28 1910

EVERY EVENING at 8.45, MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY at 2.45

Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON, by arrangement with Miss LOIE FULLER, will present for the first time in London, an unpublished Ballet, by

MOZART—

Les Petits Riens,

Expressed in movement, dance and play, by children, under the direction of Miss LOIE FULLER.

OUVERTURE—

A.	Entree de Colio Maillard	H.	Courante
B.	La poursuite	I.	Gavotte gracieuse
C.	Cache-cache	J.	Pantomime
D.	Surprise	K.	Passe-pied
E.	Idylle	L.	Gavotte sentimenta'e
F.	Gavotte Joyeuse	M.	Denouement
G.	Entree de Cupidon	N.	Gigue finale

NOTE.—This Ballet was presented at the Grand Opera, in Paris, on Thursday, 11th June, 1778, under the name of Noverre as composer. Discovered and restored to its real authorship (Mozart) by Victor Wilder.

9.40. THE FOTHERINGAY.

Arranged by PATRICK KIRWIN from THACKERAY'S "Pendennis."

The Fotheringay	GERTRUDE KINGSTON
Captain Costigan	PATRICK KIRWIN
Arthur Pendennis	EVERARD VANDERLIP
Major Pendennis (Arthur's Uncle) ...	ROBERT C. HARCOURT
Bowes	ARTHUR FAYNE

Scene—Captain Costigan's quarters in Chatteris.

The Famous Chinese Actress,

MADAME CHUNG

and her Company of Celebrated Players, direct from Pekin, China,

10 P.M.

IN

THE DRAGON OF WRATH

A Chinese Play, in Two Acts, founded on an ancient Chinese Legend.

A Princess	Madame CHUNG
A Prince	HUNG LOO
A Prince	YANGTSE CHIN
A Royal Attendant	CHING WU
Courtiers	HING QUAI, TING TONG, SING LOO, TIE HAI
Servitors	CHING CHONG, YAN TSE
Princess's Children ... ... AND	CHING WU CHUNG, TIEN WU CHUNG

Lights and effects are the invention and creation of LOIE FULLER.

SYNOPSIS

ACT I.—The scene of "The Dragon of Wrath" is laid in Pekin (the seat of Government, and the home of those families who are attached to the royal household of the Emperor of China). The play has to do with an incident in the legendary customs of the country. The time has come in the life of the Princess when she must bestow her hand in marriage, but the man who would be her husband must prove himself valiant, strong and brave. Two noble princes from among her many suitors are chosen to combat for the royal favour. The battle takes place in the presence of the Princess. (The combat is a scientific expression of attack and defence by the wrists, no weapon being used). The vanquished prince, chagrined over his loss and humiliation, proceeds to vow vengeance on the victor. He is leaving the Palace, when the Princess interrupts him with her smiles, and invites him to the Betrothal Festival. He resists, but she commands him to remain, and, concealing his chagrin and fury, he bows to her will. In the presence of the Princess and her attendants, the festivities begin. They include a Chinese march, music and singing, in which the defeated prince takes part; the march of the lanterns; ribbon serpent; Chinese piano; Chinese scarf dance; and the magic cloth, are introduced for the entertainment of the Princess and her guests.

The Curtain will descend for a few minutes to denote the lapse of Ten Years.

ACT II.—The Prince and Princess, together with their children, are living happily, and the scene opens on a family picture. It is the anniversary of their wedding day. A joyous scene follows, when a visitor is announced and joins them at the feast. It is the rejected Prince. The Prince and Princess have long since forgotten and forgiven his vow of vengeance. They receive him with open arms, giving him a royal welcome. They eat, drink and smoke together, but he has arranged a plot wherein the Prince is to be called away, leaving him alone with the Princess, when he declares his everlasting, hopeless and undying love for her. She reasons with him, cajoles and begs him to desist, to depart, and to crush out from his heart his unholy passion. He forgets himself, insults her; she scorns and commands him to quit her presence for ever. He seizes and attempts to abduct her. She defies him, and, while calling for help, grasps a spear from a historic group of war relics, which ornaments the wall, and prepares to defend herself.

(A real Chinese mode of attack and defence is here displayed).

The Princess battles heroically, but the infuriated Prince is about to overcome her, when her husband returns, and, throwing him off, gives his attention to the Princess, who, all unnerved, bursts into a passionate description of the scene which has just taken place, during which time the disloyal Prince escapes. He re-appears again presently, however, still transformed with rage, and attempts to kill the Prince. In the scene that follows, the Princess receives a knife-thrust which is meant for her husband. The Prince who commits this outrage stands horrified for a moment, then he turns to escape. The Princess is seen expiring in the arms of her lover-husband. CURTAIN.

A Curtain will be rounded before the rise of the Curtain.

Antique Furniture by C. F. HALL... Furniture and Fittings by ...

...mises in Mayfair). Wigs by CLARKSON. ...d Passage Draperies by BURNET & Co. ...TDAY.

This Theatre may be engage... applications should be made to t...

...ays except Wednesdays and Saturdays. All ...V, 33, Old Bond Street, W.

Business Manager - - - ARTHUR PENLEY.
Play Producer - - - CAVENDISH MORTON.

THE LITTLE THEATRE,

JOHN ST...

Manageress -

"THE FOTHERINGAY,"

The piece, in One Act, Arranged by Patrick Kirwan from Thackeray's "Pendennis," revived at the Little Theatre on Tuesday, Dec. 27.

The Fotheringay ....Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON
Captain Costigan .....Mr. PATRICK KIRWAN
Arthur Pendennis ....Mr. EVERARD VANDERLIP
Major Pendennis ....Mr. ROBERT C. HARCOURT
Bowes .....Mr. ARTHUR FAYNE

It would be difficult to satisfy the lovers of Thackeray with any adaptation of his work. So much in Thackeray's novels is personal in the author, and so much charm is in his style, that a theatrical equivalent of the Fotheringay incident in "Pendennis" can hardly be imagined or expected. Mr. Patrick Kirwan, whose piece was originally produced at the Bijou, Bayswater, on Oct. 29, 1903, has done his work with taste and feeling, subject to the inevitable comparisons which are certain to be made by Thackeray-lovers between the extract from the book and the little play. Every reader of "Pendennis" remembers how Major Pendennis is annoyed at his comfortable club by the news that his nephew Arthur, in the provincial town of Chatteris, has fallen in love with a beautiful but brainless actress, a Miss Fotheringay, and wants to marry her; how the Major immediately resolves on putting an end to the preposterous folly, and how he posts down to Chatteris, and easily breaks off the engagement by informing Miss Fotheringay's father that Arthur is without either money or expectations. This incident forms the subject-matter of Mr. Kirwan's adaptation, and the result gives opportunity for some agreeable and intelligent acting. Miss Gertrude Kingston makes a praiseworthy attempt to realise the rather subtle character of The Fotheringay, who is drawn by Thackeray as a pretty, brainless creature, dependent for her success as an actress on the coaching of poor old Bowes, yet with a vein in her of native shrewdness and good-nature

THE LIT...

Tuesday
Evening
Dec. 27

Stall
N J 21

This to be retained

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

CHARLES FROHMAN

On SATURDAY, DECEMBER 31st, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30

FRANK CURZON

WILL PRODUCE

BEAU BROCADE

A Romantic Play in Four Acts,

By BARONESS ORCZY and MONTAGU BARSTOW.

Captain Jack Bathurst	(known as "Beau Brocade")	Mr. BERTRAM WALLIS
H.R.H. Duke of Cumberland	.. ..	Mr. EDWARD FERRIS
The Earl of Stretton	.. .. ..	Mr. RICHARD NEVILLE
Sir Humphrey Challoner	.. .. ..	Mr. J. J. BARTLETT
Squire West	.. (a County Magistrate) ..	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Mr. Mittachip	.. (a Derby Lawyer) ..	Mr. CHARLES A. WHITE
Master Duffy	.. (his Clerk) ..	Mr. J. PLUMPTON WILSON
John Stich	.. (the Village Smith) ..	Mr. BASSETT ROE
Jock Miggs	.. (a Shepherd) ..	Mr. EDWARD IRWIN
The Sergeant	.. ..	Mr. CHARLES WEIR
Jeremiah Inch	.. (Parish Beadle) ..	Mr. HERBERT GREVILLE
Betty	.. (Maid to Lady Patience) ..	Miss GILLIAN SCAIFE
Lady Patience Gascoyne	(Lord Stretton's Sister)	Miss GRACE LANE

Yokels, Soldiers, Villagers.

The action of the Play takes place at Brassington, Derbyshire, in June, 1746, after the battle of Culloden Moor.

Act I.	The Smith's Forge at Brassington
Act II.	The Heath (same Evening)
Act III. Scene 1 ..	Outside the Court House at Brassington (following Morning)
	Interval of two minutes for change to
Scene 2	The Heath (following Night)
Act IV.	Outside the Court House at Brassington (following Morning)

The Play produced by Mr. HENRY AINLEY.

Dances arranged by Mr. HARRY GRATTAN.

Costumes by J. A. HARRISON Co., Ltd., Leicester Square.
Scenery by LEOLYN HART.
Horses supplied by HALES. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Programme of Music.

Orchestra under the Direction of EDWARD JONES.

Before Act I.	...	OVERTURE	"Beau Brocade"
" " II.	...	PRELUDE	"Dawn"
" " III.	...	MINUET
" " IV.	...	PASTORELLA

Music composed by ERNEST BECALOSSI.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Business Manager ..	for FRANK CURZON	..	EDWARD LYTTON
Stage Manager ..		..	ARTHUR FITZGERALD

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. .. W. LESTOCQ
Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

It is not easy to understand the fascination which the highwayman has had for the general public in contrast to the reprehension which has always been employed in considering the burglar and the thief; but the long-standing popularity of Dick Turpin and Claude Duval are proofs of the charm exercised by the "knights of the road." The Baroness Orczy and Mr. Montague Barstow's drama Beau Brocade was first performed at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, in the May of 1908, being seen in the following month of that year at the Coronet Theatre. It was presented to the audience at the Globe Theatre on Saturday last by Mr. Frank Curzon. There is a charm for a very large proportion of the playgoing public in frank, adventurous romance; and though the sophisticated may sneer at the simplicity of the methods of the authors of Beau Brocade, there will be many to whom the interesting incidents of the piece and its straightforward, sympathetic characters will be very acceptable. It has the advantage of containing a leading part, which appeals to the eternal admiration for daring and gallantry, and is immediately popular with the audience. The authors do not lay claim to any depth of psychological analysis or any scrupulous regard for probability, but the story flows smoothly and strongly, the plot has plenty of movement, and the construction is ingenious.

It is the period of George I., "Bonnie Prince Charlie," and the Stuart rising. The Earl of Stretton, really a most loyal nobleman, has been wrongfully proclaimed a rebel, and is hiding from his enemies in the disguise of a blacksmith, and working in a forge kept in the Derbyshire village of Brassington by an honest son of Vulcan named John Stich. The Earl has in his possession letters which, if he could only have them presented at headquarters, would absolutely establish his fidelity to the King. The difficulty is to get the documents to London, and with that object the Earl writes to his sister, Lady Patience Gascoyne, asking her to visit him at the smithy. The note falls into the hands of a gentleman highwayman named Jack Bathurst, known on the road as "Beau Brocade."

This accident brings him into the action. He falls in love with Lady Patience, and makes a good impression on the lady, who undertakes to convey the letters to the King. Here the villain of the piece comes in. Sir Humphrey Challoner is an unscrupulous fortune-hunter, and, discovering that Lady Patience has the letters, he plans to get possession of them, and use them in order to force her ladyship to marry him. Sir Humphrey, with crafty contrivance, tells Stich, in the hearing of Bathurst, that an old lady, possessed of valuable jewels, will cross the neighbouring heath that night. Bathurst goes to the place, and stops the carriage, which contains Lady Patience and her maid, on their way to London. The gallant highwayman, when he sees whom he has "held up," abandons all idea of robbery, and induces Lady Patience to dance a minuet with him, to the music of a pipe played by a conveniently present shepherd. While they are tripping, however, Sir Humphrey is thieving. He purloins the letters from the coach, and gets off with them unmolested.

The blame of the theft is thrown on Bathurst by Lady Patience; and, to reinstate himself in her favour, he promises to regain the documents within forty-eight hours. Sir Humphrey entrusts them to a yokel named Jock Miggs, who can neither read nor write, and who is instructed to take them to a lawyer at Derby. Then Bathurst appears, flying from the pursuit of some soldiers, and forces Jock to change clothes with him. The rustic is carried off in mistake for the highwayman, who is lucky enough to find the papers in the pocket of the smock. The travels of the letters are not, however, at an end, but after passing through several hands they come into those of the Duke of Cumberland, who reads them, and thus the Earl's innocence of high treason is established. Bathurst, it appears, was more sinned against than sinning, having been cashiered from the army for striking an officer who richly deserved to be struck; so his little escapades are overlooked, and he is allowed to marry the charming Lady Patience.

Frank Curzon's production BEAU BROCADE, with Bertram Wallis and Grace Lane, at THE GLOBE THEATRE, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

281 283

THE MATINEE HAT INCIDENT.

Appeal Against County Court Decision Dismissed.

THEATRE SCENE SEQUEL.

Judge Describes Agreement as "Mockery and a Waste of Time."

The matinee hat incident at the Prince of Wales Theatre came before Justices Phillimore and Horridge to-day upon an appeal by the plaintiffs (Mr. and Mrs. Dann) from a decision of Judge Woodfall at the Westminster County Court in an action brought by them against Mr. Frank Curzon, lessee of the theatre.

Mr. Lilley said he appeared for the appelants. They appealed against a decision of the judge in holding that a contract made between the parties was one to which it would be contrary to the policy of the law to give effect.

The defendant cross-appealed on the ground that the costs should have been allowed in the court below.

In 1910, counsel explained, there was a great agitation upon the part of the public who frequented matinees about the large hats that ladies wore at those performances.

Mr. Dann was at that time a Press agent, and Mr. Curzon was lessee or owner of a number of theatres, among others the Prince of Wales.

In April, 1910, a play entitled "The Balkan Princess" was produced, in which Miss Isabel Jay wore a hat which was said to relieve the difficult problem.

Under these circumstances, counsel continued, Mr. Dann conceived an ingenious idea which would settle the question. He approached Mr Curzon with a scheme which was ultimately accepted, and which resulted in these proceedings.

THE PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

The county-court judge in his summing up found that Mr. Dann suggested to Mr. Curzon that it would be an excellent advertisement if two ladies were engaged to occupy two stalls and wear large matinee hats and if a gentleman were to occupy a seat behind.

The gentleman was peremptorily to demand the removal of the ladies' hats, and the ladies were to refuse. The gentleman was to insist and invoke the assistance of Mr. Curzon, who was to eject the ladies by the technical assault of laying his hand on their arms.

Mr. Justice Phillimore: It may be slightly curious, but why two ladies rather than one?

Mr. Lilley: It would be a greater nuisance in a geometrical ratio, but perhaps it was more for the comfort of companionship. Counsel said the judge found that the ladies left the theatre and were handed the price of the seats for which they had not paid.

Afterwards the matter came before the police court, but the magistrate held that the defendant was justified in what he did. "The plaintiffs now alleged," continued the county-court judge, "that the defendant agreed to pay them. I am of opinion that agreement is illegal and contrary to the policy of the law:—

First: Because the spectacle of two ladies being peremptorily and brusquely treated might well have aroused intervention on their behalf, and lead to a serious breach of the peace.

Secondly: Because the invocation of a court of law to punish an offence which to the knowledge of the parties had not been even technically committed, was in the nature of a fraud on the administration of justice.

CONTRACT DENIED.

Counsel argued that in this the county-court judge was wrong.

Mr. Justice Phillimore: The wife wants £52 and the husband wants £105.

Mr. Lilley: Yes, the husband says the judge was wrong in saying that the set-off put forward against his claim was valid, and that therefore he was entitled to judgment for £100 in any event.

Mr. G. F. Foote, K.C., for the respondent, supported Mr. Curzon's cross-appeal for costs on the ground that there was no reason why a successful defendant should be deprived of costs. Mr. Curzon, said counsel, was not saying in this case that because this was a bad contract he was not willing to pay costs. His case always was that he never made the contract.

In the course of his judgment, Mr. Justice Phillimore doubted whether, without perjury the matter could have been put upon its legs before the magistrate. Had the magistrate been told that it was all done by agreement he would have dismissed the case at once.

They must, said his lordship, have gone very near the line to get the case as far as it went. Not merely was this a mockery of justice, not merely was it a waste of time, but it put a man in peril of that for which they knew he ought not to be in peril.

Mr. Justice Horridge, in agreeing, said that a more objectionable agreement it would be hard to conceive.

The Court dismissed both the appeal and the cross appeal. Dec 20 1910

See page 31

284

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1911.

PLAYS THAT MAKE MONEY.

AND OTHER PLAYS.

By JAMES WATERS.

Midsummer always brings about a cessation of play producing in London and a so-called ending of the theatrical year. In the interval between the end of one season and the beginning of another London is able to keep twelve or fifteen theatres open, but if summers such as the present were always to be reckoned on it is certain that our managers would follow the Continental and American custom of sending their attractions into "cold storage" and closing down their playhouses until after August.

The theatrical year 1910-11 has been—like the previous one—a commercial success, but, although some managements have done particularly well out of the two past seasons, others have had quite unenviable experiences. Since September 1909 one theatre has made £35,000, while a neighbouring house in the same period has lost £24,000. One syndicate trading over the same period lost £30,000, and a management very highly praised for its work last season gave up—after heavy losses—the expensive amusement of offering something the public did not want. It was a season remarkable for an unusual number of adaptations of foreign plays, but, curiously enough, the office where the Reader of Plays is to be found came in for very little criticism and no abuse.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

The productions and revivals, including those of the Shakespeare Festival, for 1910-11 were as follows:

Plays of two or more acts	61
Musical plays	8
One-act plays	26
Pantomimes and children's plays	3
Revivals of plays of two or more acts	33

The list gives the plays produced during the course of the season [illegible] in the order in which they were produced. Apart from it are excluded all one-act pieces and all plays produced by stage societies or for special performances only:

		Performances.
The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary	Terry's	56
The Crisis	New	28
Nobody's Daughter	Wyndham's	185
A Bolt From the Blue	Duke of York's	18
Sister Anne	Coronet	53
*The Chocolate Soldier	Lyric	364
The Man From Mexico	Strand	150
The Sins of London	Lyceum	101
A Woman's Way	Comedy	65
The Pigeon House	Court	16
The Man From the Sea	Queen's	30
D'Arcy of the Guards	St. James's	48
Young Fernald	New	13
The Bishop's Son	Garrick	5
Inconstant George	Prince of Wales	218
Lysistrata	Little	27
Company For George	Kingsway	43
Grace	Duke of York's	80
Count Hannibal	New	164
Mrs. Skeffington	Queen's	37
Behind the Veil	Coronet	20
*The Quaker Girl	Adelphi	269
A Single Man	Playhouse	105
Just to Get Married	Little	59
Vice Versa	Comedy	112
The Unwritten Law	Garrick	104
Eccentric Lord Comberdene	St. James's	62
Decorating Clementine	Globe	24
The Captain of the School	Gaiety	50
The Princess Clementina	Queen's	106
Our Little Cinderella	Playhouse	39
The Piper	St. James's	30
The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning	Aldwych	100
Cinderella	Lyceum	108
Jack and the Beanstalk	Drury Lane	109
Beau Brocade	Globe	45
Is Matrimony a Failure?	Criterion	31
Preserving Mr. Panmure	Comedy	89
The Witch	Court	7
The Witness For the Defence	St. James's	150
The Popinjay	New	147
All That Matters	Haymarket	45
Mr. Jarvis	Wyndham's	35
Bardelys the Magnificent	Globe	53
*Baby Mine	Criterion	165
The Lily	Kingsway	82
Loaves and Fishes	Duke of York's	48
*Peggy	Gaiety	141
One of the Dukes	Playhouse	15
A Fool There Was	Queen's	48
Lady Patricia	Haymarket	100
*Passers-By	Wyndham's	148
A Butterfly on the Wheel	Globe	119
*Fanny's First Play	Little	128
*Kismet	Garrick	124
Better Not Enquire	Prince of Wales	93
Baron Trenck	Waldorf	43
The Master of Mrs. Chilvers	Royalty	34
Playing With Fire	Comedy	22
Margaret Catchpole	Duke of York's	17
*The Count of Luxembourg	Daly's	74
Half a Crown	Royalty	11
The Crucible	Comedy	29
Dombey and Son	Savoy	31
The Parisienne	Royalty	22
Above Suspicion	Haymarket	18
Pomander Walk	Playhouse	37
The Green Elephant	Comedy	7
The Girl Who Couldn't Lie	Criterion	22
*Bunty Pulls the Strings	Haymarket	22
*Sally Bishop	Prince of Wales	12

*Plays marked thus are still running, and the number of performances given are calculated up to last Saturday night.

THE SEASON'S REVIVALS.

The following were among the season's revivals, with number of performances of each:—"The Eternal Question," Garrick, 32; "The Case of Rebellious Susan," Criterion, 35; "The Toymaker of Nuremberg," Playhouse, 20; "The Liars," Criterion, 53; "The Blue Bird," Haymarket, 84; "The Scarlet Pimpernel," New, 72; "Peter Pan," Duke of York's, 72; "Alice in Wonderland," Savoy, 30; "Charley's Aunt," Savoy, 24; "A Waltz Dream," Daly's, 106; "The Speckled Band," Strand, 21; "The Tragedy of Nan," Court, 12; "The Prisoner of Zenda," Lyceum, 96; "The Master Builder," Little, 28; "The Sins of Society," Drury Lane, 64; "Cousin Kate," Playhouse, 75; "Arms and the Man," Criterion, 45; "A Doll's House," Kingsway, 55; "The Only Way," Lyceum, 68; "Hedda Gabler," Kingsway, 25; "The Marriage of Kitty," Duke of York's, 55; "Pelleas and Melisande," Lyceum, 3; "A Royal Divorce," Lyceum, 13 (still running). total 118

500 total

536

343

266

162

628

331

339

618

25

In 1910-11 ten of Shakespeare's plays were given, the total number of performances being 415. Of these Sir Herbert Tree gave "King Henry VIII.," 279; "A Midsummer Night's Dream," 43; "Julius Cæsar," 12; "Merchant of Venice," 4; "Twelfth Night," 8; "Merry Wives of Windsor," 7. Mr. Oscar Asche, "The Merry Wives of Windsor," 49, and "As You Like It," 1. Mr. Fred Terry, "As You Like It," 9; Mr. F. R. Benson, "The Taming of the Shrew," 1, and "King Richard III.," 1; Mr. H. B. Irving, "Hamlet," 1.

Of the year's output of 61 plays 8 were adapted from the French—namely, "The Crisis," "A Bolt from the Blue," "Inconstant George," "Decorating Clementine," "The Lily," "Better Not Enquire," "The Parisienne," and "Above Suspicion." From America we imported 8: "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," "The Man From Mexico," "A Woman's Way," "D'Arcy of the Guards," "Young Fernald," "Is Matrimony a Failure?" "Baby Mine," and "A Fool There Was." Although "Kismet" was first produced in London, its author is an American, and it was an American lady that turned the old story of the Piper of Hamelin into a four-act drama. One play from the Greek, "Lysistrata"; one from the Norwegian, "The Witch"; and one from the Hungarian, "Playing With Fire," help to swell the sum of our theatres' indebtedness to foreigners. Eleven of the season's plays were based on stories published before the plays were written—namely, "Sister Anne," "The Bishop's Sou," "Count Hannibal," "Vice Versa," "The Unwritten Law," "Princess Clementina," "The Popinjay," "Mr. Jarvis," "Dombey and Son," "The Girl Who Couldn't Lie," and "Sally Bishop." If we deduct the 21 foreign plays and the 11 made from books from the total of 61 plays produced in twelve months in London, we find that British authors were represented 29 times. Of these 29 plays 16 were failures, but fortunately in at least 9 instances the losses fell on men outside the theatres who for some reason or other found the moneys and concealed their identity behind managers. It was not at all, it will be seen, a good season for the British dramatist with new plays. Three of the six musical plays produced came from Vienna. The three pantomimes and children's plays were home made.

The Weekly Dispatch
LONDON: 2, Carmelite Street, E.C.
SUNDAY, AUGUST 13, 1911.

Women as Playwrights.

Women are taking an increasingly important part in the affairs of the London theatre, and in proportion to their numbers are exerting an extraordinary amount of influence. Personally I am convinced that certain of those women have infinitely more ability than the great majority of managers and actor-managers who have within the past few years had their names on the bills of London theatres. Seven plays by women dramatists were presented in London last season—namely, "Nobody's Daughter," "Just to Get Married," "Sister Anne," "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," "Young Fernald," "The Piper," and "Baby Mine." The first three were the works of English ladies, and the first two were, in my opinion, a very long way above the average of plays written for our stage by men. English women were authors of 6 of the 29 one-act plays produced during the past twelve months, and in that department held their own. Six actresses appeared as London managers during the year—namely, Miss Gertrude Kingston, Miss Evelyn Millard, Miss May Pulfrey, Mlle. Lydia Yavorska, Miss Marie Tempest, and Miss Lillah McCarthy. Miss Mary Moore is the partner of Sir Charles Wyndham in his theatrical enterprises, and is a first-rate woman of business as well as a good actress.

WHY NOBODY WANTS A ONE-ACT PLAY.

Daily Mail — 6 Nov 1910

By A PLAYGOER. James Walker

The one-act play, dear to the heart of the amateur dramatist, will very soon cease to have any place whatever on the programmes of the London theatres.

The wonder really is not that the one-act play has become a neglected thing, but that it has been able to cling so long to the stage of the first-class theatres. At present it has no higher purpose than to serve as a make-weight, and the curious process in the London world of amusements is to be witnessed of the music-halls taking over a form of entertainment that the theatre managers are discarding.

Why the short play has fallen out of favour in the theatres is not a question that can be answered to the satisfaction of everybody, nor with credit to anyone; but the chief reasons are that the public have got tired of the wretched things so often put on—presumably to amuse the early comers—and the managers, unable to find readily really first-class little dramas, have been on the look-out for plays long enough to make an evening's bill.

I am quite prepared to believe that many good one-act plays lie at home in the unappreciated care of their authors. The majority of the theatres get along very well without the aid of the short play, and the manager who nowadays happens to want something to fill in an awkward half-hour of the evening in front of a comedy none too long, is not prepared as a rule to waste much money or acting talent on the "curtain-raiser." I know one instance where a young author had a one-act play accepted for immediate production at a first-class theatre, and when the delighted fellow had got over his first feelings of joy and asked what fees he would get, it was quietly explained to him that the advertisement their production of his little piece would bring him should be considered sufficient reward. He refused, however, to see the matter in that light, and his play, which the management highly approved of, was then rejected.

BAD PAY AND INDIFFERENT AUDIENCES.

I am convinced that such instances as the above are very rare, but at the same time it is fair to assure those who want a hearing through the medium of one-act plays that the reward is small. Half a guinea to a guinea a performance is the usual fee. I have known managers pay two guineas and even four guineas per performance for the acting rights of such things, but in those cases the author had either a great reputation or the play had made a considerable success on the Continent. Managers are not wholly to blame for the growing neglect of the short play. The playgoing public is just as much responsible for the present condition of things as anybody. The pit and gallery get to the theatre in time for the opening piece when there is one, but they go—not because of it—but simply because they want to be in time for the play of the evening, and they take the other because it is given them. They are even too indifferent to protest when the holders of reserved tickets march into the theatre during the performance of the "curtain-raiser" talking at the top of their voices. They make no objection if part of the waiting hour is passed listening to a story-teller or to a funny man at the piano. In the suburbs and provinces lantern shows or a cinematograph display are displacing the one-act piece, all of which goes to show that the public likes variety, and if a music-hall entertainment should eventually displace the opening one-act piece the popularity of the theatre will not be lessened.

THE YOUNG AUTHOR'S APPRENTICESHIP.

Over and over again we hear that the young author finds his way to more serious things by an apprenticeship served in the writing of one-act plays. The argument does not always hold good. Mr. W. Somerset Maugham wrote only one short piece, and that has never been performed in England. "Irene Wycherley," a three-act comedy, Miss Lena Ashwell's enormously successful production at the opening of the Kingsway Theatre, was Mr. Anthony P. Wharton's first play. Mr. J. M. Barrie did not begin with writing one-act plays, nor did Mr. John Galsworthy, nor Mr. Granville Barker, nor Mr. Bernard Shaw, nor Mr. Rudolf Bessier. If necessary, the instances might be multiplied. Unfortunately we rarely get a one-act play of sufficient merit to attract large numbers of people to see it. At the music-halls it may be otherwise, but I must confess that in the majority of cases there it is the appearance of a "star" player that makes the attraction. I have known a music-hall manager pay £400 for a one-act play to serve as a vehicle for an actor making an excursion into variety, and I dare say he was under the impression that he got good value for his money. I remember, however, that when the Palace Theatre induced Miss Marie Tempest to make her first appearance in variety, it did not waste time looking for a one-act play. Mr. Butt asked her to sing, and she did, and, although the month was August and the weather was very warm, Miss Tempest filled the theatre to its capacity.

The stage exerts an extraordinary influence. I saw a one-act piece by a serious writer of novels tried some time ago at a suburban hall. It was a tragedy. The audience laughed at it, yet the author remained convinced that he had written a masterpiece. These masterpieces, however, are rare. One-act plays need not, however, be masterpieces to be successful, yet how few can we remember in the past twelve or fifteen years that drew on their own account a public curious enough to see them.

A MEAGRE LIST.

Two years ago Miss Lena Ashwell put on a bill at the Kingsway Theatre consisting of four short plays, but the result was the reverse of encouraging. Mr. Frohman tried a triple bill at the Repertory Theatre (Duke of York's) last spring. He kept it on for six performances, and having saved the best one-act play of the year, "The Twelve Pound Look," from the unfortunate programme, abandoned the experiment.

In the past twelve or fifteen years London has not witnessed the production of a score of one-act plays attractive enough to affect the receipts of the theatres where they were produced. "The Cat and the Cherub" was one of the exceptions. So was "The Sacrament of Judas" with Mr. Forbes Robertson and Mrs. Patrick Campbell at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. Mr. Martin Harvey's production of "Ib and Little Christina" made a success in 1900, and a still more famous piece of the same year was "Madame Butterfly." Not the least of Sir Henry Irving's triumphs was gained in "Waterloo," and Sir Herbert Tree has two successful one-act productions to his credit in "The Man Who Was" and "The Van Dyck." There was exceptional merit in "The Monkey's Paw" and in "Heard at the Telephone," but possibly they harrowed the feelings of theatre audiences overmuch. "Tilda's New Hat," a human little comedy, made its appearance about two years ago; and who that ever saw it can forget Mr. Barrie's "Pantaloon." Mr. Bernard Shaw did well with "How She Lied to Her Husband," and about six years ago Mr. Henri de Vries made a London reputation as an actor with a short play called "A Case of Arson."

And that is practically all that has been done in a branch of dramatic art which has unlimited possibilities.

Rosalind 14/10/1912
The Will 4/9/1913

Above Suspicion 158.

All That Matters 19.

Anatol 50.

Arcadians. The 93

Arms and the Man 109

As You Like It 100

Baby Mine 32.

Bardelys the Magnificent 29.

Baron Trenck 87.

Bear. The 103

Bella Donna 253

Better Not Enquire 85

Blue Bird. The 272

Bonita 211

Bunty Pulls the Strings 76, 168.

Butta/Gan the Wheel. a 76, 245

By George (revue) 23

Cat and the Cherub. The 135

Charley's Aunt 273

Colonel and the Lady. The 236

Concert. The 175

Count of Luxembourg. The 115

Cousin Kate 68

Crucible. The 140

Dad 236

Doll's House. a 245

Dombey and Son 147

Dramatist-at-Home. The 165

Dick Whittington 277

Fanny's First Play. 79

Fool There Was. a 55

Forest of Happy Dreams. The 70

Girl in the Train. The 48

Girl Who Couldn't Lie. The 165

Gladys Eye. The 232

Gods of the Mountain. The 137

Golden Land of Fairy Tales. The. 256.

Grace 17

Great Gay Road. The 264

Great Name. The 185

Great Young Man. The 230

Green Elephant. The 163

Half-a-Crown 134

Hamlet 244

Hand on the Latch. The 53

Hedda Gabler 132

Hope. The 196

Honeymoon. The 224

Hooligan. The 41

Hop o' my Thumb 279

Is Matrimony a Failure? 2

James and John 62

Jemmy 109

Just-To get-married 6

King Henry VIII 9

Kismet 81

Lady Patricia 58

Lady Windermere's Fan 226

Lily. The 34

Loaves and Fishes 37

Love Mills. The 221

Lower Depths. The 249

Macbeth 181

Man and Superman 215

Margaret Catchpole 112

Marionettes. The 208

Marriage de Mlle Beulemans. Le 204

Marriage of Kitty. The 142

Married By Degrees 201

Master Builder. The 63

Mastery of the Children. The 90

Merry Wives of Windsor. The 39

Message From Mars. A 251

Midsummer Night's Dream. A 72

Miracle. The

Miniature. The 193

Money. 104

Moonshine 202

Mousme. The 188

Mr Jarvis 24

Mrs Pleasance 107

Near Thing. A 28

Nightbirds The 283
Ogre . The 192
One of the Dukes 52
Only Way. The 131
Orpheus in the Underground 260
Our Nervous System 68
Parisienne. The 154
Passers-By 64
Peggy 44
Pelleas and Melisande 167
Pericles and Aspasia 155
Perplexed Husband. The 194
Peter Pan 270
Playing with Fire 98
Pommander Walk 160
Popinjay. The 15
Preserving of Pennuce 7
Prisoner of Zenda 42
Rip Van Winkle 205
Rococo 27
Romeo and Juliet 178
Rosamund 102
Royal Divorce. a 173
Sally Bishop 171
Saloon The 6
Same Lodge. The 228
Scarlet Pimpernel. The 1. 153
Sentimental Cuss. a 185
Sins of Society. The 66
Speckled Band. The 18
Spring Maid. The 217
Storm in a Tea Shop. a 187
Sweet Nell of Old Drury 282
Sylvia 111
Terrorist. The 69
The Three Musketeers 242. 275
Till the Bells Ring 139
Touch of Truth. The 169
Tragedy of Nan. The 26
Tuppence Please. 250
Uninvited Guest. The 228
Vice Versa 259
Waltz Dream. a 4. 49
War God. The 238
Witch. The 12
Witness for the Defence. The 13
What Every Woman Knows. 227

Where the Rainbow Ends. 267.
Young Lady of Seventeen. The 32.

Authors and critics 240
Command performances 104. 157. 162.
Dancing turns in theatres 140
Friday plays 37.
Gaiety Theatre and Geo Edwardes 143.
Gilbert. W.S. Last play 41.
Haymarket management 170
Kingsway First Night 117.
Long Run. a (The Arcadians) 94
London Opera House opened 246
New Princes Theatre opened 275
Palais Paris Salle 61
Russian Ballet 150
Singing turns in a theatre
Shakespeare Festival 71. 121.
Supper on the Stage 10
First Nights 35
Young Lucien "Hamlet" 244
Theatre Profits 294
The Jacks figures 291.

NEW THEATRE

On Monday, January 2nd, 1911, and Every Evening at 8.

FOR 24 PERFORMANCES ONLY.

THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL

By BARONESS ORCZY and MONTAGUE BARSTOW.

Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.) — Mr. PHILLIP MERIVALE
Sir Percy Blakeney .. .. .. Mr. FRED TERRY
Sir Andrew Ffoulkes .. .. Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Lord Anthony Dewhurst .. Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
Lord Grenville .. .. .. Mr. J. L. DALE
Chauvelin (French Envoy) .. Mr. HORACE HODGES
The Comte de Tournai .. Mr. H. HUMBERSTON WRIGHT
The Vicomte de Tournai — Mr. R. EASTEN PICKERING
Armand St. Just .. .. Mr. MAURICE ELVEY
Hebert .. .. Mr. LESLIE CARTER
Jellyband (Landlord of the "Fisherman's Rest") — Mr. FREDERICK GROVES
Jimmy Pitkin .. .. Mr. NORMAN
Harry Waite .. .. .. Mr. GUY CUNNINGHAM

Brogard (Landlord of the "Lion d'Or") — Mr. J. CARTER-EDWARDS
Captain of the Guard .. Mr. HERMANN GRIFFITHS
Mr. Hempseed .. .. .. Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Servant .. .. Mr. GOODWIN NOCK
Aristocrat .. .. .. Mr. KNOTT CUMMING
Chepy .. .. .. Mr. WALTER ARMSTRONG
Citizen .. .. Mr. BROUGHTY FERRIE
Messenger .. .. .. Mr. HUGHBERT DANE
The Comtesse de Tournai .. Miss PHYLLIS MANNERS
Suzanne de Tournai .. .. Miss EILEEN BEATRICE
Sally Jellyband .. .. .. Miss OLIVE NOBLE
Mere Brogard .. .. .. Miss MARION STERLING
Lady Portarles .. .. .. Miss A. LLOYD DESMOND
Lady Blakeney .. .. .. Miss JULIA NEILSON

Guests, Citizens, Soldiers, Servants.

Misses Manning, Gardner, Cawdery, Adamson, Brodie, Vanderzee, Marshall, Daine; Messrs. Rhaden, Saz, Addison, Cadogan, Ross, Sylvaine, etc.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I., Scene 1. The West Barricade, Paris. Scene 2. "The Fisherman's Rest," Dover.

(FIVE DAYS ELAPSE).

ACT II. .... Lord Grenville's Ball, London
ACT III. (The Next Afternoon) .... Sir Percy and Lady Blakeney's House, Richmond
ACT IV. .... The "Lion d'Or," near Calais

PERIOD 1792.

An Interval of Ten Minutes between each Act.

The Dance in the Second Act arranged by Mr. JOHN D'AUBAN.
Scenery by R. C. McCLEERY.

The Costumes by Messrs. J. HARRISON & Co., Ltd.
Wigs, &c., by CLARKSON.

The Play produced under the Direction of Mr. FRED TERRY.
The entire Music for the Play specially written by Mr. RAYMOND ROZE.

MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30.

Programme of Music.

Overture	"The Scarlet Pimpernel"	Raymond Róze
Entr'acte	"Tom Jones"	Edward German
Entr'acte	"The Mikado"	Sullivan
Entr'acte	"Tales of Hoffman"	Offenbach

Musical Director ... Mr. SYDNEY FFOULKES.

PRICE OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. and £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open Daily from 10 to 10. Telephone No. 2473 Gerrard.

Stage Manager .. .. MR. JOHN R. TURNBULL
Assistant Stage Manager .. MR. GOODWIN NOCK — Advertisement Manager .. MR. ALFRED W. POPE
General Manager .. .. Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT

CRITERION THEATRE.

WEDNESDAY, January 4th, 1911, and Every Evening at 8.30

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES

Will Produce a LIGHT COMEDY in Three Acts, entitled

IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?

Adapted from the German of Oscar Blumenthal and Gustav Kadelburg

By LEO DITRICHSTEIN (Author of "Are You a Mason?")

The Husbands.		The Wives.
Skelton Perry	Mr. CHARLES BRYANT	Fanny Perry	Miss EDYTH LATIMER
Hugh Wheeler	Mr. HARRY ASHFORD	Kate Wheeler	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
Albert Rand	Mr. ARTHUR LONGLEY	Alice Rand	Miss GLADYS STOREY
Jasper Stark	.. Mr. F. H. DENTON	Annie Stark	Miss DOROTHY FANE
David Meek .. .	.. Mr. LESLIE HAMER	Lucy Meek	.. Miss MARY DIBLEY
Dr. Hoyt	Mr. E. A. COVENTRY	Helen Hoyt ..	.. Miss AMY RAVENSCROFT
George Wilson	.. Mr. STEPHEN BOND	Julia Wilson	Miss OLIVE TEMPEST
Lem Borden	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE	Natalie Borden	Miss EDITH CUTHBERT
Frank Bolt	.. Mr. PAUL ARTHUR	Madge Bolt	AND Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS

Paul Barton (a London Lawyer) .. Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Lulu Wheeler.. .. .. Miss LETTICE FAIRFAX
Carrie (the Maid at the Wheeler's) .. Miss BEATRICE AINLEY

Scene .. Room at the Wheeler's at Rosedale.

Act I.—Lunch Time. Act II.—Two Hours Later. Act III.—A Week Later (Late Afternoon).

The Scene of the Play is laid in Rosedale, a small Country Town.

The Play Produced by Mr. PAUL ARTHUR.

Scenery by ALFRED TERRAINE.

FIRST MATINEE, SATURDAY NEXT, JANUARY 7th, at 2.30.

Programme of Music.

Selection	"The Girl in the Train"	Leo Fall
Entr'acte I.	"The Quaker Girl"	Monckton
Entr'acte II.	"The Waltz Dream"	Oscar Straus

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £6 6s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.

Telephone No. 3844 Gerrard. Box Office (Mr. Britton) open from 10 till 10. Doors open at 8. Commence at 8.30

Miss Jeffrey's dresses by Handley Seymour, 47, New Bond Street, W.; hats by Wm. Whiteley, Ltd. Miss Latimer's, Miss Fairfax's, Miss Storey's dresses and hats by Redfern. Miss Filippi's dresses by Madam Bird. Other costumes by Madam Pauline Herbert.

Stage Manager .. .. Mr. REGINALD WALTER | Musical Director .. .. .. Mr ALICK MACLEAN
Business Manager .. (For Sir Charles Wyndham) .. Mr. J. W. LETHBRIDGE

The institution of marriage has had so many hard blows dealt at it of late by "advanced" playwrights that it was time that the old-fashioned advocacy of the arrangement should be reiterated in comedy. Hopeless pessimism was the conclusion of Mr. Bernard Shaw's discussion, Getting Married, and many of our more serious plays have been practically protests against the existing custom, which, nevertheless, seems to suit the majority reasonably well. Marriage having evolved itself naturally from human needs, it is very easy to expose its defects—much easier than to demonstrate its merits; and perhaps the only way to deal with the enemies of the institution is not to take them seriously. At any rate, Messrs. Oscar Blumenthal and Gustav Kadelburg, the authors of the German original of Is Matrimony a Failure? have dealt with their theme in a jocular and humorous way. Their piece Die Thür ins Freie was produced at the Lustspielhaus, Berlin, on Oct. 16, 1908; and Mr. Leo Ditrichstein, the adapter of Are You a Mason? from the German, prepared a version of the play, which was produced by Mr. David Belasco at his theatre in New York in the August of 1909 by a company which included the late Mr. Frank Worthing. The version was favourably received; and Mr. George Edwardes presented it to a London audience at the Criterion on Wednesday, with decided success. Marriage, in the opinion of the authors, is a habit which once contracted is not easily broken, though a flaw in the ceremony may prevent the tie from being legally binding. This at least is the experience of half a dozen or so married couples living together, more or less happily, in the small country town of Rosedale. The only bachelor of the party, Paul Barton, a London lawyer, who is on a visit to the town, discovers that the church at which the marriages of most of the inhabitants have been solemnised, has never been permanently licensed. Until he makes this discovery the wives of Rosedale have had the upper hand, some of the husbands being very much henpecked indeed; but this bolt from the blue changes the situation entirely. The husbands, glorying in their new-found freedom, leave their homes, repair to the local inn, and do not appear over-willing to take steps to legalise their marriages. The wives, horror-struck at their undoubtedly equivocal position, become sweet as honey and mild as milk to their quondam husbands, until a Lysistrata arises in the person of Madge Bolt, a woman who has had enough sense to overlook her husband's peccadilloes. She constitutes herself the leader of the women, pours her scorn on their tears and lamentations, and tells them that they have only to exercise a little patience and once again the truth of the axiom, "leave 'em alone and they'll come home" will be evident. And so it turns out. The husbands, tiring of the discomforts and the bad cookery of the inn, slink off one by one to their homes, expecting to be met with open arms. But it is now the turn of the women to be "top dog," they will show their recalcitrant mates the extent to which they are indebted to their womenfolk for the pleasures and comforts of existence; so when the Inn is vacated by the husbands the wives arrive in full force, and, with banners flying, take possession of the citadel. In a very short time, however, both sides are ready to capitulate, but pride forbids that either shall make the first step. Finally, after a preliminary skirmish or two, they both lay down their arms at the same moment, and harmony is once more restored to Rosedale, this time apparently on a sounder and more satisfactory footing.

DALY'S THEATRE

TO-NIGHT, Saturday, January 7th, 1911, at 8.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION OF

A WALTZ DREAM

An Operetta in Three Acts by

FELIX DOERMAN and LEOPOLD JACOBSON.

Now adapted for the English Stage by BASIL HOOD.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS. Music by OSCAR STRAUS.

Musical Director - - - - - - Mr. HAMISH MacCUNN

Stage Production by Mr. EDWARD ROYCE

The Music of the Opera published by Messrs. CHAPPELL, 50 New Bond Street, and METZLER & Co., Ltd., 42 Marlborough Street, W.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. W. ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY from 10 to 10.

Telephone: GERRARD 201 (2 Lines).

Private Boxes, £2 12s. 6d. to £5 5s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle (Bonnets allowed), Front, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

. . Cast of the Play . .

Lieutenant Niki	... ...	Mr. ROBERT MICHAELIS
Count Lothar	(Cousin of the Prince) ...	Mr. W. H. BERRY
Lieutenant Montschi ...	... ...	Mr. ALEC FRASER
Max Bauer	... (a Waiter)	Mr. WILLIE WARDE
Herr Krantz	... (a Minister)	Mr. W. J. DOUGLAS
Wendolin	... (Major-Dome) ...	Mr. CHARLES COLEMAN
Sigismund	... (Head Lackey) ...	... Mr. GARNET WILSON
	AND
Joachim XIII.	(Prince of Flausenthurn) ...	Mr. J. F. McARDLE

Princess Helena ...	... ...	Miss AMY EVANS
Frederica...	(Chief Lady-in-Waiting) ...	Miss NORAH BARRY
Fifi	... (Big Drum) ...	Miss MAY MARTON
Hana	... (Little Drum) ...	Miss B. VON BRUNNER
Emmie	... (a Kellnerin) ...	... Miss KITTY HANSON
Rezzi		Miss BARBARA DUNBAR
Pepzi	... Dancers ...	... Miss GLADYS GUY
Lizzi		... ... Miss F. LE GAY
Fritzi		... Miss M. MITCHELL
Mitzi		... Miss MAY HOBSON
Hella		Miss GERTRUDE GLYN
	AND
Franzi		... Miss LILY ELSIE

Special Dances in Act II. by THE OY-RA QUARTETTE OF VIENNESE DANCERS

ACT I.—Festival Hall in Prince Joachim's Castle in Flausenthurn
JOSEPH HARKER

ACT II.—A Garden Restaurant near the Castle - JOSEPH HARKER

ACT III.—Throne-Room in the Castle - - - JOSEPH HARKER

EVERY EVENING at 8.30, MATINEE WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30,

THE SALOON,

A Play, in One Act, by HENRY JAMES.

Kate Julian ... ... DORA BARTON	Mrs. Julian ... ... MARY STUART
Spencer Coyle ... HALLIWELL HOBBES	Bobby Lechmere ... OWEN NARES
Mrs. Coyle ... FRANCES WETHERALL	Owen Wingrave ... EVERARD VANDERLIP

Scene ... After Dinner at the Country Home of General Sir Philip Wingrave, K.C.B.

AT 9.

JUST TO GET MARRIED,

A Comedy, in Three Acts,
By CICELY HAMILTON.

Frances Melliship	DORA BARTON
Mrs. Macartney	MAUD CRESSALL
Georgina Vicary ... (Lady Catherine's Niece) ...	GERTRUDE KINGSTON
Daphne Grayle ... ... (Sir Theodore's Daughter) ...	DOROTHY MINTO
Tod Grayle ... ... (Sir Theodore's Son) ...	EVERARD VANDERLIP
Lady Catherine Grayle ... (Sir Theodore's Wife) ...	FRANCES WETHERALL
Sir Theodore Grayle	THOMAS SIDNEY
Adam Lankester	RUPERT LISTER
Butler	ROBERT C. HARCOURT
Dobbins ... ... (A Railway Porter)	ARTHUR FAYNE

Act I. ... Drawing Room at Sir Theodore Grayle's Country House (evening).
Act II. ... ... Library at same (afternoon, two months later).
Act III. ... General Waiting Room at Puckeridge Station (same night).

The Characters in both Plays are given in the order in which they speak.

Antique Furniture by T. H. Halliday, Minehead, Somerset (who will shortly open a Branch in Mayfair).
Dresses by Power, Ltd., Sloane Street. Miss Cressall's Dresses by Sonia, South Moulton Street.
Third Act Furniture kindly lent by South-Eastern and Chatham Railway Co.
Electric Light on Stage installed and controlled by W. E. Siday.
Decorations and Furniture by Waring & Gillow. Foyer, Tea Rooms and Passage Curtains by Burnet.

A Gong will be sounded before the rise of the Curtain.

The MEIER TRIO will play during the evening.

This Theatre may be engaged for Afternoon Concerts, or Theatrical Matinees on any days except Wednesdays and Saturdays. All applications should be made to the Booking Agents, ASHTON & MITCHELL' ROYAL AGENCY, 33, Old Bond Street, W.

Business Manager	ARTHUR PENLEY
Stage Manager	HUBERT BLOUNT

THE LITTLE THEATRE

JOHN STREET, ADELPHI, W.C.

Manageress Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON

Tuesday Evening Jan. 17

TUESDAY EVENING Jan. 17 1911

Stall STALL 10/6

No. J 21 No. J 21

No Hats or Bonnets allowed.
This portion to be given up.

This Ticket is sold subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes, and is sold only subject to this condition.

This to be retained

Miss Hamilton's comedy was preceded by a new play, in one act, by Henry James, entitled

"THE SALOON." 17/Jan

Kate Julian ..... Miss DORA BARTON
Spencer Coyle ..... Mr. HALLIWELL HOBBES
Mrs. Coyle ..... Miss FRANCES WETHERALL
Mrs. Julian ..... Miss MARY STUART
Bobby Lechmere ..... Mr. OWEN NARES
Owen Wingrave ..... Mr. EVERARD VANDERLIP

Apart from some wearisome discussion, the above playlet is undeniably effective, and is uncanny to a degree. The house of Wingrave has ever been famed for its martial heroes, except in the case of one ancestor, who would not become a soldier, and was so beaten by his enraged father that he died. The bloodthirsty parent met his death soon after, and has ever since acted as the family ghost. History repeats itself, for Owen Wingrave, the present heir to the estates, has been reading Peace literature, and has acquired such an objection to war—not from want of courage, but from humanitarian motives—that he refuses to go up for an army examination. He is disinherited in consequence, and rejected by his sweetheart, herself a soldier's daughter. In a scene of heated recrimination she hints at cowardice, but when she tells him that the saloon in which they stand is the favourite haunt of his savage ancestor, who is prepared to slay again, she realises his intrepidity, withdraws her insinuations, and begs him not to stay. Owen is deaf to her entreaties, and defies the unquiet spirit. There is a sudden darkness and a shriek of anguish, and when lights are brought Owen is found dead.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 19th, AT 8,
AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT EVENING AT 8.30,
CHARLES FROHMAN and ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH
PRESENT

PRESERVING MR. PANMURE.

A Comic Play in Four Acts,
By ARTHUR PINERO.

The Right Hon. Reginald Stulkeley, M.P. ..	..	DAWSON MILWARD
Talbot Woodhouse ..	(his Private Secretary) ..	DION BOUCICAULT
St. John Panmure, J.P. ..	.. .. ..	ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Alfred Hebblethwaite, M.P. ..	.. .. ..	EDMUND MAURICE
Hugh Loring	.. .. ..	RUPERT LUMLEY
Brabner	Butler and Footman at "The Clewers"	FREDERICK CULLEY
Kitts		LANCE GEORGE
Grant	(Servant at Mr. Stulkeley's) ..	LEWIS FIELDER
Mrs. Panmure ..	.. .. ..	LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
Myrtle	(her Daughter) ..	IRIS HAWKINS
Mrs. Hebblethwaite	(Mrs. Panmure's Aunt) ..	KATE SERGEANTSON
Dulcie Anstice ..	(Mrs. Panmure's Sister) ..	MARGUERITE LESLIE
Miss Stulkeley ..	.. .. ..	ADA FERRAR
Josepha Quarendon	.. .. ..	MARIE LÖHR

The Scene is laid first at "The Clewers," Tollshunt d'Arcy, near Polehampton, and afterwards at Mr. Stulkeley's house in London.

THE CURTAIN WILL BE LOWERED FOR A MOMENT IN THE COURSE OF THE SECOND ACT.

The Costumes worn by Miss Marie Löhr by PAQUIN, Ltd.; Miss Braithwaite's, Miss Sergeantson's and Miss Ada Ferrar's by LUCILE, Ltd.; Miss Marguerite Leslie's by Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR.
The Hats worn by Miss Löhr and Miss Leslie by ZYROT ET CIE.

Programme of Music.
Musical Director—HERBERT E. HAINES.

OVERTURE	"Ruy Blas"	Mendelssohn
TWO DANCES	"Dance of the Children" / "A Country Fête"	Haines
SELECTION	"The Quaker Girl"	Monckton
SUITE	"Ballet Russe"	Luigini

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, JANUARY 21st, AT 2.30, AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY FOLLOWING.

Business Manager - - - (for Charles Frohman) - - - JAMES W. MATHEWS
Stage Manager - - - - - - - - - - CLIFFORD BROOKE

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Tw... ...ws, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. G... ...Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager - - - LEONARD LILLIES

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord ...of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. ...e Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must ... there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once ... to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditor... ...ssages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether p...

COMEDY THEATRE 19
Sole Lessee.
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
19/1/1911
STALL
H22
To be retained

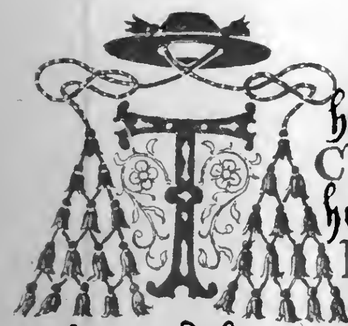
Hazell, Watson & Sons, Ltd., London, N. and Bungay, Suffolk.

Messrs. Charles Frohman and Arthur Chudleigh deserve the gratitude of all playgoers for inducing Sir Arthur Pinero to emerge from his temporary retirement, and present the public with such an amusing piece as Preserving Mr. Panmure. It is designated "a comic play," a description which is not without a touch of happy vagueness; and certainly the new piece contains plenty of variety. It is at times almost farcical in its business—a child's face is smudged with powder, and a man gets his hand into a vase and cannot at once extract it; but, on the other hand, the comedy rises in parts to the height of merciless satire. No more mordant picture of base cowardice and selfish hypocrisy has been seen on the stage for years than Sir Arthur's sketch of a lascivious sneak in St. John Panmure, M.P. It is repulsive, yet ludicrous; droll, yet vitriolically mordant. How perfect a master of his art the author is appears in the way in which he has built a very diverting piece on a mere incident. Mrs. Panmure is a lady with aspirations and ideals, the leader of a sect of "Fine Souls." She has married a worn-out rake to reform him, and he plays the part of the regenerated reprobate to the top of his bent, even preaching sermonettes after prayers each evening. With characteristic benevolence, Mrs. Panmure has engaged as governess for her little girl, Josepha Quarendon, who has had some hard times, and is "in clover" at "The Clewers." Being very pretty and pleasant, all the men visitors at the house pay her attention. But only the master of it is mean enough to insult her by kissing her against her will.

Josepha, who loves Mrs. Panmure and would do anything to spare her pain, is in a difficulty. Ought she to leave the house? She consults Mrs. Hebblethwaite, the wife of a not-too-faithful middle-aged M.P., pretending that she is doing so on behalf of a girl friend who has written to her; but the pretence is soon exposed, and then Mrs. Hebblethwaite and Dulcie Anstice, the fiancée of a stupid youth named Hugh Loring, who admires Josepha like the rest, demand to know who kissed Miss Quarendon. Josepha will not tell, and, in desperation, goes to the library, where Mr. Stukeley, a slightly pompous M.P., is preparing his speech, and begs him and his secretary, Talbot Woodhouse, to take, one or the other of them, the blame of the osculation. They refuse, and she goes out into a snowstorm to martyrise herself by walking up and down in a thin evening dress. Returning, wet through, she is put into a lavatory to change to a man's dressing-gown and slippers. Then she lets out that it was Mr. Panmure who kissed her. Exposure seems inevitable, when the secretary, who, like everyone else, is in love with Josepha, takes on himself the blame of the offence.

In the last act, after more merry incidents, Josepha pairs off with Stukeley, getting a good husband as a consolation for her sufferings. There is a good deal in Preserving Mr. Panmure that makes one's laughter rather cynical than joyous; but the witty invention of the piece and its many amusing points secured for it an undeniable success, the audience being demonstrative.

EVERY EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK.



To-night, 25th January, 1911, the 168th Performance.

The longest run under Sir Herbert Tree's 14 years of Management at His Majesty's Theatre.

SHAKESPEARE'S

KING HENRY VIII.

King Henry VIII.		ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Cardinal Wolsey		HERBERT TREE
Cardinal Campeius	(Legate from the Pope)	S. A. COOKSON
Cranmer	(Archbishop of Canterbury)	CHARLES FULLER
Duke of Norfolk		A. E. GEORGE
Duke of Buckingham		BASIL GILL
Duke of Suffolk		EDWARD O'NEILL
Earl of Surrey		GERALD LAWRENCE
Lord Chamberlain		EDWARD SASS
Capucius		FRANCIS CHAMIER
Lord Abergavenny		CLARENCE DERWENT
Lord Sands		WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Sir Henry Guildford		EDMUND GURNEY
Sir Thomas Lovell		HENRY C. HEWITT
Sir Nicholas Vaux		CHARLES JAMES
Thomas Cromwell	(Secretary to Cardinal Wolsey)	REGINALD OWEN
Griffith	(Usher to Queen Katharine)	HENRY MORRELL
1st Gentleman		CYRIL SWORDER
2nd Gentleman		CHARLES HOWARD
Garter King at Arms		CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
Surveyor to the Duke of Buckingham		ACTON BOND
Sergeant-at-Arms		ARTHUR GASKILL
Servant		W. B. ABINGDON
A Crier		EDMUND GOULDING
A Scribe		JAMES SMYTHSON
Jester		ROSS SHORE
Queen Katharine		Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH
Anne Bullen		Miss LAURA COWIE
An Old Lady		Mrs. CHARLES CALVERT
Patience	(Waiting Maid to Queen Katharine)	Miss LILA BARCLAY

The banket given by Cardinal Wolsey in honor of hys Matie King Henry VIII hys nobile quene & hys goodlye companie Jay 29 1911.

Lytel dishes from ye syde

Fyshes

Veallz bredded sette in creme

A shepe roasted whole

Small chekens garnyshed wth morcells of pigg & pruannes

Flummery

Divers cates frutes & comfites such as ladyes love

Wynes. renyshe. reid. whyte. sak. clariet. mammsye & spyced beare. also new wyne.

Stage Banquet.

The lighted front of His Majesty's Theatre last Sunday evening induced many a passer-by in the Haymarket to stop and inquire the cause. The reason for the unwonted appearance of what is our National Theatre was that Sir Herbert Tree was entertaining his company to dinner and had asked some other friends to join them. At the top of the marble stairs, by the foyer, stood the "chief" to welcome his friends to the banquet that the menu stated was "given by Cardinal Wolsey, in honour of his Majesty King Henry VIII., his noble Queen, and his good company." From the foyer and balcony the banqueting hall, into which the stage had been transformed, looked a picturesque sight. It was Cardinal Wolsey's Banquet Hall, extended beyond its usual dimensions, glistening with lights reflected on the white tables, the glass, and plate.

Merriment and Good Cheer.

Never did any company sit down to dinner in happier mood than did that last Sunday. Sir Herbert first drank their health from a silver cup, said a few words of welcome in Shakespearean phrases to King Henry the Eighth, grace was sung, and then all was merriment and good cheer. The menu was set out on cards in curious phrases . . . The sweets were described as "Divers cakes frutes and confites such as laydes love." Four men carried in "a shepe roasted whole" on a great trencher; the "wynes" were—"renysher, reid, white, sak, clariet, and spyced beare, also a new wyne." The "new" wine was said champagne—for sparkling wines were not in Wolsey's time, and Sir Herbert had recourse to strategy to excuse his hospitality.

Twinkling Stars.

Sir Herbert sat at the head of one table, Lady Tree at the head of another, Mr. Bourchier another. Nearly 140 sat at the five tables, all the company of the theatre and many friends. The stage had many representatives; Miss Violet Vanbrugh, Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Lily Brayton, Miss Dorothea Baird, Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, Miss Phyllis Terry, and Miss Marie Löhr were the "leading" ladies; Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Oscar Asche, Mr. Laurence Irving, Mr. Robert Loraine, and Mr. H. B. Irving were the actor-managers; Sir Alma-Tadema, the Duke of Rutland, Sir Alfred Turner, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, Sir Alfred Fripp, the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Mr. and Mrs. George Cornwallis-West were among the lay guests. When dinner was over some of the guests volunteered to sing. A piano had to be found. The young people wanted to keep it upstairs for a dance, I think. They thought the labour of getting it to the stage would be too great. The others said "No"; so a dozen men carried it to the stage, and at midnight a dozen men carried it down again, and then up half a dozen flights of stairs—a hundred steps in all, perhaps—to the foyer, and there the young people, and the not so young, danced and enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. When I came out into the wind-swept, deserted Haymarket, it was getting towarde two o'clock, and I thought the stars overhead were more bright and twinkling than usual. It had been a most enjoyable evening with Cardinal Wolsey—wholehearted host!

WITCH CRAFT AT THE COURT.

On the afternoon of January 31st, the play in four acts, adapted from the Norwegian of H. Wiers-Jensen, by John Masefield, entitled

"THE WITCH."

Merete Beyer .....Miss Janet Achurch
Bonte .....Miss Helen Boucher
Anne Pedersdotter .....Miss Lillah McCarthy
Jornnd .....Miss Vera Coburn
David .....Mr. Laurence Hanbay
Herlofs-Marte .....Miss Penelope Wheeler
Martin .....Mr. Arthur Wontner
Absolon ..... Mr. Claude Kind
Mester Jorgan .....Mr. J. H. Brewer
Town Guards .....Mr. W. Hubert / Mr. Stuart Musgrove / Mr. William Farr
Mester Olaus .....Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Mester Laurentius .....Mr. George Ingleton
Mester Johannes .....Mr. Arthur Whitby
The Bishop .....Mr. Ralph Huiton

Mr. John Maxfield's version of H. Weirs-Jennsen's Norwegian drama was played for the first time in England at the Royalty Theatre, Glasgow, on October 10th last, with Miss Madge McIntosh as Anne Pedersdotter, and Mr. G. W. Anson as Absolon, and Miss Lillah McCarthy presented it at the first of her series of matinées at the Court Theatre, last Tuesday. The period of Weirs-Jensen's play is 1574, and it deals with two peculiarly painful themes. The horrible cruelties to which the people of the sixteenth century were impelled by their belief in witchcraft is one of these subjects; the love of a young wife, married to an elderly husband, for her step-son is the other. The grave and gruesome tragedy works itself out thus:—In the first act we see Anne, the wife of Absolon Beyer, the pastor of a parish near Bergen, awaiting the return of Martin, Absolon's son by his first wife. In the distance noises are heard; the burgomaster and the Town Guards are hunting down Herlofs-Marte, a reputed witch. The poor old woman eventually enters, and begs for refuge, which is given her by Anne. Then Martin arrives, and introduces himself to his stepmother, whom he sees for the first time. They are mutually pleased with each other; and, at the close of the act, the Town Guard arrive and there is a painful scene when the reputed witch is discovered, arrested, and forcibly carried off to execution.

In the second act, it is evident that Anne has fallen in love with Martin, and that she is unhappy with her husband. Absolon comes from assisting at the burning of the witch, and tells Anne that her mother, in the past, had confessed to him her possession of a knowledge of witchcraft, and a power to bring about events by willing that they shall happen. Anne is tempted to try if the power is hereditary, and wishes Martin to come to her. At the third wishing, he arrives and is clasped in his stepmother's arms.

In the next act the guilty passion of the pair has increased; and Anne thinks she will wish her husband dead, and see what will happen. She tries the experiment, which succeeds from natural causes. For, when Anne tells Absolon that he has "chested her out of five years of happiness," and that she wishes he were dead, his heart is broken, and he falls dead in his chair. In the fourth act, his mother accuses Anne of having killed Absolon by witchcraft, and having by the same means won the guilty love of the son. Anne is put to the "ordeal by touch," but as she approaches the coffin and extends her hand, her courage fails her, and she breaks down hysterically and—self-deceived by circumstances—confesses to the crime she believes she has committed.

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S S.W.

PRODUCED ON WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 1st, 1911

EVERY EVENING at 8.30

WILL BE ACTED

The Witness for the Defence

A New Play, in Four Acts,

By A. E. W. MASON

Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER	as	Henry Thresk
Mr. LYSTON LYLE	„	Stephen Ballantyne
Mr. ALFRED BISHOP	„	Harold Hazlewood
Mr. LESLIE FABER	„	Richard Hazlewood
Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE	„	Robert Pettifer
Mr. E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS	„	Hubbard
Mr. FRANK ARUNDEL	„	a Servant
Mr. G. TREVOR ROLLER	„	Baram Singh
Miss ETHEL IRVING	„	Stella Ballantyne
Miss MARIE LINDEN	„	Mrs. Pettifer

Act I. ... The Interior of a Tent in Rajputana, India. Evening
(Two years elapse.)

Act II. ... At Mr. Hazlewood's, Little Beding, Sussex. Evening
(During this Act the curtain will be lowered to mark the passage of time to an Afternoon five weeks later.)

Act III. ... The Same ... ... Night

Act IV. ... The Same ... ... The Next Morning

It is sometimes very difficult in a case of homicide to decide whether the act is "justifiable" or not, and when a half-crazy and wholly brutal husband approaches his wife with a revolver in his pocket it is hard to say if she is very wrong in "dropping" him with a shot from a rook-rifle

The Witness for the Defence begins in a delightful atmosphere of refined melodrama. We are in a dimly lighted tent in Rajputana, where anything may happen; and there are thrilling suggestions of native seditionists and criminals who stick at nothing in the way of taking human life. The owner of the tent is Stephen Ballantyne, an Indian official, whose nerves have given way under the influence of dread and whisky drinking, and who treats his wife Stella abominably. They are visited by a successful lawyer from England named Stephen Thresk, who had known and loved Stella in the past. He soon realises her miserable position, but of course can do nothing to mend it. He goes off to catch his train; and Stella, who has been made even more wretched by the sight of him, takes her rook rifle, and prepares to commit suicide. Ballantyne re-enters, and Thresk, returning to fetch his pipe, sees Stella, gun in hand, facing her husband.

We learn in the second act that Ballantyne was shot dead on the night of Thresk's visit, that Stella was tried for murder at Bombay, that when she conviction became almost certain she was saved by Thresk giving evidence which threw suspicion of the crime on some seditionists unknown, that she has returned to her native place in Sussex, and that the son of Harold Hazlewood, a big-wig of the neighbourhood, has fallen in love with her. Hazlewood's son-in-law Pettifer, a solicitor, is not convinced of Stella's innocence; and, getting Thresk to come down to Little Beding, puts him through a sharp cross-examination on his evidence at the trial. Thresk finds an answer for everything, but, in the third act, when he and Stella have a meeting at midnight, we learn that he perjured himself at the trial to save her, and she tells him how she shot her husband, half in self-defence and half by accident. Thresk insists on her telling young Dick Hazlewood the truth; but she refuses, as she and he are already secretly married. However, old Hazlewood comes upon the disputants and demands an explanation; and the disclosure cannot be avoided. Dick, however, sticks to his wife and supports her; and Thresk, who loved Stella, but sacrificed his affection for her to his ambition, returns, somewhat grimly, to his practice at the Bar.

Thursday, February 2nd, 1911, and Every Evening at 8, will be produced
A New Play in Four Acts, entitled

THE POPINJAY

By BOYLE LAWRENCE and FREDERICK MOUILLOT.

"I can choose my King Popinjay and play what farce or tragedy I may with him."—CARLYLE.

The play is suggested by, and includes certain incidents from, Daudet's "Rois en Exil"; but in the dramatic development of the story, and in the denouement, is entirely original.

King Christian II. (The Popinjay)	Mr. FRED TERRY
Prince Zara (his Son)	Master ERIC RAE
General the Duke von Rosen	Mr. J. CARTER-EDWARDS
Count Herbert von Rosen	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
Elysée Meraut	Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Lebeau	Mr. H. HUMBERSTON WRIGHT
Boscovitch	Mr. J. L. DALE
The Marquis of Hezeta	Mr. PHILIP MERIVALE
Tom Lewis	Mr. FREDERICK GROVES
Sauvadon	Mr. HORACE HODGES
Office Boy	Mr. R. EASTEN PICKERING
Major Domo	Mr. LESLIE GORDON
1st Servant	Mr. JOHN BEAMISH
2nd Servant	Mr. HAROLD ANSTRUTHER
Sephora Lewis	Miss MIRIAM LEWES
Colette, Countess von Rosen	Miss MOLLY TERRAINE
Queen Frederique	Miss JULIA NEILSON

Misses MANNING, VAUDERZEE, BRODIE, DUBOIS, ADAMSON, CAWDERY, MASON; Messrs. RHADEN, BARRIE, FISHER, MCMASTER, SYLVAINE, MONRO.

The Song in the Second Act sung by Mr. MAURICE ELVEY.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. ... ... The Royal Residence—The Drawing Room.
ACT II., Scene 1 (Three months later) ... ... Tom Lewis's Office
Scene 2 (The next morning) ... ... The Drawing Room
ACT III. (The next day) ... The Royal Residence—The King's Study
ACT IV., Scene 1 (A few hours later) ... ... Tom Lewis's Office
Scene 2 (The next day) ... ... The Throne Room

PERIOD—THE PRESENT. An Interval of Ten Minutes between each Act. PLACE—PARIS.

Furniture by Messrs. Waring & Gillow, Gill & Reigate, and Miss Spring; arranged by Osborne, Hanover Square.
The Ladies' Dresses specially designed and executed by Messrs. Reville & Rossiter, of Hanover Square, W.
Costumes by L. & H. Nathan. Scenery by R. C. McCleery. Wigs by Clarkson.

The Play produced under the Direction of Mr. FRED TERRY.
The Music for this Production specially written and Composed by Mr. SYDNEY FFOULKES.

Programme of Music.

Overture	"The Popinjay"	S. Ffoulkes
	AFTER ACT I.
Selection	"Carmen"	Bizet
	AFTER ACT II.
Entr'acte	"La Voix des Cloches"	Luigini
Scherzo		Mendelssohn
	AFTER ACT III.
Andante and Rondo Capriccioso		Mendelssohn

The Song and March, specially written for this play by Sydney Ffoulkes, are published by Joseph Williams & Co., 32, Gt. Portland St., W.

Musical Director ... Mr. SYDNEY FFOULKES.

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. and £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s.
Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Box Office open Daily from 10 to 10. Telephone No. 2473 Gerrard.

Stage Manager	Mr. JOHN R. TURNBULL
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. GOODWIN NOCK	Advertisement Manager	Mr. ALFRED W. POPE
General Manager	Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY at 2.30.

NEW
THEATRE,
St. Martin's Lane.

EVENING
Thursday Feb. 2
1911

Orch. Stall, 10/6

No H 149
Left [To be retained.

"The Popinjay" was originally produced at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle, on October 24, 1907, by Mr. Fred Terry and Miss Julia Neilson. It has, therefore, taken a rather long time to reach the Metropolis, but judging by the warmth of its reception at the New Theatre, on Thursday night, it has come to stay. According to an intimation printed on the programme the play is suggested by and includee certain incidents from Dandit's novel, "Rois en Exil," but in the dramatic development of the story and in the denouement is entirely original. Christian II. is driven from his kingdom by a revolution of his subjects, but he does not feel his exile very keenly, and is quite ready to accept substantial consolation in the shape of £8,000,000, which his late subjects offer him, on condition that he will resign all claims on the throne of Carpathia for himself and his heirs for ever. When the curtain rises we find that the king and queen and their little son, Prince Zara, are living as exiles in an hotel in Paris. They are under the impression that it is their own private fortune that is keeping up their show of some regal state, but as a matter of fact the money is being secretly provided by their faithful friend, General the Duke von Rosen. The King cares only for the gay life which Paris offers him, and in order to gratify his extravagant tastes and his reckless gambling, he borrows money of a shady firm, of which the principals are Tom Lewis, an Englishman, his wife, Sephora, and her uncle, Sauvadon, an elderly Jew. In league with them is Lebeau, the King's crafty valet. Queen Frederique is anxious that the King shall again resume his royal position in Carpathia, but her plans are thwarted by her dissolute husband, who prefers freedom to all the glories of a palace. He allows himself to become the dupe of the money-lenders, and they become possessed of the jewels that adorn the crown, clever imitation stones being substituted for them by the Jew, Sauvadon. The amorous monarch also falls a victim to the charms of Sephora, and he actually bestows upon her the title of countess, much to the disgust and indignation of the Queen. Matters reach a climax when she discovers that the King has disposed of the crown jewels, and that he is about to sign a document forfeiting all claims to the throne as regards both himself and his heirs for ever. The Queen herself drawe up another paper in which the King declares that he will abdicate in favour of his son; and when she insists that he shall sign this document and destroy the other one he flatly refuses. His wife, however, is now a desperate woman, and she declares that she will sacrifice his life and that of their son unless he obeys her. The King is forced to submit, and in the final scene the prince is proclaimed King, while the deposed monarch has to submit to the insults of the mercenary gang, who having made him their tool, now despise him.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

SOLE LESSEE & MANAGER: CHARLES FROHMAN

FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF PERFORMANCES ONLY.

February 6.

Each Evening at 8.30,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

GRACE,

A Play, in Four Acts,

By W. SOMERSET, MAUGHAM.

Claude Insole	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Rev. Archibald Insole...	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Henry Cobbet	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Gann	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Moore	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Grace Insole	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH
Mrs. Insole	LADY TREE
Miss Vernon of Foley	Miss LILLAH McCARTHY
Miss Hall	Miss MARY BARTON
Edith Lewis	Miss NINA SEVENING
Margaret Gann	Miss EVANGELINE HILLIARD

The action of the Play takes place at Kenyon-Fulton, Claude Insole's place in Somersetshire.

Acts I., II. and IV.	The Drawing Room.
Act III.	The Dining Room.

12 18

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF MR. ARTHUR HARDY.

TO-NIGHT AT 8.30,

THE SPECKLED BAND:

An Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

By ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

Dr. Grimesby Rylott	A retired Anglo-Indian Surgeon, owner of Stoke Place	Mr. LYN HARDING
Enid Stonor	(Dr. Rylott's Step-daughter)	Miss CHRISTINE SILVER
Mrs. Staunton	(Housekeeper to Dr. Rylott)	Miss GRACE EDWIN
Rodgers	(Butler to Dr. Rylott)	Mr. A. S. HOMEWOOD
Ali, an Indian	(Valet to Dr. Rylott)	Mr. GERALD ROGERS
Mr. Scott Wilson	(Engaged to Enid's Sister)	Mr. ALFRED BEAUMONT
Mr. Armitage	(the Village Grocer)	Mr. E. H. BROOKE
Mr. Longbrace	(the Coroner)	Mr. WALTER RINGHAM
Mr. Brewer	(Foreman of the Jury)	Mr. FRANK RIDLEY
Inspector Downing		Mr. GEOFFREY HILL
Coroner's Officer		Mr. GEORGE LAUNDY
Mr. Holt Loaming	Clients of Mr. Sherlock Holmes	Mr. A. G. CRAIG
Mr. James B. Montague		Mr. ALFRED BEAUMONT
Mr. Milverton		Mr. FRANK RIDLEY
Billy	(Page to Mr. Sherlock Holmes)	Master CECIL F. LOWRIE
Dr. Watson		Mr. CLAUDE KING
Mr. Sherlock Holmes		Mr. O. P. HEGGIE

JURORS: Messrs. E. CRESFAN, C. V. WALLACE, E. CHRISTOPHER, J. HUGHES, C. L. BROCKNER, E. BARTON, C. M. ROBERTS, H. FORD, C. LAUNDY, W. BRUCE, F. BINNINGTON, V. LUSK.

Act I. ... ... The Hall of Stoke Place, Stoke Moran
(Two Years are supposed to elapse.)

Act II. ... Scene 1 ... ... Dr. Rylott's Study, Stoke Place
(Interval of Two Minutes.)

Scene 2 ... ... Mr. Sherlock Holmes' Rooms, Upper Baker Street, London

Act III. ... Scene 1 ... ... The Hall of Stoke Place
(Interval of Four Minutes.)

Scene 2. ... ...Enid's Bedroom, Stoke Place

Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ. Wigs by CLARKSON. Miss Silver's Dresses by Mrs. CALEB PORTER.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

Musical Director—BRIGATA BUCALOSSI.

OVERTURE	"Egmont"	... Beethoven
1ST ENTR'ACTE	"The Speckled Band" (An Indian Melody in G Minor.)	... Brigata Bucalossi
2ND ENTR'ACTE	"Pagliacci"	Leoncavello

General Manager ... ... Mr. FRED PEMBERTON.
Stage Manager ... Mr. W. W. KEENE. | Assistant Stage Manager ... Mr. OSWALD STRONG.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

STRAND THEATRE

6/2/1911

E

STALL

No. B 1

To be retained

19

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8TH, 1911, AT 7.30

(Subsequent Evenings at 8),

HERBERT TRENCH

PRESENTS

ALL THAT MATTERS

A New and Original Comedy of English Life, in Four Acts,

By CHARLES McEVOY.

Olive Kimber	Miss PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY
Mrs. Kimber	Miss HELEN HAYE
Rachel Strong	Miss CARLOTTA ADDISON
Mrs. Mason	Miss CLARE GREET
Phœbe Mason	Miss GLADYS HARVEY
Miss Fenner	Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
Miss Banks	Miss ENID ROSE
Mrs. Boyd	Miss AGNES THOMAS
Maud	Miss MABEL ADAIR
Allan Hyde	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
Stanley Kimber	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Henry Pacy	Mr. E. LYALL SWETE
James Gill	Mr. E. A. WARBURTON
Isaac Strong	Mr. J. FISHER WHITE
Kenneth Mason	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
Mr. Tisdale	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
Mr. Twidle	Mr. NORMAN PAGE

HAYMARKET

Manager
HARRISON
TRENCH

Wednesday
Evening
Feb. 8

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No K 21

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

Act I. ...	Scene 1.	The Hyde Manor, Coombe Bay, Dorset.	(Afternoon)
	Scene 2.	A Sheepfold on Woolstone Downs ...	(An hour later)
Act II.		Drawing Room at Kimber's Farm, near Woolstone	(Two days later)
Act III.		The Same	(Two weeks later)
Act IV. ...	Scene 1.	A Cave near Woolstone	(An hour later)
	Scene 2.	The Downs ...	(Before daybreak the following day)

The Musical Preludes and Interludes have been specially written for the Play by NORMAN O'NEILL.

Scenery designed by F. CAYLEY ROBINSON, A.W.R.S. and JOSEPH HARKER, and painted by JOSEPH HARKER.

Miss Terry's Dresses by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY. Furniture by SPILLMAN.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR ... NORMAN O'NEILL | STAGE MANAGER ... CHARLES LA TROBE

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

After Act I.	(a) Prelude and Gavotte from "Les petits riens" ...	... Mozart
	(b) "English Dance"	Cyril Scott
After Act II.	(a) "Berceuse"	Jahnfelt
	(b) "Dance"	... Grieg
	(c) "Souvenir"	Holbrooke
After Act III.	(a) "En Bateau"	Debussy
	(b) "Prelude"	Rachmaninoff

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 2.

(First Matinee Saturday, February 11th.)

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Box Office (Mr. W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10.

Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £4 4s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 5s.; Upper Circle (reserved), 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Telephone—GERRARD 3344.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Lessee and Manager .. .. .. FREDERICK HARRISON

Director .. HERBERT TRENCH

BUSINESS MANAGER ... ... HORACE WATSON

Mr. Charles McEvoy, the author of "All That Matters," is, we believe, country born and bred, and lives at Aldbourne, in Wiltshire. His first play, "David Ballard," was produced by the Stage Society at the Imperial Theatre in 1907; and since that date he has written "His Helpmate," "Gentlemen of the Road," and "Lucifer"—all of which were presented at the Midland Theatre, Manchester—and "When the Devil was Ill," which was done at Carlisle in 1908. His latest piece is racy of the soil, and reminds us of one of Mr. Hardy's novels.

There are so many things than charm and delight us in Mr. McEvoy's work that it is difficult to be impartial in criticising its defects. Its characterisation is admirable. Every personage has individuality; and the hero and heroine, instead of being commonplace perfections, have just the dash of unreason which is an attribute of the modern young man and young woman. Thus, though their outbursts are sometimes bewildering, the individuals themselves are full of interest. Then there is the well-to-do country "cad," with his veneer of clammy courtesy, and the brutal and avaricious farmer, his half-sharp, half-silly wife, and an ancient shepherd, whose rustic prose is only too natural, and a vicar's wife artificially agreeable and overflowing with pinchbeck politeness. Some of the dialogue is really of good literary quality; and the story, when we get to it, is interesting. The first act is occupied entirely with exposition. We learn that there are three "notables" in the district of Combe Bay, on the Dorset Downs. One, Allan Hyde, is the descendant of a once rich and powerful family; another, Henry Pacy, is "worth ten thousand a year;" and a third, Stanley Kimber, is a grasping, half-educated farmer, with a daughter of the passionately revolted type, very pretty, with plenty of ideas, and a will of her own. She is in love with Allan Hyde; but, as he is as sensitive and explosive as she, they quarrel easily. When Allan tells her that he has been letting his farm go to the dogs because his chief interest has been love for her, she says she has "done him harm," and urges him to accomplish something of his own desire and initiative. He misunderstands her, and shows his jealousy of Pacy, whom he despises; and they quarrel.

Allan is thinking of selling his lease, and Pacy and Kimber both want to get it. But Pacy wants to marry Olive; and he proposes to Kimber a compromise. If the farmer will encourage his—Pacy's—suit, the latter will give the lease of Allan's farm to Olive as her marriage settlement, so that her father will possess it to all intents and purposes. An accident assists Pacy's design. Some Cockney tourists who have halted at Allan's house have, as a joke, written to Pacy, suggesting that he shall marry Olive; and this note, signed "A Well-wisher," appears to have come from Allan. Olive is furiously indignant, and decides to accept Pacy.

But her father's consent depends on the business arrangement "coming off," and on Allan deciding to sell. Understanding this, he comes to see the girl, who is proudly obstinate, and adheres to her resolve. So, after a bitter scene, they part at enmity.

Of course, matters must not end like this, so Allan, Olive, and the tourists get caught by the tide in a cave on the seashore. The tourists, in dread of death, confess their sins, including the writing of the anonymous letter, and, as that epistle was the strongest reason why Olive would not "make it up" with Allan, he and she easily come to an understanding, and are saved, both from drowning and from wasted affections.

Acting Manager Mr. A. ALDIN.

8

"BY GEORGE!"

CORONATION REVUE, in 3 Scenes,

11 February

By GEORGE GROSSMITH, Junr.

Lyrics by C. H. BOVILL. Music Composed and Arranged by CUTHBERT CLARKE.

Produced by FRED FARREN and SPENCER BARRY.

The Costumes supervised by C. WILHELM.

Dresses by Miss HASTINGS, MORRIS ANGEL & CO., and Modern Dresses by Mme RAYMOND.

Miss Legarde's Dresses by Mme. HARJOUR.

Machinist, W. SHELDON. Properties by P. GRIEVESON. Electrician, C. WINTER.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

J. H. McARDLE AS The Yankee Tar—Himself —Angelson—Richard III.	MILLIE LEGARDE AS A Lady Golfer—Marie Lühr —Lady Ptarmigan— Constance Drever— A Peeress.	LIONEL MACKINDER AS The Aviator—Secretary of State—A. Seeker— Dr. Tinkle— Inconstant George.

"Put on your Ta-ta." "I'll Lend You Anything." "Good Mornin' Judge." Published by Francis, Day & Hunter.	"When good King George is crowned." Published by Francis, Day & Hunter. "The Grizzly Bear." Published by The Ted Snyder Co.

FRANCES KAPSTOWNE AS The Inspectress—Erin— A Jeune Fille— Harem-Scarem.	CLARENCE BLAKISTON AS The Old Passenger (Compère).	UNITY MORE AS The Candy Girl— The Quaker Girl (Commère).

Scene 1.—The Aero Station, Charing Cross. Scene 2.—Stage Door of "The Odoleum." Scene 3.—A Theatrical Costumier.

By BRUCE SMITH.

12 24

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietor — Sir Charles Wyndham
Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

EVERY EVENING AT 8.15,

"MR. JARVIS"

A Play in Four Acts, by LEON M. LION and MALCOLM CHERRY.
(Adapted from Beth Ellis's Novel, "Madam, will you walk"?)

Charles Lebrun	Mr. GERALD du MAURIER
Henry St. John, Viscount Bolinbroke	Mr. H. V. ESMOND
Lord Peter Wildmore	Mr. H. MARSH ALLEN
Lord Godolphin	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Sir Lionel Pilkerton	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Captain Drummond	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
The Duke D'Anmount	Mr. MERVYN RENTOUL
Sir George Holt	Mr. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Mr. Stanmore	Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
Andrew Willis	Mr. JULES SHAW
Jonathan Fielding...	Mr. ARTHUR WILLOUGHBY
Joseph	Mr. GUY CARY
Servant to Lady Margaret	Mr. TALBOT HOMEWOOD
Lady Margaret Beauchamp	Miss AMY BRANDON THOMAS
Lady Betty Acton	Miss DOROTHY BELL
Lady Anne Fairfax	Miss DOROTHY WALKER
Mistress Cochrane	Miss MARY RORKE
Mistress Stanmore	Miss MARY LESLIE
Mistress Fielding	Miss FLORENCE HARWOOD
Sarah Duchess of Marlborough	Miss HENRIETTA WATSON

Two Soldiers, Attaché, Fiddler, Porter, Postboy, Pedlar, Ostler, Clergyman, Valet, Priest, Two Maids, Lady Traveller.

PERIOD 1712.

Act I.	...Fielding's at Rochester. (Three days elapse)
Act II.	... Lady Margaret Beauchamp's House in London. (Two weeks elapse)
Act III.	... The Same. (Four hours elapse)
Act IV.	... Captain Drummond's Rooms in Bishopsgate

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Furniture designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I., and executed by J. A. FRASER.
Costumes designed by PERCY MACQUOID, and executed by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., King Street, Covent Garden. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.
(First Matinee Wednesday, 22nd February.)

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	PRELUDE TO THE PLAY		Ernest Bucalossi
2.	a. SUITE ... ... "Le Roi S'Amuse"		Délibes
	b AIR DE BALLET ... ..."Pierrette"..		Chaminade
3.	a. HIGHLAND MEMORIES		Hamish McCunn
	b. MENUET VIF		Louis Ganne
4.	a. INTERMEZZO ... ..."Coquette"... ...		Herbert Haines
	b. VALSE ... ..."Eternity"		Bernard Phelps

The Song sung in ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI.

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, ... and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. U... Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN 1 ... Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 7.45. ...ence at 8.15. Matinees 2.30.
Business Manager ... ... J. HERBERT JAY

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE

16/2/1911

Orch. Stall

H 160

To be retained

Beth Ellis's novel was published in 1906, and deals with that very interesting period, the beginning of the eighteenth century, when the Duke of Marlborough, and his strong-minded Duchess, were just coming into note; when Queen Anne maintained her rule, in spite of the fact that a large number of her nobility were strongly, if secretly, in favour of the return of the Stuarts. A period so full of intrigue is obviously well-suited to the requirements of the novelist and the playwright.

The difficulty is to find a hero amongst the rascals of the reign; and the novelist and the adaptors have had to invent one.

Charles Lebrun is an illegitimate son of the "Merry Monarch," and possesses so strongly the Stuart cast of countenance that he exactly resembles the Old Pretender, who, when the action opens, is said to have landed at Dover. Lebrun is existing precariously as a wandering fiddler, and is reduced to such straits that we find him, at an inn at Rochester, hiding himself so as to be able to purloin the remains of a supper which some opulent guests have left behind them. The party has included the unprincipled, though brilliant, Bolingbroke, Sarah Duchess of Marlborough—who is out of favour with the Queen, and wants to re-instate herself by proving to Anne that St. John and his party are traitors—and Captain Drummond, who is true to Anne's interests. It is he who suggests that Lebrun shall be presented as James II to a family with strong Stuart sympathies; and eventually Charles II's bastard is billeted on Mistress Cochrane, an ardent Jacobite, and the chaperone of Lady Margaret Beauchamp, a handsome young heiress. In this position Lebrun is paid to extract from Bolingbroke and other waverers written promises of support of "Mr. Jarvis," as the Old Pretender was cryptically called by his friends.

It is obvious to the youngest playgoer that Lebrun will fall in love with Lady Margaret; and so, indeed, he does; but he also carries out the proposed plan, and gets from Bolingbroke and his friends compromising documents enough to hang them if necessary. Of course, when Lady Margaret finds out that the man she loves is a treacherous spy, she is revolted and disgusted.

However, she loves him all the same; and, in the last act, comes to his lodgings to save him from Bolingbroke and the mob. Lebrun harangues the latter from a window, and is seriously wounded by a shot; so Lady Margaret relents, and there only remains the difficulty of the documents. This is got over by Drummond burning them when he receives them from Lebrun; and so all ends happily, with the union of the lovers and the escape of Bolingbroke and his friends from exposure.

25

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor ... ... Mr. J. H. LEIGH.
Under the Management of Messrs. J. H. LEIGH and R. T. E. NEEVES.

TUESDAY, THURSDAY & FRIDAY, Feb. 21st, 23rd & 24th

At 2.30

THE TRAGEDY OF NAN.

In THREE ACTS,

By JOHN MASEFIELD.

Characters.

Jenny Pargetter	MARY JERROLD
Mrs. Pargetter	HELEN BOUCHER
William Pargetter	HORACE HODGES
Nan Hardwick	LILLAH McCARTHY
Dick Gurvil	CLAUDE KING
Artie Pearce	ARTHUR CURTIS
Gaffer Pearce	H. R. HIGNETT
Tommy Harker	STUART MUSGROVE
Ellen	ETHEL EVANS
Susan	VERA COBURN
Rev. Mr. Drew	KENYON MUSGRAVE
Captain Dixon	GEORGE INGLETON
The Constable	CHRISMAS GROSE

A Kitchen in the house of a small tenant farmer at Broad Oak, on Severn, 1810.

The Play produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

ROCOCO.

A Farce in ONE ACT,

By GRANVILLE BARKER.

Rev. Simon Underwood	ARTHUR WHITBY
Mrs. Underwood	KATE BISHOP
Miss Underwood	AGNES THOMAS
Mortimer Uglow	NORMAN PAGE
Reginald Uglow	MONTAGU LOVE
Mrs. Reginald Uglow	GILLIAN SCAIFE

The Drawing Room in the Vicarage.

STRENUOUS FARCE.

NEW ONE-ACT PLAY BY MR. G. BARKER.

At the Court Theatre yesterday Miss Lillah McCarthy revived for a few special matinées Mr. John Masefield's powerfully passionate and gloomy play "Nan," which was followed by the production for the first time of a new one-act play in lighter vein by Mr. Granville Barker, called "Rococo."

In this strenuous little farce Mr. Barker let his humour run riot. The curtain went up on a free fight at a vicarage, in which the reverend host, lying on his back on the floor, with a fourteen-stone nephew on top of him, was getting the worst of the fray. As far as numbers went the combatants were equal—the vicar, his wife, and his sister on one side; the Uglows, father, son, and daughter-in-law, on the other.

The Rev. Simon Underwood, it was true, had only two women to help him to fight for the rococo vase bequeathed by his wife's brother, but his hard-faced sister, with a harder hand and a thimble on one finger, was as good as any two of the men. What the Rev. Mr. Underwood called the Christian and commercial spirit eventually brought peace. A discussion as to which branch of the family was to get the vase, given by the German Emperor to the now deceased councillor when he headed a deputation from the local chamber of commerce to Potsdam, took the place of blows. Acrimonious and offensive personal remarks were substituted for kicks.

The maiden sister with the hard fist and a thimble had, however, little care for diplomacy. An upper-cut delivered at random was her argument. She tried one at a most unexpected moment on the head of the opposite branch of the family, the mêlée began again, and in the midst of the uproar over went the table, carrying the coveted vase to its doom.

The farce is full of humour and delighted the audience. Even the six people on the stage were so amused that they could hardly restrain their laughter. J. W.

Prince of Wales' Theatre.

Lessee - FRANK CURZON

Under the Management of FRANK CURZON

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S Production

The Management request the honour of your presence

On Monday, February 20th, at 8.10 to witness the first performance of

"A NEAR THING"

A Play in One Act by

CHARLES H. DICKINSON.

Tommy Carr (Of the Stock Exchange) - Mr. GERALD AMES
Otto Lowenstein (A Company Promoter) Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
Sergeant Davis (Of the Police) - Mr. CHAS. B. VAUGHAN
Nell Cathcart - - - - - Miss MONA HARRISON

Scene:—Tommy Carr's Flat on the Second Floor in Bond Street.

Followed by

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S Production

(By arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN)

"INCONSTANT GEORGE"

The first night critic has had many experiences of burglars of the gentler sex, both amateur and professional, on the lesser and legitimate stages, and of late years the number of interesting crackswomen to be met with behind the footlights makes him pause to think whether the morality of the modern burglar play is any higher than that of "Jack Sheppard," which was, for many years, banned. Nell Cathcart, the heroine of Mr. Charles H. Dickinson's curtain-raiser, produced at the Prince of Wales', must have seen some of the productions to which we have alluded. But there is no question of morality in her case. As a girl of impulse, possessed of spirit and a love of adventure, she makes a bet that she will bargle the jeweller's next door. She makes her appearance in boy's clothes in the Bond-street flat of Tommy Carr, who, threatened with ruin on the Stock Exchange, is just about to shoot himself. Of course the suicide is averted. Tommy is sorely troubled in his mind because he is unable to deliver the 5,000 Golden Lucks he has sold, in consequence of a "corner" in those shares, engineered by Otto Löwenstein. (Why do unscrupulous financiers on the stage almost invariably bear foreign names?) Löwenstein, it appears, is in love with Tommy's sister, and declines to let him have the necessary shares unless he (Tommy) induces his sister to become Mrs. Löwenstein. Tom finds a sympathetic listener in Nell Cathcart—who gets into the teagown of his sister—and she sees a way out. Her father, Lord Cathcart, was also a victim of the treacherous Otto, through whose knavery he had committed suicide. Why Otto's forgeries had not been exposed in the Central Criminal Court is not explained; Nell has the incriminating papers; and these she eventually hands over to Otto—to whom she has 'phoned—in exchange for the shares wanted by Tom. Of course Tom is eternally grateful to the little girl who has saved him, and there is the sure prospect of a wedding as the curtain falls.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

CHARLES FROHMAN

TO-NIGHT (TUESDAY), FEBRUARY 21st, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

Mr. LEWIS WALLER

WILL PRODUCE

BARDELYS THE MAGNIFICENT

A Romantic Comedy in Four Acts,

BY

HENRY HAMILTON and RAFAEL SABATINI.

Louis XIII. (King of France and Navarre) ..	Mr. ASHTON PEARSE
Marcel de St. Pol, Marquis de Bardelys ..	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Phillipe, Comte de Castelroux	Mr. WILLIAM HAVILAND
Vicomte de Lavedan	Mr. STANLEY W. ASHWORTH
Regnier de Suffren (Keeper of the Seals of the Parliament of Toulouse)	Mr. FRANK WOOLFE
Laurent, Chevalier de St. Armand	Mr. REGINALD DANE
Réné de Lesperon, Hector de Marsac	Mr. W. CRONIN WILSON
Eugene de La Fosse	Mr. CECIL CAMERON
Léon de Mironsac .. (Friends of Bardelys)	Mr. LESLIE REA
Captain Cazalet ..	Mr. LEWIS BROUGHTON
De Mortemar ..	Mr. DION TITHERADGE
De Calonne (Captain of Royalist Dragoons) ..	Mr. A. CATON WOODVILLE
Pierre Rodenard (Known as Ganymede, Body-servant to Bardelys)	Mr. ALEC F. THOMPSON
Anatole (Servant to de Lavedan)	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
St. Yves	Mr. FREDERIC MORENA
Usher	Mr. ERNEST BAXENDELL
Soldier	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
Isabeau, Vicomtesse de Lavedan	Miss LOTTIE VENNE
Roxalanne de Lavedan	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE
Andrée de Marsac	Miss DOROTHY DIX
Paquotte (Roxalanne's Maid)	Miss GABRIELLE DE WILDEN

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES.

Act I.	.. ..	Hotel de Bardelys, Paris
Act II.	Scene 1	A Barn at Lautrec
	Scene 2	Roxalanne's Boudoir at Lavedan
Act III.	.. ..	Loggia of the Chateau of Lavedan
Act IV.	Scene 1	The Prison, Toulouse
	Scene 2	The Court House, Toulouse

The Scenery painted by R. C. McCLEERY.

Mr. Lewis Waller has been assisted in the production by Mr. Herbert Jarman

Costumes designed by TOM HESLEWOOD.

Incidental Music by LEONARD CHALK. Roxalanne's Song by CECIL CAMERON.

Ladies' Dresses executed by Mdme. NETTLESHIP. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Novel "Bardelys the Magnificent," from which this play is adapted, can be obtained from the Attendants in the theatre, price One Shilling.

Programme of Music.

Orchestra under the Direction of EDWARD JONES.

Before Act I. ...	PRELUDE ... "Bardelys the Magnificent" ...	...	L. Chalk
,, ,, II. ...	MINUET AND GAVOTTE	...	Lulli
,, ,, III. ...	SUITE DE BALLET "Sylvia" ...	...	Delibes
,, ,, IV. ...	GAVOTTE	...	Rameau
...	MORCEAU ... "Les Noces d'Or" ...	...	Gregh

General Manager	For Mr. LEWIS WALLER: Mr. VICTOR LEWIS
Business Manager	Mr. H. C. HOOPER
Stage Manager ...	Mr. EDMUND WALLER
Assistant Stage Manager ...	Mr. LEWIS BROUGHTON

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT AT 2.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. .. W. LESTOCQ

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

The charm of the heroes of the Louis Treize period is in their exuberance. They seem to bubble over with life and energy; and we are ready to forgive any faults they may have in admiration of their unlimited activity. There are few actors on the English stage who realise this ideal more exactly than does Mr. Lewis Waller; and his choice of Messrs. Henry Hamilton and Rafael Sabatini's play, "Bardelys the Magnificent" for the opening of his season at the Globe on Tuesday was a wise one. The play is full of romantic adventure and vivid action and incident; the "period" is extremely picturesque; the dialogue is bold and simple; and the result is a London success which might easily have been predicted after the production of the piece at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, on August 29 last year.

The cleverness of the authors is shown in the way in which they have used the well-worn "pivot" of mistaken identity in quite a fresh and novel way. We have often seen on the comic stage the personage, who, having taken on himself the personality of another, and having, for some time, profited by the mistake, suffers in the end for his deception. But in "Bardelys the Magnificent" the idea is used most seriously, most dramatically, and most effectively; and the "strong scene" of the piece depends entirely on the hero's difficulty in proving who he really is. There are no entirely novel situations; the talent of the dramatist is shown in the way in which he re-utilises the old ones.

The hero in this case is Marcel de St. Pol, the Marquis of Bardelys, whom we find entertaining his friends in the first act. The guests are "chaffing" the Comte de Castleroux for his failure to woo and win the fair Roxalanne de Lavedan, daughter of the Vicomte de Lavedan. Irritated by the ridicule of his friends, Castleroux bets Bardelys the amount of his fortune that he will not succeed where he—Castleroux—has failed, and Bardelys, after some hesitation, makes the wager.

He starts off on his enterprise, and, on his way, finds an Orleanist, René de Lesperon, who is lying mortally wounded—an Orleanist rising is taking place—and who gives Bardelys a locket to be taken to the dying man's fiancée, Andrée de Marsac. Some soldiers arrive to arrest Lesperon, for whom Bardelys is mistaken, and has to make his escape wounded. Seeking refuge, he climbs to the chamber of Roxalanne, and falls in love with her at first sight.

Finding that the spiteful Castleroux has poisoned Roxalanne's mind against him, Bardelys conceals his identity while he is being nursed back to strength by the Vicomte and his family, whose guest he remains for ten days, in which period Roxalanne grows to love the stranger. Castleroux comes on the scene to arrest the supposed de Lesperon as an Orleanist, and Andrée de Marsac appears and has a passage of arms with Roxalanne, who, burning with jealousy, betrays her lover into the hands of Castleroux, who basely pretends to believe that Bardelys is really de Lesperon, and arrests him accordingly.

The last act is very dramatic and effective. Bardelys is in prison at Toulouse; and Roxalanne, who has now discovered his identity and Andrée's error, pleads with Castleroux to spare her lover. The Comte, however, is remorseless; and, in the trial which follows, Bardelys, unable to prove his identity, is condemned to death. As a last resource he says that the King, if he were there, could identify him; and, at the critical moment, Louis enters and saves both the hero and the situation, the curtain falling amidst enthusiastic applause.

On WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 22nd, 1911, at 8.45, and following Evenings at 9.

Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH

In a New and Original FARCE in Three Acts, entitled:—

BABY MINE

By MARGARET MAYO.

Jimmy Jinks	.. ..	Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Alfred Hardy	.. ..	.. Mr. DONALD CALTHROP
Michael O'Flarety	.. ..	Mr. DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Inspector Thompson	.. ..	.. Mr. ARTHUR LEIGH
Detective Donovan	.. ..	.. Mr. FINCH SMILES
Aggie	.. .. (Jimmy's Wife)	Miss LILIAS WALDEGRAVE
Rosa Gattl	.. ..	Miss CONSTANCE BACHNER
Maggie O'Flarety	.. .. (A Laundry Girl)	Miss ELSPETH INNES-KERR
Zoie	.. .. (Alfred's Wife)	.. Miss IRIS HOEY

Act I.—Zoie's Sitting Room. Act II.—Zoie's Bedroom, a few months later—Night.
Act III.—Zoie's Bedroom—Same Night. There will be an interval of 10 minutes between each act.
The Play produced by Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH and the AUTHORESS.
Act I. painted by J. T. Bull & Son, New Kent Road, S.E., other Scenery by H. Potts.

Preceded Each Evening and at Matinees by

THE YOUNG LADY OF SEVENTEEN

By CHAS. H. E. BROOKFIELD.

Hon. Johnnie Gandel	.. ..	Mr. STAFFORD HILLIARD
Sergeant Corbett	.. .. (Commissionaire)	Mr. DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Mrs. Trelawney-Browne	.. .. (of Mitcham)	.. Miss ANNIE HILL
Arabella	.. .. }	.. Miss SHELLEY CALTON
Gwendolen	.. .. } .. (Her Daughters) ..	.. Miss LYNN FONTANNE
Miss Kirkham	.. .. .. (Theatre Attendant) ..	Miss CONSTANCE BACHNER
Scene	.. .. .. Lobby behind the Private Boxes of Prince's Theatre

MATINEE. EVERY SATURDAY at 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £6 6s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Telephone No. 3844 Gerrard.
Box Office (Mr. A. R. Britten) open from 10 till 10. Doors open at 8. Commence at 8.30

Programme of Music.

Potpourri	.. ..	"Madame Troubadour"	Albini
Selection	.. ..	"Catarina" (Madame Sherry)	Felix
		(a) "La Gran Via"	Cueca and Valverde
		(b) "The Man who Owns Broadway"	Cohan
Entr'acte I.	.. ..	(a) Japanese Patrol March	Ferré
		(b) Dance, "In the Shadows"	Herman Finck
		(c) Spanish Piece, "A Bunch of Roses"	Chapi
Entr'acte II.	.. ..	(a) "Phryné" Valse	Pedro de Zulueta
		(b) "T. P. G."	Henry

"Intermède dansant" played in "The Young Lady of Seventeen" composed by HAROLD CARSON.

The Gramophone and Records used for the reproduction of Mr. Charles Hawtrey's voice supplied by the Gramophone Co., Ltd., 21, City Road, E.C.

The Dresses and Lingerie by Madame Kreutzen, Hanover Sq., and Millinery and Hats by Madame Vera, Brook Street. Furniture and Draperies by Shoolbred

Stage Manager	.. .. .. Mr. DUNCAN DRUCE	Musical Director	.. .. .. Mr ALICK MACLEAN
Business Manager	.. .. (For Sir Charles Wyndham)		.. .. Mr. J. W. LETHBRIDGE

Criterion
THEATRE

E
Feb. 22

Orch. Stall
C 52

At first it seems as if the piece were, like so many adaptations from the French, to deal with the suspicions of a jealous husband, aroused by the entirely innocent act of his silly wife in lunching with a male friend at a restaurant. But this, which occupies a good deal of the first act, only leads up to the pivot of the play—the desire of Alfred Hardy, a well-to-do young man of business, to be a father. His wife, Zoie, dislikes babies; and this difference in taste causes a violent quarrel between them, which culminates in Alfred announcing his intention of going away to Newcastle for several months. Zoie is in despair; for, though a foolish and habitually mendacious personage, she dotes on her husband; and she consults Aggie Jinks, the wife of Jimmy Jinks, a friend of Alfred's. Aggie suggests that a baby shall be procured from a charitable institution, and that Alfred shall be telegraphed to, at the end of a few months, and informed that he is a father.

When the interval has elapsed, we find Zoie, in the second act, in a bedroom in a flat, preparing to pretend that she has just had a baby. Jimmy Jinks is sent to get the infant; but when he arrives at the institution, he finds that the mother of the child has altered her mind, and refuses to give it up. Jimmy, urged by his wife, purloins the baby and brings it to the flat, where it is deposited in the bassinette already prepared for it. But the mother will not be pacified, and threatens to take action for the theft of her offspring. To complicate difficulties, Alfred, having taken a special train on hearing the glad news, arrives before he is expected, and examines the infant delightedly. He is persuaded to retire for a wash and shave, and—luckily for the conspirators—at this critical moment a laundry girl enters with some washing, and apologises for unpunctuality by the statement that they have had twins in their family, who live, by the bye, just round the corner. The conspirators clutch at the straw. Jimmy is sent to hire one of the twins at any price. But when he returns with the infant under his overcoat, he finds Alfred adoringly nursing baby number one. What is to be said? There is only one way out. Alfred is told that he is the father of twins; and the second act ends with the happy father in absurd ecstasies.

No author or authoress could be expected to keep the fun up to this pitch all through; and the third act is inevitably less wildly diverting than the two which have preceded it. It is impossible to pacify the mother of the first baby, and her child must be restored to her. But how to fill its place? Obviously, with the washerwoman's second infant; for, as someone says, "What's the use of one twin?" Then there is another mix-up; and Hardy has to be told that he is the father of triplets. Now there are three borrowed babies. In the end, after the police have been called in, and the washerwoman's husband has demanded the twins, and the institution mother's infant has been restored to her, the curtain falls with Alfred utterly bewildered—as well he may be.

"THE YOUNG LADY OF SEVENTEEN."

Hon. Johnnie Gandel....Mr. Stafford Hilliard.
Sergent Corbett.....Mr. Drelincourt Odlum.
Mrs. Trelawney-Browne.....Miss Annie Hill.
Arabella .....Miss Shelley Calton.
Gwendolen .....Miss Lynn Fontanne.
Miss Kirkham.....Miss Constance Bachner.

The scene is the lobby at the back of the boxes in a theatre. Mrs. Trelawney-Browne has brought her daughters—one married, the other a spinster of seventeen—to see a risqué comedy, under the impression that the entertainment was to consist of "Julius Cæsar." So the younger girl Gwendolen is told to wait in the lobby till the show is over. In her exile, she is found by an acquaintance, the Hon. Johnnie Gandel, a feather-headed youth, who has written offering marriage to one of the actresses on the stage. They renew their friendship, he makes love to her, and when a note comes from the actress to say she is already engaged to be married, the Hon. Johnnie proposes to Gwendolen, and is accepted.

Kingsway Theatre.

GREAT QUEEN STREET.

Proprietress - - - - - - - MISS LENA ASHWELL.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30.

MATINEE: WEDNESDAY, MARCH 1ST, AND EVERY FOLLOWING WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

THE LILY,

A Modern Play in Four Acts,

Adapted from the French of PIERRE WOOLFE and GASTON LEROUX, by DAVID BELASCO.

Comte de Maigny		... Mr. LAURENCE IRVING
Vicomte De Maigny ...	(His Son)	... Mr. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Huzar		... Mr. ARTHUR LEWIS
Georges Arnaud	(An Artist)	... Mr. RUPERT HARVEY
Bernard	(His Guest)	... Mr. IVAN BERLYN.
Emile Plock ...	(A Cotton Merchant)	... Mr. WILLIAM HOLLES.
Joseph	(Arnaud's Man)	... Mr. ROBERT CRANNEY
Jean	(A Servant at the de Maigny's)	Mr. JAMES SKEA
Michel	(A Gamekeeper)	... Mr. GEORGE OWEN
Lucie	(Plock's Daughter)	... Miss SYBIL NOBLE
Madame de Leguy		... Miss MARY FORBES
Madame de Rocourt		... Miss LISA MACREADY
Odette ...	De Maigny's Daughters	Miss GERALDINE OLLIFFE
Christiane ...		Miss MABEL HACKNEY

K.T.

THURSDAY
EVENING
FEB.
23

—

Orch. Stall

C 4

No

This to be retained

ACT I.

In the Park of a Ruined Abbey.—(Bruce Smith).

(Twelve Minutes' Interval).

ACTS II., III. AND IV.,

Room in the Comte de Maigny's Château.—(Joseph Harker).

(Between Acts II. and III., Six Minutes' Interval).

(Between Acts III. and IV., Five Minutes' Interval).

Time—The Present.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC

Overture	"MIRELLA"	Gounod.
After Act I.	(a) "INTERMEZZO "THE COQUETTE,"	Moret.
	(b) "VALSE SIBERIENNE "ANGARA"	Rousseau.
After Act II.	... ... "CZARDAS No. 1" ...	Michiels.
After Act III.	(a) "AIR DE BALLET"	Chaminade.
	(b) "PIZZICATI"	Gillet.

Dresses by Messrs. REVILL & ROSSITER.

Miss Geraldine Olliffe's and Miss Sybil Noble's dresses by Madame MOLLIE.

The Bicycle used by Miss Mabel Hackney is supplied by SINGER & Co., LTD., 17, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Management.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer at Matinees during and after the performance.

Opera glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

THE BOX OFFICE (STUART ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.

TELEPHONE: 4032 GERRARD (two lines).

General Manager - }
Stage Manager - - } For Mr. Laurence Irving { Mr. H. LANGLEY. Mr. REGINALD EYRE.
Musical Director - } { Mr. C. BLAKESLEY YEARSLEY

MATINEE: WEDNESDAY, MARCH 1ST, AND EVERY FOLLOWING WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Management begs to state that anyone troubled with the First Night Cough will be supplied with jujubes on application.

Our verdict is warmly in favour of the new play produced at the Kingsway on Thursday night. Mr. Laurence Irving, in the few remarks he made after the final fall of the curtain snd after he and the members of his compaoy had beeo called again and again, was abla to announce that "The Lily" had received a nuanimous welcome, an unusual experience, he observed, for a new production in these days. He took the opportonity of expressing his obligations to Mr. Belasco, who had forwarded from America full instructions as to how he wished his play produced. Mr. Irving, with a touch of humour that was evidently appreciated by the enthusiastic audience, added that he was pleased that the production of the play for the first time in England had proved so soccessful, because he was, of course, entirely dependent for the carrying out of his plans upon the box office.

The English adaptation of the French play has already been produced in America, and the success there achieved bids fair to be repeated in this country. The play opens quietly enough, the first scene being in effective contrast with the storm and stress that follow. A ruined abbey has for its temporary occupant Georges Arnaud, an artist, who is already famous. He married in haste and repented at leisure. For ten years he has lived apart from his wife, who, however, declines to divorce him. He meets Christiane, the daughter of his neighbour, the Comte de Maigny, and they fall in love with each other. The girl's father rules at the chateau with a rod of iron. His son is engaged to be married to the pretty but silly daughter of M. Emile Plock, a rich cotton merchant, who, however, breaks off the match because of the scandal brought about by the clandestine visits of Christiane to the studio of Georges Arnaud. This leads up to an exceedingly powerful scene in the third act, in which the girl is compelled by her father to tell the truth—that Arnaud is her lover, and ought to be her husband, but for the obstacle that he is already a married man. Christiane has, however, a powerful protectress in Odette, her elder sister, whose life has been made unhappy by her father's refusal to accept as his son-in-law the man she loved. The play closes with the prospect that the wife of Arnaud will at last sue for a divorce, and that the artist will eventually marry Christiane. It should be explained that Odette, having lived a loveless life and reached a period of life when there is little prospect of her ever becoming a wife, is referred to as "The Lily," and hence the title of the play.

Friday, February 24th, at 8.15,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

LOAVES AND FISHES

A Satire, in Four Acts,

By W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

"Ah! pour estre devot, je n'en suis pas moins homme."—Le Tartuffe.

The Hon. and Rev. Canon Theodore Spratte ... (Vicar of St. Gregory's, South Kensington)	ROBERT LORAINE
Earl Spratte ...	C. M. LOWNE
Rev. Lionel Spratte...	BASIL HALLAM
Lord Wroxham...	ATHOL STEWART
Bertram Railing ...	THOMAS HOLDING
Ponsonby ...	DUNCAN McRAE
Mrs. Fitzgerald ...	ELLIS JEFFREYS
Lady Sophia Spratte ...	FRANCIS IVOR
Winifred Spratte ...	NINA SEVENING
Gwendolen Durant ...	VIVA BIRKETT
Mrs. Railing ...	FLORENCE HAYDON
Louise Railing ...	MARY BARTON

The Scene is the same throughout—The Drawing Room at St. Gregory's Vicarage.

The Play Produced under the Direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

Business Manager ...	James W. Mathews.
Stage Manager ...	Duncan McRae.
Musical Director ...	John Crook.

D. Y. T.

24/2/1911

Orch. Stall

K12

No

There is always something cruel in a satire; and it is just a little heartless to expose the mere details of class deficiencies, of an otherwise admirable and sincere humanitarian. But Mr. Maugham is quite impartial in his knock-about blows. If he shows us a female reformer starting a mal-apropos argument in a drawing room with a peer of the realm, he also depicts the stupidity and selfishness of the nobleman attacked. "Loaves and Fishes" is called a satire, and a satire it is. The Socialist's mother is a poor specimen of the female working-class; the young lady who falls in love with him breaks down before a few solecisms committed by his family; and the young Lord who marries the young lady is a cipher.

But the piece is capital comedy. From the commencement, the Hon. and Rev. Canon Theodore Spratte "takes the stage." He is what used to be called a "ladies' man," but always has an eye to the main chance. We watch his doublings and turnings, his shifts and schemes, with enjoyable interest. When the piece opens, he has several irons in the fire. He wants to match his daughter Winifred with the rich Lord Wroxham. He wants to marry Mrs. Fitzgerald, a wealthy widow; and he expects to be made a bishop. Of course, he meets with difficulties. Winifred has fallen in love with an earnest and slightly famous young Socialist author; and, though the Canon artfully suggests himself as a suitable successor to a just defunct Bishop, the bishopric is given to someone else. Then he pursues his plan of wooing the widow. She, however, sees through him from the first, and tells him—quite untruly—that, if she marries again, she will lose her fortune. The scenes in which the Canon receives this blow, his demeanour in the difficulty, and the artful way in which he first pretends to be absolutely disinterested, and then gradually slips out of the engagement are capital comedy. It is almost a new sensation to witness them. Then the Canon turns his attention to Winifred. The Socialist's mother and sister are, the one ultra-plebeian, the other crazily aggressive; and the cunning Canon invites them to his house, where the old lady's weakness for gin, and the young woman's rabid propagandism bring Winifred to shame. The unthinking will laugh at this scene, while to the reflective it will appear extremely painful. However, the Canon attains his object, and Winifred jilts the Socialist and marries the lord. Theodore proposes to a rich brewer's daughter and is accepted; and in the end he is made Bishop.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees and Managers, Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, 26 Langham Street, and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH, Dormy Cottage, Woking.

OSCAR ASCHE AND LILY BRAYTON'S SEASON.

On SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25th, 1911, and EVERY EVENING AT 8.15.

... THE ...

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR

By WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

Sir John Falstaff		OSCAR ASCHE
Fenton	(a Gentleman)	GEORGE RELPH
Shallow	(a Country Justice)	ATHOL FORDE
Slender	(Cousin to Shallow)	EWAN BROOKE
Ford	Two Gentlemen dwelling at Windsor	HERBERT GRIMWOOD
Page	Two Gentlemen dwelling at Windsor	R. IAN PENNY
Sir Hugh Evans	(a Welsh Parson)	H. TRIPP EDGAR
Dr. Caius	(a French Physician)	CALEB PORTER
Host of the Garter Inn		ARTHUR TRANTOM
Bardolph	Sharpers attending on Falstaff	J. FRITZ RUSSELL
Pistol	Sharpers attending on Falstaff	CHARLES A. DORAN
Nym	Sharpers attending on Falstaff	ALFRED BRISTOWE
Robin	(Page to Falstaff)	C. ROY ROSTEN
Simple	(Servant to Slender)	R. F. ANSON
Rugby	(Servant to Dr. Caius)	GORDON HARKER
Mistress Ford		LILY BRAYTON
Mistress Page		CONSTANCE ROBERTSON
Anne Page	(Her Daughter)	ELFRIDA CLEMENT
Mistress Quickly	(Servant to Dr. Caius)	BESSIE MAJOR

Act I.	..	Scene 1	Windsor—Before Page's House
		Scene 2	A Room in Dr. Caius' House
		Scene 3	Windsor—Before Page's House
Act II.	..	Scene 1	A Field near Windsor
		Scene 2	A Room in the Garter Inn
		Scene 3	Windsor—Before Page's House
		Scene 4	A Room in Ford's House
Act III.	..	Scene 1	A Room in Page's House
		Scene 2	A Room in the Garter Inn
		Scene 3	A Room in Ford's House
Act IV.	..	Scene 1	A Room in Page's House
		Scene 2	Windsor Park

The Play produced by OSCAR ASCHE.

The Orchestra under the direction of CHRISTOPHER WILSON.
Incidental Music from Nicolai's Opera, arranged by F. WYNNE JONES.

Scenery by JOSEPH HARKER. Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS & Co.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON. Furniture by SPILLMAN & Co.

General Manager .. .. CARL F. LEYEL

Business Manager.....REGINALD EYRE
Stage Manager.....J. FRITZ RUSSELL
Assistant Stage Managers ...JOHN FLANAGAN ..... F. SERLE
Chief Mechanician...M. J. COVERDALE
Musical Director CHRISTOPHER WILSON

MATINÉE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Box Office (A. HOLLINGSHEAD) open daily from 10 to 10.
Telephone 9513 Gerrard.
Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under Shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Wightman Mountain & Andrews, Ltd., Printers, 31 & 32 Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

8.—JAMES WELCH & COMPANY,
In the New One Act Play,
"THE HOOLIGAN."
Written by W. S. GILBERT.

Nat Solby (a Young Hooligan) ... Mr. James Welch
The Prison Governor ... ... Mr. Wyn Weaver
Mathers (a Warder) ... ... Mr. Leslie Carter
Chief Warder ... ... Mr. Leopold Profeit
Second Warder ... ... Mr. Gordon Tomkins
The Prison Doctor, Chaplain, Warders—
Messrs. Du Gue, Vernon, Hord, Kearsley.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1911.

SKETCH BY SIR W. GILBERT.

AGONY OF A CONDEMNED PRISONER.

D.M. February 28.

It would not be easy to imagine a more gruesome subject for a play than the last hours and confession of a murderer in a condemned cell. This was selected by Sir William S. Gilbert for a new sketch called "The Hooligan," presented by Mr. James Welch at the London Coliseum yesterday.

The little play, horribly unpleasant, begins with the discussion by the prison warders of the execution within a couple of hours of the prisoner asleep in his bed. They awake him from his broken slumber, witness his horror when he recollects that he has to die in two hours, and as he dresses give him reminiscences—to keep up his courage—of how pluckily other prisoners had gone to their doom. The piteous plea of the wretched youth for a reprieve, his insistent cry that he had only intended to wound, not to kill, his sweetheart, were realistically agonising. His description of his nightmares, his shrieks when he heard steps outside the cell door, added to the ghastliness of the whole business.

When at last the governor, chaplain, and officials entered his cell, he lost control of himself. He shrieked for another half-hour, half an hour with the clergyman. He crouched on the floor, clinging to a leg of a table. Then quietly the governor told him that a reprieve had been granted. There the gruesome side of the tale seemed to have ended. Not really so, however, for the strain of the news was too much for the man; he stood up, swung himself round, and fell dead on the floor of the cell. When the curtain, in response to applause, was taken up, the dead body of the prisoner was seen lying on the bed.

J. W.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

ON WEDNESDAY, MARCH 1ST, AT 7-45.

ROMANTIC DRAMA EVERY EVENING at 7-45.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2-30.

The Great Romantic Play in a Prologue and Four Acts,

The Prisoner of Zenda

Adapted from ANTHONY HOPE'S Story by EDWARD ROSE.
Play Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters of the Prologue.

Prince Rudolf (The Red Elphberg, Heir Apparent to the Throne of Ruritania)	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Duke Wolfgang (the Black Elphberg, his Cousin)	Mr. STEPHEN T. EWART
Gilbert, Earl of Rassendyll	Mr. NORMAN MACOWAN
Horace Glyn (a Young Diplomatist) ...	Mr. RICHARD NEVILLE
Jeffreys (an Old Servant)	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Giffen (a Servant)	Mr. LOUIS FIELD
Amelia, Countess of Rassendyll (Sister to Horace Glyn)	Miss MARY DIBLEY

Period of Prologue, 1733. Scene—Lord Rassendyll's House in London.

Characters of the Play.

Rudolf the Fifth (the Red Elphberg, King of Ruritania)	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Rudolf Rassendyll (a Young Englishman)	Mr. STEPHEN T. EWART
Michael, Duke of Strelsau (the Black Elphberg)	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Colonel Sapt (an Old Soldier)	Mr. FRANK TENNANT
Fritz von Tarlenheim	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Captain Hentzau } Followers of Duke Detchard } Michael	Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
Bertram Bertrand (a Young English Artist)	Mr. H. WILMOT JACKSON
Marshal Strakenez	Mr. R. C. WILDING
Lorenz Teppich (Chancellor of Ruritania)	Mr. SYDNEY HAMILTON
Franz Teppich (his Brother, Mayor of Strelsau)	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Lord Topham (English Ambassador) ...	Mr. EDWARD THANE
Ludwig } Retainers at Tarlenheim Toni }	Mr. H. ELLER Mr. THOMAS
Josef	Mr. GEORGE GAMBLE
Princess Flavia...	Miss ROSALIE TOLLER
Antoinette de Mauban	Miss ETHEL WARWICK
Frau Teppich	Miss EILEEN KERIN

Ladies, Courtiers, Ambassadors, Soldiers, &c., &c.

Time—The Present Day. The Action of the Romance takes place in the Kingdom of Ruritania during the reign of King Rudolf V.

Mr. HENRY AINLEY appears as Prince Rudolf in the Prologue, as Rudolf Rassendyll and Rudolf the Fifth in Acts I., II., and III., and in Act IV. as the Imprisoned King and Rassendyll.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. - - - - IN THE FOREST NEAR ZENDA.
Concerning the Colour of Man's Hair.

ACT II. - - - WINTER PALACE AT STRELSAU.
A Fair Cousin and A Dark Brother.

ACT III. - - - THE CASTLE OF TARLENHEIM.
The King Can Do No Wrong.

ACT IV. - - - - THE CASTLE OF ZENDA.
If Love Were All.

The Scenery painted by W. Hann and W. Raphael.
The Duels arranged by M. Felix Bertrand.

Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.
The following Selections may be varied with Lyceum Orchestra Repertoire (see list).

1. OVERTURE—"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA." Walter Slaughter.
2. "MARCH OF THE MOUNTAIN GNOMES" ... Eilenberg.
3. SELECTION—"THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER" Oscar Strauss.
4. (a) "SONG D'NUIT" ... ... H. Sullivan-Brooke.
   (b) "HUMORESQUE" ... ... Dvorak.
5. OVERTURE—"Masenello" ... ... Auber.

Box Office (Edward Hackett) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617, 7618 & 7619 (Gerrard)
Private Boxes. £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 11s. 6d., £1 1s.
Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Dress Circle. 4s. & 2s. 6d. (Rererved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery. 6d.

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES.
Stage Manager ... ... GEORGE GAMBLE.
Assistant Stage Manager .. .. HARRY G. WRIGHT.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The oame of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be prioted oo every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

GAIETY THEATRE.

MANAGER ... ... MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

To-night, Saturday, March 4th, 1911, at 8,

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

New Production,

"PEGGY,"

A Musical Play in 2 Acts.

By GEO. GROSSMITH, Jun.

(Founded on Xanroff and Guérin's "L'Amorçage.")

Lyrics by C. H. BOVILL.

The Music by LESLIE STUART.

Auberon Blow ...	(A Street Hawker)...	Mr. GEORGE GROSSMITH, Jun.
Hon. James Bendoyle, M.P., M.F.H.		Mr. ROBERT HALE
Montagu Bartle ..	(of Buenos Ayres)	...Mr. HERBERT JARMAN
Aristide Pieot	(Mayor of Friville)	...Mr. ARTHUR HATHERTON
Phonso	(Mr. Umble's Assistant)	... Mr. ERNEST MAHAR
Marquis of Didsbury		Mr. GUY STRUTHERS
Emil	(Manager of New Hotel)	Mr. HARRY B. BURCHER
	AND
Mr. Albert Umbles...	(Hairdresser at the New Hotel)	Mr. EDMUND PAYNE
Polly Polino	(of the Vaudeville Stage)	.. Miss GABRIELLE RAY
Doris Bartle	... ...	Miss OLIVE MAY
Diamond	(Barmaid at the New Hotel)	.. Miss ENID LESLIE
Lady Florence Alister		Miss NANCY MORE
Mrs. Ware-Wills		... Miss RUBY KENNEDY
Miss Vnoch	(of Cincinnati)	Miss MADGE MELBOURNE
Jinnie...		... Miss DOROTHY SELBOURNE
Ethel, Cœilie, Rosie, Maud	(Manicure Girls)	Miss BLANCHE STOCKER, Miss MARIE MITCHELL, Miss GERTRUDE THORNTON, Miss CONNIE STUART
Nini	(Bathing Woman)	... Miss GLADYS FFOLLIOT
Jeannette	(Fleuriste) ...	... Mdlle. S. BOURCARD
	AND
Peggy Barrison ...	(Manicurist at the New Hotel)	Miss PHYLLIS DARE

ACT I. ... Lounge at the New Hotel, London (Joseph Harker).

ACT II. ... ... The Plage at Friville (Joseph Harker).

Owing to the elaborate nature of the change of Scene there will be an interval of 20 minutes between Acts I. and II.

All Numbers, Dances, and Chorus Effects have been arranged by Mr. EDWARD ROYCE.

On this occasion the Orchestra will be conducted by the Composer.

Musical Director .. ... Mons. LÉOPOLD WENZEL.

New Act Drop painted by Mr. JOSEPH HARKER; Figure of "Gaiety" by Mr. CHARLES A. BUCHEL.

Costumes designed by COMELLI and executed by ZIMMERMAN of Paris, MICHARD SOEURS, MADAME HERBERT, MISS FISHER, MADAME FIELD, B. J. SIMMONS & Co., Covent Garden, BURKINSHAW & KNIGHTS, MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.

Miss Gabrielle Ray, Miss Olive May, and Miss Phyllis Dare's Dresses by LUCILE, Ltd.

Ladies Hats specially designed and executed by MAISON LEWIS. Shoes by H. & M. RAYNE. Ladies Riding Boots by SAUNDERS. Riding Hats by J. WOODROW & SONS, Ltd. Furniture by JAS. SHOOLBRED & CO. Wigs by W. CLARKSON. Miss Gabrielle Ray's Hats by ZYROT & CIE. Properties by H. W. ELLIOT. Electrical Effects by G. APPLEBEE. Machinist, J. SHELDON.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. EDWARD ROYCE.

BOX OFFICE (J. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY from 10 till 10.

EXTRACTS FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.

(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors which must open outwards.

(3) Where there is a Fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.

(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.

(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

There has never been a more artistic production at the Gaiety than that of "Peggy," which took place there on Saturday last. Mr. Geo. Grossmith, jun., has founded his libretto on Xanroff and Guérin's "L'Amorçage," which yields a story decidedly superior to the ordinary musical play libretto. It has, indeed, quite a philosophical "pivot." At the New Hotel, a luxurious London hostelry, there is employed a pretty and virtuous manicurist, named Peggy Barrison. She is engaged, rather half-heartedly, to a foolish little hairdresser of the establishment, Mr. Albert Umbles; and the Hon. James Bendoyle is also paying her attention, with a view to matrimony. Peggy does not care for Bendoyle, and that rich and crafty gentleman invents a plan of subjugating her. It is the science of l'amorçage. You feed the fish richly with ground-bait, and then, when you stop throwing it in, they snatch greedily at the meagre attraction on the hook. Bendoyle will arrange that Peggy shall live in luxury for a period, and will then cut off the supplies. The little barber has an uncle somewhere out in South America; and Bendoyle employs an impecunious gentleman, named Auberon Blow, to impersonate this relative, and shower riches on Umbles and his fiancé. But, at the same time, the real uncle, Montagu Bartle, returns from Buenos Ayres; and when Umbles and Peggy start for the French watering place of Friville, under Blow's aegis, the genuine relative and his niece follow.

In the second act we find that Umbles has lost his head, as the effect of his sudden rise of fortune, has given Peggy the cold shoulder, and is flirting on the Plage with a frivolous little French actress, Polly Polino. Blow, in the intimacy caused by his supposed relationship to pretty Peggy, has fallen in love with her, and we begin to discern the dénouement. The cunning scheme of the Hon. James comes to grief; he is "cut out" by Auberon, and Umbles, after various adventures, pairs off with the actress. The comparative slightness of the story in the second act is compensated for by various incidents, inventions, and embellishments; indeed, the piece teems with accessory ideas and ingenious effects. There is a chorus of manicurists, capitally arranged and invented; there are dainty apparitions of ladies in the sort of bathing dresses which are fondly imagined as being commonly worn at French seaside watering places; there is a very pretty little boy—name unknown—who assists in some of the choruses; and there are interpolated bits of business too numerous to mention. We see in our mind's eye, after a few weeks, a much-improved "Peggy" worked up from and built up on the original production, as so many of Mr. Geo. Edwardes's greatest successes have been. This is not to say that the piece at present is not enjoyable, entertaining, and agreeable, but only to guard against attaching any importance to the expressions of a small minority at the Gaiety on Saturday, who evidently were not versed in the chapter of theatrical history, which relates to that playhouse and Daly's.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

Sole Lessees and Managers ... ... A. & S. GATTI.

Under the Management of March 8
Messrs. A. & S. GATTI.

EVERY EVENING at 8.15 p.m.

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

New Production,

The Girl in the Train

("DIE GESCHIEDENE FRAU")

A Musical Play, in Two Acts.

Adapted from the German of VICTOR LEON. Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS

Music by LEO FALL.

Characters.

Karel Van Buren - - -	Mr.	ROBERT EVETT
Lucas Van Tromp - - -	Mr.	RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Cornelius Scrop - - -	Mr.	FRED EMNEY
Willen Tronjer - - -	Mr.	R. A. SWINHOE
Councillor Van Lieje -	Mr.	BARNARD MOORE
Councillor Van Dendér - -	Mr.	PAUL PLUNKET
AND
President Van Eyck - -	Mr.	HUNTLEY WRIGHT
Jana Van Buren - -	Miss	CLARA EVELYN
Gonda Van der Loo - -	Mdlle.	MARISE FAIRY (From the Opera Comique, Paris).
Mdlle. Arlette - - -	Miss	PHYLLIS MONKMAN
Adeline - - - - - -	Miss	ETHEL OLIVER
AND
Martje Kronwevliet - - -	Miss	CONNIE EDISS (Re-appearance in England).

Miss Connie Ediss.

Miss Connie Ediss had a great reception from a crowded audience on Wednesday evening when for the first time she joined the cast of "The Girl in the Train" at the Vaudeville Theatre. It is four years almost since this droll comedienne left London, but American experience has not lessened her ability to make us laugh, and at the Vaudeville the company on the stage as well as the audience were laughing at her on Wednesday. Mr. Fred Emney is back in the cast also, so for fun there is no play in London approaching "The Girl in the Train." Mr. Huntley Wright, Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. Robert Evett and Miss Clara Evelyn are all in their original parts, and Miss Marise Fairy, a Danish, or Norwegian, actress, who comes to London via Paris,

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE
8/3/11
STALL
D14
This part to be retained

March 9

DALY'S THEATRE

Every Evening at 8.15, & Matinee Every Saturday at 2.15

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION OF

A WALTZ DREAM

An Operetta in Three Acts by
FELIX DOERMAN and LEOPOLD JACOBSON.
Now adapted for the English Stage by BASIL HOOD.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS. Music by OSCAR STRAUS.

Lieutenant Niki	...	...	Mr. ROBERT MICHAELIS
Joachim XIII.	...	(Prince of Flausenthurn)	... Mr. LIONEL VICTOR
Lieutenant Montschi	...	...	Mr. ALEC FRASER
Max Bauer	...	(a Waiter)	... Mr. WILLIE WARDE
Herr Krantz	...	(a Minister)	... Mr. CHARLES COLEMAN
Wendolin	...	(Major-Domo)	... Mr. WALTER J. DOUGLAS
Sigismund	...	(Head Lackey)	... Mr. GARNET WILSON
AND
Count Lothar	...	(Cousin of the Prince)	... Mr. W. H. BERRY
Princess Helena	...	...	Miss AMY EVANS
Frederica...	...	(Chief Lady-in-Waiting)	... Miss NORAH BARRY
Fifi	...	(Big Drum)	... Miss MAY MARTON
Hana	...	(Little Drum)	... Miss VON BRUNNER
Emmie	...	(a Kellnerin)	... Miss KITTY HANSON
Rezzi	...		... Miss GLADYS GUY
Pepzi	...	Dancers	... Miss DORIS STOCKER
Lizzi	...		... ... Miss F. LE GAY
Fritzi	...		Miss LENA LIEBRANDT
Mitzi	...		... Miss MAY HOBSON
Hella	...		Miss GERTRUDE GLYN
AND
Franzi	...		...Miss BETTY CALLISH

Special Dances in Act II. by THE OY-RA QUARTETTE OF VIENNESE DANCERS

A Newcomer's Success.

I have not witnessed for some years such a successful début in a musical piece as was made by the newcomer, Miss Betty Callish, to Daly's Theatre, in "A Waltz Dream" on Thursday evening. She is just delightful—young, charming, graceful: a bright face full of expression and life, a lithe figure, dainty movements, and a sense of happiness about her that is fascinating. She acts, too with conviction, with a sincerity that is truly admirable, and that will assuredly take her far in her profession. She will continue to play Franzi for the remainder of the run, for although I am glad to hear that Miss Elsie is making splendid progress towards recovery, she will not return to Daly's Theatre now until the new Lehar play, "The Count of Luxembourg," comes on. Miss Betty Callish will appear in this with her.

THE LITTLE THEATRE,

JOHN STREET, ADELPHI.

Every Evening, at 8.30 p.m.,

"ANATOL."

A sequence of Dialogues by ARTHUR SCHNITZLER.
Paraphrased for the English Stage by GRANVILLE BARKER.

Anatol ... ... GRANVILLE BARKER
Max ... ... NIGEL PLAYFAIR

1.—ASK NO QUESTIONS AND YOU'LL HEAR NO STORIES.
Hilda ... GERTRUDE ROBINS
VIENNA.—Anatol's Flat.

2.—A CHRISTMAS PRESENT.
Gabrielle ... KATHARINE POLE
A By-Street.

3.—AN EPISODE.
Bianca ... DOROTHY MINTO
Max's Rooms.

4.—A FAREWELL SUPPER.
Mimi ... LILLAH McCARTHY
Waiter ... ... A. B. TAPPING
A Private Room at Sacher's Restaurant.

5.—THE WEDDING MORNING.
Lona ... ALICE CRAWFORD
Franz ... ... HARRY DODD
Anatol's Flat.

There will be an interval of twelve minutes after No. 3. Between the other Dialogues the curtain will be down for three or four minutes only.

The Scenes designed by Norman Wilkinson, of Four Oaks.
Miss McCarthy's and Miss Robins' Dresses by Reville & Rossiter.

On SATURDAY, 18TH, "Keepsakes" will be substituted for one of the above Dialogues.
Emily ... ... AIMÉE DE BRUGH.

Manager ... ... A. E. DRINKWATER
Stage Manager ... ...A. B. TAPPING
Assisted by ... ... LESLIE CASEY

In Preparation:—"THE MASTER BUILDER,"
By HENRIK IBSEN. Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.
Hilda ... ... LILLAH McCARTHY. Solness ... ... NORMAN McKINNEL.
To be announced shortly:—Matinees of "NAN" AND "ROCOCO."

"ANATOL" IN SEQUENCE.

Saturday March 11

The amours of Anatol have already been familiarised to Londoners by the production of his "conversations" by Mr. Granville Barker at the Palace recently. On Saturday evening Anatol made his début at the Little Theatre where Miss Lillah McCarthy inaugurated a season with a sequence of Arthur Schnitzler's dialogues, paraphrased into English by Mr. Granville Barker. The dainty sketches seemed to have found a fitting frame in the pretty bijou theatre, where an audience including Sir Arthur Pinero and other distinguished people received them with every favour. The programme embraced the three items that have been seen at the Palace and two others new to this country. Novelty No. 1 was a duologue entitled

"A CHRISTMAS PRESENT."

Anatol .....Mr. Granville Barker
Gabrielle .....Miss Katherine Pole

Vivacity of dialogue is again a distinguishing feature of the playlet. In a side-street in Vienna Anatol comes across one of his old "flames" who has since married and is a pillar of respectability. In the course of a "give-and-take" conversation Gabrielle learns that Anatol is sharing his flat with his latest conquest. Gabrielle is at first contemptuous, but, realising that Anatol's mistress, recking little of the conventions, is enjoying the blissful present with him, sends her a bouquet with the message that she might have been as happy as the recipient had she not been a coward—a piece of philosophy hardly to be recommended to society at large.

The second novelty told against the Gay Lothario, and was entitled simply

"AN EPISODE."

Anatol .....Mr. Granville Barker
Max .....Mr. Nigel Playfair
Bianca .....Miss Dorothy Minto

A severe shock to Anatol's complacency is here administered. To his friend Max he brings a parcel of letters, the accumulation of years of flirtation. The contents of the package are amusingly sampled, and one letter is found to contain a rose which has crumbled to dust, the gift of a former fiancée, on whose devotion to him Anatol enlarges grandiloquently. There is a rude awakening when the lady calls on Max, her latest admirer, and does not even recognise Anatol, who rushes from the house cut to the core. The remainder of the programme was made up of the three playlets which we have recently noticed—"Ask No Questions and You'll Hear No Stories," "A Farewell Supper," and "The Wedding Morning."

ONE OF THE DUKES

FIRST PERFORMANCE TO-NIGHT, SATURDAY, MARCH 18th, 1911

The Playhouse

LESSEE & MANAGER
Mr. Cyril Maude

Telephone:
Nos. 14042 and 14043 Central

To-Night, Saturday, March 18th, at 9 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present, for the First Time, a Piece, in Three Acts, called

ONE OF THE DUKES

By GEORGE PLEYDELL.

DUKE OF RYE	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
LORD GEORGE THURBURN	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
1st FOOTMAN	Mr. H. HOLLAND
2nd FOOTMAN	Mr. W. WELLINGTON
DUCHESS OF RYE	Miss KATE BISHOP
COUNTESS OF MILVERTON	Miss NELL CARTER
MAXINE RAALTE	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE

The scene is laid in and about the old Orchard Garden of the Dower House of Welborne Abbey (W. Hemsley). It is early Autumn, eight days passing between the First and Second Acts, and a few minutes between the Second and Third. During the progress of the Third Act the curtain will be lowered twice.

Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE'S Costumes by PAQUIN, LTD., and MARTIAL & ARMAND. Hat by ZYROT ET CIE.
Miss KATE BISHOP'S Costumes by Mrs. NETTLESHIP.
Miss NELL CARTER'S Costumes by REDFERN, LTD.

Preceded at 8.30 by a New Play, in One Act, entitled

THE HAND ON THE LATCH

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY and CHARLES MAUDE.

THE MAN	Mr. W. E. HOLLOWAY
THE WIFE	Miss WINIFRED EMERY
THE SOLDIER	Mr. LOUIS GOODRICH

The action of the play takes place on the Canadian Prairie during the war between the North and South (Bruce Smith).

Costumes by L. and H. NATHAN. Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

Much is permitted to a comic duke, especially when he is impersonated in extravagant farce by a comedian like Mr. Cyril Maude. He may shoot his fiancée's pet dog in mistake for a partridge. He may wander about his ducal orchard playing a bassoon. He may even take his bassoon with him when, by a culminating stroke of pantomimic humour, he and his fiancée are lowered down a well and by the light of an electric torch come to an understanding about their ridiculous engagement.

He may do all these things and, since his representative at the Playhouse is Mr. Cyril Maude, he may raise fitful laughter over the arbitrary eccentricities of "One of the Dukes." But there is one thing that he may not do, and that is to discuss with his friends the physical defects, real or imaginary, of the ladies who have successively had the misfortune to be engaged to him and the good luck to have their engagements broken off. Even a comic duke must not forget that noblesse oblige and that it cannot be good ducal "form," or, indeed, any "form" at all, to talk about the false hair and false teeth, and the artificial complexions of the series of heiresses submitted to him by his mother for the matrimonial mending of his broken family fortunes.

MECHANICAL FUN.

It argued much for the tact of Mr. Cyril Maude and for the pretty charm of Miss Alexandra Carlisle that as the fatuous inquisitor into these secrets of the harem and the corpus vile of his impudent experiments they proved able on Saturday night to save such a joke as this from the natural consequence of its sins against good feeling and good taste. How these particular sins came to be committed by a playwright of Mr. George Pleydell's promise and an actor-manager of Mr. Maude's achievement is more than a little difficult to understand.

What is easier to comprehend is the notion that some fun of a crude, mechanical kind could be got out of the bassoon, the well, and the peppered pet dog; and it must be admitted that this fun, childish though it was, seemed to amuse a good many of those present at the première of the play. Moreover, there were one or two quite pleasant passages for Miss Carlisle as the not too American dollar-princess and Mr. Allan Aynesworth as the likelier and more chivalrous of her two titled suitors. But although they worked over their half-developed sentiment as loyally as did Mr. Maude over his too fully developed burlesque, the result upon the whole was distinctly disappointing, except for those able to welcome in "One of the Dukes" another argument in favour of the abolition of the House of Lords.

By way of curtain-raiser to a laugh which did not ring quite true there was presented a thrill that did not quite come off. This was "The Hand on the Latch," a tabloid domestic melodrama by Miss Mary Cholmondeley and Mr. Charles Maude, in which the accomplished art of Miss Winifred Emery was rather wasted upon the rôle of an affectionate wife who shoots the wretched husband, caught but not recognised by her as a thief in the night.

E. B.

QUEEN'S THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Lessee and Manager - - Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

On TUESDAY, MARCH 21st, 1911,
AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

Mr. HERBERT SLEATH

PRESENTS

A FOOL THERE WAS

A Play in Three Acts

By PORTER EMERSON BROWNE,

Based on Rudyard Kipling's Poem—"The Vampire."

The Husband	Mr. FRANK COOPER
The Friend	Mr. CHAS. BRYANT
The Secretary	Mr. WM. F. GRANT
Young Parmalee ..	Mr. H. LAWRENCE LEYTON
The Butler	Mr. HORTON COOPER
The Ship's Captain ..	Mr. KENDAL CHALMERS
The Ship's Doctor ..	Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
The Ship's Steward ..	Mr. HAROLD T. RICHARDSON
The Wife	Miss MARGARET HALSTAN
The Sister	Miss MADGE McINTOSH
The Child	Miss MATTIE BLOCK
AND
The Woman	Miss KATHARINE KAELRED

Sailors, Passengers, &c., &c.

Misses ENID SASS, VERA CUNNINGHAM, VIOLET VANCOUVER, MARJORIE ESSEX, GLADYS CUNNINGHAM, DOROTHY RADCLIFF, PHILLIS BIRKETT, FRANCES IRVING, GLADYS RAYNE, GWENDA VILLERS.

Messrs. JAS. JOLLEY, GERALD EARLE, G. LANGLEY-BELL, J. O'BRIEN, J. W. ATTWATER, H. MACKENZIE ROGAN, R. RAYMOND.

The Voice .. .. Mr. GEORGE SPELVIN

Play produced by Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

Act I.

Scene 1 .. The Breakfast Room of the Husband's. Larchmont.
The morning of Departure.
(The Curtain will be lowered for three minutes.)

Scene 2 .. Promenade deck of a Liner at the Pier.
Tableau—Two hundred miles at sea (Five Bells).

Act II.

Scene 1 .. The Husband's Country House. Larchmont.
Five weeks later.
(The Curtain will be lowered for three minutes.)

Scene 2 .. The Library of the Husband's Home. New York.
Two weeks later.

Act III.

Scene 1 .. The Husband's Country House. Larchmont.
One year later.
(The Curtain will be lowered for three minutes.)

Scene 2 .. The Library of the Husband's Home. New York.

Incidental Music by Mr. Albert Fox.
Costumes designed and executed by Madame Hadley-Seymour, 47 New Bond Street, W.
Hats by Wm. Whiteley, Ltd., Westbourne Grove, Bayswater.
Child's Dresses by Peter Robinson, Ltd., Oxford Street.
Scenery by F. L. Schmitz.
Furniture by J. S. Lyon, 112 High Holborn.
Plants by T. A. Dickson & Co., Streatham.

Programme of Music.

The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Albert Fox, will play the following Selections:—

Overture	...	Nicolai
(a) Danse des Follettes	...	Eille Norwood
(b) Masque Music	...	German
Selection "Pélissiano"	...	arr. by Finck

MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Prices of Admission:—Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 5s.; Upper Circle, 4s. and 3s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.; Private Boxes, One to Three Guineas.

Box Office (Mr. J. W. Sheppard). Telephone: Gerrard 9437 (two lines).

General Manager	Mr. Albert E. Warren
Stage Manager	Mr. William F. Grant
Assistant Stage Manager...	Mr. James Jolley

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Some three years since there appeared in a morning paper a poem by Rudyard Kipling, called "The Vampire," a verse of which ran:

"A fool there was, and he made his prayer,
Even as you and I,
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair;
We called her the woman who did not care.
But the fool he called her his lady fair.
Even as you and I."

Later on Burne-Jones painted a picture, for which the poem served as a suggestion, showing a man lying on his back while a lady of thin and weird appearance stood by his bedside. Upon the aforesaid poem Mr. Porter Emerson Browne, an American dramatist, founded a play which was produced at the Liberty Theatre, New York, on March 24 last year, and was played at the Queen's Theatre on Tuesday. "A Fool There Was" is the story of a man on whom the gods had showered their blessings in abundance, who was rich in the love of wife and child and friends, happy in the possession of a beautiful home, health, brain, energy, and who lived in full realisation of his happiness. The man is called away from his family for a month or so on an important mission; and on a sea-voyage he comes into contact with a woman—a beautiful, heartless creature who battens on the passions of men as the vampire lives and thrives on the blood of her victims. So great is this woman's power of subjugation, that for her the man abandons all he has held most precious—home, wife, child, "honour and faith and a sure intent"; and when satiety eventually overtakes him and thronging doubts show their unwelcome faces, he soaks himself in the drink which banishes them to temporary oblivion. And the woman—"his lady fair"—comes to gloat over the ruin to which she has brought her "fool." His friend comes to him and endeavours to appeal to some relic of manhood or sense of duty which will enable him to break the witch's spell; his little daughter comes full of loving eagerness to take her "daddy" home; but the power of the enchantress is too strong. As Circe of old was content only when she had turned her lovers into swine, so the woman will not abandon her "fool" until the man in him is dead and only the brute beast survives. And the strength of Lust is so great that she succeeds, or very nearly so. It is true the "fool" escapes her at the end, but it is through the door of death that he finds release; and, as the woman leaves the dead man on the floor of the darkened room, her only expression of emotion is the shriek of mad hysterical laughter which desecrates the silence as she flies in terror from the corpse.

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22nd, 1911, AT 8.10

(Subsequent Evenings at 8.45),

HERBERT TRENCH

PRESENTS

LADY PATRICIA

A Comedy in Three Acts

By RUDOLF BESIER.

Lady Patricia Cosway	Mrs. PATRICK CAMPBELL
Michael Cosway, her Husband	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Mrs. O'Farrel	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
William O'Farrel, her Son	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
Dean Lesley	Mr. ERIC LEWIS
Clare Lesley, his Daughter	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
Baldwin	Mr. C. V. FRANCE
Ellis	Mr. G. DICKSON-KENWIN
John	Mr. NORMAN PAGE

Act I. ... In an Oak Tree at Michael Cosway's country seat at Normanborough (Late Afternoon in May) ... ... Joseph Harker

Act II. ... The Same. (An Evening, five weeks later) ... ,, ,,

Act III. ... The Deanery Garden, Normanborough (The next Morning) ... ... G. Sackmann

The Play produced by E. LYALL SWETE.

Dresses by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY and Mrs. NETTLESHIP.

Furniture by SPILLMAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Trees and Flowers by H. ELLIOTT and A. & H. UHLMANN.

HAYMARKET

Manager
HARRISON

TRENCH

Wednesday
Evening

Mar. 22

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No. A 21

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

59

Are there any précieuses left now? They certainly existed at one period; in the early eighteen-eighties the woods at Bedford Park were full of them. But Lady Patricia Cosway, in Mr. Rudolf Besier's play, strikes one as an interesting and amusing survival rather than a contemporary study. The character, however, is none the less amusing for that. Affectation, especially literary and artistic affectation, is always a fair subject for stage ridicule; and, though Tennyson and Swinburne are not commonly quoted nowadays—there are no up-to-date poets to quote from—we can understand a cult of them still lingering in the depths of the rural districts. "Lady Patricia" is a satire on sentimentalism—which, by the way, is also a little out of fashion in these materialistic days. However, let it be granted that the characters in Mr. Besier's piece are possible contemporaries, and there is an immense amount of enjoyment to be derived from their vagaries. The leading personages form a square party. There are two middle-aged sentimentalists and two ingenuous and youthful ones. Lady Patricia Cosway believes that her husband Michael, an amateur astronomer, adores her. Therefore, though she carries on a semi-platonic flirtation with a callow youth called William O'Farrel, she continues to act affection with her husband in order to spare his feelings. He, on his side, is heartily tired of her, and is in love with a brisk and merry maiden, Clare Lesley, daughter of the local Dean; and Michael is under the delusion that Patricia worships him, and that the discovery that he was indifferent to her would break her heart.

Such is the state of affairs at the opening of the first act, in a magnificently real scene representing a platform built in the boughs of a gigantic oak tree. Lady Patricia is, to use a word which occurs in the piece, "canoodling" with young William O'Farrel, reading her verses to him, and generally posing as a divinity. The young man is raw and dense, and when he sees his mother approaching he climbs into the upper branches of the oak and hides there. The magnificent tree, indeed, is much used for purposes of practical fun. Clare climbs up it and tears her dress, which leads up to some quaint love-passages between her and the "solemn-ridiculous" Michael. There is a great deal of dodging and counter-dodging by the couples; but the rapprochement of the two young people is only postponed, and when they have to take refuge in a small summerhouse they realise that they love. Each, however, has an obstacle in the background. Clare considers that she is "bound" to Michael, and William thinks he ought to "stick to" Patricia. The deadlock is removed by the diplomacy of the Dean, who by forbidding his daughter to speak to William, the wicked lover of Lady Patricia, drives her, of course, into the lad's arms; and then her ladyship comes to the Dean to confess and learn what is to be her penance. The Dean tells her to confess all to her husband, but Michael anticipates her by a voluntary appeal for pardon. So the two married sentimentalists go off together to make the best of boredom mitigated by poetic pretence.

It must not be supposed, however, that a bald scenario like this can give any fair notion of the many amusing details of the piece. Indeed, the details are a most important factor of its success; and they are supplied with a dainty care and finish which reminds us somewhat of the methods of the old "cup and saucer" school. The young man climbing up the "practicable" tree and disappearing in the flies; the dropping by him from above of a teacup and saucer, which he has carried aloft with him for purposes of concealment; the tearing of the clambering "tomboy's" dress, and her request to the elderly married man to hook up her bodice behind; the gentle gallantries of the romantic Dean and the cynical cheeriness of the elderly Irishwoman; the quaintness of the old gardener, who cries "Whoa!" each time that he lowers a Chinese lantern from the branches above; the exit of the girl from her sojourn in the summer-house with the young man, her hair having "come down" in their eager embracings; the reading of a poem—and a rather neatly-written poem, too—by the précieuse; the excellent lines which are contained in the dialogue, some of them quite quotable; and the ingenious and adurable absurdity of the whole entertainment had much to do with the favour with which it was received on Wednesday. "Lady Patricia" must be taken in the spirit in which it is written. It is a fantasy, a thing of lantern-light and caprice, and fair friskiness and imaginative addity.

Sir George Frampton's
"Statuette of Peter Pan" in Kensington Gardens.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1911.

PETER PAN.

A STATUE IN KENSINGTON GARDENS.

Peter Pan is to have a statue raised in his honour in Kensington Gardens. Sir George Frampton is the sculptor and Mr. J. M. Barrie the donor. The artist has been at work on the statue for eighteen months, and now, practically finished, it will be exhibited at the forthcoming Royal Academy exhibition.

The history of the idea of raising a monument to Peter Pan is interesting. When the name of Peter Pan became familiar through "The Little White Bird," and still more so through the play called after him, the Board of Works presented Mr. Barrie with a key to Kensington Gardens. Afterwards they had an idea of putting some panels representing Peter's adventures into the children's shelter erected two years ago on the west side of the gardens. They consulted Mr. Barrie about these and the outcome of the conferences was Mr. Barrie's offer to Mr. Lewis Harcourt, a great Peter Panite and then First Commissioner of Works, of a statue of Peter for Kensington Gardens, to be erected on the spot where he landed from his barque on the Serpentine. The proposal was accepted with enthusiasm, and as the gardens are Crown property the idea was placed before King Edward, who welcomed it and afterwards showed keen interest in the progress of the statue.

The admirable stone picture suggested by Sir George Frampton and now practically completed by him is that of a broad-rooted tree, in whose many crevices live fairies and little things of the fields and trees—squirrels and rabbits and mice, timid things that are coming out into the daylight at the call of Peter, who, standing on the top of the tree trunk, pipes in hand, is playing for them. The monument stands nine feet high in all and will be so placed that it will appear to spring from the ground.

There will be no base to it. The children who come to see it, near where they now feed the ducks, need not regard it as a statue but as some delicate, graceful thing that belongs to them.

There is an infinite amount of charm about the graceful figures that Sir George Frampton's genius has brought clustering round the tree trunk. Contrasting with the timidity in the little animals is the saucy daring of the girl fairy, who, having clambered to Peter's feet, is smiling up archly into his serious face. The artist's idea is that the boy represents the play and the tree stands for the book.

After the Academy exhibition is over the statue will be cast in bronze, a process that will occupy nearly six months, so about this time next year it will be erected on the spot now marked out to receive it in the gardens.

J. W.

Lessee and Manager
Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30. MATINEES AT 2.30 O'CLOCK.

HERBERT TRENCH

PRESENTS

LADY PATRICIA

A Comedy in Three Acts

By RUDOLF BESIER.

March 23

PRECEDED AT 8 O'CLOCK (MATINEES AT 2 O'CLOCK) BY

JAMES AND JOHN

A Play in One Act

By GILBERT CANNAN.

James Betts	Mr. J. FISHER WHITE
John Betts	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
Mrs. Betts	Miss HELEN HAYE
Mr. Betts	Mr. JAMES HEARN

Scene: Their Parlour (9 p.m.). F. L. Schmitz

The Play produced by NORMAN PAGE.

THE LITTLE THEATRE
JOHN STREET, ADELPHI, W.C.
Miss LILLAH McCARTHY'S SEASON

Tuesday Evening	TUESDAY EVENING at 8.30
Mar. 28	Mar. 28 1911
Stall	STALL 10/6
H 4	No. 1 4
This to be retained	No Hats or Bonnets allowed. This portion to be given up.

This Ticket is sold subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes and is sold only subject to this condition.

Every Evening, at 8.30 p m.,

"THE MASTER BUILDER."

By HENRIK IBSEN.
Translated by EDMUND GOSSE and WILLIAM ARCHER.
Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

Knut Brovik	... LEON M. LION
Kaia Fösli	... CHRISTINE SILVER
Ragnar Brovik	HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Halvard Solness	... NORMAN McKINNEL
Mrs. Solness	KATHARINE POLE
Dr. Herdal	CLAUDE KING
Hilda Wangel	LILLAH McCARTHY

The action takes place in and about the house of Solness.

ACT I.	The Office
ACT II.	The Drawing Room
ACT III.	The Verandah

The intervals will be ten minutes each.

The Scenes designed by Norman Wilkinson, of Four Oaks.

Manager	A. E. DRINKWATER
Stage Manager	...A. B. TAPPING
Assisted by	LESLIE CASEY

Box Office Manager ... REGINALD WYNNE. Box Office Assistant ... OTHO STANTON.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD

Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham

Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

On WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 29th, 1911, at 8 o'clock,
And EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

PASSERS-BY

A Play in Four Acts, by C. HADDON CHAMBERS.

"Let the withered bough for itself take heed,
While the green shoots wait your care."—Gordon.

Mr. Peter Waverton	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Pine	Mr. GAYER MACKAY
"Nighty"	Mr. GEORGE SHELTON
Samuel Burns	Mr. O. P. HEGGIE
Margaret Summers	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH (By arrangement with Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN)
The Lady Hurley (Waverton's Step-Sister) ..	Miss HELEN FERRERS
Miss Beatrice Dainton	Miss NINA SEVENING
Little Peter	Miss RENÉE MAYER

Scene: Mr. Waverton's Apartments in Piccadilly.

Act I. 10.30 p.m.
Act II. The next morning. 9 a.m.
Act III. Three weeks later. 5 p.m.
Act IV. The next morning. 4.30 a.m.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Gowns and Hats by Madame HAYWARD, 67 New Bond Street, W., and Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 47 New Bond Street, W.
Miss Sevening's Hats by WHITELEY'S, LTD., Westbourne Grove.
Furniture by D. L. ISAACS, 50 New Oxford Street, W.C.
Pianoforte by CHAPPELL & Co., New Bond Street, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

First Matinee, Saturday, April 1st, at 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	BALLET ... ... "Russe"	Luigini
2.	PETITE SUITE	Coleridge Taylor
3.	a. INTERMEZZO ... ... "On the Bosphorus"	Lincke
	b. ENTR'ACTE ... ... "La Source"	Délibes
4.	a. VALSE ... ... "Nydia"	Windeatt
	b. SONG ... ... "Prière"	Gounod

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 to 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 8. Matinees at 2. Commence at 8.30. Matinees at 2.30.

Business Manager ... ... J. HERBERT JAY.

The scene of the play is Mr. Peter Waverton's very cosy apartments in Piccadilly; and on the rise of the curtain we find that his man, Pine, has committed the indiscretion of admitting a cabman known as "Nighty," and treating him to his master's whisky and cigars. He is caught in the act, and severely reprimanded by Waverton, who has come home suffering from a fit of the blues. With the object of getting rid of his depression he forgives Pine, and gives him orders not only to readmit "Nighty," but to bring into the flat a loafer he has seen from his window. That he gets a good deal of amusement out of the company of this extremely odd couple is evident. Another person who, on this particular night, is brought into Mr. Waverton's chambers, is a woman, Margaret Summers, wandering in the dense fog, and coughing terribly. She is, however, no stranger to him. Seven years previously he had known her as a governess in the house of his step-sister, Lady Hurley, and there had been a serious love affair between her and Waverton. When her ladyship learnt of this she lost no time in dismissing the unfortunate governess, and, with the object of effectually separating the couple, she destroyed the letters which the girl addressed to Waverton. Margaret now informs him that she has a child, a little boy, of which he is the father; but on learning that he is engaged to Beatrice Dainton, Lady Hurley's niece, she refuses to allow him to see the child. Waverton goes the right way to attain his object when he suggests that the boy must be plain. The loafer, Burns, having by means of a bath, a barber, and a suit of clothes which belonged to Waverton's man, been transformed into an outwardly respectable member of society, is employed on odd jobs at the flat. Margaret relents, and brings the boy to make the acquaintance of his father, and to stay for a little while with him. As might be supposed, Burns is not the kind of man to settle down to any regular work. A man who has been a tramp longs for freedom and the country lanes, and he dislikes being under the strict superintendence of Pine. So he decides to return to his old ways, but when he leaves the flat he does not go away alone. He takes the boy with him, because he has taken a fancy to the little chap, who, hearing from Samuel of the rabbits that are to be caught in the unknown land, is quite ready to accompany him. Search is made for the missing boy by his newly-found father, and in a few hours he is restored to his anxious mother's arms, while the kidnapper is allowed to resume his old life. In the meantime, Beatrice Dainton has made the discovery that Waverton still loves Margaret, and resolves to break off her engagement to him. In her own expressive slang she gives him "the chuck." Margaret has informed Peter that she is engaged to a certain Henry Robinson; but this is a pure fiction, and a happy ending is brought about when she confesses that she has told a lie, and falls into the arms of the father of her child.

T.R.D.L.
30/3/1911
Retain this portion, which is the Voucher for One Seat only, and does not admit to the Theatre.
Row B | No. 3
Orches. Stall

THE SINS OF SOCIETY

BY

CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

Incidental Music Composed by J. M. GLOVER

Mr. GEORGE BARRETT	as	JAMES HOGG
Mr. CHARLES ROCK	,,	NOEL FERRARS
Mr. VINCENT CLIVE	,,	Sir DORIAN MARCH
Mr. FREDERICK ROSS	,,	Rev. MARTIN HOPE
Mr. OSCAR ADYE	,,	Mr. MORRIS
Mr. ARTHUR POOLE	,,	Mr. THESIGER
Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD	,,	Captain CARRUTHERS
Mrs. LANGTRY	as	LADY MARION BEAUMONT
Miss FANNY BROUGH	,,	LADY GOLDBURY
Miss MADGE FABIAN	,,	LADY GWENDOLEN ASHLEY
Miss LUCY SIBLEY	,,	CAROLINE, DUCHESS OF DANEBURY
Miss JOAN BURTON	,,	Mrs. MURGATROYD
Miss EILY MALYON	,,	A Milliner
Miss BETTY RUTHERFORD	,,	Maid
Miss CARRIE MURRAY	,,	Mrs. Burton Rocketter
Mr. BERT MONKS	,,	Private Baines
Mr. EDWARD MORGAN	,,	Snowey Templer
Master JACK FROST	,,	Jockey
Mr. EDWARD POLLARD	,,	Recruiting Sergeant
Mr. JOHN BLOOM	,,	Lord Enderby
Mr. FRED PENLEY	,,	Parker
Mr. ALFRED FISHER	,,	Captain Thorpe
Mr. HERBERT HEWETSON	,,	Colonel Bryan

Mesdames VARRE, BRITTON, LENNARD, COOPER, MENZIES, MAY, LANCASTER, W. PRICE, F. PRICE, HEMMINGTON, HUMBY, MOREL, BRADBROOKE, R. MURRAY, SAUNDERS, CLIFFORD, SILVERTHORNE, ST. CYR, HOWARD, LESLIE, MAPLESON, HOUGHTON.

Messrs. EDWARD ARUNDEL, ALFRED PARKER, M. CHRISTIE, G. ALEXANDRE.

Mr. Arthur Collins was well advised to revive Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton's drama at Drury Lane on Thursday, for it is one of the most successful of the series of Drury Lane dramas which have been produced there under Mr. Collins's régime. It was first presented on September 12, 1907, with Mr. Albert Chevalier, Mr. Lyn Harding, Mr. Julian L'Estrange, Mr. Oscar Adye, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Fanny Brough, Miss Adrienne Augarde, and Miss Frances Leighton in the cast. As many of our readers may have forgotten the plot in the interval, it may be well to briefly recapitulate it. The action originates in the extravagance of Lady Marion Beaumont, who, having lost heavily at bridge has embezzled the fortune of her younger sister, Lady Gwendolen Ashley, for whom she is a trustee. The villain, Noel Ferrars, who has his eye on Gwendolen and her gold, advises Lady Marion to borrow £7,000 from a money-lender named Morris on the security of a valuable tiara which has been lent to Lady Marion by her parvenue friend Lady Goldbury; and Ferrars suggests that Lady Marion shall substitute for the tiara a box containing a paper-weight. The trick is played, Lady Marion has betting losses, and cannot redeem the tiara; and Morris's suspicions are excited. Driven into a corner, Lady Marion drugs him in his cottage on the banks of the Thames, and hands the box to Gwendolen's lover, Sir Dorian March, who, when the police pursue him, dives into the river over a weir, and escapes from the country by taking the place of a deserter who is about to leave England on foreign service. We see the embarkation of troops on the transport, which gets underweigh, and sticks on a rock in a fog. The women and children are handed to the boats, while the soldiers, rallied by Sir Dorian, stand at the salute on the deck as the vessel goes down, her boilers bursting as she sinks. Sir Dorian saves himself on a spar, and goes to South America; and Gwendolen, believing her lover is dead, consents to marry Ferrars so as to save her sister from exposure and punishment. The comic characters, however, come to the rescue. Lady Goldbury and her eccentric admirer, James Hogg—who is in possession of the incriminating box—replace the paper-weight by the tiara, and save Lady Marion. Gwendolen refuses to marry Ferrars; and Sir Dorian returns from abroad and weds the maiden.

Every Evening at 9 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present the Original Cast in the Three-Act Comedy, called

COUSIN KATE

By HUBERT HENRY DAVIES.

HEATH DESMOND		Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
REV. JAMES BARTLETT		Mr. RUDGE HARDING
BOBBY SPENCER		Master STEPHEN THOMAS
MRS. SPENCER		Miss CARLOTTA ADDISON
AMY SPENCER		Miss BEATRICE FERRAR
JANE		Miss VERA COBURN
KATE CURTIS		Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS

The action takes place in a rural district of England and covers a period of about five hours.

Acts I. and III. Drawing-Room at Mrs. Spencer's ... Bruce Smith
Act II. ... The Sitting-Room at "Owlscot" ... ..

Miss ELLIS JEFFREYS' Dresses by Mme. HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, 47, New Bond Street.
Miss BEATRICE FERRAR'S Dresses by REDFERN, Ltd., Conduit Street, W.
Hats by Madame Auburn, 4, Hanover Square, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Piano by CHAPPELL & Co.

Preceded at 8.30 by a New Play, in One Act, called

OUR NERVOUS SYSTEM

By GERTRUDE JENNINGS.

BRENDA THOMPSON		Miss MARY JERROLD
Mrs. CHRISTIE	Her Mother	Mrs. FORDYCE
EVANGELINE	Her Cousin	Miss NELL CARTER
FREDDIE	Her Husband	Mr. LOUIS GOODRICH

Scene: — Study in the Thompsons' Flat.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Saturday

15/4/1911

Orch. Stall

H 16

This to be retained

The evening was also marked by the production of a play, in one act, by Gertrude Jennings, entitled

"OUR NERVOUS SYSTEM."

Brenda Thompson .....Miss Mary Jerrold
Mrs. Christie .....Mrs. Fordyce
Evangeline .....Miss Nell Carter
Freddie .....Mr. Louis Goodrich

It is not often that a first piece at a West End theatre is followed by one from the same pen; but in the case of the above playlet the distinction is well justified, "Our Nervous System" proving that Miss Gertrude Jennings' gifts of satire were by no means exhausted in "Between the Soup and the Savoury," which has only just finished a long run at the Playhouse. The new piece amusingly details the domestic amenities of a young married couple who disagree as to the disposition of the furniture of their flat, especially in regard to the telephone, the right place for which the wife thinks is in the drawing-room, while the husband, who is a devotee of the poetic muse, cannot have it too far away. Eventually the youthful mistress of the household, aided and abetted by her mother and cousin, resolves to have a separation; but when the time comes for farewell she repents, and, after each has told the other all the uncomplimentary things their relations have said about them, they resolve to resume housekeeping.

Every Evening at 9.

Matinee: Thursday and Saturday at 2.30.

THE LILY,

Preceded at 8, by

THE TERRORIST,

By LAURENCE IRVING

The Governor	Mr. LAURENCE IRVING
His Sister	Miss BEATRICE SMITH
Their Servant	Mr. A. FIELD FISHER
The Colonel	Mr. JAMES SKEA
The Terrorist	...Miss MARY FORBES

Scene :—A room in the Governor's Chalet, in a remote province of the Russian Empire.
Time—The Present, Easter Day.

"THE TERRORIST."

Play, in One Act, by Laurence Irving, Produced at the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday, April 15.

The scene is a room in the Governor's chalet in a remote province of the Russian Empire; the time the present, and the day Easter Day. From the first the atmosphere of dangerous conspiracy is struck; for we see the Governor's servant preparing for his assassination by withdrawing the cartridges from a revolver which he replaces in a drawer, thus rendering the intended victim defenceless. The same drawer contains a written warning that the official is doomed by the people to death. The Governor and his sister enter, and we learn from their conversation that the house is surrounded by police who are watching over the Governor's life. But the Governor remarks that this has been done by the order of the colonel of the local troops, an ambitious man, who would be glad to see the Governor assassinated so that he—the Colonel—might step into the position; and preparations of this kind have, in time past, usually preceded an attempt at assassination. The expected result occurs. A young woman arrives, ostensibly to take the place of governess to the Governor's children, but really to slay him with a revolver which she carries concealed in her muff. We have now come to the crucial situation of the play, and a combat of earnestness and intellect takes place between the Governor—who is helpless, physically, his right arm being wounded and in a sling—and the avenging girl, who has sworn to kill the Governor, who, it appears, shot her father in a fray. The Governor, with fearless calmness, argues the matter out, explains how the quite justifiable homicide came to be committed by him, and tells the girl that one looks at things in quite different lights in youth and middle-age. The police rush in and arrest her; but the Governor adroitly takes the pistol from her muff and slips it into his drawer, so that the police cannot prove her guilty of intent to murder, especially as the Governor declares that she is to be his children's governess. This mercy softens the girl's heart, and she goes out, after promising to get the order for the Governor's death revoked; and the official, with a sigh of relief, prepares to take the bath which he has promised himself earlier in the play.

QUEEN'S THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Lessee and Manager - - Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.45,

Mr. HERBERT SLEATH

PRESENTS

A FOOL THERE WAS

PRECEDED AT 8.15 BY

THE FOREST OF HAPPY DREAMS.

An African Fantasy.

By EDGAR WALLACE.

(By arrangement with Mr. Hy. Bagge.)

Ralph Mainward	...	Mr. WILLIAM F. GRANT
Abbibo	...	Mr. THOMAS HOLDING
Charles Coleburt	...	Mr. HAROLD T. RICHARDSON
May Warrender	...	Miss ENID SASS
Bert Atty	...	Mr. GERALD VALENTINE
and
CLAUDE WELBURY	...	Mr. HERBERT SLEATH

Scene: On the Banks of the Congo.

"THE FOREST OF HAPPY DREAMS."

An African Faotasy, by Edgar Wallace, Produced at the Queeo's Theatre on Saturday, April 15.

Ralph Mainward .....Mr. William F. Grant
Abbibo .....Mr. Thomas Holding
Charles Coleburt .....Mr. Harold Richardson
May Warrender .....Miss Enid Sass
Bert Atty .....Mr. Gerald Valentine
Claude Welbury .....Mr. Herbert Sleath

Mr. Herbert Sleath produced, on Saturday evening last, in frout of "A Fool There Was," Edgar Wallace's picturesque and impressive African fantasy, entitled "The Forest of Happy Dreams." This is announced as by arrangement with Mr. Henry Bagge, who, it will be remembered, presented the playlet at the Camdeo Hippodrome in Juoe last year. The scene is laid in the depths of a forest on the banks of the Congo, where Claude Welbury is lying stricken with fever. He has evideotly made a mess of things in England—lost all his money in speculation and gambling, and left behind a girl to whom he was devotedly attached. This we learn in his ramblings to Dr. Ralph Mainward, who has been summoned by his Mohammedao servant. After dosing him with morphine and making him comfortable for the oight, the doctor leaves him, with the intention of taking him to more suitable quarters the next day, telling the servant to he sure and fetch him if his master is taken worse. When Mainward has departed Welbury dreams—and his vision is shown to the audience. All comes right; his horse has won, his monetary position is secure, and his sweetheart tells him that whatever has happened she will always love him. Thus the exile passes away in "The Forest of Happy Dreams"—the Forest of Death for the white man—and when Maioward, calls again the next morning and finds him dead, he tells the servant Abbibo that he should have summoned him earlier. But Abbibo philosophically remarks that Welbury has gone to a place where there is no trouble and all is peace and rest

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE

LONDON SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

(SEVENTH YEAR)

Commencing April 17th, 1911.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

MONDAY, APRIL 17TH, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.

SHAKESPEARE'S

A Midsummer Night's Dream

WITH MENDELSSOHN'S MUSIC.

The Production under the sole direction of

SIR HERBERT TREE.

FAIRIES.

Oberon	(King of the Fairies)	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY
Titania	(Queen of the Fairies)	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
1st Fairy		Miss STELLA ESDAILE
Mustardseed		Miss MIDGE DOLPHIN
Cobweb		Miss MARCELL KREUTZ
Moth		Master CHARLES THOMAS
Peaseblossom		Miss MIMI CRAWFORD
Puck		Master BURFORD HAMPDEN

MORTALS.

Hippolyta	(Queen of the Amazons, bethrothed to Theseus)	Miss FRANCES DILLON
Hermia	(Daughter of Egeus, in Love with Lysander)	Miss LAURA COWIE
Helena	(in Love with Demetrius)	Miss MAUD CRESSALL
Theseus	(Prince of Athens)	GERALD LAWRENCE
Egeus	(Father to Hermia)	S. A. COOKSON
Lysander	(in Love with Hermia)	BASIL GILL
Demetrius	(in Love with Hermia)	E. ION SWINLEY
Philostrate	(Master of the Revels to Theseus)	HENRY MORRELL
Quince	(Carpenter)	A. E. GEORGE
Snug	(Joiner)	WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Flute	(Bellows Mender)	E. M. ROBSON
Snout	(Tinker)	EDMUND GURNEY
Starveling	(Tailor)	EDWARD SASS
Bottom the Weaver		ARTHUR BOURCHIER

ACT I.

SCENE 1.—Exterior of Theseus's Palace.—J. Harker.
SCENE 2.—Quince's House.—J. Harker.
SCENE 3.—Athens, a Wood near the Sea.—W. Hann.

ACT II.

SCENE—Another part of the Wood.—J. Harker.

ACT III.

SCENE—Interior of Theseus's Palace.—J. Harker.

The Costumes have been designed by PERCY ANDERSON, and carried out by B. J. SIMMONS, 7 & 8, King Street, W.C.

Perruquier - - W. CLARKSON.

SIR HERBERT TREE wishes to express his thanks to MISS LOIE FULLER and MISS ELISE CLERC for their valuable assistance in the arrangement of the Dances.

NOTICE.—Full particulars of the Performances to be given during this year's LONDON SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL will shortly be announced.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY AT 2.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Theatre has now been fitted throughout with the Ozonair System of Ventilation for the constant supply of pure fresh air, by Messrs. OZONAIR, LTD., 96, Victoria Street, S.W.

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING. ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID. CHORUS MASTER—ALFRED BELLEW.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. WATTS) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE
SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL
A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

CHARLES FROHMAN

TO-NIGHT (TUESDAY, APRIL 18th, 1911), AT 8 O'CLOCK,

Mr. LEWIS WALLER

IN

A BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL

BY

EDWARD G. HEMMERDE and FRANCIS NEILSON

The Rt. Hon. George Admaston, M.P.	Mr. GUY STANDING
Roderick Collingwood	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Lord Ellerdine	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
Sir John Burroughes (President of the Divorce Court)	Mr. STANLEY TURNBULL
Sir Robert Fyffe, K.C., M.P. .. (Mr. Admaston's leading Counsel)	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL
Gervaise McArthur, K.C. .. (Mrs. Admaston's leading Counsel)	Mr. W. CRONIN-WILSON
Stuart Menzies, K.C. .. (Mr. Collingwood's leading Counsel)	Mr. S. J. WARMINGTON
Frank Cartaret, K.C.	Mr. LEWIS BROUGHTON
Jacques (Waiter at the Hotel des Tuileries) ..	Mr. ALEC THOMPSON
Dubois .. .. .. (a Detective)	Mr. A. CATON WOODVILLE
Foreman of the Jury	Mr. A. M. CULLEN
Footman at Admaston House	Mr. LESLIE REA
Lady Atwill	Miss BERYL FABER
Pauline .. (Mrs. Admaston's Maid)	Miss MARIANNE CALDWELL
Peggy .. .. (George Admaston's Wife) ..	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES.

Act I.	Mrs. Admaston's Rooms at the Hotel des Tuileries, Paris. Early Spring. Shortly after midnight
Act II.	The same. The next morning
Act III. ..	The Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice, Court 2. A Year afterwards. Afternoon
Act IV.	At Admaston House. The same afternoon—later

The Scenery painted by R. C. McCLEERY.

Dresses by REVILLE & ROSSITER, Hanover Square, W.
Hats by MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street, W.
Furniture by SPILLMAN & Co., St. Martin's Lane.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

Programme of Music.

Orchestra under the Direction of JOHN CROOK.

OVERTURE	"Le Caid"	A. Thomas
SELECTION	"The Fortune Teller"	Victor Herbert
SELECTION	"My Lady Molly"	Sidney Jones
ENTR'ACTE	"The Frolic"	Herbert Haines
WALTZ	"The Druid's Prayer"	Gordon Davieson
MARCH	"British Scouts" ...	Jeanne de la Houssaye

General Manager	For Mr. LEWIS WALLER	Mr. VICTOR LEWIS
Business Manager		Mr. H. C. HOOPER
Stage Manager		Mr. EDMUND WALLER
Assistant Stage Manager ...		Mr. LEWIS BROUGHTON

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT AT 2.30.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. .. W. LESTOCQ
Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

"It isn't what you do, it's what people say you do that makes the mischief," says worldly-wise Lady Atwill to foolish Peggy Admaston. Peggy is the "butterfly" of the play by Edward G. Hemmerde, K.C., and Francis Neilson, M.P., entitled "A Butterfly on the Wheel," which was produced at the Globe Theatre on Tuesday evening by Mr. Lewis Waller by arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman. Of all the thoughtless, irresponsible butterflies who sun their pretty wings in the sun of male admiration and flutter light-heartedly down the sweet-scented breeze of illicit love, regardless of the gathering clouds and unconscious of the presence of their natural enemies the sharp-beaked birds, poor, pretty Peggy was the most thoughtless, the most irresponsible. Married when still very young to a man much her senior, who is immersed in politics, Peggy, though conscious of her husband's love and trust, seeks distraction in the society of Roderick Collingwood, and shows a preference so decided for his company, and a disregard so great for the proprieties, that Collingwood is deceived into the belief that Peggy feels for him as strong a passion as his own. To bring matters to a crisis, he plans that he and Peggy shall be separated from their friends, Lady Atwill and Lord Ellerdine, the quartet being bound for Switzerland. The result is that Peggy finds herself alone with Collingwood at the Hotel des Tuileries, Paris. Even then foolish Peggy persists in believing the arrangement to be the result of an accident, and it is not until Collingwood begins to make furious love to her at dead of night in her private sitting-room that the possibility of unpleasantness occurs to her. This is heightened when her husband's voice is heard over the telephone inquiring for his wife, and the culprits realise that their whereabouts are known. To shield Peggy, who by this time has convinced him that her heart is in her husband's keeping, Collingwood replies to the call that all four of the party are at the hotel. Lady Atwitt and Ellerdine put in an appearance the next morning in time for breakfast, and are carefully drilled in their parts, so that when Admasten appears shortly afterwards he hears the same story from them all, i.e., "We got on the wrong train and all stopped the night at this hotel." But Admaston has received an anonymous letter on the afternoon of their departure informing him of their plans, and, his suspicions being aroused, has had them tracked by a detective, whose report is sufficiently damning. That Peggy has lied to him confirms his suspicions, and the poor little butterfly finds herself on the wheel of the divorce court.

And very badly does she fare there. Protesting her innocence, she only succeeds in convincing the judge and jury of her guilt, but the sincerity of her assertions reaches the heart of one person—her husband. There is but one obstacle to her complete rehabilitation in his esteem—the anonymous letter. Could he but discover its author and the motive with which it was written, Peggy would be cleared. Here the quick-witted Collingwood proves his compunction for the wrong he has done, and, by a clever manœuvre, brings home the authorship of the epistle to Lady Atwill, who, for her own ends, has been his partner in the plan to wreck Peggy's life, though she has not shared in his subsequent repentance. And, the storm of adversity past, the pretty butterfly, grown wiser, is content to sun herself in her husband's love and to abjure the burning rays of strange luminaries.

Every Evening at 8.30 p.m.,

FANNY'S FIRST PLAY.

An easy Play for a little Theatre.

THE INDUCTION.

Servant	A. E. FILMER
Cecil Savoyard ...	LEWIS SEALY
Count O'Dowda	HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Fanny O'Dowda ...	CHRISTINE SILVER
Mr. Trotter	CLAUDE KING
Mr. Vaughan ...	S. CREAGH HENRY
Mr. Gunn ...	REGINALD OWEN
Mr. Flawner Bannel...	NIGEL PLAYFAIR

THE PLAY.

Mr. Robin Gilbey ...	FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
Mrs. Gilbey ...	GWYNNETH GALTON
Juggins	H. K. AYLIFF
Dora Delaney ...	DOROTHY MINTO
Mrs. Knox ...	CICELY HAMILTON
Mr. Joseph Knox ...	ARNOLD LUCY
Margaret Knox ...	LILLAH McCARTHY
Lieutenant Duvallet ...	RAYMOND LAUZERTE
Bobby	SHIEL BARRY

THE INDUCTION:

In a country house in Cambridge, taken for the occasion by Count O'Dowda. Before the Curtain.

THE PLAY:

Act I. ... ... Mr. Robin Gilbey's Dining Room. Denmark Hill
Act II. ... ... Mr. Joseph Knox's Drawing Room in the same neighbourhood
Act III. ... ... Again in Mr. Gilbey's Dining Room

THE EPILOGUE:—As in the Induction.

Manager	A. E. DRINKWATER
Stage Manager	A. B. TAPPING
Assisted by	LESLIE CASEY

Box Office Manager ... REGINALD WYNNE. Box Office Assistant ... OTHO STANTON.

Matinees of The Master Builder, Friday, April 21st, Tuesday, 25th, and Friday, 28th.

Matinees of Fanny's First Play every Wednesday and Saturday.

"FANNY'S FIRST PLAY."

"Easy" Play in Three Acts, Produced at the Little Theatre on Wednesday, April 19.

Caustic and witty lines abound in the eccentric and satirical piece, "Fanny's First Play," produced before a keenly appreciative audience on Wednesday at the Little Theatre. The author's name was not given, but the play is quite in the Bernard Shaw vein, and it is quite possible and probable that the amusing but rather too-prolonged joke is the work of G. B. S., who was present at Wednesday evening's performance. The play opens with an Induction: in a country house in Cambridge taken for the occasion by Count O'Dowda. The Count, whose blood is Irish and who lives in Venice, and who cherishes the old ideals and wears Court costume, is in England on a visit to his daughter Fanny, whom he has sent to Cambridge. As a holiday present to her the Count has arranged for the production of a play written by her—with real actors and real critics. The critics will come cheaper than the actors, but only four have been invited—Mr. Trotter, Mr. Vaughan, Mr. Gunn, and Mr. Flawner Bannel. This representative team are caricatures of well-known writers, and the talk on dramatic criticism is very amusing, as is also Fanny's banteriog of the fatherly Mr. Trotter, who wears gold lace and a cocked hat, objects to the mentioning of Aristotle, and is only happy when in France.

But to Fanny's play, which concerns suburban respectability and snobbishness. Bobby, the priggish son of Mr. and Mrs. Robin Gilbey, who live at Denmark Hill, has been on the razzle with Dora Delaney—"a daughter of joy"—a slangy young person who familiarly addresses everyone as "old dear," and the precious pair have been imprisoned for drunk and disorderly conduct. This is, of course, a terrible shock to his parents, for Bobby is engaged to Margaret Knox, the daughter of the equally respectable Mr. and Mrs. Knox. Mr. Knox and Mr. Gilbey are partners, and Gilbey decides that the affair must be hushed up, and tries to bribe Dora to give up seeing his son again. But the Knoxes receive an equally severe shock. Their daughter has disappeared for some days, and when she does come home it appears that she also has been "doing time." Hymn-singing at a religious meeting had wrought in her a sense of freedom, and instead of returning home she alighted from the 'bus at Piccadilly, went to a music hall, made the acquaintance of a young Frenchman—Duvallet—accompanied him to a dancing saloon, and partook liberally of champagne. It was Boat-race night, a number of students in the saloon became rowdy, and the police were called in. In the subsequent melée she admits she knocked two of a policeman's teeth out and used language which she didn't imagine she knew. And she glories in it, and is determined that all her friends shall hear of her exploit. She has come in contact with the realities of life, and knows herself to be a woman. There is a very amusing scene when Margaret and Bobby discover that each has undergone the same experience, and decide to break off the engagement. The shocked Mr. Knox insists that the gallant young Frenchman shall marry Margaret, and the Lieutenant remarks that he is married already. But there is the very superior and sedate footman Juggins, who turns out to be the son of a duke, and who once harshly treated a servant, and by way of penance went into service! Margaret has always had a sneaking affection for him, and joyously accepts his proposal for her hand. Bobby will, of course, wed the "daughter of joy," who is very staunch in her affection for him. And after everything being turned upside down, "just like the Book of Revelations," peace will evidently again soon reign in the households of Gilbey and Knox.

Then the dramatic critics come on the stage to give their verdicts. Flawner Bannel cannot say whether it is a good play or not unless he knows who is the author; others ascribe it to Granville Barker, Pinero, etc., and give their reasons. A suggestion that Bernard Shaw wrote it is pooh-poohed by one of the quartette; the play, he says, has a note of passion which has never been known in a Shaw piece. Finally Count O'Dowda remarks that "Whatever we think about the play, there can be no two opinions about the acting"—certainly the truest words spoken, for the players all sustained their parts splendidly.

Fanny's First Play

THE KINGSWAY THEATRE.

PROPRIETRESS - MISS LENA ASHWELL

LILLAH McCARTHY.
GRANVILLE BARKER.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees and Managers, Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, 26 Langham Street, and Mr. HERBERT SLEATH, Dormy Cottage, Woking.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 19th, and EVERY EVENING.

MATINÉES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

OSCAR ASCHE & LILY BRAYTON

In an "Arabian Night"

KISMET

By EDWARD KNOBLAUCH.

CHARACTERS (IN ORDER OF THEIR APPEARANCE).

MEN.

Hajj		OSCAR ASCHE
The Muezzin		ALFRED BRISTOWE
The Imam Mahmud		CHARLES A. DORAN
A Mufti		ARTHUR TRANTOM
The Guide Nasir		R. IAN PENNY
The Sheikh Jawan		CALEB PORTER
The Beggar Kasim		TRIPP EDGAR
Amru	Shopkeepers	ATHOL FORDE
Zayd	Shopkeepers	R. F. ANSON
The Caliph Abdallah		BEN WEBSTER
The Wazir Abu Bakr		EWAN BROOKE
The Wazir Mansur		HERBERT GRIMWOOD
Kafur	(Mansur's Sworder)	GEORGE RELPH
Afife	(His Secretary)	A. WINSPEARE
Captain of the Watch		D. ATHERTON
An Attendant of Mansur		H. FRANKLIN
A Blind Man		E. ADENEY
A Chinaman		GORDON HARKER
A Chamberlain of the Caliph		G. FITZGERALD
The Gaoler Kutayt		J. FRITZ RUSSELL

WOMEN.

Marsinah	(Hajj's daughter)	LILY BRAYTON
Narjis	(Her Nurse)	BESSIE MAJOR
An Old Woman		D. ENGLAND
The Almah	(a Dancer)	NANCY DENVERS
Miskah	(a Slave)	MURIEL HUTCHINSON
Kut-al-Kulub	(Mansur's First Wife)	SABA RALEIGH

Guards, Wazirs, Dignitaries, Courtiers, Soldiers, Eunuchs, Shopkeepers, Buyers, &c.: Messrs. Serle, St. Ord, Florent, Edwards, Wallace, Flanagan, Brook, Bodney, Gale, Furphy, Ferguson, Brown, Atherton, Baynton, Horn, Goodner, Down, Taylor, Carr, Rosten, Hamelin, Abbot, Cornell, Fowles, Penna, Stevenson, Adams, Bushra, Welsh, Alexander, &c., &c.

Women of the Harem, Dancers, Slaves, &c.:
Misses Bayley, Mullock, England, Caldicott, McGregor, Arup, Bidwell, Dolamore, Sim, Leaman, Robinson, Smythe, Thorpe, Rhoden, &c.

BEFORE THE CURTAIN.

The Man	ERNEST LEEMAN
The Woman	DOROTHY MOULTON
The Story Teller	EWAN BROOKE
The Juggler	E. SELTON
The Dancer	NANCY DENVERS

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

Act I. (Morning)
- Scene 1. A Street before the Mosque of the Carpenters.
- Scene 2. The Suk (Bazaar Street) of the Tailors.
- Scene 3. The Courtyard of a Poor House.

Act II. (Afternoon)
- Scene 1. A Hall in the Wazir Mansur's Mansion.
- Scene 2. The same.
- Scene 3. The Courtyard of a Poor House.
- Scene 4. The Diwan (Audience Hall) of the Caliph's Palace.

Act III. (Evening)
- Scene 1. The Prison of the Palace.
- Scene 2. The Hammam of Mansur's Mansion.

Epilogue. A Street before the Mosque of the Carpenters.

The Scene is laid in the Baghdad of the Arabian Nights.

The Action takes place from Morning till Night.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY OSCAR ASCHE.

Music Specially Composed by CHRISTOPHER WILSON.

Costumes designed by PERCY ANDERSON;
executed by Messrs. B. J. SIMMONS and Miss CHAMPION.
Scenery designed and painted by JOSEPH HARKER.
Dances arranged by LOUIS D'EGVILLE.
The Magic in Act II. arranged by MASKELYNE & DEVANT.
Wigs by CLARKSON.

General Manager .. .. CARL F. LEYEL

Business Manager...MONTAGUE WIGAN | Assistant Stage Managers } .....JOHN FLANAGAN, ...F. SERLE
Stage Manager.....J. FRITZ RUSSELL
Chief Mechanician.....M. J. COVERDALE | Musical Director } CHRISTOPHER WILSON

MATINÉE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Box Office (A. HOLLINGSHEAD) open daily from 10 to 10.
Telephone 9513 Gerrard.
Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under Shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Wightman Mountain & Andrews, Ltd., Printers, 31 & 33 Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

The temptation in dealing with Mr. Knoblauch's highly original play is to treat it as a mere frame for the display of a number of sumptuous stage-pictures; but it deserves more careful consideration. "Kismet" may be classed as comédie rosse. The author's intention appears to have been to depict satirically and somewhat cynically an active and ingenious rascal, triumphing in the end by luck, pluck, and energy of purpose. Perhaps Mr. Knoblauch means to emphasise the calm corruption of Oriental governments, with the corresponding spirit of fatalism which pervades their populations. For, certainly, his hero, Hajj, is a thorough-paced scamp and rascal. His profession of public cadger fits him like a glove, and he alternates hypocritical whinings for charity in the name of Allah with bitter revilings of those who are deaf to his appeals. Hajj nourishes a vendetta. An opposition mendicant, Jawan by name, once ran away with Hajj's beloved wife, and this Jawan, much to the beggar's disgust, turns up rich and prosperous, and, in gratitude for Hajj's prophecy that Mahmud shall recover a long-lost son, throws him a purse of gold. Hajj did not recognise his enemy at first, and when he sees who is the donor he curses him, but keeps the money.

Hajj has a beautiful daughter, Marsinah, who lives in an old house in Baghdad with him and her nurse, Narjis. Now the Caliph Abdallah, a romantic young monarch, wants to find the one woman in the world for him; and discovers her in Marsinah, whom he visits incognito, winning her love. Hajj, who cannot be honest even when in luck, steals some fine clothes from a tailor in the bazaar, and is consequently arrested and cast into prison.

Now, the Wazir—commonly called in English, "Vizier"—Mansur is ambitious, and wants the Caliph put out of the way. So he offers to pardon Hajj and take Marsinah into his harem if the beggar will kill Abdallah. Hajj gets into the palace in the disguise of a Moorish juggler, and stabs the Caliph, who is saved by the shirt of mail which he wears, and Hajj is thrown into a dungeon deep. He finds that his fellow prisoner is Jawan; but he breaks his chains by a desperate effort, kills his old enemy, and gets away in the dead man's clothes. Then comes the turn of Mansur, the wicked Wazir, whom Hajj discovers to be Jawan's son. The irrepressible Hajj obtains admission to Mansur's harem, drowns the unscrupulous official in a large swimming-bath, rescues Marsinah, and hands her over to the Caliph, and then goes off on a pilgrimage to Mecca.

PRINCE of WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON.

To-Night, Thursday, April 20th, 1911, at 8.45,

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S New Production,

"Better not Enquire"

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS. Adapted from the French of ALFRED CAPUS.

By GLADYS UNGER.

Edouard Maubrun	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Gaston Le Hautois	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Monsieur Joulin	Mr. J. H. BARNES
Brévannes	Mr. GERALD AMES
Serquigny	Mr. FRANC STONEY
The Manager at Prunier's	Mr. T. N. WEGUELIN
The Head Waiter	Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
First Waiter	Mr. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Second Waiter	Mr. E. B. PAYNE
Wine Steward	Mr. C. B. VAUGHAN
Leon	Mr. CHARLES L. SEALY
Manservant (to Le Hautois)	Mr. HENRI LAURENT
Estelle	Miss ENID LESLIE (By permission of George Edwardes, Esq.)
Madame Joulin	Miss VANE FEATHERSTON
Madame Grenelle	Miss HILDA MOORE
Louise	Miss MOLLY FARRELL
Laure	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Clémence	Miss JOAN LANGDALE
AND
Mlx Maubrun	Miss MARIE LOHR

ACT I. ... ... Edouard Maubrun's House—The Drawing Room
ACT II. ... ... Prunier's Restaurant. Ten months later
ACT III. ... ... Gaston Le Hautois' House—The Study. The next morning

The Play Produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Ladies' Dresses and Head-dresses by Messrs REVILLE & ROSSITER, 15, Hanover Square.
Scenes Designed by ARTHUR R. DE LISSA and Painted by J. A. FRASER.
Furniture and Scenic Decorations by Messrs. FRYERS, Ltd., 6, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Squar W
Artificial Flowers by Messrs A. & L. UHLMANN, 171 and 173, Farringdon Road, E.C Wigs by CLARKSON

Preceded at 8 by

"A NEAR THING,"

A Play in One Act by CHARLES H. DICKINSON

Tommy Carr ...	(Of the Stock Exchange)	... Mr. GERALD AMES	Nell Cathcart ... ... Miss MONA HARRISON
Otto Lowenstein	(A Company Promoter)	Mr. HUBERT DRUCE	Scene:—Tommy Carr's Flat on the Second Floor in Bond Street
Sergeant Davis ...	(Of the Police)	Mr. CHAS. R. VAUGHAN

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3.

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY NEXT.

The Orchestra, under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music:—

1 March "Uncle Sammy" ... Holzmann
2 (a) Overture ... ... "Die Fledermaus" ... ... Joh. Strauss
(b) Turkish Intermezzo "On the Bosphorus" ... ... Lincke
3 (a) Valse ... ... "Daybreak" ... ... Renaet
(b) Entr'acte ... ... "Printania" ... ... Berger
(c) Intermezzo ... ... "The Love Dance" ... ... Hoschna
4 (a) Valse ... ... "Mystère d'Amour" ... ... Grimston
(b) Intermezzo ... ... "Sizilietta" ... ... von Blon
(c) Two-Step ... ... "The Jungle Jubilee" ... ... Bratton

The Mustel Organ and Celesta by MUSTEL & Co, 80, Wigmore Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by Blüthner, 15, Wigmore Street, W

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... E. W. TARVER

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. 6d. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.
Pit, 3s. 6d. Gallery 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7483.

General Manager ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.
(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.
(3) Where there is a Fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.
(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.
(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Mme. Alix Maubrun is open to make a bet that her husband will tell ten lies in five minutes. And she would have won her bet easily, for her untruthful husband, Edouard Maubrun, is embodied by Mr. Charles Hawtrey, whose fate it has been to play a series of characters all given to the reprehensible practice of lying. The French comedy, from the pen of Mr. Alfred Capus, contained a part which one might have supposed to have been specially written to suit Mr. Hawtrey, and hence its adaptation for the English stage, and its production at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Thursday evening. "Men were deceivers ever," but Edouard Maubrun may be said to have a bad pre-eminence in the art of deception. His wife has found him out a good many times and forgiven him, but there is a limit to a woman's endurance of her husband's philandering with other women. Alix Maubrun reaches that limit, when she discovers that Edouard is "carrying on" with a married lady of her acquaintance, and she informs her parents that she intends leaving her home and divorcing her husband. Her mother, Mme. Joulin, tries to persuade Alix that she is acting foolishly, and tells her that divorce is like an operation—it should never be resorted to until the necessity for it is extreme. She is aware that her own husband is not immaculate, but it has never been her policy to take any active steps to prove that her suspicions were correct. She is convinced of the truth of the old saying, "Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." Alix, however, is determined to have a separation. Edouard has been attracted by other women from the first—he went to their wedding as if he were going to a horse race, and "hedged on the bridesmaids." She wished to be free of such a man. M. Joulin has taken a "paternal interest" in a young woman, the wife of a stationer, who has deserted her for a red-haired girl; Estelle wishes to bring an action for divorce, and M. Joulin introduces her to Maubrun, who is a lawyer by profession. The susceptible Edouard cannot resist the charms of Estelle, whose eyes are always changing colour, and when she informs him that she is seeking employment, he gleefully announces that he will engage her as his typist, although she is wholly ignorant of typewriting. When M. Joulin hears of this arrangement he is furious, and tells his son-in-law that his daughter shall certainly seek a divorce. Alix gives her maid orders to pack up, and quits her own home for that of her parents.

The scene of the second act is Prunier's restaurant. Ten months have elapsed, and both Alix and Estelle have obtained divorces from their respective husbands. Maubrun comes to the fashionable restaurant with Estelle, and dinner is ordered in the public room as the private ones are all engaged. Edouard is obviously ill at ease; his companion has lost her charm for him; and he knows her for what she is—a vulgar, bad-tempered, young woman, whose caprices and bad manners disgust him. Edouard has, in fact, what Estelle elegantly terms "the hump." While the ill-assorted couple are dining, who should enter the room but M. and Mme. Joulin and their daughter, who seat themselves at a table not far from Maubrun and his companion. They are going to the opera, and are a little later joined by Gaston le Hantois, who is to make Alix his wife, though the day is not yet fixed. He has always been her devoted admirer, and is a precise, methodical man, holding office as a member of the Ministry of Finance. He and his promised have a tiff at the supper table, and is highly indignant when Alix asserts that she sees no reason why she should not speak to the man she has divorced. Estelle leaves Edouard on his promising to join her later, and by some clever manœuvring he manages to steal an interview with Alix. He woos her for the second time, telling her how his love for her is as strong as ever, and how much he has missed her since they parted. Alix listens to him at first, and appears to be gradually yielding to his passionate appeal, when he uses an unlucky phrase, which suddenly changes her mood, and she leaves him expressing her determination to marry the man to whom she is engaged.

But Maubrun is not easily put off his purpose of regaining his former wife, and calling upon Le Hantois, appeals to him to break off his engagement with Alix, as he is convinced that their marriage will not be a happy one. Persuasion being of no avail, Maubrun threatens that if Le Hantois does marry Alix he will do all in his power to regain the woman he has lost. Gaston has another visitor, no other than Estelle, who has parted for ever with Maubrun, and has fallen in love with Le Hantois, whom she first met the previous night at the restaurant. She does not hesitate to reveal her feeling towards him, and the staid, unemotional Gaston, admits that the pretty young divorcée has greatly "moved him." Estelle boldly jumps upon Gaston's knees and kisses him, and at this critical moment Alix returns. The result may be guessed. She is disgusted with the man in whom she has placed such entire confidence, and when Edouard reappears she is quite prepared for a reconciliation with a man who has always treated her with kindness, and promises to be faithful to her in the future.

WHITNEY THEATRE.

Sole Proprietor and Manager .... F. C. WHITNEY

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

Mr. F. C. WHITNEY

Will present a Comic Opera in Three Acts, entitled

"BARON TRENCK"

Music by FELIX ALBINI.

Written by A. M. WILLNER and R. BODANZKY.

English Lyrics by FREDERICK SCHRADER.

Musical Director ... ... Signor DE NOVELLIS

MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes, £3 3s. and £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 6s. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 7.30 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees every Saturday. Commence at 8. Matinees at 2.30.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. J. F. TAYLOR) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain:—1. The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3. Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4. Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5. All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

WHITNEY
THEATRE

E

April 22

Orch. Stall

F 7

To be retained

Characters.

Baron Trenck	Mr. WALTER HYDE
Marquis de Bouillaibaise	Mr. HERBERT SPARLING
Wurzburger (a Court Post)	Mr. JOHNNY DANVERS
Nikola	Mr. WALTER PASSMORE
Herr Dinklespieler-Kietzelmeyer (Master of Ceremonies, afterwards Major Domo to the Empress)	Mr. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Alla Wunja (Chief of the Haiduks)	Mr. WM. McLAUGHLIN
A Herald	Mr. NORMAN GREENE
Mariza	Miss MARIE GEORGE
Cornelia	Miss MOLLY LOWELL
Countess Von Gratz	Miss KATHERINE FIELDER
Count Von Gratz	Mr. CHARLES URE
Fortuna	Miss ZOE GORDON
The Countess Lydia	Miss CAROLINE HATCHARD

Pages, Haiduks, Pandours, Courtiers, Peasants, Lackeys, Ladies of the Court, etc.

Act I.	A Farmyard in Slavonia
Act II.	The Empress Marie Theresa's Chateau, near Vienna
Act III.	A Room in Cornelia's Villa in Vienna

PERIOD 1743.

The Entire Scenery, Properties and Costumes, and New Drop Curtain specially designed and made by HUGO BARUCH & Co., London, Berlin and New York.

The Theatre has been entirely redecorated by Messrs. DE JONG & Co.
Dances arranged by Mr. HOLBROOK.

Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by Mr. PHILLIP SHERIDAN.

Floral Decorations by JOHN RUSSELL, Haverstock Hill.

CHAPPELL Grand Pianofortes used exclusively in this Theatre.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

Business Manager	Mr. FRED J. TURNER
Secretary and Treasurer	Mr. LACEY DOWNES
Stage Director	Mr. HOLBROOK
General Agents	MAPLESON & CO., LTD.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, APRIL 24, 1911.

The Waldorf Theatre, which afterwards had its name changed to the Strand Theatre, was on Saturday evening reopened under yet another name, the Whitney Theatre, after its new American manager, Mr. F. C. Whitney, with a musical play or comic opera called "Baron Trenck." How shall this be described? It comes from Vienna; yet that statement rather misdescribes it, for it has but little of the sparkle or passion or romance of the musical plays that have come in recent years from that city, and the libretto is no better than may be found any day anywhere out of London.

The one individual who can be offered congratulation on his share in "Baron Trenck" is Herr Felix Albini, the composer. Much of his music is tuneful. Much of it is ambitious, too; but that part is not his best, for he seems then to be echoing someone, and so the score there loses its individuality and becomes monotonous. In the lighter moments Herr Albini's music is often very charming. He can write a waltz tune.

"Baron Trenck" is described on the programme as a comic opera in three acts, book by Herr A. M. Willner and Herr Bodanzky. The scene of the play is Slavonia 150 years ago, and the setting and the goings and comings of the characters constituted the old, old theatrical game of the powder and wig period. Mr. Walter Hyde sang the music of the title rôle with distinction, but the part to act was an ungrateful one. A bully, a robber, and a roué is not an attractive description of a hero, and here we have this gallant ordered by his Empress to marry in three weeks or be banished. Trenck despairing of getting the woman he wants puts himself up to be raffled for, and, of course, is won by the woman he had unsuccessfully wooed. So the story ends.

Three acts of situations designed for the introduction of musical numbers are apt to pall if there is no incident of interest, no pretty romantic scenes, no charm of byplay. All these things were conspicuous by their absence, and the humour of the feeblest imaginable sort appeared more likely to irritate than amuse. Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. Walter Passmore, and Mr. Johnny Danvers were there to be funny, but the opportunities were not given them. Mr. Danvers and Miss Molly Lowell had, it is true, a duet in the last act that caught the fancy of the house at once. Whether or not it came from Vienna was not stated, but if it did so no one would be surprised to hear that it had some relatives among the coons in America. Other features successful on Saturday were the dancing of Miss Marie George and the concerted singing of Mr. Hyde and Miss Caroline Hatchard.

J.W.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 26th, 1911, at 8.30,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

THE MASTER OF MRS. CHILVERS

A Comedy in Four Acts, by

JEROME K. JEROME.

Lady Mogton	(President Women's Parliamentary Franchise League)	MARY RORKE
Annys Chilvers ..	(Née Mogton, Hon. Sec. W.P.F.L.) ..	LENA ASHWELL
Phœbe Mogton ..	(Org. Sec. W.P.F.L.) ..	ETHEL DANE
Janet Blake ..	(Joint Org. Sec. W.P.F.L.) ..	GILLIAN SCAIFE
Mrs. Mountcalm Villiers	(Vice-President W.P.F.L.) ..	SARAH BROOKE
Elizabeth Spender ..	(Hon. Treasurer W.P.F.L.) ..	AURIOL LEE
Rose Merton ..	(Known as "Ginger") ..	ESME BERINGER
Mrs. Chinn ..	.. .. ..	SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
Geoffrey Chilvers, M.P.	President Men's League for Extension of Franchise to Women ..	DENNIS EADIE
Dorien St. Herbert ..	(Hon. Sec. to M.L.E.F.W.)	LEON QUARTERMAINE
Ben Lamb, M.P. ..	.. (A Labour Member) ..	.. A. E. BENEDICT
William Gordon ..	(A Billposter known as "Jawbones")	.. EDMUND GWENN
Sigsby	(An Election Agent) ..	MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Hake	.. (A Butler) ..	.. H. B. TABBERER
	(A Deputation consisting of)
Mr. Peekin	.. .. ..	GERALD MIRRIELEES
Mr. Hopper	.. .. ..	.. STANLEY LOGAN
Mrs. Peekin	.. .. ..	.. ROWENA JEROME
Miss Borlasse	.. .. ..	CATHLEEN NESBITT
Miss Ricketts	.. .. ..	.. HETTA BARTLETT

Act I. ...	... ...	At 81 Russell Square, April 10th, 3 p.m.
Act II. ...	Liberal Committee Room, East India Dock Road, April 22nd, 5 p.m.
Act III. ...	... ...	Town Hall, East Poplar, April 26th, 10 p.m.
Act IV. ...	... ...	At 81 Russell Square, April 26th, Midnight.

The Play produced by FRANK VERNON.

There will be intervals of 10 minutes between Acts I. and II., 10 minutes between Acts II. and III., and 8 minutes between Acts III. and IV.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress.

This rule is framed for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

Dresses by LUCILE, Ltd., Hanover Square; Madame HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, New Bond Street; Madame ALEXANDRA, Baker Street; and REDFERN, Ltd., Conduit Street.

Hats by ZYROT and REDFERN. Furniture by DRUCE & Co., Baker Street.

Pictures by W. M. POWER, Victoria Galleries, Westminster.

The Posters in Act II. designed by NORMAN MORROW.

The Bronzes supplied by ELKINGTON & Co., Ltd., 22 Regent Street, Goldsmiths, Silversmiths and Bronzists to H.M. King George V.

The Pianofortes used at this Theatre supplied by ROGERS & SON.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 3.

Doors open half-an-hour before time of Performance.

The Box Office (J. W. Sheppard) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 3855 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 1s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 3s. & 2s. Pit, 2s. 6d.

EXTRACTS FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every Performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager	.. GERALD MIRRIELEES
Business Manager	.. STANLEY LE SAGE

Mr. Jerome K. Jerome has written, and Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie have produced at the Royalty, a very curious and very original play. As far as one can see, the author's sermon amounts to this, that, while there is a great deal to be said in favour of "votes for women," it would never do for them to put up for Parliament, and thereby become political opponents of their cousins, brothers—and husbands. Just as the authors of "Divorçons" and "Les Surprises du Divorce" invented an imaginary enactment and founded plays on their suppositions, Mr. Jerome asks us to believe that, by a secret vote of the House of Lords, women have been made legally eligible as Parliamentary candidates. The announcement is made at a meeting of the Women's Parliamentary Franchise League, which is held at the house of Geoffrey Chilvers, M.P., and his wife, Annys Chilvers, the honorary secretary of the League. When the news of the alteration in the law of elections is told, the meeting unanimously selects Annys Chilvers as the woman's candidate.

In an ordinary play, the husband would be a practical, common-sense opponent of female suffrage, but in this curious comedy of Mr. Jerome's Chilvers is a sympathiser with the movement. Thus, when it is arranged that his wife shall oppose his candidature in an East London constituency, the hitherto happy pair soon find themselves in a very puzzling position.

Their troubles begin in the Liberal Committee room at East Poplar, which is the scene of the second act. A good deal of the business in this scene is what used to be called "comic relief"; but the kernel of the situation is very serious. There is a funny dialogue between a somewhat brutal billposter named Gordon and a silly workgirl called Rose Merton, in which the inherited instincts of the natural man and woman are illustrated. There are troubles in connection with comic posters—the workgirls tear down one of them because it shows a suffragette in a skirt which is at least three years out of date; and there is a demure and disbelieving charwoman or housekeeper, suppressed and sarcastic, but extremely amusing. All this, however, is mere trifling compared with the startlingly serious issue which is raised by a deputation which waits on Chilvers to put his loyalty to the woman's cause to the test. The proposal which they make is no less than that all illegitimate children shall be maintained out of the rates, thus placing the penalty of seduction on the male, instead of on the female, shoulders. Chilvers cannot go as far as this. He sees all the practical objections to such an arrangement, and he refuses to make it part of his programme, while his wife readily accepts it as a portion of hers.

Thus the pair begin to be divided, and the crux of the situation is reached when it seems likely that Mrs. Chilvers will come out at the head of the poll. Annys is strongly inclined to accede to her husband's appeal to her to return home and "be a wife to him, and not a political opponent," but she is prevented by the interference of Mrs. Villiers, who asks her if, because she has a good home and a kind husband, she is going to throw over the cause of her less fortunate sisters. Mrs. Chilvers is elected by a majority of fourteen, and addresses the voters from a balcony while her husband leaves for home.

The audience by this time is wondering how the author will bring about his dénouement. He does so in a very ingenious way, which has been shadowed forth in the progress of the piece. Mr. and Mrs. Chilvers are childless, so that Chilvers's practical objection that it is absurd to create a legislator who may be at any time incapacitated for work for at least six months does not, in Annys's case, exist. In the last act she realises that she is enceinte, and this alters all her plans and, to a certain extent, modifies her feelings. She talks of the burden of motherhood, and prepares to become domestic.

LESSEE AND MANAGER.
ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

Shaftesbury Theatre

TO-NIGHT at 8 o'clock

"The Arcadians"

A Fantastic Musical Play, in Three Acts

By MARK AMBIENT and A. M. THOMPSON
Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS
Music by LIONEL MONCKTON and HOWARD TALBOT

James Smith (of Smith & Co., Caterers, London) / Simplicitas (an Arcadian)	Mr. DAN ROLYAT
Peter Doody (a Jockey)	Mr. ALFRED LESTER
Jack Meadows	Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
Bobby	Mr. NELSON KEYS
Sir George Paddock	Mr. AKERMAN MAY
Percy Marsh	Mr. HARRY ED. RAY
Reggie	Mr. FRANK HAYLETT
Sir Timothy Ryan	Mr. H. V. TOLLEMACHE
Harry Desmond	Mr. F. W. HEARNE
Time	Mr. GEORGE ELTON
Mrs. Smith	Miss ADA BLANCHE
Lady Barclay	Miss MURIEL VARNA
The Hon. Maud Barclay	Miss MARGARET SWALLOW
Lucy Selwyn	Miss MURIEL HASTINGS
Marion	Miss HETTY KELLY
Beatrice	Miss DAISY ATHELSTAN
Amaryllis	Miss M. SINCLAIR
Daphne	Miss LILLIE NANTON
Psyche	Miss R. GOULD
Dryope	Miss VIOLET MORENE
Eileen Cavanagh	AND Miss CICELY COURTNEIDGE
ARCADIANS
Chrysea	Miss MAUDIE THORNTON
Astrophel	Mr. CHARLES CHAMIER
Strephon	Mr. VERE MATTHEWS
Damœtas	Mr. LEWIS OLIVER
Sombra	AND Miss FLORENCE SMITHSON

The Music of "The Arcadians" is published by Messrs. CHAPPELL & Co. Ltd., 50, New Bond Street, London, W.

SHAFTESBURY
THEATRE

28/4/1911

Orch. Stall

D 7
TO RIGHT

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1911.

"THE ARCADIANS."

The Shaftesbury Theatre was en fête last evening, when "The Arcadians" celebrated the completion of its two years' run and its entry into a third year of popularity.

The charm and daintiness that were the distinguishing qualities of this delightful musical play on its first performance two years ago have not been lost through success, and last night it was all as fresh and as welcome as ever. The two composers—Mr. Lionel Monckton and Mr. Howard Talbot—have improved their part of the work still more by putting new tuneful music to the new lyrics of Mr. Arthur Wimperis, and, in addition to remounting the play very beautifully last night, Mr. Robert Courtneidge gave his patrons the best souvenir book seen in London for several years.

Russell.

SATURDAY, APRIL 29th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'

NEW PRODUCTION

PLAYING WITH FIRE

A Play in Three Acts:

Adapted from FRANZ MOLNAR'S "Der Leibgardist."

Henry Longton ..	(an Actor) ..	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
William Sprackley ..	(an Author) ..	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Mr. Jackson ..	(an Autograph Hunter)	Mr. FRANK DENTON
Harris ..	(an Opera House Attendant)	Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
"Ma" ..	(a Duenna) ..	Mrs. CHARLES CALVERT
Mary ..	(a Parlourmaid)	Miss HEMINGWAY
Gertrude Longton ..	(an Actress) ..	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE

Act I. .. .. At the Longton's Flat in London
Act II. .. .. At Covent Garden Opera House
Act III. .. .. At the Longton's Flat in London

The Play produced by ROBERT LORAINE.

Programme of Music.

(Under the Direction of Mr. PERCY E. FLETCHER.)

1. OVERTURE ... ... "Die Fledermaus" ... ... Joh. Strauss
2. VALSE... ... ... "The Girl in the Train" ... ... Leo Fall
   MORCEAU ... ... "The March of the Mannikins" ... ... Fletcher
   SELECTION ... ... "The Quaker Girl" ... ... Monckton
   EGYPTIAN SERENADE ... ... "Amina" ... ... Lincke

Miss Carlisle's dresses by PAQUIN.
Other Ladies' dresses by Madame NEVILLE.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - - - Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE
Assistant Stage Manager - - - - - - - - - Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager - - Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

Extract from the Rules made by the L
Theatre must be printed on every playb all exit and entrance doors, which m opening it must be lowered at least or 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Aud chairs or any other obstructions, wheth

name of the actual and responsible Manager of the ve the Theatre at the end of the performance by here there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium nce, to ensure its being in proper working order.
passages and staircases must be kept free from

COMEDY 29
THEATRE
Sole Lessee
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh

29/4/1911

STALL

E19

To be retained

DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, BECKET, &c.

Mr. George Edwardes, like Alexander with his worlds, is always sighing for more theatres to conquer; and, by arrangement with Mr. Arthur Chudleigh, he produced at the Comedy Theatre on Saturday an adaptation of Franz Molnar's comedy, "Der Leibgardist," which must have presented serious difficulties to the anonymous adapter who undertook to render it suitable for the English market. The result is not unassailable by criticism. The mere difference of the two leading characters being married in the English piece, and not in the German one, makes situations which were cynically comical in the original almost pathetic in the English version. Gertrude Longton, an actress and the wife of an actor, is shown to us at the commencement as a distinctly good little woman. She is, indeed, so much in love with her husband, Henry Longton, that she pardons the rudeness and irritability which, though she does not know it, are caused by his uneasiness about her fidelity. In order to test her, he resorts to an expedient which has been before employed on the stage—that of making love to her in disguise. He approaches her in the shape of a fictitious Russian Prince, with a famous reputation for prowess on the field of battle, a noble and chivalrous manner, and a magnificent uniform. Commencing with admiration of her artistic triumphs, he goes on to make love to her in earnest. Gertrude repels him with the coolest and most common-sensible propriety; and Henry is elated at the discovery that his wife is proof against temptation in its most attractive form. Then his confidential friend, William Sprackley, a dramatic author, accidentally leads Gertrude to believe that she is not the only lady in whom the Prince is interested; and what pleading could not do is effected by pique. She loses her head, becomes excited and emotional, lets herself go, faints on a couch—this scene takes place in the retiring room of the Royal box at the Opera—allows the Prince to embrace her, indulges in a little maudlin repentance, and tells him to call on her at five o'clock on the morrow. The husband falls on his knees, and leans down, overcome by the realisation of his worst fears.

After this, Gertrude abandons all self-respect, and lies with an ease and plausibility which quite alter the opinion which we had previously formed of her character. She first of all denies her flirtation flatly, and almost convinces Henry that he is dreaming; then she pretends that she knew all the time that the "Prince" was her husband, and that she was merely retaliating upon him for attempting to impose upon her by a trick. And so the comedy comes to an end, the personages resuming the status quo ante with a cynical note of interrogation in the strains of Chopin which Gertrude dreamily evokes from her piano. The piece is rather a smart comedy of action than a psychological study which will bear analysis; and it owes its success to the theatrical effectiveness of its slight story, backed up by acting of the very best quality.

MISS NEILSON-TERRY AT THE NEW.

On Thursday afternoon, May 11, Shakespeare's Comedy "AS YOU LIKE IT."

FOR NINE SPECIAL MATINEES ONLY

Thursday, May 11th, and Friday, May 12th, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, May 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 22nd, 23rd and 24th, at 2.30. SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY

AS YOU LIKE IT

Duke (living in banishment)	Mr. J. CARTER-EDWARDS
Frederick (his brother and usurper of his dominions)	Mr. PHILLIP MERIVALE
Amiens (with Songs)	Mr. MAURICE ELVEY
Jaques	Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Le Beau (a Courtier)	Mr. R. EASTEN PICKERING
Charles (a Wrestler)	Mr. FREDERICK GROVES
Oliver, Jaques, Orlando (Sons of Sir Rowland de Bois)	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY, Mr. JOHN BEAMISH, Mr. VERNON STEEL
Adam, Dennis (Servants to Oliver)	Mr. HORACE HODGES, Mr. NIGEL BARRIE
Touchstone (a Clown)	Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
1st Lord	Mr. PHILLIP MERIVALE
2nd Lord	Mr. LESLIE GORDON
Sir Oliver Mar-text	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
Corin, Silvius (Shepherds)	Mr. H. HUMBERSTONE WRIGHT, Mr. DERRICK DENNIS
William (a Country Fellow in love with Audrey)	Mr. GOODWIN NOCK
Celia (Daughter to Frederick)	Miss MIRIAM LEWES
Phoebe (a Shepherdess)	Miss OLIVE NOBLE
Audrey (a Country Wench)	Miss MARIE WRIGHT
Rosalind (Daughter to the banished Duke)	Miss NEILSON-TERRY

Lords, Pages, Foresters and Attendants.

THE AUDIENCE IS REQUESTED TO REMAIN SEATED after the FINAL CURTAIN as the EPILOGUE will be SPOKEN.

Synopsis of Scenery.

Act I. Scene 1. Orchard before Oliver's House ... R. C. McCleery
Scene 2. Lawn before the Duke's Palace ... F. L. Schmitz
Scene 3. Orchard before Oliver's House
Scene 4. Lawn before the Duke's Palace
Act II. Scene 1. The Forest of Arden ... W. Raphael
Scene 2. Another part of the Forest ... R. C. McCleery
Scene 3. The Forest of Arden
Act III. The Forest of Arden
Act IV. Scene 1. Before Rosalind's Cottage ... R. C. McCleery
Scene 2. The Forest of Arden
Act V. Scene 1. The Forest of Arden
Scene 2. Before Rosalind's Cottage
Scene 3. The Forest of Arden

There will be an interval of 10 minutes after Act I and 5 minutes after Acts II., III and IV.

The Comedy produced under the personal Stage direction of Mr. FRED TERRY.

The Wrestling in Act I. arranged by Mr. FREDERICK GROVES.

Special Incidental Music composed by Mr. Sydney Ffoulkes. The Dance arranged by Mr. John D'Auban.
Wigs by Clarkson. Costumes by L. & H. Nathan, Coventry Street, W., and Mrs. Nettleship, Wigmore Street, W.

"Under the Greenwood Tree" Song is published by J. Williams & Co., 72, Gt. Portland Street, W., and can also be obtained from the attendants. Price 1/6

Programme of Music.

Overture	"As You Like it"	Manuel Fitton
AFTER ACT I.	(a) Valse	Luigini
	(b) Mazurka	Luigini
	(c) Praeludium	Jarnefelt
AFTER ACT II.	Badinage	N. Herbert
AFTER ACT III.	Invitation à la Valse	Weber
AFTER ACT IV.	Cinderella	H. Haines

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. and £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s.
Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open Daily from 10 to 10. Telephone No. 2473 Gerrard.

Stage Manager .. MR. JOHN R. TURNBULL
Assistant Stage Manager .. MR. GOODWIN NOCK
Advertisement Manager .. MR. ALFRED W. POPE
General Manager .. Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT

MISS NEILSON-TERRY'S ROSALIND.

To the Editor of THE SUNDAY TIMES.

Sir,—Any lover of real art will applaud and appreciate Mr. Grein's criticism of Miss Neilson-Terry's Rosalind. It is almost criminal that so much talent should be sacrificed and a charming personality ruined by the fulsome praise meted out to Miss Neilson-Terry by some critics, who, I can only think, wish to please the powers that be or else know very little of what they are talking.

In all that Mr. Grein says in criticising Miss Neilson-Terry's Rosalind there is nothing so true as that it is all "immature." It is only the very rare exception that any artist gets to the front rank of his or her profession except by hard work and study.

ONE OF THE PUBLIC.

Stock Exchange, E.C.

KINGSWAY THEATRE.

GREAT QUEEN STREET.

Proprietress - - - - - - - Miss LENA ASHWELL.

Saturday, 13th May, 1911 and Every Evening at 8.30.

Matinees :—
Wednesday, 17th May and Saturday, 20th May, at 2.30.

I.

MRS. PLEASANCE.

A Play, in One Act.
BY FREDERICK DEFFELL.

MRS. PLEASANCE ... ... JEAN BLOOMFIELD
MRS ATKINS ... ... FRANCES WELSTEAD
JIM AMIES ... ... FRANKLIN DYALL
HOWLETT ... ... FREDERICK LLOYD
MR. DARRELL ... ... E. CRESFAN

SCENE—A GYP-ROOM IN A CAMBRIDGE COLLEGE.

II.

ROSAMOND.

A Drama, in One Act.
BY JOHN POLLOCK.

ALBOIN (KING OF THE LOMBARDS) ... ... NORMAN TREVOR GELMER (HIS SHIELDBEARER ... ... LEWIS WILLOUGHBY
EDITH (THE QUEEN'S MAID) ... ... JEAN BLOOMFIELD
ROSAMOND (QUEEN OF THE LOMBARDS) ... LYDIA YAVORSKA
(PRINCESS BARIATINSKY)

SCENE—NEAR VERONA. IN THE PALACE OF ALBOIN.

III.

THE BEAR.

A Farce, in One Act.
BY ANTON TCHEKHOFF.
Translated from the Russian by Arthur A. Sykes.

HE ... ... NORMAN TREVOR
SHE ... ... BLANCHE GRAND
SERVANT ... ... E. CRESFAN

SCENE A SITTING ROOM IN A RUSSIAN COUNTRY HOUSE.

In Preparation - HEDDA GABLER.

Ladies are respectfully requested to add to the comfort of the audience by kindly removing their hats.

Opera glasses may be obtained on hire from the Attendants.

A special feature is made of Afternoon Tea in the Foyer at the Matinees during and after the performance.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - Val Cuthbert
Assisted by - - - - - - - - E. Cresfan

Manager - - - - - - - - Frederick Whelen

THE BOX — 10 TO 10.

"MRS. PLEASANCE."

Mrs. Pleasance .....Miss Jean Bloomfield
Mrs. Atkins .....Miss Frances Welstead
Jim Amies .....Mr. Franklin Dyall
Howlett .....Mr. Frederick Lloyd
Mr. Darrell .....Mr. E. Cresfan

The old story of the wife who imagines herself a widow and receives a visit from her worthless husband just as she is about to wed again is here revived. In the present case the victim is a "bed-maker in a Cambridge College," who, thinking her husband dead, has just promised her hand in marriage to a fellow-servant who is devoted to her and her little girl. Then apparently from the grave comes her brutal husband, who, seeing the situation, gives his wife the choice of resuming housekeeping with him or of parting with her child. The descent of the curtain leaves the audience considerably in doubt as to which course she intends to adopt.

The conclusion thus arrived at was long delayed, and interest in the play was consequently weakened. Some excellent acting was nevertheless displayed by Miss Jean Bloomfield, who represented the despair of the young wife effectively. Mr. Frederick Lloyd gave an artistically coloured sketch of the scamp Howlett; Mr. Franklin Dyall was droll as the effusive Jim Amies, whose love-making receives such a rude check; and Miss Frances Welstead supplied a neat bit of low comedy as a greedy charwoman.

The remaining novelty was a farce, in one act, translated from the Russian of Anton Tchekhoff by Arthur A. Sykes, entitled

"THE BEAR."

He .....Mr. Norman Trevor
She .....Miss Blanche Grand
Servant .....Mr. E. Cresfan

A certain freshness of theme is apparent in the above farce, but the humour is rather feeble. A young widow has immured herself in her house determined to show how a wife can remain true to her husband's memory, despite his many lapses from virtue. Her privacy is disturbed by the forcible entry of a Russian nobleman, who claims a debt due from her late husband. The lady protests that she cannot pay till the following day, but the "bear," as she describes him, grows abusive, and eventually she proposes to fight a duel with pistols. The "bear" is so impressed with the lady's courage that he falls in love with her, and the fire of love is substituted for that of the pistol.

Theatre Royal Drury Lane

MANAGER . ARTHUR COLLINS

MONEY

By EDWARD BULWER, LORD LYTTON

BY GRACIOUS COMMAND OF

HIS MAJESTY THE KING

IN HONOUR OF THE VISIT OF

THEIR IMPERIAL MAJESTIES

THE GERMAN EMPEROR

AND

THE GERMAN EMPRESS

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF

ARTHUR COLLINS

On Wednesday, May 17th, 1911, His Majesty's Servants will perform

MONEY

A COMEDY IN FIVE ACTS :: BY EDWARD BULWER, LORD LYTTON

"It's a very good world to live in,
To lend, or to spend, or to give in,
But to beg, or to borrow, or get a man's own,
It's the very worst world that ever was known."

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY SIR SQUIRE BANCROFT

CAST

Lord Glossmore	Mr. FRED TERRY
Sir John Vesey	Sir JOHN HARE
Sir Frederick Blount	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
Captain Dudley Smooth	Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM
Mr. Graves	Sir HERBERT TREE
Mr. Stout	Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Alfred Evelyn	Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER
Mr. Sharp	Mr. LAURENCE IRVING
An Old Member of the Club	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
Butler to Sir John Vesey	Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Toke	Mr. EDMUND MAURICE
Mr. Flat	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Mr. Green	Mr. SYDNEY VALENTINE
Frantz	Mr. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Tabouret	Mr. J. H. BARNES
Grab	Mr. JAMES FERNANDEZ
MacFinch	Mr. CHARLES ROCK
MacStucco	Mr. NORMAN FORBES
Crimson	Mr. DION BOUCICAULT
Patent	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Kite	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Head Waiter at the Club	Mr. EDWARD TERRY
Lady Franklin	Miss WINIFRED EMERY
Georgina Vesey	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
Clara Douglas	Miss IRENE VANBRUGH
Footmen to Sir John Vesey	Mr. LYN HARDING Mr. FREDERICK ROSS
Footmen to Alfred Evelyn	Mr. OSCAR ADYE Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Servants at the Club	Mr. MURRAY CARSON Mr. VINCENT CLIVE Mr. FRANK COLLINS

CAST—continued

Members of the Club: Messrs.

Henry Ainley	George Graves	Harry Paulton
Marsh Allen	Luigi Lablache	Fred Penley
Allan Aynesworth	Robert Loraine	Arthur Poole
George Barrett	C. M. Lowne	Howard Russell
William Devereux	Norman McKinnel	C. Aubrey Smith
Kenneth Douglas	Austin Melford	C. W. Somerset
H. de Lange	Dawson Milward	Sam Sothern
Gerald du Maurier	Harry Nicholls	E. Lyall Swete
H. V. Esmond	Robert Pateman	Herbert Waring

⁂

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I.

Scene A Drawing Room at Sir John Vesey's [R. McCleery

ACT II.

Scene 1. A Room at Evelyn's [Joseph Harker

Scene 2. A Drawing Room at Sir John Vesey's [R. McCleery

ACT III.

Scene 1. Morning Room at Sir John Vesey's [Bruce Smith

Scene 2. The Interior of a Club [Joseph Harker

ACT IV.

Scene At Alfred Evelyn's [Bruce Smith

ACT V.

Scene 1. At Sir John Vesey's [Bruce Smith

Scene 2. At Alfred Evelyn's [Bruce Smith

Period 1740

⁂

The new Act Drop specially designed by Mr. SEYMOUR LUCAS, R.A.

The Costumes and accessories designed by Mr. DION CLAYTON CALTHROP

Programme of Music

Under the Direction of Mr. JAMES M. GLOVER

The National Anthem

Piece	"Song of Aegir"	H.I.M. The German Emperor
Selection	"Songs of Britain"	Arr. by J. M. Glover
Valse	"The Chocolate Soldier"	Straus
Selection	"The Quaker Girl"	Lionel Monckton
Two Pieces	a "In the Shadows"	Herman Finck
	b "Nero"	S. Coleridge-Taylor
Overture	"Di Ballo"	Sir A. Sullivan

⁂

Assistant Stage Managers	Ernest D'Auban and E. Vivian Reynolds
Secretary	R. H. Linde	Acting Manager	C. F. Taylor
Treasurer	C. H. Thomas	Box Office Clerk	L. W. Warmsley
BUSINESS MANAGER			SIDNEY SMITH

⁂

The new Act Drop painted by R. McCleery

Costumes executed by B. J. Simmons & Co., King Street, Covent Garden

Machinists, J. Parker and R. Williams — Electrician, H. Mather

Properties by J. Jones — Wardrobe Mistress, Mrs. Hannam

Wigs by W. Clarkson

The Theatre Decorated on this occasion by Maple & Co.

⁂

GOD SAVE THE KING

THE REWARD.

The following letters were sent by the King's command to Sir Squire Bancroft and Mr. Arthur Collins :—

Privy Purse Office,
Buckingham Palace, May 18, 1911.

Dear Sir Squire Bancroft,—The King commanded me this morning to lose no time in conveying to you his Majesty's warmest thanks for all the kindly interest you have given, and the close attention you have paid, to the production of Lord Lytton's play of "Money" last night at Drury Lane Theatre.

Nothing, in the King's opinion, as well as in that of the German Emperor and Empress and of the Queen, could have surpassed the all-round excellence of the performance.

The King will be obliged by your expressing to the ladies and gentlemen who formed the incomparable cast and played their parts to such perfection, the assurance of their Majesties' unqualified appreciation of the brilliancy of their artistic talents.

His Majesty is sure that you must feel rewarded for all the trouble you have taken by the unqualified success of the play, a success which his Majesty feels that even you, with all your long experience, can never have seen excelled. The German Emperor and Empress, as well as the Queen, were filled with admiration.

His Majesty knows well how he is indebted to you and your colleagues of last night for the charm of the representation, and again thanks you all most sincerely.—Yours very truly,

(Signed) WILLIAM CARINGTON.

Sir Squire Bancroft.

Privy Purse Office,
Buckingham Palace, May 18, 1911.

Dear Mr. Collins,—I have received the King's commands to assure you on his behalf and on behalf of the German Emperor, of the German Empress, and of the Queen, that their Majesties sincerely congratulate you upon last night's triumph at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane.

His Majesty asks you kindly to convey his own and their Majesties' warm thanks to Mr. Ernest d'Auban, your stage-manager, and his assistants, to your secretary, Mr. R. H. Lindo, and those who are with him, to Mr. James Glover and his fine orchestra, to Mr. R. McCleery, your scenic artist, and his colleagues, and to one and all of your other employés for the invaluable assistance they so admirably and readily rendered.

Their Majesties were much struck with the beauty of the decorations of the theatre, which formed a splendid setting worthy of the scene. Perhaps you will be so good as to inform Messrs. Maple and Co. to this effect.

A hearty and loyal combination of art, of skill, of experience, and of energy brought about this memorable representation of Lord Lytton's comedy of "Money," a performance which, in the opinion of the King, will ever stand high and bright in the long and honourable annals of the British stage,

I remain, dear Mr. Collins, yours very truly,
(Signed) WILLIAM CARINGTON.

Arthur Collins, Esq., Theatre Royal,
Drury-lane, W.C.

At the close of the second act the King sent a message to the company that he would be glad to know whether, if they were invited to the ceremony of the Coronation, they would be free to attend. The receipts of the performance realised £10,027. After the expenses have been paid the surplus will be given to a charity to be chosen by the King.

The Command performance of Money at Drury Lane last night, dealt with fully in another column, was responsible for record waiting among those enthusiasts who lined up in queues for the unreserved parts. The first arrivals were on Tuesday morning, and consisted of two—a boy scout and a young woman of fifteen or sixteen, who later were joined by an old lady, who, report has it, boasts of seventy-one years of age. These three were soon supplemented, and throughout Tuesday the line of waiters steadily increased. But the honours, whatever they are worth, of the longest wait belong to the three already mentioned, who, if they survived, must have given nearly thirty hours of their time to the contemplation of the outside of the theatre before they were admitted and the curtain went up on the performance. Waiting in such circumstances had its drawbacks, not the least of which during certain hours of Wednesday was the ridicule of market porters and of the overflow generally from the adjacent Covent Garden market, where the sale of vegetables seems to foster open expression of opinion in forcible language. Crowds collected, too, to gaze more in curiosity than in sympathy on these heroically patient beings, and police requisitioned to keep order enjoined the sightseers to "have a look and pass on."

Also I learned that Mr. Arthur Collins had, with kindly thought, offered to present to all the "Command" actors the costumes they wore on Wednesday night as souvenirs of that memorable occasion. I gather that the "returns" on that evening totalled £10,027, and that the expenses for the decorations, dresses, &c., will absorb some £8,000.

Criterion
THEATRE

E
May 18

Orch. Stall
C 52

Thursday, May 18, 1911, and every Evening at 9,
F. C. WHITNEY presents

ARMS AND THE MAN.

An Anti-Romantic Comedy in a Prologue and Two Acts,
By BERNARD SHAW

"Arma Virumque Cano." Virgil.
"Arms and the Man I sing."—Dryden.

Raina	MARGARET HALSTAN
Catherine Petkoff	GERALDINE OLLIFFE
Louka	JEAN STERLING MACKINLAY
Captain Bluntschli	ARNOLD DALY
A Russian Officer	JOHN PYM
Nicola	JAMES HEARN
Major Paul Petkoff	J. FISHER WHITE
Major Sergius Saranoff	DAWSON MILWARD

Prologue .. A lady's bedchamber in Bulgaria, in a small town near the Dragoman Pass. November, 1885
Act 1 .. .. The Garden of Major Petkoff's house. March, 1886
Act 2 .. .. Major Petkoff's library. After lunch

Preceded at 8.15 by a Play in One Act, entitled:

"JEMMY"

By LOUIS N. PARKER.

Bates .. .. LEON M. LION	Jane Emily .. .. VALERIE WYNGATE
Mrs. Bates .. .. HARRIET TRENCH	Jack Fenimore .. .. .. JOHN PYM

Scene .. .. .. A Cottage six miles from Brighton.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d to £6 6s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Telephone No. 3844 Gerrard. Box Office (Mr. A. R. Britten) open from 10 till 10. Doors open at 8. Commence at 8.15.

Programme of Music.

Prelude	...Edouard Schütt
Interlude Fantasia ... ... "La Bohème"	... Puccini
Entr'acte I. ... ... Two Slavonic Dances	... Dvorak
Entr'acte II. (a) Humoreske	Tchaikowsky
(b) Homestead Song from "The Girl of the Golden West"	Puccini
(c) Waltz from "La Belle au bois dormant"	Tchaikowsky

Musical Director ... ... ALICK MACLEAN

Uniforms and Costumes by Messrs. L. & H. Nathan. The Fur Coat worn by Miss Halstan by Messrs. John Lewis & Co.

General Manager, Stage Manager ... ... (For F. C. Whitney) ... FRED J. TURNER, GEORGE F. STEPHENSON
Business Manager ...(For Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore) ... J. W. LETHBRIDGE

Mr. Bernard Shaw's comedy was preceded hy a new play, in one act, by Lonis N. Parker, entitled "JEMMY."

Bates .....Leon M. Lion
Mrs. Bates .....Harriet Trench
Jane Emily .....Valerie Wyngate
Jack Fenimore .....John Pym

Mr. and Mrs. Bates reside in a charming cottage six miles from Brighton. The old man, a labourer, is called by his wife to the humble though substantial midday meal, but takes objection to a dinner of Irish stew in the month of August. They are a lonely couple. Their daughter, Jane Emily—her father calls her "Jemmy," because "she wasn't a boy"—has left the old home for a situation in the West End of London, and is, according to her own account, doing well. After the meal is over, Mrs. Bates takes from her pocket a letter from "Jemmy" stating that she is holiday-making at Brighton, and intends paying the old folks a visit. Her father is a little puzzled hy the notepaper, one corner of which has been torn off, having a telephone number and the word "Met." upon it. The sound of a motor-car is heard without, and the vehicle stops outside the cottage. Jane Emily has arrived. She greets her parents with affectionate warmth, and rather astonishes them by her smart appearance. She must indeed he doing well in London to afford such a fine dress. Then the girl produces a hox containing a piece of silk, which is a present for her mother, who is to have a dress made of it. But this is not all, for Jane Emily hands over to her astonished father, as the result of her savings, £20 in notes and gold, and also makes him a present of a box of cigars. Questioned by her mother, "Jemmy" has very little to say about the fashionable shop in Bond-street where she is engaged, and, curiously enough, she has forgotten her employer's name. The mother grows suspicions, and then, noticing the diamond ring and the jewel-studded watch the girl is wearing, she denounces her as a liar and refuses to take any of her presents. "Jemmy" tells the sordid story of what happened to her in London, where she was basely deceived in regard to the situation she went to. It is true that she has a lover, Jack Fenimore by name, and she is staying with him at the Metropole, Brighton. At this point the man himself, who has been waiting outside and heard a good deal of what has passed, comes forward and declares his intention of making the girl his wife, admitting that she has saved him from utter ruin.

EMPIRE

138

Row E

No. 10

STALLS, 7/6

Thursday, May 18
1911

This portion does not admit to the Theatre

LEO DELIBES'

CELEBRATED ROMANTIC BALLET

7 "SYLVIA."

RE-ARRANGED IN ONE TABLEAU By C. WILHELM.

Produced by FRED FARREN.

The Music arranged and supplemented by CUTHBERT CLARKE.

The entire Production designed and supervised by C. WILHELM.

The Scene painted by R. C. McCLEERY.

The Costumes executed by Miss HASTINGS and MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.

Properties by P. GREAVESON. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Electrician, C. WINTER. Machinist, W. SHELDON.

CHARACTERS.

PAN the God of Frimitive Nature ..... Mr. FRED FARREN
ARTEMIS Goddess of the Chase ..... Miss F. MARTELL
EROS God of Love ..... Miss UNITY MORE
CYNTHIA } Companions of Sylvia ..... Miss EVA McFARLANE
CASTALIA } Miss B. HILL
AMYNTAS a Young Shepherd ..... Miss C. MOSSETTI
PHOCION a Wealthy Farmer ..... Mr. JAMESON
IANTHE (his Daughter) ..... Miss PHYLLIS BEDELLS AUTOLYCUS (a Pedlar) ..... Mr. L. HUNTER

and

SYLVIA (a Nymph of Artemis ..... Mlle. LYDIA KYASHT

Fauns, Dryades, Naiades, Nymphs, Huntresses, Shepherds, Villagers and Vintage Revellers by the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Corps de Ballet.

Scene.—Thessaly, a Glade on the slopes of Mount Olympus.

SELECTION ... "The Arcadians" { Lionel Monckton and Howard Talbot.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE

Sole Lessee and Manager - - - - CHARLES FROHMAN

THIS PRESENT SATURDAY, MAY 20th

LAURENCE IRVING'S SEASON.

Every Evening at 8.

Matinee, Thursday and Saturday at 2.

Life and Adventures of

MARGARET CATCHPOLE,

An Exciting, Vivacious, and Spectacular Drama in Four Acts.

Sir Lucius Cracknell, Governor of New South Wales ...	Mr. JAMES SKEA
John Luff, Captain of a gang of Smugglers ...	Mr. LAURENCE IRVING
William Laud, Jim Cook ... ... Smugglers ...	Mr. GODFREY TEARLE, Mr. A. FIELD FISHER
John Barry, in love with Margaret ...	Mr. RUPERT HARVEY
Edward Barry, his Brother, a Preventive Officer ...	Mr. CECIL KINNAIRD
Dr. Stebbing, of Ipswich	Mr. GEORGE OWEN
Mr. Wake, of the Priory Farm	Mr. WILLIAM HOLLES
Will Rickes, a Farm Hand	Mr. ARTHUR STANLEY
Lieutenant Blount, R.N., in command of the Press Gang ...	Mr. R. G. BEARD
Lord Chief Baron Macdonald, Judge of Assize	Mr. O. JAMES
Ripshaw, Turnkey of Ipswich Gaol	Mr. A. WILLIAMS
Philip, a Footman	Mr. PERCY NASH
O'Keefe, a Passenger	Mr. N. O'NEILL
Constable of the Parish of St. Margaret's, Ipswich ...	Mr. F. A. ARLTON
Mr. Spink, of Ipswich	Mr. S. ARTHUR
Captain of the Watch	Mr. A. A. GEORGE
Ostler's Boy at "The Dog and Bone"	Master G. PELL
Margaret Catchpole	Miss MABEL HACKNEY
Mrs. Clayton, of St. John's Green, Ipswich ...	Miss BEATRICE SMITH
Kate, Nurserymaid at Mrs. Clayton's ...	Miss KATHERINE HERBERT
Sarah Barker, a Prisoner at Ipswich Gaol ...	Miss ALICE INMAN
Hostess of "The Dog and Bone," Lambeth ...	Miss AMY FANCHETTE
Mrs. Thatcher	Miss F. AMY
Polly, 1st Sailor's Girl	Miss SUSIE NAINBY
Susan, 2nd Sailor's Girl	Miss LISA MACREADY

Morris Dancers.—Miss Lisa Macready, Miss Violet Welford, Miss R. Loraine, Miss Susie Nainby, Mr. R. Carfax, Mr. R. G. Beard, Mr. A. Lammotte, Mr. B. Howard, Mr. L. K. Mansford, Mr. B. Venne, Mr. E. H. Tennant, Mr. Charles Fielding.

Girls, Sailors, Smugglers, Preventive Men, Farm Hands, Prisoners, etc.—Miss Vera Wallace, Miss G. Emden, Miss H. Pike, Miss Kathleen Herbert, Miss Edith M. Young, Mr. H. Stenson Connell, Mr. Arthur Thorn, Mr. M. Lester, Mr. S. Sigrist, Mr. E. Sidney, Mr. C. Terrie, Mr. F. Arnold, Master G. Pell, Mr. R. Chown, Mr. E. Furst.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

Act I.	Scene 1—The Priory Farm, near Ipswich	Schmitz.
	Scene 2—Nacton Creek, by moonlight	Schmitz.
	One month elapses.
Act II.	Scene 1—The Priory Farm	Schmitz.
	Scene 2—The Gates of Orwell Park	Walter Hann.
	Scene 3—The Priory Farm	Schmitz.
	Tableau:—"The Glorious 1st of June," 1794. On board Lord Howe's Flag-ship, H.M.S. "Queen Charlotte."	Walter Hann.
	Three years elapse.
Act III.	Scene 1—The Salutation Tavern, Ipswich	Bruce Smith.
	Scene 2—Housekeeper's Room at Mrs. Clayton's	Schmitz.
	Scene 3—Yard of "The Dog and Bone" at Lambeth	Bruce Smith.
	Five years elapse.
Act IV.	Scene 1—The Assize Court, Bury St. Edmunds	Schmitz.
	Scene 2—The Yard of Ipswich Gaol, sunset	Schmitz.
	Scene 3—The same. Moonlight	Schmitz.
	Scene 4—Street near the Gaol	Walter Hann.
	Scene 5—Summit of Sudbourne Crag	Bruce Smith.
	Eight years elapse.
	Tableau:—Sydney Harbour at sunset, 1810	Walter Hann.
	Tableau:—Margaret Catchpole's Hut in the Blue Mountains (near Baralong)	Walter Hann.
	Scene 6—Room in the Governor's House, New South Wales ...	Joseph Harker.

The action of the play takes place during the closing years of the 18th and early years of the 19th century.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE
After Act I.	"Dance of the Dryads"	Haines
After Act II.—Country Dance	"Once I loved a maiden fair"
Morris Dance ...	"How d'ye do, Sir?"
After Act III.—Folk Song ...	"Brennan on the Moor."
	"Old Mother Oxford."

Costumes designed and arranged by MR. A. FIELD-FISHER.
Music composed and arranged by MR. C. BLAKESLEY-YEARSLEY. Wigs by GUSTAVE.
Furniture by SPILLMAN.

Stage Manager	HERBERT CHOWN.
General Manager	ARTHUR PENLEY.
Musical Director	MR. C. BLAKESLEY-YEARSLEY.

MR. L. IRVING'S NEW PLAY.

"MARGARET CATCHPOLE."

John Luff	Mr. Laurence Irving
William Laud	Mr. Godfrey Tearle
Jim Cook	Mr. Rupert Harvey
John Barry	Mr. A. Williams
Ripshaw	Mr. Percy Nash
Philip	Mr. F. A. Arlton
Constable	Mr. A. A. George
Captain of the Watch	Miss Mabel Hackney
Margaret Catchpole	Miss Beatrica Smith
Mrs. Clayton

Mr. Laurence Irving has so clearly identified his management with the intelligent drama—the play of ideas—that it must have come as a surprise to many of his followers at the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday evening to find that his latest play was but a very ordinary example of the old drama of love and murder. He plainly stated in advance, however, that "The Life and Adventures of Margaret Catchpole" was nothing more nor less than "an exciting, vivacious, and spectacular drama in four acts."

There is not over much vivacity in any of the fourteen scenes devoted to the sad history of the brave girl Margaret Catchpole, but there is plenty of excitement—and as fine a type of villain as was ever born in melodrama to stir up endless strife and fool a simple heroine and her foolish friends. Mr. Irving, in choosing this version of an old story for production—he does not give the author's name—must have been attracted by it primarily by the opportunities it offers his wife, Miss Mabel Hackney, and of these opportunities it can be truly said that that sympathetic actress took full advantage.

Margaret Catchpole is the beginning and end of the play, the helpless victim of the sinister villain Luff. Brave and clever as she was, Margaret seemed weak and simple in this fellow's hand, a rare specimen of the evil genius played with great dramatic skill and force by Mr. Irving. However innocent her acts, Luff made them appear criminal in the eyes of the law, and the central episode in her sad history was her going to gaol for a period of years on a charge of stealing a horse. Eventually came her escape, the attempt of Luff to earn the reward for her capture, and the fight on the cliffe in which Margaret's discredited lover makes amend for his disloyalty by carrying Luff with him over the cliff to death on the rocks below. In the last act of all—after sixteen years of her life have been gone through in the play—Margaret, now an honoured citizen of Sydney, New South Wales, finds happiness waiting her in the offer of her old friend and admirer from their Suffolk village, now the foremost man in the Colony.

Mr. Irving staged this play well but not extravagantly. It provides, outside the parts played by himself and Miss Hackney, little opportunity for anyone, yet the sympathy attracted to the heroine and the uncompromising villainy of Luff provided the elementary material dear to the hearts of a public that still loves its melodrama.

J. W.

---

ments. "Margaret Catchpole," which was first performed at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham, on July 30 last year, is an adaptation of the well-known novel of the same name by the Rev. Richard Cobbold. The original adaptation was the work of Mr. Walter Frith; but Mr. Irving has since altered and improved it extensively.

DALY'S THEATRE

SATURDAY, MAY 20th, 1911, at 8 o'clock.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'

PRODUCTION OF

THE

COUNT OF LUXEMBOURG

A New Musical Play in Two Acts by

A. M. WILLNER and ROBERT BODANZKY.

Adapted for the English Stage by BASIL HOOD.

Music by FRANZ LEHAR.

Lyrics by ADRIAN ROSS and BASIL HOOD.

Musical Director - - - - - - - Mr. ERNST FLECKER

At this performance the Orchestra will be under the direction of the Composer.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - Mr. EDWARD ROYCE

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. W. Anderson) OPEN DAILY from 10 to 10.

Telephone: GERRARD 201 (2 Lines).

Private Boxes, £2 12s. 6d. to £5 5s.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Upper Circle (Bonnets allowed), Front, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

. . Cast of the Play . .

Count René of Luxembourg		Mr. BERTRAM WALLIS
Registrar		Mr. FRED KAYE
Jean Baptist	(A Waiter) ...	Mr. WILLIE WARDE
Mons. de Tresac		Mr. ALEC FRASER
Mons. de Valmont		Mr. PAUL PLUNKET
Pelegrin		Mr. FRANK PERFITT
Mentschikoff, Paulovitch	(The Grand Duke's Attendants)	Mr. RIDGWELL CULLUM Mr. CHARLES COLEMAN
Lavigne, Boulanger	(Artists)	Mr. GERVAIS WHITEHEAD Mr. GARNET WILSON

AND

Brissard (an Artist)	Grand Duke Rutzinov
Mr. W. H. BERRY	Mr. HUNTLEY WRIGHT

Juliette	(A Model) ...	Miss MAY DE SOUSA
Countess Kokozeff		Miss GLADYS HOMFREY
Mimi		Miss MAY MARTON
Lisette	(Maid to Angele Didier) ...	Miss KITTY HANSON
Fleurette		Miss GLADYS GUY
Amelie		Miss MAY HOBSON
Rosalie		Miss GERTRUDE GLYN
Coralie		Miss MADELINE SEYMOUR
Sidonie		Miss MARGOT ERSKINE
Babette		Miss DORIS STOCKER
Jacqueline		Miss MAY LESLIE STUART
Therése		Miss BEATRICE VON BRUNNER

AND

Angéle Didier	Miss LILY ELSIE

Special Dances by Miss BEATRICE COLLIER and OY-RA.

ACT I.—Brissard's Studio, Paris - - - - ALFRED TERRAINE

ACT II.—Reception Hall at the Grand Duke Rutzinov's, Paris ALFRED TERRAINE

All Numbers, Dances, and Chorus Effects have been arranged by Mr. EDWARD ROYCE

Dresses designed by COMELLI.

Dresses by Mesdames LUCILE, MICHARD Sœurs, ZIMMERMANN of Paris, MORRIS ANGEL, B. & J. SIMMONS and Miss FISHER.

Hats by MAISON LEWIS. Miss Lily Elsie's Hats by GRACIE ANSELLS.

Boots by SAUNDERS, CLEGG, MANZO, H. & M. RAYNE, and KEMP HIVES & Co.

Miss Lily Elsie's Dresses made by LUCILLE (Paris), Ltd., 11 Rue de Penthievre.

THE KING AND THE THEATRE.

Their Majesties' visit to the first-night performance at Daly's Theatre to-night is not quite in the usual course of their theatre-going but has a special significance.

The King, bearing in mind the two coming gala performances and the command night of Wednesday last, and being anxious to allay any possible disappointment to the musical comedy stage, has graciously signified his intention of being present, accompanied by the Queen, at the first representation of the "Count of Luxembourg" at Daly's Theatre this evening.

Last Saturday evening at Daly's was a success—and it was a success "all along the line." It was indeed fortunate that on the King's visit to Daly's Theatre Mr. George Edwardes was able to present to his notice such an unqualified triumph as "The Count of Luxembourg." The piece is the acme of excellence in its genre, and we can only welcome it, as the audience welcomed it on Saturday, with pæans of grateful praise.

The libretto is vastly superior to the ordinary comic opera "book," being both more amusing and more interesting than usual. The incident with which the piece commences reminds us of the "pivot" of Offenbach's opera, "La Périchole." In this, as will be remembered, the street singer is "remarked" by the Viceroy of Peru, who, in order to comply with the requirements of Spanish Court etiquette, has to find some poor "devil" who will marry her, and thus render her eligible for the post of "lady of honour." In Herr Lehar's opera the singer is an operatic artist, Angèle Didier. She is beloved—pour le bon motif—by the Grand Duke Rutzinov; but, before he can marry her, it is necessary that she shall be first wedded to a nobleman, as the Grand Duke cannot marry a commoner. The "poor devil" in this case is the Count René of Luxembourg, who, it is arranged, shall obtain a divorce from his bride in three months, and retire with £20,000 for his convenient services. In "La Périchole" the identity of each of the parties was concealed from the other by the somewhat sordid fact that both had been made half-tipsy; in "The Count of Luxembourg" neither of the pair sees the other, as, for the purpose of the marriage ceremony, they join hands through a hole in a painting.

Now come interesting complications. By a fatality which can only be accounted for by the very long stretch of which the "arm of coincidence" is—for dramatic purposes—capable, the Count and Angèle, still ignorant each of the other's identity, meet. He falls in love with her at first sight, and presses his suit with boldness and eloquence. Here the cleverness of the librettist—whose work has been done full justice to by that adroit interpreter, Mr. Basil Hood—is shown in the deft manner in which he has treated a situation which demands above all light and skilful handling. There are some charming scenes of wit and passion; and, eventually, the Count prevails, Angèle accepts him, and the Grand Duke has to pair off with a certain Countess Kokozeff, who is allotted to him as bride by the Emperor's orders. In the background of this pretty picture we have a most diverting couple, the restaurant-keeper Brissard and his pert and playful sweetheart Juliette, who, to use an old-fashioned phrase, "supply the comic relief," though in truth no relief is needed in a play in which all is action, incident, animation, and brightness.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, MAY 22, 1911.

THE KING AT A FIRST NIGHT.

SUCCESS OF "COUNT OF LUXEMBOURG."

HIS MAJESTY & HERR LEHAR

The King and Queen were present at the first performance of "The Count of Luxembourg" at Daly's Theatre on Saturday evening. The royal visit was due to the King's anxiety to allay any disappointment that might be caused to those concerned in musical comedy in view of the two Coronation gala performances and the command performance of "Money."

Long before the King and Queen arrived at the theatre the neighbourhood was crowded with people waiting to see them. Punctually at eight o'clock the royal carriages drove up to the theatre, and a moment or two after the curtain had been raised their Majesties entered their box, on the O.P. side of the auditorium. The lights were down in the theatre as they took their places, but the people on the opposite side of the house saw them and cheered. Two boxes had been made into one for the King and Queen and their suite, which included Lady Minto, Lady Eva Dugdale, the Hon. Miss Villiers, Lord Tweedmouth, Colonel Hon. W. Lambton, and Sir Charles Cust. Two small bouquets for the Queen, one of malmaison carnations and the other of red roses, had been placed in the box together with hand-painted programmes for their Majesties.

HERR LEHAR SENT FOR.

During the interval between the first and second act the King sent for the composer of "The Count of Luxembourg," Herr Lehar, who was conducting the orchestra for that performance. He saw Herr Lehar in the ante-room to the royal box and greeted him very warmly, shaking his hand. "I have extremely pleasant recollections of 'The Merry Widow,'" the King said to him, speaking in German, "and what I have heard this evening charms me just as much." Then the King stopped for a moment and asked, "Do you speak English?" "No, your Majesty," was the reply, "but I am going home to my country now to learn it, and when I come again I shall be able to." The King was amused by his answer, and then said, "I am very glad to see your Ambassador from Austria-Hungary is here to-night to witness your success, and I will say also that I hope to come here to see your piece as often as I came to see 'The Merry Widow.'"

At the end of the performance the King and Queen personally expressed to Mr. Edwardes the pleasure that the play had given them.

As the royal carriages drove away from the theatre their Majesties received an ovation from the enormous crowds in Leicester-square. So great was the throng that the traffic was disorganised for a while.

At the pit and gallery doors people had been waiting since 7.30 in the morning, and to give them an opportunity to rest the doors were opened for them about five o'clock. They were given tea by the management.

Mr. George Edwardes

requests the honour of the company of

Mr. James Welch

to a Reception on the Stage at Daly's Theatre, on Tuesday Afternoon next, May 23rd, 1911,

To meet Herr Franz Lehar

The Composer of "The Merry Widow" and of "The Count of Luxembourg"

3 to 5 p.m.
Music

Entrance at Front of Daly's Theatre.

THE COUNT OF LUXEMBOURG

THE COUNT OF LUXEMBOURG

Diary

Herbert Beerbohm Tree

begs to announce

The Seventh Year of the London

Shakespeare Festival

Commencing Monday, April 17th, 1911

His Majesty's
Theatre

123

London Shakespeare Festival

[Sixth Week

Monday May 22 Evening	Julius Cæsar
Tuesday May 23 Evening	Julius Cæsar
Wednesday May 24 Evening	Julius Cæsar
Thursday May 25 Evening	Julius Cæsar
Friday May 26 Evening	Julius Cæsar
Saturday May 27 Evening	Julius Cæsar

HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE ARTHUR BOURCHIER

BASIL GILL A. E. GEORGE EDMUND GURNEY
EDWARD SASS ROSS SHORE HENRY MORRELL
S. A. COOKSON HENRY C. HEWITT E. ION SWINLEY
LADY TREE Miss FRANCES DILLON Miss MARGERY MAUDE

ARTHUR BOURCHIER Miss EVELYN D'ALROY

BASIL GILL GERALD LAWRENCE A. E. GEORGE
EDMUND GURNEY EDWARD SASS E. M. ROBSON
WALTER R. CREIGHTON S. A. COOKSON BURFORD HAMPDEN
HENRY MORRELL E. ION SWINLEY Miss FRANCES DILLON
Miss LAURA COWIE Miss MAUD CRESSALL Miss MARGERY MAUDE

HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE ARTHUR BOURCHIER

BASIL GILL A. E. GEORGE EDMUND GURNEY
EDWARD SASS ROSS SHORE HENRY MORRELL
S. A. COOKSON HENRY C. HEWITT E. ION SWINLEY
LADY TREE Miss FRANCES DILLON Miss MARGERY MAUDE

London Shakespeare Festival

[First Five Weeks

Monday April 17 to Saturday May 20 Matinees Wednesdays & Saturdays	A Midsummer-Night's Dream	ARTHUR BOURCHIER Miss EVELYN D'ALROY BASIL GILL GERALD LAWRENCE A. E. GEORGE EDMUND GURNEY EDWARD SASS E. M. ROBSON WALTER R. CREIGHTON S. A. COOKSON BURFORD HAMPDEN HENRY MORRELL E. ION SWINLEY Miss FRANCES DILLON Miss LAURA COWIE Miss MAUD CRESSALL Miss MARGERY MAUDE
Tuesday May 21 Special Matinee	Hamlet	H. B. IRVING Miss DOROTHEA BAIRD and THE QUEEN'S THEATRE COMPANY

122

London Shakespeare Festival

[Eighth Week

Monday June 5 Evening	Twelfth Night	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — ARTHUR BOURCHIER BASIL GILL — NORMAN FORBES — COURTICE POUNDS A. E. GEORGE — EDMUND GURNEY — HENRY C. HEWITT HENRY MORRELL — E. ION SWINLEY — MISS GRACE CROFT MISS VIVA BIRKETT — V. WILTSHIRE — MISS FRANCES DILLON F. R. BENSON — MRS. BENSON and COMPANY MISS GENEVIEVE WARD has kindly consented to appear as "Queen Margaret."
Tuesday June 6 Evening	Twelfth Night	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — ARTHUR BOURCHIER BASIL GILL — NORMAN FORBES — COURTICE POUNDS A. E. GEORGE — EDMUND GURNEY — HENRY C. HEWITT HENRY MORRELL — E. ION SWINLEY — MISS GRACE CROFT MISS VIVA BIRKETT — V. WILTSHIRE — MISS FRANCES DILLON
Wednesday June 7 Evening	Twelfth Night	OSCAR ASCHE — MISS LILY BRAYTON and the GARRICK THEATRE COMPANY
Thursday June 8 Evening	Twelfth Night	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — ARTHUR BOURCHIER BASIL GILL — NORMAN FORBES — COURTICE POUNDS A. E. GEORGE — EDMUND GURNEY — HENRY C. HEWITT HENRY MORRELL — E. ION SWINLEY — MISS GRACE CROFT MISS VIVA BIRKETT — V. WILTSHIRE — MISS FRANCES DILLON F. R. BENSON — MRS. BENSON and COMPANY
Friday June 9 Evening	Twelfth Night	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — ARTHUR BOURCHIER BASIL GILL — NORMAN FORBES — COURTICE POUNDS A. E. GEORGE — EDMUND GURNEY — HENRY C. HEWITT HENRY MORRELL — E. ION SWINLEY — MISS GRACE CROFT MISS VIVA BIRKETT — V. WILTSHIRE — MISS FRANCES DILLON
Saturday June 10 Evening	Twelfth Night

London Shakespeare Festival

[Seventh Week

Monday May 29 Evening	Julius Cæsar	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — ARTHUR BOURCHIER BASIL GILL — A. E. GEORGE — EDMUND GURNEY EDWARD SASS — ROSS SHORE — HENRY MORRELL S. A. COOKSON — HENRY C. HEWITT — E. ION SWINLEY LADY TREE — MISS FRANCES DILLON — MISS MARGERY MAUDE OSCAR ASCHE — MISS LILY BRAYTON and the GARRICK THEATRE COMPANY
Tuesday May 30 Special Matinée	As You Like It
Tuesday May 30 Evening	Julius Cæsar	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — ARTHUR BOURCHIER BASIL GILL — A. E. GEORGE — EDMUND GURNEY EDWARD SASS — ROSS SHORE — HENRY MORRELL S. A. COOKSON — HENRY C. HEWITT — E. ION SWINLEY LADY TREE — MISS FRANCES DILLON — MISS MARGERY MAUDE
Wednesday May 31 Afternoon	Julius Cæsar
Wednesday May 31 Evening	Julius Cæsar
Thursday June 1 Evening	The Merchant of Venice	HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — MISS EVELYN D'ALROY BASIL GILL — A. E. GEORGE — EDWARD SASS GERALD LAWRENCE — S. A. COOKSON — HENRY C. HEWITT WALTER R. CREIGHTON — ALFRED BRYDONE — LEON M. LION ROSS SHORE — E. ION SWINLEY — V. WILTSHIRE HENRY MORRELL — C. HEATHERLEY — F. CONROY MISS LAURA COWIE — MISS MARGERY MAUDE
Friday June 2 Evening	The Merchant of Venice
Saturday June 3 Afternoon	The Merchant of Venice
Saturday June 3 Evening	The Merchant of Venice

Monday June 19 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Tuesday June 20 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Wednesday June 21 Afternoon	King Henry VIII.
Wednesday June 21 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Thursday June 22 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Friday June 23 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Saturday June 24 Afternoon	King Henry VIII.
Saturday June 24 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Monday June 26	Theatre Closed
Tuesday June 27	Coronation Gala Performance
Wednesday June 28 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Thursday June 29 Evening	King Henry VIII
Friday June 30 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Saturday July 1 Afternoon	King Henry VIII.
Saturday July 1 Evening	King Henry VIII.

Monday June 12 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Tuesday June 13 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Wednesday June 14 Afternoon	King Henry VIII.
Wednesday June 14 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Thursday June 15 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Friday June 16 Evening	King Henry VIII.
Saturday June 17 Afternoon	King Henry VIII.
Saturday June 17 Evening	King Henry VIII.

HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE MISS VIOLET VANBRUGH
ARTHUR BOURCHIER

BASIL GILL	GERALD LAWRENCE	EDWARD SASS
A. E. GEORGE	ACTON BOND	S. A. COOKSON
EDMUND GURNEY	ROSS SHORE	WALTER R. CREIGHTON
EDWARD O'NEILL	HENRY MORRELL	HENRY C. HEWITT
MISS LAURA COWIE		MISS WINIFRED RAE

129

Monday July 10 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Tuesday July 11 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Wednesday July 12 Afternoon	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Wednesday July 12 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Thursday July 13 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Friday July 14 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Saturday July, 15 Afternoon	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Saturday July 15 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor

London Shakespeare Festival

Twelfth Week

Monday July 3rd Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Tuesday July 4th Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Wednesday July 5 Afternoon	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Wednesday July 5 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Thursday July 6 Afternoon	A Midsummer-Night's Dream
Thursday July 6 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Friday July 7 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Saturday July 8 Afternoon	The Merry Wives of Windsor
Saturday July 8 Evening	The Merry Wives of Windsor

HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — Miss ELLEN TERRY
ARTHUR BOURCHIER — Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH

BASIL GILL, A. E. GEORGE, ROSS SHORE, BURFORD HAMPDEN, Miss VIVA BIRKETT, EDMUND GURNEY, EDWARD SASS, S. A. COOKSON, HENRY MORRELL, E. M. ROBSON, WALTER R. CREIGHTON, LEON M. LION, HENRY C. HEWITT, Miss WINIFRED RAE

ARTHUR BOURCHIER — Miss EVELYN D'ALROY

BASIL GILL, EDMUND GURNEY, WALTER R. CREIGHTON, HENRY MORRELL, Miss LAURA COWIE, GERALD LAWRENCE, EDWARD SASS, S. A. COOKSON, E. ION SWINLEY, Miss MAUD CRESSALL, A. E. GEORGE, E. M. ROBSON, BURFORD HAMPDEN, Miss FRANCES DILLON, Miss MARGERY MAUDE

HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE — Miss ELLEN TERRY
ARTHUR BOURCHIER — Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH

BASIL GILL, A. E. GEORGE, ROSS SHORE, BURFORD HAMPDEN, Miss VIVA BIRKETT, EDMUND GURNEY, EDWARD SASS, S. A. COOKSON, HENRY MORRELL, E. M. ROBSON, WALTER R. CREIGHTON, LEON M. LION, HENRY C. HEWITT, Miss WINIFRED RAE

128

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

EVERY EVENING at 8 p.m.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2-30.

MR.

MARTIN HARVEY

supported by his Company including Miss N. de SILVA.

"THE ONLY WAY"

A Dramatised Version by FREEMAN WILLS of CHARLES DICKENS' Story, "A TALE OF TWO CITIES."

Prologue, 1774.

Marquis de St. Evremonde	Mr. ALBERT E. RAYNOR
Vicomte de St. Evremonde	Mr. EDWARD COMBERMERE
Dr. Manette	Mr. E. STIDWELL
Jean Defarge	Mr. G. T. LAMBERT.
A Peasant	Mr. H. BLACKBURN.

The Play, 1793.

Sydney Carton (his original part) ...	Mr. MARTIN HARVEY.
Ernest Defarge	Mr. CHARLES GLENNEY.
Mr. Lorry	Mr. PERCY FOSTER.
Mr. Stryver	Mr. PHILIP HEWLAND.
Dr. Manette	Mr. E. STIDWELL
Charles Darnay (Son of the Marquis de St. Evremonde)	Mr. COWLEY WRIGHT.
President	Mr. P. STONEY.
Public Prosecutor	Mr. R. ATKINS.
Comte de Fauchet, No. 46	Mr. ALBERT E. RAYNOR.
M. de Maury, No. 44	Mr. J. E FRASER.
Marquis de Boulainvilliers, No. 45 ...	Mr. DENHOLM MUIR.
Gabelle	Mr. PAUL BARRY.
Barsad	Mr. S. McCARTHY.
Jailor	Mr. A. ROBINSON.
First Citizen	Mr. ALFRED IBBERSON.
Second Citizen	Mr. DAVID BAIN.
First Juryman	Mr. A. B. McKAY.
Lucie Manette	Miss BRENDA GIBSON.
The Vengeance	Miss FLORENCE HUNT.
A Citizeness	Miss BESSIE ELDER.
Mimi (her original part)	Miss N. DE SILVA.

Aristocrats, Citizens, Citizenesses, Jailors, Sans-Coulettes, Tricoteuses, Associates, &c.

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES.

Business Manager ... ... Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL.
Stage Director ... ... Mr. JOHN KURKAMP.
Assistant Stage Managers .. .. .. Mr. DAVID BAIN & Mr. A. McKAY

For Mr. MARTIN HARVEY.

"THE ONLY WAY" REVIVED.

A Dramatised Version, in a Prologue and Four Acts, by Freeman Wills, of Charles Dickens' Story, "A Tale of Two Cities," Revived at the Lyceum on Wednesday, May 24.

PROLOGUE. 1774.

KINGSWAY THEATRE GREAT QUEEN ST. W.C.

Proprietress Miss LENA ASHWELL.

Saturday, 27th May, 1911, and Every Evening at 8.

Matinees :—
Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 2.

HEDDA GABLER

A Play in Four Acts.

By HENRIK IBSEN

Translated by EDMUND GOSSE and WILLIAM ARCHER.

Produced by JOHN POLLOCK

George Tesman	F. KINSEY PEILE
Hedda Tesman	LYDIA YAVORSKA (PRINCESS BARIATINSKY)
Miss Juliana Tesman	FLORENCE HAYDON
Mrs. Elvsted	HELEN HAYE (By arrangement with Mr. Herbert Trench)
Judge Brack	FRANKLIN DYALL
Eilert Lövborg	LEWIS WILLOUGHBY
Berta	JEAN BLOOMFIELD

The Scene of the action is Tesman's Villa, in the West End of Christiania.

Stage Manager — Val Cuthbert
Assisted by — E. Cresfan
Acting Manager — H. W. Sandham

Manager — Frederick Whelen

THE BOX OFFICE (STUART ANDERSON) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10.

TELEPHONE : 4032 GERRARD (two lines).

Alhambra Theatre

CHARING CROSS ROAD AND LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON.

Managing Director—ALFRED MOUL.

The National Variety Theatre.

Business Manager & Secretary, H. Woodford.
Treasurer, A. E. Corrick.
Press Representative James de Conlay

Musical director, Geo. W. Byng.
Sub-Conductor and Leader, Julian Jones.
Stage Manager, Maurice Volny.

PROGRAMME.

Subject to Alteration at the Discretion of the Management.

PROGRAMME for Monday, May 29th, 1911.

THE DANCE DREAM

BALLET IN SEVEN TABLEAUX

Invented and Produced by ALEXANDER A. GORSKY.
Maître de Ballet of the Imperial Theatres, Moscow and St. Petersburg.

Music selected from the Works of the following Composers : Brahms, Glazounov, Luigini, Rubinstein, Tschaikowsky, etc., with additional numbers and arrangements by GEO. W. BYNG.

Costumes by ALIAS from designs by COMELLI.

Scenery by AMABLE of Paris and E. H. RYAN.

Master Machinist : A. WILLIAMS. Electric Effects by J. WEBBER.
Wigs by GUSTAVE.

Presented under the personal direction of ALFRED MOUL.

MLLE.
CATRINA GELTZER
BALLERINA ASSOLUTA

Mons. TICHOMIROFF
PREMIER DANSEUR

Mlle. ADAMOVITSH Mlle. ANDERSON
Mons. NOVIKOFF Mons. JUKOFF

Artistes from the Imperial Opera House, Moscow.

SUPPORTED BY THE ALHAMBRA FULL CORPS DE BALLET.

SCENE I.	The Temple	.. ..	(Ryan)
II.	The Himalaya	.. .. ..	,,
III.	India	.. ..	,,
IV.	The Temple	.. ..	,,
V.	Scythia (The Bronze Age)	.. ..	,,
VI.	A Valley in Hungary	.. ..	(Amable)
VII.	Old Russia	.. .. ..	,,

For Argument and Musical Synopsis see Special Slip.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 31st, 1911,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

HALF-A-CROWN

A Farce in Three Acts, by

FRANK HOWEL EVANS.

Christopher Middleton		DENNIS EADIE
Henry Carthorne	(his Uncle by Adoption)	FRED LEWIS
Mr. McWirter	(a Bailiff)	HARRY DODD
George Mallins	(his Man)	STANLEY LOGAN
Jarvis	(Housekeeper at Jermyn Street)	CAMPBELL GULLAN
Mr. Schweitzer	(of Schweitzer & Co., Piano Manufacturers)	GEORGE BEALBY
Signor Napoli		SHIEL BARRY
Jules		PHILIP KAY
Fritz	Waiters	MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Harris		EDMUND GWENN
An Excursionist		GUY RATHBONE
A Customer at Napoli's		HENRY ANSELL
Telegraph Boy		ROBERT LAWLOR
Mrs. Trent		LENA HALLIDAY
Ethel Trent		GLADYS COOPER
A Customer at Napoli's		GILLIAN SCAIFE
Second Customer at Napoli's		ETHEL DANE
Signora Napoli		SUZANNE SHELDON

Act I. ... ... Christopher Middleton's Chambers, Jermyn Street
Act II. ... ... The Café Napoli, King's Cross
Act III. ... ... Christopher Middleton's Chambers, Jermyn Street

The Decoration of Act I. designed by A. R. DE LISSA and executed by FRYERS, Ltd.

Dresses by Madame ALEXANDRA, Baker Street. Hats by ZYROT.

At 8.15,

THE CAT AND THE CHERUB

BY

C. B. FERNALD.

Wing Shee	(a Learned Doctor)	NORMAN McKINNEL By arrangement with Mr. LEWIS WALLER
Chim Fang	(Keeper of an Opium Den)	CAMPBELL GULLAN
Hoo King	(a Rich Merchant)	HARRY DODD
Wing Sun Luey	(Only Son of Wing Shee)	SHIEL BARRY
Hoo Chee	(Only Son of Hoo King)	ELLA JONES
Ah Yoi	(Niece of Hoo King)	GILLIAN SCAIFE
Hwah Kwee	(Nurse of Hoo Chee)	ETHEL DANE
A Policeman	("Street-God")	GUY RATHBONE

Men and Women of Chinatown.

Scene—Chinatown, San Francisco, California

I. Old Year's Night—II. New Year's Day—III. New Year's Night.

The Scenery by GEORGE SACKMANN. Wigs by GUSTAVE.

The Pathephones and Records are supplied by the PATHE SALON, 94 Regent Street, W.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This rule is framed for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will be complied with by everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Bronzes supplied by ELKINGTON & Co., Ltd., 22 Regent Street, Goldsmiths, Silversmiths and Bronzists to H.M. King George V.

The Pianofortes used at this Theatre supplied by ROGERS & SONS.

MATINEE EVERY THURSDAY at 2.30.

Doors open half-an-hour before time of Performance.

The Box Office (J. W. Sheppard) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 3855 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £1 1s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 3s. & 2s. Pit, 2s. 6d.

EXTRACTS FROM THE REGULATIONS BY THE L. C. CHAMBERLAIN. The name of the Actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

Where there is a drop to screen the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every Performance to prove its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in any part of the Theatre. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager	HERBERT CHOWN
Business Manager	STANLEY LE SAGE

Christopher Middleton has chambers in Jermyn-street. He is a young spendthrift, who, even on a liberal allowance of £1,000 a year, manages to get over head and heels in debt. A financial crisis is reached when the landlord's agent puts in the bailiffs and threatens to seize the furniture if the rent owing is not paid. Henry Carthorne, Christopher's "uncle by adoption," arrives on the scene at this opportune moment, and writes a cheque for the amount due. But the old gentleman has got tired of the young man's extravagance, and resolves to give him a lesson. He agrees to take over the flat and all the financial responsibilities which that involves. Christopher must earn his own living, and if he returns in a month's time with £1 earned by honest labour, all will be well; in other words, it is a case of sink or swim. Mr. Carthorne himself, when a young man, had to sink or swim—and he swam. With this ultimatum he hands Christopher half-a-crown, every penny of which is spent within five minutes after it has come into his possession. And so he goes forth into the world with empty pockets, but a grim resolve to earn that one pound sterling.

The scene of the second act is a cheap Italian café in the prosaic neighbourhood of King's Cross. Here Christopher, having unsuccessfully tried other methods of gaining a livelihood, has obtained an engagement as an assistant in the kitchen, but owing to a quarrel and the abrupt departure of one of the foreign waiters, he is promoted to the vacancy. Many funny things happen at the Café Napoli; and the new waiter is made very uncomfortable by the entrance of his uncle, accompanied by Mrs. Trent and her daughter Ethel, the young man's sweetheart, who are both under the impression that Christopher has taken a waiter's job in order to win a bet he has made with Mr. Carthorne. The café keeper and his wife decamp, leaving Christopher and his fellow waiter, Harris, in sole possession.

In the last act Middleton and Harris turn up at the Jermyn-street Chambers as broker's men, the temporary occupant having declined to pay the rent until the landlord has a broken gutter mended. Christopher has earned the required pound all but half-a-crown, and the time allowed him is nearly up. He seizes the opportunity when a piano on hire has to be removed, and having been paid half-a-crown for assisting in its removal, he triumphantly produces the pound just in time, and so satisfies his exacting uncle.

"THE GODS OF THE MOUNTAIN."

Play in One Act, by Lord Dunsany, Produced at the Haymarket Theatre on Thursday, June 1.

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, JUNE 1st, 1911, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

HERBERT TRENCH

PRESENTS

THE GODS OF THE MOUNTAIN

By LORD DUNSANY.

To Music by NORMAN O'NEILL.

Oogno ...	Beggars	... ...	Mr. E. A. WARBURTON
Thahn ...		... ...	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Ulf ...		... ...	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
Agmar ...		... ...	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Slag ...		... ...	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
Thief ...		... ...	Mr. LAURENCE HANRAY
Mlan ...		... ...	Mr. R. P. LAMB
Oorander	Citizens	... ...	Mr. G. DICKSON-KENWIN
Akmos ...		... ...	Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
Illanaun		... ...	Mr. GRENDON BENTLEY
Báshara...		... ...	Mr. F. G. CLIFTON
Thulek ...		... ...	Mr. G. CARR
Thoharmas		... ...	Mr. KENNETH DENNYS
Haz ...		... ...	Mr. B. HATTON SINCLAIR
Theedes		... ...	Mr. A. JONES
Lirra ...		... ...	Miss MURIEL LAKE
Eselunza		... ...	Miss E. RISDON
Thonion Alāra		... ...	Miss V. WHITAKER
Ylax ...		... ...	Miss M. RONSARD
Ackarnees, from the Desert		... ...	Mr. NORMAN PAGE
Dromedary Man ...	...	... ...	Mr. W. BLACK
Nennek of the Meadows	...	... ...	Miss ENID ROSE
The Others ...	...	... ...	Mr. E. LYALL SWETE

and Messrs. A. WEBSTER, K. BLACK, H. COOPER, E. LEVERETT, G. WILKINSON, and J. O'BRIEN.

Scene I. ... ... The East. A City Wall

Scene II. ... ... A Hall in the City of Kongros

Scene III.... ... ... The Same (a few days after)

The Play produced by NORMAN PAGE.

Scenery and Costumes designed by S. H. SIME and WALTER BAYES.
The Scenery painted by WALTER BAYES.
Costumes by W. CLARKSON, L. & H. NATHAN, and Miss PITCHER.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting effects by J. DIGBY.

TO BE FOLLOWED AT 9 O'CLOCK BY

LADY PATRICIA

A Comedy in Three Acts

By RUDOLF BESIER.

Lord Dunsany has written a very clever and amusing piece which makes a most acceptable addition to the bill at the Haymarket where "Lady Patricia" is prospering exceedingly. "The Gods of the Mountain" reminds one a little of one of Kipling's stories, and has a fashionable flavour of "Kismet" about it; but the drollery of the idea, and its dramatic climax, are original and effective.

The action opens outside the walls of an Eastern city where three beggars, Oognu, Thahn, and Ulf, are soliciting alms from the passers-by with very little success, when a tall gaunt-looking personage enters and rebukes them for their mean and petty methods, saying that he will make them "not kings but gods." It should be stated that the local deities are represented by green idols which stand in a temple up in the mountains. A thief is sent to steal some green silk, and each of the beggars dresses in a portion of it. They then go into the city and proclaim themselves to be the gods who have come down from the hills; and the citizens bring sacrifices to them, remarking that the way they attack the eatables is anything but god-like. Amongst the people, however, there is one who doubts the veracity of the beggars' story, and he sends a Dromedary Man to see if the statues of the gods are still in their accustomed places in the mountains. This strikes fear to the hearts of the impostors, who know that if the idols are found unremoved their trick will be exposed. The Dromedary Man, returning, announces, much to the relief of the beggars, that the statues have disappeared. The explanation is that the real gods are out and abroad, and have even been seen by some of the citizens. One Ackarnees, from the desert, implores the false gods to relieve them of their presence, as certain large green giants have been frightening children. Then comes a touch of the supernatural. The sky darkens, and a low rumbling is heard in the distance. It is the real gods coming to take their revenge on the impostors. This is a dramatic moment, and a powerfully weird note is struck; but the effect is slightly impaired by the rather grotesque bearing of the green-clad monsters who advance toward the frightened beggars, and, one by one, turn them into stone. The gods then withdraw, and give place to the citizens, who fall down and worship the petrified mendicants, saying, "They were the true gods; how could we have doubted them?"

Every Evening at 9 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present the Original Cast in the Three-Act Comedy, called

COUSIN KATE

Preceded at 8.30 by a New Play, in One Act, called

TILL THE BELLS RING

A Comedy of Scottish Life

By GRAHAM MOFFAT

Characters in the order of their appearance:

AGGIE TURNBULL	Miss KATE MOFFAT
JANET STRUTHERS	Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT
JOHN SNODGRASS	Mr. GRAHAM MOFFAT
SAM'L DOWIE	Mr. WATSON HUME
ERCHIE DOWIE	Mr. PERCIVAL CLARK

Scene—Janet's best room in the Ladywell, Glasgow. Time—Seventy years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham Moffat made their first appearance in town recently at the London Pavilion in a comedy of Scotch life entitled "The Concealed Bed," and it says much for their acting and their plays that the merit of both has been recognised by Mr. Cyril Maude, who on Monday evening presented them at the Playhouse in a new Scottish piece entitled "Till the Bells Ring." Mr. Maude, as London and provincial playgoers know, made a study of the "meenister" in Mr. J. M. Barrie's kailyard play that had such a successful run at the Haymarket some thirteen years ago, and the true inwardness of the humour of the above-named cleverly written curtain-raiser therefore makes a powerful appeal to him. The period of "Till the Bells Ring" is seventy years ago, and the scene Glasgow. It is "Fast Day," when every gnid Glesca lassie and laddie should gang to kirk. As the play opens, this lesson is brought home to Aggie Turnbull by her maiden aunt, Janet Struthers, who has asked John Snodgrass, an elder of the Kirk, to call and give Aggie spiritual advice. During Aggie's absence to put on her best Sawbath gown, that careful soul Janet places twa pounds along with four £100 notes—Aggie's dowry—in a secret place at the top of the grandfather clock, and so careful is she to escape observation from the window that she draws the curtains. She, however, forgets the keyhole, and nearly falls over Snodgrass, who is looking through it, as she goes out of the door. Though he has already married twice for siller, of which he is ower fond, the elder is not averse from a third union providing the party is sufficiently endowed. To satisfy his curiosity, he, when alone, puts his hand on the treasure, and is disturbed during his fit of curiosity both by Aggie and her lover, Erchie Dowie, who has returned after five years' absence. Snodgrass makes excuse that he is putting the clock right. He gets the notes in his possession, and his cupidity is sufficiently aroused by their amount to lead him to propose to Janet, who accepts him in a most amusing scene.

Snodgrass, who has been unable to return the notes to their hiding-place, is in a fever of apprehension when the elder Dowie, Erchie's father, another money-grubber, solicitous as to his son's future, comes to ask about Aggie's dowry. Aunt Janet declares that she has it intact, but, when asked to produce it, discovers the loss of the notes. Snodgrass is visibly embarrassed, and offers to recoup the loss by a cheque. Eventually the old humbug gets out of his difficulty by confessing to the lovers and putting the notes under the hearthrug, where Aggie will find them on sweeping the room in the morning. He promises her a wedding-breakfast, and then arranges to have his own wedding on the same day. We are sorry for Janet. Mr. Moffat offers a most amusing study of the elder, John Snodgrass, and Mrs. Moffat gives us rich comedy in her sketch of a prudent elderly maiden in love. Miss Kate Moffat makes a pretty and engaging Aggie Turnbull, and Mr. Watson Hume presents a clever bit of character in his acting of Sam'l Dowie.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Tuesday

6/6/1911

Orch. Stall

E 15

This to be retained

Mr. ARTHUR HARDY'S PRODUCTION.

EVERY EVENING AT 9

A New Play entitled

THE CRUCIBLE

By EDWARD G. HEMMERDE and FRANCIS NEILSON.

Mark Melstrode	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Kenyon Shrawardine	Mr. OWEN NARES
Patrick Delane	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
John Palmer	Mr. A. S. HOMEWOOD
Duchess of Droone	Mrs. RUSS WHYTAL
Countess of Drayton	Miss MARY RORKE
Mary Shrawardine	Miss EVELYN D'ALROY

SCENE—A Room in Mark Melstrode's London House.

Act I.	An afternoon in June.
Act II.	Evening of the same day.
Act III.	.. A few minutes later.

Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Dresses designed and executed by the MAISON ARTHUR, Ltd., 39 New Bond Street, W.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE	"Morning Noon and Night"	Suppé
After Act I.	1. "MORGENSTIMMUNG" from "Peer Gynt Suite"	Greig
	2. "SPANISH DANCE"	Moszkowski
After Act II.	1. "DANCE OF THE CHILDREN"	Haines
	2. "DANCE OF THE MANNIKINS"	Fletcher

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

FRÄULEIN CLOTHILDE VON DERP

(The original creator of Sumurûn at the Coliseum),
In a Selection of Original Dances from her Repertoire.

1. OVERTURE	"ANNITRA'S TANZ"	Greig
	ORCHESTRA.
2.	"VALSE"	Harold Craxton
	"PASSEPIED"	Delibes
	"MOMENT MUSICAL"	Schubert
	FRÄULEIN CLOTHILDE VON DERP.
3.	"SERENADE"	Moszkowski
	ORCHESTRA.
4.	"MAY DANCE"	Krug
	"POLKA"	Rubinstein
	FRÄULEIN CLOTHILDE VON DERP.

Pianoforte kindly supplied by BLÜTHNER & Co., Wigmore Street.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

2.30 FRÄULEIN VON DERP; 3.0 THE CRUCIBLE.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - - - Mr. W. W. KEENE
Assistant Stage Manager - - - - - - - - Mr. GEOFFREY HILL

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Acting Manager - - - - - - - Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

"THE CRUCIBLE."

Play, by Edward G. Hemmerde and Francis Neilson, Produced at the Comedy Theatre, on Wednesday, June 7.

There is the true dramatic ring about the first two acts, at any rate, of Messrs. Hemmerde and Neilson's interesting drama. The stmosphere in which the dramatis personæ live, move, and have their being is neither a sweet nor a healthy one, nor are the people themselves patterns of perfection. But they are so much in earnest, their vitality is so strong, whether in the direction of vice or virtue, that they interest us from the first, and end by exciting and enthralling us. The motive of "The Crucible" is the "Measure for Measure" motive. Mark Melstrode is a financial adventurer, an important person in the world of companies and stocks and shares. Almost all his belief in male honesty and female virtue has been destroyed by many bitter experiences in the course of his hard and chequered career; and the fact that women like the Duchess of Droone, now a lively widow, pursue him for the sake of his money does not improve his opinion of the sex. He falls desperately and primitively in love with Mary Shrawardine, a young woman who has been so deeply intoxicated with the wine of society life that she has seriously involved herself in debt; and scandalous tongues say that, to save herself, she has secretly become the mistress of a rich libertine named Chuddington. The scandal, however, has no foundation. Whatever Mary's faults may be, she is chaste. But Melstrode does not know what to believe; and, as he fears to marry Mary in the circumstances, he asks her to be his mistress. She repulses him, though at the same time confessing that she loves him.

Now Mary's brother, Kenyon, to whom she is deeply attached, has been speculating in stocks and shares, and has been ruined by one of Melstrode's financial coups—quite without Mark's knowledge, of course. Indeed, when Kenyon presents himself at Melstrode's house, tells his story, and gets the financier to half promise to lend him £20,000 to save him from prison—for Shrawardine has been guilty of embezzlement as well as folly—Mark is ignorant of the other's identity. When he learns it, he determines to put Mary to a crucial test. He will make his salvation of her beloved brother depend on her becoming his (Melstrode's) mistress. If she refuses, he will disbelieve the Chuddington story, and will marry her. The proposal is made, and there is a harrowing scene between lover, sister, and brother, at the close of which Shrawardine pulls out a pistol and prepares to kill his sister and himself, but falls fainting on the floor. The last part of the piece merely winds up matters more or less satisfactorily. Its success, if it survives censure, will be caused by the thrilling climax at the end of the second act.

142

"MARRIAGE OF KITTY" REVIVED

On Thursday, June 8, at the Duke of York's Theatre, Revival of the Comedy, Adapted from "La Passerelle" of Mme. Fred Gresac and M. François de Croisset by Cosmo Gordon

Every Evening at 8.30.

Matinee, Thursday at 2.30.

THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY,

Adapted from "La Passerelle" of Madam Fred Gresac and Monsieur Francois de Croisset by Cosmo Gordon Lennox.

By arrangement with Charles Frohman.

Sir Reginald Belsize (Baronet)	Mr. GRAHAM BROWNE
John Travers (Solicitor)	Mr. J. R. CRAUFORD
Norbury (A manservant)	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
Hampton (Travers' Clerk)	Mr. CHAS. J. CAMERON
Madame de Semiano	Miss MARIE POLINI
Rosalie (A French Maid)	Miss NANNIE BENNETT
AND
Miss Katherine Silverton (Kitty)	Miss MARIE TEMPEST

ACT I.

John Travers' Office, Lincoln's Inn.

ACTS II. and III.

Lady Belsize's Villa on the Lake of Como.

A Year is supposed to have elapsed between Acts I. and II.

Intervals, 12 minutes between Acts I and II and II and III.

123

Mr. F. J. Gould Plans for Control of the Gaiety

Thinks Theatre Needs a Thorough House Cleaning—Mr. Edwardes to Retire from Managership.

[BY THE HERALD'S SPECIAL WIRE.]

LONDON, Wednesday.—In a long talk with Mr. Frank J. Gould yesterday he confirmed the HERALD'S exclusive stories about his plans to control the Gaiety Theatre and gave many additional interesting details.

Through his representative Mr. Gould will not only take an active interest in the conduct of the theatre, but will in the near future probably assume absolute control of its affairs. He thinks, to use his own expression, it necessary that it shall have a thorough house cleaning.

"How will this affect Mr. George Edwardes?" he was asked.

Mr. Edwardes to Retire.

"Mr. Edwardes has so many other large theatrical interests," Mr. Gould replied, "that I feel in justice to myself and the other shareholders he should retire from the management of the Gaiety, when we will appoint a successor who will carry it on in a satisfactory way. You see Mr. Edwardes has several other theatres in London and of course can't give the Gaiety his sole attention, as he once did. More's the pity."

"How will you assume control? You don't own the majority of shares, do you?"

"No, but I own more shares than the other large shareholders put together and I can easily control a majority. There are 60,000 shares in the company. I not only own a large number of shares in my own name, but also more that are not in my name. The list shows that Mr. Edwardes owns a little more than 3,000 shares.

Buys Shares from Mr. Edwardes.

"I bought a thousand shares from Mr. Edwardes last year," commented Mr. Gould, "and I have no doubt that he would sell me the rest of his holdings, but I don't need them if there is any hitch about my assuming control.

"If the board of directors is not in accord with me, I am all ready to present my side to the other stockholders, who I am sure will side with me. I shall demand that an extraordinary meeting of the shareholders be held at once or after the regular meeting to be held in July.

"The board of directors at present numbers four, and, while I'm the largest shareholder, I am not represented on it. At this extraordinary meeting it will be quite simple to increase the directors to nine, and I will then be represented by a majority.

"Will you make any changes in the company at the Gaiety?"

"That I shall leave entirely to the manager, whose name I am not at liberty to mention yet, to effect better conditions and productions. There will naturally be many changes. The big change I wish to make is to put the Gaiety back to where it used to be, with a reputation unequalled in the world.

Is Shareholder in Adelphi.

"It was formerly a national institution. Of late it has fallen from its high estate. We want productions there that are pretty and bright, with young and pretty girls in the chorus. I regard the Gaiety as the best theatrical proposition in the world, and I am going into it on purely a business basis. You can see by this statement, that last year it made a net profit of more than £29,000, about a third more than the year before and two-thirds more than the year before, that it's evident that I'm not taking over any dead affair. When the new Adelphi was opened last season as a musical house it looked as though it might be a rival to the Gaiety, so I bought a block of shares in it to protect my interests in the Gaiety.

"A change I shall insist on when I take control is that the back of the house be barred to all except those who have business on the stage. The waiting rooms and dressing rooms will not be accessible to visitors, such as dressmakers and others, whose presence is only demoralizing.

Gaiety Not to Close in Winter.

"Again I shall insist that the theatre shall never be closed, as it was last winter, nor leased for a play like that schoolboy comedy so opposed to all Gaiety traditions. The simple fact of its being there angered the public and hurt the theatre's reputation."

It was really on account of the ignorance and negligence of some employés that Mr. Gould decided to take personal control of the theatre. He wanted to transfer some shares and went to the theatre to learn where the secretary's office was; his experience in finding out convinced him that a change was needed.

"What I saw looked to me like incompetence," said Mr. Gould, "and also if the employés were rude to me, the largest shareholder, they were more than likely to be to other people, and so I decided to take hold myself and have a good house cleaning."

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1911.

THE GAIETY THEATRE.

Since Mr. Frank Jay Gould made known his plans for his proposed management of the Gaiety Theatre a fortnight ago, the directors have elected Mr. George Edwardes managing director for a further term of five years, and Mr. Gould has increased his holding in the concern by the purchase of several hundred more shares.

The directors of the Adelphi Theatre, the shares of which are not on the market, have also decided to elect Mr. Edwardes managing director for five years. Mr. Gould is the holder of five thousand shares in this company, and in common with the other shareholders will be glad to learn that it is proposed to pay a dividend of 20 per cent.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1911.

FIGHT FOR THE GAIETY.

MR. FRANK JAY GOULD'S SCHEME.

ATTEMPT TO SUPPLANT MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

A struggle is in progress for the control of the Gaiety Theatre. Mr. Frank Jay Gould, of the family of American millionaires, is bent on securing the direction and has been purchasing shares largely. The capital of the Gaiety Theatre, Ltd., is £60,000 in £1 shares, the present price of which is about 45s. each. The managing director is Mr. George Edwardes.

Mr. Frank Jay Gould gave an account of his plans to a representative of the Paris Edition of the New York Herald, which yesterday printed the following:—

"Through his representative Mr. Gould will not only take an active interest in the conduct of the theatre, but will in the near future probably assume absolute control of its affairs. He thinks, to use his own expression, it necessary that it shall have a thorough house cleaning.

"'How will this affect Mr. George Edwardes?' he was asked.

"'Mr. Edwardes has so many other large theatrical interests,' Mr. Gould replied, 'that I feel in justice to myself and the other shareholders he should retire from the management of the Gaiety, when we will appoint a successor who will carry it on in a satisfactory way. You see, Mr. Edwardes has several other theatres in London, and, of course, can't give the Gaiety his sole attention, as he once did. More's the pity.'

"'How will you assume control? You don't own the majority of shares, do you?'

"'No, but I own more shares than the other large shareholders put together, and I can easily control a majority. There are 60,000 shares in the company. I not only own a large number of shares in my own name, but also more that are not in my name. The list shows that Mr. Edwardes owns a little more than 3,000 shares.

"'I bought a thousand shares from Mr. Edwardes last year,' commented Mr. Gould, 'and I have no doubt that he would sell me the rest of his holdings, but I don't need them if there is any hitch about my assuming control.

"'If the board of directors is not in accord with me I am all ready to present my side to the other stockholders, who, I am sure, will side with me. I shall demand that an extraordinary meeting of the shareholders be held at once or after the regular meeting to be held in July.

"'The board of directors at present numbers four, and, while I'm the largest shareholder, I am not represented on it. At this extraordinary meeting it will be quite simple to increase the directors to nine, and I will then be represented by a majority.'

CHANGES AT THE GAIETY.

"'Will you make any changes in the company at the Gaiety?'

"'That I shall leave entirely to the manager, whose name I am not at liberty to mention yet, to effect better conditions and productions. There will naturally be many changes. The big change I wish to make is to put the Gaiety back to where it used to be, with a reputation unequalled in the world.

"'It was formerly a national institution. Of late it has fallen from its high estate. We want productions there that are pretty and bright, with young and pretty girls in the chorus. I regard the Gaiety as the best theatrical proposition in the world, and I am going into it on purely a business basis. You can see by this statement that last year it made a net profit of more than £29,000—about a third more than the year before and two-thirds more than the year before that—so it's evident that I'm not taking over any dead affair. When the new Adelphi was opened last season as a musical house it looked as though it might be a rival to the Gaiety, so I bought a block of shares in it to protect my interests in the Gaiety.

"'A change I shall insist on when I take control is that the back of the house be barred to all except those who have business on the stage.

"'Again, I shall insist that the theatre shall never be closed, as it was last winter, nor leased for a play like that schoolboy comedy, so opposed to all Gaiety traditions. The simple fact of its being there angered the public and hurt the theatre's reputation.'"

The article in the Herald further states that Mr. Gould "wanted to transfer some shares and went to the theatre to learn where the secretary's office was; his experience in finding out convinced him that a change was needed."

MR. EDWARDES'S REPLY.

Mr. George Edwardes made the following statement to The Daily Mail last night:—

"All I can say in regard to this extraordinary statement of Mr. Frank Gould is that it is a great surprise to me. I gather that he considers a change is necessary at the Gaiety because he could not find the theatre's offices at the Gaiety Theatre. That being so, he considers there is some gross incompetence somewhere and that a change is necessary.

"It is just possible that the Gaiety shareholders may wish Mr. Gould to look after their interests and manage their property. In that case I shall be very pleased to retire in his favour.

"Until this is so I shall not believe it."

MR. GOULD.

Mr. Frank Jay Gould is the youngest of four sons of the late Mr. Jay Gould, railway magnate and multi-millionaire. He was born in New York in 1878, and graduated at the University of New York. He entered the railway service when he was nineteen, and is now a director of many companies, including railways, banks, telegraphs, and mines.

He married Miss Helen M. Kelly, daughter of a New York banker, ten years ago, but they were divorced in 1909. Last autumn he rented Abbotsford (Sir Walter Scott's home), and in November he married Miss Edith Kelly, who had appeared at the Gaiety Theatre. She left the Gaiety Theatre in 1908 to go to New York for the American production of "The Girls of Gottenburg" and there met Mr. Gould.

GAIETY THEATRE.

MR. EDWARDES' REPLY TO MR. GOULD.

"NOT SERIOUS."

Mr. Frank Jay Gould, the millionaire son of the late Mr. Jay Gould, who has announced his hopes and plans to secure control of the Gaiety Theatre, left yesterday for Paris. He thinks that a thorough "house-cleaning" is required. "We want productions there that are pretty and bright, with young and pretty girls in the chorus."

Mr. George Edwardes's reply to the suggestion that he will retire was given in yesterday's issue: "It is just possible that the Gaiety shareholders may wish Mr. Gould to look after their interests and manage their property. In that case I shall be very pleased to retire in his favour. Until this is so I shall not believe it."

Mr. George Edwardes stated last night: "I can hardly be expected to give to Mr. Gould's statements as much importance as Mr. Gould would wish. I have been many years at the Gaiety Theatre, but have not heard that the company wants to replace me by him. Last (Wednesday) night my feelings on being handed by your representative a copy of Mr. Gould's interview [printed in yesterday's Daily Mail] were those of complete surprise.

"Mr. Gould had called to see me on Wednesday afternoon at my office in Daly's Theatre with the proposition that I should retire from the management of the Gaiety Theatre and support the nominee who should be put in to succeed me. He told me that he was the largest shareholder in the concern, and that he and his friends would have the voting power and intended to control the company. This was news to me, but I may tell you I did not place any reliance on it. In fact, I was taken aback at the proposal of a man who was practically a stranger that I should—because he happened to become recently the largest shareholder—retire and hand over to him the control of the Gaiety Theatre. It struck me as a good farcical situation that I should at the request of an individual 'clear out' of a theatre I have managed for twenty-five years. With the coolest assurance he proposed that I should 'stand down' and join a chorus in support of his management.

THE FUTURE.

"What strikes me now as most extraordinary is that all the time Mr. Gould was sitting in my office he made no reference to an interview with him that appeared that morning in the Paris edition of the New York Herald. In fact, the first intimation I got of that interview came from a representative of yours, who handed me a copy of it at ten o'clock at night.

"Candidly, I must confess I am more amused to-day than annoyed by his ingenuous statements and his plans to manage a theatre that does not belong to him. The future management of the Gaiety will be settled at the next general meeting, and I only hope that Mr. Gould will be present himself to set forth boldly before the shareholders what he intends to do for them. I hope also that his statement on that occasion will contain a forecast of the dividends he proposes to earn for them. Mr. Gould is perhaps not aware that the Gaiety Theatre does not belong to him or to me. It belongs to the shareholders, and it is they who appoint the management.

"When Mr. Gould with cool assurance informed me that he had the majority of votes behind him and was determined to exercise the power, he added that the Gaiety was the most valuable theatrical property in the world. My answer to that was that if he was going to manage the Gaiety Theatre he could have my shares for £3 apiece, and a good many other shareholders would, I thought, let him have theirs at the same price. His statement of plans is, however, not to be taken quite seriously. Our sense of humour forbids it."

"A BUSINESS PROPOSITION."

A representative of the London Evening News had a conversation with Mr. Frank Jay Gould shortly before he left London yesterday for Paris.

"So you're going to liven up the Gaiety?" said the interviewer.

Mr. Gould smiled amiably (adds the interviewer) and looked slightly embarrassed.

"Are you going to have a clean sweep and bring some real hot theatrical stuff to show the English how to do it?"

Mr. Gould smiled. It was 2.9 p.m. Train at 2.20 p.m.—and one wondered if Mr. Gould would think of something to say in time to catch it. After a distressing silence the interviewer repeated his request for information. Mr. Gould smiled and said:

"You see it's a business proposition"—then added, in rather unhappy sequence, "I know nothing about theatres myself."

"I am told," added Mr. Gould, "that the theatre could be improved. . . . It is a business proposition. . . . I admire Mr. George Edwardes very much. I saw him only yesterday. I think he must have known what was in my mind. He was perfectly friendly. I like him. . . .

"There is an English producer of musical comedy in London. . . . I would like to see him at the Gaiety. . . . if the other shareholders wished. . . . Still, Mr. Edwardes is a very clever man, and I am a great admirer of his. . . ."

"And that's all?" asked the Evening News representative.

"That's all. It's just a business proposition."

Mr. Gould married last year Miss Edith Kelly, who had appeared at the Gaiety Theatre.

GAIETY SHAREHOLDERS.

The following is a list of the principal shareholders in the Gaiety Theatre Company, Limited:—

Shares.	Name and Address.
7,999.	Gould, F. Jay, 52, Rue Pierre Charron, Paris.
4,754.	Edwardes, George, 31, Lisle-street, W.C.
1,630.	Dance, George, 43, Leicester-square, W.C.
1,445.	Michelham, Lord, 6, Angel-court, E.C.
1,199.	Purefoy, W. B., Gordon-chambers, 20, Jermyn-street, S.W.
1,000.	Mackenzie, A. G., 29, Chester-terrace, Regent's Park, N.W.
902.	Baines, John, 36, Theobald's-road, Gray's Inn
650.	Hopkins, James, 1, Clarence-parade, Southsea, Hants.
600.	Boulton, Mrs. C. F., 15, Seymour-street, W.
600.	Forester, Capt. F. W., Saxelbye Park, Melton Mowbray.
600.	Malone, J. A. E., Adelphi Theatre, Strand.
550.	Andrade, S. H., Stock Exchange, E.C.
550.	Cunliffe, A. P., 9, Arlington-street, S.W.
500.	Ascherberg, E., 61, Priory-road, Hampstead, N.W.
500.	Baulting, T. J., Oakley House, 126, Camden-road, N.W.
500.	Meyer, Carl, 4 and 5, King William-street, E.C.
500.	Thatcher, H., 52, Bolina-road, South Bermondsey, S.E.
500.	Van der Byl, Capt. J., 8th Hussars, South Cavalry Barracks, Aldershot.
500.	Yates, W., jun., Brooklyn, Heywood.
470.	Devenish, Mrs. B. L. P., 103, Iverna-court, Kensington, W.
420.	Nalder, C. Nelne, Milner's-buildings, 28, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.
400.	Davis, F. L., Ellerslie, Bedford.
400.	Miller, W. A., c/o National Provincial Bank of England, Norwich.
400.	Samuel, Mrs. H., 19, Bolton-gardens, S.W.
400.	Stuttard, T. (J.P.), Swinton Park, Manchester.

Our City Editor writes: There has never been a very free market in Gaiety Theatre shares, but as a result of the news as to what seemed like a contest for control the market "dried up" altogether. The one-pound shares were still quoted at 2½, the same as on the preceding day, but this was quite a nominal price. No shares apparently changed hands in the open market and dealing was a matter of negotiation. The capital of the company is £60,000, and whereas for 1907-8 no dividend was paid, 15 per cent. and 20 per cent. respectively were paid in the two subsequent years, and a balance of £14,062 was carried forward last July. For the year ended July 1, 1910, the receipts of the company amounted to £107,768, of which £29,096 was net profit. In addition to the payment of the 20 per cent. dividend, £10,000 was added to the reserve.

GAIETY THEATRE.

SHAREHOLDERS' VIEWS.

We publish below statements from some of the principal shareholders of the Gaiety Theatre as to their views on Mr. Frank Jay Gould's plan to secure control of the theatre.

Mr. Gould, the millionaire son of the late Mr. Jay Gould, has recently become the largest shareholder of the company. He has stated his opinion that a thorough "house-cleaning" is required. In an interview (printed in yesterday's Daily Mail) Mr. George Edwardes said that Mr. Gould called on him on Wednesday and proposed that he should retire from the management of the Gaiety in place of Mr. Gould's nominee. "I am more amused than annoyed," Mr. Edwardes said, "by his plans to manage a theatre that does not belong to him."

Mr. A. J. Mackenzie, of Regent's Park, N.W., a director and shareholder, stated yesterday:

"I and, I am sure, my colleagues would think it a most undesirable thing in the interest of shareholders if any syndicate became strong enough to dictate a new policy and insist on the retirement of Mr. Edwardes, who founded the theatre twenty-five years ago and has consistently carried it on to the greatest satisfaction of the shareholders.

"At the present time, however, Mr. Gould's holding does not amount to more than one-sixth of the total capital of the Gaiety, and therefore the interest of the other shareholders must predominate.

"I have no doubt that any misgivings which Mr. Gould may have had as to the management of the theatre—misgivings which have not prevented him buying shares at a high premium—will be speedily dissipated, and that Mr. Edwardes will be permitted, as he has been in the past, to earn large dividends for his shareholders in his own way."

Mr. George Dance.—I do not think Mr. Gould meant his proposal to be taken seriously. It was surely an after-dinner interview.

Sir Carl Meyer.—Gaiety shareholders, in my opinion, have every reason to be satisfied with past management by Mr. George Edwardes and his co-directors.

Mr. T. J. Boulting.—I have no wish for any alteration in the present management, and will support Mr. Edwardes against all opposition.

Mrs. B. L. P. Devenish.—I have every faith in Mr. George Edwardes. Fear Mr. Gould's control would be disastrous for shareholders.

Gaiety Theatre shares remained yesterday at a nominal quotation of 2 to 2½, and no transactions appear to have been carried through in open market.

GAIETY THEATRE DIVIDEND.

The report issued by the directors of the Gaiety Theatre for the year ending June 30 shows a balance available of £24,238 7s. 1d. The directors propose to pay 20 per cent. on the £60,000 capital of the company, and carry forward £12,238 7s. 1d. to the credit of the next account.

The directors further state that they have entered into a new agreement upon favourable terms with Mr. George Edwardes to act as managing director for five years from June last, and they remind the shareholders that during Mr. Edwardes's twenty years' connection with the company the average profit made by the company has been 18 per cent. per annum. The report will be submitted to the shareholders at the annual general meeting at the Gaiety Theatre next Monday.

18/7/1911

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

TUESDAY, JULY 25, 1911.

THE GAIETY THEATRE.

The Gaiety Theatre shareholders were as punctual in arriving at noon yesterday for the annual general meeting as if they had been the artistes of the theatre called together for a rehearsal.

The meeting was held on the stage—lighted as brilliantly as during a performance—and the stage manager surrounded the shareholders with a scene of white towering cliffs above the green and blue of a summer sea. The shareholders, quiet, middle-aged ladies and gentlemen, looked very happy under the influence of the picturesque environment and a dividend of 20 per cent., so the chairman, Mr. George Edwardes, had little else to do than receive congratulations, and in twenty-three minutes had got through the business for which they met.

The meeting of the Adelphi Theatre shareholders, over which Mr. Edwardes presided later in the day, occupied still less time than that of the Gaiety Theatre. The dividend there was also 20 per cent. for the eight months the company had been working.

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

CHARLES DICKENS CENTENARY FESTIVAL

With the Support of ALFRED TENNYSON DICKENS, HENRY FIELDING DICKENS, K.C., and Mrs. PERUGINI (nee KATE DICKENS), Sons and Daughter of the Great Novelist, THE COUNCIL OF THE DICKENS FELLOWSHIP, and THE DICKENS CENTENARY COMMITTEE.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14th, 1911, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.15

A NEW PLAY FOUNDED ON

DOMBEY AND SON

By METCALFE WOOD. Produced by LOUIS CALVERT.

PRESENTED BY

Mr. Robert Arthur's London Repertory Company

The Productions under the direction of Mr. EADE MONTEFIORE.

The Characters in the order they appear in the Play:

Mrs. Louisa Chick	(Sister of Dombey)	EMILY FITZROY
Lucretia Tox	(Admirer of Dombey)	NELLIE BOUVERIE
Towlinson	(Butler to Dombey)	KING FORDHAM
Mrs. Edith Dombey	(Second Wife to Dombey)	EVELYN MILLARD
Paul Dombey	(Head of Dombey and Son)	CLIFTON ALDERSON
The Hon. Mrs. Skewton	(Mother to Edith Dombey)	SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
James Carker	(Manager for Dombey and Son)	FRANK RANDELL
Major Joseph Bagstock	(Retired)	LOUIS CALVERT
Florence Dombey	(Paul Dombey's Daughter)	MARJORIE CHARD
Susan Nipper	(Confidential Maid to Florence Dombey)	DULCIE GREATWICH
Walter Gay	(Employee of Dombey and Son)	FREDERIC WORLOCK
A Bank Director		HOWARD STURGE
Lord Feenix	(Cousin to Edith Dombey)	O. B. CLARENCE
Dr. Blimber	(Head of a Select School for Boys)	ACTON CRESSALL
Mrs. Blimber	(his Wife)	DOROTHY HULLAH
Cornelia Blimber	(his Daughter)	CONSTANCE LITTLE
Feeder, B.A.	(Dr. Blimber's Assistant)	GUY LEIGH-PEMBERTON
P. Toots		EVELYN BEERBOHM
Sir Barnet Skettles	(M.P.)	CHARLES SUGDEN
Lady Skettles	(his Wife)	EMILY LEVETTEZ
Miss Skettles	(their Daughter)	MARGARET MACDONA
Sir Parker Peps	(Court Physician)	J. H. BREWER
Lady Parker Peps	(his Wife)	NELLIE WESTON
Miss Parker Peps }	their Daughters	MAXINE HINTON
Miss Harriet Parker Peps }		FELICIA ROCHE
Lady Jane Finchbury		FLORENCE WELLS
Sophia Smalder		GLORIA HAMILTON
Amelia Smalder		GABRIELLE DE WILDEN
Rev. Alfred Feeder	(Brother of Feeder, B.A.)	BEN FIELD
Dr. Pilkins	(Practitioner)	ARTHUR WINDSOR
Miss Pilkins	(his Daughter)	PHYLLIS BIRKETT
John Chick		EDWARD IRWIN
James }	Footmen	ALEX ONSLOW
John }		OLAF HYTTEN
M. Fontaine	(Proprietor of Apartments at Dijon)	DANIEL McCARTHY
Francois	(Waiter at Dijon)	ARTHUR CLEAVE

ACT I. .. .. The Morning Room in Mr. Dombey's House
ACT II. .. An Evening Reception in Mr. Dombey's House
ACT III. .. .. Hotel in Dijon
ACT IV. .. .. Florence's New Home in London

Between Acts I. and II. a little more than a year elapses, a fortnight between Acts II. and III., and two years between Acts III. and IV.

Costumes worn by Miss Millard, Miss Fairbrother, Miss Chard, Miss Greatwich and Miss Fitzroy by L. & H. NATHAN.
Men's Costumes and remainder of Ladies' Costumes by C. & W. MAY.
Wigs by CLARKSON.
Acts I. and IV., Decorations and Furnishing by HINDLEY & WILKINSON, 70 Welbeck Street, W.
Acts II. and III., Scenery by W. HEMSLEY; Furnishings by HINDLEY & WILKINSON.

There will be an Interval of 12 minutes between the Acts, during which the Orchestra will play the following Selection of Music, under the direction of Mr. LEONARD HORNSEY.

1. OVERTURE ... ... "Le Caid" ... ... Thomas
2. SELECTION ON OLD ENGLISH MELODIES "The Rose" ... ... Myddleton
3. (a) ENTR'ACTE ... ... "Mignette" ... ... Missa
   (b) VALSE ... ... "Songe d'Automne" ... ... Joyce
   (c) INTERMEZZO ... ... "Coquette" ... ... Haines
4. THREE LIGHT PIECES ... (a) Bagatelle, (b) Melody, (c) Valse ... Reginald Somerville

Stage Manager ... ... } For Mr. Robert Arthur { ... Mr. W. SLAINE MILLS
Assistant Stage Managers... } { ... Mr. F. G. KNOTT
... Mr. ARTHUR BOWYER

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

Private Boxes, £5 5s., £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. First Circle (Reserved), Front Row, 5s.; other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Box Office open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.
Telephone: 2602 GERRARD. Telegrams: "NEWSAVO, LONDON."

Business Manager (for Savoy Theatre) Mr. Harry P. Towers

THE DICKENS STAMP

Price ... ... ONE PENNY EACH.

A beautiful little Steel Engraving printed on hand-made paper, and sold for the purpose of raising a Fund for commemorating the memory of CHARLES DICKENS. It can be affixed to the Souvenir of one hundred Dickens Illustrations, entitled

DICKENSIANA

On Sale within the Theatre at SIXPENCE.

THE SAVOY RESTAURANT.

The THEATRE and RESTAURANT are in direct communication with each other UNDER COVER.

Take the Pass Staircase leading from the Theatre Vestibule at the Embankment level to the new Theatre Entrance at the Strand level.

DINNERS à la carte. (Menus from 12 6 per person and upwards). | SUPPERS after the Theatre, à prix fixe, 5/-

The beautiful NEW ANNEXE to the Foyer and Restaurant is NOW OPEN.

Once more it has been proved that the people who prate so much about their love for Shakespeare, Dickens, &c.,

Do Not Love Them Sufficiently to Pay to see the characters of those Masters upon the stage. The recent excellently-acted Shakespeare revivals at the Coronet drew scarcely enough to pay the gas, and last night the series of Dickens Centenary performances at the Savoy came to an end through lack of sufficient financial patronage.

Wednesday, June 21st, at 8.30

SEASON OF RUSSIAN BALLET

Organised by M. SERGE DE DIAGHILEW
Choreographic Direction M. MICHEL FOKINE
Artistic Direction M. ALEXANDRE BENOIS

FIRST APPEARANCE IN ENGLAND

I.

LE PAVILLON D'ARMIDE

Pantomime-Ballet in Tableaux by M. ALEXANDRE BENOIS
Music by M. NICOLAS TCHEREPNIN
Dances and Scenes by M. MICHEL FOKINE, Ballet-Master of the Imperial Theatres, St. Petersburg
Scenery and Costumes designed by M. ALEXANDRE BENOIS
Scenery by M. O. ALLEGRI

Armide	Mme. TAMARA KARSAVINA
Le Vicomte de Beaugency	MM. BOLM
Le Marquis	CECCHETTI
L'Esclave d'Armide	NIJINSKY
Baptiste, domestique du Vicomte	GRIGORIEV
Confidentes d'Armide	Mmes. ELSA WILL, SCHOLLAR, NIJINSKA, VASSILEVSKA
Un maître des cérémonies	M. KOSSOV

Les chevaliers Mmes. ELPE, DECOMBE, SOZONOVA, MM. MASLOV, PONOMAREV, ULANOV, GHERASSIMOV, DMITRIEV, GUNDNIN, YANLIEL, MASHAT, BROMBERG

Les dames Mmes. BIBER, TCHERNISHEVA, REISEN, FROMANN, A. VASSILIEVA, GASHEVSKA, TCHEREPANOVA, HEINE, BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., KONETZKA, KOPETZINSKA

Les écuyers présentant les chevaliers
MM. SEMENOV, ALEXANDROV, SERGHEIEV, FROMANN, V. ROMANOV, LASTCHILIN

Les dames d'honneur
Mmes. M. VASSILIEVA, LARIONOVA, LASTCHILINA, KANDINA, MEIETCHKOVSKA, KLEMENTOVITCH, IEZERSKA, KULCHITZKA, GULIUK, JULITZKA, VAKOVLEVA, HOHLOVA

Sorcières MM. B. ROMANOV, FEDOROV, CHRISTAPSON, PETROV, OGNEV, ZAILICH, VARJINSKY, S. MOLOTZOV, UMANSKY, ORLIK, LAROSOV, RAKHMANOV

Premier Ballet
M. ROSAI

Ballet
MM. LEONTIEV, ORLOV, KREMNIEV, KOCHETOVSKY, KOBELEV, A. MOLOTZOV

II.

LE CARNAVAL

Pantomime-Ballet in 1 act by M. FOKINE
Music by ROBERT SCHUMANN
Orchestrated by RIMSKY-KOSAKOV, LIADOV, GLAZUNOV and TCHEREPNIN
Scenes and Dances by M. MICHEL FOKINE
Costumes and Scenery designed by M. L. BAKST
Scenery by M. ANISFELD
Costumes by Mlle. MUELLE of Paris

Columbine	Mmes. ELSA WILL	Pierrot	MM. BOLM
Chiarina	FOKINA	Arlequin	NIJINSKY
Estrella	SCHOLLAR	Pantalon	CECCHETTI
Papillon	NIJINSKA	Eusebius	KOSSOV
Jeune Fille	MM. BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., HEINE, TCHEREPANOVA, KOPETVINSKA, VASSILEVSKA, MM. ALEXANDROV, KOBELOV, ROMANOV, VARJINSKY, RAKHMANOV, ZAILICH	Florestan	SEMENOV

Danses Nobles Mmes. GULOIK, JULITZKA. MM. UMANSKY, S. MOLOTZOV

III.

Scenes and Polovtsienne Dances from

PRINCE IGOR

Music by A. BORODIN
Scenes and Dances arranged by M. FOKINE
Scenery and Costumes designed by M. N. ROERICH
Scenery by M. ANISFELD

Singers:

Kontchakovna	Mme. PETRENKO
Vladimir Igorevitch	MM. ISSATCHENKO
Kontchak	ZAPOROJETZ

Ballet:

Filles polovtsiennes
Mmes. SOPHIE FEDOROVA, SCHOLLAR, NIJINSKA, VASSILEVSKA, TCHEREPANOVA, TCHERNISHEVA, GONSIOROVSKA, REISEN, FROMANN, BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., IEZERSKA, ELPE

Guerriers polovtsiens
Mmes. GASHEVSKA, A. VASSILIEVA, BIBER, KONETZKA, KOPETZINSKA, M. VASSILIEVA, KLEMENTOVITCH, HOHLOVA, MIETCHKOVSKA, LASTCHILINA, LARIONOVA, HEINE, JULITZKA, SAZONOVA, KANDINA, GULIUK, KULTCHITZKA

Vieillard polovtsien
M. BOLM

Guerriers polovtsiens
MM. FEDOROV, RAKHMANOV, V. ROMANOV, DMITRIEV, KOBELEV, SERGHEIEV, PETROV, SEMENOV, VARJINSKY, ZAILICH, S. MOLOTZOV, UMANSKY, CHRISTAPSON, OGNEV, ORLIK, LAROZOV

Idoles polovtsiennes
MM. ROSAI, LEONTIEV, ORLOV, KREMNIEV, B. ROMANOV, KOTCHETOVSKY

Conductor M. NICHOLAS TCHEREPNIN

Stage Director: M. O. ALLEGRI
Principal Stage Manager: M. S. GRIGORIEV

LE SPECTRE DE LA ROSE

Choreographic Tableau from a poem by Th. GAUTIER, arranged by I. L. VAUDOYER
Music by C. M. WEBER, orchestrated by BERLIOZ
Scenes and Dances by M. FOKINE
Scenery and Costumes by L. BAKST

La jeune fille	Mme. KARSAVINA
Le Spectre de la Rose	M. NIJINSKY

[redacted]

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1911.

ANXIOUS RUSSIAN BALLET.

DRESSERS DETAINED AS ALIENS AT FOLKESTONE.

The Alien Immigration Act was put into operation so effectively at Folkestone yesterday that the Russian ballet, which is to make its début at Covent Garden this evening, was unable to give the dress rehearsal arranged to take place yesterday afternoon. The dancers were all in the theatre, the scenery was set, the properties and most of the costumes had arrived, but a batch of about twenty people who have charge of the wardrobe were held up as aliens on landing from Boulogne, and were not allowed to proceed to London.

The charming ballerinas were astonished that the law could deprive them of the pretty costumes destined to help them to captivate London. They had never been in England before, and knew not what might happen. Would there be no ballet for London?

Of course, the management of Covent Garden eventually learned what the trouble was. The only people who could pick out the wardrobes for the various ballets were not in London, and M. Serge de Diaghilew, who is in charge of the company, received the following telegram, signed by the immigration officer, Folkestone:—"Dressers of your ballet detained here. Do you guarantee that they will leave this country at the end of their engagement?"

The directors of Covent Garden at once telegraphed a guarantee to satisfy the immigration officer, but there was no dress rehearsal, and the little group of people in the stalls filed reluctantly out of the theatre as the orchestra started to play and the Russians prepared to go through the rehearsal in ordinary clothes instead of stage costumes.

PLOTS OF THE OPERAS AND BALLETS

CORONATION SEASON
COVENT GARDEN
1911

PORTRAITS AND BIOGRAPHIES

ROYAL OPERA AND IMPERIAL RUSSIAN BALLET

THE RUSSIAN BALLET

Organised by M. SERGE DE DIAGHILEW
Choreographic Director: M. MICHEL FOKINE
Artistic Director: M. ALEXANDRE BENOIS

I.

CLÉOPÂTRE

Choreographic Drama in One Act
Scenes and Dances by M. FOKINE
Music by A. ARENSKY

Prélude . . . . Music by S. TANEIEFF
Arrivée de Cléopâtre . Music by RIMSKY-KORSAKOV
Danse du Feu . . Music by GLINKA
Bacchanale . . . Music by GLAZUNOV
Danse Persane . . Music by M. MOUSSORGSKY

Scenery by M. L. BAKST, executed by M. ANISFELD
Costumes and Properties designed by M. L. BAKST

Ta-hor . . . Mmes. SOPHIE FEDOROVA
Cléopâtre . . . SERAPHIMA ASTAFIEVA
Esclave favorite de Cléopâtre KARSAVINA
Amoûn . . MM. ADOLF BOLM
Esclave favori de Cléopâtre NIJINSKY
Le Grand Prêtre du Temple JEAN KOUSSOV

Servantes du temple:
Mmes. MIECHKOVSKA, HOHLOVA, JULITZKA, KANDINA, ELPE, DECOMBE

Danseuses égyptiennes:
Mmes. VASSILEVSKA, BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., GULIUK, KOPETZINSKA, KLEMENTOVITCH, GONSIOROVSKA, JESERSKA

Danseurs égyptiens:
MM. S. MOLOTSOV, UMANSKY, ORLIK, JAKLIEL, GUDIN, MACHAT

Danseuses juives:
Mmes. GASHEVSKA, SASONOVA, FROMANN, LASCHILINA, M. VASSILIEVA, REISEN, LARIONOVA

Danseurs juifs:
MM. KOBELEFF, ZAILICH

Grecque: Mmes. NIJINSKA and SCHOLLAR
Mmes. CHERNYSHEVA, FROMAN, KONIETZKA, BIBER, HEINE, CHEREPANOVA

Grec: MM. SEMENOV, ALEXANDROV, SERGHEIEV, KOCHETOVSKY, ROMANOV, VARJINSKY

Scènes: MM. ROSAI, A. MOLOTSOV

Musiciens syriens, esclaves, suite de Cléopâtre, peuple, serviteurs du temple

THE action passes near a sanctuary in an oasis. Amoûn, a young noble, is in love with the Princess Ta-hor, who has been promised to him by the High Priest. The young couple are thinking of nothing but their love, when the Queen Cleopatra arrives to accomplish a vow made to a Goddess at the Temple.

Amoûn, falling wildly in love with her, has the audacity to send her a declaration of his love, wrapped round an arrow. Seized by the guards he is about to receive the just punishment of his boldness; but the Queen, touched by the young man's beauty, offers him an eternal night of love—after having realised his dreams he is to die. He refuses to listen to the pleadings of Ta-hor, who wishes to save him.

Dances take place round the couch of Cleopatra and Amoûn. But time passes, and all too soon Cleopatra gives her lover the cup of poison. She watches his agony and departs. The unhappy Ta-hor tries vainly to restore her faithless lover, and falls in despair upon his corpse.

II.

LES SYLPHIDES

Romantic Reverie in One Act by M. FOKINE
Music by CHOPIN
Orchestrated by GLAZOUNOV, LIADOV, TANEIEV, SOKOLOV and STRAVINSKY
Dances and Groups by M. FOKINE
Scenery and Costumes by A. BENOIS

Nocturne: MM. KARSAVINA, M. NIJINSKY, Mmes. SCHOLLAR, NIJINSKA, FROMAN, VASSILIEVSKA, CHEREPANOVA, BIBER, GASHEVSKA, YAKOVLEVA, GONSIOROVSKA, KULTCHITZKA, VESERSKA, JULITZKA, BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., HEINE, KOPETZINSKA, MIETCHKOVSKA, KLEMENTOVITCH, GULIUK, HOHLOVA, KONIETZKA, TCHERNICHEVA, SAZONOVA.

Valse: Mme. KARSAVINA
Mazurka: M. NIJINSKY
Valse: Mme. KARSAVINA and M. NIJINSKY
Mazurka: Mlle. NIJINSKA
Prélude: Mme. SCHOLLAR
Valse brillante:
Mmes. KARSAVINA, SCHOLLAR; M. NIJINSKY; and all the Corps de Ballet

A choreographic fantasy which has no particular dramatic subject. Amidst a scene of ruins, a series of classical dances take place with no purpose but their musical and choreographic interest.

III.

SCHEHERAZADE

Choreographic Drama by MM. L. BAKST and M. FOKINE
Music by RIMSKY-KORSAKOV
Dances and Scenes by M. MICHEL FOKINE
Scenery and Costumes designed by M. L. BAKST
Scenery executed by MM. BAKST, ANISFELD and ALLEGRI
Costumes executed by Mlle. MUELLE
Decorative Panel in the Prelude by M. V. SEROV

Zobéide . . . Mme. TAMARA KARSAVINA
The favourite Negro of Zobéide . MM. NIJINSKY
Schahriar, King of India and China ADOLF BOLM
Schahzeman, his Brother . . JEAN KOUSSOV
The Grand Eunuch . . CECCHETTI

Wives of the Sultan:
Mmes. ASTAFIEVA, GACHEVSKA, KONETSKA, YAKOVLEVA, TCHERNYCHEVA, HEINE, BARANOVITCH I., BARANOVITCH II., BIBER, KOULCHITSKA

First Ladies of the Harem:
Mmes. SCHOLLAR, NIJINSKA, TCHEREPANOVA, GONSIEROVSKA, KLEMENTOVITCH, ELPE, KOPYTSINSKA, VASSILEVSKA

Second Ladies of the Harem:
Mmes. MIETCHKOVSKA, GOULIOUK, SAZONOVA, KANDINA, M. VASSILIEVA, DECOMBE, LASTCHILINA

Odalisques: Mmes. SOPHIE FEDOROVA, FROMAN, REISEN

Negroes: MM. VARJINSKY, PETROV, SEMENOV, RAKHMANOV, ROMANOV, FROMANN, FEDOROV, LASTCHILINE, OUMANSKY, S. MOLOTSOV

Youths: MM. ROSAI, KOTCHETOVSKY, KOBELEV, A. MOLOTSOV, ORLOV, LEONTIEV, KREMNIEV, OULANOV

Courtiers, Aides-de-camp to the King, Suite to the King

ALL the luxurious poetry of the Thousand and One Nights is given in this choreographic drama, the work of the artist LEON BAKST, who has designed the scenery, the decorations and the costumes.

It is from the prologue of the famous Arabian tale from which RIMSKY-KORSAKOV drew the inspiration of one of his musical masterpieces.

When the curtain rises, the Shah is in his harem, and his brother comes to relate to him his matrimonial troubles. They both pretend to go hunting, and as soon as they have disappeared the eunuch opens, first a bronze door, through which enter negroes clothed in copper; then a silver door, which gives entry to other negroes attired in silver; and finally a golden door through which comes a negro, dressed entirely in gold, and with whom the Sultana is in love. In the midst of the dances the Shah returns, and at a sign from him all the culprits are massacred; the faithless wife dying at the feet of her sovereign.

Conductor . M. NICHOLAS TCHEREPNIN

Stage Director: M. O. ALLEGRI
Principal Stage Manager: M. S. GRIGORIEV

THE PERENNIAL "PIMPERNEL."

Revival of the Baroness Orczy and Montague Barstow's romantic play, "The Scarlet Pimpernel," at the New Theatre, on Monday, June 26.

Prince of Wales ..... Mr. Phillip Merivale
Sir Percy Blakeney ..... Mr. Fred Terry
Sir Andrew Ffoulkes ....Mr. Alfred Kendrick
Lord Anthony Dewhurst..Mr. Malcolm Cherry
Lord Grenville ..... Mr. Leslie Gordon
Chauvelin ..... Mr. Horace Hodges
Comte de Tournai..Mr. H. Humberston Wright
Vicomte de Tournai..Mr. R. Easten Pickering
Armand St. Just ..... Mr. Maurice Elvey
Hebert ..... Mr. James Berry
Jellyband ..... Mr. Frederick Groves
Jimmy Pitkin ..... Mr. John Beamish
Harry Waite ..... Mr. Anstruther
Brogard ..... Mr. J. Carter-Edwards
Captain of the Guard..Mr. Hermann Griffiths
Mr. Hempseed ..... Mr. George Dudley
Servant ..... Mr. Goodwin Nock
Aristocrat ..... Mr. Derrick Dennis
Chepy ..... Mr. Walter Armstrong
Citizen ..... Mr. Broughty Ferrie
Messenger ..... Mr. Hughbert Dane
Comtesse de Tournai ..Miss Claire Pauncefort
Suzanne de Touroai .. Miss Miriam Lewes
Sally Jellyband ..... Miss Olive Noble
Mere Brogard ..... Miss Marion Sterling
Lady Portarles .. Miss A. Lloyd Desmond
Lady Blakeney ..... Miss Julia Neilson

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

LYDIA YAVORSKA'S SEASON.

ON MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 26th, 1911,
AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.30.

THE PARISIENNE

A Translation of "LA PARISIENNE,"

A Comedy in Three Acts, by

HENRY BECQUE.

Clotilde	LYDIA YAVORSKA (Princess Bariatinsky)
Du Mesnil	F. KINSEY PEILE
Lafont	CHARLES BRYANT
Simpson	ERIC MATURIN
Adèle	AIMÉE DE BURGH

Scene—Paris. Clotilde's Sitting Room.

The Dresses and Coat by PAQUIN, Rue de la Paix and Dover St.

* PRECEDED BY

Pericles and Aspasia

A Classical Farce in One Act, by

W. L. COURTNEY.

Pericles	(Prime Minister of the Athenian Republic)	CHARLES BRYANT
Aspasia	(his Secretary and Typist)	AIMÉE DE BURGH
Alcibiades	(Pericles' Cousin, a very forward young man)	ERIC MATURIN
Voice	(of Pericles' Wife)	FRANCES WELSTEAD

Scene—Pericles' Study in his House at Athens.

Stage Manager	VAL. CUTHBERT
Assisted by	E. CRESFAN
Acting Manager	H. W. SANDHAM
Manager	FREDERICK WHELEN

The full flavour of Parisian comedy is preserved in the translation of Henry Becque's well-known piece, with which Mme. Lydia Yavorska began her season at the Royalty on Monday. The comedy is rendered into excellent English, the dialogue being neat and frequently epigrammatic, and continuous ripples of laughter proclaimed its entertaining qualities, though the British matron would be inclined to regard with severity the moral which the play preaches. The story has been made familiar to London playgoers through the medium of performances in the original French.

The three acts are concerned with the efforts of an unfaithful wife to cure a jealous lover by keeping him at a distance for several months, during which period he concludes she is coquetting with another. Instead, she is endeavouring to obtain a Government post for her husband, a mission in which she succeeds through encouraging the attentions of a youth whose mother has influence in high circles. Having thus at one stroke secured her husband's position and tamed her violent lover, the wife takes the latter back cheerfully to her heart.

The principal piece was preceded by a classical farce, in one act, hy W. L. Courtney, entitled "PERICLES AND ASPASIA."

Pericles .....Mr. Charles Bryant
Aspasia .....Miss Aimée de Burgh
Alcibiades .....Mr. Eric Maturin
Voice .....Miss Frances Welstead

Subtly satirical, and drolly conceived as is the "classical farce" by the well-known dramatic critic, its humour, we think, would be more apparent by the light of the study lamp than in front of the footlights. It is fresh and entertaining, however, to see the ancient Pericles, described as Prime Minister of the Athenian Republic, comporting himself amid modern surroundings, dictating his speeches to a typewriter, and submitting to comments favourable and unfavourable by that erudite young lady. No less startling is it to see all work pushed aside on the arrival of Alcibiades, who carries off "Spasy" to a music hall, leaving the politician to type his own ebullitions and to solve the domestic problem created by the departure of his cook.

Coronation
Gala Performance

By Command of

The King

Programme

Tuesday, June 27th, 1911,

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree

PENSIONS FOR ACTORS.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—As a result of the Coronation gala performance held at His Majesty's Theatre on June 27, the committee are able to announce that a net sum of £4,650 was realised.

The King has graciously approved of the suggestion made by Sir Herbert Tree, and supported by the committee, that this sum be handed over to form a fund to be called the "King George Pension Fund." The object of this fund will be to grant a pension for lifeti... to certain actors whose work, service, and needs entitle them to be so nominated. The committee hope that this sum may form the nucleus of a great fund which will commemorate the King's recognition of the stage on the occasion of his Coronation.

ARTHUR BOURCHIER
(Organising Secretary).

TO-NIGHT, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28TH, 1911, AT 8 O'CLOCK

HERBERT TRENCH

PRESENTS

ABOVE SUSPICION

A Play in Three Acts by SARDOU.

Exclusively authorised translation and adaptation by WILLIAM MORPETH.

(The sole acting rights in this play in the United Kingdom and America are the property of Herbert Trench.)

Gérard De Mayran	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
Mons. De Boismartel, President of the Court ...	Mr. C. AUBREY SMITH
Lavardin, Deputy Public Prosecutor	Mr. FISHER WHITE
Perissol, a Juryman	Mr. E. LYALL SWETE
Martial, a Gamekeeper	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Maxence	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Doctor Brochat	Mr. NORMAN PAGE
Ludolphe...	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT
Du Rosoy	Mr. L. HANRAY
Du Coudray	Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
Baron D'Articues	Mr. HORTON COOPER
Bonin	Mr. E. A. WARBURTON
Jules	Mr. GRENDON BENTLEY
Alexis	Mr. DICKSON-KENWIN
Roberte De Boismartel	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
Therese De Mayran	Miss ENID ROSE
Madame D'Orbesson	Miss ELLEN O'MALLEY
Madame De Valtamiers	Miss MARCELLE RONSARD
Madame De L'Estaque	Miss HELEN HAYE
Madame D'Articues	Miss VIVIENNE WHITAKER
Denise	Miss AMY LAMBORN

Ushers of the Court: Messrs. W. BLACK and P. LAMB.

Guests, Gendarmes, Servants, &c.: Messrs. J. O'BRIEN, E. H. LEVERETT, G. CLIFTON, K. BLACK, K. DENNYS, HATTON-SINCLAIR, G. WILKINSON, A. ACKERMAN, G. CARR. Misses ANNE CAREW, FAY FARREN, MABEL ADAIR, P. AUSTIN.

Act I.		Madame D'Orbesson's Salon at Aix.	Evening.
Act II. ...	Scene 1.	Monsieur De Boismartel's Drawing Room.	Morning.
	Scene 2.	The Same.	Evening.

(The Curtain will be lowered for 30 seconds between Scenes 1 and 2.)

Act III.		Monsieur De Boismartel's Study.	The same Evening.

The Play produced by E. LYALL SWETE.

Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ. Furniture by SPILLMAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Dresses by DEBENHAM & FREEBODY and Miss PITCHER. Miss Carlisle's Dresses by PAQUIN.
Liveries and Uniforms by W. CLARKSON, L. & H. NATHAN, and MORRIS ANGEL.

The Box Office (Mr. W. H. LEVERTON) is open daily from 10 to 10.
RESERVED SEATS from 2s. 6d. Telephone—GERRARD 3344.

AT 10.5

Miss SARA ALLGOOD

OF THE IRISH THEATRE

(By kind permission of LADY GREGORY and Mr. W. B. YATES)

Will Sing some Irish Folk Songs.

FOLLOWED AT 10.15 BY

THE GODS OF THE MOUNTAIN

Sardou's "Ferréol" was produced at the Gymnase Theatre, Paris, as far back as 1875; and it is perhaps hardly worth while to re-analyse the work, and to place the result side by side with a scenario of Mr. William Morpeth's version of the play, which was produced at the Haymarket Theatre on Wednesday. The situation of the hero, who has been in the company of the heroine—in compromising circumstances—at a particular time and place, and is prevented by fear of exposing her from giving valuable evidence, has often been used upon the stage, but it has seldom been exploited with more skill than by the great French constructionist.

The action opens at Aix, in the salon of one of the local "great ladies." There is a good deal of preliminary and preparatory dialogue, from which we gather that the leading personages of the neighbourhood are the elderly Monsieur De Boismartel, President of the Aix Court of Justice, and his young and charming wife, Roberte. An important trial for murder is taking place in the town, and is causing an immense sensation. An avaricious old rascal has been murdered on the highway near De Boismartel's house, and suspicion falls upon a certain M. d'Aigremont, who was deeply in debt to the deceased. D'Aigremont is now standing his trial in the court close by, and everyone hopes that he will get off.

Such is the position of affairs when Gérard de Mayran, Roberte's cousin, a young French officer, suddenly returns from Africa. He is deeply agitated, and we cannot comprehend why he is so moved until we hear the excited conversation which he has with Madame de Boismartel. By this we understand the agonising position in which Gérard finds himself. It appears that he witnessed the murder, which was done by a jealous gamekeeper named Martial. Gérard came to be on the spot at night thus wise: After ostensibly starting to join his regiment, he came surreptitiously to Aix to say a "last good-bye"—somewhat, it seems, of a non-platonic nature—to his cousin, whom he had loved before her "marriage of convenience" with Monsieur de Boismartel. Roberte was on the point of being false to her marriage vow, when the cry of her child, heard in a neighbouring room, recalled her to a sense of her wifely duty. She went to the child, and Gérard, finding the way by which he entered the house closed, was obliged to escape by another, and to make his way across the grounds. When he reached the high road, he saw the murder committed, but, realising the difficulty of explaining his presence if he were discovered, he ran away, and, taking the train at the station, rejoined his regiment in Africa. By chance, when at Biskra, he picked up a piece of old newspaper, read about the trial, and came home with all speed to try and save an innocent man from conviction.

The question, "What is to be done?" is discussed, excitedly, by Gérard and Roberte. It is obvious that if he attempt to give evidence to prove D'Aigremont's innocence, he—de Mayran—will be asked what he was doing near the high road at Aix at such an hour, and why he had not rejoined his regiment as he had pretended to; also, why, when he saw the murder committed, he did not give the alarm, but slunk away cowardly. The result will probably be that he himself will be put on his trial for the murder. On the other hand, if he "own up" as to his nocturnal visit to Roberte, who will believe it to have been paid in a pure and platonic spirit? So the almost-guilty couple discuss and debate in an agony of anxiety, and the audience wonder which way they—and the author—will find out of the "fix."

As Martial refuses to be bribed to tell the truth and emigrate, Gérard sees nothing to do except to take the crime upon his own shoulders, and he does so. But Lavardin, the deputy public prosecutor, is not to be deceived. The dénouement, after great distress has been endured by Gérard and Roberte, is reached by a blunder on the part of the real criminal. In a "juge d'instruction" scene, Martial, seeing Gérard present, fancies that the latter has disclosed the truth, and blurts out what is practically an admission of guilt. The escape of Gérard, however, does not prevent De Boismartel realising his wife's deviation from the path of duty; but, for the sake of the child, he forgives her.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON

TRENCH

Wednesday
Evening
June 28

Orchestra Stl 10/6

No 1, 21

This to be retained

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

A version by Mr. Herbert Dansey, of "Ferréol," the original of "Above Suspicion," was produced at the Royalty on February 26, 1904, with the author as M. de Meyrac, Mr. Dawson Milward as M. de Martel, Mr. Alfred Brydone as M. Lavardin, Mr. Lennox Pawle as M. Perissol, Mr. Norman M'Kinnel as Martial, Mrs. Maesmore Morris as Madame d'Ohresson, Miss Gertrude Burnett as Mlle. Thérèse d'Egremont, and Miss Kate Rorke as Madame de Martel.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Thursday

29/6/1911

Orch. Stall

H 16

This to be retained

TO-NIGHT, THURSDAY, JUNE 29th, at 8.45

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present, for the first time, a Comedy, in Three Acts, called

POMANDER WALK

By LOUIS N. PARKER.

Pomander Walk—Where is it? Close at hand,
Down Chiswick-way. Half-way to Fairyland.

JOHN SAYLE, TENTH BARON OTFORD	Mr. NORMAN FORBES
LIEUT. HON. JOHN SAYLE, R.N.	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
ADMIRAL SIR PETER ANTROBUS	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
JEROME BROOKE-HOSKYN, ESQ.	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPÉ
REV. JACOB STERNROYD, D.D., F.S.A.	Mr. RUDGE HARDING
MR. BASIL PRINGLE	Mr. FREDERICK CULLEY
JIM	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
THE MUFFIN MAN	Mr. C. B. KESTON
THE LAMPLIGHTER	Mr. L. BATCHELOR
THE EYESORE	Mr. PETER BLUNT
MADAME LUCIE LACHESNAIS	Miss WINIFRED EMERY
MLLE. MARJOLAINE LACHESNAIS	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
MRS. PAMELA POSKETT	Miss MAIDIE HOPE
MISS RUTH PENNYMINT	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
MISS BARBARA PENNYMINT	Miss ETHEL ROSS
NANETTE	Miss VERA COBURN
JANE	Miss M. DIXON
HON. CAROLINE THRING	Miss ETHEL RUSSELL
ANGELINA	Miss KATHLEEN JONES

ACT I. ... ... Saturday Afternoon, 25th May, 1805
ACT II. ... ... Saturday Morning, 1st June, 1805
ACT III. ... ... Monday Evening, 3rd June, 1805

Scenery by Mr. BRUCE SMITH. Costumes by Messrs. L. & H. NATHAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Preceded at 8.15 by a New Play, in One Act, called

TILL THE BELLS RING

A Comedy of Scottish Life

By GRAHAM MOFFAT

Characters in the order of their appearance:

AGGIE TURNBULL	Miss KATE MOFFAT
JANET STRUTHERS	Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT
JOHN SNODGRASS	Mr. GRAHAM MOFFAT
SAM'L DOWIE	Mr. WATSON HUME
ERCHIE DOWIE	Mr. PERCIVAL CLARK

Scene—A Remote Village in the West of Scotland.

In "Pomander Walk" Mr. Louis N. Parker has provided Mr. Cyril Maude with a play that will draw delighted audiences to the theatre on the Embankment for mooths to come. The reception the new comedy met with on Thursday evening recalls to mind the production of "Beauty and the Barge" by the same author, which was one of Mr. Maude's greatest successes at the Haymarket. Sweet was the adjective which the ladies mostly used in describing the new comedy, and they were right. "Pomander Walk" is a "sweet play." The charm of it begins with the delightfully written prologue, in which little Miss Kathleen Jones as a charity girl gives the keynote to the whole play in the couplet—

"Pomander Walk?" Where is it? Close at hand,
'Tis Chiswick way: half-way to Fairy Land.

The period is 1805, when little boys and girls who were naughty used to be told by their nursemaids that if they did not behave better "old Boney" would have them. Pomander Walk, down Chiswick, consists of a row of quaint old houses that face the flowing river, and are inhabited by some quaint people, the kind of folk, in fact, that Dickens might well have introduced into one of his novels. This little community is under the command of a peppery but generally genial old Admiral, Sir Peter Antrobus, retired from His Majesty's service, much against his own will. Mrs. Pamela Poskett, the widow of Alderman Poskett, lays siege to the heart of the Admiral, who has hitherto continued to escape the net of the designing female, and in the end the relic of the departed civic magnate succeeds in obtaining an offer of marriage from the old sea-dog. Then, also, there is a pompous gentleman who is known as Jerome Brooke-Hoskyn, whose wife, being in an interesting condition, is not seen. Other residents in "The Walk" are the Rev. Jacob Sternroyd, an enthusiastic antiquarian; Mr. Basil Pringle, a young musician, rather given to high-falutin' talk about his art; and Jim, an old sailor in attendance upon the Admiral. And the ladies. In addition to Mrs. Poskett, already mentioned, there is another attractive widow, Madame Lucie Lachesnais, who has a pretty seventeen-year-old daughter, named Marjolaine. Mis Ruth Pennymint is a cheery old maid, and her younger sister Barbara is a gushing damsel who is in love with the long-haired musician. But we must not forget "the Eyesore." Wearing a long overcoat and a broad-brimmed hat, this silent individual stands on the bank of the river all day fishing, but, according to the Admiral, never catching any fish. And little Angelina, the charity girl (who spoke the prologue), flits in and out of one of the quaint old houses.

That mischievous little god Cupid makes himself very busy in this quiet, out-of-the-way river retreat. First of all, Lieut. Sayle, son and heir of the tenth Baron Otford, taking a long row on the Thames, comes ashore at Pomander Walk in search of a drink, meets pretty Marjolaine, and falls in love with her at sight, and she with him. But his father is very angry when he learns from an anonymous corespondent that Jack is philandering with an unknown maiden, because, as he informs his old friend the Admiral, he wishes his son to marry the Hon. Caroline Thring, a wealthy heiress. It so happens that the Baron was a sweetheart of Madame Lachesnais when she was a girl, but he went away, and Lucie Prior married a Frenchman. There is a charming scene, in which the mother warns her daughter against falling in love, and with my lord's sailor son; but the mischief is already done. And Jack does not follow the example of his father. He remains faithful to his little sweetheart, and induces Mr. Sternroyd to procure a special licence for a speedy marriage; but in the meantime the Baron has induced the sweetheart of his youth to become his wife, and he accordingly no longer opposes the union of his son with Marjolaine. Ruth Pennymint, by means of a clever artifice in which a parrot is concerned, also obtains an avowal from the bashful musician, Basil Pringle. Before the end comes there is the amusing exposure and consequent discomfiture of Mr. Brooke Hoskyn, who is recognised by Lord Otford as a former butler and the present City Toast-master.

ROYAL OPERA

COVENT GARDEN

Proprietors . The Grand Opera Syndicate, Ltd.
General Manager . . . . . Mr. NEIL FORSYTH
Musical Director . . . . . Mr. PERCY PITT

PROGRAMME

OF THE

State Performance

BY ROYAL COMMAND

IN HONOUR OF THE

Coronation of King George the Fifth and Queen Mary

MONDAY, JUNE 26, 1911, AT 8.30 P.M.

GOD SAVE THE KING

AÏDA

VERDI

ACT II. SCENE 2 (A Gate of Thebes)

AÏDA . . . . MLLE. DESTINN
AMNERIS . . MME. KIRKBY LUNN
IL RÈ . . . M. HUBERDEAU
RADAMES . . . SIGNOR BASSI
AMONASRO . . . M. GILLY
RAMFIS . . SIGNOR SIBIRIAKOFF
PREMIÈRE DANSEUSE . . MLLE. OPALFVENS
Conductor . Signor CAMPANINI

ROMÉO ET JULIETTE

GOUNOD

ACT II. (A Garden. Juliette's Balcony)

JULIETTE . . . . MME. MELBA
GERTRUDE . MME. BÉRAT
ROMÉO . . . . . M. FRANZ
STÉPHANO . MISS BOOKER
GRÉGORIO . MR. BURKE
Conductor . Mr. PERCY PITT

IL BARBIERE DI SIVIGLIA

ROSSINI

ACT III. (Rosina's Studio)

ROSINA . . . MME. TETRAZZINI
BERTHA . . . . MME. BÉRAT
BARTOLO . . SIGNOR MALATESTA
ALMAVIVA . MR. JOHN McCORMACK
FIGARO . . SIGNOR SAMMARCO
BASILIO . . SIGNOR MARCOUX
Conductor . Signor PANIZZA

BALLET RUSSE

LE PAVILLON D'ARMIDE

TABLEAU 2. (Scene de l'Animation du Gobelin)

Ballet Pantomime de M. ALEXANDRE BENOIS
Musique de M. NICOLAS TCHEREPNIN

ARMIDE . . MME. KARSAVINA
LE VICOMTE DE BEAUGENCY SOUS LES TRAITS DE RENAUD } M. BOLM
LE MARQUIS SOUS LES TRAITS DU ROI-SORCIER HIDRAOT } M. CECCHETTI
L'ESCLAVE D'ARMIDE . M. NIJINSKY
CONFIDENTES D'ARMIDE { MME. WILL, MME. SCHOLLAR, MME. NIJINSKA, MME. VASSILIEVSKA
LE MAITRE DES CEREMONIES . M. KUSSOV
Conductor . M. TCHEREPNIN

ON MONDAY, JULY 3rd, AT 8.30,

By arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR HARDY,

Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON

PRODUCES

THE GREEN ELEPHANT

A New Play in Four Acts,
By MAURICE BARING.

The Characters are printed in the order of their appearance.

Lady Warburton	Miss GERTRUDE KINGSTON
Harper (a Maid)	Miss RITA EVERARD
Miss Letty Hart	Miss MARJORIE PATTERSON
Footman	Mr. D. DARRELL
Rupert Harvard	Mr. WILFRED FORSTER
Sir Henry Warburton, K.C.M.G. ..	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
Mrs. Motterway	Miss DARRAGH
Anthony Pollitt	Mr. CHARLES QUARTERMAINE
Butler	Mr. GEOFFREY HILL
Professor Norman Nutt	Mr. H. DE LANGE
John Betis	Mr. AUGUSTIN DUNCAN

The action of the Play takes place at Warburton Hall.

ACT I. .. .. Lady Warburton's Sitting Room, Sunday night.
ACT II. .. .. .. The Breakfast Room, Monday morning.
ACT III. .. .. The Hall, Tuesday afternoon.
ACT IV. .. .. Lady Warburton's Sitting Room, Tuesday Evening.
Time—The Present.

Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE	"Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
TWO SLAVONIC DANCES ...	... ...	Dvorak
"IN THE SHADOWS" ...	... ...	Finck
VALSE	... "Septembre"	Godin
DANCE	... "Little Billy"	Haines
ENTR'ACTE	"Songe Adoré"	Fletcher
"CORONATION MARCH" ...	... ...	Haines
"A WOODLAND SERENADE"	... ...

Pianoforte kindly supplied by BLÜTHNER & Co., Wigmore Street.

MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT AT 2.30.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - - Mr. W. W. KEENE
Assistant Stage Manager - - - - - - - - Mr. HUBERT BLOUNT

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.
Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Acting Manager - - - - - - - Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 3
Sole Lessee.
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
3/7/1911
STALL
E19
To be retained

Mr. Maurice Baring is a journalist, a diplomatist, and a novelist, and the author of "The Grey Stocking," which was produced at the Royalty Theatre in 1908. He has apparently aimed in the case of "The Green Elephant" at writing a piece something on the same lines as Sardou's "Scrap of Paper." Mr. Baring is witty and imaginative, and he has the gift of observation, but he wants that "sense of the theatre" which was the most conspicuous merit of the French playwright. The exposition of "The Green Elephant" is tedious. There is no need that before "coming to Hecuba" we should be bored by so much general conversation, puzzling rather than preparatory. An audience should never be puzzled; and, at times, "The Green Elephant" is decidedly puzzling. There should be no trouble in understanding the story, or in following the plot of a play; and Mr. Baring has given us both. Uncertainty as to an author's aim and intent is irritating; and sprightly dialogue and amusing characterisation will not compensate for troublesome omission to realise this. There is no doubt whatever as to Mr. Baring's cleverness; and it is a pity that he should not have collaborated with someone more experienced in stage technique, who would have supplied his deficiencies, and thus made valuable his gifts, which are real and enviable. His assistant might have pointed out to Mr. Baring that, in a detective play, one must be either serious and dramatic, or frivolous, farcical, and superficial. The piece of this class which is neither is in great danger of falling between two stools. The "green elephant" which is hunted through Mr. Baring's play is a jade ornament which is the property of Lady Warburton, a whimsical woman, who is married to a somewhat dull husband, who opposes her extravagance as best he can. He has just paid off £1,600 of her debts, but she has kept back a big bill, and is hard pressed for ready money. So she pawns the green elephant at a place in London, and allows it to be supposed that the ornament has been stolen from the safe in her bedroom in which she keeps her jewels.

Sir Henry Warburton has a great belief in the detective powers of a middle-aged American, a certain Professor Norman Nutt, who occupies the leisure of a literary life with amateur investigations of crime. Nutt has engaged as his secretary a young man named John Betis, who is as acute as the Professor is incompetent. Betis is a kind of Yankee Sherlock Holmes, and he displays his ability by soon diving to the bottom of the business. The person suspected of stealing the elephant is Anthony Pollitt, a young gambler who is desperately hard up. The key of the safe in which the elephant reposed was worn by Lady Warburton on her bracelet, which she left on a piano. Pollitt brought it to her room late at night, and is suspected of having taken advantage of his opportunity to purloin the ornament. his guilt being suspected both by Betis and by Pollitt's jealous fiancée, Mrs. Motterway, a widow. Lady Warburton is cross-examined by Nutt and Betis, without result, for she naturally encourages the idea of the theft; but Betis makes a shrewd guess at the truth, and tries to force her to confess by a sudden allusion to a "pawnticket." The busy Betis also cross-examines Lady Warburton's maid, and extracts from her some complicated and compromising evidence. There is fear that more of her ladyship's jewels may be stolen, and one of her bracelets is indeed missing. Betis finds it, and, with mysterious motives, substitutes it for a "gazing crystal" which a young lady named Letty Hart has asked Pollitt, who is leaving Warburton Hall, where the action of the play occurs, to take to London for her. Suspicion falling openly on Pollitt, he insists on his baggage being searched; and, opening the box, where he believes the crystal to be, extracts the bracelet, which he holds up before the astonished spectators. At this point Mrs. Motterway rushes in, and, with sobs and tears, takes upon herself the guilt of the thefts. Betis regains possession of the jewels, and places them in the Professor's despatch-box, inducing Letty Hart to "see" them there in her crystal. In the end it is supposed that Letty has stolen them while walking in her sleep.

Criterion
THEATRE
E
July 4
Orch. Stall
C 52

On Thursday, July 6th, 1911, at 8.45,

"THE GIRL WHO COULDN'T LIE,"

An Eccentric Comedy in Three Acts

By KEBLE HOWARD.

Upon which was based his Story of the same name published in 1908.

O what a tangled web we weave
Until we practise to deceive!

Mr. Huegall	The Father of a Family	Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
Mrs. Huegall	His Wife	Miss MARIE ILLINGTON
Arabella	His Eldest Daughter	Miss ELAINE SLEDDALL
Pauline	His Second Daughter	Miss MURIEL POPE
	By kind permission of Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie.
Ivy	His Third Daughter	Miss PEARL KEATS
Queenie	His Fourth Daughter	Miss VERA WRAY
Vincent	His Elder Son	Mr. EDMOND BREON
Maurice	His Younger Son	Miss MARGARET NYBLOC
Uncle Peter	His Brother-in-law	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Basil Marsh	His Prospective Son-in-law	Mr. ATHOL STEWART
Sarah	His Old Servant	Miss POLLIE EMERY
Minnie	His Young Servant	Miss EVA ROWLAND
	PAULINE'S OTHER VICTIMS.
Mrs. Fawcett	Wife of the Vicar	Miss HILDA HONISS
Miss Fawcett	Her Daughter	Miss VIOLET MAYO
Mrs. Sass	Wife of the Solicitor	Miss LYDIA RACHEL
Miss Sass	Her Sister-in-law	Miss RUHAMAH CATTON
Mrs. Odlum	Wife of the Doctor	Miss AGNES THOMAS
	By kind permission of Mr. Herbert Trench.
Miss Bute	Hon. Sec. of the "Sewing Sisters"	Miss LOLA DUNCAN
Miss Goodrich	Sister to Mrs. Odlum	Miss ELIZABETH DEXTER
Miss Billbrook	An unsuspecting Dear	Miss MARGARET OMAR
Mrs. Cosham	A playful Scold	Miss ISABEL OHMEAD
Miss Lugg	An Iconoclast	Miss RHODA BERESFORD
Lady Spratt		Mrs. A. B. TAPPING
Mrs. Callow	Keeper of a London Boarding House	Miss AGNES THOMAS
The Baroness	Her Honoured Guest	Miss RACHEL
Mrs. Lunch	Pauline's First Employer	Miss DUNCAN
Miss Copperstone	Pauline's Last Employer	Miss SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
	By kind permission of Mr. Robert Arthur.
Esther	Miss Copperstone's Maid	Miss HONISS

Act I.—Breakfast Room at Mr. Huegall's, Long Ditchington, Warwickshire. A Morning in July.
Act. II.—Drawing Room at Mr. Huegall's. The same Afternoon. Act. III.—Same as Act II. Four Months later.

Special Scenic Effect in Act III. by Joseph Harker.

To be Preceded on and after SATURDAY, JULY 8th, at 8.30, by

THE DRAMATIST AT HOME

A Comedy in One Act by KEBLE HOWARD.

Ralph (a newly discovered Dramatist) Mr. Franklin Dyall. Margery (his wife) Miss Hilda Honiss

Scene .. Ralph's Study. Time .. Night.

BOTH PLAYS REHEARSED BY THE AUTHOR.

Miss Pope's Dress in Second Act by Madame Lavalliere, 104, Wigmore Street. Miss Illington's Dresses by Harrod's, Ltd.
Miss Honiss's dress in "The Dramatist at Home" by Miss Cairé, Sloane Street.

Programme of Music.

Overture	"Die Fledermaus"	Johann Strauss	Entr'acte II.	a. Trepak	Tchaikowsky
Entr'acte I.	a. "España"	Chabrier-Waldteufel		b. Love Dance	Hoschna
	b. Fantaisie, "Carmen"	Bizet		c. Selection, "The Count of Luxembourg"	Lehár

Musical Director ... Mr. ALICK MACLEAN. Stage Manager ... Mr. LAWRENCE WHITE
Business Manager ... Mr. J. W. LETHBRIDGE.

"The Girl Who Couldn't Lie," recently produced at the Glasgow Repertory Theatre, is based upon the author's story of the same name published three years ago. A nice sense of humour and a capacity for neat character drawing have marked Mr. Kehle Howard's previous plays, and there is much that is clever and amusing in the eccentric comedy which was introduced to a London audience on Thursday evening.

The first act introduces the Huegall family at breakfast. It is quickly made evident that Mrs. Huegall rules the roast. The father of the family is indeed a feeble creature, with no will of his own; while his partner for life is the direct opposite. The eldest daughter, Arabella, is an unattractive girl, with no redeeming qualities, and Vincent, the eldest son, is an insipid, rather foolish, young man. Ivy, the third daughter, is the ordinary schoolgirl of fifteen, and Maurice and Queenie are mischievous and quarrelsome children. Mr. Huegall's second daughter, Pauline, the last to take her place at the family breakfast-table, at once proceeds to make a set speech, in the course of which she quotes Wordsworth and announces her intention of always telling the exact truth in future; she particularly denounces that horrible thing—the white lie. But her determination to be a truthful person at all costs, and on every occasion, surely does not justify her in calmly describing her parents and brothers and sisters in their true characters, beginning by showing up the weak points in her father, and calling her mother a liar. It is not surprising that Mrs. Huegall would have given her second daughter a slap but for the arrival of Basil Marsh, the young lawyer who is engaged to Pauline. She subects him to the same treatment as the members of her family, and as he is not prepared to support her as a champion of the truth and nothing but the truth, the engagement is abruptly broken off.

In the second act Pauline pursues the policy of the persistent truth-lover with disastrous results. At the invitation of her mother, the members of a society known as the "Sewing Sisters" assemble in the drawing-room, and vary the monotony of their occupation by talking scandal about the grand dame of the village, Lady Spratt. Pauline, who has escaped from her bedroom, where she had been locked in by Arabella, listens to the tittle-tattle, and repeats it to her ladyship on her arrival, causing the meeing to break up in a terrible state of horror and indignation. But this is not all. Mrs. Huegall's rich brother, Peter, makes his appearance, and Pauline gives her uncle to understand that he is only tolerated in the house because of the expectations of her parents that he will leave them some of his wealth; whereupon Uncle Peter departs in a temper, vowing that none of the family shall have a penny of his money.

Mrs. Huegall insists that Pauline shall leave home; and in the last act the adventures of "The Girl Who Couldn't Lie" are revealed by a series of scenes, in the first of which Pauline causes trouble at a London boarding-house by her plain speaking. She also gets dismissed from her situations as a governess and as companion to an invalid lady, and finally she finds her way home, penniless and quite ready to admit that her attempt to reform the world has proved a miserable failure. Her family receive the repentant Pauline with open arms, and the faithful Basil is ready to forget and forgive.

"PELLEAS AND MELISANDE" AT THE LYCEUM.

On Tuesday, July 11, at a Matinée Performance, Revival of the Play, in Five Acts, by Maurice Maeterlinck (translated by J. W. Mackail), entitled

"PELLEAS AND MELISANDE."

Arkel, King of Allemayne..Mr. James Hearn
Queen Genevieve .....Miss Alma Murray
Goland .....Mr. Arthur Wontner
Pelleas .....Mr. Martin Harvey
Yniold .....Miss Dorothy Burgess
Melisande .....Mrs. Patrick Campbell
A Doctor .....Mr. E. Stidwell
An Old Servant .....Mr. Percy Foster

In spite of the return of the heat wave and its accompanying discomforts a large audience was attracted to the Lyceum Theatre on Tuesday afternoon to witness the first of three performances of "Pelleas and Melisande," by Mr. Martin Harvey, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, and company. And it was a deeply interested and thoroughly appreciative audience that welcomed this revival of Maeterlinck's play, for the demonstration which followed the final fall of the curtain was quite remarkable in its intensity. In response to the enthusiastic and persistent applause Mr. Martin Harvey, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, and their associates in the performance appeared again and again to bow their acknowledgments. At length Mr. Martin Harvey came forward alone and gracefully expressed his very great gratification and his gratitude for the privilege of being associated with such distinguished artists, and for the wonderful reception the audience had given the play.

Maurice Maeterlinck had written several plays, showing delicate insight, romantic feeling, and dramatic force of a high order previous to the production, early in 1892, of "Pélléas et Mélisande," but in this piece he showed a marked advance in every respect as a dramatist; and Mr. J. W. Mackail, whose admirable English version was played on Tuesday, is enthusiastic in his estimate of the piece. He writes:—"Of this play, all but faultless in construction, more than faultless in its beauty, it is difficult to speak with tempered praise or in words that shall not seem extravagant. In virtue of mere beauty it stands among the masterpieces of literature." Mr. Mackail, whose judgment on such a point must be held in high respect, proceeds to point out that certain defects noticeable in Maeterlinck's earlier plays have disappeared. In "Pelleas and Melisande" the morbid tone is no longer dominant; the fantastic element is under control and the symbolism is set back to its proper plane.

In its original form the play was first performed in London in the summer of 1894 by M. Lugné-Poe and his company of French artists. Four years later the English version by Mr. J. W. Mackail was produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, with Mr. Forbes-Robertson as Pelleas and Mrs. Patrick Campbell as Melisande. The distinguished actress also appeared with Madame Sarah Bernhardt in October, 1904, at the Vaudeville, in a series of matinées of the play in French, this performance being repeated in the following July at the Coronet Theatre, and on a three weeks' tour through England, Ireland, and Scotland. There have been subsequent revivals of the play, which proved so powerful an attraction at the Lyceum on Tuesday afternoon.

TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY, JULY 18TH, 1911, AT 9 O'CLOCK

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH MR. CYRIL MAUDE.

Bunty Pulls the Strings

A Scottish Comedy in Three Acts

By GRAHAM MOFFAT.

(The characters are in the order of their appearance)

Rab Biggar	Mr. GEORGE TAWDE
Bunty Biggar	Miss KATE MOFFAT
Susie Simpson	Miss JEAN TURNBULL
Tammas Biggar	Mr. GRAHAM MOFFAT
Weelum Sprunt	Mr. WATSON HUME
Eelen Dunlop	Mrs. GRAHAM MOFFAT
Teenie Dunlop, Eelen's Niece	Miss EVA MCROBERTS
Jeemes Gibb, the Minister's Man	Mr. GEORGE GREIG
Maggie Mercer	Miss JEAN CADELL
Dan Birrell, the Policeman	Mr. SANDERSON MOFFAT

Elders, Shepherds, Villagers and other Kirk goers.

Period about 1860.

Act I.	Tammas Biggar's Parlour.	Sunday Morning.
Act II.	Lintiehaugh Kirkyard.	The same day.
Act III.	Same as Act I.	Monday Morning.

Costumes designed and made by MRS. GRAHAM MOFFAT.

Scenery painted by BRUCE SMITH.

Wigs by CLARKSON.

General Manager / Stage Manager } For Mr. CYRIL MAUDE { ALFRED TURNER / JOHN HARWOOD

BUSINESS MANAGER ... ... HORACE WATSON

PRECEDED AT 8.30 BY

THE TOUCH OF TRUTH

A Play in One Act

By H. M. WALBROOK.

Richard Cumberland	Mr. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Jimmy Bray	Mr. JOHN DEVERELL

Scene—Cumberland's Flat, 3 a.m.

HAYMARKET
Manager
HARRISON
TRENCH

Tuesday
Evening
July 18

Orchestra Stl 10/6
No. K 21

This ticket is issued subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast that may be considered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause

When Mr. Graham Moffat's Scottish comedy was played at a special matinée given at the Playhouse on the 4th inst. the piece met with such an exceedingly cordial reception that it was not in the least surprising to learn that arrangements had been made to give Bunty an opportunity of considerably extending the number of her admirers. The unanimous favour with which the Scotch lassie and the members of her family were received at the Playhouse was renewed by Tuesday evening's audience at the Haymarket. There was no difference of opinion about the merits of the comedy or of the players. Nothing more delightful than this picture of Scottish life and character has been seen in London for a long time. The plot itself may be dismissed as being of quite secondary importance. No one is much concerned whether Tammas is "hooked" by the husband-hunting spinster, Susie Simpson, or marries the forsaken sweetheart of years ago, Eelen Dunlop. For Tammas Biggar, the sanctimonious elder, loses our respect as he does that of his daughter; he is an old hypocrite, and if Susie had, to use his own metaphor, landed him in her matrimonial net, it would have only been a just punishment for his backslidings. What really interests and delights the audience is the wonderfully clever character-drawing. Combined with the natural dialogue, that is the secret of Mr. Graham Moffat's success as a dramatist; and then, of course, he is fortunate in having the support of such an excellent company. Not only are the characters real, but there are the little incidents of family life that are so cleverly introduced. Bunty, the female head of the humble household, is always in a bad temper on washing-day, starting her work at five o'clock in the morning, when "all the men folk are in bed snoring." Lazy Rab, discovering that the clock on the stairs differs considerably from the clock in the parlour, pleads this as an excuse for an extra half-hour in bed; Weelum Sprunt, talking in serious tone to his sweetheart Bunty, is suddenly told by her to blow his nose; such as these are the trifling incidents that give such an air of reality to the scenes in this remote Scottish village, dominated by that Puritanical spirit which still prevails in the land of cakes. When two lady visitors arrive quite unexpectedly, "This is the liveliest Sunday we've had for a long time!" cries Rab, the irreverant, and the audience roars with laughter at the aptness of the remark. Many more quotations might be given as evidence of the unforced humour of the dialogue.

The company of Scottish players now appearing in "Bunty Pulls the Strings" at the Haymarket Theatre is a happy family. Mr. Graham Moffatt is the author of the comedy; he plays the principal male part; his wife is another prominent member of the cast, which also iocludes his sister, Miss Kate Moffatt (the charming "Bunty"), and his brother, Mr. Sanderson Moffatt, as the policeman. Mrs. Graham Moffatt also designed and made the dresses of the crinoline period that are such an attractive feature of the play.

Mr. Graham Moffatt has been telling a "Morning Leader" representative that the ramifications of the Bunty family go even further than appears. Mr. Watson Hume, Bunty's "young man," is another brother of his, and another sister, Miss Winifred Moffatt, has a walking-on part in the kirkyard scene. There are six Moffatts in the cast, and none of them ever appeared at a London theatre before they went on at the Playhouse. "The entire cast," Mr. Moffatt added, "comes from the West of Scotland."

Mr. Moffatt's father was the pioneer of Scottish elocutionists, and did a big business touring Scotland with his entertainments. Sketches and one-act plays of his own invention have formed a large part of his material.

"When the Irish players appeared in Glasgow about four years ago," said Mr. Moffatt, "I became fired with the idea of establishing a Scottish National Theatre on the same lines. But the theatre in Scotland is so entirely worked from London that I made no headway. Thus, though 'Bunty' was written with a single eye on its production in Scotland, with never a thought of it going to London, I had to bring it here after all."

The character of "Bunty" was based upon Mr. Moffatt's mother. "Many of Bunty's sayings," Mr. Graham Moffatt states, "come straight from my mother's lips. As for the picture of the Scottish Sabbath given by the play, it is in no way exaggerated. Did it surprise you that it was considered wicked to have the window blinds up on Sunday? I assure you that even to have the front door open on the Sabbath was forbidden in some households. The day would begin with family prayers; then followed morning kirk, a cold dinner (cooked on the Saturday), kirk again in the afternoon, then preparation for the Bible class, the Bible class itself, family prayers again, and bed."

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, JULY 20, 1911.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.

RESIGNATION OF MR. HERBERT TRENCH.

Mr. Herbert Trench, director of the Haymarket Theatre—since it was leased from Mr. Frederick Harrison two years ago to be managed as a repertory theatre—has come to an arrangement with Lord Howard de Walden this week by which he has resigned his position.

Mr. Frederick Harrison has at the same time entered into an agreement whereby he will be associated with Lord Howard de Walden in the control of the Haymarket Theatre, and has now returned there to take up the post of director for the remaining year of the three for which he leased the theatre to Lord Howard de Walden and Mr. Stanley Cochrane. It can also be assumed that the association between Lord Howard de Walden and Mr. Harrison will be renewed twelve months from now.

Two years ago last April a great deal of excitement was caused by Mr. Herbert Trench's announcement in The Times that a company had been formed by a number of influential men to undertake a new theatrical enterprise—namely, to establish an English Repertory Theatre having a permanent house of its own in the Haymarket Theatre.

The repertory theatre scheme, however, did not materialise, a change of plans taking place a few weeks before the new management, under Mr. Trench, opened the Haymarket Theatre on September 18, 1909. A company nearly sufficient in number for a repertory theatre had been engaged, but the scheme was not, after all, considered feasible for a private organisation. The Haymarket Theatre has therefore under Mr. Trench been run as an ordinary theatre, in which everything has been done in a first-class and generous manner.

Under Mr. Harrison's directorship the same policy in selecting plays as has generally obtained at the Haymarket will be continued.

The following were the plays produced by Mr Trench:—

Performances.		Performances.
"King Lear"	34	"All That Matters"	45
"Don"	208	"Lady Patricia"	100
"Blue Bird"	274	"Above Suspicion"	18
"Priscilla Runs Away"	192	"Bunty Pulls the Strings"	—
"Blue Bird" (revival)	84

Four new one-act plays were also among the productions.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.

Mr. Stanley Cochrane, the co-founder with Lord Howard de Walden and Mr. Herbert Trench of the present management of the Haymarket Theatre, has resigned his place in the directorate and withdrawn his interest.

The idea of the directors, which was originated by Mr. Trench, was to establish a repertory theatre, and a large company was engaged. A little experience of the expense of working such an enterprise soon convinced Mr. Trench and the other two directors that it would be suicidal to cut short the run of a popular production, consequently the Haymarket Theatre almost immediately came into line again with the other theatres.

D. M. 9/11/1910

NEW HAYMARKET PLAYS.

Mr. Frederick Harrison, back again at the Haymarket Theatre, of which he has just resumed the management in succession to Mr. Herbert Trench, said yesterday that it was like old times to find himself faced with a pile of plays sent in to read. "I am very glad to be back in the theatre," he added. "I promise no revolution. There will, in fact, be no change from the general policy followed during the past two years, or during many years previously.

"I have new plays by unacted English authors who are entitled to be introduced to the London public. I have also a new play by Mr. Rudolf Besier, and I am also going to give Ibsen's "The Pretenders," which is one of the favourite plays of Lord Howard de Walden, with whom I am here associated. Generally speaking, I will try to give interesting plays, in a manner to satisfy the public, and in a manner conforming to what I believe is good management. It cannot always be done, I know, but at all events," said Mr. Harrison laughingly, "we can always try."

22/7/1911

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON.

Tuesday, July 25th, 1911, and Every Evening, at 8.45,

A New Play, in Four Acts, entitled.

SALLY BISHOP,

Dramatised by E TEMPLE THURSTON from his Novel.

John Hewitt Traill	Mr. DENNIS EADIE (By arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne & Eadie)
Charles Devenish	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
Mr. Arthur	Mr. A. W. BASKCOMB
Wooten	Mr. P. PERCIVAL CLARK
Mrs. Durlacher	Miss ELAINE INESCORT
Miss Standish Roe	Miss MAUD CRESSALL
Janet Hallard	Miss AGNES THOMAS (By kind permission of Mr. Herbert Trench)
Sally Bishop	Miss DAISY MARKHAM

ACT I. ... ... JANET'S STUDIO IN CAMDEN TOWN.

ACT II. ... ... TRAILL'S ROOM IN SAVILLE ROW.

ACT III. ... ... THE SAME.

(During this Act the curtain will be lowered for one minute to denote the elapse of four hours).

ACT IV. ... ... SALLY'S ROOM IN SAVILLE ROW.

Dresses by MARTIAL ARMAND, of Paris and New Bond Street, ALEXANDER of Baker Street, W., and THERESE, New Cavendish Street, W. Hats by ZYROT ET CIE. Wigs by CLARKSON

The Play Produced by Mr ALLAN AYNESWORTH

Preceded at 8.15 by

MISS DOROTHY VARICK

IN CHARACTER RECITALS AT THE PIANO.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

1	MARCH ...	"Winan's" ...	Clarke
2	(a) OVERTURE	"La Fille du Tambour-Major"	Offenbach
	(b) GAVOTTE	"Richelieu" ...	Phillips
3	(a) INTERMEZZO	"Au Palais" ...	Jouvin
	(b) GAVOTTE	"Manon" ...	Thomas
	(c) VALSE	"Reverie Rosette" ...	Grimston
4	(a) POLKA	"Philomene" ...	Christine
	(b) SERENADE FOR STRINGS	...	Pierne
5	(a) DREAM DANCE NO. 1	...	Coleridge Taylor
	(b) PIZZICATTI	...	Marke
	(c) VALSE	"Phedre" ...	Binnet

The "Celesta" and Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 30, Wigmore Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by BECHSTEIN & Co., 13 Wigmore Street, W.

Business Manager ... ... Mr. ARTHUR BERTRAM

Musical Conductor ... ... Mr. H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. DUNCAN McRAE

Matinee, Wednesday, August 2nd, and Every Wednesday at 3.

General Manager ... ... (for Mr. FRANK CURZON) ... ... Mr. F. B. VAUGHAN

173

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

EVERY EVENING at 7-45 p.m.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2-30.

THE HISTORICAL PLAY OF THE CENTURY,

A ROYAL DIVORCE

A STORY OF WATERLOO,

By W. G. Wills.

Presented by arrangement with W. W. Kelly.

Play Produced by Walter and Fredk. Melville.

Characters:

Napoleon, Emperor of the French	Mr. Frank Lister
Talleyrand, Minister of State	Mr. Fred Morgan
Marquis de Beaumont	Mr. J. C. Aubrey
General Augereau	Mr. H. Wilmot Jackson
Marshal Murat	Mr. Frank Tennant
Doctor Corvisart, the Emperor's Physician ...	Mr. Cecil Tresilian
Grimaud, Innkeeper at Genappe	Mr. J. T. Macmillan
Brigadier Jacques	Mr. Percy Baverstock
Brigadier Pierre	Mr. Louis Field
Lord Keith, the British Admiral	Mr. S. Major Jones
First Lieutenant, Attendant to Lord Keith ...	Mr. P. Morris
Officer of the Palace Guards	Mr. J. Rigby
Bob Royal, Sailor on the "Bellerophon" ...	Mr. Herbert Williams
Servant	Mr. W. Read
Marie Louise, Napoleon's Second Wife ...	Miss Edyth Olive
Stephanie de Beauharnais	Miss Gillian Scaife
Blanche d'Hervas	Miss Mary Dibley
Angelique de Varennes	Miss Madge Collier
The Little King of Rome	Little Mimi Sewell
Gouvernante of the King of Rome	Miss Mabel Mannering
Jeanne La Terreure	Miss Marie Johns
Mother Lomas	Miss Enid Ross
Empress Josephine, Napoleon's First Wife ...	Miss Ethel Warwick.

Men of the Old Guard, Officers, Citizens, Soldiers, &c.

ACT I. THE PALACE AT FONTAINEBLEAU.
"Here at thy feet I throw the Diadem I may not wear on sufferance."

ACT II. Scene 1—THE EMPEROR'S CABINET AT VERSAILLES.
Scene 2—MALMAISON. "Memory Lives."

ACT III. GARDEN AT THE TUILLERIES.

ACT IV. INN AT GENAPPE.
An Interval of One Minute only between the end of the Act and the Tableaux NAPOLEON AT WATERLOO.
1st Tableau THE BATTLE.
2nd Tableau THE CONQUEROR OVERTHROWN.

ACT V. PLYMOUTH HARBOUR (Time, 31st JULY, 1815).
NAPOLEON EXILED TO ST. HELENA.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Since this Play was originally produced, the last Act has been entirely re-written by GEORGE GERVOISE COLLINGHAM.

Costumes, Wigs, Uniforms, etc., expressly designed and executed by W. CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.

Furniture supplied by J. S. LYON, Holborn

The Scenery painted by the Lyceum Studio.

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE will play the following selections:—

Overture ...	... "Dragons du Villars" ...	...	Maillart
Selection ...	... "The Chocolate Soldier" ...	...	O. Straus
Entr'actes ...	... (a) Valse, "Dreaming" ...	...	A. Joyce
	(b) "Entrée du Boyards" ...	...	Halvorsen
Overture ...	... ... "1812" ...	...	Tschaikowsky
Selection ...	... "Pride of the Ocean" ...	...	J. Crook

Box Office (Edward Hackett) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617 7618 & 7619 (Gerrard)

Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 11s. 6d., £1 1s.

Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Grand Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. (Reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES

Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

"Sally Bishop" is an interesting example of a kind of piece which has become very popular of late—the domestic drama which deals with the struggles and sufferings of the clerk class in London. The sympathy which was at one time almost confined to the "hardy sons of toil" is now also afforded to the more delicate worker with pen and paper. It was this same spirit of sympathy which evoked "Kipps" and "Mr. Polly" from the pen of Mr. H. G. Wells. There are a familiarity and a realism about most of these plays which tell unmistakably with many in the pit, gallery, and upper boxes, and even in the comfortable balcony and the luxurious stalls the touch of nature is felt and acknowledged. This is distinctly the case with "Sally Bishop." The author, Mr. E. Temple Thurston, published his novel in 1908, and the present adaptation of it was produced at the King's Theatre, Glasgow, on May 15 last. It is simply, yet ingeniously, contrived, smartly and naturally written, and is acted au merveille. It is, at the same time, remarkable as being, we believe, the first modern English play in which the heroine deliberately, and after consideration, chooses the estate of concubinage. In the first act we see her quite overcome by the news that her lover has never thought of marrying her; in the second she walks into his chambers, and, after a certain amount of shamefaced hesitation, intimates that she is willing to become his mistress.

Decidedly the most amusing personage in the play is Janet Hallard, a female designer of lace patterns, who shares her "diggings" with the heroine. Janet, a plain, hard, unattractive woman, has for the simple and beautiful Sally one of those female friendships which the growing independence of woman has made common. Janet watches over her protegée with a jealous eye, and is disturbed by the news that Sally has started a platonic friendship with a young barrister named Traill, who has spoken to her on the top of an omnibus. Sally is all innocence and faith, but the story is not to be one of commonplace seduction. On the contrary, it is the man who, when he understands that the woman cherishes hopes of marriage, blames himself for having fostered them, owns his error, and tells her honestly that he does not believe in marriage, being, by nature and conviction, "unconventional." When he has gone, Sally cries bitterly, and there is a suggestion that she may even, as a last resource, accept a very vulgar and fatuous young bank clerk, who lives on the floor above.

She escapes this fate, however, though she finds what some will consider a worse. Traill is much troubled by his position with respect to his ancestral country house, which he has parted with to his married sister, Mrs. Durlacher, on conditions which allow of his re-purchasing it if he wants to do so. The Durlachers are in difficulties, and a mortgage on the estate will be foreclosed if Traill does not buy back the property. He has been rising rapidly in his profession; and his sister, wishing to reclaim him and make him respectable, has hopes of marrying him to a "fast" but sly young lady, Miss Standish Roe. Such is the situation when Sally, having reconsidered the situation between herself and Traill, comes to tell him, as modestly as may be, that she is willing to live with him as his mistress.

But the course of sexual irregularity is not to run smoothly. The sister increases her pressure on the brother, to whom she represents the injury which his mode of life is doing to his professional prospects. Traill is inclined to make Sally "an honest woman"; but an unfortunate incident convinces him of her unsuitability for the position of Mrs. Traill of Apsley Court. Just as he is about to take her out to dinner, his sister and her female friend call, and induce him to take them to a theatre instead. Sally flies into a fury of jealousy of Miss Roe, follows along the Strand the motor containing the party, and sits in the pit of the theatre to watch and study her rival. She is seen by Mrs. Durlacher and pointed out to Traill; and as, when she returns to his chambers, she tells a great many fibs to account for her evening, he takes the opportunity of telling her that they must part. Sally then goes to her bedroom and tries to commit suicide by turning on the gas; but Janet and Traill come in time to save the silly girl from self-destruction, and Traill, who has learnt from a friend Miss Standish Roe's real character, determines to marry Sally, who has, it must be owned, a very narrow escape—too narrow, indeed, to encourage other young typewriters to "start housekeeping" with bohemian barristers in the hope of ultimately entering county society.

THE LYCEUM.

On Wednesday, July 26, Revival of the Drama, in Five Acts, by W. G. Wills, entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

The late W. G. Wills's drama has been played many hundred times since it was first produced at the Avenue Theatre, Sunderland, on May 1, 1891, the London production following at the Olympic on Sept. 10 of the same year, with Mr. Murray Carson as Napoleon, Mr. J. A. Welch as Grimaud, Miss G. Esmood as Stephanie de Beauharnais, Miss Henrietta Watson as Jeanne La Terreure, and Miss Grace Hawthorne as the Empress Josephine. The play is such a household word in the suburbs and the provinces that it would seem absurd to enumerate its incidents or describe its story at this date. Who does not remember how Napoleon, urged by ambitious views, divorces Josephine in order to wed Marie Louise; how the two women meet, Josephine behaving nobly, and Marie Louise less admirably; how, when Napoleon's career is on the wane, and he has had to make his disastrous retreat from Moscow, the populace are about to wreak their vengeance on the Austrian woman, when Josephine nobly interferes and saves her rival; how the first wife is reconciled to Napoleon after Waterloo, Beaumont, an old lover of hers, being found guilty of treachery and condemned to be shot, Josephine refusing to plead for his life. The fifth act, which has been entirely re-written by Mr. George Gervoise Collingham, depicts the scene in Plymouth Harbour, when Napoleon appears before Lord Keith, the British Admiral, to learn the decision of the foreign powers. Josephine, who is present, is deeply affected on hearing that Napoleon is to be sent to St. Helena, and begs to be allowed to share his captivity, which, of course, is impossible. The curtain falls on their parting, a most touching scene.

ON MONDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1911, AT 8.15.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS,

By arrangement with DAVID BELASCO,

THE CONCERT,

A Comedy, in Three Acts, by HERMAN BAHR.

The English version by LEO DIETRICHSTEIN.

Gabor Arany		HENRY AINLEY
Helen Arany		IRENE VANBRUGH
Dr. Frederick Dallas		CHARLES BRYANT
Flora Dallas		MAY BLAYNEY
Patrick McGinnis (Caretaker of Arany's bungalow in the Catskills)		G. W. ANSON
Mrs. McGinnis		DORA DIEHL
Miss Merk ... ... (Arany's Secretary) ...		FLORENCE EDNEY
Eva Wharton	Arany's Pupils	MARGUERITE LESLIE
Fanny Martin		MARGARET PAUL
Claire Flower		NELL CARTER
Edith Gordon		MARGUERITE MAY
Natalie Moncrieff		BEATRICE HIGHLAND
Georgine Roland		VERITA VIVIEN
Laura Sage		EVANGELINE HILLIARD
Mrs. Lennon-Roch		ALMA DUDLEY
Miss Chatfield		SHEILA HESELTINE

D. Y. T.

28/8/1911

Orch. Stall

F18

No

DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, BELFAST, &c.

ACT I.—
Gabor Arany's Flat in Central Park West, New York.

ACTS II. & III.—
The Bungalow—Catskill Mountains.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE	"Nakiris Hochzeit"	Paul Lincke
SUITE FROM BALLET RUSSE ...	"Valse Lente" / "Marche Russe"	Alex Luigini
INTERMEZZO	"Omahe"	Hadyn Wood
SELECTION	"The Singing Girl"	Victor Herbert
TWO STEP	"Black and White"	Leo Cohnreich
MARCH	"East and West"	H. E. Haines

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

The Scenery painted by W. HANN & SON.

Miss Vanbrugh's dresses by MADAM HANDLEY-SEYMOUR, New Bond Street. Miss Blayney's by ALEXANDRA, Baker Street. Miss Leslie's and Miss May's by LUCILE, LIMITED, Hanover Square.

The Grand Piano supplied by BECHSTEIN.

General Manager ... ... W. LESTOCQ.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 6s.; Upper Circle, 4s.; Pit, 2s 6d.; Gallery, 1s

Business Manager ... ... JAMES W. MATHEWS.
Stage Manager ... ... DUNCAN McRAE.
Musical Director ... ... JOHN CROOK.

ICES, TEA and COFFEE can be had of the Attendants.

28/8/11

Arany is a pianist of genius, without the simplicity which is sometimes its concomitant, but with the irritability and peevishness of the spoilt child which his female adorers have made him. Not only are all his pupils, including a Mrs. Wharton, in love with him; even his plain and middle-aged secretary, Miss Merk, weeps over her hopeless passion for the idol. His wife, Helen, understands him, indulges him, makes allowance for the difficulty of his position, and "behaves beautifully" throughout.

The trouble comes when Mrs. Dallas, the erratic wife of a doctor, conceives a fatal passion for the pianist, and arranges to repair with him for a week-end to his bungalow in the Catskill Hills—the action takes place in New York. Dr. Dallas is a cool, philosophic, and affectionate man, and he argues that if his wife, of whom he is very fond, really loves Arany, and he is equally attached to her, he (Dallas) ought not to obstruct her path to happiness.

The second act takes place at Arany's bungalow, the caretakers of which are a gouty old man and his wife. Here Arany comes with Mrs. Dallas, who will not be too easily won, and keeps Arany at a certain distance. A humorous touch is the desire of the musician to escape from the worry and excitement of his career; and his pardonable egoism and his attitude towards the sex are neatly explained. Mrs. Dallas is high-strung, sensitive, and hysterical, and her vagaries at once begin to get on Arany's nerves. While he is recovering from the effects of one of her outbursts Helen arrives, and insists on entering the bedroom to which Mrs. Dallas has retired. Arany locks the door, and denies that there is anyone there, until the gouty servant gives him a hint that Mrs. Dallas has escaped, when the pianist hands his wife the key. He is just reproaching Helen bitterly for her suspicions, when Dr. Dallas enters, bearing in his arms his wife, who has sprained her ankle in leaping to the ground from the window.

Dallas and Helen, who have planned to give the offenders a lesson, then explain the object of their visit. They pretend that they long ago discovered that they were "affinities," and that they only wait to be certain that Mrs. Dallas and Arany love each other sincerely to set them free to marry. The culprits are too vain and too obstinate to confess the truth, and ardently affirm their love for each other. This matter settled, Arany and Helen sit down to their usual evening game of chess, Dallas looking on with interest, while Mrs. Dallas, who feels herself very much "out in the cold," weeps neglected at a window. Of course, in the end, the silly people of the quartette profit by the experience. Mrs. Arany explains to Mrs. Dallas the difficult position of the popular pianist and of a popular pianist's wife; and Arany, who, with all his cunning, is only a grown-up child, returns to his allegiance—at any rate, "till next time."

On Saturday, September 2nd, 1911, and every Evening at 8, will be produced

SHAKESPEARE'S

ROMEO AND JULIET

Escalus	(Prince of Verona)	Mr. WILLIAM DEVEREUX
Paris	(Kinsman to Prince)	Mr. HENRY C. HEWITT
Montague		Mr. JOHN BEAMISH
Capulet		Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE
Uncle to Capulet		Mr. ARTHUR HARE
Romeo	(Son to Montague)	Mr. VERNON STEEL
Mercutio		Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Benvolio		Mr. FREDERIC WORLOCK
Tybalt	(Nephew to Lady Capulet)	Mr. JAMES BERRY
Friar Laurence		Mr. J. FISHER WHITE
Balthasar	(Servant to Romeo)	Mr. E. STUART VINDEN
Peter	(Servant to Nurse)	Mr. FREDERIC SARGENT
An Apothecary		Mr. IVAN BERLYN
Page to Paris		Master GORDON GAY
Lady Montague		Miss EVELYN SHAW
Lady Capulet		Miss LENA HALLIDAY
Nurse to Juliet		Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
Chorus		Miss EVELYN CARLETON
Juliet		Miss NEILSON-TERRY

Play produced under the personal direction of Mr. FRED TERRY.

Synopsis of Scenery.

PAINTED BY JOSEPH HARKER

ACT I	Scene 1	A Street in Verona
	Scene 2	Ballroom in Capulet's House
ACT II	Scene 1	Capulet's Garden
	Scene 2	A Street in Verona
	Scene 3	Another part of Capulet's Garden
	Scene 4	Friar Laurence's Cell
	Scene 5	A Street in Verona
ACT III.	Scene 1	Juliet's Bedroom
	Scene 2	Friar Laurence's Cell
	Scene 3	Juliet's Bedroom
	Scene 4	Friar Laurence's Cell
	Scene 5	Juliet's Bedroom
ACT IV.	Scene 1	Outside the Walls of Mantua
	Scene 2	Tomb of the Capulets

By kind permission of Sir GEORGE DONALDSON, the Tableau Curtains used between the Acts are copied from original tapestry in his possession.

Dances by EDOUARD ESPINOSA. Fights arranged by M. BERTRAND. Properties and Costumes specially designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Scenery designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I., and JOSEPH HARKER. Scenery painted by JOSEPH HARKER.
The Incidental Music specially composed by Mr. SYDNEY FFOULKES. Costumes by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., King Street, Covent Garden.

Programme of Music.

Overture			S. Ffoulkes
After Act I.	March	"Romeo and Juliet"	Saint Saens
After Act II	Overture	"Héronique"	Massenet
After Act III.	Prelude	"Phédre"	Rachmaninoff

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. and £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s.
Upper Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Box Office open Daily from 10 to 10. Telephone No. 2473 Gerrard.

Musical Director	Mr. SYDNEY FFOULKES	Stage Manager	Mr. J. R. TURNBULL
Business Manager	Mr. SHAD FROST	Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. LOWTHER
General Manager			Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT

NEW THEATRE

ST. MARTIN'S LANE.

Under the Management of

MISS JULIA NEILSON.

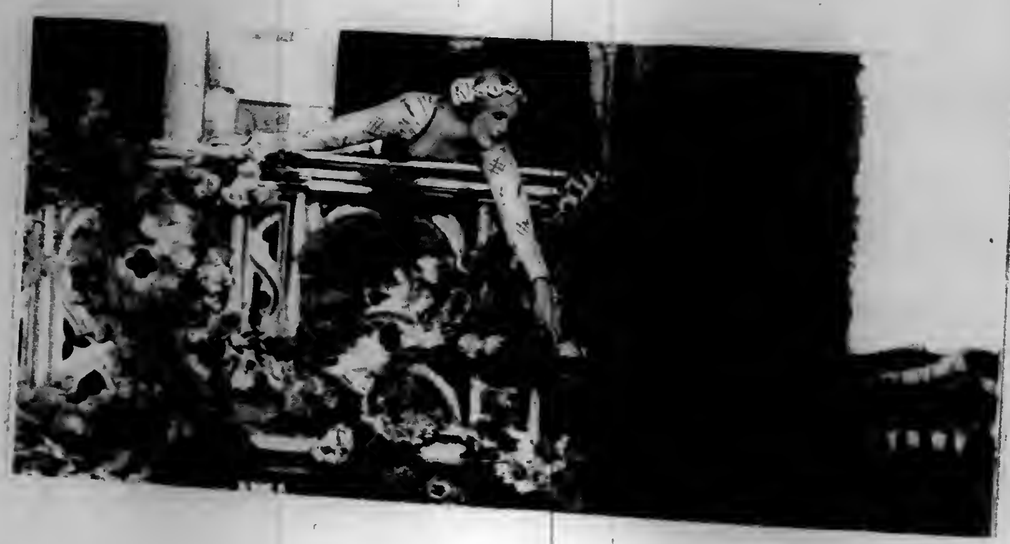
MR FRED TERRY

September 2nd, 1911.

To my Dear Friends, The Public.

I wish to say how great is my disappointment, owing to indisposition, at not being at my post to-night, but where I left off in the production my good friend Louis Calvert has taken and gathered up the threads, and, whilst leaving my work unaltered, has added to it his own enthusiasm and genius. So well and loyally has he laboured that I feel his work and presence will strengthen rather than weaken our production to-night, and that, though I shall regret not being among you, yet you will, I am sure, be the gainers.

I am, Dear Friends,



Your Servant,

FRED TERRY.

NOTICE.

On this night only CHORUS will be spoken by

MISS JULIA NEILSON.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8

SHAKESPEARE'S

MACBETH.

Duncan	(King of Scotland)	EDWARD O'NEILL
Malcolm	(his Sons)	BASIL GILL
Donaldbain	(his Sons)	E. ION SWINLEY
Macbeth	(Generals of the King's Army)	HERBERT TREE
Banquo	(Generals of the King's Army)	J. H. BARNES
Macduff	(Noblemen of Scotland)	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Lennox	(Noblemen of Scotland)	GUY B. RATHBONE
Ross	(Noblemen of Scotland)	PHILIP MERIVALE
Angus	(Noblemen of Scotland)	VICTOR WILTSHIRE
Fleance	(Son to Banquo)	CHARLIE THOMAS
Siward	(Earl of Northumberland, General of the English Forces)	WILLIAM BURCHILL
Seyton	(an Officer attending on Macbeth)	CYRIL SWORDER
A Wounded Soldier		ARTHUR GRANGER
A Porter		EDMUND GURNEY
An Old Man		FRANCIS CHAMIER
A Doctor		HENRY MORRELL
A Soldier		ALFRED H. GODDARD
Lady Macbeth		VIOLET VANBRUGH
Lady Macduff		VIVA BIRKETT
Gentlewoman	(attending on Lady Macbeth)	LAURA COWIE
Macduff's Son		ALFRED WILLMORE
Hecate		EVE BALFOUR
1st Witch		A. E. GEORGE
2nd Witch		ROSS SHORE
3rd Witch		FRANCES DILLON
1st Apparition		FRANK CONROY
2nd Apparition		WALTER SAUNDERS
3rd Apparition		SYDNEY OLIVER
Attendant to Lady Macbeth		WILLIAM ABINGDON
1st Murderer		S. A. COOKSON
2nd Murderer		CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY
3rd Murderer		EDMUND GOULDING

ACT I.

SCENE 1. The Witches' Flight—McCleery.
SCENE 2. A Barren Heath—McCleery.
SCENE 3. Corridor in the King's Palace—Craven.
SCENE 4. Room in Macbeth's Castle—Craven
SCENE 5. Before the Castle—Craven.
SCENE 6. Courtyard of the Castle—Harker.

(Interval 10 Minutes).

ACT II.

SCENE 1. Audience Chamber in the Castle—Harker.
SCENE 2. The Banqueting Hall—Harker.

(Interval 12 Minutes).

ACT III.

SCENE 1. The Witches' Cavern—McCleery.
SCENE 2. Lady Macduff's Orchard—Craven.
SCENE 3. An English Lane—Harker.
SCENE 4. Room in the Castle—McCleery.

(Interval 8 Minutes).

ACT IV.

SCENE 1. The Battlements—McCleery.
SCENE 2. Birnam Wood—McCleery.
SCENE 3. The Battlements—McCleery.

The Music has been specially composed by JOHN ST. A. JOHNSON.

The Costumes have been designed by PERCY ANDERSON and carried out by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C. Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

The Fights in Scene 3, Act 4 arranged by CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY.
The Dance in Scene 5, Act 2 by SIGNOR ROSI.

MATINEE WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 13th, and EVERY FOLLOWING WEDNESDAY AT 2.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Theatre has now been fitted throughout with the Ozonair System of Ventilation for the constant supply of pure fresh air, by Messrs. OZONAIR, LTD 96, Victoria Street, S.W.

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING. ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. WATTS) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE

In the present production of "Macbeth," it is not proposed to lay stress upon the historical aspect of the period, for beyond the fact that Shakespeare drew for his plot upon the chronicles of Holinshed, history is not an important factor of this drama. For the same reason, archæological detail of scenery and of costume is not ruthlessly insisted upon. Although a spirit of accuracy may be held to be commendable, indeed essential, in such plays as Henry VIII., King John, Richard II., and the other chronicle plays of Shakespeare, it will here be sufficient to indicate that the period of the production is broadly that of the eleventh century. It is recorded that David Garrick dressed Macbeth as a Scottish serjeant-major of his own day, while his colleague Mrs. Pritchard, appeared as Lady Macbeth in a court skirt over huge hoops, with powdered hair, surmounted by feathers. In gazing upon the pictures of the period, one cannot but feel that it is undesirable to levy so heavy a tax upon the imagination of latter-day audiences.

Our attempt in the present production will be to create for the spectator that awe-inspiring atmosphere which is suggested by the poet in so miraculous a manner; for although there are not lacking in the play scenes of sunlit realities, yet it is mainly set in the solemn splendour of the night in which the supernatural silences and sounds are felt and heard.

Macbeth is essentially a drama, and above all an acting drama. It tells its own story, it moves along with irresistible swiftness from the Propontic of its first act to the Hellespont of its last, never knowing retiring ebb, bearing on its rolling, relentless flood its own wreckage of fate, of ambition, of terror and remorse. It carries its own message.

The characters too, should explain themselves, for they are endowed with that basic simplicity which distinguishes most creations of genius—their obscurity often exists only in our point of view.

There has been much discussion, it is true, as to whether Macbeth was a brave soldier in whom ambition and conscience were at war; or whether he was a black-hearted villian who had plotted the murder of Duncan before he met the weird sisters. On this point the most distinguished critics appear to be at issue. Each student will draw his own conclusions. Among the many instructive works written upon the subject of Macbeth, none is more inspiring than that of Dr. Bradley; while, as a book of reference, I have found much useful information in the "Variorum Shakespeare," edited by Mr. Furness. Nor should I omit to mention the illuminating pamphlet by my friend J. Comyns Carr, for whose valuable assistance in the preparation of the present production I desire to make my grateful acknowledgement.

H. B. T.

MACBETH AS A SENTIMENTALIST.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—In the course of his genial strictures on things in general in The Daily Mail, Mr. Harry Furniss states that the most recent interpreter of "Macbeth" "makes him a sentimentalist." May I modestly claim that this does not accurately represent my view of the character, as Mr. Furniss will, I hope, admit if he will do me the honour of witnessing the performance?

Had Mr. Furniss stated that Macbeth was among other things a sentimentalist, I should not be disposed to disagree with him, for human nature is many-coloured—and Shakespeare was not exclusively a black and white artist.

HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

His Majesty's Theatre, S.W.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.

E

Sept. 7

Orch. Stall

J22

To be retained. No Bonnets allowed.

PRINCE OF WALES'

Sole Proprietors ...

THEATRE.

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON.

To-Night at 8.45,

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S New Production,

THE GREAT NAME,

A Comedy in Three Acts. Adapted from the German of VICTOR LEON & LEO FELD,

By CHARLES HAWTREY.

John Harcourt	(A Composer of Musical Comedy)	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Robert Brand		Mr. JAMES HEARN
Isaac Manhard	(A Music Publisher)	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Hubert Last	(An Author)	Mr. RONALD SQUIRE
Webber	(Conductor of the Imperial Orchestra)	Mr. CHAS. B. VAUGHAN
Tristan Brand	(Brand's Son)	Master SYDNEY SHERWOOD
Marks	(A Musical Critic)	Mr. HENRI LAURENT
Eversfield, Hilton, Wilburn	(Musicians of the Imperial Orchestra)	Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE, Mr. LIONEL WILLIAMS, Mr. FRANC STONEY
Andrews	(Orchestra Attendant at the Hall)	Mr. CHARLES E. VERNON
Cannard		Master NOEL COWARD
Stephanie Julius	(Companion to Mrs. Harcourt)	Miss LYDIA BILLBROOKE
Clara Brand	(Robert Brand's Wife)	Miss DOROTHY THOMAS
Senta Brand	(Brand's Daughter)	Miss ENID LESLIE
Anna	(Servant in Brand's House)	Miss MONA HARRISON (By permission of Geo. Edwardes, Esq.)
Mary	(Servant in Harcourt's House)	Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Lady Roderick	(Wife of City Knight)	Miss HILDA MOORE
Mrs. Harcourt	(John Harcourt's Mother)	Miss MARY RORKE
ACT I.	Orchard House, St. John's Wood.
ACT II.	Room in Flat 14, North Street, Hammersmith
ACT III.	The Artists' Room, Imperial Hall.

The Play Produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Ladies' Dresses by Mdme. NEVILLE, 11, Connaught Street, W. Scenes designed by Mr. ARTHUR DE LISSA.
Furniture and Decorations by Messrs. FRYERS, Ltd., 6, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.
Artificial Flowers by Messrs. A. & L. UHLMANN, of 171 and 173, Farringdon Road, E.C. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Preceded at 8 by a Comedy, in One Act, entitled

"A SENTIMENTAL CUSS,"

By DOUGLAS MURRAY.

Mr. Revill, a Sculptor	Mr. GERALD AMES
Mr. Quilter, an Author (Called 'Stilly' or 'Blaze')	Mr. C. B. VAUGHAN
Mr. Batson, an Architect (Called 'Bouncer')	Mr. FRANC STONEY
Mr. Hague, an Artist (Called 'Snapper')	Mr. CHARLES E. VERNON
Mr. Fearon, a Bond Street Dealer	Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
Kitty, Attendant at Bunsen's Studio	Miss MONA HARRISON

Scene: Joe Bunsen's Atelier off King's Road, Chelsea.
Time:—The Present.

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

FIRST MATINEE, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th, at 2.30

The Orchestra, under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music:—

1	MARCH	"The Spring Maid"	Reinhardt	4 (a)	VALSE	"The Spring Maid"
2	OVERTURE	"Les Hirondelles"	Hirschmann	(b)	INTERMEZZO	"Vilia" Lehar
3	(a) DANSE ORIENTALE	"Kismet"	Markes	5	MARCH	"Alexander's Rag Time Band" Berlin
	(b) IDYL	"Evening Breeze"	Langey		The Celesta & Mustel Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 80, Wigmore Street, W.
	(c) TWO STEP	"The Barber's Ball"	Cohan		Grand Pianoforte by BLUTHNER & Co. 13 Wigmore Street, W.

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... ... E. W. TARVER

PRICES—Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No.: Gerrard 7483.

General Manager ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.
(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.
(3) Where there is a Fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.
(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.
(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

"The Great Name" is the second play that Mr. Charles Hawtrey has adapted from the German, the first being "The Private Secretary." In "The Great Name" is told once again the pathetic story of neglected genius that fails to win for its possessor even a decent livelihood, much less the reward of mere talent applied in the right direction.

John Harcourt as the composer of musical comedies, has hit the taste of the public. His pieces run for hundreds of nights, and the street organ attests his wonderful popularity. But even the facile composer of melodies that figure in every popular programme at dance or dinner is not free from the worries which probably make themselves felt in a more acute form within the four walls of a theatre than in any other place. This distressing experience is amusingly illustrated in the first act, the scene of which is Orchard House, St. John's Wood, where John Harcourt resides with his mother. The five hundreth night of his latest success in musical comedy is about to be celebrated, and the composer has promised to act as conductor on this special occasion. But when the final rehearsal takes place the first violin is absent ill, and his deputy fails to please Harcourt, who makes some strong remarks, whereupon the quick-tempered substitute plainly tells the composer to play his own "hand-organ music," and marches out of the theatre. Then Harcourt learns that the violinist he has offended is no other than his old fellow student at the Academy, John Brand, whom he quite failed to recognise. Harcourt is not satisfied with the enviable position he holds as a composer of popular music; he is ambitious to have his name associated with more serious work. He has written a symphony of which he has great hopes, and the conductor of the famous Imperial Orchestra has readily promised to produce it.

The scene of the second act is a flat in an obscure street in Hammersmith, the residence of Robert Brand, his wife, and two children. Twenty years ago Clara Brand was courted by the then unknown John Harcourt, but they parted, and do not meet again until her old sweetheart finds his way to North-street, Hammersmith, with the object of apologising to his former friend and fellow student, for his conduct at the rehearsal. Now it so happens that Brand has also written a symphony which for many weary years he has tried in vain to get produced. Stephanie Julius, who acts as companion to Mrs. Harcourt, and also as private secretary and general adviser to her son, tells him plainly that in her opinion his own symphony is "no good." Eventually, Harcourt consents to father the work of Brand and to have the symphony produced under his own name, the composer joyfully agreeing to the proposal. His one object is that the musical public should have an opportunity of hearing and forming an opinion of the work.

In the artists' room at the Imperial Hall there is much excitement, for is not a new and serious composition by John Harcourt to be produced? Doubts are expressed as regards its success, and Harcourt himself is half inclined to withdraw the symphony from the programme. However, he eventually consents, and Mr. Isaac Manhard, a music publisher, and a typical representative of the Jewish race, signs a cheque for £1,000 in favour of the supposed composer of the new composition. The overture is heard, and there quickly follows the loud applause of a delighted audience. At the conclusion, Harcourt appears, and in a brief speech discloses the truth as to the authorship of the new symphony, bringing forward Brand to receive the honours of the evening. The play concludes with Harcourt's offer of marriage to Stephanie Julius, which she coyly accepts.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE
M
9/9/1911
STALL
B 1
This part to be retained
DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, GARRICK

"BABY MINE"

The New and Original Farce in Three Acts

By MARGARET MAYO

Preceded each Evening at 8.30, and at Matinees by

"A STORM IN A TEA SHOP"

By STAFFORD HILLIARD

Mrs. Foley	Miss ANNIE HILL
Mrs. Gerard	Miss LYNN FONTANNE
Rev. Hubert Payne	Mr. E. SPENCER GEACH
Mr. William Snaith	Mr. STAFFORD HILLIARD
Waitress	Miss CONSTANCE BACHNER

Scene—The Tea Rooms, Bond St., W. Time—An Afternoon in August

The Play Produced by MR. WEEDON GROSSMITH and THE AUTHOR

That rollicking farce, "Baby Mine," celebrated its 200th performance on Saturday, when it was preceded by a new one-act piece by Stafford Hilliard, a young member of Mr. Weedon Grossmith's company, entitled "A Storm in a Teashop." The playlet, which contains some mildly amusing situations and lines, tells how Mrs. Gerard, who has been given a £10-note by her husband, comes up to town to spend it, and incidentally to indulge in a quite innocent flirtation with Mr. William Snaith. She meets her admirer at some Bond-street tea-rooms, and soon discovers that she has lost her £10-note. Whereupon she immediately jumps to the conclusion that it has been stolen by a forbidding female, Mrs. Foley, and straightway annexes a note for a similar amount from that lady's bag in her temporary absence. Mrs. Foley has made an appointment at the tea-rooms with the Rev. Hubert Payne, a perfect stranger to her. If the curate had imagined that the lady has made the assignation with a view to flirtation, he is speedily disillusioned. She had seen by an advertisement that he was in need of funds for his soup-kitchen, and was willing to make a donation of £10 providing that she was allowed to manage it. The meek and mild curate agrees to all the suggestions of his severe companion, and then it is that she finds her £10-note gone. Her suspicions naturally fall on the young couple at the other table behind the screen; and she eventually accuses Mrs. Gerard of having stolen her note. Backed up by her companion, the indignant young lady talks of fetching a constable and having Mrs. Foley and her "accomplice" arrested, but calm is restored by the waitress arriving with Mrs. Gerard's note, which she had found in the passage. Mrs. Foley freezingly accepts the apologies of Mrs. Gerard, and the escorts shake hands, evidently of the opinion that their afternoon's tête-à-tête had been a failure. Miss

LESSEE AND MANAGER
ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

Shaftesbury Theatre

TO-NIGHT at 8 o'clock

THE MOUSMÉ

(THE MAIDS OF JAPAN)

By ALEX. M. THOMPSON and ROBERT COURTNEIDGE
Lyrics by ARTHUR WIMPERIS and PERCY GREENBANK
MUSIC by LIONEL MONCKTON and HOWARD TALBOT

General Okubo	Officers of the Japanese Army	Mr. GEORGE ELTON
Captain Yamaki		Mr. ERIC MATURIN
Captain Fujiwara		Mr. HARRY WELCHMAN
Lieutenant Makei		Mr. NELSON KEYS
Lieutenant Ito		Mr. CONINGSBY BRIERLEY
Hashimoto	(a Teahouse Keeper)	Mr. GEORGE HESTOR
Kieki	(a Priest	Mr. ALFRED H. MAJILTON
Tanaka	(a Journalist)	Mr. HARRY RAY
Suki	(a Fortune-teller)	Mr. DAN ROLYAT
Ko-Matsu (Little Pine-tree)	Miss SHEILA HAVES	Geisha: Ko-Yanagi (Little Willow) — Miss VIOLET MORÉNE
Ko-Fuji (Little Wisteria)	Miss GLADYS MILES	Geisha: Ko-Giku (Little Chrysanthemum) — Miss MAY ETHERIDGE
Umé (Plumblossom)		Miss CISSIE DEBENHAM
Mitsu	(Mistress of Geisha)	Miss ADA BLANCHE
Sume (Miss Purity)	Miss LESLIE GRAHAM	Tea Girls: Tsuru (Miss Crane) — Miss LOUIE LOCHNER
Tuki (Miss Snow)	Miss EVELYN LAURIE	Tea Girls: Gin (Miss Silver) — Miss MURIEL VARNA
Miyo Ko San	(Daughter of General Okubo and of his English Wife)	Miss CICELY COURTNEIDGE
Aki San (Miss Brightness)	Miss HOPE CHARTERIS	Villagers: Ko-Yuki (Old Woman) — Miss DOROTHY GARTH
Haru San (Miss Spring)	Miss HETTY KELLY	Villagers: Kanakei — Mr. F. W. HEARNE
Take San (Miss Bamboo)	Miss MAISIE SINCLAIR	Villagers: Jiubei — Mr. ARTHUR STROUD
		Villagers: Seifu — Mr. BERT STANMORE
O Hana San	(a Singer in the Temple)	Miss FLORENCE SMITHSON

The Music of "THE MOUSMÉ" is published by Messrs. CHAPPELL & Co., Ltd., 50, New Bond Street, London, W.

SHAFTESBURY
THEATRE

9/9/1911

Orch. Stall

F 8
TO RIGHT

Act I. - The Shrine at Tsumura

Act II. - The Teahouse of Sweet Content in Tokyo

Act III. - The Temple Grounds at Tsumura

The Scenery Designed and Painted by CONRAD TRITSCHLER.

The whole of the Costumes Designed and Supervised by C. WILHELM

The Dresses made by Mrs. WOOLCOTT.
Japanese Uniforms by SIMMONS, Covent Garden. Wigs by CLARKSON

The Play Produced by ROBERT COURTNEIDGE

Dances Arranged by ESPINOSA & ALFRED H. MAJILTON

Matinee every Wednesday at 2

To ensure the high quality of the Refreshments supplied, the Saloons are under the sole control of the Management of the Theatre.

OPERA GLASSES (by Negretti & Zambra) are on hire, and may be obtained from any of the Attendants at a charge of SIXPENCE for each performance

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., £2 12s. 6d. and £1 11s. 6d.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. and 6s.; Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.; Pit 2s. 6d.; Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office Open 10 to 10 | Doors Open at 7.30 p.m. | Telephones—Gerrard 6666 and 6867 | Commence at 8 p.m.

General Manager	... ...		Mr. EADE MONTEFIORE
Assistant Manager	.. Mr. W. BLOORE	Stage Manager	.. Mr. WALTER L. RIGNOLD
Musical Director	.. Mr. ARTHUR WOOD	Asst. Stage Manager	Mr. VERE MATTHEWS

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.—2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The great success attained by "The Arcadians" inclined one to doubt the probability of the same high standard of excellence being attained by its successor, but in the Japanese play "The Mousmé," which was played for the first time last Saturday night at the Shaftesbury Theatre, a worthy follower has been found. A charming story is told by Mr. Alex. Thompson and Mr. Robert Courtneidge, and Mr. Arthur Wimperis and Mr. Percy Greenbank's lyrics are prettily and pleasantly set to music by Mr. Lionel Monckton and Mr. Howard Talbot. The plot is interesting. O Hana San, a singer in the temple at the shrine of the goda, and her sister, Miyo Ko San, are both in love with Japanese officers. The former has given her heart to Captain Fujiwara, while the latter, although already betrothed by her father, General Okubo, Commander of the Japanese army, to Captain Yamaki, favours the lively and quick-tempered little Lieutenant Makei. The rascally Captain Yamaki, who would marry Miyo for the sake of securing her father's influence, also has designs on O Hana San, and endeavours to compromise Captain Fujiwara by "showing him up" with regard to a gambling debt. His plan is frustrated by the noble Hana, who gives herself in boud to Mitsu, a mistress of geishas, as a geisha, and so pays the sum demanded, the Captain being left to suppose that the debt has been settled by Miyo Ko San.

In the second act we are transported to the Tea House of Sweet Content in Tokyo, where O Hana San is the principal "geisha." Yamaki tries to cast opprobrium on Fujiwara's courage in action; but a certain Suki, the husband of the proprietress of the tea-house, turns up unexpectedly in time to vindicate the Captain's honour and expose the villain's schemes. An important item of the production is a musical-comedy earthquake, and very clever and realistic it is, the whole of the scenery suddenly collapsing amid a stampede, and another scene, the Temple Grounds at Tsumura, is a mass of beautiful cherry blossoms, which calls forth a burst of applause by its entrancing beauty.

SHAFTESBURY

THEATRE W.

THE MOUSMÉ

(THE MAIDS OF JAPAN)

Produced by Robert Courtneidge

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

Sole Lessee and Manager - Sir GEORGE ALEXANDER

EVERY EVENING at 8.30

WILL BE ACTED

THE OGRE

A NEW PLAY, IN THREE ACTS,

By HENRY ARTHUR JONES

Nicholas Fawsitt	...	GEORGE ALEXANDER
Bertie Fawsitt	...	A. E. MATTHEWS
Cosmo Paradine	...	C. M. HALLARD
Boyce ...	...	E. VIVIAN REYNOLDS
Pidduck	...	SYDNEY VALENTINE
Tony Sitgrave	...	OWEN NARES
Plummer	...	ARTHUR ROYSTON
Postman	...	G. TREVOR ROLLER
Dorinda Fawsitt	... (Fawsitt's Second Wife)	KATE CUTLER
Sylvia Fawsitt ...	...	GLADYS COOPER
Lilian Fawsitt ...	...	DOROTHY FANE
Victoria Quinton	... (The Goldfinch)	MAIDIE HOPE
Euphemia Boon	...	HENRIETTA LEVERETT
Mrs. Pidduck ...	...	Mrs. FAIRCLOUGH

Act I. ... Drawing-room at Nicholas Fawsitt's, 51, Portman Square
(Six Weeks elapse between Acts I. and II.)

Act II. ... ... The Hall at the Moat House, Paunder's Green
(Two Days elapse between Acts II. and III.)

Act III. ... ... The same as Act II.

THE SCENERY PAINTED BY MR. W. RAPHAEL.

A signal will be given from the stage by the sounding of a bell one minute before the curtain rises upon each Act.

The always-amusing story of Petruchio and Katherine is told once again in the latest play from the pen of the ever-delightful domestic playwright, Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, in the piece produced by Sir George Alexander at the St. James's Theatre last Monday.

In Mr. Jones's witty play, Petruchio, who is "something in the City," is a married man on, let us say, the sunny side of fifty, with a son and daughter of marriageable age, another daughter still in the "flapper" stage, and a second wife, Dorinda, whose age and charms are sufficiently indicated by the fact that she is addressed as Dorry by her husband's daughters and as "pretty belle-mère" by her son-in-law, Bertie. This hopeful quartette spend money faster than Nicholas Fawsitt can make it; and his occasional refusal to satisfy their ever-growing demands has gained him the title of "The Ogre."

The crisis is reached when Nicholas realises the necessity for immediate retrenchment, and finds to his dismay that his family has got very much "out of hand." Nicholas is a man of action; he sees the evil and forthwith takes steps to remedy it. He cancels his wife's engagements, advertises his town house "To Let," gives Bertie, the ne'er-do-well, "the kick," and they presto! he and his family are transported to the depths of the country, where he proposes to make drastic reforms in their expenditure and their manners. "Give a dog a bad name and hang him"—he has been styled "The Ogre" and he will prove himself one. In future, he informs his wife, he will "wear the breeches" metaphorically as well as actually, and in token thereof he nails above the mantelpiece "his flag, his ensign, his escutcheon," a pair of corduroy unmentionables! But his family have grown too much accustomed to having their own way to capitulate without resistance. True, his elder daughter does not hold out very long; but she is more of the "Bianca" type of woman; and with feminine insight she perceives that her own budding love affair may be nipped in the bud without the assistance of her father; so she goes over, very gracefully, to the enemy's camp. Lilian, the "flapper," is also shrewd enough to see that compromise is her best card to play. Bertie, left to himself, makes such a mess of things that he is only too glad of the Ogre's help on any terms; but "pretty belle-mère" Dorinda puts up a very good fight before finally she waves her flag of truce. She makes things just as uncomfortable for Nick as a perverse wife can do; the servants are dismissed, provisions run short, clean linen is hidden, and the house is turned topsy-turvey; and, as a last resource in her resistance, Dorinda, who has become a member of a society instituted to improve Society by limiting marriage to a period of five years—an amusing hit at certain recent proposals—threatens to leave Fawsitt and become the temporary spouse of one Cosmo Paradine. She goes off with him; but the philosophic Fawsitt is unmoved, and calmly continues his picture-hanging; and circumstances prevent Dorinda from carrying out her intention; for Paradine has already written to say that he declines to try the experiment, and has left for Switzerland, Fawsitt's knowledge of this accounting for his indifference.

The imperturbable Nicholas is full of resource, and has a valuable ally in the person of one Pidduck, who relates with gusto the story of an unruly wife whom he has tamed. With Pidduck's aid Nicholas feasts on mutton chops and ale, while his family starves. Dorinda cajoles, weeps, blusters, threatens, and "bluffs" in vain; Nicholas calmly pursues the "even tenor of his way," confident that he knows his pretty shrew better than she knows herself. And so it turns out; for it is a very crestfallen Dorinda who comes at last to plead for his forgiveness, a very submissive little wife who at last seeks shelter in her husband's arms.

G 148
STALLS
Sept 11.
1911
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE
RETAIN THIS HALF

"THE MINIATURE."

Play, in One Act, by Walter Prith, Produced at the St. James's on Friday, Sept. 22.

Henry Boyton .....Mr. Arthur Royston
Policeman X .....Mr. T. N. Wegnelin
Lady Mary Duncan ..Miss Lilian Braithwaite
Beadnell .....Miss Margaret Chute

The reward of virtue is depicted in the new play which was put on in front of "The Ogre" at the St. James's on the 22nd inst. The little work contains elements of uncertainty, but it interests throughout, and the attention of the audience is held in a manner unusual in a "curtain-raiser." Bearing unmistakable evidence of impecuniosity, Henry Boyton, who has seen better days, but has been reduced to sleeping on the Embankment, calls upon Lady Mary, the youthful widow of his old friend and college chum, with a view to obtaining assistance; but while waiting for her arrival gives way to a momentary temptation, and pockets a valuable miniature which lies in its case on the table. On her ladyship's arrival they talk over old times, and Boyton discloses the fact that the reason of his sudden absence from the house was his growing attachment to his friend's wife, leaving no alternative to an honourable man but to depart. Meanwhile, the disappearance of the miniature has been noted by the servant, who stealthily informs her mistress. The secret conversation has not, however, escaped the notice of Boyton, who, apparently with the intention of giving himself up, summons the police. The constable who enters proves to be the very one into whose charge Boyton had committed a sovereign he had discovered lying on the Embankment, and under the latter's searching cross-examination, the policeman admits that he kept the money to get his brother out of a "tight fix." The constable is sent away, Boyton hands back the miniature, and Lady Mary, realising that her visitor had succumbed to a severe temptation, calls the servant and tells her that the missing picture had been found lying hidden on the floor. Then she confesses that in the old days she had done all in her power to attract Boyton; that her husband had been aware of his friend's sacrifice; and that on his deathbed he had directed her to seek him out in order to make him his successor.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD

Proprietors - - - - - - - - - - Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore

Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON and GERALD DU MAURIER

On TUESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 12th, 1911, at 8 o'clock, and EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

THE PERPLEXED HUSBAND

A Comedy in Four Acts

By ALFRED SUTRO.

Thomas Pelling	of the Firm of Margell, Pelling & Co., Mincing Lane	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Clarence Woodhouse	.. .. ..	Mr. E. LYALL SWETE (By permission of FREDERICK HARRISON, Esq.)
Pitts	.. .. ..	Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
Sophie Pelling ..	.. .. ..	Miss ATHENE SEYLER
Dulcie Elstead ..	.. .. ..	Miss HENRIETTA WATSON
Agatha Margell ..	.. .. ..	Miss MAUDE MILLETT
Kalleia	.. .. ..	Miss ENID BELL

The Time is the present.

The action of the Play passes within three days, the Scenes being the Drawing-room and Library of Mr. Pelling's House in Regent's Park.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Gowns and Hats by REDFERN, Ltd., Conduit Street; Madame HUMBLE, Conduit Street; Madame BLANCQUERT, South Moulton Street; and Madame ALEXANDRA, Baker Street.
Furniture by D. L. ISAACS, 50 New Oxford Street, W.C.
Pianoforte supplied by CHAPPELL & Co., New Bond Street, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.
Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., 28 Haymarket, S.W.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

(First Matinee Saturday, September 16th, at 2.30.)

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	SELECTION	"Count of Luxembourg"	Franz Lehar
2.	a. PAS SEUL	"Pirouette"	Herman Finck
	b. SERENADE
	c. MAZURKE	"Clair de Lune"	Massenet
3.	a. VALSE from	"La Boulognaise"	Albert E Matt
	b. INTERMEZZO	"Rosen Kavalier"	Richard Strauss
4.	a. POLKA MARCHE	"The Love Dance"	Karl Hoschna
	b. TWO-STEP	"L'Amour qui rit" (Chanson de Fragson)	Christiné
		"Red Pepper"	Henry Lodge

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s, £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 8. Matinees at 2. Commence at 8.30. Matinees at 2.30.

Business Manager ... ... HERBERT JAY

It is not difficult to "poke fun" at any humane and aspiring aim. One has only to represent its professors as foolish, to exaggerate its pretensions, and to slightly distort its doctrines, and you have a funny picture which tickles everyone except those who have studied the subject. When Mrs. Pelling, in Mr. Sutro's play, compares herself to Nora in "The Doll's House" she is absurd, because she is unintelligent. Nora made the discovery that Torvald Helmer, whom she believed to love her unselfishly, and to be willing to sacrifice himself for her to any extent, was in reality a self-centred person, who would do nothing of the kind. Sophie Pelling has made no such discovery; her husband is a "real good fellow," and she is exactly on his level. Mr. Sutro's piece, therefore, does no damage, and is as harmless as it is diverting. The present female suffrage movement has a good side to it, and its virtues will remain when its exaggerations have exhausted themselves. It was the same with the art movement, the extravagances of which were satirised by the late W. S. Gilbert in "Patience." It raged and it subsided, leaving behind it a great improvement in our domestic furnitnre and decorations; and Mr. Sutro has had the happy thought of reviving the ridicule of the early eighties, and making his matter-of-fact man use the defunct craze as an antidote to the "up-to-date" creed.

A certain Thomas Pelling, a dry, sharp, good-natured man of business, comes home from Russia to his little wife Sophie. He finds her sadly changed. In his absence she has been converted to the creed of Woman's Equality with Man by Dulcie Elstead, a woman of advanced views, who has left her husband and children on principles founded on Ibsen's "Doll's House." It may well be doubted if the Scandinavian author's work has still power to "poison" the female mind; at any rate, Sophie Pelling has seen the play, and, having examined her own condition, fancies that she, like Nora Helmer, has been "living with a strange man." Unless a "miracle" happens, she proposes that she and Thomas shall occupy separate bedrooms, and he is at first quite overcome by this information. He falls back for counsel on Agatha Margell, the femme de bon-sens of the piece, who forms an effective contrast with the bitter and relentless Dulcie. Agatha advises him to introduce into his household a typewriter out of work, a Miss Green, who calls herself Kalleia and yearns to visit Athens and view the masterpiece of Praxiteles. In "Patience," the art tendencies of the personages were merely pretences; but Kalleia seems to be sincere in her adoration for the beautiful. In this she differs from the leader of the Suffragettes—a ponderous philosopher named Woodhouse, who only half believes in himself and his doctrines. Agatha's idea is that Pelling shall pretend that Kalleia has converted him to the worship of Art, and, by flirting with her, excite his wife's jealousy.

The result is only attained after some scenes of delightful comedy, embellished with most amusing dialogue. The young wife, of course, does grow jealous, and the climax is reached when Pelling, who has really grown a little fond of Kalleia, kisses her in a moment of impulse. This settles it, and Kalleia has to go. But she has fascinated and converted the philosopher, who departs with her for Athens, after recanting his feministic creed, the unfortunate Dulcie—for whom one cannot help feeling a little sorry—being left disconsolate.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE, LIMITED

MANAGING DIRECTOR, ARTHUR COLLINS.

Mr. Arthur Collins requests the pleasure of

M. J. Waters 's

Presence on

Thursday Evening, Sept. 14, 1911

At 7.30 o'clock

To witness the Production of

THE HOPE

A NEW AND ORIGINAL SPORTING DRAMA

BY

CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON

Should you or your representative be prevented from being present, the immediate return of the enclosed Ticket will be esteemed a favour.

SIDNEY SMITH,
Business Manager.

THE HOPE

BY

CECIL RALEIGH and HENRY HAMILTON

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS

Incidental Music Composed by J. M. GLOVER

Mr. CYRIL KEIGHTLEY	as	HAROLD, EARL OF NORCHESTER
Mr. LYSTON LYLE	,,	Capt. HECTOR GRANT
Mr. CHARLES ROCK	,,	BENJAMIN NETHERBY
Mr. FREDERICK ROSS	,,	MICHAEL WHITBURN
Mr. CECIL CAMERON	,,	NORMAN WAKE
Mr. FRANK ELLIOTT	,,	Capt. DENSHIRE
Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD	,,	LORD WILLIAM EARDLEY
Mr. H. HEWETSON	,,	Capt. KNOX
Mr. FRED GROVE	,,	LYDDON
Mr. DAVID DARRELL	,,	DUKE OF GRANTLY
Miss FANNY BROUGH	as	Mrs. BENDEMEER
Miss KATE RORKE	,,	COUNTESS OF NORCHESTER
Miss MADGE FABIAN	,,	OLIVE WHITBURN
Miss GWENDOLEN WREN	,,	LADY BARBARA MOWBRAY
Miss LESLIE STUART	,,	FLOWER GIRL
Miss JESSIE WINTER	,,	MAID
Miss EVELYN D'ALROY	AND as	BRENDA CARLYON
Mr. BERT MONKS	,,	Bailiff
Mr. EDWARD MORGAN	,,	Postman
Mr. FRANKS	,,	Auctioneer
Mr. JOHN BEW	,,	Servant

Mesdames C. ELLAM, L. CRIPPS, P. BIRKETT, A. VARRE, C. LITTLE, MARIE NORTH, E. LENNARD, G. BRITTON, I. DOONE, A. HEIN, G. MANNERS, C. MURRAY, M. O'FARRELL, HOUGHTON, MAPLESON, E. HUMBY.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

ACT I.

Scene 1. Exterior of Somerville College, Oxford.

Scene 2. THE PARK, CARYSFORD CHASE — R. McCleery

ACT II.

Scene 1. THE MALL, SIMLA

Scene 2. Ante-Room of Officers' Mess, Delhi

Scene 3. INTERIOR OF THE DEWAN KAS, DELHI — Henry Emden

ACT III.

Scene 1. Michael Whitburn's Office — [Bruce Smith

Scene 2. THE GARDEN, CARYSFORD CHASE — [Henry Emden

Scene 3. Room in the Victoria Club — [Bruce Smith

Scene 4. SALE RING, NEWMARKET

Scene 5. Exterior of Hotel Umberto, Massiglia

Scene 6. Room in Hotel Umberto — Henry Emden

Scene 7. THE EARTHQUAKE

ACT IV.

Scene 1. MICHAEL WHITBURN'S HOUSE, MAYFAIR — [R. McCleery

Scene 2. Phil Ferret's Office

Scene 3. Weighing Room, Epsom — Bruce Smith

Scene 4. THE DERBY

Business Manager ... ... SIDNEY SMITH

The Drury Lane autumn drama is a hardy annual which we expect just as we do the fall of the leaf or the Christmas pantomime. The experienced and resourceful Mr. Arthur Collins, with the aid of such clever colleagues as Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, the dramatists, and Messrs. Bruce Smith, Henry Emden, and R. McCleery, the scenic artists, seems to find no difficulty in satisfying the demands of the patrons of "Old Drury" in the way of popular drama. Once more has Mr. Collins been found quite equal to meet the responsibilities of his position as the managing-director of the famous house in Drury Lane, and he has accomplished the very difficult task of going one better in comparison with the autumn productions of previous years. Not only will London playgoers flock to the theatre, but their country cousins, holiday-making in the metropolis, will be seen there in their thousands.

The authors of the new sporting drama deserve every credit for their excellent work. A cleverly woven plot that gives scope for those wonderful stage effects for which Drury Lane is famous is a sine qua non for a successful production at the national theatre. The hero of the story, so ingeniously devised by Messrs. Raleigh and Hamilton, is Harold, Earl of Norchester, a worthy representative of the English nobility. He is, however, an impecunious peer, and his mother, the countess, finds it no easy matter to satisfy the numerous creditors. Needy aristocrats sometimes marry the daughters of wealthy Americans or Australians, who have made their "pile" in business, but Lord Norchester falls in love with Brenda Carlyon, who is as poor as himself and every bit as proud. In order to raise money to meet liabilities, nearly all the stock on the Norchester estate has been disposed of, but there still remain a couple of brood mares, one of which has a foal with an excellent pedigree. Brenda Carlyon refers to the colt as the Hope of the House, and later it is as "The Hope" that the horse is entered for the Derby. Lord Norchester asks Brenda to become his wife, and she consents, but this is immediately followed by a parting, orders having been received for the departure of his lordship's regiment for India, where another little war has broken out. Captain Hector Grant, the villain of the piece, makes it appear, by means of a trick with two letters, that Norchester has betrayed Brenda's friend, Olive Whitburn. But at Massiglia a terrific earthquake takes place, and the hotel in which Whitburn and his daughter and Brenda have met catches fire. Olive then confesses that Hector Grant was her lover, and the man who ruined her. Norchester, armed with a fireman's axe, breaks into the room and rescues the party at the risk of his own life. Of course, the story ends happily for everybody but the villain of the play. The earthquake scene is one of the most sensational and thrilling ever seen on the Drury Lane stage or elsewhere, and will surely be the talk of London, and the Derby scene, with its technical wonders, is irresistible.

MISS EVELYN D'ALROY

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Under the Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES
Proprietor - - - - - - Mr. J. H. LEIGH

By arrangement with Mr. J. H. LEIGH.

Saturday, September 16th, & Every Evening at 9
Matinees at 3

Mr. ARTHUR HARDY produces—

'MARRIED BY DEGREES'

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS,

By A. P. SINNETT.

Characters :

Lady Belmont	MRS. RUSS WHYTAL
Lucy
Leonora	Miss MAUD HOFFMAN
Mr. G. Winthorp, F.R.S.	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
Mr. Montague Gaskell	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Alice (Lady Belmont's Confidential Maid)	Miss POLLIE EMERY
Mrs. Waterhouse	Miss DOROTHY HAMMOND
Count Garciola	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
The Rev. Joseph Stewart	Mr. RUDGE HARDING
Mrs. Jones	Miss MABEL KNOWLES
Jane	Miss ANNE GASTON
Hotel Waiter	Mr. JAMES FORD

ACT I ... At Lady Belmont's House in Richmond
ACT II ... The Same
ACT III ... Private Sitting Room at the Saxe-Gotha Hotel, London
(Two months later)

The Orchestra under the direction of Brigata Bucalossi.

Programme of Music :

PRELUDE TO MOONSHINE	Brigata Bucalossi
SELECTION "The Quaker Girl"	Lionel Monckton
(a) "Chant sans Paroles"	Tschaikowsky
(b) "Martinique"	V. Herbert
(a) "Berceuse"	Frank Bridge
(b) "Little Gadabout"	G. Colin
(c) "Coeur Brisé"	Gillet
(a) "Marcietta"	Sudessi
(b) VALSE "Carissma"	Kenneth Douglas
MARCH OUT "Down in Jungle Town"

Dresses designed and executed by MADAME HAYWARD, New Bond Street.

Hats by BRADLEY & SONS, Chepstow Place, W.

Scenery by F L. SCHMITZ. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Furniture by OETZMANN'S.

The Grand Pianoforte used on stage supplied by J. B. CRAMER & Co., Ltd.

The Play produced by Mr. ARTHUR HARDY.

Preceded at 2.30 and 8.30 by

A FANTASTIC EPISODE

'MOONSHINE!'

With Music specially composed by BRIGATA BUCALOSSI.

Pierrot	Mr. H. A. SAINTSBURY
Harlequin	Mr. HUBERT WILLIS
Pierrette	Miss LAURIE FLOCKTON
SCENE	A Tent.

Produced by Mr. H. A. SAINSBURY.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30

Acting Manager Stage Manager Assistant Stage Manager	For Mr. Arthur Hardy	Mr. FRED PEMBERTON MR. W. W. KEENE Mr. GEORGE ROBINSON
Business Manrger	(For Mr. J. H. Leigh)	Mr. JAMES ANNING

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £3 3s. & £2 2s.; Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. & 5s.; Upper Circle, 4s.; Pit (Unreserved), 2s. 6d.; Gallery (Unreserved), 1s.

Box Office Telephone No. 848 Gerrard.

In accordance with the requirements of the London County Council

(a) The public may leave at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, and such doors must at that time be open.

(b) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept entirely free from chairs or any other obstructions.

(c) Persons must not be permitted to stand or sit in any of the intersecting gangways; and if standing be permitted in the gangways at the sides and rear of the seating, sufficient space must be left for persons to pass easily to and fro.

(d) The safety curtain must be lowered about the middle of th performance, so as to ensure its being in proper working order.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1911.

JEKYLL AND HYDE.

QUICK-CHANGE ARTISTE'S LOVE TROUBLES.

There was a time when the music-halls had sole claim on the services of the quick-change artiste. If the new comedy by Mr. A. P Sinnett, called "Married by Degrees," performed to a half-amused, half-bored audience at the Court Theatre on Saturday evening is to initiate a new vogue for that chameleon type, the stage will not for the first time have annexed a useful asset of the variety houses.

The sympathisers with the teachings of Theosophy had several notable representatives at the performance of this new but harmless variant of the "Jekyll and Hyde" drama. They may have taken it seriously enough, in spite of the amusement its unconscious humour provided for the sceptics, yet even their patience must have been sorely tried by the domestic adventures of Miss Vanuerby, possessed of a dual personality. Each nature got alternately about a three months' lease of life, and while as Lucy she took the opportunity to engage herself to one of her own countrymen, as Leonora she flirted with a foreigner.

It is to be presumed the author wished us to believe that this female Jekyll and Hyde was a possible character, but the audience were inclined to take it as a joke, and actually tittered. No reasonable playgoer could expect any actor to triumph over such material, not even such sound actors as Mr. Kenneth Douglas, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Clifton Alderson; Mr. Rudge Harding, and Miss Pellie Emery.

"Married by Degrees" was preceded by a one-act "Pierrot" play called "Moonshine." Its title will serve for an apt description.

J. W.

"LE MARIAGE DE MLLE. BEULEMANS."

Comedy in Three Acts, by MM. Frantz Fonson and Fernand Wicheler, played for the first time in England at the Globe Theatre on Saturday, September 16.

Beulemans ..... M. Jacque
Albert Delpierre ..... M. Jules Berry
Séraphin Meulemeester ..... M. Bernard
Meulemeester père ..... M. Ambreville
Delpierre père ..... M. Henriquet
Mostinckx ..... M. Decock
Le Secrétaire ..... M. Lenac
Le Trésorier ..... M. Delville
Suzanne Beulemans .. Mme. Gilberte Legrand
Mme. Beulemans ..... Mme. Charmal
Isabelle ..... Mme. Dorval
Octavie ..... Mme. Willy

Few experiences could be more beneficial to a tired and jaded playgoer than a visit to the Globe Theatre, where the three-act comedy "Le Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans," by MM. Frantz Fonson and Fernand Wicheler, was presented on Saturday evening last by arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman. The cast, which includes the original French exponents of the piece, is now seen to excellent advantage, the piece having had a long run on the Continent.

The story deals with the domestic life of a middle-class Belgian family, the head of which, Beulemans, is a wealthy Brussels brewer. His pretty and fascinating daughter, Suzanne, helps him in his office, assisted by Albert Delpierre, the son of a Paris merchant, who has been sent by his father to Belgium to gain an insight to the business methods there, and to further the father's enterprises. Albert is not at all happy in the Beulemans ménage. His Parisian manners are looked upon with contempt, and he would find life entirely unsupportable were it not for the kindness shown to him by Suzanne. Finally, owing to M. Beulemans' bad temper, which is somewhat aggravated by the failure of his candidature for the Presidency of an important Brussels society, Albert revolts, and is only persuaded to stay by the earnest supplication of Mlle. Beulemans.

He remains also because he loves Suzanne, and has become aware that Séraphin Meulemeester, her fiancé, has been carrying on a liaison with a girl of the people, to whom he owes the reparation of marriage. Suzanne hears of this, and, in an exquisitely pathetic interview with Séraphin, she tells him that their engagement must be at an end, convincing him that his duty lies in marrying the girl whom he has wronged.

The way thus lies open for Albert; and, under the tutelage of Suzanne, he endeavours to ingratiate himself with the Beulemans by adopting their way of speaking, and generally descending to their level. The last scene takes place at the committee rooms of the Brewers' Association, where a meeting is being held to elect an honorary President. Meulemeester père, who has quarrelled with the Beulemans owing to the breaking off of the marriage, has, out of pique, caused himself to be placed on the list of candidates in opposition to M. Beulemans. Albert, consumed with love for Suzanne, seizes the opportunity thus presented, and defends the candidature of M. Beulemans, making an eloquent and impassioned speech which turns the tide in the brewer's favour, and the latter is elected president, amid a scene of intense enthusiasm. M. Beulemans, who has now reached the acme of his ambition, takes Albert to his arms, makes him his partner in business, and is only too happy to receive him as a son-in-law.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Thursday

21/9/1911

Orch. Stall

H 16

This to be retained

To night, Thursday, September 21st, 1911, at 8.30

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present, for the First Time, an entirely new version of

RIP VAN WINKLE

By AUSTIN STRONG

A Fantasy founded on the Legend of the Kaatskill Mountains, made famous by Washington Irving and rare Joe Jefferson.

RIP VAN WINKLE		Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
DOMINIE VAN SHAICK		Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
SAMUEL STARBUCK	(a Blacksmith)	Mr. FREDERICK CULLEY
PETER VANDERDONK	(a Wheelwright)	Mr. GEORGE FOLEY
PETER DOBBS, SENIOR		Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
SI' DOBBS
HENRI PIERRE	(a Trapper)	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
ADOLPHUS STITCH		Mr. PETER BLUNT
AN INDIAN		Mr. ARTHUR JOY
OTTO VAN DE GRIFT		Mr. SIDNEY BARRY
HENDRICK HUDSON		Mr. WALTER BRODIE
GREEN-IN-THE-FACE		Mr. WILLIE ATOM
SERGEANT SAM SLOCUM		Mr. FRANK BRADLEY
CORPORAL BROM		Mr. C. B. KESTON
HANS VEDDER		Mr. BOBBIE ANDREWS
DOMINIE JOHN HUTCHINSON		Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
THE MOULD AND MILDEW MAN		Mr. H. PETERS
A MOHAWK SCOUT		Mr. JOHNSON BRINTON
MINNA VAN DE GRIFT	(in Act I.)	Miss MARGERY MAUDE
MINNA VAN DE GRIFT	(in Act III.)	Miss WINIFRED EMERY
MRS. STARBUCK		Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
LUCY		Miss RENEE MAYER
ROSA VAN TASSEL		Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY
MRS. FOLGER		Miss VIOLET LINGARD
DAME VAN STORM		Miss ETHEL RUSSELL
MARIE HEUVEL		Miss MARY WILSON
EVA GELDER		Miss ELSIE SPENCER
ALICE VAN OOSTEVEEN		Miss DOLLY STEPHENS
MEENIE		Miss MOYA NUGENT
ELSA VAN BRUNT		Miss GERTRUDE HANNE
FRITZ VAN BRUNT		Master NUGENT

RIP'S FIVE SENSES:—Misses GLADYS ELLAM, GRIMALDI, FURNIVALL, MARJORY DIXON and VERA COBURN.

Soldiers, Woodmen, Children, Villagers, Trappers, Gnomes, etc.

ACT I.	A Village in the Kaatskill Mountains (before the Revolution).		BRUCE SMITH
ACT II., Scene 1	A Forest Pool		W. T. HEMSLEY
Scene 2	The Ravine
Scene 3	The Strange Mountains
ACT III. (After the War of 1812).
Scene 1	The Oak Tree		W. T. HEMSLEY
Scene 2	The Village		BRUCE SMITH

The Curtain and Tableaux painted by W. T. HEMSLEY.

Music specially composed by JOHN ANSELL. Dances arranged by Miss INA PELLY.

Mystery Effects by Messrs. MASKELYNE & DEVANT.

Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN, from Designs by KARL. Wigs by CLARKSON.

WASHINGTON IRVING, writing of "RIP VAN WINKLE," says, "He used to tell his story to every stranger that arrived at Mr Dolittle's Hotel. He was observed at first to vary on some points every time he told it, which was, doubtless, owing to his having so recently awaked."

The following Programme of Music will be played:

SUITE ...	"Peer Gynt" ...	Grieg
BALLET SUITE	"Casse Noisette"	Tchaikowski

Stage Manager ... Mr. JOHN HARWOOD

Musical Director ... Mr. JOHN ANSELL

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

GENERAL MANAGER ... Mr. ALFRED TURNER

"RIP VAN WINKLE."

For the presentation at the Playhouse on September 21 of Mr. Austin Strong's new version of "Rip Van Winkle" Mr. Cyril Maude is bringing the whole proscenium and proscenium-arch into the picture of this forest story by entirely concealing that portion of the structure with make-believe pine-trees.

Stems and branches, admirable imitations of the real trees, frame the proscenium. The footlights are screened by branches, and the brass orchestra rails in the stalls are replaced by rustic woodwork.

Mr. Austin Strong, in his new dramatic version of the old legend of Rip Van Winkle, produced at the Playhouse, on Thursday evening, by Mr. Cyril Maude, has ventured on one important variation from Washington Irving's story. Rip is not married to a nagging wife, who certainly had good cause for complaint against her lazy, drunken husband, but in her place Mr. Strong has given him a young and pretty sweetheart. This alteration adds to the romantic interest of the tale, at the expense of some humorous passages in the first act, the scene of which is the village near the mountains. Rip, on his first entrance, has just been released from confinement in a dilapidated tool-shed, as a punishment for drunkenness, and the Dominie strictly forbids the villagers to have anything to do with the vagabond. And so he is given the cold shoulder when he makes his appearance amongst his neighbours, both young and old taking no notice of the man whom their minister has denounced as a "public disgrace." But the children, who have a warm affection for reprobate Rip, cannot long be controlled, and, setting their elders at defiance, they give him a genuine welcome, while they gather round to listen to his whimsical account of the prison from which he has just come. Then Minna appears. She is in love with Rip, and has hopes that he will mend his ways. Her father, a wealthy inhabitant of the village, mysteriously disappeared some years ago; he was seen going in the direction of the mountains, and he never returned. Rip begs his sweetheart to leave the village with him, get married, and then find a home in the mountains. Minna consents, but, with the object of applying a final test that he really intends to turn over a new leaf, she sets him the task of cleaning an old, discoloured copper-bowl. Rip undertakes to render it so bright that it "will shame the sun," but when left alone a strange visitor makes his appearance—a dwarfish creature of curious aspect, who never utters a word, conveying his meaning by gesture. Lightly clad damsels, who are representatives of his five senses, dance around him, and when Rip discovers a bottle of liquor all his good resolutions of reform go by the board. Minna, on her return, finds to her grief that her lover is hopelessly intoxicated, and, his task unfinished, refuses to accompany him. In despair, he follows the dwarfish old man to the distant mountains, from which comes ever and anon the sound of thunder.

Arrived at his destination, Rip is welcomed by the ghostly Hudson and his spectral crew, and also meets Minna's father, Van de Grift. Permitted to have one wish fulfilled, Rip is enabled to release the old man from his cruel bondage; but, as a ponishment for the sin of drunkenness, Van Winkle is sentenced to the sleep of fifty years. When at the expiration of that period he returns to the village, the only one who recognises the old man, all tattered and torn, is the faithful Minna, who has waited all these years for the return of the reprobate.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd, AT 8 O'CLOCK, AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.30,

MR. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH

WILL PRODUCE BY ARRANGEMENT WITH

SIR JOHN HARE

THE MARIONETTES

A Comedy in Four Acts by PIERRE WOLFF.

The English Version by GLADYS UNGER.

Monsieur de Ferney	JOHN HARE
Marquis Roger de Monclars	ARTHUR WONTNER
Raymond Nizerolles	C. M. LOWNE
Pierre Vareine	GODFREY TEARLE
Bonnaire	RUPERT LUMLEY
Duc de Ganges	A. S. HOMEWOOD
Valmont	ROBERT HORTON
Bertrand	LEWIS FIELDER
Marquise Fernande de Monclars	MARIE LOHR
Lucienne de Jussy	BEATRICE BECKLEY
Baronne Durieu	MARIE HASSELL
Madame Briey	GWENDOLINE BROGDEN

Act I.	At Roger de Monclars' House in Paris
Act II. ..	At Raymond Nizerolles' House in Paris. Five weeks later
Act III.	At Roger de Monclars' House. Four weeks later
Act IV.	Same as Act III. Next morning

The Play Produced under the Direction of DION BOUCICAULT

The Scenery painted by W. HANN & SON.

Miss Lohr's Dresses designed and made by LUCILE, Limited, 23 Hanover Square.

Miss Beckley's Hat and Head-dress by the MAISON LEWIS.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES.

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

	OVERTURE, "La Belle Galathée"	Suppé
After Act I. —	SELECTION, "Madame Butterfly"	Puccini
After Act II.	1. DANCE, "Malagueña"	Moskowski
	2. ENTR'ACTE, "An Eastern Romance"	Haines
	3. SPANISH DANCE	Moskowski
After Act. III.	1. MORCEAU LYRIQUE, "Songe Adoré"	Fletcher
	2. VALSE, "La Belle au Bois dormant"	Tschaikowsky
	MARCH, "L'Amour qui rit"	Christiné

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager - - - - - - - Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE

The structural alterations and decorations in front of the house have been designed by Messrs. WHITING & PETO, and carried out by Messrs. BATTLEY, SONS & HOLNESS.

Business Manager - - - - - - Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE 23

Sole Lessee
Mr. Arthur Chudleigh

23/9/1911

STALL

119

(to be retained)

"The Marionettes," a comedy in four acts by Pierre Wolff, adapted by Gladys Unger, and produced by Mr. Arthur Chudleigh by arrangement with Sir John on Saturday night at the Criterion Theatre, we are told once again, and in very pleasant fashion, the story of the unloved young wife who brings all her woman's wits to bear on the solving of the problem how to win her husband's love when he has frankly and somewhat brutally avowed his detestation of her. Poor little Marquise Fernande de Monclars is the best of shy country mice when she first comes to town with the husband she vainly adores, and who has married her at his mother's bidding because the only alternative is to him revolting perjury. The Marquis Roger de Monclars has no intention of allowing his dowdy little wife to interfere with the gay bachelor life he has led heretofore in Paris, and he tells her very plainly that he finds her repellent, and that their only chance of happiness is that each shall go their own way regardless of the existence of the other. The pride of country mouse Fernande is touched, her husband's utter indifference stings her to revolt, she drops the rôle of loving, submissive wife; virtue and goodness are at a discount in Paris; very well, she will bring more saleable goods to market, physical charms and coquetry are at a premium: she has the first, the second she can acquire. The gay husband returns from a merry little jaunt ta Lucerne with an old flame to find that in five weeks his despised little wife has blossomed into the gayest of chic mondaines, that she has a little court of devoted admirers at her beck and call, and that the love he once bore has apparently died of neglect in his absence. Following the traditional habit of mankind, Roger finds his wife eminently desirable when he imagines he has lost her for ever, and the more indifferent she appears to be to him the fiercer grows his passion. The climax is reached when he discovers that one of her admirers (he does not know which) is urging her to fly with him, and that Fernande, not yet convinced of the sincerity of her husband's love, is hesitating. At this crisis there is every prospect of things going irretrievably wrong for the young couple, but fortunately they have a guardian angel in the house, an old uncle of Fernande's, who has been both mother and father to her in her infancy. He it is who, by his loving wisdom, shows the little Marquise that her husband's heart is indeed her own, and that for her, in spite of everything, Roger is the only man with whom she can hope for happiness.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1911.

SIR JOHN HARE.

REAPPEARANCE AT THE COMEDY THEATRE.

There is a background of French drawing-rooms to the story of a "marriage of convenience" that forms the plot of the four-act play by M. Pierre Wolff, called "The Marionettes," produced by Mr. Arthur Chudleigh at the Comedy Theatre on Saturday evening.

The environment and the story are familiar enough. Given the first act, the majority of hardened theatre-goers would volunteer to write a fairly faithful account of the remaining three. In this case they would have made a small mistake, for although it is true that in the last act the marquis is madly in love with his young and charming wife, the manner of his conversion is not told wholly on the familiar lines. There is a refinement too, an absence of sarcasm, in M. Wolff's play that to a very considerable extent differentiates this oft-told story from others starting on much the same lines.

The domestic history of little Fernande is told with sincerity. She is a convent-bred country girl, and married the marquis when his mother, believing it was a good match, commanded the wedding, and sent the young couple to Paris. There in the great town house of her husband poor Fernande, dressed with the simplicity of a country gentlewoman twice her age, is a pathetic figure, ignored by her dashing young husband, broken hearted, with no companion but the old uncle she had asked up from the country to keep her company. This old man, a wonderful character, a mixture of simplicity and wisdom, craftiness and innocence, devoting all his thoughts to his little niece, and determined to help her to win her husband's love, was admirably played by Sir John Hare. He brings about, in combination with Miss Marie Lohr's exquisitely graceful portraiture of the young wife, one of the most charmingly acted episodes to be seen on our stage.

It is in his characterisation that M. Pierre Wolff makes an eloquent and entirely successful appeal. His heroine wins her husband's love eventually. That was a foregone conclusion. Had it been otherwise the story would have been a tragedy, not comedy. That it thoroughly pleased the audience on Saturday there was no doubt. The calls got beyond counting. Sir John Hare and Miss Marie Lohr shared the triumph, Mr. Arthur Wontner, as the husband, scored after them, and then—as a surprise—M. Pierre Wolff, from Paris, an order on his coat, appeared for a second, to smile and bow his thanks.

J. W.

Queen's Theatre
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Bonita

QUEEN'S THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Licensee and Manager ... ... A. S. PIGOTT

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd, at 8 o'clock, and Every Evening at 8.30,

THE NEW COMIC OPERA

BONITA

A Portuguese Romance by WADHAM PEACOCK.
Music by HAROLD FRASER-SIMSON.

Characters in the order in which they appear.

THE PROLOGUE (Period 1810).

An English Sergeant	Mr. CYRIL VERNON
Lieut. Philip Mannerton	Mr. WALTER WHEATLEY
Private Capper	Mr. ROBERT CONOLLY
Margarida	Miss CLARA EVELYN

Soldiers: Messrs. Brady, Pollard, Slade, Tait-Knight, Underwood.

THE PLAY (Time: Present Day).

Mariana	Miss THELMA RAYE
Joaquim	Mr. CHARLES MAUDE
	(By arrangement with Mr. FREDERICK HARRISON)
Rosa .. .. }	Miss MINNA DEACON
Teresa .. .. } Girls of the Village	Miss BILLIE SINCLAIR
Perpetua .. .. }	Miss EDITH CLEGG
Thomaz .. .. (the Father of Bonita)	Mr. FRED VOLPÉ
Frederico .. (the prospective Husband of Bonita)	Mr. LIONEL MACKINDER
Pedro .. .. (Clerk to Frederico) ..	Mr. MARK LESTER
A Sergeant of the Vermillion Lancers	Mr. ERIC ROPER
Lieut. Arthur Mannerton {Great Grandson of the Officer in the Prologue}	Mr. WALTER WHEATLEY
Bonita .. .. {Great Granddaughter of Margarida in the Prologue}	Miss CLARA EVELYN
Brother Domingos	Mr. GORDON YATES

Vermillion Lancers: Messrs. Brady, Conolly, Garton, Larkin, Mason, Pollard, Slade, Tait-Knight, Underwood, York.

Fishermen, Fishermaidens, Peasants, etc.: Messrs. Elliott, Fenwick, Gage, Horscroft, Lillie, Mepstead, Murray, Prescott, Sedgely, Shorman, Strachan, Ward, Wyatt; Mesdames Ashton, Bliss, Clare, Constance, Davies, Diggins, Ducane, Ida Evelyn, Finucane, Hanton, Harbert, Hart, Horne, Irish, LaBare, Lewis, Montague, Morel, Sears, Vickers, Wells.

Dances by ESPINOSA, supported by Mesdames Bürde, Denton, Harrison, Nicholls, Nainby, and Mr. Hall.

The Opera Produced by GRANVILLE BARKER.

Musical Directors ... ... Messrs. S. P. WADDINGTON and HOWARD CARR

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY:

THE PROLOGUE .. An Outpost beyond Bussaco (Johnstone)

THE PLAY .. .. A Portuguese Village

Act I.—Above the Harbour (Julian Hicks). Act II.—A Ruined Cloister on the Hill Behind (McCleery)

Costumes by SMYTHE, WAREING & HALLEY, L. & H. NATHAN, and ALEXANDRA.
Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN. Wigs by CLARKSON.

DANCES ARRANGED BY ESPINOSA.

The Scenery and Costumes designed by NORMAN WILKINSON of Four Oaks.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. REGINALD WALTER
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. ALFRED DRAYTON

Music and Libretto published by KEITH, PROWSE & Co., 162, New Bond Street, W.

The Pictures in the Foyer by FRANK H. MASON, R.B.W.S., kindly lent by THE BOOTH STEAMSHIP CO., LTD.

The Lamps in this Theatre supplied by the CORONA LAMP WORKS, LTD.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets or any kind of head dress.
The request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Dress Circle, 6s. and 5s.
Upper Circle, 5s., 4s. and 3s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. H. WEAVER) open 10 to 10 Telephone: Gerrard 9437 (2 lines).

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance, to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Acting Manager ... ... Mr. HOWARD LESLIE

The new comic opera, "Bonita," presented at the Queen's Theatre last Saturday, contains many features which tend towards the success of a piece of this description. An excellent story is told by Mr. Wadham Peacock, who has wisely selected Portugal as the scene of his interesting romance. Mr. Harold Fraser-Simson, who has written the music, is undoubtedly an accomplished composer. His music is melodious, graceful, and admirably scored, and is altogether of a superior order. We are introduced to the play by an intense and dramatic prologue, in which is depicted an incident during the Peninsula War. Lieut. Mannerton is defending an outpost against the French, and he is suddenly shot after a pathetic farewell to his young wife, Margarida (who is the great-grandmother of the heroine, Bonita). The parting, which is put into musical form, is one of the most beautiful melodies in the opera. In the play the scene is a Portuguese fishing village, where Bonita and Thomaz, her father, are entirely under the thumb of Frederico, the burlesqued and self-proclaimed villain of the village, to whom the darkest deeds are mere child's play. He has discovered that Lieutenant Arthur Mannerton, great-grandson of the officer in the prologue, is to arrive in search of any descendants of his great-grandfather. Bonita, who is his cousin twice removed, and the only descendant of this great-grandfather, will therefore be the possessor of the title and estates. The wily Frederico decides to marry her, and Thomaz (her father) being in his power, is obliged to accept him as a son-in-law. But his little game is somewhat spoilt by the arrival of Lieutenant Mannerton, who falls in love with Bonita at first sight, and promptly proposes marriage and is accepted.

Act II. opens with an entrancing waltz tune and a clever dance arranged by Espinosa. A pathetic personage called Perpetua has been in love with Frederico for many years, in fact, they were betrothed to one another in childhood; and acting on the principle that everything comes to those who wait, she is only too ready to marry Frederico when he wants her. Mariana is in love with Joaquim, a melancholy fisher youth, who has conceived a hopeless passion for Bonita. This subsidiary love interest carries the action towards the approaching climax, which consists of an invocation to Saint Anthony, by which will be decided who is more worthy of the hand of Bonita. Tradition has it that when two men love the same woman they go through a trial by fire at the shrine of St. Anthony. Each lover picks a flower and casts it into the fire; and the one whose flower comes out of the fire unscathed is the chosen lover of the lady in question. The effect of this quaint and interesting ceremony is heightened by the sweetly pretty scene of the ruined cloisters which surround the shrine. Frederico has taken the precaution to dip one of the flowers in paraffin, but has, unfortunately, got them mixed, and Lieutenant Mannerton wins the lovely Bonita. Frederico, scorned and execrated by one and all, pairs off with the faithful Perpetua, and Joaquim with Mariana.

Who wants to buy all the lovely "Bonita" "production," props, &c.? They are offered cheap, "to save storage." Apply to Mr. A. S. Pigott, Queen's Theatre.

* * *

2 2/4

215

Criterion
THEATRE

E

Sept. 28

Orch. Stall

C 52

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th, 1911, and Every Evening at 8.

Mr. ROBERT LORAINE will produce

(FOR A SHORT RUN ONLY)

"MAN AND SUPERMAN"

By G. BERNARD SHAW.

The characters in the order in which they make their first appearance.

Roebuck Ramsden	Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
Parlourmaid	Miss MADGE MURRAY
Octavius	Mr. E. ION SWINLEY
	(By courtesy of Sir Herbert Tree).
John Tanner	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
Ann Whitefield	Miss PAULINE CHASE
Mrs. Whitefield	Miss FLORENCE HAYDON
Miss Ramsden	Miss AGNES THOMAS
Violet Robinson	Miss DORIS LYTTON
Straker	Mr. EDMUND GWENN
Hector Malone	Mr. GUY STANDING
Mr. Malone	Mr. EDWARD SASS

ACT I. .. .. Roebuck Ramsden's Study in Portland Place

ACT II. .. .. Carriage Drive of Mrs. Whitefield's House at Richmond

ACT III. .. .. Garden of a Villa in Granada, Spain

The Play produced by Mr. ROBERT LORAINE.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY at 2.30.

Scenery by R. McCleery. Miss Pauline Chase's dresses by Lucile. Hats by Michel Zac and Maison Lewis
The Car in the second act is a Fiat.

Programme of Music.

Fantasia	("Adrienne Lecouvreur" .. .. Cuni
	("Les Pêcheurs de Perles" .. .. Bizet
Entr'acte I.	.. "Valse Lente")
	"Marche Russe") .. .. Luigini
	Waltz from "Der Rosenkavalier" .. .. Richard Strauss
Entr'acte II.	Scenes from ("L'Arlesienne" .. .. Bizet
	("Manon Lescaut" .. .. Puccini

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 0d. to £6 6s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Family Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 0d.

Telephone 3844 Gerrard. Box Office (Mr. A. R. Britten) open from 10 till 10.

Visitors will find it especially convenient to leave by the Jermyn Street exits, as during the repaving of Piccadilly Circus the Carriage Rank will be at the back of the Theatre.

Business Manager .. .. Mr. J. W. LETHBRIDGE.

Musical Director .. Mr. Alick Maclean. Stage Manager .. Mr. Lawrence White.

CRITERION THEATRE.

Under the Management of Mr. ROBERT LORAINE.

NOTICE.

Mr. LORAINE regrets extremely that in consequence of a sudden serious illness Mr. Alfred Bishop will be unable to appear this evening. In his absence the part of "Roebuck Ramsden" will be undertaken by Mr. Ernest Mainwaring.

WHITNEY THEATRE

Sole Proprietor and Manager - F. C. WHITNEY

This (Saturday) Evening
September 30th, at 8.20 o'clock
Mr. F. C. WHITNEY
will present the Musical Comedy entitled

The Spring Maid

From the German of Julius Wilhelm and A. M. Willner

English Version by Charles H. E. Brookfield

Book by
Harry B. Smith and Robert B. Smith

Music by Heinrich Reinhardt

Musical Director
Max Bendix
(late of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York)

Characters

PRINCESS BOZENA ... ... Miss MARISE FAIRY
Visiting Carlsbad Spa at the gala season with her father, His Highness

PRINCE NEPOMUK ... ... Mr. COURTICE POUNDS
Possessed of more ancestry than income, meets

PRINCE ALADAR ... ... Mr. WALTER HYDE
A Hungarian nobleman, whose aversion to women of his own rank leads him into a flirtation with

ANNAMIRL ... ... Miss JULIA JAMES
The favourite fountain girl at Carlsbad, known as the "The Spring Maid," who is courted by a young officer,

BARON RUDI ... ... Mr. ARTHUR ROYD
A cousin of Bozena, who, like her, has come to Carlsbad to participate in the annual pageant of the discovery of Carlsbad spring, which is directed by

ROLAND ... ... Mr. CHARLES McNAUGHTON
An actor, whose fondness for

LISETTE ... ... Miss BEATRICE VON BRUNNER
A charming ingénu, has resulted in their being pursued by

SPAETLING ... ... Mr. E. STATHAM-STAPLES
A Commissioner of Police, whose clues never fail until he meets

EVAKATL ... ... Miss HELEN LAURAINE
At whose popular hostelry are sojourning various American visitors, including

MR. LOMAX ... ...Mr. REGINALD CROMPTON
Who is trying to get thin,

MR. SKINNER ... ... Mr. GEORGE CARROLL
Who is trying to get stout.

Creditors: Messrs. WILBYE TURNER, ARTHUR BOURNE, GEORGE DASH, and BOB DALY.
Hotel Porter: Mr. HUBERT G. GORDON. Landlord: Mr. FRANK F. SMYTHE.

Gretel ...	... Miss OLIVE LESLIE	Sophie ...	... Miss MAY HOLLAM
Hanni ...	... Miss KITTY CROWTHER	Elsie ...	... Miss VERONA PHILLIS
Josie ...	... Miss NELLIE KNOWLES	Barbara ...	Miss FLORENCE GRIMALDI
Fritzi ...	... Miss YVONNE INGRAM	Mazie ...	... Miss LENA MILLER

Who are admired and courted by the Officers,

Franz ...	... Mr. ERNEST ARUNDEL	Eugene ...	... Mr. C. H. HOBSON
Fritz ...	... Mr. GEORGE DASH	Pepi ...	... Mr. STANLEY ROSS
Gustave ...	... Mr. BOWMAN DUFF	Louis ...	... Mr. FRANK F. SMYTHE
Valdimir ...	... Mr. DONALD GULLAND	Toni ...	... Mr. LESLIE WINTER

Visitors at Carlsbad, Shop Girls, Wood Nymphs and Peasants.

The action covers a period of three days during the Festival Season at Carlsbad Springs

Act One

A Fountain Square, Carlsbad

Act Two

The Bee Farm at Giesshübler, the following Afternoon

Interlude: Second Scene

A Divertissement depicting the Legend of the Discovery of Carlsbad Springs

PERSONNEL:

THE WATER SPRITE ... ... Miss DORIS DEAN
THE HUNTSMAN ... ... Miss OLIVE LESLIE
THE RABBIT ... ... Miss JULIA JAMES

Third Scene

The Annual Al Fresco Fête at Carlsbad

Ladies of the Court, Visitors and Peasants:

Misses SUSIE BEARDON, DOROTHY BELLE, GERALDINE BRUCE, EVA BURNETT, CONSTANCE CARMEN, GRETA COOPER, LILLIAN COOPER, KATHERINE FIELDER, MADELINE FITZGERALD, EILEEN GORDON, IVY GORDON, JOSEPHINE HART, ISABEL HATCHARD, AGNES MARCHAND, BERENICE MAXWELL, PEGGY MOLYNEUX, GERTRUDE PALMER, HELEN VAN ALLEN
Messrs. ARTHUR BOURNE, BOB DALY, ERASMUS DENNI, ROBERT GEORGE, WILL SOMMERVILLE, WILBYE TURNER, CHARLES WALKER

Porter ... ... Mr. HUBERT G. GORDON
Flower Girls ... ... Misses DAISY ARDLEY and PEGGY STUART
Candy Girls ... ... Misses MARJORIE CLEMENTS and AGNES CROXTON

The Legend

"The site of Carlsbad and its environs was once a dense forest abounding in all kinds of game. It was a favourite hunting ground of the nobles. According to tradition, a huntsman pursuing a rabbit, followed far into the forest, where the rabbit was protected by a bevy of wood nymphs, who implored him to spare the creature's life. Upon his refusal, the wood nymphs invoked a violent storm, after which the huntsman found himself lost in the wilderness. When on the verge of exhaustion, the huntsman encountered a water sprite, who led him to a certain rock which she struck with her wand. A stream of sparkling water gushed forth. The huntsman drank and was refreshed. The water sprite then led him from the forest in order that he might proclaim to the world the beneficial qualities of the Carlsbad Spring."—Grimm's Folklore of Germany.

Several people are responsible for the book, which has been set to music by Mr. Heinrich Reinhardt. The libretto was, in the first place, the work of Messrs. Julius Wilhelm and A. M. Willner, and was translated from the German for American production by Messrs. Harry B. Smith and Robert B. Smith, the English version being by Mr. Chas. H. E. Brookfield. The story deals with the lady-killing propensities of a certain Prince Aladar, who captures hearts as a Red Indian takes his scalps, his peculiarity being his aversion to ladies of his own rank, he finding his game much more exciting, and probably more effective, with girls of more humble birth. He arrives at Carlsbad, having heard of the far-famed beauty Annamirl, who is the keeper of the springs, and, in intervals of serving out the waters, indulges in merry flirtation with the officers of the regiment led by Baron Rodi, who have all succumbed to her charms. Prince Aladar bets them that he will succeed where they have failed, and that he will win Annamirl in twenty-four hours. He is overheard by a certain Princess Bozena, who, enraged at Aladar's opinion of women of his own class, and at his insufferable conceit, dons the dainty garb of Annamirl, the Spring Maid, and bewitches him at a glance, intending to flout him and teach him a lesson.

In the next scene Prince Nepomuk, the impecunious father of the masquerading Princess Bozena, is chaperoning the two lovers at a bee-farm at Giesshübler disguised as a maiden aunt, and resembling one of the "ugly sisters" in "Cinderella." Prince Aladar's time is almost up when Princess Bozena reveals herself to the now hopeless Lothario, who confesses himself beaten, but nevertheless is just as anxious to marry the Princess as to win his wager. Annamirl, who has come to the bee-farm accompanied by her cousin, Baron Rudi, makes herself known; and the climax is reached in a well-written finale, the Princess promising to wed Aladar when the spring runs dry, which is finally accomplished by the help of an accommodating plumber in the next scene, in which is presented a divertissement depicting "the Legend of the Discovery of the Carlsbad Springs." Here a comic actor named Roland tells the legend of the springs before a drop curtain while the fountain scene is being prepared behind. The legend has it that a rabbit, pursued by a huntsman through the forest, was protected by a bevy of wood nymphs, who implored him to spare the creature's life; on his refusal they invoked a violent storm, after which the huntsman, on the verge of exhaustion, encountered a water-sprite, who led him to a rock which she struck with her wand, causing a stream of water to gush forth. He refreshed himself, and the pool afterwards came to be known as the Carlsbad Spring. In this scene the Pavlova Waltz is introduced as a solo dance by Miss Doris Dean. After the final display of the springs in action, they suddenly cease, and Prince Aladar claims his bride.

"THE LOVE MILLS."

Comic Opera, in Three Acts, Book by Frantz Fonson and Fernand Wicheler, Music by A. Van Oost, English Version and Lyrics by Leslie Stiles, Additional Numbers by Louis Hillier, Produced at the Globe Theatre on Tuesday, Oct. 3.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.15,

THE LOVE MILLS

A Comic Opera, in Three Acts.

Book by FRANTZ FONSON and FERNAND WICHELER.

Music by A. VAN OOST.

English Version and Lyrics by LESLIE STILES.

Additional Numbers by LOUIS HILLIER.

CAST:

Claes	(an Innkeeper)	LESLIE STILES
Henry	(a French Artist)	CARLTON BROUGH
Hans	(a Gardener)	A. W. BASKCOMB
Fritz	(Sergeant of Hussars)	H. BRINSLEY SHERIDAN
The Mayor of Middleburg		GUS OXLEY
Kobus	(a Zeelander)	RIX CURTIS

AND

Constable Van Goitshenoven	GEORGE BARRETT
Peter, Kate	Master PHILIP TONGE and Miss MARY GLYNNE
Lisbeth (Claes' Wife)	NAN STUART
Nele (Lisbeth's Cousin)	MARJORIE MANNERS
Daffodil (a Country Girl)	VIOLET GOULD
Maria (a Barmaid)	MARION MARLER
Clara (do.)	BETTY RUTHERFORD

Dancers:—Misses Vera Cunningham, Daisy Fisher, Zoe Gordon, Violet Harte, Doris Kent, Kathleen Stavrn.

SCENES (by Albert Dubosq):

Act I.	Claes' Cabaret at Middleburg	(Morning)
Act II.	Courtyard of Town Hall, Middleburg	(Noon)
Act III.	The Love Mills, Middleburg	(Night)

Produced by SYDNEY ELLISON.

Musical Director .. .. .. LOUIS HILLIER

Dresses by L. & H. NATHAN and H. BARUCH & Co.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

The following are the additional Numbers:

ACT I. SONG, "Dot and Spot."

ACT II. WALTZ SONG, "Queen of Hearts."
SONG, "Angling."
DUET, "Venus and Adonis."

Publishers:—Messrs. KEITH, PROWSE & CO., Ltd.
Copies can be obtained from the attendants, price 1/6 each.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.15.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. CLARE) open 10 to 10 Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Stage Manager ... ... EDWARD SHALE.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. .. W. LESTOCQ

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

The best features of this musical play are its delightful simplicity and total lack of pretension—qualities which harmonise perfectly with the quaint, picturesque costumes and the old Dutch scenery. The story, which is of the slightest, serves admirably to emphasise the naive and droll characteristics of the Dutch. Mr. Van Oost has written some pleasing music, which is charmingly unpretentious, but melodious and graceful; and at the end of the third act rises to quite a high level of musical merit. Mr. Louis Hillier has contributed some excellent additional numbers, including the waltz song, "Queen of Hearts," and a humorous duet, entitled "Venus and Adonis," which were both successes. The scene opens in the quaint old Dutch town of Middleburg, where Lisbeth, the beautiful young wife of Claes, an innkeeper, is adored and sought after by all the young men in the place. It is her birthday, and her admirers have come to celebrate the occasion, each bringing with him a birthday gift. There are also a sergeant of the Hussars; the Mayor of Middleburg, Haus; a gardener, who is also a poet; the town constable, and Henry, a French artist. Claes, who is very much in love with his pretty wife, is "chaffed" by them all about the way in which he permits her to carry on harmless flirtations with the young fellows of the town. But he is sure of Lisbeth, and trusts her, laughingly declaring that he will allow any man to make love to her that likes. A document is then drawn up, giving to bearer full power to make love to Lisbeth on any occasion, she being bound to submit to his advances. Claes, taking it all as a merry jest, signs the paper; but the constable, Van Goitschouven, has been vested by the Mayor, who has left the town for a short time, with power to act as his deputy, and the constable, amidst much consternation, proclaims that the document is legal. The paper is given to Lisbeth, who hides it in Claes' coat-pocket, from which it is stolen by Peter, a little Dutch boy. Henry, the handsome young French painter, is passionately in love with Lisbeth, and is in his turn beloved by her cousin Nele. Lisbeth, who is tired of Henry's useless protestations of love, has made a rendezvous with him, and has given him the precious document. With the idea of furthering the love affairs of her cousin, Lisbeth persuades Nele to take her —Lisbeth's—place at the assignation; and, in a little arbour in the next scene, Henry, making passionate love to the supposed Lisbeth, is overheard by Claes—who has by this time become jealous—and the others making an appointment at the Love Mills, which, according to tradition, grind whenever true lovers meet. Claes and Lisbeth's fond admirers vow vengeance, and arrive at the mills first; and the plan is, that on the constable giving the signal, they shall rush out and throw Henry in the brook. Unfortunately, they are overheard, and the signal is given by Lisbeth, who has come to couch Nele in her final scene with Henry, the mistake causing the constable to be thrown in the water instead. A passionate love duet follows between Henry and the pretended Lisbeth, and is the finest thing in the score. The climax arrives when Henry discovers Nele, and, although surprised, decides to make the best of it and marry her. Claes rushes from the mill to vent his wrath, but it is changed to astonishment on his discovering Nele in his wife's place. All is forgiven, and the document is torn into pieces, the curtain falling on general rejoicing.

There are competitions at the fête in the second act, of which Lisbeth is Queen, including climbing the greasy pole, strength contests, and a beauty competition, in which Henry takes first prize.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 6th, 1911, at 8.15,

Miss MARIE TEMPEST

By arrangement with Messrs. VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENTS

THE HONEYMOON

A Comedy in Three Acts by

ARNOLD BENNETT.

Flora Lloyd	Miss MARIE TEMPEST
Mrs. Reach Haslam	Miss KATE SERJEANTSON
Mr. Reach Haslam	Mr. DION BOUCICAULT
Cedric Haslam	Mr. GRAHAM BROWNE
Charles Haslam	Mr. BASIL HALLAM
The Bishop of Chelmsford	Mr. BERTE THOMAS
Mr. Frampington	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Gaston	Mr. CECIL ROSE
Cuthbert	Mr. HORTON COOPER

Act I.	Parlour of the only Hotel, Pixton-on-Sea
Act II.	Mrs. Reach Haslam's Study
Act III.	Mrs. Reach Haslam's Garden

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

Stage Manager	Mr. HERBERT CHOWN
Business Manager	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

For the woman, the honeymoon is a sacrament; for the man, it is only an incident. The woman wants to get the very most out of it, to linger over it, to get thirty, or even thirty-one, days out of the month. The man, after a day or two, is secretly asking himself how soon he will be able to return to the serious business of life. Now, until her first baby comes, matrimonial love is the serious business of a woman's life, and she will not stand it being treated as a trifle. As a rule, a quiet compromise is effected. Mr. Bennett has chosen for the sake of his play a particular case in which this is impossible. Cedric Haslam, who has married Flora Lloyd, is a famous enthusiastic aviator, and on the very day of their marriage he learns that a celebrated German rival is going to compete for a prize of £10,000, which has been offered by the Aero Club to the man who, under certain very trying conditions, shall fly over Snowdon. From Cedric's point of view there is but one thing for him to do—to sustain his country's flying fame and defeat the foreigner.

Flora sees the matter in a diametrically different light. From her point of view, the honeymoon is of supreme importance, and the conquest of Snowdon and the Kaiser's country of quite secondary magnitude. The pair discuss, argue, and almost quarrel, when to them come certain relations with the astonishing information that Cedric and Flora were married by a masquerading eccentric who was not in holy orders, and that therefore they are not man and wife at all. Thus they are once more free agents. The point at which they agreed to marry must be re-attained by one of them convincing the other of error, and as this can only be done by talking—in stage phrase, by dialogue—the conversion of Cedric by this means is the rest of the play. There are minor developments certainly. Cedric finds out that the German has met with an accident, and will not be able to fly for months. So, rather unworthily, he pretends that he has come round to Flora's way of thinking, and has been convinced by her arguments. Flora finds out that he has been trying to "humbug" her, but, nevertheless, accepts his submission—she can forgive anything but his preference of business to affection—and they go off to be married, really and legally this time, by the Bishop of Chelmsford. It is a slightly cynical, but, on the whole, comfortable, solution of the difficulty, and it is attained by two acts of delightfully bright and brainy conversation.

EVERY EVENING at 9 (MATINEES 2.50)

WILL BE REVIVED

FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF PERFORMANCES

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS, ENTITLED

LADY WINDERMERE'S FAN

By OSCAR WILDE

Lord Windermere	DAWSON MILWARD
Lord Darlington	NORMAN TREVOR
Lord Augustus Lorton	ERIC LEWIS
Mr. Charles Dumby	ERNEST THESIGER
Mr. Cecil Graham	OWEN NARES
Mr. Hopper	T. N. WEGUELIN
Parker	G. TREVOR ROLLER
Lady Windermere	LILIAN BRAITHWAITE
The Duchess of Berwick	Mrs. G. KEMMIS
Lady Plimdale	NELLA POWYS
Mrs. Cowper-Cowper	MARGARET CHUTE
Lady Stutfield	LISA MACREADY
Lady Jedburgh	ELIZABETH CHESNEY
Lady Agatha Carlisle	DOROTHY FANE
Rosalie	ERNITA LASCELLES
Mrs. Erlynne	MARION TERRY (Her Original Character)

Act I. ... The Library in Lord Windermere's House
Act II. ... Drawing-room in Lord Windermere's House
Act III. ... Lord Darlington's Rooms
Act IV. ... The Library in Lord Windermere's House.

THE SCENERY PAINTED BY W. RAPHAEL.

Preceded Every Evening at 8.20 (Matinees 2.15) by a new Play in One Act, entitled

THE MINIATURE

By WALTER FRITH

"LADY WINDERMERE'S FAN."

The Play, in Four Acts, by Oscar Wilde, Revived at the St. James's Theatre on Saturday, Oct. 14.

It was on Feb. 22, in the year 1892, that Sir, then Mr., George Alexander, first produced "Lady Windermere's Fan" at the St. James's Theatre. The play was revived about five years ago, with Sir George once more as Lord Windermere; and nearly twenty years after its original production it was played on Saturday night at the St. James's for, as the programme says, "a limited number of performances."

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.

Proprietors ... ... Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT.

Sole Lessee and Manager ... ... CHARLES FROHMAN.

Every Evening at 8.30.

Matinees, Thursdays and Saturdays at 2.30.

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

"WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS"

A Comedy in Four Acts, by

J. M. BARRIE.

John Shand	Mr. C. M. HALLARD
Alick Wylie	Mr. H. R. HIGNETT (By arrangement with Mr. Fredk. Harrison)
David Wylie ... } James Wylie ... }	his Sons { Mr. NORMAN MacOWAN / Mr. BLAKE ADAMS
Maggie Wylie	(his Daughter) Miss HILDA TREVELYAN
Mr. Venables...	Mr. NORMAN FORBES
Comtesse de la Briere	LADY TREE
Lady Sybil Lazenby	Miss NINA SEVENING
Mr. Feikie	Mr. JOHN KELT
Maid	Miss MADGE MURRAY

D. Y. T.

21/10/1911

Orch. Stall

No F19

DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., LONDON, HARROW, BELFAST, &C.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON.

To-Night, Thursday, October 26th, 1911, at 8.45,

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY's New Production

(By Arrangement with CHARLES FROHMAN),

The Uninvited Guest

A Comedy in Three Acts, adapted from the French of TRISTAN BERNARD,

By JOHN N. RAPHAEL.

Jacques Calvel	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
Barthazar	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
George Herbert	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Monsieur Gonthier.	.. Mr. FRED LEWIS
Pedro Gonzalez	... Mr. REGINALD OWEN
Alexis Blivet	...Mr. CHARLES B. VAUGHAN
Monsieur Beauchamps	... Mr. WILLIAM FAZAN
Remy	Mr. O. B. CLARENCE
Charles Mentel	... Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
Felix	Mr. HENRI LAURENT
First Guest	... Mr. FRANC STONEY
Second Guest	Mr. EDWARD Y. RAE
Florist	Mr. HUBERT ALEXANDER
Customer	Mr. J. H. BREWER
Berthe Gonthier	... Miss ENID LESLIE
Louise Carnot	Miss HILDA MOORE
Jeanne	... Miss VIOLET GRAHAM
Gilberte	Miss PHYLLIS BARKER
Madame Girot	... Miss KATE DOXFORD
Mademoiselle Girot	Miss SHEILA HESELTINE
Leontine	... Miss MONA HARRISON
Madame Edmond	Miss ISABEL GREY
Madame Tombelle	... Miss LYDIA RACHEL
ACT I.	The Hotel Bellevue.
ACT II. ... ... Monsieur Gonthier's Drawing Room. A Week Later.
ACT III ... ... Madame Edmond's Shop. A Fortnight Later.
Time ... The Present. The Action of the Play takes place in Paris.

The Play Produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Dresses for Miss Enid Leslie, Miss Hilda Moore, Miss Graham, Miss Barker and Miss Heseltine exclusively designed and made by LUCILE, LTD., 23, Hanover Square, W. Scenes designed by Mr. ARTHUR DE LISSA, and painted by J. A. FRASER.
Furniture and Decorations by Messrs. FRYERS, Ltd., 6, Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.
Artificial Flowers by Messrs. A. & L. UHLMANN, of 171 and 173, Farringdon Road, E.C. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Preceded at 8 by a Play in One Act entitled

"SAME LODGE,"

By JOHN HOLLES and GUY NEWALL.

J. K. Ainslie	Mr. GUY NEWALL
Colonel Thorndyke	Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
Simplicity Grey	Miss MONA HARRISON

Scene:—A Drawing Room.

Miss Harrison's dress by MADAME HERBERT of Brighton and 25, Savile Row, W.

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 3.

FIRST MATINEE, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 1st, at 3.

The Orchestra, under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music:—

1—VALSE ... "Love Me" ... ... Stolz		4—(a) VALSE ... "Rêne de Rosette" ... ... Grimston
2—(a) OVERTURE ... "Lysistrata" ... ... Linzke		(b) CELESTA SOLO "Aubade de Mimi" ... ... Scott Issa
(b) DANSE ... "The Frolic" ... ... Haines		& TWO-STEP ... "Louisiana" ... ... Jones
3—(a) VALSE ... "Verveine" ... ... Robert Gaze		The Celesta & Mustel Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 80, Wigmore Street, W.
(b) PAS SEUL ... "Pirouette" ... ... Finck		Grand Pianoforte by BLÜTHNER & Co. 14, Wigmore Street, W.
(c) TWO-STEP ... ... Christine

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... ... E. W. TARVER

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s; Other Rows, 4s
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 48.

General Manager ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

In Mr. John N. Raphael's version of "Le Dati-r Inconnu," produced at the Prince of Wales's eatre on Thursday evening, Mr. Charles Haw-ey, in his clever impersonation of the leading e, once more finds himself involved in an at-osphere of falsehood and deceit; but on this asion it is a mercenary friend, intent only on ttering his own position, who does most of the ng, and, indeed, starts rolling the ball of wil-l and deliberate misrepresentation. The action the play tskes place in Paris, and at the Hotel llevue a wedding party is being jointly given by . Beauchamps and Mme. Tombelle, parents re-pectively of the bride and bridegroom. Invita-ions have been sent out broadcast, and neither uest nor hostess are acquainted with all the guests, supposing some of the unknowns to be friends of the bridegroom. This gives Jacques Calvel his opportunity. Wearing evening dress he strolls leisurely into the hotel, mixes with the crowd, and helps himself freely to the refreshments and the cigars which M. Beauchamps has provided. He meets an acquaintance, Barthazar, and being by this time well primed with champagne, admits that he is an uninvited guest. Calvel has earned a precarious living as a designer of art furniture, but is seeking a situation in another line. He manages to get into conversation with Berthe Gonthier, the pretty daughter of a wealthy mer-chant, and is struck by her beauty and charm of manner. Then returns the Mephistopheles in evening dress, Barthazar, who points out a way by which the impecunious Jacques can become the husband of the charming heiress. He has only to announce that he is the representative of a big firm who deal in metals, and is in receipt of a very large salary, to become an eligible suitor for Berthe, as her father is anxious to get her suitably married. Of course, the unscrupulous concocter of the scheme is to be well paid for his share in the transaction when the marriage is ac-complished. With some reluctance Jacques becomes a party to Balthazar's plan, being wholly influenced by the fact that he is in love with the young girl. But the rôle of imposter is re-pugnant to him, and at last he sets Barthazar at defiance. He declares his intention of making a confession of the imposture, and, in spite of his fellow-conspirator's protests, is as good as his word. This causes general consternation amongst the family and friends of M. Gonthier, and Berthe herself is, of course, greatly distressed by the turn which events have taken.

The "melancholy Jacques" obtains a situation as salesman at the establishment of Madame Edmond, a dealer in furniture, but his gloom and depression quite unfit him for the proper per-formance of his duties, more particularly when he hears that Berthe is about to be married to George Herbert, a vain and vapid chatterer, who has all along pestered M. Gonthier's daughter with his attentions. Berthe, accompanied by her father and some girl friends (one of whom, Louise Carnot, is favourably disposed towards Jacques), visits Madame Edmond's shop to purchase furni-ture, and the end of the story is easily foreseen. Berthe learns that Jacques, in spite of his imposture, was perfectly disinterested in his courtship, wishing to marry her for herself alone; and there is speedily brought about the antici-pated reconciliation both with father and daughter.

"SAME LODGE."

229

J. K. Ainslie ..... Mr. Guy Newall
Colonel Thorndyke .... Mr. Edgar B. Payne
Simplicity Grey ..... Miss Mona Harrison

The curtain rises upon a darkened stage. A man and a woman have entered the house of Colonel Thorndyke, an elderly bachelor. The lady had appealed to the man for help, as she, retiring home later to her alleged home, had lost her latchkey, and she did not wish to arouse the household. Her father was, she explained, an old gentleman rendered irritable by gout. The stranger's latchkey fitted the lock, and, entering, they manage to find their way to the drawing-room, where in the dark they fall over the furni-ture and knock down ornaments. The gentleman, who is in evening dress, at length leaves the room in search of a light, and the woman, pro-ducing an electric torchlight, quickly "burgles" a writing-desk, taking from a drawer several bank-notes. The man, it appears, is also a swell burglar, and while he neatly steals her necklace, she as dexterously purloins his gold watch. The appearance of the occupier of the house and his demand for explanations reveals to the man that his companion has been lying. By a quick move-ment, she seizes the colonel, and together they gag and bind him. He is left helpless on the floor, and the thieves depart, vowing that in future they will co-operate in their burglarious business.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30

MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

THE GREAT YOUNG MAN.

A Comedy in three Acts by

PRINCE V. BARIATINSKY.

CHARACTERS.

Prince Belsky		CHARLES SUGDEN
Variagin	(Councillor of State)	KINSEY PEILE
Nablotsky	(His Secretary)	CHARLES BRYANT
Sambarof	(Financier)	IVAN BERLYN
		(By kind permission of Mr. Fred Terry)
Count Talysin		LEWIS WILLOUGHBY
Yahontof-	(A Schoolmaster)	RICHARD NEVILLE
Servant		HENRY ARMSTRONG
Baroness Bilderingshof		AIMÉE DE BURGH
	AND
Princess Helen Nablotsky		LYDIA YAVORSKA

ACT I.—Princess Helen Nablotsky's Boudoir.

ACT II.—Nablotsky's Study.

ACT. III.—The same.

Time, The Present. Place, St. Petersburg.

Mme. LYDIA YAVORSKA'S Dresses and Miss DE BURGH'S Dress in Act II. by Paquin.

Hats by Lenthéric, (Paris).

KINGSW

Proprietress

LYDIA Y

Tuesday

Evening

Oct. 31

Stall

No. E 4

This to be retained

DAVIS ALEX. & SONS, LTD., THEATRICAL PRINTERS, BELFAST &c.

Mme. Lydia Yavorska

"The Career of Nablotsky," which was produced at the Royalty Theatre in February last, made its reappearance at the Kingsway Theatre on Tuesday evening, in the shape of a revised version, entitled "The Great Young Man." Few changes have been made, and, save some alteration in the cast, the two plays are to all intents and purposes identical. The piece is intended as a satire on official Russian life, and certainly gives a very bad impression of it. The story shows how one rogue gets the better of two others as bad as himself, and the only upright character cannot avoid running away with someone else's wife. Nablotsky has married the daughter of Prince Belsky, the last-named nobleman having practically sold her for some papers that Nablotsky has in his possession. Nablotsky, who is secretary to Variagin, a Councillor of State, in order to strengthen his position with his chief, allows him to make love to his—Nablotsky's—wife; and, to make his position more certain, takes upon his shoulders the offence of his president, who has discharged a worthy schoolmaster and reduced his family to starvation in order to create a situation for one of his discarded mistresses. Count Talysin, a high-minded and worthy member of the Government, who is investigating the matter thoroughly, believes Nablotsky's story, but will not have the latter transferred to the provinces as a punishment, because he—Talysin—is also in love with Nablotsky's wife. When, subsequently, Nablotsky is found to have embezzled large sums of the Government moneys, he threatens to disclose his chief's delinquency and his father-in-law's sale of his daughter for the letters unless they help him out of the difficulty by making up the deficit, and this they eventually decide to do. Count Talysin elopes with Princess Nablotsky, who institutes divorce proceedings against her husband.

In the third act, Nablotsky make a mock speech, addressed to an imaginary jury, in which he exposes the shady transactions of Variagin and Prince Belsky. This oration, which is in a vein of mordant satire, was deleted from the original version of the piece by the Russian Censor.

There was by no means a crowded nor enthusiastic audience at the Kingsway Theatre on Tuesday evening, when Mme. Lydia Yavorska, the Russian actress, presented a play by her husband, Prince V. Bariatinsky, called "The Great Young Man." Many of those present had seen it when produced for a special performance some months ago at the Royalty Theatre, with the title of "The Career of Nablotsky," and it was to see the Russian actress rather than the Russian play that they remained. Mme. Yavorska is not what would be called a really handsome woman, yet she is very attractive, and she speaks in a peculiarly attractive way. She has still a foreign accent, having learnt English comparatively recently, and her manner, her pose, and her movements are all graceful. In this play she acts the part of a smart society woman who talks the most up to date English slang, and she says some daring things in a pretty childlike way that robs them of much of their coarseness. Mme. Yavorska wears some wonderful costumes. The wonder to me was how she kept one particular snake-like dress on and yet moved about on the stage. W.D.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 4th, at 8.15 p.m.

THE GLAD EYE

A Farcical Comedy in Three Acts.

Adapted by JOSÉ G. LEVY

From the French "Le Zèbre" by MM. ARMONT & NANCEY.

Gaston Bocard	LAWRENCE GROSSMITH
Maurice Polignac	H. MARSH ALLEN
Galipaux	E. DAGNALL
Chausette	ARTHUR HATHERTON
Ferdinand Floquet	GEORGE BEALBY
Tracassin	PHILIP KAY
Comte de la Beuve	J. PARISH ROBERTSON
François	STEPHEN WENTWORTH
Police Sergeant	EDWARD IRWIN
Lucienne Bocard	AURIOL LEE
Suzanne Polignac	DAISY MARKHAM
Kiki	ETHEL DANE
Juliette	ENID SASS

ACT I. .. Morning Room at the Chateau de Vercottes, M. Galipaux' House in the Country, near Paris (Schmitz)

ACT II. .. The Library at the Chateau de Vercottes, two days later (Johnstone)

ACT III. .. Same as Act I., the next morning.

The Play Produced by E. DAGNALL.

Musical Director .. .. .. LOUIS HILLIER.

Dresses by MADAME ALEXANDRA, BAKER STREET, W.

Miss ETHEL DANE's Hat by MAISON LEWIS, REGENT STREET, W.

Business Manager .. } for Mr. Louis Meyer { JOHN B. GLOVER
Assistant Stage Manager } { CLAUD EDMONDS
Assistant Manager .. { BERNARD HISHIN

BOX OFFICE open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager .. .. .. W. LESTOCQ

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3—Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5—All gangways passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1911.

"THE GLAD EYE."

AMUSING FARCE AT THE GLOBE THEATRE.

Up to comparatively recently—say, five years ago—"a wink was as good as a nod, even to a blind horse," but somewhere about that period its influence declined in presence of the newly imported American phrase of slightly wider significance—"the glad eye."

In the new play presented at the Globe Theatre on Saturday evening we saw "the glad eye" in active operation.

The two husbands in the story had a wink for every woman—their wives excepted—and the wives were happy in the knowledge that if their husbands were deceivers they were going to get a lesson. It could not have happened, of course, if it had not been a farce, and it would not have kept the audience in roars of laughter all the evening if the situation had not been genuinely funny.

The French authors, M. Armont and Nancey, have, however, constructed a farce that is actor proof, and Mr. J. G. Levy has adapted it for the censor very cleverly. The three acts of this funny play deal mainly with the life and adventures of two French husbands, who go to Paris occasionally "on the spree," and of their two young wives who stay at home. Liberal with reasons for prolonging their absence, the two men announced a balloon voyage by the great aeronaut, Comte de la Beuve, on which they were to accompany him. As a matter of fact neither of them ever saw the count, and when one of the wives employed a detective to pretend he was the count and to come as such to the house, the silly husbands clamourously welcomed him and pretended they knew him.

In the second act there is the best fun of all, for there comes on the scene the daintiest little Parisienne, who gave "the glad eye" to everyone and had everyone literally at her feet. This performance by Miss Ethel Dane is much the best in the piece, and linked with those given by Mr. Edward Dagnall, as a sentimental old spiritualist, and Mr. Philip Kay, as a detective, offered a pleasing contrast to some of the others, which forced the humour of the situations. It is rarely that a play gets so much laughter as "The Glad Eye" did on Saturday evening.

J. W.

Gaston Bocard and Maurice Polignac, the two husbands in question, with their wives, Lucienne and Suzanne, are staying at the Château de Vercottes at the residence of their father-in-law, M. Galipaux, who, by the way, is an earnest student of the occult. Maurice has been captured by the "glad eye" of Ki-Ki, a fascinating little person who is an assistant in a Parisian fur shop. In order to visit her he makes an excuse to his wife that he is going ballooning with the Count de la Beuve, who is a great friend of his. Gaston, Maurice's chum, is a sentimental philanderer of the most susceptible sort; he simply cannot withstand "the Glad Eye." When he learns of Maurice's little deception he promptly embraces the opportunity, and decides to take a trip in the balloon himself. Lucienne, Gaston's wife, seeing through her husband's subterfuges, takes them philosophically, and as she cannot touch his heart she determines to touch his pocket; so, after each of his little escapades, she buys herself a new frock at his expense, and passes for the best-dressed woman in the district. Suzanne, Maurice's partner, who is of a sympathetic and trustful nature, is totally unaware of her husband's deceptions. The humorous point is that neither Maurice or Gaston has ever seen the Count; and Lucienne, whose auspicions have been aroused, has employed a private detective named Tracassin to come down and impersonate him. Now the fun commences. Gaston and Maurice take the bait "like a shot," profess to know the pseudo-Count, acquaint him with their little plan, swear him to secrecy, and then leave for Paris.

The next act is played at high tension, and creates almost uproarious merriment. Maurice and Gaston have arrived home clandestinely, and on reading in a newspaper that the famous balloon has not yet reached earth, are obliged, in order to prevent discovery, to take refuge behind a balustrade on the landing at the back of the library. From their hiding-place they see much more than is good for their peace of mind. First of all a M. Ferdinand Floquet makes passionate love to Suzanne, who promises that if he can furnish proofs of her husband's infidelity she will institute proceedings for a divorce. Then the dainty Ki-Ki arrives from Paris with an expensive set of furs for Lucienne, which she has ordered as a punishment for her husband's balloon deception. A most amusing scene follows, when Ki-Ki attempts to fasten "the Glad Eye" on old M. Galipaux and tells him she has a friend in Paris called "Bunny"—who is none other than Maurice. On M. Galipaux's departure she sends a telegram to Maurice, saying that she is staying for the night in the country. Gaston, knowing that this telegram would incriminate him, impersonates the butler, and offers to take the wire to the post office; but he is suddenly interrupted, and unfortunately leaves the butler's apron with the telegram in it on the table. Eventually M. Floquet gets hold of the "wire" and uses it to advantage in the next act.

Here the plot becomes somewhat complicated, and only want of space prevents us from following its diverting ramifications in detail. They culminate in the arrival of the police, on the false alarm of a burglary. In the end, Maurice and Gaston give the "agents" the slip and escape through a window, not before Gaston has been shot at and slightly wounded by the sergeant.

In the third act Maurice and Gaston arrive, greet their wives effusively, and give them a thrilling description of their trip in the Zebra balloon, which is received somewhat coolly by the spouses, who in return acquaint their husbands of the burglary which occurred the night before. The police have taken over the affair, and are hot on the scent. They trace certain notes to Chausette, and Kiki is also suspected. It is in vain that the two husbands try to wriggle out of their predicament, and their efforts to silence Chausette and Kiki are ludicrous. The two wives become still more incredulous. Eventually Maurice and Gaston break down before the powerful evidence supplied, and their wives take them to their bosoms on the promise that their peccadilloes shall end once and for all.

APOLLO
THEATRE

THE GLAD EYE

LOUIS MEYER'S PRODUCTION

David Allen & Sons, Ltd., London, Harrow, &c.

"DAD."

English Version, by Captain John Kendall, of "Papa," by Armand de Caillavet and Robert de Flers, Produced at the Playhouse, on Saturday, Nov. 4.

Every Evening at 9

(By arrangement with Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN)

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present an English Version of "PAPA," from the French of Armand de Caillavet and Robert de Flers, called

DAD

By Captain JOHN KENDALL.

"Youth is foolish, years are sage,"
So the bards have sung;
Men there are that never age,
Others can't be young;
There have been occasions when
Fathers were the younger men. —DUM-DUM.

SIR JOSEPH LORRIMER, BART	Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
SAM CARBURY	Mr. SAM SOTHERN
RICHARD BEAUFORT	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
PARSON GRYLLS	Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE
FARMER TREGELLIS	Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
MR. VIVIAN	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
ZACHY	Mr. F. BRADLEY
JAMES	Mr. PETER BLUNT
THE CONSTABLE	Mr. ERIC LANGHAM
GEORGINA CARDEW	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
MRS. MELLISH	Miss VERA COBURN
JENNIFER TREGELLIS	Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY

ACT I.	..	Room in the Farmhouse, Lestithian	... BRUCE SMITH
ACT II.	..	Sir Joseph Lorrimer's Flat in Knightsbridge	.. ..
ACT III.	..	Same as Act I.	.. ..

The Costumes worn by Miss CARLISLE by SELFRIDGE & Co. The Costume and Hat worn by Miss COBURN by REDFERN, Ltd Preceded, at 8.30, by a New Farce, in One Act.

THE COLONEL AND THE LADY

By E. HOLMAN CLARK and DAWSON MILWARD.

SIR CUTHBERT WEGG	Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
COLONEL FRANCIS BRETHERTON (28th Lancers)	Mr. SPENCER TREVOR
LIEUT. AND ADJUTANT ARTHUR CRAVEN (28th Lancers)	Mr. LANGHORNE BURTON
LADY WEGG	Miss MARJORIE CHARD
MRS. ARTHUR CRAVEN	Miss VERA COBURN

Scene — Officers' Quarters, Silchester Barracks.

This is the story of "Dad." Sir Joseph Lorrimer is a man of forty-five, with the heart of a boy of twenty, a professed hedonist who has sailed gaily over the sea of experience, skimming the waves of pleasure, and never foundering in the depths of satiety. Sir Joseph's "amours," we gather, have been many and varied. The fruit of one of them remains, a young man of twenty-four, who, beyond being decently provided for by his father, has been practically ignored by him all his life. At this stage of his existence he is suddenly remembered by his parent, who, in a spasm of belated parental affection, flies down by motor to Cornwall, where his son Richard is living. Dick is transported at express rate to London, where his father proposes he shall share the gay life of the "society butterfly" that Sir Joseph has hitherto been. But the son is made of very different clay to the father; some of the uncompromising severity of the land of his adoption has got into his blood. He is sober and sedate beyond his years, "general adviser" to the little world of Lestithian, a young man who acknowledges he "can't see the amusing side of things," and to whom the life of a gay philanderer like his father is inconceivable and meaningless. To complicate matters still further, he has proposed to and been accepted by Georgina Cardew, an exotic flower who repines that fate has planted her in foreign soil, whose beauty and vivacity have attracted the stolid Richard, and who in turn is attracted to him by the "romance" of his parentage. But the engagement does not meet with Papa's approval, especially as Georgina is the daughter of a scamp who, in years gone by, has robbed Sir Joseph and many others of moneys entrusted to him. There is a fiery scene between father and son, and the former realises that the ideal relationship of which he has dreamed is rendered impossible by the neglect of years. Sir Joseph attempts to exercise parental authority, but Dick laughs his efforts to scorn. "You have acknowledged me as your son," he says, "I have never acknowledged you as my father." Stung to bitterness, Sir Joseph shows Dick the door. No sooner has he departed in a white heat of indignation, than the cause of all the trouble, pretty Georgina walks in. She comes, she is seen, she conquers. Sir Joseph, at first inclined to be antagonistic, in half an hour is at her feet. He comforts her wounded feelings, dries her tears, forswears himself, and whisks her back to Cornwall to join his recalcitrant offspring. Once there, he finds Georgina's society so attractive that a flying visit lengthens into three months; and in Sir Joseph Georgina finds a companion after her own heart.

Of course, neither of the two, dear, delightful, irresponsible people realises that each is head-over ears in love with the other until Mr. Sobersides Dick tells them the truth. Then they are conscience-stricken, and resolve to sacrifice their own happiness for his sake; but steady, clear-sighted Dick has learned in the three months that he and Georgina are no fit mates, and has found his ideal companion in a farmer's quiet little daughter, Jennifer, who will mend his socks and cook his dinners, and love him very dearly, leaving him undisturbed by the whims and fancies which are part and parcel of pretty Georgina. And the father finds truth in the words of his son, "You are a younger man than I am; I ought to be the father, you the son." He takes Richard's advice, and proposes to Georgina; and we leave everybody happy.

"Dad" is preceded by a bright little farce, by Messrs. E. Holman Clark and Dawson Milward, entitled

"THE COLONEL AND THE LADY."

Sir Cuthbert Wegg .... Mr. Daniel McCarthy
Colonel Francis Bretherton .... Mr. Spencer Trevor
Lieut. and Adj. Arthur Craven .... Mr. Langhorne Burton
Lady Wegg .... Miss Marjorie Chard
Mrs. Arthur Craven .... Miss Vera Coburn

The talented writers are at pains to show "what a tangled web we weave when first we practise to deceive," as Lieut. Arthur Craven discovers when, to hide the fact that he has married a wife contrary to the unwritten law of the regiment, he passes her off as his aunt. The trouble arising therefrom, and the way in which all comes right in the end are divertingly displayed;

TO-DAY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8th, AT 2.0 O'CLOCK,

THE WAR GOD.

By ISRAEL ZANGWILL,

King of Gothia		CHARLES MAUDE
Duke of Pomberg	(Military Governor of Graaf)	J. H. BARNES
Count Torgrim	(The Chancellor)	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Count Frithiof	(A Leader of the People)	HERBERT TREE
Baron Konrad	(The Chamberlain)	ROSS SHORE
Osric	(Son of Count Torgrim)	BASIL GILL
Karl Blum	(Secretary to the Chancellor)	GERALD LAWRENCE
Brog	(A Revolutionary)	A. E. GEORGE
Servant		HAROLD MELTZER
Princess Elsa of Hunland	(Afterwards Queen of Gothia)	LAURA COWIE
The Lady Norna	(A Maid of Honour)	LILLAH McCARTHY
Martha	(The Chancellor's Housekeeper)	CLARE GREET

Revolutionists—W. B. ABINGDON, CLIFFORD HEATHERLEY, CYRIL SWORDER.

Lords and Ladies of the Court, Lackeys, &c., &c.

The SCENE passes in or around Graaf, the capital of Gothia and occupies a year.

ACT I.

Study of Count Torgrim, Chancellor of Gothia. A September morning.

ACT II.

The Terrace of a Royal Castle, fifteen miles from Graaf. The following May.

ACT III.

The Revolutionary Camp in the Mountains. June.

ACT IV.

SCENE 1. The Castle Terrace. A September afternoon.
SCENE 2. The Chancellor's Study. The same evening.

Overture, Entr'acts, Choruses and incidental Music by S. COLERIDGE TAYLOR.

The Dresses worn by Miss Lillah McCarthy have been made by Messrs. REVILLE & ROSSITER, 15, Hanover Square.
Uniforms, &c. by B. J. SIMMONS, King Street, Covent Garden.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

The next Performance of "The War God" will be given on Wednesday November 15th, at 2 o'clock

---

Every Evening at 8. Matinees every Saturday at 2.

MACBETH.

HERBERT TREE. ARTHUR BOURCHIER. VIOLET VANBRUGH.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Theatre has now been fitted throughout with the Ozonair System of Ventilation for the constant supply of pure fresh air, by Messrs. OZONAIR, LTD. 96, Victoria Street, S.W.

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING. ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES:—Reserved Seats: Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. WATTS) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777.

His Majesty's Theatre
HAYMARKET.

Wed. Morning
Nov. 8, 1911.

STALL
Ten Shillings and Sixpence
No. M 7

This to be retained.

There are no less than four important influences at work in shaping the destinies of the State of Gothia, where the scene of "The War God" is laid. Patriotic ambition is represented by Count Torgrim, the Gothian Bismarck, whose only weak point is his love for his son Osric, and his desire to see him a General; the democratic interest has for leader a revolutionist named Brog; the Anarchists have Lady Norna, a maid of honour, as their active and enterprising agent; and primitive Christianity is embodied by Frithiof, the equivalent of Count Tolstoy. Gothia is in the position of almost holding the balance of European power, its only serious opponent being the country of Alba. As Osric is a disciple of Frithiof, and has fallen in love with Norna, complications are inevitable. The taxes laid on by Torgrim, and made necessary by his ambitious projects, cause an insurrection, led by Brog, who recently assassinated Gothia's greatest general, but was amnestied at the young King's coronation. But when the mob come to storm the royal castle, they are met by Frithiof, who preaches non-resistance to them so eloquently that they raise the siege and retire. This sets the Anarchists against Frithiof, and they capture him and convey him to their camp in the mountains, and doom him to death. After being missed by the firing party and saved by a bullet going into the Bible he carries in his breast, he is finally shot dead by Norna. Torgrim gets Osric made generalissimo; but when the young man discovers that Norna was the slayer of Frithiof, he commits suicide. The King finds that Torgrim has been ridiculing him, and accepts the Chancellor's resignation; but Norna, who comes to assassinate the fallen minister, relents, and leaves him, presumably to become a convert to the late Frithiof's peace doctrines.

"THE WAR GOD."

To the Editor of "The Daily Telegraph."

Sir—I must leave to the public to judge between your critic and myself as to the merits of my play, "The War God," at His Majesty's Theatre, but I am sure you will permit me, in the interests of fairness, to point out that nearly all his quotations from my verses are inaccurate. It is not, for example:

Till at the grave of war all people stand, but "all peoples," and I venture to think that this one letter makes considerable difference. He, himself, has sense enough to doubt the line, "Fate, the blind housewife with her busy brood," &c. The actual last word is "broom," and the quotation should run:

Fate, the blind housewife with her busy broom,
Shall shrivel at one sweep your giant web
And leave a little naked scuttling spider.

May I assure him, also, that the lines—

That Titan of artillery—is shot, &c., are conscious sardonic humour and not unconscious? Another line that he quotes should really read:

Leave all to Providence—with just a little push.

The only point on which I find myself in agreement with your critic is his tribute to the magnificent acting of Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Arthur Bourchier, but I really find it somewhat difficult to understand how these performances can be achieved unless the author has supplied the basis for them. Still less can I understand how the play can have been "received with much applause," as your critic honestly admits, if admiration of it is merely a duty.—Yours obediently,

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

3, Hare-court, Temple, E.C., Nov. 9.

"THE WAR GOD."

To the Editor of "The Daily Telegraph."

Sir—The urbanity of Mr. Zangwill's letter asks for an answer. I regret that I misrepresented to the extent of two consonants the beauty of his verse. Since Mr. Zangwill values them, I must call it cruel of my ear to emend the congested sibilants of Till at the grave of war all peoples stand.

I confess readily that if Fate is to go shrivelling spiders' webs her broom may do it more neatly than her brood. It does not appear that in my numerous quotations there were any other inaccuracies of importance. If Mr. Zangwill assures me that the humour in

That Titan of artillery—is shot,
That sportsman with the biggest bag—is shot was of the "conscious sardonic" kind, I can only reply that I was afraid he thought so. How actors can give performances of distinction in poor parts is a problem which I cannot now ask you for space to solve. But I must deprecate Mr. Zangwill's modesty when he writes that "the only point on which he finds himself in agreement" with me is in my praise of the acting. For I thought and said with some emphasis that he had aimed high. That some people liked the play better than I did it was my business to record. If I suggested that admiration must be furnished by a sense of duty rather than taste, it was in a modest desire to be charitable.—Yours faithfully, Nov. 10. THE CRITIC.

"THE WAR GOD."

To the Editor of "The Daily Telegraph."

Sir—Your critic courteously accepts the emendation of my line into:

"Till at the grave of war all peoples stand,"

but now cavils at the "congested sibilants." He is right. An "s" followed by an "st" is undoubtedly ugly. But what anxiety to find fault! Sandwiched as "The War God" unfortunately is between performances of Shakespeare's most marvellous play, it is exposed to a terrible test. Yet I have only to open my "Macbeth" to find at the very third line of blank verse a still more difficult "congestion" of sibilants:

The newest state,

while my precise sequence of "s" and "st" occurs further on in a very riot of sibilance:

His secret murders sticking on his hands,

or

Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin,

or

This avarice sticks deeper.

"S" followed by Sc" is as bad or worse. Yet we all ask:

Stands Scotland where it did?

No doubt the worst of these lines is better than the best of mine, yet I could multiply instances of ugly and even ungrammatical lines in Shakespeare, and still more in his fellow-Elizabethans, for which I should be torn to pieces by wild critics. But, Sir, considering how all persons of intelligence, and even the critics themselves, lament the condition of our stage, would it not be better to remember Sir Arthur Pinero's hortation of "Praise, praise, praise," when an attempt is made to produce a contemporary poetic drama? Your critic is mistaken in crediting me with modesty, and I cherish the hope that, on further study of my play, whether in its acted or published form, he will yet come round to my opinion, and that of the public at large.—Yours obediently,

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

3, Hare-court, Temple, E.C., Nov. 13.

242

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited
Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

ON WEDNESDAY, NOV. 8th, 1911, AT 7.45,
A New Production of the Great Romantic Play from the famous work of ALEXANDRE DUMAS.

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

By ARTHUR SHIRLEY and BEN. LANDECK.
Play produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.
Music arranged by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

CHARACTERS.

D'Artagnan, a Young Gascon ... ... Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
Athos, Porthos, Aramis } The Three Musketeers { ... ... Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND / ... ... Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
De Treville, Captain of the Guard ... ... Mr. H. WILMOT JACKSON
Louis XIII., King of France ... ... Mr. S. MAJOR JONES
Cardinal Richelieu, the King's Favourite ... ... Mr. FRED MORGAN
George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, the Queen's Lover ... Mr. BASSETT ROE
Fenton, a Fanatic ... ... Mr. GERALD AMES
Planchet, Servant to D'Artagnan ... ... Mr. CLIVE CURRIE
Grimaud, Bazin } The Musketeers' Servants { ... ... Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS / ... ... Mr. DOUGLAS VINE
Count de Rochefort, The Cardinal's Emissary ... ... Mr. CHARLES HENRY
Malines, Jussac } of the Guards { ... ... Mr. J. C. AUBREY / ... ... Mr. FRANK TENNANT
Bonacieux, Landlord ... ... Mr. CECIL TRESILIAN
Captain of the Port ... ... Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Anne of Austria, Queen of France ... ... Mr. RAYMOND WOOD
Constance, Attendant on the Queen ... ... Miss MARY DIBLEY
Kitty, a Servant ... ... Miss GILLIAN SCAIFE
Milady, the Cardinal's Spy ... ... Miss NANNIE MEADE

AND

... ... Miss ETHEL WARWICK
Musketeers, Cardinals, Guards, Royal Attendants, Courtiers, etc.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

ACT 1.—Scene 1 ... ... The Queen's Boudoir
Scene 2 ... ... Grand Hall at De Treville's
Scene 3 ... ... A Street in Paris
Scene 4 ... The Duelling Ground, near Carmes-Deschaux
ACT 2.—Scene 1 ... ... At the Palace of the Louvre
Scene 2 ... ... A Street in Paris
Scene 3 ... ... The Dovecot Inn at Calais
ACT 3.—Scene 1 Room in the House of the Duke of Buckingham in London
Scene 2 ... ... Fort St. Nicholas, Deal
Scene 3 ... ... Calais Harbour
Scene 4 ... ... Milady's Bedchamber
ACT 4.—Scene 1 ... ... The Post House on the Amiens Road
Scene 2 ... ... The King's Palace

Sword Fights arranged by Professor FELIX GRAVÉ.
Costumes, Wigs, Uniforms, &c., expressly designed and executed by W. CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.
Scenery painted by the Lyceum Studio.

Acting Manager and Treasurer - - Mr. LESLIE HUGHES.
Stage Manager - - - - Mr. S. MAJOR JONES

2435

There have been some half-dozen adaptations of Dumas' novel, but the only ones of any real importance are Mr. Henry Hamilton's version, which was produced at the Globe Theatre in 1898, and played at the Lyceum in 1900, and the adaptation by Sydney Grundy, entitled "The Musketeers," which was presented in November, 1898, at His Majesty's. It was a happy inspiration which moved Messrs. Walter and Fredk. Melville to give the public another opportunity of witnessing Dumas' thrilling and romantic story in new shape. Those masters of popular play-writing, Messrs. Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck, have given us a dramatic creation bristling with stirring incidents and romantic episodes; and blending in one harmonious whole the wealth of exciting detail which surrounds the fortunes of that dashing young hero D'Artagnan, of the King's Musketeers. The piece consists of four acts and thirteen scenes, and an immense amount of labour and ingenuity have been involved in their arrangement.

The first scene is the Queen's boudoir, where her diamonds pass into the hands of the Duke of Buckingham. In Scene II. D'Artagnan arrives at M. de Treville's, where he incurs the displeasure of the famous three—Athos, Porthos, and Aramis. The incident admirably prepares the way for the meeting at the duelling ground near Carmes-Deschaux, which is thrown into proper perspective by the Lyceum's large and spacious stage. The duelling business is cleverly managed; and the encounter with Richelieu's guards which follows is as realistic as could be desired.

At the Palace of the Louvre, in the next act, D'Artagnan leaves for London in quest of the jewels, and Milady is put on their track by Richelieu. It is in Scene III., at the Dovecot Inn, Calais, that the intensity of the chase begins to make itself felt. Here Athos, in a powerful and effective speech, informs D'Artagnan of his past acquaintance with Milady. This is followed by the entrance of Count de Rochefort, who is gagged and bound, while D'Artagnan passes on to the Calais packet with his passport. This scene is admirable in every way, and is well supplied with comic relief. In the first scene of Act III., a room in the house of the Duke of Buckingham, we have the stealing of the diamonds by Milady, the discovery of their loss, and her imprisonment. Passing on to the Fort St. Nicholas, Deal, the incident of the assassination of the Duke of Buckingham by Fenton is dealt with. Fenton's mad infatuation for Milady and his remorseless performance of her orders are cleverly brought out. The intensely dramatic scene in Milady's bedchamber is, of course, the pièce de résistance of the play, D'Artagnan's hand-to-hand encounter with the villainess creating almost breathless excitement. In Act IV. we are shown the stirring duel in which D'Artagnan eventually kills the Count de Rochefort. The fight is spirited, and its originality of treatment is a tribute to the talent of Professor Felix Gravé. The last scene is that of the King's Palace, where D'Artagnan arrives with the jewels in time to witness the Cardinal's discomfiture on finding that he has been outwitted by the Musketeers.

Laurence Irving

MR. LAURENCE IRVING AS HAMLET.

NNQ.

At the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, on Thursday Mr. Laurence Irving and Miss Mabel Hackney appeared for the first time in "Hamlet." The performance was under the auspices of the Edinburgh Branch of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, and the production was presented with not a few novelties as regards stage-setting and costume. There were one or two transpositions of scenes, some portions not usually found in the play given being restored; but the most notable departure from the customary method of presenting this masterpiece on the modern stage was in the matter of costume. Mr. Irving ingeniously argues that Shakespeare did not attempt to equip his play with Danish environment, or to infuse into it the spirit of any age or country other than his own. "Hamlet," pleads Mr. Irving, is clearly a child of the Renaissance, an Elizabethan, and a nearer approach to visualising the play as Shakespeare himself must have visualised it is to be made by laying its scene in the period in which it was written. Accordingly the costumes used in Mr. Laurence Irving's production are all of the time of Elizabeth or her immediate successor. Queen Gertrude appears in ruff and farthingale; King Claudius dresses like James I.; Polonius wears a long furred cloak and close-fitting black skull cap; and the Prince and courtiers are clad in doublet and trunk hose, and so forth. Altogether the effect was a little startling. Limelight was daringly used in the ghost scenes, and the setting of the play scene was decidedly original.

All engaged worked with right good will; and a graceful tribute was paid to every member of the company in the thanksgiving speech which Mr. Irving made in response to a clamorous recall on the final fall of the curtain. He has brought both reverence and commonsense to his study of the Prince. His best elocutionary efforts are in the soliloquies, which are finely rendered; and the scenes with the ghost, his uncle, his mother, and Laertes are all treated with marked individuality, happy touches of fervour and affection being introduced into the scene with Ophelia. Scorn and contempt mingle with his banter of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, and traditional methods are more honoured in the breach than the observance, especially in the business of the stage; and new readings are not infrequent.

"A BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL."

Revival of Edward G. Hemmerde and Francis Neilson's Drama, in Four Acts, produced at the Queen's Theatre on Saturday, Nov. 11.

The Rt. Hon. George Admaston ..... Mr. Eille Norwood
Roderick Collingwood ..... Mr. Leon Quartermaine
Lord Ellerdine ..... Mr. Evelyn Beerbohm
Sir John Burroughes ..... Mr. John Wheatman
Sir Robert Fyffe ..... Mr. Stanley Turnbull
Gervaise McArthur ..... Mr. W. Cronin-Wilson
Stuart Menzies ..... Mr. Edmund Waller
Frank Cartaret ..... Mr. Lewis Broughton
Jacques ..... Mr. A. Caton Woodville
Foreman ..... Mr. George Robinson
Lady Atwill ..... Miss Grace Croft
Pauline ..... Miss Marianne Caldwell
Maid ..... Miss Ellaine Cecil
Peggy ..... Miss Madge Titheradge

It is seven months ago since "A Butterfly on the Wheel" was produced at the Globe Theatre, where it proved one of the few successes that drew crowded houses during the recent heat wave last summer. After a tour in the provinces, the piece was revived last Saturday night at the Queen's Theatre, and the reception accorded to Messrs. E. G. Hemmerde and Francis Neilson's stirring play was just as enthusiastic as on the first night

KINGSWAY THEATRE

GREAT QUEEN STREET, W.C.

Proprietress - - Miss LENA ASHWELL

Special Matinees of

A Doll's House

By Henrik Ibsen

Translated by William Archer. Produced by John Pollock.

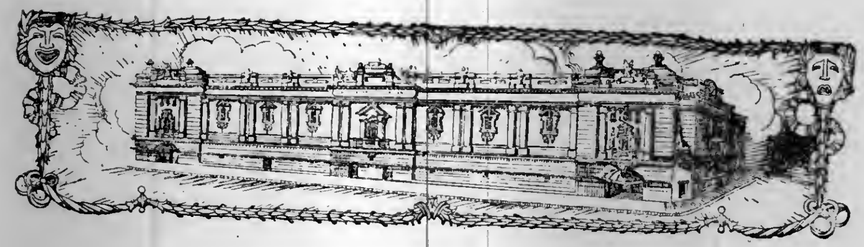
卐

Ben Webster

(By kind permission of Mr. Oscar Asche).

Ivan Berlyn — Rosalind Ivan

E. H. Brooke — Jean Bloomfield



E. Cresfan — Blanche Grand

AND

Lydia Yavorska

卐

On Tuesdays and Thursdays at 2.30 until further notice.

OPENING LONDON OPERA HOUSE.

Nov 13

A mighty audience assembled at Mr. Oscar Hammerstein's superb opera house in Kingsway on Monday night. The new home of lyric drama has seating accommodation for 2,700, and this number was exceeded on the opening night, while hundreds were turned away. On every hand expressions of admiration for the new and beautiful opera house were heard, and if, as the old Greek philosopher said, "'Tis not in mortals to command success, we'll do more, we'll deserve it," and this Mr. Hammerstein certainly does for his courage and enterprise.

The opening attraction was the first performance in England of an historical opera, in five acts, founded on the novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz, libretto by Henri Cain, music by Jean Nougués, entitled :—

"QUO VADIS?"

The LONDON OPERA HOUSE
Kingsway. W.C.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN
SOLE DIRECTOR

Winter Season
20 Weeks
of
GRAND OPERA

KINGSWAY THEATRE

Proprietress .. MISS LENA ASHWELL. W.C.

LYDIA YAVORSKA'S SEASON.

Saturday Evening	SATURDAY Evening
Dec. 2	Dec. 2	1911
Orch. Stall	Orchestra Stall, 10/6
No G17	No G17
This to be retained	This portion to be given up

This Ticket is sold subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable cause, and is sold only subject to this condition.

"The Lower Depths" is already known to London audiences, having been performed by the Stage Society at the Great Queen Street Theatre on Nov. 30, 1903. There is practically no plot in the story; the piece is in effect an "extremely vivid presentment of the submerged levels of society"; the society that inhabits "doss" houses, and is composed of drunkards, wastrels, "unfortunates," consumptives, tramp-philosophers, and so on; the society in which Gorki, with his poet's soul, lived many terrible years; the bed-rock of humanity, but humanity still, with all its vices inordinately developed, thanks to conditions and environment, but with a touch of the Godhead in every bit of the living driftwood, raising it above the level of the "beasts that perish"; while the sufferers strive ineffectually to clothe themselves in the callousness that both protects and kills. "The Lower Depths" is more a wonderful picture painted by the hand of a master on a large canvas than a play; the colours are not the pleasant tints of imagination, but the drab hues of actuality.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.

THE LOWER DEPTHS.

A Play in 4 Acts.

By MAXIM GORKI.

Translated by LAURENCE IRVING.

Characters in the play in the order of their appearance.

The Baron		VINCENT CLIVE
Kvashnya	(a hawker of meat pies.)	CLARE GREET
Bubnov	(a dyer and cap maker)	E. H. BROOKE
Kleshtsh	(a locksmith)	C. F. COLLINGS
Nastya		LYDIA YAVORSKA
Anna	(wife of Kleshtsh)	HAIDÉE WRIGHT
Sahtin		HERBERT BUNSTON
The Actor		LEWIS WILLOUGHBY
Kostylov	(keeper of the Night Shelter)	J. H. BREWER
Vaska, The Cinder		O. P. HEGGIE
Natasha	(sister to Vassilissa)	JEAN BLOOMFIELD
Luka	(a wanderer)	HOLMAN CLARK
Alyoshka	(a bootmaker)	RICHARD NEVILLE
Vassilissa	(wife of Kostylov)	FRANCES WETHERALL
Medvediev	(Vassilissa's uncle, a policeman)	ALBAN ATWOOD
The Tartar	(a street porter)	IVAN BERLYN
Wen	(a street porter)	SIDNEY TEVERSHAM

Acts I, II and IV—An Underground room in a Night Shelter in Moscow.

Act III—The Streets outside the Night Shelter.

The play is produced by John Pollock and Frank Collins from plans by A. Andreev, principal Producer at the National Theatre, Belgrade, formerly of the Artistic Theatre Moscow, where "The Lower Depths" was produced under the direction of the author.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

EVERY EVENING at 8.45,

Miss MARIE TEMPEST

By arrangement with Messrs. VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENTS

THE HONEYMOON

PRECEDED AT 8.15 BY

TUPPENCE PLEASE

BY

SEWELL COLLINS.

Millicent	Miss MARGARET MOFFAT
Griffin	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
Benson	Mr. WILFRED SHINE
Claude	HIMSELF

Scene—The Public Telephone Call Office of a Metropolitan Hotel.

With apologies to the National Telephone Co.

ROYALTY THEATRE
Dec. 7
1911
Orchestra Stall
Ten Shillings & Sixpence
Row G
No. 6
TO RIGHT
DUNLOP TYRES

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors .. The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee .... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON.

To-Night, Saturday, December 9th, 1911, at 8.

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S Revival of

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS"

A Play in Three Acts, by RICHARD GANTHONY

Horace Parker	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
A Tramp	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
Arthur Dicey	Mr. E. W. TARVER
Dr. Chapman	...Mr. W. FAZAN
Mr. Ferguson	Mr. EDGAR B. PAYNE
Sir E. Vivian	Mr. HENRI LAURENT
Mr. Shillingford	Mr MONTAGUE ELPHINSTONE
Sir Roland Wright	Mr WILLSHIRE
Joe, the Coster	Mr. FRANK STONEY
"The Emperor	Master SYDNEY FUNSTONE
Muggeridge	Mr. GILBERT ESMOND
Jim	Mr. HERBERT ALEXANDER
Policeman	Mr. EDWARD Y. RAE
Man Servant (at Mrs. Clarence's)	Mr. REGINALD BESANT
Watchman	Mr. W. ASHTON
Boy	Master R. CHURCHILL
The Messenger from Mars	Mr CHARLES B. VAUGHAN
Miss Parker	... Miss KATE TYNDALL
Mrs. Clarence	Miss MONA HARRISON
Bella	... Miss ENID LESLIE
Polly	... Miss GWYNNE HERBERT
A Flower Girl	... Miss MOLLY FARRELL
A Poor Woman	Miss LYDIA RACHEL
Girl	Miss BESSIE COURTNEY
Minnie Templar	Miss JESSIE BATEMAN

Guests, etc.—Miss Phyllis Barker, Miss Stephanie Beresford, Miss Mary Fielden, Mr. William Hulbert, Mr. Joseph Cherry

ACT I. .. Inside Horace Parker's House. Time, 9 p.m. (The Dream begins)
ACT II. ... Outside Mrs. Clarence's House. Time, 11 p.m. (The Dream goes on)
ACT III ... ... Same as Act I. Time, 1 a.m. (The Dreamer wakes)

The Play Produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Miss Jessie Bateman's and Miss Kate Tyndall's dresses by MADAME ADELE, 1, Hanover Street, W. Scenery by J. A. FRASER
Furniture by OETZMANN & Co. LTD., Hampstead Road Wigs by CLARKE, S.

Matinees Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30

FIRST MATINEE, WEDNESDAY NEXT, DECEMBER 13th, at 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music:—

1—(a) ENGLISH AIRS (by request) ... ... Arr. by Grimston
(b) VALSE ... ... "Les Cloches" ... ... Lemaire
(c) CELESTA SOLO ... ... "Essanay" ... ... Ford
(d) TWO-STEP ... ... Mid the Cotton Blossoms ... ... Keiser

3—(a) VALSE ... ... "Mystery of Amore" ... ... Grimston
(b) CELESTA SOLO ... ... Rosemary ... ... Lotz
(c) TWO-STEP ... ... Little Grey Alice ... ... Cox

The Celesta & Mustel Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 80, Wigmore Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by BLUTHNER & Co., 27, Wigmore Street, W.

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... ... E. W. TARVER

Prices—Boxes, £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s. Other Rows, 4s
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 74.

General Manager ... ... T. B. VAUGHAN

252

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

Editorial communications should be addressed to The Editor, "The Daily Mail," Carmelite House, London, E.C.

Tele.: Holborn 6000.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1911.

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS."

The twelve years that have passed since Mr. Charles Hawtrey first presented "A Message from Mars" at the Avenue Theatre have fallen very lightly on that phenomenally successful dream play, and its revival on Saturday evening at the Prince of Wales's Theatre filled the house with an audience as enthusiastic as that to which the play came as a great and welcome surprise a dozen years ago.

"A Message from Mars" is good fare. It is Christmas fare, too, for one never knows what gift of surprise it is about to spring upon one—laughter or tears, farce, comedy, or melodrama.

Horace Parker, the rich amateur astronomer who dreamed that a messenger from Mars came to earth to convert him from a selfish into a generous man, is one of the notable characters in Mr. Hawtrey's repertory, and Saturday's audience—as hundreds of others had done before—succumbed to the child-like, innocent appeal of his eyes when it was suggested that selfishness was a component part of the astronomer's entity. It was all capital fun—the humour of farce, the heroics of melodrama, the charm of a fairy play, the quick change of pantomime combining to make an ideal holiday play.

Mr. Hawtrey has a capital company around him; Miss Jessie Bateman, Miss Enid Leslie, Miss Kate Tyndall, Mr. Arthur Grenville, and Mr. Charles B. Vaughan all rendered splendid assistance in winning the unanimous approval of a crowded house.

J. W.

253

St. James's Theatre

KING STREET,
ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

Sole Lessee and Manager - SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER

EVERY EVENING at 8.15 (MATINEES 2)

WILL BE ACTED

BELLA DONNA

A New Play, in Five Acts,

Adapted from the Novel by ROBERT HICHENS

By JAMES BERNARD FAGAN

Dr. Meyer Isaacson	GEORGE ALEXANDER
The Hon. Nigel Armine	CHARLES MAUDE (By Arrangement with FREDERICK HARRISON)
Mahmoud Baroudi	CHARLES BRYANT
Dr. Hartley	ATHOL STEWART
Sir Henry Grebe	HERBERT REA
Ibrahim	SHIEL BARRY
Hamza	G. TREVOR ROLLER
Hassan	ALFRED HARRIS
Monks	HAROLD HOLLAND
Mrs. Chepstow	Mrs. PATRICK CAMPBELL
Mrs. Marchmont	MARY GREY
Marie	LYDIA BRANSCOMBE

Act I. ... ... Dr. Meyer Isaacson's Consulting Room

Act II. ... ... Drawing-room in the Villa Androud

Act III. ... ... A Temple on the Nile near Luxor

Act IV. ... ... The Deck of the "Loulia"

Act V. ... ... Exterior of the Villa Androud

"BELLA DONNA."

Play, in Five Acts, Adapted by James Bernard Fagan from the Novel by Robert Hichens, Produced at the St. James's Theatre on Saturday, Dec. 9.

There was always something strange and esoteric about Mr. Robert Hichens. He came up in the times of "Dorian Gray" and Aubrey Beardsley, of eccentricities and abnormalities, of yellow books and green carnations; and the stern and uncompromising expression with which he regards humanity in his portrait on Mr. George Alexander's programme at the St. James's is not altogether a misrepresentation of the camera. He is a practical playwright as well as a novelist —did he not write "The Daughters of Babylon" in collaboration with Mr. Wilson Barrett, and had he not shares in "The Medicine Man" at the Lyceum and "Becky Sharp" at the Prince of Wales's?

The story of the wanton who marries a man for his prospects, is disappointed in her expectations of wealth and title, turns from him to a paramour, and tries to get rid of the husband by poison, is in itself enthralling; but Mr. Hichens has given a new significance to it by the introduction of a quite modern personage and by novel surroundings. The character of Baroudi, the educated Egyptian, who combines with a veneer of civilisation all the unscrupulousness, falsity, and cruelty of the ancient East, and revenges himself by intrigues with European women for the subjugation of his race by the English, is a new and striking one, and redeems the play from commonplace.

The action opens in the consulting-room of Dr. Meyer Isaacson, the judicious and enlightened modern physician, the father confessor of so many fashionable sinners. To him comes the notorious Mrs. Chepstow, who, after being divorced for her fault, has been expelled from society, and has "kept house" for man after man, much to their loss and disadvantage. Isaacson is the intimate friend of the Hon. Nigel Armine, a clever engineer, who loves the desert, and has done great things in connection with the improvement of the Upper Nile. It is Armine's belief that bad people can be made good by believing they are so, and he is applying his theory to the regeneration of Mrs. Chepstow. As he is the expectant heir to a vast property—his brother, a wealthy peer, is an invalid without children—he is worth winning; and Mrs. Chepstow charms him by delicate and ingenious pretences till he is brought to the point of asking her to marry him. This is the substance of the first act. In the second, which takes place in a villa up the Nile, Armine learns by letter that his brother's wife has had offspring, which puts an end, of course, to his expectations. Bitterly disappointed, wearied of the part she is playing, and with her perverse cravings ungratified, Mrs. Armine turns for consolation to a Turkish friend of her husband's, a wealthy financier, named Baroudi. He takes the Oriental view of women, and is by no means inclined to injure his business projects by running away with Mrs. Armine or by causing a scandal. So he gives her a subtle poison, with a subtler suggestion of how she should use it. So ends the second act.

The third and fourth are taken up with the slow poisoning of Armine by his wife, and his salvation, when almost in extremis, by his friend Isaacson, who comes to the rescue, exposes the poisoneress, and forces her to abandon her prey. There is now nothing left for Mrs. Armine but to become Baroudi's mistress. But the fellow has already grown tired of her; and when she throws herself at his head he simply rejects her, and she is driven despairing and desperate into the desert.

ALDWYCH THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

General Manager Mr. ALBERT ARCHDEACON

(Who holds the Licence of the Lord Chamberlain).

Every Afternoon at 2.30 and Evening at 8.30.

The Golden Land of Fairy Tales

Fairy Play in Two Acts, with Prologue and Epilogue.

Translated and adapted by A. H. QUARITCH and MAURICE RAYE.

Music Composed by HEINRICH BERTÉ. Produced by SYDNEY ELLISON.

Scenery and Costumes designed by CHEVALIER FORMILLI.
Drop Curtain designed and painted by CHEVALIER FORMILLI.
Costumes made under the direction of EMILIO COMELLI by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., C. ALIAS, Ltd., Miss M. FISHER, J. A. HARRISON & Co., Ltd., MUELLE and ALEXANDRA.
Armour by C. BRAND of PARIS.
Scenery painted by WALTER HANN, HARRY BROOKE, BRUCE SMITH and ALFRED CRAVEN.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Lighting by THOMAS J. DIGBY. Pianos by BECHSTEIN.

Musical Director ... ... EMIL KREUZ

Assistant Manager ... ... Mr. DONALD BAYLIS
Stage Manager ... ... Mr. FRANK PARKER

PRICES:—Boxes £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 1s.; Stalls 10/6 and 7/6; Dress Circle 6- and 5/-; Upper Circle 4/- and 3/-

CHILDREN HALF PRICE TO ALL PARTS.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. L. A. BACK) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone: 2315 GERRARD.

THE PROLOGUE

CAST:

The Fairy Queen
Miss Maud Cressall
Granny - Mrs. Alfred Davis
Lotty - Miss Agnes Glynne
The Wanderer
Mr. Shakespeare Stewart
Children and Fairies.

SCENE - A Peasant's Cottage

ACT I. PICTURE I.

Little Red Riding Hood

CAST:

Red Riding Hood
Miss Florrie Lewis
The Grandmother
Miss Joy Chatwyn
The Wolf - Mr. Alfred Latell
The Huntsman
Mr. Basil Seymour
The Shepherd
Mr. Walter Cross

SCENE I. - At the Cross Roads
SCENE II. - The Grandmother's Cottage

ACT I. PICTURE II.

Puss in Boots

CAST:

Puss in Boots - Mr. Alfred Latell
The Princess - Miss Joan Trevitt
The Miller's Son
Mr. Walter Cross
The King - Mr. Charles A. White
The Chamberlain
Mr. Arthur Cleave
The Giant Ogre - Mr. J. M. East
Tom Thumb
Miss Dorothy Turner
The Hare
Master Harold Barrett
Courtiers, Peasants, etc.

SCENE - A Clearing in the Wood showing the Giant's Castle

ACT I. PICTURE III.

The Magic Wood

CAST:

The Fairy Amora - Miss Maud Cressall
Cinderella - - Miss Mary Glynne
Snowdrop - - Miss Elise Craven
The Sleeping Beauty
Miss Marjorie Moore
Prince Arthur - - Mr. Rohan Clensy
Prince Richard - Mr. Bobbie Andrews
Prince Henry - - - Mr. Jack Hobbs
The Page - - Miss Ada Glynne
The Magician - - Mr. Patric Curwen
Elves, Evil Spirits, etc.

SCENE - A Dark and Gloomy Wood

15 Mins. INTERVAL.

ACT II. PICTURE IV.

CINDERELLA

CAST:

Cinderella - - Miss Mary Glynne
The Stepmother - Miss Lena Flowerdew
The Stepsisters
The Misses Rhoda Beresford and Honoria Elliot
The Bull Dog - - Mr. Alfred Latell
The Queen - Miss Blanka Stewart
The King - Mr. Shakespeare Stewart
Prince Richard - Mr. Bobbie Andrews
The Master of Ceremonies
Mr. Arthur Cleave
The Minister of State
Mr. Basil Seymour
The Court Marshal
Mr. Charles A. White
The Page - - - Miss Ada Glynne
Nobles and Ladies, Heralds, Pages, Guards, etc.

SCENE I. - Cinderella's Kitchen
SCENE II. - The Ball Room a. the Royal Palace
SCENE III. - Cinderella's Kitchen

ACT II. PICTURE V.

SNOWDROP

CAST:

Snowdrop - Miss Elise Craven
Prince - - Mr. Jack Hobbs
The Queen - Miss Joy Chatwyn
The Huntsman
Mr. J. Patric Curwen
The Chief Dwarf
Miss Dorothy Turner
Huntsmen, Peasants, etc.

SCENE I. - The Queen's Boudoir
SCENE II. - Outside the Dwarfs' Hut in the Forest

ACT II. PICTURE VI.

The Sleeping Beauty

CAST:

The Sleeping Beauty
Miss Marjorie Moore
Prince
Mr. Rohan Clensy
The King
Mr. Shakespeare Stewart
Ladies in Waiting, Courtiers, Guards, etc.

The Scene is modelled on the pictures by Sir Edward Burne-Jones "The Legend of the Briar-Rose."

"THE GOLDEN LAND OF FAIRY TALES."

A Fairy Play, in Two Acts, with Prologue and Epilogue. Translated and Adapted from the German by A. H. Quaritch and Maurice Raye. Music Composed by Heinrich Berté. Produced at the Aldwych Theatre on Thursday, Dec. 14, 1911.

The scene of the prologue, which is the shabby interior of a poor peasant's hut, an ancient dame who has fallen fast asleep and her half-a-dozen grandchildren are sitting at a table. Outside a storm is raging, and suddenly a knock at the door is heard. The eldest child opens the door, and an old man enters. He craves a few minutes' rest, a crust of bread, and a drink of water. His modest requirements having been satisfied, he, in gratitude for their kindness, presents the children with the only thing that he possesses—a book of fairy tales, trusting that it will afford them many hours of happiness. As the stranger passes out Graodmother awakes, takes the book, and begins to read: "Once upon a time——" Then it grows dark, and the Queen of Fairy Tales appears, and invites the little ones to enter with her, "hand-in-hand, in the Children's Wonderland."

Then follows a dramatic representation of the story of Little Red Riding Hood, but children well read in fairy lore will be quick to note that there are variations from the original tale. A bold huntsman kills the wolf, but not before the hungry animal has swallowed both Little Red Riding Hood and her grandmother! But by some miraculous means they are restored to life, and the scene ends with a merry dance round the dead wolf's head by the dame, the little girl, and their brave rescuer. The next story is that of "Puss in Boots," and into this legend are introduced Tom Thumb and a very comical hare, which puts half-a-dozen yokels to flight. The "third picture" of the first act represents the Magic Wood. Hither come three gallant princes, who kill the adder-king, and thus sets free the fairy Amora. She presents each of them with the wonder-flower, by means of which they compel the magician, whose realms they have entered, to allow them to peep into the magic mirror, in which they see visions of the sleeping beauty, Snowwhite, and Cinderella.

The remaining stories are those of "Cinderella," in which a funny dog is introduced, "Snowdrop"—quite a tragic episode revealing how a wicked queen attempted to murder the little heroine—and finally, "the sleeping beauty" who is awakened by the kiss of a king's son. The seventh, and last, picture is the vision of the Golden Land, where the Fairy Queen is seen reclining amid flowers, while the attendant fairies dance before her. A rainbow adds to the charm of this delightful picture, and a fairy ballet is introduced, in which the remarkably clever dancing of the little girls, the Misses Florrie Lewis and Dorothy Turner, elicited loud applause.

THE

COMEDY THEATRE.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30; MATINEE SATURDAY AT 2.30

THE MARIONETTES

By Arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.

MR. ARTHUR HARDY'S PRODUCTION.

SPECIAL MATINEES:

MONDAY, DECEMBER 18th, 1911 (113th Performance), and Every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at 3.

A Farcical Fantastic Play entitled

VICE VERSÂ

By F. ANSTEY.

Founded by the Author on his own Novel of the same name.

Paul Bultitude ...	Colonial Produce Broker of Mincing Lane and 170 Westbourne Terrace; afterwards, except in appearance, his son Dick	Mr. FREDERICK VOLPE
Dick Bultitude ...	his Son; afterwards, except in appearance, his Father Paul	Mr. SPENCER TREVOR
Barbara Bultitude ...	(his Daughter) ...	Miss CICELY ELDON
Marmaduke Paradine ...	(his Brother-in-Law) ...	Mr. C. M. LOWNE
Dr. Grimstone ...	Principal of Crichton House School, Market Rodwell, Herts.	Mr. ARTHUR PLAYFAIR
Dulcie...	(his Daughter) ...	Miss PHYLLIS EMBURY
Mr. Blinkhorn, M.A., Oxon	Senior Assistant Master at Crichton House School	Mr. C. LEVESON LANE
Mr. Tinkler, B.A., Camb.	(Junior Assistant do.) ...	Mr. BRIAN EGERTON
Tipping	Boys at Crichton House	Mr. ARTHUR PHILIPS
Jolland		Master F. THORNDIKE
Chawner		Master HEREWARD KNIGHT
Biddlecombe		Master JOSEPH VICTOR
Coker		Master RUSSELL WRAY
Coggs		Master H. P. STEWART
Kiffin		Master LEN BETHELL
Boaler	(Butler at 170 Westbourne Terrace	Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE
Rhoda... ...	(Parlourmaid at 170 Westbourne Terrace)	Miss MAY TAVERNER
Ellen	(Housemaid at 170 Westbourne Terrace)	Miss JEAN BLOOMFIELD
A Nurse	... ...	Miss KATHLEEN GOWER
Cecily... ...	(a small friend of Barbara's)	Miss MARJORIE DANE
Peter	(her younger brother) ...	Master PHILIP N. LLOYD

Scholars at Crichton House School:—Masters LESLIE HOBBS, R. JACKSON, H. V. POTTER, F. REYNDERS, F. E. ROBBINS, C. ST. JOHN.

ACT I. Scene 1 ... ... Mr. Bultitude's Library at 170 Westbourne Terrace
The curtain will remain down 3 minutes between Scenes 1 and 2 of Act I., during which the Audience are requested to remain seated.

Scene 2 ... ... Class Room at Crichton House

ACT II. ... ... Class Room at Crichton House. (Some days later)

ACT III. ... ... Mr. Bultitude's Library. (Three hours later)

The Orchestra under the direction of Mr. HERBERT F. HAINES.

Incidental Music arranged by BIAGIA BUCALOSSI.

Scenery by F. L. SCHMITZ. Wigs by CLARKSON. Dresses designed and executed by Mrs. CALEB PORTER.

Acting Manager	For Mr. Arthur Hardy	Mr. FRED PEMBERTON
Stage Manager		Mr. W. W. KEENE
Assistant Stage Manager		Mr. GEORGE ROBINSON

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. ARTHUR HARDY.

PRICES.—Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s. and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Amphitheatre, 1s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Telephone GERRARD 3724.

Business Manager (For Comedy Theatre) - LEONARD LILLIES

2 260

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE,

OFFENBACH'S OPERA

"ORPHÉE AUX ENFERS"

PRESENTED UNDER THE TITLE OF ORPHEUS

IN THE UNDERGROUND.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PRODUCTION

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20th, AT 7,

AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT EVENING AT 8.

(No Performances on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23rd).

OFFENBACH'S OPERA

"ORPHÉE AUX ENFERS"

Will be Presented under the Title of

ORPHEUS

IN THE UNDERGROUND.

Produced under the direction of Sir Herbert Tree.

Version by Messrs. Alfred Noyes, Frederick Norton and The Producer.

The Prologue will be Spoken by LOTTIE VENNE as MRS. GRUNDY.

Pluto	(An infernal fellow)	LIONEL MACKINDER
Jupiter	(A self-made Monarch)	FRANK STANMORE
Orpheus	(A post impressionist Musician)	COURTICE POUNDS
John Styx	(Pluto's Valet. Ex-King and Purveyor of Lethe Water)	WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Mercury	(Of the Court Circular)	PETER UPCHER
Morpheus	(The Hall Porter—a sleepy person)	KINGSLEY LARK
Bacchus	(The Spirit of Wine)	ROSS SHORE
Mars	(A War God. Lately severely handled by mundane critics)	PHILIP MERIVALE
Eurydice	(A very modern Maid of Athens, U.S.A.)	ELEANOR PERRY
Mrs. Grundy	(A highly respectable person with a prologue)	LOTTIE VENNE
Juno	(Lady Wife to Jupiter)	GRACE CROFT
Diana	(A determined Spinster though a mighty Hunter)	JANE GAIR
Venus	(A Goddess with a past, a present and a future)	HILDA ANTONY
Cupid	(A bright little fellow and a good shot)	BETTY CALLISH
		By courtesy of Mr. George Edwardes.
Minerva	(A blue stocking in armour sometimes mistaken for Britannia)	OLIVE TEMPEST
Cybele	(A divinity of doubtful antecedents)	RITA WALLACE
Hebe	(A heavenly Tweenie)	ISABEL HATCHARD
Pomona	(A thoroughly nice Goddess)	MYFANWY NEWELL

ACT I.

SCENE 1. A Watteau Glade—Joseph Harker.

SCENE 2. In the Clouds, Olympia—Joseph Harker.

ACT II.

SCENE 1. A Boudoir in Hades—E. H. Ryan.

SCENE 2. In the Shades—Alfred Craven.

The Costumes have been designed and the Scenery suggested by PERCY ANDERSON.
Costumes carried out by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C. Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

The Dances have been arranged by SIGNOR ROSI.

MATINEES.

[illegible] every following Wednesday Thursday & Saturday.

[illegible] Pantomime [illegible] taking the place of Christmas Eve there will be [illegible] Performances on that day.

Special Matinee Teas are served in the Foyer of the Theatre after each Morning Performance, consisting of freshly made Tea, cut Bread and Butter and Cake, Price 6d. per person inclusive.

The Theatre has now been fitted throughout with the Ozonair System of Ventilation for the constant supply of pure fresh air, by Messrs. OZONAIR, LTD 96, Victoria Street, S.W.

The safety Curtain will be lowered in the presence of the audience once during each performance.

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.— The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING. ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID. CHORUS MASTER—ALFRED BELLEW.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE

ORPHEUS
IN THE UNDERGROUND

It was in the October of 1858 that "Orphée aux Enfers," the work of a comparatively unknown composer, Jules Offenbach, and of the librettist, Crémieux—working on an idea of Ludovic Halévy's—was produced with success in Paris at the Théâtre Compte, in the passage Choiseul, which Offenbach had taken in 1855, when it was occupied by a conjurer and entertainer. The piece was a characteristic product of the period. The blood of the coup d'état and its memories had long been washed away in the splendour of the new streets and the general commercial prosperity. The credit of the Crimea had obscured the fact that France was mastered and muzzled by an adventurer; and the military triumphs of Solferino and Magenta were close at hand to complete the illusion. From society of this sort, the music of Offenbach was certain of a welcome. "Orphée aux Enfers" certainly smells strongly of the Second Empire, and the spirit of sardonic, sceptical irony mingles with that of irresponsible frivolity both in the libretto and the music. What can be quainter than the idea of turning Orpheus—the faithful husband of classic legend—into a husband heartily tired of his wife, and only prevented from parting with her by the fear of the damage which the scandal might do to his Academy of Music? How humorous the notion of his being goaded on to pursue Eurydice, when she leaves him for the seductive Pluto, for the force of Public Opinion—or, as we say over here, Mrs. Grundy! And how droll, and yet how logical, the difficulties of Jupiter, as a leader of society, anxious that appearances shall be kept up and propriety preserved at all costs, and worried extremely by the very natural rebellion of his subjects! The cast which performed the opera in Paris in 1858 was by no means a brilliant one; but the book, and above all the music, carried everything, and made "Orphée aux Enfers" an immediate success.

Though Offenbach's genius was cynical and shallow, he resembled Artemus Ward, who in one of the chapters of his "book" remarked that the "old man" could still "jerk a pome" when necessary. As he showed in his "Contes d'Hoffmann," Offenbach had his wistful and even pathetic side, and could write a sentimental song as easily as a winning waltz or a jigging "can-can" tune. There are several really sweet sentimentalities in the score of "Orphée," notably Eurydice's song in the first act to the verses beginning—

La mort m'apparait souriante
Qui vient me frapper pres de toi;
Elle m'attire, elle me tente;
Mort, je t'appelle, emporte-moi!

As for the minuet, the infernal galop, and the other airs of the opera, they are essentially gay joyous, and popular, and time has, by allowing us to half-forget them, made them seem almost new.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

Proprietor - - - - - Mr. J. H. LEIGH
Under the Management of Mr. J. H. LEIGH & Mr. R. T. E. NEEVES

Mr. ARTHUR PHILLIPS' SEASON

General Manager - - - - - - A. S. PIGOTT

THURSDAY. DECEMBER 21st. 1911.

AND EVERY EVENING (except December 23rd) at 8.50

A NEW PLAY, entitled—

The Great Gay Road

(A ROMANTIC COMEDY)

By TOM GALLON.

Characters in the order in which they appear on the Stage.

Hilary Tolfrey Kite	...	Mr. ARTHUR PHILLIPS
"Crook" Perkins	...	Mr. C. B. CLARENCE
A Policeman...	...	Mr. LUMSDEN WARDE
Nancy Sylvain	...	Miss CHRISTIE LAWS
Rodney Foster	...	Mr. OWEN NARES
Miss Azalea Vickery	...	Miss KATHARINE POLI
Backus	...	Mr. FRED LEWIS
Sir Crispin Vickery	...	Mr. G. W. ANSON
Colonel Napoleon Trigg ...	...	Mr. LOUIS GOODRICH

Synopsis of Scenery.

—o—

ACT I. - - The Road outside Vickery's Nest, Hampstead

ACTS II., III. and IV. - - - - Library of Vickery's Nest

TIME - - The Present.

The Song, before the Curtain rises on the 1st Act, by Miss LOUISE LUND.

Dresses by Madame LOUISE, of 221, Oxford Street.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Furniture by SPILLMANS.
Scenery by WALTER JOHNSTONE.

The Play Produced by NORMAN McKINNEL.

Preceded at 8.20 by

HAROLD MONTAGUE in a Humorous Pianologue

(By kind permission of the Palace Theatre and Messrs. Maskelyne & Devant)

CHAPPELL GRAND PIANOFORTE.

MATINEES

Every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30

Stage Manager -		W. H. QUINTON
Acting Manager -	(for Mr. Arthur Phillips)	- HOWARD LESLIE
Musical Director		- BRIGATA BIG VLOSSI
General Manager	(for J. H. Leigh)	Mr. JAMES ANNING

Readers of Mr. Tom Gallon's humorous and pathetic novel, "The Great Gay Road," had no difficulty in following the plot of the play of that name, which was performed for the first time in London, under the auspices of Mr. Norman McKinnel, at the Court Theatre, on Thursday night, after a preliminary production last March at Torquay.

Hilary Tolfrey Kite, thirty-six years old—"gentleman," deserter, "beloved vagabond"—in whose veins "the song of the road sings always," in company with "Crook" Perkins, a genuine tramp, his humble and admiring companion, attached to him by gratitude for rescue from a bectoring bully in a common lodging-house, finds himself penniless and hungry, in the neighbourhood of Vickery's Nest, a substantial country house on Hampstead Heath. An open window, with a light always left burning at night against the possible return of the son of the house who, as a boy of sixteen, quarrelled with his irascible father and left home by that window twenty years before, attracts the wanderers to seek food and drink within. They are discovered by Sir Crispin Vickery, the master of the house, and, chance favouring the adventurers, they fall in with the assumption that they are the returned prodigal and his faithful bodyservant. The other members of the family, Sir Crispin's sister, Aunt Azalea, and a niece, Nancy Sylvain, adopted since the flight of his son Hildebrand, welcome the new relation as a charming acquisition to the very much martinet-ridden household. "Crook" Perkins is in clover, and though irked somewhat by his unfamiliar environment, he thoroughly enjoys his share of the fatted calf, and his doings supply many amusing incidents; but Hilary Kite, new "Cousin Hildebrand" to the charming and innocent Nancy, by his growing love for his pseudo-cousin, is led to feel his false position more acutely every day. He determines to overcome his love for Nancy, who is secretly engaged to the boy Rodney Foster, but the wheels of fortune bring retribution to him in the person of his former commanding officer, Colonel Napoleon Trigg, who denounces him as a deserter and an impostor.

Here the play departs a little from the story of the novel, in which Hilary Kite, when made to depart by the window through which he first entered, debonair to the last, prepares to take "the great gay road" again, raised and purified by his absorbing love for a good woman, for the author will not cheat his audience of their happy ending, and, ignoring the claims of "the boy," the curtain falls at the end of the fourth act a year later on Nancy in the arms of the reformed "Waster."

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

Editorial communications should be addressed to The Editor, "The Daily Mail," Carmelite House, London, E.C.

Tele.: Holborn 6000.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1911.

"THE GREAT GAY ROAD."

MR. TOM GALLON'S PLAY AT THE COURT THEATRE.

Mr. Arthur Phillips, who has already had one season at the Court Theatre, London, began another there last night with a play by Mr. Tom Gallon called "The Great Gay Road," which has a romantic story that may be set out thus:

Once upon a time there was a wicked tramp, and he rested one night on a seat under the garden hedge of a villa at Hampstead, and another tramp sat with him. Then in the moonlight a strange thing happened. A young man wearing a dinner jacket came down the road and whistled three times, and from the house came the girl he loved, and she told him that the light which burned in the ground-floor window of her uncle's house was set up every night as a promise of welcome to her cousin, who had taken it into his head to run away out into the world and get lost twenty years ago.

When the young man in the dinner jacket heard the story he bade his girl good-night, and the bad tramp went into the house, was accepted as the long lost son, and made the other tramp his valet.

Bad luck in sport, however, awakened the valet to the old glories of the Great Gay Road, and the discovery of the other tramp's identity nearly sent the two out together in search of the gaiety that was so sadly missing in Hampstead. But curiously enough the peppery old baronet was so happy with the bogus son that he made up his mind to keep him for himself, and the girl, in spite of the newly made relative's awful tendency to make tiresome speeches, took her heart away from the young man in the dinner jacket and put it by for the regenerated tramp.

The play did not need great acting, but Mr. O. B. Clarence as the faithful follower of the gentleman tramp gave the best performance of a loafer seen on the stage in recent years.

J. W.

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

ON THURSDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 21st, AT 8.

Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY'S PRODUCTION.

WHERE THE RAINBOW ENDS

By CLIFFORD MILLS and JOHN RAMSEY.
Music specially composed by Mr. ROGER QUILTER.

Characters

(in the order of their appearance)

Rosamund Carey	Miss ESME WYNNE
Crispian Carey	Master PHILIP TONGE
William	Master NOEL COWARD
Cubs	Master GUIDO CHIARLETTI
Matilda Flint...	Miss JEANNIE THOMAS
Joseph Flint	Mr. C. W. SOMERSET
Schlapps	Mr. HENRY MORRELL
The Genie of the Carpet	Mr. NORMAN MACOWAN
Jim Blunders	Master SIDNEY SHERWOOD
Betty Blunders	Miss DOT TEMPLE
St. George of England	Mr. REGINALD OWEN
The Dragon King	Mr. CLIFTON ALDERSON
Will o' the Wisp	Miss MAVIS YORKE
Dunks	Mr. REGINALD P. LAMB
The Sea Witch	Miss HELEN VICARY
Captain Carey	Mr NORMAN MACOWAN
Mrs. Carey	Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
The Slacker	Master HARRY DUFF
The Slitherslime	Mr. MAURICE TOSH
The Spirit of The Lake	Miss GRACE SEPPINGS
Dragon Sentry	Mr. J. K. EDRO
Hope	Miss ZOE GORDON
A Mother	Miss IVY WILLIAMS

Dragons, Hyenas, Elves, Flower Fairies, Dragon Flies, Rainbow Children, Spiders, Caterpillars, Toads, a Leopard, etc.

Flower Fairies:—Grace Sepping, Isla Raine, Rosie Block, Ruth Block.

Dragon Flies, Water Lillies, and Rainbow Children:—Ivy Bell, Edna Brown, Celia Block, Ella Jones, Eileen Grist, Rita Vivian, Irene Birch, Esmé Hersee, Ruby and Olga Warneford, Margaret Stuart, Dorothy Moody, Kathleen Jones, Marjorie Withey, etc.

Elves, Toads, Hyenas, etc.:—Leslie Ryecroft, Reginald Grasdorf, Philip Bates, Walter Woodgate, Norman Haddock, Jack Rea, John Renshaw, Robert Chapman, Maurice Hansard, Frank Bates, Jim Taylor, Sidney Spiro, Harry Withey, Ernest Wright, William Wodehouse, John Dixon, Arthur Brocknor, etc.

Dragons:—Norman Wrighton, Arthur Grayson, Charles Gordon, Maurice Tosh, A. Charlwood, Stanley Ramsden, Leslie Rea.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.	.. Scene 1.	Library at Riversdale, Maidenhead (Evening)
	Scene 2.	The Flight of the Carpet
ACT II.	.. Scene 1.	The Outskirts of the Dragon's Wood
ACT III.	.. Scene 1.	The Witch's Cove
	Scene 2.	The Dragon Wood (Evening)
	Scene 3.	The Lake at the end of the Wood (Night)
ACT IV.	.. Scene 1.	Ramparts of Dragon's Castle on topmost crag of Thundercloud Mountains
	Scene 2.	"Where the Rainbow Ends" (Where All Lost Loved Ones are Found)

Scenery designed by Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD and Painted by ALFRED E. CRAVEN.

Dresses designed by Mr. TOM HESLEWOOD and Executed by L. & H. NATHAN and Miss VIOLET MURRAY.

Animal Costumes by Messrs. ELKAN BROS. and FRED C. LABHART.

Music published by ELKIN & Co. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Dances arranged and children trained by Miss ITALIA CONTI.

Flying Effects by HAROLD ROSS. Electrical Effects by T. J. DIGBY.

Theatre Decorations by A. and L. UHLMANN.

The Play Produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Musical Director	(For Mr. Hawtrey)	Mr. W. JACKSON BYLES
Stage Director	..	Mr. B. CAMPLIN SMITH
Stage Manager	..	Mr. OSWALD STRONG
Business Manager	(For Savoy Theatre)	Mr. HARRY P. TOWERS

ON and AFTER BOXING DAY TWICE DAILY at 2 & 8.

Private Boxes, £5 5s., £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. First Circle (Reserved), Front Row, 5s.; other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Box Office (Mr. RICHARD WEAVER) open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.

Telephone: 2602 GERRARD. Telegrams: "NEWSAVO, LONDON."

General Manager ... (For Mr. Hawtrey) ... Mr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

The children this Christmas-tide should feel greatly indebted to Mr. Charles Hawtrey for having provided them with such a very charming entertainment as the fairy play produced at the Savoy on Thursday evening. In "Where the Rainbow Ends" the boy and girl playgoer will find a welcome change, after possibly a surfeit of pantomime, with its blend of old nursery story and the humour of the modern variety stage. Both young and old can follow with an interest that never slackens the strange adventures of the four children and their faithful four-footed companion in their perilous journey to the land "where the rainbow ends."

The story opens in the library at Riversdale, Maidenhead, where we find a little girl, Rosamund Carey, pooring over a book of fairy tales. Owing to the death of their cousin, Matthew, Rosamund and her brother, Crispian (who is being educated to follow the profession of a naval officer), have been left in charge of their uncle and aunt, Joseph and Matilda Flint, whose hard, cruel nature is plainly indicated by their patronymic. The children are informed that they are to be taken away from school at once, and that Crispian, who has come home for the holidays, is to begin life as an office boy. He is already in disgrace for having thrashed the page-boy, William, a malicious youth, caught behaving cruelly to Cubs, a young lion, and the pet of the two children. Their father and mother have, it appears, been shipwrecked, and not heard of for several years. In the library is a magic carpet, which belonged to their cousin, Matthew, and Rosamund, having learnt all about it from the fairy book, proposes that by its aid they shall go in search of their lost parents. Those who place implicit faith in the magic powers of the carpet will be conveyed by it to the "Land Where all Lost Loved Ones are Found." The genii of the Carpet is summoned, and instantly appears. He, however, warns the children that before reaching their destination they will have to travel through a country beset with dangers, its ruler being the Dragon King. Crispian's wish to have with them as fellow-travellers his chum, Jim Blunders, and that youth's little sister, Betty, is gratified. At their desire, too, St. George of England also appears, and promises the travellers his powerful protection. Then the four children and Cubs start on their adventurous journey.

The travellers are pursued not only by Uncle Joseph and Aunt Matilda, but also by the dreaded Dragon King. Curious things happen on the outskirts of the Dragon's Wood, and the straying away of little Betty leads to disastrous results, because her companions go in search of her, and are captured by the myrmidons of the Dragon King. They are confined in his castle on the topmost crag of Thundercloud Mountains; and a terrible death stares them in the face. But the two boys succeed in hauling down their captor's flag and putting in its place the English ensign. Then of course, St. George hastens to their rescue, engages the Dragon in mortal combat, and eventually slays him. Thus the children are able to reach the "land where the rainbow ends," at which delighted spot Rosamund and her brother are welcomed with many expressions of joy by their parents.

Duke of York's Theatre.

Sole Lessee and Manager - - - CHARLES FROHMAN.

On Saturday next, December 23rd, 1911, at 7.30 o'clock prompt.

CHARLES FROHMAN will present

PETER PAN

Or, THE BOY WHO WOULDN'T GROW UP.

By J. M. BARRIE.

The Music Composed and arranged by John Crook.

Peter Pan		PAULINE CHASE
Jas. Hook	(The Pirate Captain)	HOLMAN CLARK
Mr. Darling		DONALD CALTHROP
Mrs. Darling		VIVA BIRKETT
Wendy Moira Angela Darling		HILDA TREVELYAN
John Napoleon		STEPHEN THOMAS
Michael Nicholas Darling		ALFRED WILLMORE
Nana		EDWARD SILLWARD
Tinker Bell		JANE WREN
Tootles	Members of Peter's Band	GERTRUDE LANG
Nibs		STEPHANIE BELL
Slightly		W. WEST
Curly		MARJORIE GRAHAM
1st Twin		DORIS MACINTYRE
2nd Twin		ROSEMARY CRAIG
Smee		GEORGE SHELTON
Gentleman Starkey	Pirates	CHARLES TREVOR
Cookson		CHARLES MEDWIN
Mullins		CHRIS WALKER
Cecco		WILLIAM LUFF
Jukes		JAMES ENGLISH
Noodler		JOHN KELT
Great Big Little Panther	Redskins	Messrs. A. GRAND, D. DARRELL & S. SPENCER
Tiger Lily		HUMPHREY WARDEN
		MARGARET FRASER

Indians, KOLLO DEAS, LILY McINTYRE, DORA SEVENING GLADYS JESSON, and ALMA DUDLEY.

Mermaid		EVANGELINE HILLIARD
Baby Mermaid		MOYA NUGENT
Liza	Author of the Play	MOYA NUGENT
Crocodile		P. S. NAGLE and D. SEARLE
Ostrich		E. MARINI

Pack of Wolves, G. CARR, W. MANNING, W. SCOTT, PETER GRATA, V. PIERPOINT, A. H. KENT.

Act I. OUR EARLY DAYS. Scene, The Nursery.
Act II. THE NEVER, NEVER, NEVER LAND.
Scene. The House we built for Wendy.
Act III. MAROONER'S ROCK, OR THE MERMAID'S LAGOON.
(Showing an average ten minutes in Peter's Life).
Act IV. OUR HOME UNDER THE GROUND.
Act V. HOME, SWEET HOME.
Scene 1. The Pirate Ship.
Scene 2. A last glimpse of the Redskins.
Scene 3. The Nursery.
Scene 4. Outside the House.
Scene 5. The Tree Tops.

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. Dion Boucicault.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1911.

CHRISTMAS AT THE THEATRES.

TINKER BELL VISIBLE.

A NEW DELIGHT AT "PETER PAN."

Peter Pan ..... Pauline Chase
James Hook (the Pirate Captain) .... Holman Clark
Mr. Darling ..... Donald Calthrop
Mrs. Darling ..... Viva Birkett
Wendy Moira Angela Darling ..... Hilda Trevelyan
John Napoleon ..... Stephen Thomas
Michael Nicholas Darling ..... Alfred Willmore
Nana ..... Edward Sillward
Tinker Bell ..... Jane Wren
Smee ..... George Shelton
Gentleman Starkey ..... Charles Trevor

"Peter Pan" came back for the Christmas holidays to the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday evening to begin its eighth annual season in London. Evidently the popularity of Mr. Barrie's play is inexhaustible. There was not an empty seat in the theatre. Every row of chairs was filled with smiling-faced people, and when all the seats were filled Peter Pan's admirers continued to arrive, and they paid to be allowed to stand at the back and watch.

The story of Peter and the Darling family and Tinker Bell is just the same as ever, just as fascinating as ever. And this year there is an innovation that had a reception of a wildly enthusiastic character—wild enough to justify the author's daring attempt to interfere with this piece of public play property. It will be recollected by readers of The Daily Mail that Peter Pan is to have a statue erected to him in Kensington Gardens in the New Year, and evidently Mr. Barrie had this in his mind when he determined that this year Tinker Bell should become visible to the human eye.

Hitherto Tinker has been invisible to everyone but Peter Pan himself. To mortals her presence was merely indicated by a ball of light. In one line of the play Peter has every year said that Tinker was "a common sort of girl." It is true he only said so to one who was jealous of her, and the glimpse we got of her on Saturday night proved that Peter could sometimes edge away from the strict truth. She is a really pretty madcap, with masses of lovely golden hair and the most mischievous, heart-breaking smile a man ever encountered.

A LONG WAY OFF.

Fortunately, therefore—for the men—Tinker Bell was a long way off. We saw her, in fact, reflected in miniature in an apparatus that showed her to us as if seen through the wrong end of an opera-glass. And there the miniature reflection of lovely Tinker moving about, laughing, dancing, frowning, stamping her pretty foot—showing in all her moods how much Peter was to her—appeared to all of us for the first, but not the last, time. Tinker in absolute fact took Saturday's audience by storm. She became the heroine, she was called for, sung to, and cheered and had to be made visible again and again before the audience would consent to keep still.

Next year Mr. Barrie might think of changing the title, and marry Peter to Tinker.

The personnel of this year's company is much the same as last. The veteran Mr. George Shelton is still the beloved pirate Smee. Miss Pauline Chase and Miss Hilda Trevelyan are respectively Peter and Wendy. Mr. A. W. Baskcomb is no longer the Slightly, and that is a pity. And it is a pity also that the programme does not let us know who so charmingly acts the wordless part of Tinker Bell.

J. W.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

By arrangement with Mr. ARTHUR HARDY.

TWICE DAILY, at 2 & 7.45, for SIX WEEKS only (commencing Dec. 26th, 1911)

FREDERICK HARRISON

PRESENTS

THE BLUE BIRD

By MAURICE MAETERLINCK (Translated by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos.)

To Music by NORMAN O'NEILL.

NOTE.—The BLUE BIRD, inhabitant of the pays bleu, the fabulous blue country of our dreams, is an ancient symbol in the folk-lore of Lorraine, and stands for HAPPINESS.

Mummy Tyl	VIVIENNE WHITAKER
Daddy Tyl	E. A. WARBURTON
Tyltyl	DOROTHY BURGESS
Mytyl	MATTIE BLOCK
The Fairy Bérylune	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Bread	EDWARD RIGBY
Fire	ALLAN GLEN
Tylô, the Dog	ERNEST HENDRIE
Tylette, the Cat	NORMAN PAGE
Water	GLADYS ELLAM
Milk	GLADYS BURGESS
Sugar	H. R. HIGNETT
Light	MARY BARTON
Gaffer Tyl	ASHETON TONGE
Granny Tyl	DAISY ENGLAND
Night	MADGE MCINTOSH
Time	C. V. FRANCE
The Oak	E. A. WARBURTON
Neighbour Berlingot	CARLOTTA ADDISON
Neighbour Berlingot's Little Daughter ...	GENÉ REWSAND

The Poplar ...	J. DICKSON-KENWIN	The Wolf	G. HEWITSON
The Beech	JOSEPH O'BRIEN	The Pig	H. KNIGHT
Oak-Sapling ...	ELSIE HAYDEN	The Cow	CHARLES BISHOP
The Lime	E. ONSLOW	The Bull	A. ONSLOW
The Birch	E. H. LEVERETT	The Sheep	H. ELLAM
The Chestnut ...	JOHN ASTLEY	The Cock	CUTHBERT HOWARD
The Ivy	K. DENNYS	The Rabbit	HARRY SHERWOOD
The Willow ...	STEWART DAWSON	The Horse	A. BUCHANAN
The Goat	HATTON SINCLAIR	The Ass	LANGLEY SAY
The Blue Child ...	RUBY BLICK	The Boy Lover ...	M. BURGESS
Cold-in-the-Head ...	BLANCHE DAVIDSON	The Girl Lover ...	MARIE CROWDEN

Hours, Stars, etc.:—Misses CAREW, MORANDI, ETHERIDGE, KREUTZ, DREW, LINDLEY, PAGE, CALDICOTT, WATTS, DENE, HODGSON, BLAKE, AUSTIN, SINCLAIR, ROBINSON, HOPCRAFT, DAWE.

Leaves, Rags, Stuffs, etc.:—Misses HALES, MILNE, POWELL, CROWDEN, HAYDEN, GOODE, BLICK, OSLAND, ESLER, SHIELLS, GILL, HARRINGTON, ROE, ANDREWS, LESTER, SYMES, DAVIDSON, GROVES, S. MENDOZA, HAIGH, O'HANLON, ROGERS, THOMPSON, FOTHERGILL, R. MENDOZA, and Masters H. SHERWOOD, C. HOWARD, JAMES HORNE.

WHITNEY THEATRE,

Sole Proprietor and Manager ... ... F. C. WHITNEY

BOXING DAY and TWICE DAILY at 3 and 8.45.

Mr. F. C. WHITNEY

PRESENTS

MR. BRANDON THOMAS'S COMPANY in the Famous Comedy

CHARLEY'S AUNT

By BRANDON THOMAS.

Col. Sir Francis Chesney, Bart. Late Indian Service ... Mr. THEO. McOAUSLAND STEWART

Stephen Spettigue, Solicitor, Oxford ... ... Mr. HENRY HARE

Jack Chesney ... ... } Undergraduates at St. Olde's College ... Mr. ELYSTAN OWEN

Charles Wykeham ... ... } ... Mr. ROBERT BURNETT

Lord Fancourt Babberley, Brassett, a College Scout ... ... Mr. CHARLES WINDERMERE

Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez from Brazil ... ... Mr. SYDNEY COMPTON

Kitty Verdun, Spettigue's Ward ... ... Miss ADA FERRAR (by kind permission of Miss Marie Tempest)

Amy Spettigue, Spettigue's Niece ... ... Miss AMY BRANDON-THOMAS

Ela Delahay, an Orphan ... ... Miss URSULA GRANT

ACT I. ... ... Miss EVA ROWLAND

"When Pions Frauds are dispensations."—Hudibras.

ACT II. ... ... Jack Chesney's Rooms in College

"While there's Tea there's Hope."—Piero. Garden outside Jack Chesney's Rooms

ACT III. ... ... Drawing Room in Spettigue's House

"Dinner lubricates business."—Boswell.

The Management reserves the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head dress. This request is made for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

PRECEDED EACH EVENING AT 8 BY

A HIGHLAND LEGACY

By BRANDON THOMAS.

Tammy Tamson MacDonnel, a Highland Servant ... Mr. BRANDON THOMAS (his original part)

Gordon MacDonnel, Late Student at Bar ... ... Mr. CECIL KERR

Mr. Dobson, a retired Stock Broker ... ... Mr. EYONEY COMPTON

Cavendish Howley, an Actor ... ... Mr. HENRY HARE

Job Fixem, a Law Clerk ... ... Mr. MACKENZIE ROGAN

Mrs. Butler, Gordon's Landlady ... ... Miss NANCY HARDING

Clara, Mr. Dobson's Daughter ... ... Miss URSULA GRANT

SCENE: An Attic in Mrs. Butler's House. Time: To-day.

PRICES—Reserved Seats: Pit Stalls, 3s. 6d. Upper Circle, 3s. and 4s. Circle, 4s. and 5s. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Stalls, 6s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Private Boxes, £2 2s. and £3 3s. Unreserved Seats: Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3830 Gerrard.

General Manager ... ...

Acting Manager ... ...

Stage Manager ... ... MR. CECIL BARTH

Assistant Stage Manager ... ... MR. G. W. BOTELL

Musical Director ... ... MR. ROBERT BURNETT

Business Manager (for the Whitney Theatre) ... ... MR. MACKENZIE ROGAN

... ... MR. THEO. WARD

Costumes by MAISON COTTIN, 14 New Burlington Street.

Hats by Madame KOSKY, 4a Sloane Street, S.W.

Cigarettes by Messrs. ABDULLA, Ltd. Pianoforte supplied by Messrs. BRINSMEAD.

During the evening the Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. THEO. WARD, will perform the following selection of music:—

REMINISCENCES OF SCOTLAND ... ... Arr. by Godfrey

SELECTION ... ... Arr. by J. W. Jamey

Introducing: 1. "College Song" ... ...

NEW PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Under the Direction of ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

EVERY EVENING at 7-45 p.m.

MATINEES WEDNESDAYS & SATURDAYS at 2-30.

A NEW PRODUCTION OF THE GREAT ROMANTIC PLAY FROM THE FAMOUS WORK OF ALEXANDRE DUMAS.

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

By ARTHUR SHIRLEY and BEN. LANDECK.
Play Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.
Music arranged by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Characters:

D'Artagnan, A Young Gascon	... ...	Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
Athos	The Three Musketeers	Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Porthos	The Three Musketeers	Mr. TOM MOWBRAY
Aramis	The Three Musketeers	Mr. H. WILMOT JACKSON
De Treville, Captain of the Guard	...	Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
Louis XIII., King of France	... ...	Mr. FRED MORGAN
Cardinal Richelieu, the King's Favourite		Mr. BASSETT ROE
George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, the Queen's Lover	... .	Mr. GERALD AMES
Fenton, a Fanatic	... ...	Mr. CLIVE CURRIE
Planchet, Servant to D'Artagnan	...	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Grimaud	The Musketeers' Servants	Mr. DOUGLAS VINE
Bazin	The Musketeers' Servants	Mr. CHARLES HENRY
Landlord of the Post House	... ...	Mr. HARRY G. WRIGHT
Count de Rochefort, the Cardinal's Emissary	... ...	Mr. LEYTON CANCELLOR
Malines	Of the Guards	Mr. FRANK TENNANT
Jussac	Of the Guards	Mr. HENRY WINSTON
Bonacieux, Landlord	... ...	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Captain of the Port	... ...	Mr. RAYMOND WOOD
Anne of Austria, Queen of France	...	Miss MARY DIBLEY
Constance, Attendant on the Queen	...	Miss GILLIAN SCAIFE
Kitty, a Servant	... ...	Miss NANNIE MEADE
AND
Milady, the Cardinal's Spy	... ...	Miss ETHEL WARWICK

Musketeers, Cardinals, Guards, Royal Attendants, Courtiers, etc.

ACT I. Scene 1—THE QUEEN'S BOUDOIR.
Scene 2—GRAND HALL AT DE TREVILLES.
Scene 3—A STREET IN PARIS.
Scene 4—THE DUELLING GROUND, NEAR CARMES-DESCHAUX.

ACT II. Scene 1—AT THE PALACE OF THE LOUVRE.
Scene 2—A STREET IN PARIS.
Scene 3—THE DOVECOT INN AT CALAIS.

ACT III. Scene 1—ROOM IN THE HOUSE OF THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, IN LONDON.
Scene 2—FORT ST. NICHOLAS, DEAL.
Scene 3—CALAIS HARBOUR.
Scene 4—MILADY'S BEDCHAMBER.

ACT IV. Scene 1—THE POST HOUSE ON THE AMIENS ROAD.
Scene 2—THE KING'S PALACE.

Sword Fights arranged by PROFESSOR FÉLIX GRAVÉ.

Costumes, Wigs, Uniforms, etc., by CLARKSON.

The Scenery painted by the Lyceum Studio.

The Orchestra under the Direction of ALEXANDER HUMPHREYS will play the following selections:—

OVERTURE	... ...	"Marianella"	Julius Fûcik
SELECTION	... ...	"Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
SELECTION	... ...	"The Mousmé" ...	Monckton & Talbot
ENTR'ACTES	...	(a) "The Summer Coquette"	Lewis
		(b) "At the Post"	Hawley

Box Office (H. Kavsnagh) open Daily 10 to 10. Telephone 5983 (Gerrard).

Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 11s. 6d., £1 1s.
Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Grand Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. (Reserved); Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... GORDON JEFFERSON
Stage Manager.... ... ... HARRY G. WRIGHT

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

BOXING DAY and TWICE DAILY at 2 and 7-30 p.m.

THE LYCEUM CHILDREN'S FAIRY PANTOMIME.

DICK WHITTINGTON AND HIS CAT

WRITTEN BY NEWMAN MAURICE. PRODUCED BY W. & F. MELVILLE.
MUSIC SPECIALLY COMPOSED AND ARRANGED BY H. SULL VAN BROOKE, who will direct the Orchestra at each performance.

Scenery by N. HINCHEY, WILLIAM HOBBS, J. SOAMES, & LYCEUM STUDIO.
Steel Construction of Ship by SMITH, WALKER & CO. Costumes expressly designed and executed by WILLIE CLARKSON, Wardour Street, W.
Mechanical Effects by TOM REES. Properties by H. GREEN and Assistants.
Electrical Effects by FRANK B. FIDGE.

Characters:

Dick Whittington	Miss CLAIRE ROMAINE
Thomas (his Cat)	Mr. STANLEY LUPINO
Alderman Fitzwarren	Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Sarah (his Cook)	Mr. JIMMY DANVERS
Adolphus, George, Johnny, Willie (Apprentices)	Mr. GEORGE FELLOWS
	Mr. FRED DE VERE
	Mr. HARRY GARDNER
	Mr. F. G. DUNN
Captain Swanker	Miss MARION MARLER
Lieutenant Piper	Miss DOROTHY HARRINGTON
Dick Mainmast, Bob Bowsprit, Will Starn (Sailors)	Miss ELSIE RADCLIFFE
	Miss OLIVE MARRIOTT
	Miss VIOLET BARRY
Bill, Walter (in the Dust and Sailor Business)	EGBERT BROTHERS
Alice (the Alderman's Daughter)... ...	Miss NAN STUART
Topsyka	Miss MAY HENDERSON
Fairy Bowbell	Miss EDRIS COOMBS
Snowdrop	Miss BLANCHE CLIFFORD
Pedro, a Bow-wow	Mr. GEORGE FLETCHER
Tiny Tim (Jack's Accomplice)	Mr. WILL HALLETT
Bluebell	Miss EVELYN SWINTON
The Spider	Mr. FRED DE VERE
The Fly	BABY GASKIN
Emperor of Morocco	Mr. ERNEST REES
Prince Rataplan	Miss LILIAN CONSTANCE
Princess Zuleika	Miss MARJORIE GLENN
Sula, Zada, Zobedia (Emperor's Attendants) ...	Miss HILDA HINTON
	Miss NITA NEALE
	Miss ROSE SEYMOUR
King Rat	Mr. CECIL TRESILLIAN
AND
Idle Jack	Mr. JACK WILLIAMS

and numerous Auxiliaries, Ballets, etc.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

PART 1.

Scene 1. Ye old Belfrey of Bow.
Scene 2. EXTERIOR OF FITZ-WARREN'S SHOP IN CHEAPSIDE.
Scene 3. Fitzwarren's Kitchen and Stores.
Scene 4. Ye Road to Highgate.
Scene 5. HIGHGATE HILL. The Fairy Call of Bow Bells: "Turn again, Whittington, Lord Mayor of London."

THE BOWER OF BLUEBELLS.

PART 2.

Scene 6. Old London Bridge.
Scene 7. THE ROLEY-POLEY GOOD SHIP ALICE.
Scene 8. The Good Ship Alice and Tableau.
Scene 9. Coast of Morocco.
Scene 10. EMPEROR'S PALACE.
Scene 11. Guildhall.
Scene 12. CHEAPSIDE.

DICK WHITTINGTON, LORD MAYOR OF LONDON.

THE LOTTIE STONE TROUPE OF LADY DANCERS.
The Ballets invented and arranged by MDLLE. ROSA.
MADAME VICTOR'S BABY BRIGADE, headed by ALEXANDER THE GREAT.
Juvenile Dancer ... ... BABY GASKIN.
CHILDREN'S COMIC HARLEQUINADE.
Clown, Mr. HARRY GARDNER. Pantaloon, Mr. WILL H. FARLEY.

Special Songs introduced by permission of the following Publishers—Francis Day & Hunter, Star Music Publishing Co., B. Feldman & Co., H. Witmark & Sons, National Publishing Co., Charles Sheard & Co., Ascherberg & Co.

Hire of Opera Glasses 6d. obtained from Automatic Machines attached to Seats.

Popular Prices: Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s. £1 11s. 6d., and £1 1s. Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Grand Circle, 4s. and 2s. 6d. (All Numbered and Reserved). Pit Stalls, 2s.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

SPECIAL PRICES FOR CHILDREN AT MATINEES: Stalls, 4s. & 2s.; Grand Circle, 3s. & 2s. (All Numbered and Reserved). Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d. (Unreserved).

Box Office (Edward Hackett) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617-8-9 Gerrard (3 Lines).

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES
Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1). The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2). The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3). Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4). Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

OPENING OF THE NEW PRINCE'S.

Messrs. Walter and Frederick Melville's handsome and perfectly-appointed playhouse in Shaftesbury-avenue, which was fully described in our columns last week, was opened on Boxing night, when there was a packed and most enthusiastic audience. The opening ceremony was performed by Sir Herbert Tree, who, shortly before eight o'clock, accompanied Mr. Walter Melville on to the stage, his appearance being the signal for a loud outburst of cheering. After inquiring if the audience could hear him—a most important thing in a new theatre—Sir Herbert congratulated the brothers Melville on their beautiful playhouse, and wished it and them every prosperity. Referring to their enterprise at the Lyceum, Sir Herbert said he had always predicted that there was a fortune awaiting the first manager who supplied really good drama at popular prices. Here Mr. Melville turned an empty pocket inside out, evidently intending to signify that he was not yet a multi-millionaire. Continuing, Sir Herbert said: "Mr. Melville has had a most strenuous time; in fact, the act drop has, I understand, only just been hung. However, all's well that ends well. In this case, they have indeed begun well. God bless the theatre—and the manager." After Sir Herbert had declared the theatre open and retired, Mr. Melville remarked: "Before all and above all, 'God Save the King,'" the huge audience, upstanding, singing with heartiness the National Anthem. The overture over, the house then settled down to enjoy Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck's version of Dumas's novel,

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS."

Theatre Royal Drury Lane

LIMITED

Managing Director - - ARTHUR COLLINS

HOP O' MY THUMB

A FAIRY TALE

Produced by ARTHUR COLLINS.

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

Mr. GEORGE GRAVES	as	King of Mnemonica
Mr. WILL EVANS	,,	Potterini
Mr. FREDERICK ROSS	,,	The Ogre
Mr. BARRY LUPINO	,,	Smilo
Mr. AUSTIN MELFORD	,,	John, the Woodcutter
Mr. FRANK ELLIOTT	,,	Chevalier St. Marceaux
Mr. ERNEST LANGFORD	,,	Datas

Miss VIOLET LORAINE	as	Hilario
Miss DAISY DORMER	,,	Zaza
Miss MAUDIE THORNTON	,,	Mirabelle
Miss ALICE ESDEN	,,	Jenny, Woodcutter's Wife
Miss JESSIE WINTER	,,	Ogre's Housekeeper
Miss JIMMIE JAMES	,,	First Courtier
Miss FANNY BROUGH	AND as	Baroness Chicot

RENÉE MAYER as Hop o' my Thumb

Hop's Brothers:

VIOLET RANGDALE	as John Henry	GERTIE BRITTON	as Joseph James
MABEL HARLEY	,, Richard Arthur	JANE AYR	,, George Frederick
RITA LEGGIERO	,, Arthur Herbert	CONSTANCE ST. JOHN	,, Walter William

THE TILLERS	as	The Six Princesses
THE DE SERRIS	,,	Living Statues

Immortals:

Miss WINIFRED HARRIS	as	Amber Witch
Miss MARGARET STONOR	,,	Fairy Forget-me-Not
Mr. ARTHUR CONQUEST	,,	Amber Witch's Familiar

MAY SUMMER	as Nursery Rhyme	MARJORIE DIXON	as Voice of the Night
GWEN FOTHERGILL	,, Fairy Lore	MAY CORLISS	,, Peace
MARIE NORTH	,, Spirit of the Forest	WINNIE BROWN	,, Goodwill

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY

PART I.

Scene 1.	WOODCUTTER'S HUT, SUMMER	[Henry Emden
Scene 2.	THE FOREST	[Henry Emden
Scene 3.	ENTRANCE TO CASTLE GRIM	[C. Formilli
Scene 4.	HALL OF CASTLE GRIM	[C. Formilli
Scene 5.	THE SECRET PASSAGE	[R. McCleery
Scene 6.	THE GARDEN OF STATUES	[R. McCleery

PART II.

Tableau.	THE HOLE IN THE ROCK	[Joseph Harker
Scene 1.	THE KING'S PALACE	[Joseph Harker
Scene 2.	FORGET-ME-NOT'S BOWER	[Joseph Harker
Scene 3.	LAND OF LOST MEMORIES	[C. Formilli
Scene 4.	TERRACE OF THE PALACE	[Bruce Smith
Scene 5.	WOODCUTTER'S HUT, WINTER	[Henry Emden
Scene 6.	"GOODWILL TO MEN"	[Henry Emden

HARLEQUINADE:

Scene 1. A STREET
Scene 2. THE STORES } Bruce Smith

Clown - - - BOB PENDER

Pantaloon, WILL PENDER — Columbine, MAGGIE PENDER
Harlequin, JOE PENDER — Sergeant, WILL COMPO
Policemen. T. & G. PENDER

All the Costumes Specially Designed and supervised by COMELLI.

Stage Manager - - ERNEST D'AUBAN
Secretary - R. H. LINDO — Treasurer - C. H. THOMAS
Acting Manager - - C. F. TAYLOR
Business Manager - - - SIDNEY SMITH

BY
GEORGE R. SIMS, FRANK DIX and ARTHUR COLLINS
Music Composed, Selected and Arranged by J. M. GLOVER.

"SWEET NELL OF OLD DRURY."

Romantic Play, in Four Acts, by Paul Kester, Revived at the New Theatre, on Thursday, Dec. 28.

On Thursday, December 28th, 1911, and Every Evening at 8 o'clock,

Will be reproduced the Romantic Play in Four Acts, entitled

SWEET NELL OF OLD DRURY

By PAUL KESTER.

Charles II.	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
Lord Jeffreys	Mr. JAMES BERRY
Lord Rochester	Mr. HENRY HEWITT
Lord Lovelace	Mr. FREDERICK GROVES
Sir Roger Fairfax	Mr. ALFRED KENDRICK
Percival	Mr. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
Rollins	Mr. ARTHUR APPLIN
Lacey	Mr. MAURICE ELVEY
Captain Graham Clavering	Mr. JAMES CARTER-EDWARDS
Lord-in-Waiting	Mr. GEORGE DUDLEY
First Alderman	Mr. HORACE HODGES
Second Alderman	Mr. LESLIE GORDON
Mercer	Mr. H. HUMBERSTON WRIGHT
William	Mr. JOHN BEAMISH
Nebuchadnezzar	Master EDWARD DENNIE
Lady Castlemaine	Miss MIRIAM LEWES
The Duchess of Portsmouth	Miss MURIEL DOLE
Lady Olivia Vernon	Miss MOLLY TERRAINE
Tiffin	Miss WINIFRED RAE
Nell Gwyn	Miss JULIA NEILSON

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I.	Before the King's Theatre, Drury Lane (Joseph Harker)
ACT II.	Drawing Room at Nell Gwyn's House, Pall Mall (Joseph Harker)
ACT III.	A Room in Lord Jeffrey's House (Joseph Harker)
ACT IV.	Ante-Room in the Palace, Whitehall (Walter Johnstone)

The Dance between Nell Gwyn and the two Actors in the Second Act arranged by Mr. John D'Auban.
The Old Flemish Harpsichord provided by Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch. The Costumes by Miss Edith Craig.
The Wigs, Armour, &c., by Mr. William Clarkson
The entire Music for the Play, including Nell Gwyn's Song as sung by Miss JULIA NEILSON in the Second Act, specially written for this production by Mr. RAYMOND ROZE.

The Play produced under the direction of Mr. LOUIS CALVERT.

Programme of Music.

(Musical Director—Mr. SYDNEY FROULKES.)

Overture .. .. "Sweet Nell of Old Drury"

After Act I.

Entr'acte .. .. (a) Romance sans Paroles (b) Patrouille (c) Gavotte

After Act II.

Entr'acte .. .. (a) Minuet (b) Nell Gwyn's Song

After Act III.

Polonaise

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY at 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. and £3 3s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. and 6s. Upper Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Box Office open Daily from 10 to 10. Telephone No. 2473 Gerrard.

Stage Manager .. .. Mr. J. R. TURNBULL
Assistant Stage Manager .. Mr. GOODWIN NOCK
General Manager .. .. Mr. ARTHUR GARRETT

Advertisement Manager .. .. Mr. A. W. POPE
Assistant Manager .. Mr. ERNEST WRIGHT

LYRIC THEATRE

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

NIGHTBIRDS.

(Founded on "DIE FLEDERMAUS")

Music by JOHANN STRAUSS.

Book by GLADYS UNGER. Lyrics by ARTHUR ANDERSON.

Characters in the order in which they appear:—

Ilka (A Parlourmaid)	Miss MURIEL GEORGE
Gabor Szabo (A Hungarian)	Mr. MAURICE FARKOA
Leopold (Tiger to Prince Orloffsky)	Mr. WILLIE ATOM
Countess Rosalinda Cliquot	Miss CONSTANCE DREVER
Dr. Berncastler	Mr. CLAUDE FLEMMING
Count Max Cliquot	Mr. C. H. WORKMAN
Blind (A Lawyer)	Mr. STANLEY BRETT
Hochheimer (Governor of the New Age Prison)	Mr. TOM A. SHALE
Minna (of Prince Orloffsky's Private Ballet, Ilka's Sister)	Miss MABEL BURNEGE
Prince Orloffsky	Mr. JOHN DEVERELL
Inspector of Police	Mr. J. EVELYN THORNHILL
A Warder	Mr. WILLIAM ABINGDON
Mattoni (a New Warder)	Mr. A. W. BASKCOMB

The Ballet in the Second Act danced by Miss PHYLLIS BEDELLS and Corps de Ballet from the Empire Theatre and arranged by Mr. FRED FARREN, by kind permission of the Empire Theatre, Ltd., Leicester Square.

Sidi ...	The Front Row of Prince Orloffsky's Ballet	Miss HILDA VINING
Irma ...		Miss VASHTI EARLE
Faustine		Miss ETHEL MORRISON
Natalie ...		Miss EILEEN NORTH
Sabine ...		Miss DOROTHY MOULTON
Hermine		Miss PHYLLIS ALLEN
Melanie...		Miss WINNIE MURRAY
Felicita...		Miss DANIE RAYNE
Fritzi ...		Miss GOGO MURRAY
Doreen ...		Miss VIOLET VERNON
Adele ...		Miss FERNE ROGERS
Silvia ...		Miss CYLLENE MOXON

Alfred ...	Guests of the Prince	Mr. OTTO ALEXANDER
Franz ...		Mr. MURRI MONCRIEFF
Ernest ...		Mr. EDMUND DIGUES
Joseph ...		Mr. FRANK MELVILLE
Wilhelm		Mr. ARTHUR BALLANCE
Oscar ...		Mr. CHARLES CHAMIER
1st Footman ...		Mr. ALEC JOHNSTONE
2nd Footman ...		Mr. EDWARD JAMES
3rd Footman ...		Mr. G. JONES
4th Footman ...		Mr. RITTE

Act I.—At Count Cliquot's Villa. Rosalinda's Boudoir. Time, 6 p.m. (McCleery)

Act II.—At the Arum Lily Club. Prince Orloffsky's Ball. Time, 6 a.m. (Terraine)

Act III.—The Governor's House in the New Age Prison. Time, 10 a.m. (McCleery)

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY MR. P. MICHAEL FARADAY.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. JACQUES HEUVAL

Dresses and head-dress worn by Miss Constance Drever designed and executed exclusively by Revill & Rossiter, 15 & 16 Hanover Square.
Miss Drever's hats by Dusset, 149 New Bond Street.

Ladies' modern dresses by Madame Beatrice Raymond, 76 Regent Street, W.

All Furniture and Decorations by Fryer, Ltd., 8 Henrietta Street, Cavendish Square, W.
Uniforms, &c., by Messrs. L. & H. Nathan. Gentlemen's modern dress by Messrs. Walker & Co.
Wigs by Clarkson. Lighting by Digby. Floral decorations in Foyer by Russell, Haverstock Hill.

In the adaptation of the piece the original score has been used with the exception of the omission of one number and the introduction of another the music of which is by Johann Strauss.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. C. A. MAYNARD
Assistant Stage Manager ... ... Mr. E. F. SAXON

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Management reserve the right to make any alteration in the Cast which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes.

PRICES OF ADMISSION: Boxes, £2 2s. to £5 5s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Doors open at 7.45 (wet nights 15 minutes earlier); Matinees at 2; Commence at 8; Matinees at 2.30.

Box Office (Mr. A. Chandler) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone 3687 Gerrard.

Acting Manager ... ... Mr. TOM PITT

The Re-decoration of the Theatre has been carried out under the superintendence of the Architect of the Theatre, Mr. A. Blomfield Jackson, F.R.I.B.A.
The new Act Drop painted by Walter Hann.

LYRIC
THEATRE
—
30/12/11
—
Orchestra Stall

E20

"Die Fledermaus," or "Nightbirds," as it is called in the new English version produced at the Lyric Theatre on Saturday night, found fame on the Continent nearly forty years ago, and, to the majority of English music-lovers, its haunting airs and delicious melodies are quite familiar, for in July, 1910, it was given by the Beecham Opera Co. at His Majesty's Theatre. The music by the "King of Waltzes," Johann Strauss, retains all the sparkling freshness which made it the rage of Vienna when it was first produced in that town in 1874—a striking proof of the genius of the composer. The version of the libretto, which was used by the Beecham Opera Co. was the work of Mr. Alfred Kalisch, and the present version, for which Miss Gladys Unger is responsible, differs in some respects from its predecessors.

In the present libretto, the locale is changed to a smart watering place, and the volatile husband, Eisenstein, is transformed into Count Cliquot, an Austrian, the period being the present day, and the place Austria. Cliquot's wife, the fair Rosalinda, is devoted to her husband, and is so convinced of his love for herself that she willingly agrees to a wager with his friend and her would-be lover, Dr. Bernesstler, that she can keep her husband at home to spend his last evening with her before he is imprisoned for contempt of court. As in the original play, the doctor succeeds in luring Max away from home by the promise of the company of some beautiful sirens at the Prince Orloffsky's ball. It takes place at the Arum Lily Club, which, later in the evening, is raided by the police at the instigation of the jealous Countess. This brings all the characters in the last act to the New Age prison, which is represented as an abode of bliss, "replete with every modern convenience and luxury," where the feelings of the prisoners are considered to the extent of marking their cells by flowers instead of numbers. The story ends, as in the original, with the reconciliation of the erring husband to his forgiving spouse.

NIGHTBIRDS

Official Programme

of

The Miracle

A Wordless . . .

Mystery Spectacle

By Dr. Karl Vollmoeller.

Music by Professor Engelbert Humperdinck.

Produced under the personal direction of Professor Max Reinhardt.

Managing Director—
F. H. PAYNE.

General Manager
C. B. COCHRAN.

The Drawings on pages 5, 6, 7, 10, 11 and 12 are by Ernst Stern.
The Photographs on pages 3, 5, 7, 11, 12 and 14 are by Hoppe.

Complete Descriptive Programme, 6d.

The Synopsis of "The Miracle" will be found in the coloured leaflet.

The Miracle.

Acts I. & II. DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

The Nun (A New Sacristan)	NATACHA TROUHANOWA
The Abbess	FRANCISCA DÜHNE
The Old Sacristan	NELLIE DADE
The First Novice	IRENE STRAUSS
The Second Novice	MAÑIA LE FRE
The First Nun	LEONORA CALDWELL
The Second Nun	ELAINE GOODE
The Third Nun	FLORENCE CHURCHILL
The Fourth Nun	IRENE CHURCHILL
Other Nuns.
The Bishop	R. O. RICHE
The Priest	HUBERT G. GORDON
The Blind Man	MARCEL BROHM
The Spielmann	MAX PALLENBERG
The Knight	DOUGLAS PAYNE
The Madonna	MARIA CARMI

CHARACTERS OF INTERMEZZO.

First Episode.

The Robber Count	ERNST BENZINGER
The First Huntsman	H. K. LUDWIG PEPPLER
The Second Huntsman	A. E. DUFF
The Nun	NATACHA TROUHANOWA
The Knight	DOUGLAS PAYNE
The Spielmann	MAX PALLENBERG

Other Huntsmen and Followers.

Second Episode.

The King's Son	ROCHELL DE RAADT
First Companion	FRITZ H. KIRCHOFF
Second Companion	PAUL KÖNIGSBERG
Third Companion	MARCEL BROHM

Courtesans: Gladys Anderson, Claire St. Claire, Amy Elstob, Asta Fleming, M. Hillier, Violet E. Lewis, Mollie McKenzie, Nellie Morris, Y. Orchardson, Beatrice Parke, Diana Watson, Edith Williams, R. Mayne Young, and other Companions.

Third Episode.

The King's Son	ROCHELL DE RAADT
The Old King	J. H. IRVINE
The Spielmann	MAX PALLENBERG
The Nun	NATACHA TROUHANOWA

The King's Son's Pages.
The Old King's Pages.

Fourth Episode.

The Old King	J. H. IRVINE
The Nun	NATACHA TROUHANOWA
The Spielmann	MAX PALLENBERG

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Court and Dancers.

Fifth Episode.

The Nun	NATACHA TROUHANOWA
The Spielmann	MAX PALLENBERG
(as Grand Inquisitor.)
The Old King	J. H. IRVINE
The Executioner	C. MARSHALL

The Twelve Inquisitors.

Sixth Episode.

The Nun	NATACHA TROUHANOWA
The Spielmann (as Hag)	MAX PALLENBERG
The Young Girl	MISS LEONORA CALDWELL

Men, Women and Soldiers.

Seventh Episode.

The Nun	NATACHA TROUHANOWA
The Spielmann (as Death)	MAX PALLENBERG

Ghosts of the Dead Lovers.

Episode IV.: The masquerade. The NUN dances with torches. The flames catch the dancers' dresses. A terrible conflagration; the NUN and the KING alone escaping. The mob accuse her of witchcraft.

Episode V.: The Inquisition; the rack is fetched. The headsman raises his axe above her head.

The crowd, hypnotised by her beauty, rescue her. They mount her on a white charger. The horse is led away by a soldier.

Episode VI.: The unhappy NUN as a Camp-follower.

Episode VII.: Winter by the Mount. Soldiers on the march. Camp-followers including the NUN with a babe at her breast. She stumbles in the snow.

The Convent bells, and children's voices, singing. The piercing cry of the SPIELMANN'S pipe. He comes wearing a Death mask leading the ghostly forms of the NUN'S dead lovers. The light from the Cathedral streams forth; she crawls within.

Act the Second.

¶ INSIDE THE CATHEDRAL. Children come for Christmas gifts.

The Divine Sister tolls the Matins.

¶ The MADONNA resumes her position as the Miraculous Image. In a driving gust of wind and snow the NUN enters. Before the MADONNA she prostrates herself. The MADONNA takes the dead child to her arms. A joyous peal of bells.

¶ The Sisters rush to the Cathedral in alarm, finding the fugitive at the feet of the restored MADONNA. ¶ The NUN raises herself. The mocking laugh of the SPIELMANN rings through the air. The NUN tries to escape. ¶ The mocking laughter is met at every point. The NUN falls before the image. As she prays a mighty song of salvation is heard. It overpowers the laughter. In the swelling song of redemption myriad full, red roses descend upon the awed sisters.

¶ All is dark within the Cathedral. Dawn Breaks. The NUN is awakening as though from a deep sleep. She rises to perform her duties. She opens the great door, greeting the sun in its morning glory. Then she passes out to toll the Matins.

Scenery, Properties, and General Decoration after the designs of ERNST STERN, Art Director of the Deutsches Theater, Berlin.
Ecclesiastical Architecture supervised by HERMANN DERNBURG.
The General Engineering work carried out by Messrs. JOHN MOWLEM & CO., LTD.
Steel work by Messrs. MATTHEW T. SHAW & CO., LTD., under the supervision of MR. CECIL BROWN, M.I.C.E.
The Electrical work carried out under the supervision of MR. ALBION T. SNELL, M.I.C.E.
Movable Mountain by RUDOLPH DWORSKY. Technical Chief of the Deutsches Theater, Berlin.
Flame effect in Intermezzo by Messrs. SCHWABE & Co., Berlin.
Costumes, Properties, and General Decorations, by Messrs. HUGO BARUCH & CIE, 52 Shaftesbury Avenue, W.
Costumes for Elfin Ballet by Messrs. J. A. HARRISON & CO., LTD., 29 Leicester Square, W.C.
Wigs by W. CLARKSON, 41-43 Wardour Street, W.
The Organ has been specially constructed by BRINDLEY & FOSTER, of London, Sheffield and Glasgow.
Electric Motor for Organ, governed by Marples Patent Regulator, supplied by the ADNIL ELECTRIC CO. of Artillery Lane, E.C.
Pianos by Bechstein.
Peal of Bells supplied by JOHN WARNER & SONS, LTD., Crescent Foundry, Spelman Street, N.E. Bell Founders to His Majesty the King; Grand Prix, Pageant of Empire, Crystal Palace, 1911 (Est. 1763).
Chief Stage Manager (for Professor Max Reinhardt) BARON VON GERSDORFF.
Superintendent of Works (for the New Olympia Co., Ltd.,) MR. GEORGE TAYLOR.
Chief Electrician (for the New Olympia Co., Ltd.) MR. W. JONES.
Horses fed on MOLASSINE MEAL, Dogs on MOLASSINE HOUND FOOD.

Managing Director, MR. F. H. PAYNE.

General Manager, MR. C. B. COCHRAN.

Synopsis of the Wordless Play

The Miracle.

This Synopsis is supplied as a guide to the main incidents in the action of The Miracle.

Act the First.

¶ THE CATHEDRAL. The aged ABBESS hands over the keys of the Church to the young and beautiful NUN.

The Pilgrims' procession before the Miraculous Image of the MADONNA.

A lame man is cured; the cripples rejoice. The NUN is left alone.

¶ The piping of the SPIELMANN is heard, mingling with children's voices.

The NUN feels the influence and joins in the merry-making.

¶ The KNIGHT appears at the Portal. The NUN sees him and would shun him.

¶ The ABBESS approaches and the NUN summons strength to close the door.

For neglect of duty the NUN is condemned to stay kneeling before the MADONNA through the night.

¶ Night falls. Vespers are sung, the nightingale's song comes with the moonlight. The NUN is motionless before the Image. . . . . Is she dreaming?

¶ A knocking on the great door startles her. She tries in vain to open it. In desperation she calls upon the MADONNA to aid her. There is no response. Half savagely she snatches the Infant Saviour from the MADONNA'S arms, only to see the Child borne above on a shaft of light.

¶ The big door opens and on the threshold stands the KNIGHT. He advances, they kneel together before the MADONNA.

¶ They go forth to the world, the SPIELMANN piping his passionate lay.

¶ The MADONNA comes to life and takes the place of the fugitive NUN.

¶ The ABBESS and other Nuns, alarmed at the disappearance of the Miraculous Image, would scourge the supposed wrong-doer.

Her divine nature is recognised, and falling at her feet they chant in exaltation.

The Intermezzo.

Episode I.: Dancing by the Mount. The NUN and the KNIGHT are caught and bound by robbers. The KNIGHT is killed. The NUN is taken by the ROBBER COUNT.

Episode II.: In the COUNT'S Castle the KING'S SON desires the NUN. They gamble for her. The KING'S SON wins.

The COUNT kills himself in anguish, the SPIELMANN supplying the dagger.

Episode III.: The bed-chamber for the KING'S SON and the NUN is mockingly prepared. Distraught, the NUN nears the great indignity when the OLD KING rescues her, banishing his Son. Assassins enter and the KING unwittingly slays his Son.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 8, 1912.

AN UNLUCKY YEAR FOR PLAYS.

THE SEASON'S FIGURES.

The theatrical season of 1911-12 is now over, and with the first production of a new play in August the theatrical season of 1912-13 will begin. It is a convention of the theatres to regard July as the end of the season, but that convention never affects the run of any play popular enough to resist the exhausting effects of the holiday season.

The season just ended has been an unfortunate one, for within its eleven months there have been more failures than in any corresponding period for a generation—this, too, in spite of the willingness of hundreds of people to give advice to the managers and the Lord Chamberlain. There have been seasons when individual managements have lost sums of twenty and even thirty thousand pounds in a year, but 1911-12 has no such single loss to show.

BATTALIONS OF FAILURES.

Last year's losers came in battalions, scores of plays losing from one to ten thousand pounds apiece. I dare say we will be given explanations for these failures, but popularity is an elusive quality and it is just as likely to be found in a worthy piece of work as in a poor one. The author who can guarantee the popularity of his plays has a great future before him and the certainty of a congested bank account. In the meantime it is important to note that ninety-eight plays were produced or revived in the London theatres last year and that it is estimated that not more than twenty-five of those showed any profit. Fortunately, let it be said, very few of the permanent London managements suffered because of the lack of good plays, the losses generally falling on the shoulders of "amateur" managers with syndicates behind them.

The productions and revivals, including those of the Shakespeare Festival, for 1911-12 were as follows:—

Plays of two or more acts	58
Musical plays	11
One-act plays	13
Pantomimes and children's plays	4
Revivals of plays of two or more acts	21
Shakespeare's plays	8

The list given below includes all the plays of the theatrical year since the season began on August 28, 1911, given in the order in which they were produced. From it are excluded all one-act pieces and all plays produced by stage societies or for special performances only:

	Performances.
The Concert, Duke of York's	61
The Great Name, Prince of Wales	50
The Mousme, Shaftesbury	209
The Ogre, St. James's	97
The Perplexed Husband, Wyndham's	154
The Hope, Drury Lane	102
Married by Degrees, Court	36
Rip Van Winkle, Playhouse	45
The Marionettes, Comedy	131
Bonita, Queen's	42
The Spring Maid, Strand	63
The Love Mills, Globe	24
The Honeymoon, Royalty	126
The Uninvited Guest, Prince of Wales	43
The Great Young Man, Kingsway	24
*The Glad Eye, Globe	310	— 492
Dad, Playhouse	109
The War God, His Majesty's	3
The Lower Depths, Kingsway	15
Bella Donna, St. James's	283
The Golden Land of Fairy Tales, Aldwych	92
Orpheus in the Underground, His Majesty's	71
The Great Gay Road, Court	36
Where the Rainbow Ends, Savoy	68
Dick Whittington, Lyceum	106
Hop o' My Thumb, Drury Lane	111
Nightbirds, Lyric	133
The Miracle, Olympia	143
Œdipus Rex, Covent Garden	26
The Blindness of Virtue, Little	70
The Pigeon, Royalty	37
The Bear-Leaders, Comedy	200
The Dust of Egypt, Wyndham's	66
The Fire Screen, Garrick	60
The Easiest Way, Globe	115
The "Mind-the-Paint" Girl, Duke of York's	126
*The Sunshine Girl, Gaiety	160	— 343
The New Sin, Royalty	52
98.9, Criterion	43
A Member of Tattersall's, Strand	49
The Monk and the Woman, Lyceum	150
The Chalk Line, Queen's	30
*Milestones, Royalty	179
Kipps, Vaudeville	52
Proud Maisie, Aldwych	78
Rutherford and Son, Little	136
Iphigenia in Tauris, Kingsway	9
Billy, Playhouse	15
Jelf's, Wyndham's	129
At the Barn, Prince of Wales	131
The Pink Lady, Globe	124
The Odd Man Out, Royalty	6
The Apple of Eden, New Prince's	62
Improper Peter, Garrick	60
Love—and What Then? Playhouse	79
The Double Game, Kingsway	6
The Five Frankforters, Lyric	56
The Jew of Prague, Strand	24
*Princess Caprice, Shaftesbury	90	— 265
Looking for Trouble, Aldwych	40
Peter's Chance, Royalty	6
The Spanish Lovers, Little	5
*Autumn Manœuvres, Adelphi	72	— 74
*Ginsy Love, Daly's	68	— 125 — 299
*The Women of France, Lyceum	68	— 189
*Find the Women, Garrick	54	— 115
*Ann, Criterion	53	— 21
The Ideal Wife, Vaudeville	21	— 109
*Hindle Wakes, Playhouse	27

* Plays marked thus are still running, and the number of performances given are calculated up to and including to-night.

"Fanny's First Play" and "Bunty Pulls the Strings," which are still running, the former with 547 performances to its credit, the latter with 489, are productions of the end of 1910-11.

The following were the season's revivals, with number of performances:—

Man and Superman, Criterion	191
Lady Windermere's Fan, St. James's	54
What Every Woman Knows, Duke of York's	63
A Butterfly on the Wheel, Queen's	33
A Doll's House, Kingsway	8
A Message from Mars, Prince of Wales	85
Vice Versa, Comedy	39
Peter Pan, Duke of York's	78
The Blue Bird, Queen's	70
Charley's Aunt, Strand	58
Sweet Nell of Old Drury, New	141
Woman and Wine, New Prince's	87
The Second in Command, Playhouse	53
The House, Savoy	21
Trilby, His Majesty's	48
Dear Old Charlie, Prince of Wales	34
Ben Hur, Drury Lane	83
Mrs Dane's Defence, New	59
Oliver Twist, His Majesty's	30
The Amazons, Duke of York's (still running)	63	— 120
Ben-My-Chree, New Prince's (still running)	43	— 109

Of the year's total of fifty-four plays five were American—namely, "Rip Van Winkle," "The Easiest Way," "98.9," "Billy," and "Find the Woman." The first four came off without enriching their producers. Four of the season's plays were brought from France—"The Marionettes," "The Uninvited Guest," "Dad," and "The Glad Eye." Four were German made—"The Concert," "The Great Name," "The Miracle," "The Five Frankforters." We got two from the Greek; two from the Russian; one from an Italian author, one from a Spanish; and one of the few great successes of the season, "Milestones," was the result of a collaboration between an English author and an American one.

ADAPTATIONS FROM NOVELS.

Four plays by British authors were adapted from novels—namely, "The Three Musketeers," "Bella Donna," "The Great Gay Road," and "Kipps." If we deduct the importations and the book plays from the total of fifty-four new pieces produced, we have thirty-one as the native output for the year. Of these not more than ten helped to swell the managerial bank account. Of the eleven musical plays produced only three were English—"The Mousme," "Bonita," and "The Sunshine Girl." Of the four pantomimes and children's plays the only foreigner was "The Golden Land of Fairy Tales."

The number of one-act plays produced last season was thirteen, a heavy falling off as compared with twenty-eight, twenty-six, twenty-three, and thirty-five for the previous four years. However, it may be that the music-hall audiences will for a time at least give them a warmer welcome than they got from those in the theatres. One day, when they have served their end there, they may get to the picture palaces on Sunday evenings.

JAMES WATERS.

Last Year's Shakespeare Revivals.

Ten days ago The Daily Mail published some statistics and other facts concerning the theatrical year of 1911-12 that had just ended. There are many people to whom such things are interesting, and a few supplementary facts might, I think, be given here. To begin with, there were revivals during the year of eight Shakespearean plays, namely:

Romeo and Juliet	New		91
Macbeth	His Majesty's		100
Othello	"	"	43
The Merchant of Venice	"	"	4
Twelfth Night	"	"	5
Henry VIII.	"	"	5
Julius Cæsar	"	"	4
The Merry Wives of Windsor	"	"	4

Women Playwrights.

Further, in 1911-12, two theatres—the Kingsway Theatre and the Princes Theatre—were built and opened. Two plays were produced during that season in theatres charging ordinary West End prices, and after a short interval they were advertised at much lower prices, yet did not get an appreciable new lease of life. To some extent this is evidence that prices do not often affect the success of theatres. The plays referred to in this connection were "The Jew of Prague," at the Strand Theatre, and "Looking for Trouble," at the Aldwych Theatre. Superstitious people may be interested, too, in being reminded that "Improper Peter" was produced on a Friday, that "The Amazons" was revived on Friday, and that "Looking for Trouble" was produced on the thirteenth day of a month. Women did not take a large part in the making of last year's plays, the following being a list of those in which they had a hand as authors:—

Where the Rainbow Ends.
Nightbirds.....Written by a man and a woman.
Rutherford and Son.....Adapted by an American woman.
Billy.....Written by a women.
Looking for Trouble..Written by an American woman.
Peter's Chance.....Written by a man and a woman.
.....Written by a woman.

292

THEATRE PROFITS.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

By JAMES WATERS.

If the rewards of the theatre during the season which has just come to an end could be set out in detail, the list would make interesting stage history. The most important person concerned in the making o. the theatre is the dramatist. There are valuable rewards for the dramatist. There are rewards for the managers who have the ability to find plays that the public want. There are rewards for the actors and actresses that the public take to, make famous, and, as a consequence, rich.

It is a curious fact that, although the author is the most important person concerned in the making of the theatre, he is the last person considered by the public. If a dozen people were asked to give the names of the authors of the six most successful plays now running in London, it would probably be found that not one of the dozen could give the author of any one play. It discounts sadly the oft-repeated announcement to the effect that "everyone will be delighted to hear that we may soon expect a new play by Mr. Plaything." As a matter of fact, the public does not care a row of pins who writes its plays, and probably knows the names of few outside a group consisting of, say, Mr. Arthur Pinero, Mr. J. M. Barrie, Mr. John Galsworthy, Mr. Granville Barker, Mr. Maugham and Mr. Bernard Shaw.

THE RISE OF SALARIES.

The Paris theatres last year played to receipts in excess of two million pounds sterling. There is no Society of Authors in London corresponding with the French authority to get our figures, but if the takings of our theatres were equal to our neighbour's, and they probably are, it can be seen that some few people have had substantial rewards. Some very satisfactory authors' fees were paid, some big salaries to popular actors—£60 to £80 a week has in the past two or three years become quite an ordinary weekly salary for an actor or actress with a name—and after these rewards were distributed to dramatists and players there was in some cases sufficient balance to reward the managers. There was a fat reward also for the man who lets his theatre at £200 to £250 a week to the speculative manager, and a very soothing dividend for the shareholders in the Gaiety, Adelphi, and Drury Lane. The "angels," as the speculators from the City who come in occasionally to finance a play are called, may not have had any big winners last year, but they certainly have had a good reward this season out of the two or three profit-earning plays in which they have been concerned.

The last census has not disclosed the number of actors and actresses in the United Kingdom, but ten years ago the figures were 6,044 and 6,443 respectively. Very, very few of these 12,500 people can have been getting much comfort or reward out of the theatre. Very likely, however, a few thousand of them would have done no better at any other job, and they just took to the theatre because it seemed an easy, lazy way of getting rich and famous. The successful actor has never taken things easy, and he would not have been successful if he had not worked hard for his position. The actor who lives in London and is known to the public to-day is a very different man from the actor of a few years ago. He is thrifty. He has to be, for he knows that the conditions of the stage do not provide certain employment every year. Experience has given the actor a hint that business methods pay. The actors who have had prizes have all possessed the commercial faculty.

Rich actors like Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. Kendal, Sir Charles Wyndham, Sir John Hare, conserved the rewards of the theatre and can look on quite unconcernedly now when they choose. They understood what the public wanted in plays and gave it to them. The play is the thing. They knew it. It does not matter whether the play is good or bad, if the public likes it it will make money, and these actor-managers had an intuitive faculty for discovering prize-winners. The actor is usually well rewarded for interpretating the author, but yet I have known a play run a year with a weekly salary list for the whole company less than one comedian can get in musical comedy.

IN THE MUSIC-HALLS.

Then as to the music-halls. Musical-comedy artistes can do better there than the legitimate actors. In fact, the latter have not distinguished themselves there very often. A dancer or a comedian will draw the capacity at a variety theatre for months; the instance of an actor from a London theatre having done this has yet to happen. He shares the bill with other attractions, but he is no great draw. I do not think for one moment that this lessens the value or merit of an actor. I think it merely means that the music-hall does not offer fair scope for his art, and that the sketch will—unless under very rare circumstances—never be the main attraction at a music-hall. The rewards for dramatists must be looked for in a theatre; the music-halls cannot compete with the theatres for good plays. Ten shillings to two pounds a performance is not an author's fee to tempt a good dramatist, and music-halls in London do not want to pay more. In the country they would regard the higher fee as excessive.

AUTHORS' FEES.

In the theatres an author with a reputation can get very remunerative fees for his plays, sometimes as much as 10 per cent. of the gross takings. The author of a successful play that caught on in London and the provinces and America might amass many thousands of pounds before the popularity of his play waned. Mr. David Belasco, author of "The Girl of the Golden West," took more than twenty thousand pounds in author's fees out of each of three plays in America. Mr. William Gillette was at one time said to be drawing £1,000 a week in author's fees—from all parts of the world—out of "Sherlock Holmes." Those figures are given by American chroniclers; there is no income-tax in America.

There is no doubt, however, that playwriting exercises an extraordinary fascination over people not one per cent. of whom has any qualification for the work. The fees talked about fascinate their imagination. They look on those pecuniary rewards as "easy money." The author of "Kismet" said some time ago that when Miss Ashwell was in management at the Kingsway Theatre he read 2,500 plays for her in the course of two years. One per cent. he found suitable, but only half those fit to be passed were fit to be produced without rewriting. As a matter of fact, only those plays accepted by managers from experienced and tried authors are fit to be produced without being rewritten. The average number of new plays produced in London in a year is about seventy; a large proportion of those are failures, and yet in spite of the few prizes the curious thing is that thousands of people in England are writing plays. In fact, it is estimated that the average number of plays sent in to be read in London each year is between six and seven thousand. Not one per cent. of the authors of these plays have much knowledge of stagecraft, nor do they possess much stage instinct. Many of them hardly know how many words should go to a play of three hours; how long a type-written scene will play. They simply sit down and write what they think is dialogue, and then—well! The manager can say the rest. That is his "reward."

Daily Mail 13/8/1911

Adventure of aristide Pujol. an 229.
Aladdin 247
All Men are Fools 191
Amazons. The Ann
Apple of Eden The Art and Opportunity
At the Barn
Aunt Bessie
Autumn Manoeuvres
Bear-Leaders. The Before Breakfast
Ben-Hur
Ben-My-Chree 139
Billy
Blindness of Virtue. The Captain Brassbound's Conversion
Chalk Line. The
Charley's aunt
Cinderella
Constant Lover. The Countess Cathleen 142
Dancing Mothers. The 209
Dear Old Charlie 31
Doormats 199
Double Game. The 87
Dove Uncaged. The 37
Drake 161, 272
Dumb and the Blind. The 227
Dust of Egypt. The 10
Dusty Path. The 220
Easiest Way. The 18
Elder Son. The 237
Embarrassed Butler. The. 113
Everywoman 178
Falling His Crest 151
Family Failing 133
Ferret. The 215
Find the Woman 126
Fire Screen. The 15
Five Frankfurters. The 89
Flag station. The 235
For Peace and Quiet 146
Fortune Tellers. The 186
Forty Thieves 265
Gipsy Love 114. 244.

Girl in the Taxi. The 170
Glastonbury 102
Golden Doom. The 229
Golden Land of Fairy Tales. The 251
Grass Widows. The Great John Ganton. The 193
Havoc. The 232
Her Point of View
Hindle Wakes. 148
House. The 2
Hullo Rag-Time 278
Ideal Wife. The 145
Imaginary Conversation. an 22
Improper Peter 81
Instinct 221
Iphigenia in Tauras 59
Jelf's 67
Jew of Prague. The 92
John Bull's Other Island 262
Kiss. 51
Land of Nonlogica 151
Last Straw. The 261
Little Cafe. The 192
Little Mrs Llewlyn 155
Looking for Trouble 99
Love — and What Then 84
Maker of Dreams. The 156
Makeshifts 148
Malinger 227
Maurice Harte 131
Member of Tattersalls. a 41
Milestones 47
Mind-the-Paint Girl. The 23
Mixed Marriage 123
Monk and the Woman. The 43
Monte Cristo 202
Mrs Dane's Defence 103
New Sin. The 37. 86.
99. 8 39
Object-Lesson. an 58
Odd Man Out. The 74
Oedipus Rex 1
Officer 666 216
Oliver Twist 120. 239.
Open Door 197

Othello 63
Overruled 204
Pantaloon 2[illegible]
Patriots 1[illegible]
Penny Bunch. a 217
Peter Pan 256
Peter's Chance 10[illegible]
Phipps 2[illegible]3
Pigeon. The —
Pink Lady. The 7[illegible]
Playing the Game 243
Pretenders of Ispahan 12[illegible]
Price. The 234
Princess Caprice 95
Proud Marie 5[illegible]3
Ready Money 153
Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm 158
Rosalind 204
Rutherford & Son 56
Second in Command. The 22
Scrape O' the Pen. a 166
Shadow of the Glen. The 13[illegible]
Shock-Headed Peter 253
Sleeping Beauty. The 269
Spanish Lovers. The 108
Sunshine Girl. The 33
Sylvia Greer 225
Tantrums 213
Tide. The 249
Trilby 29
Turning Point. The 195
Twelfth Night 223
Voysey Inheritance 177
Where the Rainbow Ends 245
Where There's a Will — 241
Widow of Wasdale Head. The 204
Winter's Tale. The 188
Woman and Wine 13
Women of France 121
Written in Red 259
Younger Generation. The 230
Young Man's Fancy. a 186
Zaza 201

Asquith (Miss E.) as an actress 141
Audience that Boos 25
Authors discuss their plays. 25. 32, 203. 207. 263
Censor and Gaiety play. 35
Changing a title 53
Critics 11. 150
London Opera House. 144. 257
Music Hall Gala 135
Plays of the Season 277. 281
Reviews
Russian Ballet 138
Shakespeare Festival 107
Shaw, G. B. on the Censor 32
Tree. (Sir Herbert) at Marienbad 150
Triple Bills 204. 227. 229
Unlucky days 101. 81. 223 284
Supper 116
Women dramatists 284

THE TRAGEDY IN BRIEF

BY WAY OF PROLOGUE

Under the rule of Laïus and Jocasta his queen, Thebes was ravaged by "the She-Wolf of the Woven Song," a strange and fearsome Sphinx with mysterious riddles and death-dealing powers. None could stay its murderous work or answer "the Sphinx's song, the tribute of dismay." In despair at the slaying of his people Laïus set out to find guidance from the Oracle at Delphi, but was mysteriously slain on his journey.

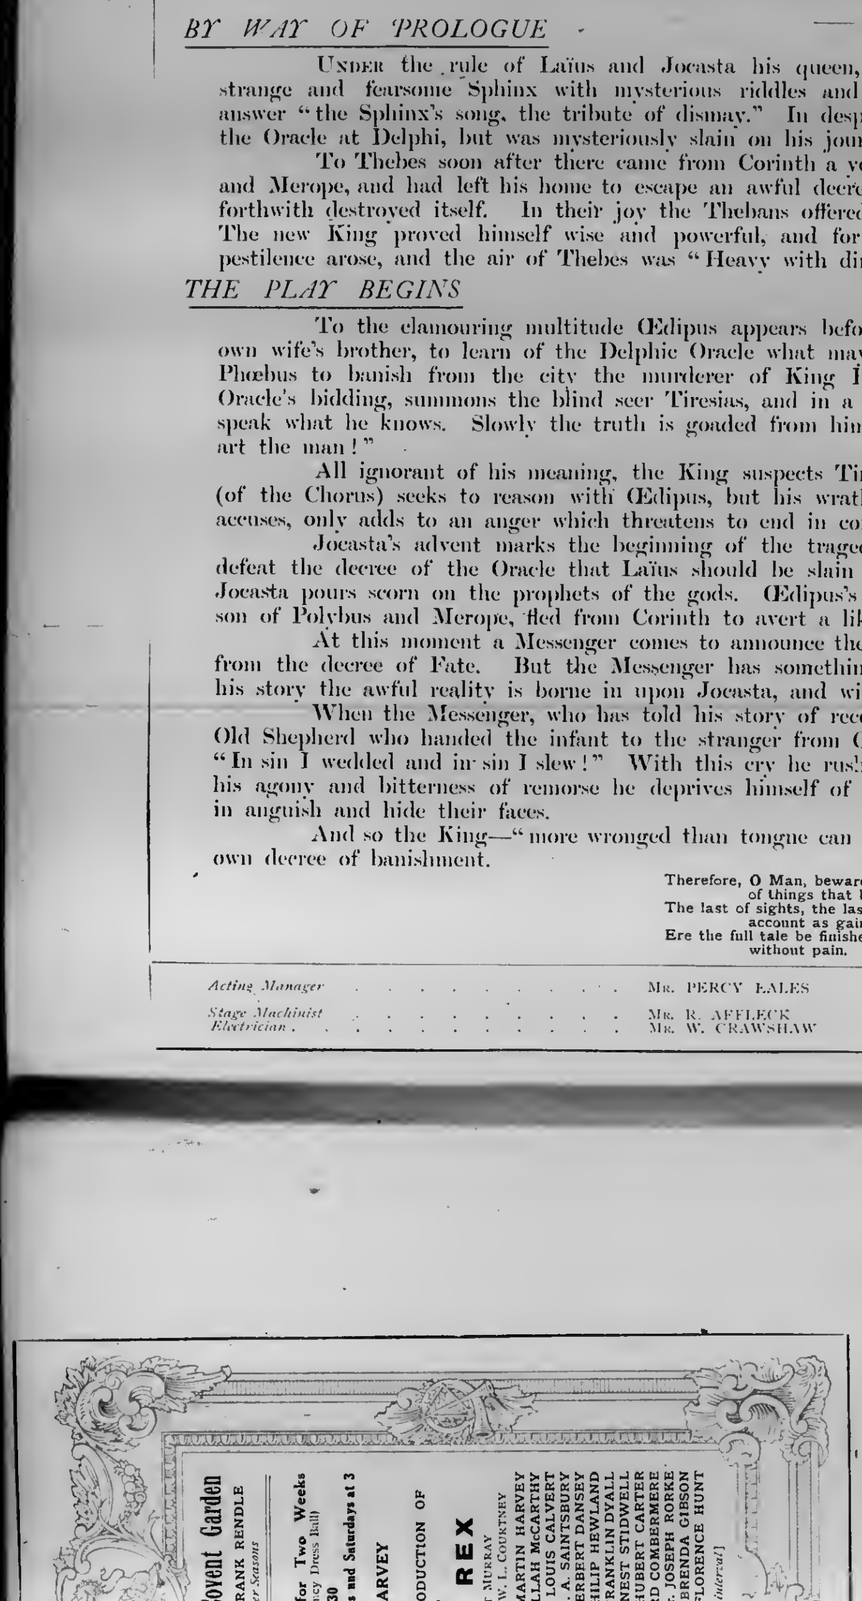
To Thebes soon after there came from Corinth a young Prince, Œdipus, who believed himself to be the son of Polybus and Merope, and had left his home to escape an awful decree of the Oracle. He read the meaning of the riddling Sphinx, who forthwith destroyed itself. In their joy the Thebans offered Œdipus the throne of Laïus, and Jocasta their Queen as Consort. The new King proved himself wise and powerful, and for ten years there was contentment in the land. Then a sudden pestilence arose, and the air of Thebes was "Heavy with dim prayer And shrieks to affright the slayer." At this point

THE PLAY BEGINS

To the clamouring multitude Œdipus appears before his Palace. He tells the people that he has sent Creon, his own wife's brother, to learn of the Delphic Oracle what may be done to save the city. Creon returns with the message from Phœbus to banish from the city the murderer of King Laïus, who is to be found there. Œdipus, all anxiety to do the Oracle's bidding, summons the blind seer Tiresias, and in a scene of fine dramatic irony the Prophet is forced by the King to speak what he knows. Slowly the truth is goaded from him: unable longer to bear the taunts of Œdipus he delares "Thou art the man!"

All ignorant of his meaning, the King suspects Tiresias to be conspiring with Creon to dethrone him. The Leader (of the Chorus) seeks to reason with Œdipus, but his wrath is great, and the appearance of Creon, whom he questions and accuses, only adds to an anger which threatens to end in conflict as the Queen appears on the Palace steps.

Jocasta's advent marks the beginning of the tragedy's end. With the story of how her own babe was cast out to defeat the decree of the Oracle that Laïus should be slain by his son, and that the murderer should marry his own mother, Jocasta pours scorn on the prophets of the gods. Œdipus's half-awakening fears are allayed, and he tells his wife that he, the son of Polybus and Merope, fled from Corinth to avert a like fate.



At this moment a Messenger comes to announce the death of Polybus, and in his end Œdipus thinks he sees freedom from the decree of Fate. But the Messenger has something more to tell—Œdipus was not Polybus's son; and as he unfolds his story the awful reality is borne in upon Jocasta, and with words of ominous meaning she goes into the Palace.

When the Messenger, who has told his story of receiving the discarded son of Laïus and Jocasta, is confirmed by the Old Shepherd who handed the infant to the stranger from Corinth, Œdipus is stunned. He sees the terrible workings of Fate. "In sin I wedded and in sin I slew!" With this cry he rushes into the Palace to find Jocasta has died by her own hand. In his agony and bitterness of remorse he deprives himself of sight, and, blinded and bleeding, appears again. The people bow in anguish and hide their faces.

And so the King—"more wronged than tongue can tell"—sightless and alone, passes out into the darkness to fulfil his own decree of banishment.

Therefore, O Man, beware, and look towards the end of things that be
The last of sights, the last of days; and no man's life account as gain
Ere the full tale be finished and the darkness find him without pain.

Acting Manager	Mr. PERCY EALES	Business Manager	for Mr. Martin Harvey: Mr. FRANK B. O'NEILL
Stage Machinist	Mr. R. AFFLECK	Stage Director	for Mr. Martin Harvey: Mr. JOHN KURKAMP
Electrician	Mr. W. CRAWSHAW	Assistant Stage Manager	for Mr. Martin Harvey: Mr. DAVID BAIN
		Stage Manager	for Professor Max Reinhardt: Herr WILLI PRAGER
		Representative	for Professor Max Reinhardt: COUNT VON SCHWERIN

Royal Opera House, Covent Garden

Lessee and Manager . Mr. FRANK RENDLE

For Autumn and Winter Seasons

[1912]

Monday, January 15th, for Two Weeks
(Except Friday, Jan. 26—Fancy Dress Ball)
Evenings at 8.30

Matinees: Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 3

Mr. MARTIN HARVEY

presents

MAX REINHARDT'S PRODUCTION OF SOPHOCLES'

ŒDIPUS REX

Translated by GILBERT MURRAY

Adapted for this Production by W. L. COURTNEY

Œdipus Rex	Mr. MARTIN HARVEY
Jocasta	Miss LILLAH McCARTHY
Creon	Mr. LOUIS CALVERT
Tiresias	Mr. H. A. SAINTSBURY
Messenger from Corinth	Mr. HERBERT DANSEY
An old Servant of Laïus	Mr. PHILIP HEWLAND
Messenger from the Palace	Mr. FRANKLIN DYALL
A Priest	Mr. ERNEST STIDWELL
Leader of the Chorus	Mr. HUBERT CARTER
1st Elder	Mr. EDWARD COMBERMERE
2nd Elder	Mr. JOSEPH RORKE
1st Attendant on Jocasta	Miss BRENDA GIBSON
2nd Attendant on Jocasta	Miss FLORENCE HUNT

[In One Act, with no interval]

Royal Opera House, Covent Garden

(COUNTERFOIL)

ORCHESTRA STALL ROW M NO. 25

Monday Evening, Jan. 15, 1912

This Ticket is sold subject to the right of the Management to make any alteration in the Performance which may be rendered necessary by illness or other unavoidable causes, and is sold only subject to this condition.

Retain this Portion which is the Voucher for Seat Only and does not admit to the Theatre.

Such was the tragedy which Mr. Martin Harvey and Professor Max Reinhardt presented to an awed and attentive audience at Covent Garden Theatre last Monday. The orchestra had disappeared, and most of the action of the play took place on the black marble steps leading up to the Palace of Œdipos at Thebes. About the middle of the Covent Garden stage rose the blue, buttressed walls of the Palace, in which were folding doors of iridescent copper. Steps led from this to the level of the platform trodden by the principal characters. Where the orchestra was were other steps leading down to curtained entrances on each side, made by removing the stage boxes. The stalls had been raised to the level of the stage, and much of the space usually allotted to the stalls were left for the use of the Chorus, who came to it in large crowds by the side entrances and by the centre gangway of the stalls.

The opening was impressive. The house was placed in darkness, and there were sounds of weird, melancholy music. Then, in the corridors outside, increasing murmurs were heard, and finally the Theban people in their hundreds rushed down the central gangway waving their arms and uttering impassioned cries. In answer to their wailing entreaties for assistance, the doors opened and Œdipus appeared—royal, stately, and sympathetic.

THE LITTLE THEATRE.

Proprietress ... ... GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Charles Kenyon's Season.

Monday, January 29th, and Every Evening at 8.30 punctually.

Doors Open 8.15.

THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE.

A NEW AND ORIGINAL PLAY IN FOUR ACTS
By COSMO HAMILTON.

The Rev. Harry Pemberton...	... MR. CHARLES KENYON
The Hon. Archibald Graham	... MR. OWEN NARES
Collins	MR. LEONARD CALVERT
Mrs. Pemberton	...MISS BERYL FABER
Mrs. Lemmins	... MISS DORA HARKER
Mary Ann Lemmins	... MISS LEICESTER
Cookie	... MISS POLLIE EMERY
Effie Pemberton	MISS MARGERY MAUDE
Act I.	The Vicarage Garden, late afternoon in July.
Act II. ...	Harry Pemberton's Den, six weeks later.
Act III.	Archibald Graham's Bedroom, two mornings later.
Act IV.	Harry Pemberton's Den, the same morning.

Scenery, Act I. by W. T. Hemsley. Acts II. and III. by Walter Johnstone.

Furniture by DRUCE. Piano by BRINSMEAD Wigs by GUSTAVE. Flowers by "The Cripplegate." Seckford Street, Clerkenwell. Properties in Act II.—Hosiery by TURNBULL & CO.; Boots by F. G. BUHL.
The "DEA" Piano which plays between the Acts, supplied by Messrs. KEITH PROWSE & CO., Ltd., 162, New Bond Street.

Matinees: Wednesdays and Saturdays at 3. Doors Open 2.45.

Representative	... MR. RALPH KIMPTON.
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. L. G. CARROLL.
Business Manager	Mr. H. JALLAND.

"There is nothing degrading about the truth. What is degrading and wicked is the way we all have of never telling the truth to children about the primary necessities of human beings, of hiding behind a false Puritanism, of ignoring all questions of sex and of quibbling them away from the utterly mistaken standpoint of clean-mindedness. We turn sniggering or shamefaced from youthful questions that are prompted by an unconscious awakening of the maternal instinct."

So thought the Rev. Harry Pemberton, Vicar of East Brenton, when his eyes were opened to the dangers of ignorance by the wrecked life of his model Sunday-school girl, dear little Mary Anne, with the face of a "picture book angel." Mary Anne's shame is brought about through ignorance, which, as she explains to the parson, is the justification of the man who is responsible. "Me knowin' nothin', 'e sez, and what it all meant, brought it abart. If I'd a-bin told when I was old enuf to understand, I should 'a sent 'im awiy, he sez, double quick, and saved 'im and me and the little 'un from this 'ere. The man ain't built for thinkin', 'e sez. 'E knows, but 'e ain't perfect, and won't let 'isself think. 'E sez as 'ow if we was tanght ter think, and knew as much as the man, there'd be very little of this trouble for us." Harry, the "splendid" parson, almost too splendid a creature for "human nature's daily food," has his eyes suddenly opened by the sad fate of Mary Anne to the danger which his own little daughter Effie may encounter in this wicked world, if she be left any longer unaware of "the great, big, essential things of life." Harry goes hotfoot to his wife Helen, and gives to her the task of dispelling Effie's ignorance. Helen gives her promise reluctantly, for she is a woman with a mind refined even to Puritanism, and her conventional prejudices cause her to delay the promised conversation until poor, ignorant Effie has compromised herself severely. The "splendid parson" has taken into his household, ostensibly to coach, in reality to influence, Archibald Graham, a young man of "many excellent parts," but "uncontrollable in a bearing rein, headstrong, self-indulgent, generous, and very lovable." The two young things are thrown much together, until the craving for Archie's society becomes so great that Effie, "thinking no evil," goes to his room to wait for him on his return from a jaunt to town. Archie returns in the small hours of the morning to find Effie, scantily attired in a dressing-gown, in possession of his bedroom. His attempts to dislodge her are ineffectual. Effie insists that before she retires he shall give her an account of his day's doings, and it is while Archie is in the middle of this recital that they are discovered by the vicar. Unaware of his wife's procrastination, Pemberton jumps to the worst conclusions, and, after sternly ordering his daughter from the room, he allows his rage and indignation to master him, until the boy, who is genuinely in love with Effie, rushes from the room, mad with anger and despair. Off marches the vicar to his wife, only to find that Archie had spoken the truth, and that Effie, though nineteen, is as ignorant as a child of nine. Bitterly does the vicar upbraid his wife. "You are one of those women who is not fit to be the mother of a girl," he says. But reflection, the knowledge that his unjustified suspicions have driven Archie to the verge of suicide, Effie's bewilderment at her mother's anger, and her mother's tears, combine to bring the truth home to the Rev. Harry. Archie is recalled, and has a "heart-to-heart" talk with the vicar; Helen sees that Effie's ignorance is dispelled, and the "splendid parson" regains his breezy optimism and his healthy appetite. "God's in His Heaven," he says to his wife, "and I wonder what's for breakfast."

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 30th, 1912, at 8 o'clock,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

THE PIGEON

A Fantasy in Three Acts by

JOHN GALSWORTHY.

Christopher Wellwyn ..	(an Artist) ..	Mr. WHITFORD KANE
Ann	(his Daughter) ..	Miss GLADYS COOPER (By arrangement with Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS)
Guinevere Megan ..	(a Flower Seller) ..	Miss MARGARET MORRIS
Rory Megan	(her Husband) ..	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
Ferrand	(an Alien) ..	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Timson	(once a Cabman) ..	Mr. WILFRED SHINE
Edward Bertley	(a Canon) ..	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
Alfred Calway	(a Professor) ..	Mr. FRANK VERNON
Sir Thomas Hoxton	(a J.P.) ..	Mr. FREDERICK LLOYD
A Police Constable	.. ..	Mr. ARTHUR B. MURRAY
Three Humble-men	.. ..	Mr. W. LEMMON WARDE
		Mr. F. B. J. SHARP
		Mr. A. BOWYER

Some Curious Persons.

The Scene is Wellwyn's Studio, and the Street outside.

Act I., Christmas Day; Act II., New Year's Day; Act III., The First of April.

PRECEDED BY

THE CONSTANT LOVER

A Comedy of Youth, in One Act, by

ST. JOHN HANKIN.

Evelyn Rivers	Miss GLADYS COOPER
Cecil Harburton	Mr. DENNIS EADIE

Scene—A Glade in a Wood.

The Plays produced under the direction of FRANK VERNON.

The Scenery painted by G. SACKMANN.
The Antique Furniture by Messrs. THORNTON-SMITH, Soho Square, W.
The Pictures and Ornaments by the BAILLIE GALLERY, Bruton Street, W.

Ladies are earnestly requested to remove Hats, Bonnets, or any kind of head-dress.

This rule is framed for the benefit of the audience, and the Management trusts that it will appeal to everyone, and that Ladies will kindly assist in having it carried out.

The Bronzes supplied by ELKINGTON & Co., Ltd., 22 Regent Street, Goldsmiths, Silversmiths and Bronzists to H.M. King George V.
The Pianofortes used at this Theatre supplied by ROGERS & SON.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, 3rd FEB., AT 2.30.

MATINEE EVERY THURSDAY & SATURDAY at 2.30

Doors open half-an-hour before time of Performance.
The Box Office (J. W. Sheppard) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 3855 Gerrard.
PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d.

EXTRACTS FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every Performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager	Mr. HERBERT CHOWN.
Business Manager	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

The "Pigeon" is a certain Christopher Wellwyn, an artist, living, apparently, in Chelsea. Wellwyn has a habit of making casual acquaintances amongst the lower orders, and giving them his card, in spite of the remonstrances of his daughter Ann. So, on Christmas Day, after Ann has retired to rest, there "drop in" on Wellwyn, in succession, Guinevere Megan, a flower-seller, who has an idle husband, and is "helped" by gentlemen; Ferrand, a Frenchman, half-starved and very much out-at-elbows, but with an unfailing flow of intellectual observations; and Timson, a cabman who has been thrown out of work by the introduction of "taxis." To each of these Wellwyn offers shelter, food, and clothing. He engages Mrs. Megan to sit, or rather stand, for a picture; and he makes Timson his brush-washer. The result of the establishment of this moral menagerie is amusing. Ferrand makes love to Mrs. Megan, who responds, and Timson steals Wellwyn's rum and abuses his fellow-parasites. Edward Bertley, a well-meaning canon, tries to bring about a reconciliation between the flower-seller and her spouse, who is willing to rejoin her if she will "maintain" him. But Megan's jealousy is excited by his wife's flirtation with Ferrand, and he threatens to revenge himself. On the first of April, when the third act begins, the trio of unfortunates reappear. Ferrand, having nearly perished of fever, and having been in three institutions, is still philosophic; Mrs. Megan, who has been put into "service" by the canon, and has preferred prostitution, has tried to drown herself, and is brought in senseless but alive, and the ex-cabby has got drunk and been "run in" and sentenced. Wellwyn, however, is not converted by his experiences; he remains, and will ever remain, inveterately and hopelessly charitable.

"The Pigeon" was preceded by a most amusing "comedy of youth" in one act by St. John Hankin, played for the first time, and entitled

"THE CONSTANT LOVER."

Evelyn Rivers .....Miss Gladys Cooper
Cecil Harburton .....Mr. Dennis Eadie

This was simply a chat in a wood between a lazy, cynical, witty young man and a pretty, ingenuous girl. They have met by accident and have fallen in love. The cuckoo's note is heard, and the young man proclaims his admiration of the cuckoo's commonsense. He also admires the duck, who, by threatening to smash her eggs, gets them hatched out for her by a hen. The girl's instinct revolts against such cold-blooded sentiments, and she suggests that he shall speak to her mother. He says he knows what the result will be; the prohibition of any engagement between them on the ground of his impecuniosity. He suggests, however, that they shall simply go on being in love. This proposal the girl rejects with scorn. So she goes off, and the prematurely philosophic youth returns to his book.

TO-NIGHT AT 8,

THE BEAR-LEADERS

An Original Farcical Comedy in Four Acts by R. C. CARTON.

Duke of Gallminster ... ... MR. SPENCER TREVOR
Sir Kennedy Loomes ... ... MR. ASHTON PEARSE
Horace Beckton ... ... MR. ROBERT HORTON
Edward Petworth ... ... MR. DONALD CALTHROP
Mr. Felgate (of the firm of Felgate & Murchison, Solicitors) MR. FRED LEWIS
Anotole Durocq (Waiter from Pastarelle's) MR. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Byles (Butler) ... ... MR. E. F. MAYEUR
Rawdon (Valet) ... ... MR. C. LASCELLES

AND

Stanhope Molyneux ... ... MR. EDMUND GWENN
Dowager Countess of Grimsdal ... ... MISS MAY WHITTY
Lady Marjorie Hillborn {her Grand-daughter} MISS MURIEL MARTIN HARVEY
Lady Tuddenham ... ... MISS MARY BROUGH
Evadne Tuddenham (her Daughter) ...
Madame Mescale (of Mescale et Cie.—Florist) ... MISS ADA WEBSTER
Lloyd (Lady's maid) ... ... MISS MARGARET CHUTE

AND

Mrs. Stanhope Molyneux ... ... MISS COMPTON

Act I. .. Drawing Room in the London House of the Stanhope Molyneux's.
Time—Mid-day
Act II. .. .. The same—Six weeks later. Afternoon.
Act III. .. .. Corridor in the Molyneux's House—Three days later.
Time—Late evening. A Ball is in progress
Act IV. .. .. Same as Acts I. and II.—Next morning.

Scenery is painted by G. SACKMANN.

The Play Produced under the Personal Direction of the Author.

The Dresses are by Madame BAROLET, Knightsbridge; and MARTIAL ARMAND ET CIE. 125 New Bond Street.
The Furniture by OETZMANN & Co. Wigs by CLARKSON.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. HERBERT E. HAINES

PROGRAMME OF MUSIC.

OVERTURE, "Le Caïd" ... ... Thomas
Before Act II.—ITALIAN DIVERTISSEMENT, "A Day in Naples" ... ... Byng
Before Act III.—SELECTION, "The Mousmé" ... ... Monckton-Talbot
Before Act IV. { 1. DANCE, "On the Road to Zag-a-Zig" ... ... } Finck
{ 2. INTERMEZZO "Pirouette" ... ... }
{ 3. ENTR'ACTE, "May ... ... Haines

MATINEE EVERY WEDN SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Stage Manager - - Mr. CLIFFORD BROOKE

The structural alterations and decor[ations] of this house have been designed by Messrs. WHITING & PETO, and ca[rried out] by BATTLEY, SONS & HOLNESS.

Business Manager - - Mr. LEONARD LILLIES

COMEDY THEATRE
Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh
1/2/1912

STALL
H19
To be retained

DAVID ALLEN & SONS, LTD., Printers, HARROW, BELFAST, &c.

The "bear-leaders" are Mr. and Mrs. Stanhope Molyneux. There are many ways of making a livelihood. The Molyneux have hit upon the remunerative scheme of taking as inmates of their comfortable home young people of both sexes, who require polishing up to fit them for the society in which they are destined by birth and position to mix. They undertake the education of the cub who has not been licked into shape at one of the Universities, and of the girl whose "finishing school" has not, in an educational sense, finished her. At the beginning of the story the Molyneux are rejoicing that they will be able to give up the "arduous profession" of bear-leading, as the lady has been left a fortune by a relative, but the family solicitor informs them that the will cannot be found, and that if further search proves unsuccessful, the money will go to the deceased's brother. Under these circumstances the Molyneux come to the conclusion that it is advisable to continue to carry on business as bear-leaders, and they agree to give the benefit of their tuition to a young man of twenty-two, Edward Petworth, heir to the Duke of Gallminster, and to Lady Marjorie Hillborn, a young girl, grand-daughter of the Dowager Countess of Grimsdal. As there is an ancient feud between the two families, it is the object of the Molyneux to conceal from his lordship and the dowager the fact that the young people are under the same roof, and it is, of course, equally important that they should not fall in love with each other. But that is just what happens, though not at first sight; when they first meet they quarrel desperately. It is the wish of the Duke that his heir shall marry the daughter of Lady Tuddenham, while the Countess intends that her grand-daughter shall become the wife of Sir Kennedy Loomes. The young people, who have come under the tuition of Mr. and Mrs. Molyneux, upset this arrangement by bolting in a motor-car, belonging to the Duke, with the object of compromising themselves; and in the end they get their own way. But this does not happen until Edward Petworth has got clear of an entanglement with a Madame Mescale, a florist, who threatens him with an action for breach of promise of marriage, but is eventually proved to be a married woman. Molyneux has also philandered with the scheming florist, and with considerable difficulty manages to divert the suspicions of his wife. The Molyneux give a ball, whereat many amusing things happen; but before the end is reached the missing will is discovered in the office of the testator's solicitor, and the Molyneux are thus enabled to give up the calling of bear-leaders.

COMEDY Theatre

THE BEAR-LEADERS

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD

Proprietors
Sole Lessee ... ... Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore
FRANK CURZON.

On SATURDAY EVENING, February 3rd, 1912, at 8 o'clock, and EVERY EVENING AT 8.30,

THE DUST OF EGYPT

A Farcical Fantasy, in Four Acts.

By ALAN CAMPBELL.

Geoffrey Lascelles	Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
General Sir John Manning (his Uncle)	Mr. LYSTON LYLE
Dan Smith	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
Michael Simpson	Mr. CHARLES CRAWFORD
Ani (a Wise Man)	Mr. JULES SHAW
Pinetem (a Priest)	Mr. HOWARD STURGE
Billings (Butler at Broadlands)	Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
Benson (Geoffrey's Valet)	Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
Wiggins (Village Constable)	Mr. HARRY CANE
Cabman	Mr. RICHARD CARFAX
Footman	Mr. F. J. RORKE
Princess Amenset	Miss ENID BELL
Lady Lillian Manning	Miss LENA HALLIDAY
Miss Phœbe Manning	Miss ALICE CHAPIN
Violet Bradley (Geoffrey's Fiancée)	Miss GLADYS HARVEY
Annie (Maid at Broadlands)	Miss FLORENCE HARWOOD

ACT I.	.. Geoffrey Lascelles' Rooms in Jermyn Street
ACT II.	.. .. The Hall at Broadlands, Surrey
ACT III.	.. .. The Same
ACT IV.	.. .. .. Geoffrey Lascelles' Rooms

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Costumes and Hats by JAY'S, Regent Street; Madame ALEXANDRA, Baker Street; BUSVINES, Brook Street; B. J. SIMMONS & Co., King Street; Miss STONE, Utrecht Mansions; ZYROT ET CIE., Hanover Square.
Furniture by D. L. ISAACS, New Oxford Street.
Curtains, Carpets, &c., by STAGG & MANTLE, Leicester Square.
Stage Flowers by the CRIPPLEAGE FLOWER GIRLS' MISSION.
Wigs by CLARKSON.
Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., Haymarket.

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY NEXT, FEBRUARY 7th, AT 2.30, AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	BALLET	"Egyptienne" ... ... Luigini
2.	a. SELECTION	"La Bohême" ... ... Puccini
	b. TWO DANCES	1. "Shepherds" 2. "Gipsy" ... ... Corelli Windeatt
3.	a. INDIAN LOVE LYRICS ...	... ... Finden
	b. DANCE OF THE HOURS...	... ... Ponchielli
4.	a. TWO-STEP	"The Glad Eye" ... ...
	b. VALSE	"The Dust of Egypt" ... ... Ernest Bucalossi

(The Song in Act IV. composed by ERNEST BUCALOSSI.)

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 TO 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 8. Matinees at 2. Commence at 8.30. Matinees at 2.30.

Business Manager ... ... HERBERT JAY

The action opens at the house in Jermyn-street of Geoffrey Lascelles, a bachelor barrister. A friend of his, Dan Smith, knocks him up in the middle of the night, and leaves with him an Egyptian mummy which Smith proposes to present to the British Museum. He goes off, and, while Lascelles is out of the room, darkness and thunder supervene, and, in an explanatory tableau of the nature of a "dream," we are taken back a few thousand years into old Egypt, where we see the Princess Amenset on her throne. A soothsayer gives her a magic love potion, and another, the effect of which is to project her into future ages. She goes to sleep; and the wise man, being condemned to death for her supposed poisoning, lays on her a curse to the effect that the first kiss of passion she receives in her new life shall turn her into a mummy—(here we have a suggestion from "She").

We are now fairly started on the wild career of comicality; and those who are familiar with plays on the same lines can imagine how it is "urged on." The mummy comes to life in Lascelles' room, and henceforward his life is one of difficulty and embarrassment. The Princess is astonished by the electric light and the telephone, and imperiously chooses Lascelles as her husband, although he already is engaged to a young lady, named Violet Bradley.

In the second act, at a country house, she is introduced to Geoffrey's aunt and uncle, and to his fiancée. She shocks the second, charms the first, and is offended by the last. But her especial detestation is a foolish young man, named Michael Simpson, and, in the despotic fashion of her race, she decides to rid herself of him by poison, the attempt being frustrated by the butler bringing her common salt instead of a more deadly mineral. When the village policeman is called in, she tries to kill him with a dagger; and, as there is talk of putting the Princess in an asylum, Lascelles, who, in spite of all temptations, has been true to Violet, takes Amenset back to town, where she gives him the love-potion, obtains from him a passionate kiss, and immediately becomes a mummy. There is a vast amount of subsidiary fun, all created by the contrasts between the "high-falutin'" spirit of Amenset and the Anglo-Saxon stolidity of those surrounding.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1912.

WHAT IS A CRITIC?

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—Will you extend the hospitality of your columns to me and allow me to ask a difficult question and beg for a sensible answer?

What qualifications must a man possess to entitle him to become a paid critic of art, literature, music, or the drama? If Mr. A., the popular artist, paints a picture, what special knowledge has Mr. B. of the Daily —— when he states that the picture was a jumble with no beauty of tone or ability in its conception? Again, when Mr. A., the well-known author, writes a novel for which a publisher gives him £1,000, knowing that the public will buy it, what superior gifts does Mr. B. of the Daily —— possess to enable him to label it unadulterated rubbish? And so with music and the drama. A play is produced by a manager, who has the confidence of the public, with actors of tried ability; it has a fine reception by the public—and yet Mr. D. of the Daily —— states definitely that it is poor stuff, feebly constructed, and that Mr. A., the actor, failed to suggest the dual manner necessary for the leading part, and that Miss C. showed a lamentable lack of technique.

I have no knowledge of the gentlemen who are the paid critics on the London papers at the present day, and no quarrel with them, nor is this letter meant to be provocative, but I honestly desire to be informed what special qualifications they possess that give them the right to earn their living by criticising the work of others.

GERALD DU MAURIER.

WHAT IS A CRITIC?

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—Though it may be difficult to answer the question directly, there can surely be no doubt that a critic should be one who has an intimate knowledge of the art or craft, which he or she is to criticise. In the days when I had the honour to belong to the Fourth Estate I made two stipulations. The first was that I should be allowed to sign my name, and the second that I should neither be edited nor influenced. It seems to me that a critic should attack the difficult task in an optimistic spirit. An example of the critical spirit of the age may be found in the following true story:—Scene: The supper-room of a well-known literary and artistic club on the occasion of the first night of a new play—Loud merriment at a crowded table—Enter a well-known dramatist. "Ah," said he 'I feel sure from the hilarity of the present company that you have all been assisting at a lamentable failure"!

Garrick Theatre. ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—Mr. du Maurier is anxious to be enlightened as to the qualifications of the paid critic. I suggest to him that they are the same as the qualifications of the paid actor—namely, an employer to give him employment and a public to accept his work. CICELY HAMILTON.

28, Glebe-place, Chelsea.

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—Noticing Mr. Laurence Irving's defence of harsh critics in The Daily Mail, I wonder if he has forgotten how, in his New York theatre, he came out before the curtain and offered to fight Alan Dale, dramatic critic of the New York American? ESTELLE KLAUBER.

Trevarrick, Combe Martin, N. Devon.

WHAT IS A CRITIC?

To the Editor of The Daily Mail.

Sir,—Why this bleat from the blue from Mr. Gerald du Maurier—revealing a point of view at once queasy and genteel, inimical, I believe, to the best interests of the theatre, which, I think, are best served when the dead cats and rotten eggs of critical controversy are hurtling through the air? But since the tremendous onslaughts of the early 'seventies upon Sir Henry Irving English dramatic criticism seems to me to a great extent to have lost its virility. Consider how Irving throve on these assaults! And what became of his assailants? Nearly all of them, before they departed this world in peace, have sat at his hospitable board and chatted with him over a prime cigar. Does this suggest that dramatic critics are venal? To some extent venality enters into all human affairs, so can one expect it to be excluded from dramatic criticism? Why should one ask that a Solon should sit in every editorial chair and an Aristides in every first-night Press seat?

Fudge to talk about "qualifications" for dramatic criticism! What are the "qualifications" that gain for an actor what Mr. du Maurier terms "the public confidence"? It would be easy and quite futile to draw up a list of "qualifications"—a handsome face, a Greek nose, a flashing eye, a sonorous voice, a supple figure, a noble torso—and then to show that no actor possessed these "qualifications." One could just as easily show that George Bernard Shaw possessed no "qualifications" for writing the most brilliant volumes of dramatic criticism of our time; and one could do the same as regards Hazlitt, Leigh Hunt, Sainte-Beuve, William Winter, Alan Dale, etc. But apart from its current topical interest we have to thank the custom of dramatic criticism for what memorable record we possess of memorable performances.

When a critic writes of one with corrosive acid, one should be a man and, in quite a friendly way, aim some vitriol at his face—all which adds zest and stimulus to the pleasures of acting and the public concern about it. Or another method of receiving criticism is to follow the advice given by a pugilist to Bishop Wilberforce, who, on receiving a severe punch from his boxing instructor, the said pugilist, would lose his temper and hit out wildly, till one day the instructor spoke to him: "Mr. Wilberforce, when you get a blow, don't hit out wildly, but take a step back and just keep your hands up and ask, 'What was I doing wrong, and how did I get that blow?'"

LAURENCE IRVING.

10, Gilston-road, South Kensington.

NEW PRINCES THEATRE

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, NEW OXFORD STREET END, W.C.

Under the Direction of ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7th at 7-45

— AND —

EVERY EVENING at 7-45 p.m.

MATINEES:

Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 2-30

THE GREAT MORAL DRAMA:

WOMAN AND WINE

By BEN. LANDECK and ARTHUR SHIRLEY.

Play Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Dick Seymour, a Prodigal Son	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Hugh Seymour, an Artist, his father ...	Mr. C. F. COLLINGS
Alphonse Beaudet, a Bully...	Mr. MAYOR COOKE
Carlo, a Neapolitan Singer...	Mr. FERRY
Professor Sawter, F.R.G.S., a Geologist	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
Charles Sawter, his Son	Mr. FRED INGRAM
Phineas Collins, an Attorney	Mr. BELLENDEN CLARKE
Mark Parkins, a Money Lender	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Duc Arnac, a Man about Town	Mr. FRED ELSWORTHY
Bob Tipton, a Jockey	Mr. PAGE LAWRENCE
President of the Court	Mr. CHARLES WINGATE
Pierre Crucru, known as "Caliban," Custodian of the Flower Market ...	Mr. FRED MORGAN
A Waiter	Mr. A. BACHNER
Joseph, a Gendarme	Mr. ADAMS
Foreman of the Jury	Mr. THOMAS
An Advocate	Mr. ERIC LUGG
Janet Marlow, a Young Widow	Miss EVA DARE
Madame Perinet, a Market Woman ...	Miss BLANCHE STANLEY
Susanne, a Lady's Maid	Miss EDITH MARCHANT
Mary Andrews, Hugh Seymour's Ward ...	Miss JANET ALEXANDER
AND
"La Colombe," a Demimondaine... ...	Miss EAST ROBERTSON
Marcel Rigadout, The Woman who didn't Care	Miss ETHEL WARWICK

Market Women. Porters, Guests, Dancers, Gendarmes.

ACT I. ENGLAND.
Scene 1—TERRACE OF THE VILLA HOTEL, MALVERN.
Scene 2—THE HOTEL GROUNDS.
Scene 3—MARK PARKIN'S OFFICE, LONDON.
Two years elapse.

ACT II. PARIS.
Scene 1—ENCLOSURE AT LONGCHAMPS RACE COURSE.
Scene 2—A STREET.
Scene 3—MARCEL'S BOUDOIR.
Scene 4—CAFE D'AFRIQUE.
One day elapses.

ACT III. PARIS.
Scene 1—CORRIDOR IN THE HOTEL MIRANDA.
Scene 2—"LE BAL JAPONAIS."
Scene 3 THE FLOWER MARKET.
Six weeks elapse.

ACT IV. PARIS.
Scene 1 AT MADAME PERINET'S.
Scene 2 CORRIDOR.
Scene 3—LE PALAIS DE JUSTICE.

The Scenery painted by N. Hinchley, W. D. Hobbs, and The Lyceum Studio.
Uniforms and Costumes in the Bal Masque Scene by John Hyman, 19 Leicester Square, W.
Ladies' Hats in Longchamps Scene by Madame Kosky, Sloane St. (Phone 3539 Vic.)
Floral Stage Effects by T. A. Dickson & Co., The Nurseries, Upper Tulse Hill, S.W.

The Orchestra under the Direction of ALEXANDER HUMPHREYS will play the following selections:—

OVERTURE	"Les Masques"...	Pedrotti
FANTASIA	"Tannhauser"	Wagner
SELECTION	"Count of Luxembourg" ...	Franz Lehar
ENTR'ACTES ...	"Three Hungarian Dances" ...	Brahms

		Stalls	Grand Circle	Pit Stalls	Pit	Gallery	Private Boxes
POPULAR PRICES—	5/- to 6d	5/-	4/-				£1 1 0 to £2 2 0
		3/- Res'ved	2/6 Res'ved	1/6	1/-	6d.	Single Seats: from 4 -

Box Office open Daily 10 to 10. Seats Reserved by Letter, Telegram or Telephone.
Telephone 5983 (Gerrard).

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... G. GORDON JEFFERSON
Stage Manager ... . HARRY G. WRIGHT

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1.) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. (2.) The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3.) Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4.) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1912.

"WOMAN AND WINE."

REVIVAL OF "THE GREAT MORAL DRAMA."

Fifteen years ago, when "Woman and Wine", first appeared at the Pavilion Theatre, in the East End, Messrs. Ben Landeck and Arthur Shirley, the authors, described their exciting output as "the great moral drama." As there is nothing in it to lead the innocent astray—nothing more than a hero in love with two women and a glass of champagne—tens of thousands of young and old up and down the country have since flocked to see it and been none the worse.

For a new generation Messrs. W. and G. Melville put on this seasoned melodrama at the New Princes Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, last night. They were rewarded by seeing over 2,000 people excited to the highest pitch by the sequence of unhappy trials that dogged the footsteps of the hero.

The authors of "Woman and Wine" have a ready way of dealing with events that would have taken Ibsen off his mental feet. When, for instance, they think a man has been sufficiently long in love with one woman, they bring on another, open a bottle of champagne, and love springs for an act—if not for eternity—in his human breast. So it was with Dick Seymour. He first loved Mary. Then he went to Paris and fell in love with Marcelle. Mary, too, went to Paris and sold button-holes, and nursed Dick's father, and refused to sell flowers in a café to Marcelle. Mary had none to love her but Dick, but all the men fell in love with Marcelle because she had lovely clothes and was extravagant.

Then a jealous woman compelled Marcelle to fight a duel. They took off their ball dresses to do it comfortably, and Marcelle put herself in the way of an uppercut that finished her. Of course Dick happened to be in the neighbourhood and was arrested, and as he was an honest fellow and once said he would kill the villainess he was found guilty. But the real culprit came into court, after the verdict, and upset the French judge and jury by confessing, earning for herself and the drama a tremendous outburst of cheering that even the orchestra could not smother.

Mr. Harry Lonsdale and Miss Janet Alexander were splendid as hero and heroine, but first honours fell to Miss Ethel Warwick—Marcelle, "the woman who didn't care."

J. W.

GARRICK THEATRE

Lessees - - ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH
Managing Director for Garrick Renters, Ltd. - - LOUIS MEYER

Under the Management of ARTHUR BOURCHIER

EVERY EVENING AT 8.30.

THE FIRE SCREEN

A COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS, BY

ALFRED SUTRO.

Horace Travers - - - - -	ARTHUR BOURCHIER
Oliver Hadden - - - - -	J. FISHER WHITE
Sir William Murdoch, F.R.S., Etc., Etc.	HERBERT BUNSTON
Captain Hough - - - - -	KENYON MUSGRAVE
Mr. Ridges - - - - - -	ARTHUR ELDRED
Joshua - - - - - -	GILBERT CLARK
Parker - - - - - -	THOMAS WEGUELIN
Angela Verrinder - - - -	KATE CUTLER
AND
Martha Hadden - -	VIOLET VANBRUGH

THE GARRICK
THEATRE

7/2/12

Orch. Stall

K

Act I.	-	Oliver Hadden's Study at Finchley.
Act II.	-	Martha's Drawing Room at Finchley.
Act III.	-	The Garden Room at Bartons, Martha's Cottage in the Country.
Act IV.	-	Horace Travers' Rooms in Mount Street.

TIME: The Present.

Dresses for Miss VIOLET VANBRUGH and Miss KATE CUTLER designed and made by LUCILE, LTD., 23, Hanover Square, W.
Scenery by LEOLYN HART, Ltd. and ARTHUR PULLINGER.
The design and colour scheme for Act II. have been supplied by Messrs. GREEN & ABBOTT, 473, Oxford Street, S.W.
The New Act Drop painted by R. C. MCCLEERY.
The pictures in Act IV. kindly lent by Mr. GRAHAM ROBERTSON.
Wigs by Fox.

General Manager	For ARTHUR BOURCHIER	WILLIAM BURCHILL
Assistant Stage Manager		CLAUDE EDMONDS
Musical Director		ALBERT FOX
Business Manager		THOMAS STEVENS
Acting Manager	For GARRICK RENTERS, Ltd.	JOSÉ G. LEVY

FIRST MATINÉE, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10th, at 2.30

The Box Office (C. R. STUBBS) open daily from 10 to 10.
Telephone 9513 Gerrard.
Private Boxes £4 4s., £3 3s. and £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 6s. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

At this Theatre Visitors to the Pit and Gallery are under Shelter while waiting for the Doors to open.

THE MANAGEMENT reserve to themselves the right to exclude children in arms, or any person whom they, in their discretion, may consider undesirable.

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain. 1.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exits and entrance doors, which must open outwards. 3.—Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

This Theatre is Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to ARTHUR BOURCHIER and HERBERT SLEATH.

"What do you do when you are sitting with your back to the fire and it gets too hot?" "Why you get a fire-screen, of course." Dear, simple Oliver Hadden, famous bacteriologist, inventor of a serum that will put an end to meningitis, has need, though he knows it not, of a reliable "fire-screen" to protect him from the all-devouring flame of his wife's cousin, fascinating Angela Verrinder. Angela is a female Don Juan, living apart from her husband; a creature without a heart, who is jealous of her cousin Martha Hadden because she—good, conscientious, timid soul—has all that Angela has missed—a happy married life, a devoted husband, and faithful friends. Angela longs to pull Martha from her pedestal; and while the wife is away in the country Angela employs all her seductive feminine wiles to draw Oliver in to her net. Oliver, who "understands about every animal in the world except women," is an easy prey. He believes every pretty lie Angela tells him, is softened by her crocodile tears, and deeply touched by her sisterly (?) affection. Martha, returning unexpectedly, sees, but without much trepidation, that her husband is in danger of getting singed just because he is unaware of the nearness of the flame. Among Martha's acquaintances she numbers a certain Horace Travers, an attractive libertine, who reverences her as the one really good woman he has ever known, and to whom she has once done a great service, which amounted to the saving of his not particularly valuable life. Martha sends for Travers and lays her case before him, winding up with the request that he shall act as "fire-screen" between Angela and Oliver.

Horace, amused and interested, agrees; and for a time Martha's plan works so well that she suffers twinges of conscience, and implores Travers not to harm Angela. Horace's amusement grows; he knows his Angela through and through. "It's like recommending a small boy to be kind to a policeman," he scoffs. But the fascinating grass-widow is a greedy little person. True, she has, so she thinks, wrested the scalp of Travers from "dear Saint Martha," but she has determined that Oliver's shall also hang at her belt. Martha pleads, implores, defies. Angela mocks at her prayers, but the defiance rouses her. Bristling with fury, she spits venum like the "common household cat" that she is. Martha has dared to challenge her. Then let Martha beware. Angela will annex Oliver body and soul; she will ruin him; he shall become "her man." Off she flies to Oliver, all pretty, pathetic helplessness and tears. She is misunderstood. Martha is very unkind to her, she is a much-wronged woman, and all alone in the world with no friend but Oliver. He, poor fool, believes all this. But Martha has pitted herself against Angela, and means to win at any cost. She knows intuitively that mere friendship between a man such as Travers and a woman of Angela's temperament is impossible. She appeals to Travers, who has sworn to repay her, whenever he shall get the chance, for the service she once did him. Here is his chance, she says. She is convinced that Angela will be visiting him at his rooms; he is to tell her (Martha) when to bring Oliver there so that his eyes may be opened. Travers objects, denies the truth, says it is a question of honour. "The woman who goes to his rooms," he says, "is sacred." "No," says Martha, "it is the woman who doesn't go who is sacred. Is the 'honest woman' never to have a chance?" "She does, don't you think, in the end?" says Travers. And so it turns out. Martha breaks down his denials, his flippancy, his defence of "honour." She is relentless; he owes her a debt, and the day of reckoning has come. Finally, full of self-loathing, he blurts out the truth—"Tomorrow at four"—and rushes from the room.

The exposure is effected as arranged. Angela, caught in a trap, bites and snaps all round—at wounded Oliver, who has found her out; at Martha, on whose halo she has threatened to dance; and at Travers, the man who has betrayed her. Left alone with her, he begs for a continuance of their friendship. "No," says Angela with disdain, "you are a back number." "But back numbers are useful for reference; one looks them up sometimes," replies Horace. Angela tells him he is getting old. "I'm not old at 45," protests the man. "Then," says cruel Angela, "consider me your first white hair," and daintily, scornfully, she turns her back on him.

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

Miss SARAH BROOKE'S SEASON.

TO-NIGHT (Saturday), February 10th, 1912, at 8 o'clock, and every following Evening at 8.20.

THE EASIEST WAY

A Play in Four Acts

By EUGENE WALTER.

CAST.

Laura Murdock	SARAH BROOKE
Elfie St. Clair	LAURA NELSON HALL
Annie	VIOLET RAND
Willard Brockton	GUY STANDING
John Madison	GODFREY TEARLE
Jim Weston	O. B. CLARENCE

Act I.	Mrs. Williams' Country House in the Mountains near Denver
Act II.	Laura Murdock's Lodgings in New York
Act III.	Laura Murdock's Apartments in a New York Hotel
Act IV.	The Same

Produced by the AUTHOR and Mr. GUY STANDING.

A selection from the following

Programme of Music

will be played by the Orchestra under the direction of Mr. LOUIS HILLIER.

"Pomp and Circumstance"	Elgar
Norwegian Dances (Nos. 2 and 3)	Grieg
(a) Rêverie Interrompue (b) Danse Russe	Tchaikowski
SELECTION "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Dreams	...Wagner
Czardas No. 1	G. Michiels
Prelude	Rachmaninoff
(a) Narcissus	E. Nevin
(b) Flirtation	A. P. Steck
(c) Marcia Turca	... Mozart
(a) Serenata	Moszkowski
(b) Songe d'Automne	... A. Joyce
(c) Fairy Tiptoe	J. Fredericks

Piano by KRAMER.

Scenery by Mr. F. L. SCHMITZ.

Dresses by Mdme. HANDLEY SEYMOUR, 47 New Bond Street.

Hats by the MAISON LEWIS, Regent Street.

Manager ... ... (for Miss Brooke) ... W. T. CUNNINGHAM

Stage Manager ... ... EDWARD SHALE

BOX OFFICE (Mr. VINCENT POTTER) open 10 to 10. Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Dress Circle, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Telephone: 8727 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager ... ... W. LESTOCQ

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, Junr.

rab your happiness, no matter where you get how it comes," says Elfie St. Clair to her l Laura Murdock, an actress "of sorts," g, pretty, and with a strong liking for "the ots of Egypt." Laura wants happiness badly, he goes the wrong way to get it, staking her on the unstable foundation of lies. She is k woman who, finding life too hard for her, s herself to be taken "under the protection"
r. Willard Brockton. But Laura finds that red-dollar hats and the other attributes of rious living do not constitute happiness, and rmines to try love and the simple life in the ny of John Madison, a handsome young re-r, who, knowing that Laura's past is as hed as his own, yet loves her and trusts her gh to believe that for his sake she will keep the square" while he is finding the fortune is necessary to their marriage in the goldfields olorado. Brockton is agreeable, but cynical—habit of life is a hard thing to get away
" he tells Madison—but John and Laura are dent, over confident, for while John is seeking root of all evil" in the goldfields, Laura, left o through the mill alone, finds that her rence is ground to powder by the millstones of rty and failure. Without someone else's money ck her, she cannot keep her foothold on the e. She "puts up" a good fight; but when is reduced to her last dollar, her rent three s in arrears, and her landlady clamouring threatening, then comes temptation.

e St. Clair, a demi-mondaine, beautiful, large-ed, resourceful, visits Laura at her poor
ng. "I kept on the straight for a man once for years," she tells Laura, "and then he threw ut—cold flat." "They say self-preservation is rst law of nature." "When I first met Jerry s a 'has-been,' and I was on the way to be."
asn't my fault that time made me older and k on a lot of flesh." Laura listens to the of "the world, the flesh, and the devil," and ton reappears at the psychological moment, Laura a substantial sum of money, and ges that they shall take up their life together the same evening. A stronger and more re-ful woman would have paid her debts with oney and purchased a ticket for the after-train to Colorado; but not so Laura. She s to her old life of pleasure, but has not the ge to inform John of her infidelity as Brock-ad stipulated, and she had promised to do.
John, four months later, comes to New York a fortune, and invites her to enter "for the atrimonial" with him, she swears, to allay spicions, that she has been "on the level" they parted. Brockton, discovering the announces his intention of enlightening on, but yields to Laura's pleadings that at she shall be allowed to disillusion John her-Again she fails in her purpose. Practical, ended Elfie counsels deceit: "Lie to all men, ll lie to you," says the courtesan. Let Laura arry John, and then she can snap her fingers ckton. "A man will believe anything about irl but nothing about his wife." Laura es at her elusive happiness. "I will be
I will, I will," she sobs, and is on the point ng to the registrar's with John, when Brocktervenes and John learns the truth.

Laura's castle in Spain crumbles about her
John's scorn of her and of her lies is un-le. As he turns to leave her, she picks up a er and threatens to kill herself. "Go on," ohn, "do it." But brought face to face eath Laura shirks it as she had shirked the realities of life. "I can't, I can't," she
, and the weapon drops from her nerveless
. "No," says John, "you thought it was ly decent thing to do to kill yourself; but aven't the nerve. You'll get over it; you'll own and down. There'll be days when you'll of me, and then it will be over; for you it is asiest way.'" And Laura, deserted by "pro-
" and by lover, takes, as the weak take
, the line of least resistance; paints her face cks her body, and with an hysterical laugh heart-broken moan goes off to sell herself to ghest bidder.

February 8

Every Evening at 8.30 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will present the famous Military Comedy, entitled

THE SECOND IN COMMAND

By ROBERT MARSHALL.

LIEUT.-COL. MILES ANSTRUTHER, D.S.O.	Of the 10th Dragoon Guards	Mr. CYRIL KEIGHTLEY
MAJOR CHRISTOPHER BINGHAM		Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
LIEUT. WALTER MANNERING		Mr. ROBERT AVERELL
LIEUT. PETER BARKER		Mr. EVAN THOMAS
MEDENHAM		Mr. JOHN HARWOOD
HARTOPP		Mr. FRANK BRADLEY
SERGEANT		Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
CORPORAL		Mr. PETER BLUNT
ORDERLY		Mr. LEONARD BATCHELOR
MR. FENWICK		Mr. DANIEL McCARTHY
THE HON. HILDEBRAND CARSTAIRS		Mr. A. E. MATTHEWS
THE DUKE OF HULL		Mr. LAWRENCE LEYTON
MURIEL MANNERING		Miss DORIS LYTTON
LADY HARBURGH		Miss HELEN FERRERS
NORAH VINING		Miss MARIE HEMINGWAY

Officers—Messrs. ROLAND MITFORD, HAROLD ANSTRUTHER, WILFRED WYE, ARTHUR CONNOR.

ACT I.	...	The Ante-Room of the Officers' Mess, Lowchester (ONE WEEK ELAPSES)	... BRUCE SMITH
ACT II.	...	Lieut.-Colonel Anstruther's Quarters in Barracks (TWO DAYS ELAPSE)	... ,, ,,
ACT III.	...	Same as Act I. (ONE YEAR ELAPSES)	... ... ,, ,,
ACT IV.	..	Trafalgar Cottage, Portsmouth	... ... ,, ,,

Uniforms by L. & H. NATHAN.

Costumes in Acts I., II. and III. by REDFERNS, Limited. Costumes in the last Act by MAUDE TAYLOR.
Hats by MAISON LEWIS. Wigs by CLARKSON.

CRAMER GRAND PIANOFORTE used, supplied from New Premises, 139, New Bond Street.

THE SECOND IN COMMAND

THE SECOND IN COMMAND

The Playhouse

Telephone:
Nos. 14042 and 14043 Central

On Saturday, February 17th, 1912, at 7.45, and on subsequent Evenings at 8.30,

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

THE "MIND THE PAINT" GIRL.

A Comedy, in Four Acts, by

ARTHUR PINERO.

THE PERSONS OF THE PLAY.

Viscount Farncombe	Mr. VERNON STEEL
Colonel the Hon. Arthur Stidulph ...	Mr. CHARLES DORAN
Baron Von Rettenmayer	Mr. LOUIS GOODRICH
Captain Nicholas Jeyes...	Mr. ALLAN AYNESWORTH
Lionel Roper	Mr. DION BOUCICAULT
Sam de Castro	Mr. NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Herbert Fulkerson	Mr. FRANK DENTON
Stewart Heneage	Mr. W. CADOGAN
Gerald Grimwood	Mr. E. DOUGLAS
Carlton Smythe. (Manager of the Pandora Theatre)	Mr. CHARLES E. VERNON
Douglas Glynn, Albert Palk, Wilfrid Tavish, and Sigismund Shirley (Actors at the Pandora)	Messrs. A. FITZGERALD, WENLOCK BROWN, CECIL NEWTON & NORMAN YATES
Vincent Bland. (A Musical Composer, attached to the Pandora)	Mr. BERNARD MEREFIELD
Morris Cooling. (Business Manager at the Pandora) ...	Mr. JOHN TRESAHAR
Luigi. (Maître d'hôtel at Catani's Restaurant) ...	Mr. J. WOODALL-BIRDE
Waiters	Messrs. A. THORN, E. THIRLBY and J. MEGUS
The Hon. Mrs. Arthur Stidulph. (Formerly, as Dolly Ensor, of the Pandora Theatre)	Miss RUTH MACKAY
Lily Parradell	Miss MARIE LÖHR
Jimmie Birch	Miss GWENDOLINE BROGDEN
Gabrielle Kato	Miss NINA SEVENING
Enid Moncrieff	Miss HILDA MOORE
Daphne Dure	Miss DORIS MACINTYRE
Nita Trevenna (Of the Pandora)	Miss MARJORIE DORÉ
Flo Connify	Miss GEORGINA MILNE
Sybil Dermott	Miss ALMA DUDLEY
Olga Cook	Miss GWENDOLINE JESSON
Evangeline Ventris	Miss MARGARET KING
Mrs. Upjohn. (Lily Parradell's mother) ...	Miss CLARE GREET
Gladys. (Lily's parlourmaid)	Miss ZOE GORDON
Maud. (Lily's maid)	Miss GLADYS BRENDA

The action of the piece takes place in London—at LILY PARRADELL'S house in Bloomsbury, in the foyer of the Pandora Theatre, and again at LILY'S house. The curtain will be lowered for a few moments in the course of the Second Act.

A Gong will be sounded upon the stage one minute before the rising of the curtain upon each Act.

The Costumes worn by Miss Löhr, Miss Moore, Miss Mackay and Miss Sevening, designed and executed by Lucile, Lto., 23, Hanover Square. The remainder of the Costumes by Madame Handley-Seymour, 47-48, New Bond Street.

The Scenery painted by Messrs. W. Hann & Son.

Furniture by Messrs. Oetzmann.

General Manager - - - - Mr. W. Lestocq.

Matinees Every Thursday and Saturday at 2.30.

Business Manager - - - - Mr. James W. Mathews.

Stage Manager - - - - Mr. Duncan McRae.

Musical Director - - - - Mr. John Crook.

Prices of Admission—Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d.; Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 6s.; Upper Circle, 4s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s.

Box Office 10 to 10. Telephones, Gerrard, 312, 313, 314.

MIND THE PAINT (the complete song), words by D'Arcy Wingate, music by Vincent Bland, as originally sung by Miss Lily Parradell at the Pandora Theatre in the Musical Play of "The Duchess of Brixton," may be obtained from Messrs. Church and Co. (Ltd.), Music Publishers, 181, New Bond Street.

After the Theatre. Catani's Restaurant, 459, Strand. Best cuisine in London. Milanese band. Private rooms. Urbano Catani, Sole Proprietor. Tel: 10,337, Gerrard.

D. Y. T.

17/2/1912

Orch. Stall

F18

No.

SIR A. PINERO'S NEW PLAY.

DISTURBANCE AT THE FIRST PERFORMANCE.

Sir Arthur Pinero's new four-act comedy, "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl," produced by Mr. Charles Frohman at the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday evening, met with a somewhat hostile reception from a section of the audience in the pit and gallery.

The play is intended to present a phase of musical-comedy life, and centres round a young actress who had—four years before the story opened—risen to fame by her singing of a song called 'Mind the Paint.' Nothing happened during the first act to indicate any disapproval, but from about half-way through the second act the actors and actresses did their work under difficulties. For some reason or other a section of the pit and gallery began to boo, and during the last moments of the second act the noise was considerable. Early in the third act the noise recommenced, and a couple of women, one in the gallery, the other in the pit, and a man also repeatedly called on the players to "speak up."

Towards the end of Act II. someone called out from the gallery to "give the play a fair hearing," but there were those present who evidently saw no reason why they should do so, and amid some noise and jeering from the gallery the performance was carried up to the strong scene between the woman and the two men in love with her. That scene received fair consideration. There was a little booing at the end of the act, but the noise was not renewed until the play was over, and then from pit and gallery there was a demonstration of disapproval, which was, however, by no means unanimous. The stalls, circles, and boxes applauded the players when they took their calls, so also did the great majority of the audience in the pit and gallery.

Sir Arthur Pinero did not appear on the stage, and within a few minutes of the fall of the curtain the theatre had emptied.

Of late the practice of booing a play in London has almost fallen into disuse, and "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl" is the first production during the present season that has had the misfortune to be interrupted.

"The 'Mind the Paint' Girl" will be welcome to actors and actresses, for it simply teems with small parts, and all of them good ones. The leading character is a frank, bold, warm-hearted, musical-play idol called Lily Parradell. Lily has been patiently courted by a lazy "waster," Captain Nicholas Jeyes, to whom she promised to become engaged if he would find work. Jeyes, however, is "work-shy," and at the time the play begins a benevolent male friend is trying to make a match between Lily and the shy and well-bred young Viscount Farncombe. Jeyes becomes jealous, and disguises himself as a waiter in a chin-beard to spy on Lily and Farncombe at a supper party given by the manager of the Pandora Theatre in the foyer of that house. Farncombe is fascinated, and there is a violent row between Jeyes and Lily, who is proposed to by Farncombe, but refuses him from unselfish motives, not considering herself worthy of him. However, in the end, her love for him overpowers this diffidence. Jeyes emigrates, and Lily agrees to marry the Viscount, and leave the stage for ever.

RUDE PLAYGOERS.

SIR ARTHUR PINERO AND BOOING.

Sir Arthur Pinero, speaking last evening to a representative of The Daily Mail of the booing that accompanied some portion of his play "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl" at the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday evening, said: "I only know that the ladies and gentlemen engaged in the performance of my play felt that there was a hostile element in the pit and gallery from the very beginning. The result was that as artists—highly strung as they were—they gave instead of a good performance one that was faulty in many respects, and it was upon an inadequate performance that the gentlemen of the Press have written their criticisms. I hope these gentlemen will do the ladies and gentlemen of the company, and me, the honour to witness a performance of the play on another occasion.

"The players really performed for the first time on the occasion of the second representation, when the audience was sympathetic throughout. I have no personal grievance because of the booing, recognising as I do the right of an audience, or any part of it, to approve or disapprove according to their tastes. But I do seriously deplore the pain wilfully inflicted on Miss Marie Lohr.

"The hostile gentlemen in pit and gallery not only made her suffer, but they also deprived themselves and others of the pleasure of witnessing in its perfection one of the most charming examples of acting it has ever been my lot to see.

"With regard to the indulgence in personalities which I understand has been ascribed to me, I can only say that those personalities have not been intended by me, but have been fastened on me by others. As to attributing to me the desire to attack the musical comedy world wholesale, I would remind my assailants that in the character of Lily Parradell, the heroine of my play, I have attempted to paint the picture of a girl full of honest and generous impulses and of great nobility of character."

SAVOY THEATRE.

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to
Mr. G. A. Richardson (Secretary Savoy Theatre and Operas, Ltd.), Savoy Hotel, W.C.

Miss ELLEN TERRY
AND
Mr. ALBERT CHEVALIER
SEASON.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1912,
AND EVERY FOLLOWING EVENING AT 8.0,

THE HOUSE

A Play in Two Acts by GEORGE GLORIEL.
(By arrangement with Otho Stuart, Esq.)

Jack Mudsey	Mr. ALBERT CHEVALIER
Joe Creek	Mr. JULIAN CROSS
Eliza Creek	Miss ALICE BEET
Mildred Creek	Miss MABEL GARDEN

Scene The Creek's Room Time—If not to day—to-morrow.

FOLLOWED BY

MISS

ELLEN TERRY

ON

SOME OF THE HEROINES FROM SHAKESPEARE'S PLAYS.

THE PATHETIC WOMEN.

Amongst others Miss Terry will comment on and illustrate by acting the following characters :—

VIOLA, with extract from "Twelfth Night"
DESDEMONA, with scene from "Othello"
EMILIA, with scene from "Othello"
JULIET, with scenes from "Romeo and Juliet" (including the Potion Scene)
CORDELIA, with scene from "King Lear"
CLEOPATRA, with scene from "Antony and Cleopatra"
CRESSIDA, "Troilus and Cressida"
LADY MACBETH, with extract from "Macbeth"
OPHELIA, with scene from "Hamlet" (including the Mad Scene)

CONCLUDING WITH

PANTALOON

A plea for an ancient family—in One Act.

By J. M. BARRIE.

Music by JOHN CROOK.

Pantaloon	Mr. ALBERT CHEVALIER
Clown	Mr. HARRY BRETT
Harlequin	Mr. JULIAN CROSS
Columbine	Miss MABEL GARDEN
Baby Clown	LITTLE DORRIT
Policeman	Mr. ARTHUR STUART

The Curtain will fall during the progress of the Play to denote the passing of years.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.15
"THE HOUSE" AND "PANTALOON" (only).

There will be an interval of 10 minutes after "The House," and 10 minutes after Miss Ellen Terry's recital.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. J. C. Holliday, will play the following Selection of Music:—

(a)	Day in Naples	Byng
(b)	Three Irish Dances	John C. Holliday
(c)	"Nell Gwyn" Dances	Edward German
(d)	Valse, "Bruderlein Fein"	Leo Fall

Musical Director ...	For Mr. Albert Chevalier	... Mr. J. C. Holliday
Stage Manager ...		Mr. George Leybourne

Private Boxes, £5 5s., £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d.
First Circle (Reserved), Front Row, 5s.; other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Box Office (Mr. Richard Weaver) open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.
Telephone: 2602 Gerrard. Telegrams: "Newsavo, London."

Business Manager ... ... Mr. HARRY P. TOWERS

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE,

TRILBY

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS BY PAUL M. POTTER.

Dramatised (by permission) from the late GEORGE DU MAURIER'S Novel.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID.
ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.
CHORUS MASTER—ALFRED BELLEW.
GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, AND EVERY EVENING AT 8.15.

(FOR THREE WEEKS' ONLY).

TRILBY

Svengali		HERBERT TREE
Talbot Wynne	(known as 'Taffy')	EDMUND MAURICE
Alexander McAlister	(known as 'The Laird')	A. E. GEORGE
William Bagot	(known as 'Little Billee')	E. ION SWINLEY
Gecko		HENRY MORRELL
Zouzou	(afterwards Duc de la Rochemartel)	ROSS SHORE
Dodor		PHILIP MERIVALE
Oliver		FRANK CONROY
Lorimer		PETER UPCHER
Reverend Thomas Bagot		WALTER R. CREIGHTON
Manager Kaw		FRANCIS CHAMIER
Trilby O'Ferrall		PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY
Mrs. Bagot		DORA DIEHL
Madame Vinard		ROSINA FILIPPI
Angele Honorine	(Grisettes)	LAURA COWIE JOAN CHALONER

THE SCENE OF THE PLAY IS LAID IN PARIS.

PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF

FRANK CURZON.

To-Night, Tuesday, February 20th, 1912, at 8.30,

MR. CHARLES HAWTREY'S Revival of

"Dear Old Charlie,"

A Farce in Three Acts,

Adapted from MM. LABICHE and DELACOUR'S Play, "Celimare le Bien Aime,"

By CHARLES BROOKFIELD.

...	Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY
...	Mr. ERIC LEWIS
...	Mr. E. HOLMAN CLARK
...	Mr. CHAS. P. VAUGHAN
...	Mr. ARTHUR GRENVILLE
...	Master SYDNEY DUNSTONE
...	Miss MABEL YOUNGE
...	Miss MONA HARRISON
...	Miss ENID LYELL

Act I ... Charlie Ingleton's Flat in "De Grey Mansions"

Act II. ... ... The Same.

Act III The Sitting Room of a Cottage at Pangley-on-Thames

Time ... Present Day.

The Play Produced by Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.

Preceded at 8 by

Mr. ARCHIE NAISH

At the Piano.

Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30

The Orchestra under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON will play the following Music:—

The Celesta & Mustel Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 80, Wigmore Street, W.
Grand Pianoforte by BECHSTEIN & Co., 130, Wigmore Street, W.

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... ... E. W. TARVEN

Orchestra Stalls, 7s. 6d. to 4s. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s., Other Rows, 3s.
Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7553

General Manager ... ... J. B. VAUGHAN

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1912.

"DEAR OLD CHARLIE."

WHY MR. BERNARD SHAW AVOIDED THE FIRST NIGHT.

Mr. Charles Hawtrey was very anxious that Mr. Bernard Shaw should witness Tuesday night's performance of "Dear Old Charlie," because he has from time to time written a great deal about it. And he invited him to accept a private box and be his guest at the Prince of Wales Theatre. However, to his great regret Mr. Shaw would not go to the first night, his reason for declining the invitation being contained in the following letter:—

My dear Hawtrey,—I positively refuse to be present on the first night of "Dear Old Charlie" as a protest against your extremely unfair treatment of me personally in the matter. Your clear duty is to give an invitation performance of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" every second night and play Frank yourself. Then the public will be able to judge fairly between the plays the censorship writes and the plays which it suppresses. Of course, if you play "Dear Old Charlie" everybody will say it is the most delightful play in all the world; and they will be right—on that condition. But then they would say the same thing of any other play you appeared in. Consequently I say that your production will prove nothing but what everybody knows already: that people will stand anything for the sake of seeing you act.

All the same, I shall pay a furtive visit to the theatre later on, because it is nothing short of a scandal that I should write about "Dear Old Charlie" the way I do without ever having seen it.

Yours ever,
(Signed) G. BERNARD SHAW.
10, Adelphi-terrace, London.

GAIETY THEATRE.

MANAGER ... ... MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

To-night, Saturday, February 24th, 1912, at 8,

For the First time

Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'

PRODUCTION,

"THE SUNSHINE GIRL,"

A New Musical Play in Two Acts,
By PAUL A. RUBENS and CECIL RALEIGH.
Lyrics by PAUL A. RUBENS and ARTHUR WIMPERIS.
Music by PAUL A. RUBENS

Lord Bicester (Known as "Bingo," a young Stockbroker) Mr. GEO. GROSSMITH, Junr.
Vernon Blundell ... ... Mr. BASIL S. FOSTER
Commodore Parker ... (of the Blundell Line of Boats) ... Mr. GEORGE BARRETT
Hodson... ... ... (Chief Manager of the Works) Mr. TOM WALLS
Stepneyak ... (Manager of the Foreign Department) Mr. ROBERT NAINBY

Managers of various Departments:
Whitley — Mr. G. GRUNDY
Dever — Mr. W. STEPHENS
Garing — Mr. S. LLOYD
Nelgrove — Mr. G. LYNCH
Telfridge — Mr. J. GRANDE
Mr. Williams (Solicitor) Mr. O. COLLINS

Major Lascelles ... Mr. A. WELLESLEY
Bobbie McLeod ... Mr. G. COMYN
Policeman... ... Mr. CHARLES RUSS
Policeman ... Mr. JAMES REDMOND
Sailor ... ... Mr. AUSTIN CAMP
Footman ... ... Mr. RAYNHAM

AND

Floot ... ... (An ex-Four-wheeler driver) ... Mr. EDMUND PAYNE

Lady Rosabelle Merrydew ... (Lord Bicester's Fiancée) ... Miss OLIVE MAY
Marie Silvaine (Head of the Packing Department at the Works) Miss MABEL SEALBY
Emmeline ... ... (A Workgirl) ... Miss VIOLET ESSEX

Heads of various Departments:
Sybil — Miss AVICE KELHAM
May — Miss BLANCHE STOCKER
Lucy — Miss ELSIE COLLIER
Violet — Miss FLORENCE READE
Lily — Miss OLIVE WADE
Kit — Miss MARIE MITCHELL

Lady Mary ... Miss IRENE WARREN
Miss Molyneux Miss GLADYS WRAY
Hon. Miss Grey Miss PATTIE WELLS
Lady Clara ... Miss DOROTHY FANE
Miss Rivers ... Miss ETHEL LAWSON
Miss Pontifex Miss KITTY LINDLEY

AND

Brenda Blacker ... Miss CONNIE EDISS (Floot's Wife, calling herself by her maiden name)
Delia Dale ... Miss PHYLLIS DARE (Of the Perfume Department at the Works)

Chorus of WORK-GIRLS and WORKMEN, GUESTS, etc., etc., etc

ACT I. ... ... Port Sunshine (Alfred Terraine)

ACT II. ... Mr. Blundell's Private House at Port Sunshine (Joseph Harker)

The Play produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES and Mr. J. A. E. MALONE.

Dances and Chorus Business arranged by Mr. WILLIE WARDE.

Costumes designed by COMELLI and executed by MISS FISHER; MICHARD SŒURS; ALEXANDRA; B. J. SIMMONS & Co.; MORRIS ANGEL & SONS.

Modern Dresses in Act II. designed and made by LUCILE, Ltd., Paris and London

Wigs by CLARKSON. Properties by H. W. ELLIOT.
Electrical Effects by G. APPLEBEE. Machinist, J. SHELDON.

Stage Manager ... ... Mr. HARRY B. BURCHER.

Musical Director ... ... Mr. LÉOPOLD WENZEL.

BOX OFFICE (J. H. JUBB) OPEN DAILY from 10 till 10

Extracts from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain

(1) The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill.

(2) The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

(3) Where there is a Fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order.

(4) Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium.

(5) All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Yet another "Gaiety Girl" has made her début, and we seek for new superlatives with which to describe her. Soap and sunshine both seem to have contributed to the bright charm and fresh daintiness of her appearance. The plot of the piece is of the slightest, and is often lost sight of in the pleasure created by tuneful songs and dainty dances, which are linked together with a slight thread of sometimes inconsequent, but always humorous, dialogue. The "story" is easily told: Vernon Blundell will inherit his late uncle's soap business if he remains unmarried and unbetrothed for five years. Though the time has come for him to take up his inheritance, he still wishes to continue working incognito at Port Sunshine in order to ascertain the real feelings of one of the work-girls, Delia Dale, and to this end he summons his friend "Bingo," Lord Bicester, who has "thrown up his commission in the Guards for 'half-commission' on the Stock Exchange," to take his place. To Port Sunshine comes an ex-four-wheeler driver, Floot, walking from Land's End to John o' Groats for a wager, who has driven Lord Bicester in earlier days from a Covent Garden ball, and recognises him in his assumed character. Here also come Lady Rosabello Merrydew (Lord Bingo's fiancée), accompanied—of course, quite naturally—by her "confidential" cook, who, besides being the wife of Floot, is carrying on a flirtation with Commodore Parker, of the Blundell Boats, and—here the plot is a little puzzling—is induced by Lady Rosabelle to take her place with Lord Bicester as his betrothed. However, we need not ask the why or wherefore of an incident in a musical play. Vernon Blundell, having proved the disinterestedness of Delia, who is willing to wed him in spite of his humble position, the arrival of the family solicitor to announce that he is free to marry whom he pleases seems almost a superfluity.

In the House of Commons on Thursday Sir John Jardine asked the Home Secretary whether by executive order or intervention he had any power to check the use in plays or songs at theatres and music halls of language of insult to princes and chiefs in India in alliance with the British Government. Mr. McKenna replied that the Lord Chamberlain had ample powers of checking the use of insulting language in stage plays in the theatres and music halls, and that the County Council could intervene in the case of songs at music halls.

Mr. A. Ward: Is the right hon. gentleman aware that the language complained of occurred in the play called "The Sunshine Girl," and referred to the Gaekwar of Baroda, and that since objection was taken the passage complained of has been altered and is now sung in the altered form? Mr. McKenna: No, sir; I am not aware of the facts.

Sir J. Jardine: Why did not the Censor take notice of it before this question was put? Mr. McKenna: I have no responsibility for the Censor, and I have not been informed about the matter.

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation SIX Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1913.

MR. PAYNE AND THE GAIETY.

Mr. Edmund Payne had to make a speech at the Gaiety Theatre on Saturday night after the last performance of "The Sunshine Girl."

"I am leaving here, as you know," he said, "after twenty-one years, during which I only missed one piece. But I am not going for good. I am going to take a holiday. I may go to the music-halls. I may go into management. If you will support me it will be very satisfactory to myself and my creditors. I am sorry I am leaving here, but I shall probably come back again, for I am remaining on with Mr. Edwardes and will reappear with him in the autumn."

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On TUESDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOONS,
February 20th, 23rd, 27th, March 1st, 5th, and 8th, 1912, at 3,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

THE DOVE UNCAGED

A Fantasy in One Act by

E. HAMILTON MOORE.

Sister Monica	Miss MARION TERRY
Sister Lucia	Miss MARY RELPH
Sister Clara	Miss ROSE YULE
Sister Serena	Miss ROSE DUPRÉ
The Novice Colombina	Miss GLADYS COOPER

(By arrangement with SEYMOUR HICKS)

Scene—A Convent in the South.

Produced under the Direction of FRANK VERNON.

AND

THE NEW SIN

A Play in Three Acts by

B. MACDONALD HASTINGS.

Hilary Cutts	Mr. ARTHUR WONTNER
Maximilian Cutts	Mr. O. P. HEGGIE
Jim Benziger	Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY

(By arrangement with JULIA NEILSON and FRED TERRY)

Will Grain, M.P.	Mr. GUY RATHBONE
David Llewellyn Davids, J.P., L.C.C., M.A.B.	Mr. A. G. POULTON
Stuart Campbell	Mr. H. LANE BAYLIFF
Peel	Mr. ARTHUR BOWYER

Scene—Hilary Cutts' and Jim Benziger's Flat in London.

Six Months elapse between Acts II. and III.

Produced uuder the Direction of J. CLIFFORD BROOKE.

CRITERION
THEATRE

E

Feb. 27

Orchestra Stall

C 52

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 27th, 1912, and Every Evening at 8.30 o'clock sharp.

Mr. ROBERT LORAINE produces

"98.9"

A NEW THREE ACT COMEDY, by C. B. Fernald.

The characters in the order in which they make their first appearance.

Mrs. Anne Delphy	Miss MARIE ILLINGTON
Mr. Napoleon Delphy	Mr. A. VANE-TEMPEST
Spink	Miss ELIZABETH ROSSLYN
Miss Grace Challismore	Miss MABEL LOVE
Mr. Stanley Miles	Mr. ROBERT LORAINE
Sir James Cavanagh	Mr. CHARLES CARTWRIGHT
Noccioli	Signor A. CUCCHIARA

ACT I.	Tuesday, March Twenty-sixth ..	At Mrs. Delphy's House in London
ACT II.	Tuesday, April Twenty-third	At Mrs. Delphy's Villa near Bordighera
ACT III.	Tuesday, May Seventh	The Studio at Chiddingfold

The Songs in Act 2 and Act 3 are sung by Mr. IAN MACROBERT.

The Play produced by Mr. ROBERT LORAINE.

MATINEE, EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY, at 2.30.

The Piano in the Second Act by PLEYEL.

THE FILMS USED IN ACT 3 ARE NON-INFLAMMABLE.

Programme of Music.

Overture	"Gasparone"	Millöcher
Entr'act I.	Eva Valse (from the new Operetta)	Lehár
	(a) Selection, "Mlle. Modiste"	Victor Herbert
Entract II.	(b) Waltz from "The Girl of the Golden West"	Puccini
	(a) "Lolita"	Buzzi Peccia
	(b) "The three Twins"	Karl Hoschna

PRICES OF ADMISSION—Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d. to £6 6s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d.
Upper Circle, First Row, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d.

Telephone 3844 Gerrard. Box Office open from 10 till 10.

Business Manager .. .. Mr. J. W. LETHBRIDGE.
Musical Director .. Mr. Alick Maclean. Stage Manager .. Mr. Alfred Drayton.

"The first piece of furniture in any woman's house is a man," is the dictum of Mrs. Anne Delphy, widow, collector of rare china and aunt to a fascinating but cryptic young lady, Miss Grace Challismore. Grace is an artist who "wants to live alone and paint pictures," and, with this edifying purpose in view, she negotiates for the purchase of a charming little house at Chiddingford, whose nursery she intends to convert into a studio. Travelling alone on the Continent, Grace has met and subjugated—by her beauty alone, for she has never exchanged a word with him—a young man named Stanley Miles, remarkable for his enormous self-esteem and unflagging pertinacity. He follows Grace to England, and effects an introduction in the most unconventional fashion by forcing his acquaintance on Mrs. Anne Delphy. The aunt and the niece refuse to know Mr. Miles until it comes to light that he is the much-favoured protégé of an old and never-forgotten love of Aunt Anne's, Sir James Cavanagh, who had been soured in early life by her refusal to marry him. This is sufficient to gain Stanley an invitation to dinner a month hence at Mrs. Delphy's villa near Bordighera. From the start he does not make the slightest attempt to hide his infatuation for Grace, who treats him at first with frigidity, then with open dislike and contempt. The only clue we get to the real state of her feelings is the utterance of a half-imbecile cousin of hers, who remarks that she has "a passion for throwing dust into everybody's eyes." Stanley, who arrives at Bordighera in a flying machine very late for dinner, makes no headway when there with Grace, who is furious when she discovers that the enviable little house at Chiddingford has been snatched from her at the eleventh hour by Stanley himself. She scorns his love, becomes impatient at his importunity, and finally informs him that the only service he can do her is to go to some far off spot and stop there. Stanley, unabashed, ascribes her contempt to high spirits and an abnormal temperature, and, telling her that "the temperature of an artist who is an artist, is always 3 degrees below the normal," decides that hers is 5 degrees above normal, or "98.9." Before obeying her command to leave Europe for ever, Stanley invites Grace, with the rest of the company, to tea in the studio of his newly-purchased house at Chiddingford, an appointment which, after many agonising doubts and fears on Stanley's part, she keeps, to find that the studio in question is a nursery, and a very modern, up-to-date nursery indeed, with texts round the walls such as "Multiply and replenish the earth," "The more the merrier," and on the floor a rocking-horse, animals with moving heads, and a cinematograph. Aunt Anne is terribly shocked at this fresh proof of the young man's "confounded effrontery." Not so Grace, who frankly owns that she "sees no reason why a properly-educated young woman should be shocked by the multiplication table." Stanley explains that the reason she exhibits no surprise is that she has already secretly visited the room, to do which she has had to take the key from an envelope bearing the inscription that it was to be opened only by the woman willing to marry him. Grace meets his statement with a frank denial; but Stanley successfully "counters her bluff" by turning on the cinematograph, which gives a record of her first visit. Grace acknowledges the truth, but persists that he has mistaken her motive, and she heaps scorn and ridicule upon him until, somewhat to the relief of the spectators, the "ferociously enterprising" Stanley is left with all his effrontery crushed and "limp and silent as a rag." Then only does Grace relent. She admits that her one desire has been to test the strength of his love, and the conventional ending—the lovers clasped in one another's arms—is reached.

WHITNEY THEATRE,

Sole Proprietor and Manager ... ... F. C. WHITNEY

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 28th, 1912, and every Evening, at 8.40.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY at 2.30.

Mr. F. C. WHITNEY
PRESENTS
(Under the Direction of Mr. EUSTACE BURNABY)

A Member of Tattersall's

A Sporting Comedy in Four Acts, by CAPTAIN H. S. BROWNING.

Carl Sampson		Mr. PHILIP GUNINGHAM
Capt. Lord Winthrop, Capt. Brookes-Greville	30th Lancers	Mr EUSTACE BURNABY; Mr. C. W. BLACKALL
Bertie Monkton		Mr. MAX LEEDS
Foxey	A Tout	Mr. FREDERIC MONTI
Clerk of Scales		Mr. ERIC BRIDGEMAN
Assistant Clerk		Mr. STANLEY KILLBY
Footman		Mr. FRED W. RING
Weighing Room Attendant		Mr. E. HILL
Barton, Williams, Harris	Jockeys	Mr. ARCHIE ARBUTHNOT; Mr. F. HOLGATE; Mr. J. CHERRIE
Page		Master REGINALD GRASDORFF
AND
Peter Perks ...	A Bookmaker	Mr. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Mrs. Craven		Miss MARGUERITE LESLIE
Lady Flashington		Miss GLADYS MASON
Nancy Playfair		Miss MARY O'FARRELL
Mrs. Devereux		Miss FLORENCE STEVENTON
Edith Playfair		Miss FLORENCE PIGOTT
Olive Monkton		Miss ANNE MATSON
Maid at Ladies' Club		Miss JOAN DAWSON
AND
Mary Wilmot		Miss IRIS HOEY

ACT I. ... ... The Hall of Mrs. Craven's House, near Goodwood
ACT II. ... ... The same, during a Ball
ACT III. ... ... The Weighing Room at Kempwick Racecouse
ACT IV. ... ... Morning Room of the Alpha Ladies' Club

The Play produced by Mr. HUBERT DRUCE.

PRECEDED AT 8.15 BY

Mr. CYRIL CLENSY.

Musical Director		Mr. THEO. WARD
Acting Manager, Stage Manager, Assistant Stage Manager	For Mr. EUSTACE BURNABY	Mr. WILFRED H. SIMPSON; Mr. A. GORDON BEGG; Mr. ERIC BRIDGEMAN
Acting Manager (for the Whitney Theatre)		Mr. J. D. McLAREN
Treasurer and Secretary		Mr. LACEY DOWNES

Daily Mail

Daily Circulation Five Times as Large as That of Any Penny London Morning Journal.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 29, 1912.

NEW SPORTING COMEDY.

MR. RUTLAND BARRINGTON IN "A MEMBER OF TATTERSALL'S."

Described on the programme as a sporting comedy in four acts, by Captain H. S. Browning, "A Member of Tattersall's," which was produced at the Whitney Theatre, London, last evening almost convinced the audience that they were witnessing melodrama.

There was no fault to find with the play either. There was plenty of everything—sport, love-making, villainous plots, a lovely heroine in love with a gallant captain, and a captain as poor as a church mouse. Just for a moment or two in the second act it appeared as if the melodrama might turn to musical comedy, for the scene was a ball in a country house in Goodwood Week, and Mr. Rutland Barrington, the archangel of the plot, strolled in wearing a white top-hat. But Mr. Barrington was only playing the name-part in the sporting comedy. He was a sporting bookmaker worth tens of thousands, and he came to get a glimpse of his daughter, who was being brought up as a society lady, and he wanted to enrich the poor captain in love with her and become his father-in-law.

He was a rare character this sporting bookmaker; Sherlock Holmes and Lord George Bentinck rolled into one. He knew everything—knew everyone. Villains went down before him like skittles. He saved the captain in spite of himself. He won the great race of the season, he won a lady's heart, and he smoked more cigars in four acts than any leading actor has ever before done in one play. He had an unending supply of good humour. So well he might, too, for the audience was laughing with him all the time.

"A Member of Tattersall's" is an entertainment rather than a comedy. It is like the Irish stew that saved one the trouble of going through the menu: it has a little of everything. A play like this has to be kept going quickly, and that was how it was acted last night.

J. W.

43

LYCEUM THEATRE

Lessees ... ... Popular Playhouses, Limited

Managing Directors ... ... WALTER MELVILLE and FREDK. MELVILLE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to Walter Melville, Lyceum Theatre, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, February 28, and Nightly at 7-45

THE ENTIRELY NEW ROMANTIC PLAY,

THE MONK & THE WOMAN

By FREDK. MELVILLE.

Music specially composed by H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE.

Produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Characters:

Paul (a Novice)	Monks	Mr. BASIL GILL
Peter		Mr. J. T. MACMILLAN
Jabez ...		Mr. LEYTON CANCELLOR
John (a Novice)		Mr. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Father Ignatius		Mr. WILLIAM LUGG
Henri De Montrale		Mr. AUSTEN MILROY
Captain La Tour		... Mr. EDWIN GRIFFEN
Barriere	Followers of De Montrale	Mr. FRED ELSWORTHY
La Touche ...		Mr. VICTOR EDWARDS
Greville		Mr. HENRY T. ROSE
Manton		Mr. CHARLES WALTERS
Captain Armande		Mr. WILMOT JACKSON
The King		... Mr. BASSET ROE
Wiseman		... Mr. EDMUND WALLER
Marshall		Mr. RAYMOND WOOD
Captain of the Guard ...		... Mr. H. FIELD
Chamberlin		... Mr. RICHARD SCOTT
Madame De Vigne, Mistress of the King		... Miss FRANCES DILLON
Comtesse De Salle		... Miss VIOLET FAREBROTHER
Unknown Girl		... Miss ALICE BELMORE
Vernet		... Miss GILLIAN SCAIFE
Liane, the Pearl of the Court ...		... Miss MARIE POLINI

Mr. Fred Melville in his latest drama written for the masses has left the path of so-called modern realism and harked back to the sixteenth century, choosing apparently the period of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, though the name of the French monarch introduced as a principal character is carefully omitted. "The Monk and the Woman," indeed, is after—a very long way after—Dumas the Elder, and possesses just a flavour of "The Three Musketeers." In the new piece, too, there is a noticeable attempt at poetic writing—not always successful, but, still, a great advance on the flamboyant commonplaces that did duty in "The Bad Girl of the Family" and other plays of the same brand. In the successful modern piece mentioned, it will be remembered, the "bad girl" takes the place of the heroine at the altar and is married to the villain of the piece. In the Lyceum play, which was produced before a packed house on Wednesday, there is a situation on similar lines, the "woman" being saved from a marriage with a treacherous courtier by the monk taking his place at the last moment.

The first act, which dragged very much on the opening night, opens in a monastery. The monks are at prayer, Father Ignatius officiating at the altar. All is not well with the cowled brothers. John, a novice, has committed a grievous sin—according to the dramatist. He has held converse with a woman. True it is that she was in great distress through the cruelty of her employer, who had beaten her. Nevertheless, John is enjoined by the Father to do severe penance—six days' solitary confinement on bread and water. It is no wonder that John rebels, and exclaims that "God never intended that man should be shut up to wither and die." The peaceful monks are much disturbed by the entrance of two women fugitives—one of them Liane, the "pearl of the Court"—who are followed by men-at-arms under the command of Henri de Montrale, who is commissioned by his King to capture Liane, who has inflamed the monarch's passion. Montrale decides to leave Liane at the monastery, notwithstanding the protest of the Father Superior that women are not allowed, and she is put under the care of Paul, a young novice, whose heart goes out to her.

The rest of the story is soon told. Paul, who is brought to the Court, denounces the dissolute King and the "wantons" by whom he is surrounded, and by a miraculously quick change of dress manages to save Liane from an odious union with the villain, Montrale. The monks are proscribed. The King is the victim of a plot, which is revealed to the young monk by the mistress of his Majesty, he being lured to a lonely castle where Liane has been immured. Here the conspirators denounce the libertine monarch, and De Montrale lunges his sword into his heart. The assassin in a moment of bravado defies the forces of heaven and hell, and the boastful words have scarcely been uttered when the castle is struck by lightning. The walls totter, and the traitors and Montrale meet with their doom. The light has come at last for "the monk and the woman." There are situations in plenty, one of the most effective from the popular point of view being at the end of the second act, where the men-at-arms, disguised as monks, suddenly "unfrock" and level their arquebuses at the forces of villainy. The situation is not led up to, but is a complete surprise, and brings down the curtain bravely, though nothing comes of it.

ACT 1.	... ...	Within the Monastery.
	The Monk meets the Woman.
ACT 2, Scene 1	... ...	The King's Palace.
	The King sends for the Woman.
Scene 2	... ...	Garden of the Monastery.
	The Staff against the Sword.
ACT 3, Scene 1	... ...	The Court of the Reprobate.
	The Monk before the King.
Scene 2	... ...	The Woodman's Hut.
	The Unknown One
Scene 3	... ...	The Chapel Royal.
	The Wedding of the Monk.
ACT 4, Scene 1	... ...	The Guard House.
	I go to save the King.
Scene 2	... ...	Meeting House of Conspirators.
	Death to the Libertine King.
Scene 3	... ...	The Chateau of St. Claire.
	The Coming of the Light.

Costumes executed by J. & H. NATHAN.

Scenery by N. HINCHEY, W. D. HOBBS and LYCEUM STUDIO.

The Orchestra under the Direction of H. SULLIVAN-BROOKE will play the following selections:—

(1) PRELUDE to "The Monk and the Woman" - H. Sullivan-Brooke
(2) BALLET MUSIC—"Egyptian" - - - - - - Luigini
(3) SELECTION—"Carmen" - - - - - - - Bizet
(4) (a) "Finlandia" - - - - - - - - - Sibelius
(b) "Prelude" - - - - - - - - - Rachmaninoff
(c) Intermezzo "The Monk and the Woman" H. Sullivan-Brooke

Hire of Opera Glasses 6d. obtained from Automatic Machines attached to Seats.

Popular Prices: Private Boxes, £3 3s., £2 2s., £1 11s. 6d., and £1 1s. Stalls, 5s. & 3s.; Grand Circle, 4s. and 2s. 6d. (All Numbered and Reserved.) Pit Stalls, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d.

Box Office (Edward Hackett) open Daily 10 to 10. Tels. 7617-8 Gerrard (2 Lines)

Acting Manager and Treasurer ... ... LESLIE HUGHES
Stage Manager ... ... S. MAJOR JONES

Extract from the Rules made by the Lord Chamberlain.

(1). The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill (2). The public can leave the Theatre at the end of the performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards. (3). Where there is a fire-proof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every performance to ensure its being in proper working order. (4). Smoking is not permitted in the Auditorium. (5.) All gangways, passages, and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

QUEEN'S THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W,

Under the Management of ... ... Mr. ARTHUR HARDY.

SATURDAY, MARCH 2nd, at 8.30 p.m.,

Mr. ARTHUR HARDY

produces

THE CHALK LINE

A New Play in Four Acts,

By FABIAN WARE and NORMAN MacOWAN.

CAST.

Lord Strachan	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Captain Peter Greig	Mr. KENNETH DOUGLAS
John Summers	Mr. FREDERICK LLOYD
Mary Summers, his wife	Miss HELEN BROWN
Peggy Summers ... } their children	Miss MARJORIE DANE
Jess Summers ... }	Miss EILEEN ESLER
Andy Roddick	Mr. ALFRED BRYDONE
Leonard Stiles	Mr. W. CRONIN WILSON
Lord Tempest	Mr. STRATTON RODNEY
William Baines	Mr. A. S. HOMEWOOD
Veerland	Mr. LEON M. LION
Countess Derada	Lady TREE
Kathleen Stuart	Miss LYDIA BILBROOKE
Alice	Miss MARY MACKENZIE
Mason	Miss LUCIE VERRIER

The Play Produced by Mr. HERBERT JARMAN.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

Act I.	.. .. Entrance Hall, Summers's Cottage. Evening (F. L. Schmitz)
Act II.	.. .. Andy Roddick's Workshop. Next Morning (W. T. Hemsley)
Act III.	The Study, Strachan Castle. 10.45 following Morning (F. L. Schmitz)
Act IV.	.. .. Scene same as Act I. The same Evening

FIRST MATINEE WEDNESDAY NEXT, MARCH 6th.

MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AT 2.30.

Manager	Mr. FRED PEMBERTON
Stage Manager	Mr. W. W. KEENE
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. GEORGE ROBINSON

"What's the game, Peter?" asks John Summers of his friend, Captain Peter Greig; and the British officer answers, "The oldest game there is—Hide and seek." As played by the Countess Derada at the head of one side and Captain Peter as her opponent, it is a very exciting game indeed; and the interest of the onlookers is never allowed to flag, for it is not until the end of the fourth act that we know which is the winning side. Countess Derada is a beautiful spy, who, in order to serve her country—we are not told which country it is—has come to England to organise a general strike of miners, railwaymen, &c., so that the island shall be unprepared for invasion; and also to wrest from Lord Strachan, by fair means or by foul—the lady has no scruples—the secret of a wonderful invention of his by means of which all life within a certain area can be exterminated. The method will cause "the destruction of a fleet or the annihilation of an army." Lord Strachan is a peace maniac, a man who would want "a boxing match settled by arbitration"; and it is his intention to devote his discovery to the promotion of universal peace. The Countess gains his complete confidence, and he announces his intention of placing in her keeping, at an early date, the wonderfut secret, which he has reduced to "just words and figures on paper." But war is imminent, and the Countess cannot wait, so she instructs her tool, "little Veerland," to enter Strachan Castle at dead of night, steal the casket containing the papers, "grab the damn thing, and run." Her plans work, so she thinks, to perfection; and when, the next day, the misguided old gentleman prepares to make her a present in public of the wonderful secret, he finds that his safe has been rifled of its precious contents. Neither the Countess, Captain Peter, nor his lovely ally, the Laird's granddaughter, Kathleen Stuart, exhibit much surprise. The Countess professes sympathy with her host, and suggests very pleasantly that the gallant Captain is the thief. Peter, the inscrutable, endures her taunts and jibes with equanimity; but, on the Conotess expressing her desire to leave Scotland for London at once, he frustrates her intention. She is annoyed, but too jubilant for recrimtnation. Awaiting the repair of the smashed motor-car that has prevented her departnre, tbe Conntess paya a visit to John Sommers's cottage, where she finds Peter. Being a woman, she cannot resist ehowing a little elation at the success of her side in their game. Peter preserves his enigmatic calm until the arrival of Lord Strachan, to whom the Countess makes confession, very prettily, of her treachery. Then Peter shows his trump hand. Veerland stole the casket, but Peter has stolen Veerland. The poor little spy is brought in bound and helpless, the casket is produced from its hiding-place, the stricken old man hands the papers to the safe custody of Captain Peter Greig, the Countess faces her defeat with gay insonciance, and remains fascinatingly débonnaire, even when confronted with the indignant strikers, and Peter, before going "where doty calls," hints at the suggestion of a future love-story in his good-bye to his pretty ally. "And when there's peace—when it is all over?" asks Kathleen; and Peter answers her, with meaning, "I shall come back."

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 5th, 1912, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

MESSRS.

VEDRENNE AND EADIE

PRESENT

MILESTONES

By ARNOLD BENNETT and EDWARD KNOBLAUCH.

ACT I.	John Rhead	.. Mr. DENNIS EADIE
	Gertrude Rhead ..	.. Miss HAIDEE WRIGHT
1860	Mrs. Rhead	.. Miss MARY RELPH
	Samuel Sibley	.. Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
	Rose Sibley	.. Miss MARY JERROLD
	Ned Pym	.. Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
	Thompson	.. Mr. CASSELS COBB
ACT II.	John Rhead	.. Mr. DENNIS EADIE
	Gertrude Rhead ..	.. Miss HAIDEE WRIGHT
1885	Rose Rhead	.. Miss MARY JERROLD
	Emily Rhead	.. Miss EVELYN WEEDEN
	Sam Sibley	.. Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
	Nancy Sibley	.. Miss ESME HUBBARD
	Lord Monkhurst ..	.. Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
	Arthur Preece	.. Mr. LIONEL ATWILL
	Thompson	.. Mr. CASSELS COBB
ACT III.	Sir John Rhead ..	.. Mr. DENNIS EADIE
	Gertrude Rhead ..	.. Miss HAIDEE WRIGHT
1912	Lady Rhead	.. Miss MARY JERROLD
	Lady Monkhurst ..	.. Miss EVELYN WEEDEN
	Lord Monkhurst ..	.. Mr. OWEN NARES
	The Hon. Muriel Pym ..	.. Miss GLADYS COOPER
	Nancy Sibley	.. Miss ESME HUBBARD
	Richard Sibley	.. Mr. E. REGINALD MALCOLM
	Arthur Preece	.. Mr. LIONEL ATWILL
	Webster	.. Mr. W. LEMMON WARDE

The Scene is laid throughout in the Drawing-room of a house in Kensington Gore.

The Scenery painted by G. SACKMANN.

The entire Furnishing carried out by Messrs. THORNTON-SMITH, Soho Square, W.

The Pictures by WM. MARCHANT & Co., 5 Regent Street.

Costumes by L. & H. NATHAN. Modern Dresses by PRUNELLA.

The Plate and Bronzes supplied by ELKINGTON & Co., Ltd., 22 Regent Street, Goldsmiths, Silversmiths and Bronzists to H.M. King George V.

The Play produced under the direction of FRANK VERNON.

The Pianofortes used at this Theatre supplied by GEO. ROGERS & SONS.
The Dulcitone supplied by the Sole Makers, THOMAS MACHELL & SONS, Glasgow.

The Music under the direction of BENNO SCHEREK.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, 9th MARCH, at 2.30.

Doors open half-an-hour before time of Performance.

The Box Office (J. W. Sheppard) is open from 10 to 10 daily. Tel. 3855 Gerrard.

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. & £2 2s. Stalls, 10s. 6d.
Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. & 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. & 2s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d.

EXTRACTS FROM THE RULES MADE BY THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.—The name of the actual and responsible Manager of the Theatre must be printed on every play bill. The Public can leave the Theatre at the end of the Performance by all exit and entrance doors, which must open outwards.

Where there is a fireproof screen to the proscenium opening, it must be lowered at least once during every Performance to ensure its being in proper working order. Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium. All gangways, passages and staircases must be kept free from chairs or any other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary.

Stage Manager	Mr. HERBERT CHOWN
Business Manager	Mr. STANLEY LE SAGE

Victorian drawing-room in Kensington rim and proper. A charming little lady, m and proper, in flounces and crinoline, woolwork and behaving with very be-deference to the elderly lady, her hostess, bemoaning her daughter Gertrude's dy, a daughter who has taken a ride alone abriolet" and who anticipates the time girls will be riding on the tops of omni-who has introduced a bathroom with p for hot and another for cold" into her house; and who, worst of all, breaks off gement with her "betrothed" because unreasonable and despotic. Gertrude's Rose Sibley, the charming little lady tioned, loves John Rhead, Gertrude's an ironmaster and an idealist, who dis-is partnership with Rose's brother and ecause he believes in the future of iron belief which his partners treat with deep
. "You think we are blind, oldbrainless dolts; what's wrong with ake?" they ask. Rose acknowledges her and belief in John, and her maidenly r their union, and expresses her willing-be her husband's slave, but thinks it not be right to marry without her father's "Stick to your ideals, John," says the reature. "Let me go; I shall love you ore for it." "Don't worry," says John, g a kiss upon her innocent brow, "the on our side."

1885. The same drawing-room in Kensington, modernised to meet the artistic demands of the age—an age which gave birth to the operas of Gilbert and Sullivan, to typewriting machines and to bicycles, when daughters, in transition, were the "spoilt darlings" of their parents, when women wore "bustles," and men spoke of their "continuations." John, with iron-grey side-whiskers, and Rose, in a mob cap, are a middle-aged couple who permit their only child, Emily, to read William Black, but forbid the novels of Ouida. With them lives Aunt Gertrude, the old maid, a little soured by her state of single blessedness, but far-sighted and sympathetic with youth as ever. John's ideals are less elastic and progressive than formerly. In his ironworks he has bound to him by contract a young genius, Arthur Preece, who believes in the future of steel as John once believed in the future of iron. John, the middle-aged, is sceptical; "the new generation seems to be going off its head." Gertrude, eager to find for her beloved niece the happiness she has lost for herself, informs the girl's parents that Rose and young Preece are in love with one another. Then the storm bursts. The parents have other views for their child, and a contemporary of theirs, now Lord Monkhurst, seeks her hand in marriage, with their full approval. Poor Aunt Gertrude rages and goads in vain. Emily is not strong enough to thwart the wishes of her dear papa and mamma. She thinks she loves Arthur, but she knows she is a little afraid of his socialistic ideas. Tearful but obedient she awaits the arrival of her "chosen husband," Lord Monkhurst.

1912. The same drawing-room some of the "old" pictures and "old" furniture, electric lights where formerly lamps stood, bowls of roses replacing the mats and ornaments, cushioned couches and chairs, and a modern, decadent young man, Lord Monkhurst, the result of a loveless marriage; his mother, a widow, still a beautiful woman; and his sister, Muriel, straight and healthy in body and mind. It is the "golden wedding" day of Sir John and Lady Rhead; and a new generation has got to "the marrying age." Muriel has engaged herself to her cousin, a penniless young engineer, who is going to Canada. Emily "won't allow" the match. Muriel smiles. "Won't allow—my poor mother!" she says pityingly. But the mother appeals to her daughter's feelings. If Muriel leaves her, Emily's loneliness will be unendurable, and the daughter is softened to self-sacrifice. But the old lover, Arthur Preece, now a Labour M.P., intervenes. Emily finds a belated happiness, Muriel gets her engineer and a new life, and Darby and Joan are left sitting by the fire listening to the quavering voice of old Aunt Gertrude singing an antiquated song in the next room.

"MILESTONES" AT THE ROYALTY THEATRE [Foulsham and Banfie'd Ltd.

Act I.—John Rhead: "It's original, and therefore it's committing a crime—isn't that it, Sam?

THE THIRD AND LAST MILESTONE—AGE

Foulsham & Banfie

MILESTONES

BY ARNOLD BENNETT AND EDWARD KNOBLAUCH.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

Sole Lessees and Managers ... ... A. & S. GATTI

Under the Management of ... ... A. & S. Gatti.

Carl F. Leyel's Season.

On Wednesday Evening, March 6th, 1912, at 8 o'clock,

"KIPPS."

THE STORY OF A SIMPLE SOUL,

By H. G. WELLS and RUDOLF BESIER

Cast.

Edwin Shalford	(Proprietor of the Folkestone Drapery Emporium)	FREDERICK VOLPÉ
Our Mr. Carshot	(Head of the Manchester Department in the Emporium)	LEONARD CALVERT
Our Mr. Minton	(Assistants in the Emporium)	CAMPBELL BROWN
Our Mr. Billam		PERCY GOODYER
Our Mr. Pierce		GILBERT YORKE
Our Mr. Kipps		O. B. CLARENCE
Young Tapley	(Junior apprentice under Mr. Carshot)	CLAUDE VERNON
Miss Mergle	(Head of the Costume Department) ...	DORA HARKER
Chester Coote ...	(a Solicitor) ...	RUDGE HARDING
Mrs. Walsingham		GERTRUDE SCOTT
Helen Walsingham		HELEN HAYE
Mrs. Revell...		ELLA TARRANT
Miss Revell...		EVELYN PARBERRY
Harry Chitterlow		LESLIE CARTER
Parlour-Maid ...	(at Kipps' House) ...	EILEEN BARRY
Mrs. Bindon-Botting		HENRIETTA LEVERETT
Miss Bindon-Botting		ROSAMUND MAYNE-YOUNG
Louisa ...	(at the Bindon-Bottings)	VICTORIA ADDISON
The Cook ...		NELLIE BOUVERIE
Miss May Harley		EVELYN HOPE
The Hon. John Farquhar		FRANK RIDLEY
The Rev. H. Densmore		F. G. KNOTT
Ann Pornick		CHRISTINE SILVER

Customers, Guests, &c.: Misses Saker, Cuthbert, Nisbet, Rundell.
Messrs. Leverett, Wisley.

Synopsis of Scenery.

ACT I. - The Manchester Department of the Folkestone Emporium
ACT II. - - - - - - The Dining Room at Kipps' House
ACT III. Scene 1. - - The Conservatory at the Bindon-Bottings
Scene 2. - - - - The Kitchen at the Bindon-Bottings

The Play Produced by LOUIS CALVERT.

Business Manager - } For Carl F. Leyel - ARTHUR PENLEY
Stage Manager - } - FRED PENLEY

Ices, Tea and Coffee can be had of the Attendants.

REFRESHMENTS supplied by Messrs. A. & S. GATTI, Ltd, of the Royal Adelaide Gallery. Wines and Spirits of the best quality. Neapolitan Ices, Tea, Coffee, etc. Large Smoking Saloon and Balcony on First Floor.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING by the Charing Cross, West End, and City Supply Co., Ltd.

MATINEES on Wed. and Sat. at 2.30.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.—Private Boxes, £4 4s. and £3 3s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony, 7s. 6d. Lower Circle, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.
Doors open at 2 and 7.30. Commence at 2.30 and 8.
Telephone No. 3815 Gerrard.
Box Office (ARTHUR FRYE) Open from 10 to 10.

Business Manager (for A. & S. GATTI) - HERBERT CLARK

Mr. Rudolf Besier is responsible for the adaptation of Mr. H. G. Wells's well-known novel, which was widely read when it was published a few years ago. The readers of the book are, of course, in the best position to judge whether they prefer Kipps as he is described in the pages of Mr. Wells's tale, or as he appears in the flesh on the boards of the theatre. Like many other popular characters in fiction—notably Charles Dickens's—he may have lost something in the process of being transplanted. Mr. Kipps is an assistant in a Folkestone drapery emporium, the proprietor of which is Mr. Edwin Shalford, at whose frown all his employees tremble. Kipps is a sober, steady, young fellow, but, according to his employer, he is not much good as an assistant. The draper, however, receives something in the nature of a shock when a solicitor calls at the shop and informs him that Kipps—whom he has just given a month's notice for staying out all night—has come into a fortune of a little over £50,000. Kipps had just previously met, after a lapse of some years, his former sweetheart, Ann Pornick, now a servant at a house in the town, but he for the time being forgets all about her when told of his unexpected good fortune.

In the second act we find Kipps in his own house, with the solicitor, Mr. Chester Coote, acting as bear-leader to the wealthy young man. But he does not seem to be very happy in his new surroundings, and he meets the advances of Miss Helen Walsingham very awkwardly indeed. However, an engagement is eventually brought about, but when Kipps turns up at a garden party, wearing a frock coat, straw hat, and brown shoes, he is the despair of his self-appointed tutor, Mr. Chester Coote. It is at the house of the Bindon-Bottings he again meets Ann Pornick, and it is seen that the old flame is by no means extinguished. Helen is naturally disgusted with a lover who is afraid to face the company that are eager to offer congratulations on their engagement. Kipps breaks it off, and, finding Ann in the kitchen and in a tearful mood, he promises to make her his wife, in spite of the anger and disgust of Chester Coote, whom he sets at defiance.

ALDWYCH THEATRE

STRAND, W.C.

General Manager - Mr. ALBERT ARCHDEACON

(Who holds the Licence of the Lord Chamberlain).

FIRST NIGHT

OF

Proud Maisie

Romantic Play in Four Acts

By

EDWARD G. HEMMERDE, K.C.

Incidental Music and Songs by HAMILTON HARTY.

The Play Produced by NORMAN McKINNELL.

Sword Fights arranged by FELIX GRAVE.

Costumes designed by COMELLI and made under the direction of EMILIO COMELLI by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., C. ALIAS, Ltd., MORRIS ANGEL, L. & H. NATHAN, and Miss M. FISHER.

Tartans supplied by MACDOUGALL & Co. of Inverness.

Armour by C. BRAND of PARIS. Scenery painted by WALTER HANN & SON.

Wigs by GUSTAVE. Lighting by THOMAS J. DIGBY. Pianos by BECHSTEIN.

Furniture kindly lent by Messrs. WARING & GILLOW, Ltd., and SPILLMAN.

Musical Director	EMIL KREUZ
Assistant Manager	Mr. DONALD BAYLIS
Stage Manager	Mr. ARTHUR WHITE

PRICES:—Boxes, 4, 3, 2, 1½ Guineas; Stalls, 10/6; Balcony Stalls, 7/6, 6/-; Balcony, 5/-; Upper Circle, 4/-; Pit (unreserved), 2/6; Gallery (unreserved) 1/-.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. L. A. BACK) open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Telephone: 2315 GERRARD.

EXTRACT FROM THE RULES MADE ... responsible Manager of the Theatre m... Theatre at the end of the performance ... 3.—Where there is a fireproof certain t... every performance to ensure its being ... Auditorium. 5.—All gangways, passag... obstructions, whether permanent or te...

Aldwych THEATRE

...ERLAIN. 1.—The name of the actual and ... Playbill. 2.—The Public can leave the ...nce doors, which must open outwards. ...ng it must be lowered at least once during ... 4.—Smoking is not permitted in the ... be kept clear from chairs or any other 12/3/1912

Orch. Stall

M 1

To be retained.

54

PROUD MAISIE

CAST:

Prince Charles Stuart - - -	Mr. BEN WEBSTER
Earl of Pitcour - - - -	Mr. J. H. BARNES
Guy, Lord Monteith (his Son) - Known as the Master of Pitcour.	Mr. LEON QUARTERMAINE
Neil MacAlpine (Son of the Earl of Lochvar) Known as Young Lochvar. -	Mr. HENRY AINLEY
Alan MacGregor - - - -	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
MacDonald of Clanranald - - -	Mr. THOMAS HOLDING
Cameron of Lochiel - - -	Mr. ROHAN CLENSY
Ronald MacPherson - - -	Mr. JOHN BARDSLEY
Duncan (a Servant) - - - -	Mr. BLAKE ADAMS
Mhorag MacGregor (Alan's Sister) - -	Miss MADGE FABIAN
Jean MacGregor (Alan's Sister) - -	Miss MARGARET DEMPSEY
AND
Lady Maisie (Guy's twin Sister) - -	Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE

Scotch Nobles, Gentlemen, Ladies, Attendants, Pipers, etc.

Scene - - - - SCOTLAND

Time - The Evening of August 18th, 1745

Act I. - - - -	Armoury of Pitcour Castle
Act II. - - - -	The same
Act III. - - - -	Hall at Pitcour Castle
Act IV.—Scene I. - -	The Armoury
Scene II. - -	Near the Witches' Well

Mr. HAMILTON HARTY will on this occasion conduct the Orchestra.

A bell will ring in the Saloons one minute before the commencement of each entr'acte.

Many years before the birth of Proud Maisie, daughter of the Earl of Pitcour, an ancestress of hers, Barbara MacAlpiae, disguised as a man, had rendered herself immortal by a "duel to the death" with one of the false fair Stuarts in order to save the family honour. The fame of her deed still lingered in "bonnie Scotland" in the year 1745, a year when men drank in secret to "the King over the water," when plots and counter-plots, treason and loyalty walked hand in hand, and when the fair face and pleasant speech of the Pretender, Prince Charles Stuart, won the hearts of many to their own destruction. Lady Maisie and her family are all for the Stuarts; her lover, Neil MacAlpine, unknown to them—his sister has suffered bitter wrong at the hands of the Stuarts—is on the side of the Hanoverian King, George. The only person in the secret is Maisie's father, the Earl of Pitcour, a waverer, ostensibly a follower of the Stuarts, afraid to acknowledge his leaning to the house of Hanover, preferring a coward's policy even though it dye Scotland "red with the blood of those he might have saved, had he but dared."

It is through Miss MacGregor, the betrothed of Maisie's twin brother Guy, Lord Monteith, that Neil MacAlpine is identified as a "Hanoverian spy," with the result that Guy has a complete revulsion of feeling towards his erstwhile friend, and is horrified at the idea that Maisie has still love and faith for the enemy of their house. At a masked ball in the hall of Pitcour Castle, a scene of beauty and brilliance, Charles Stuart appears unexpectedly, and makes what, in those stirring days of romance, was called a "rousing appeal," but which, in these more prosaic days, we should consider a "good electioneering speech." The result is instantaneous. Maids kiss their pretty hands, and men bend their loyal to "bonnie Prince Charlie"; all but one, Neil MacAlpine, who is present because "the call of danger to a heart like his rings like a clarion." He is publicly insulted by Guy; and, after a fruitless appeal to the Earl of Pitcour, he challenges Monteith to a duel to the death, like that which the false Stuart fought with Barbara MacAlpine by the Witches' Well. Maisie pleads with her brother eloquently. "If it be true that our dear father's false, how can thy life redeem his honour?" she asks. Guy remains obdurate. Then Maisie makes her appeal more personal. She says, "If thou shouldst die my life is o'er; I cannot take the hand that sheds thy blood. And if he dies . . ." Guy still remains firm; his honour demands that he shall meet his adversary. But the old Earl, desirous of preventing the duel which is the result of his own pusillanimity, is more practical. He instructs his faithful servitor, Duncan, to lock the only door of the castle that leads to the Witches' Well, and guard the key, of which Maisie obtains possession by posing as the ghost of the Barbara MacAlpine above mentioned, and frightening the ancient servitor into a fainting fit. She determines to take her brother's place in the duel; for, as she pertinently remarks, "What am I in this o'erwhelming panoply of war?" In the moonlight her lover is deceived into mistaking her for her brother. He kills his opponent, who dies in his arms with the words "Kiss me, sweet, and say good-night; I'll meet thee in the morning"; and he, Romeo-like, finding life impossible without his love, stabs himself over her dead body, and the curtain falls as the hapless lovers are carried off, wrapped in a plaid, to the mournful music of the pipes.

THE LITTLE THEATRE.

Proprietress ... ... GERTRUDE KINGSTON.

Charles Kenyon's Season

Every Evening at 8.45 p.m., and Matinees, Saturdays, at 3 p.m.

Mr. CHARLES KENYON presents

(By arrangement with Mr. J. H. LEIGH)

RUTHERFORD AND SON,

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS, BY K. G. SOWERBY.

John Rutherford	Mr. NORMAN McKINNEL
John, Richard } his sons	Mr. EDMOND BREON
... ...	Mr. FRANK RANDALL
Janet, his daughter	Miss EDYTH OLIVE
Ann, his sister	Miss AGNES THOMAS
Mary, young John's wife	Miss THYRZA NORMAN
Martin	Mr. HARVEY BRABAN
Mrs. Henderson	Miss MARIE AULT

Scene—

Living-Room in John Rutherford's House ... Walter Johnstone

Two days elapse between Acts I. and II. One Night between Acts II. and III.

Furniture by JAMES S. LYON. Wigs by GUSTAVE. The "DEA" Piano which plays between the Acts, supplied by Messrs. KEITH PROWSE & Co., Ltd., 162, New Bond Street.

MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY AT 3.

Matinees of "THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE," by COSMO HAMILTON, Every Afternoon at 3 (Saturdays excepted).

Representative	Mr. RALPH KIMPTON
Assistant Stage Manager	Mr. L. G. CARROLL
Business Manager	Mr. H. JALLAND

"RUTHERFORD AND SON."

Play in Three Acts, by K. G. Sowerby. Performed at the Little Theatre on Monday, March 18.

John Rutherford .....Mr. Norman McKinnel
John ..... Mr. Edmond Breon
Richard ..... Mr. Frank Randall
Janet ..... Miss Edyth Olive
Ann ..... Miss Agnes Thomas
Mary ..... Miss Thyrza Norman
Martin ..... Mr. Harvey Braban
Mrs. Henderson ..... Miss Marie Ault

Let no one say that merit is not recognised in a matinée production. Miss K. G. Sowerby presented her play, "Rutherford and Son," at the Court Theatre on Jan. 31, and on March 18 the piece was having a London production at a West-End playhouse. "Rutherford and Son" well deserves its success. We are a business nation, and a drama which deals with the troubles and combats of trade will always be appreciated in England. The scenario which we gave in our edition of Feb. 3 was so exhaustive that we need only remind the present reader that the central figure of the play is John Rutherford, the stern parent, hard master, and domestic tyrant of the Rutherford household and the Rutherford glass-works, whose ruling passion—if "passion" is not too warm a word—is the success of "Rutherford's." To ensure this, not only for monetary ends, but that the firm may maintain its foremost position in the eyes of the commercial world, he is ready to sacrifice family feeling and family honour. Any rudimentary instincts of natural affection and warm human sympathy he might originally have possessed have been atrophied by disuse; and when his son John discovers a new process which would add to their commercial fame and prosperity, the father tries to bully him into giving it to the firm for nothing, instead of offering him a fair and equitable return for his discovery. The only other sharer of young John's secret is the firm's right-hand man, Martin, who has had a liaison with Rutherford's middle-aged and suppressed daughter, Janet. Rutherford Senior becomes aware of this connection, but does not reveal his knowledge until he has succeeded in "worming out" the son's secret by working on Martin's sense of loyalty to the firm. Having sucked Martin dry for his own purpose, he uses his knowledge of the relationship between them to cast both foreman and daughter adrift. When the son learns that his father has stolen his invention, he retaliates by taking the contents of the parental cash-box and departing to "fresh fields and pastures new" in Canada.

But he leaves behind him a young wife, who has before this unavailingly implored him to remove her from this parody of a "home," and also an infant representative of a third generation of "Rutherford's." The mother's shrewd intelligence is sharpened for her child, and, recognising that the continuance of the family name is the strongest lever with which to move the grandfather, she makes the condition that in return for a home for both of them, she shall have absolute control of her boy for ten years, at the end of which time he shall be handed over to his grandfather to do with as he will. The astute mother counts on the influence of early-implanted springs of action and feeling, and on the fact that when that time comes the old man will have neither the will nor the power to intimidate or greatly influence his grandson.

The play is intensely interesting and arresting. It contains several strongly dramatic scenes, notably that between Janet and her father, when the woman's long pent-up stream of sullen rebellion is let loose; and that between Janet and Martin, in which the woman bitterly realises that the love she has brought the man cannot compensate to the simple, honest nature, for the self-respect he has lost by his breach of faith with master and master's son. Though the scene of the three acts is not changed from the dull and commonplace living-room in John Rutherford's house, the close interest of the audience in the development of character and temperament presented was maintained till the end, and shown by the frequent applause.

Every Evening at 9 o'clock Matinees at 3 o'clock

By Arrangement with Mr. CYRIL MAUDE

Bunty Pulls the Strings

A Scottish Comedy in Three Acts

By GRAHAM MOFFAT

Preceded at 8.30 : Matinees at 2.30 : by

AN OBJECT LESSON

A Play in One Act

By FREDERIC SARGENT

Mark Graffham	Mr. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Mary Graffham, his Wife	Miss VERA COBURN
Noel Frobisher	Mr. OWEN NARES	(by courtesy of Messrs. Vedrenne & Eadie)

Scene—The Graffhams' Drawing Room.

"AN OBJECT LESSON."

A Play, in One Act, by Frederic Sargent, Produced at the Haymarket on Tuesday, March 19.

Mark Graffham .....Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw
Mary Graffham .....Miss Vera Coburn
Noel Frobisher .....Mr. Owen Nares

"Bunty" has reached her three hundredth performance, and looks like doubling that number if we may take the attitude of Tuesday night's audience at the Haymarket as any criterion. Mr. Frederic Harrison in celebration of the third century put on a new front piece from the pen of Mr. Frederic Sargent, entitled "An Object Lesson." Its subject is the eternal triangle—husband, wife, and lover, but the workmanship is neat and the dialogue decidedly good. Mark Graffham, a barrister, married to a charming wife some ten years younger than himself, is quite unconscious of the very serious flirtation between her and his friend, Noel Frobisher. At the rising of the curtain Frobisher tells her of an appointment offered him in Brazil, and by her pleading to him not to go he easily gauges the state of her feelings for him. The question whether to go or not to go is referred by Frobisher to the husband, who learns that there is a woman in the case. "Married?" queries Graffham, and on receiving an affirmative answer, says "Oh, that's the very devil!" Graffham is engaged as junior in a divorce suit, and expects on the morrow to take the place of his leader, who is indisposed. Leaving the room for a few minutes to telephone concerning his business, Frobisher takes advantage of his absence to urge Mrs. Graffham to elope, and passionately kisses her. The husband opens the door, without either of them suspecting that he has "seen all," and retires. When he really returns he gives the indiscreet pair an "object lesson" by drawing a vivid picture of the sordid fate of a faithless wife who marries her lover. The lover is abashed at the husband's terrible earnestness, and as Graffham finishes his declamatory effort by drawing a briar pipe and presenting it at Frobisher's head, the intense distress of the wife only too clearly betrays her feelings. Frobisher is not allowed to know that his treachery has been discovered, and departs, the curtain falling as the husband takes the wife in his arms.

KINGSWAY THEATRE,

Great Queen Street.

Proprietress - Miss Lena Ashwell

LILLAH McCARTHY GRANVILLE BARKER

The Iphigenia in Tauris of Euripides.

Translated into English rhyming verse by Gilbert Murray.

Produced by Granville Barker.

ARGUMENT.

When the armies of Agamemnon lay at Aulis ready to start for Troy, storms prevented their sailing. The whole expedition was on the point of breaking up when the prophet Calchas declared that the King's daughter, Iphigenia, must be sacrificed to Artemis. Agamemnon consented, and induced his wife Clytemnestra to send Iphigenia to him, on the pretext that she was to be married to Achilles. She came, and Agamemnon, as he believed, sacrificed her.

The army sailed to Troy, and after ten years captured it. On Agamemnon's return his wife, in revenge for Iphigenia, murdered him; and in revenge for that her son Orestes, by the command of the god Apollo, murdered her, and was driven mad by pursuing Furies. He appealed to Apollo for protection, and after long suffering was eventually told that he would find peace if he made his way to the land of the Tauri, and brought away to Athens the Taurian image of Artemis. The Tauri were a savage people at the further end of the Friendless Sea, who killed all strangers in sacrifice to this same image, which they believed to have fallen from heaven. Nevertheless, Orestes with his friend Pylades, undertook the quest.

Now the truth was that Iphigenia had not been slain at all. Artemis had at the last moment swept her away through the air and set her down in the land of the Tauri, to be her priestess in the murderous temple. Here Iphigenia was compelled to purify for sacrifice all strangers who might come. As the years passed other savages came, but no Greeks; and she waited with mixed feelings, loving her kindred and country with a passion of homesickness, yet hating them for the wrong done to her and always haunted by the horror of Aulis, for the day when she might be called upon to doom one of her own countrymen.

In this situation the action begins.

From one point of view the play is an account of the abolition of Human Sacrifice in Greece, and the supposed historical origin of certain curious rites in the worship of Artemis as practised in the poet's time in Attica. This is explained by the goddess Athena at the end.

Characters of the Play

Iphigenia	Lillah McCarthy
Orestes	Godfrey Tearle
Pylades	W. Bridges Adams
Thoas	C. H. Hewetson
A Herdsman	Jules Shaw
A Messenger	P. A. Gawthorn
The Goddess Pallas Athena	Ernita Lascelles.

Chorus of Captive Greek Women

Leader of Chorus - - Penelope Wheeler.

Marcelle Du Cros, Eleanor Elder, Beatrice Filmer, Hilda Honiss, Marion McCarthy, Helen Macdonald, Jean Sterling, Una Maclardy, Margaret Omar, Enid Rose

Music composed by S. P. Waddington. Conductor E. G. Toye.

The Dances arranged by Margaret Morris.

The Scenes and Costumes designed by Norman Wilkinson, of Four Oaks.

The Scene painted by Leslie Casey.

The Play was first performed between the years 414 & 412 B.C.

The Refreshment Bars are under the direct control of the Proprietress.
A special feature is made of Afternoon Teas in the Foyer.

Box Office Open Daily from 10 to 10. Tel: 4032 Gerrard.

Manager - - A. E. Drinkwater.

Stage Manager - - Harold Chapin — Assisted by - - - A. E. Filmer

Box Office Manager - Reginald Wynne — Box Office Assistant - Otho Stanton

The "story" of Iphigenia is too well known to be detailed here. She, as every Eton boy knows, was the daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra. When the Greek expedition was about to set sail against Troy from Aulis, the prophet Calchas—the same who is so amusing in "La Belle Hélène"—advised Agamemnon to sacrifice his daughter to appease the goddess Artemis, who was suspected of sending unfavourable breezes to delay the expedition in the interests of the Trojans. (This legend, by the way, was made use of by a witty lady of fashion in the last generation, who, when a politician compared the Whig party to Agamemnon's army en route, agreed at any rate that the Whigs would "do anything to raise the wind.") Euripides' play, "Iphigenia in Aulis," was founded on this story. Modern mothers will feel something of the indignation of Clytemnestra at Agamemnon's unfatherly act, and exhibit little surprise when they understand that his wife, when he came home, immediately murdered him. But those were trying times, what with oracles, and omens, and the all-powerful gods and goddesses taking different sides, so that a respectable ruler really hardly knew where he was or how to deal with his natural and supernatural difficulties. Agamemnon probably reflected that he might possibly have another daughter, but never such a good opportunity of taking Troy.

Just as Iphigenia was about to be sacrificed, her particular patroness, Diana, substituted a hind for the maiden, and wafted the latter away to Tauris, where she was made priestess of the local temple with the unpleasant duty of sacrificing all strangers who visited the place, thus anticipating the native custom of "hot-potting" in Mr. Rider Haggard's novel "She." This is where "Iphigenia in Tauris" opens. To Tauris come Iphigenia's brother Orestes—who wants to purge himself of the murder of his mother by stealing the statue of Diana from the shrine—and his friend Pylades. Iphigenia proposes to sacrifice one of them, and send the other to Argos with a letter to her friends; and there is a contest between Orestes and Pylades as to who shall be the murderer, each wishing his friend to be saved. In the end an escape by ship is arranged, the goddess Minerva appearing at a critical moment and deceiving Thoas, the King of Tauris, to pursue the fugitives.

KINGSW
GT. Q
Miss Lillah McCarti
Tuesday
Matinee
Mar. 19
Stall
J 5
This to be retained

THE PLAYHOUSE

Saturday

6/4/1912

Orch. Stall

E 18

This to be retained

To-night, Saturday, April 6th, 1912, at 9 o'clock

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE will produce, for the first time, a New Farce, in Three Acts called

BILLY

By GEORGE CAMERON.

BILLY HARGRAVE	Mr. A. E. MATTHEWS
JOHN HARGRAVE	Mr. ATHOL FORDE
SAM EUSTACE	Mr. ROBERT AVERELL
CAPTAIN RANSOME	Mr. A. WHEATMAN
DOCTOR T. H. REHUN	Mr. PETER BLUNT
'ERB	Mr JOHN HARWOOD
BILL	Mr. ARTHUR CLEAVE
STEWARD	Mr. LAWRENCE ANDERSON
AUCTIONEER	Mr. ERNEST GRAHAM
ALICE HARGRAVE	Miss MAIDIE HOPE
Mrs. HARGRAVE	Miss EMMA CHAMBERS
Mrs. SLOANE	Miss FLORENCE HAYDON
BEATRICE SLOANE	Miss VERA COBURN
STEWARDESS	Miss MARIANNE CALDWELL

ACT I. ... ... Afternoon
ACT II ... ... Five minutes later
ACT III. ... ... The next morning

Scene: Upper Deck, Amidships, S.S. "Rowena" BRUCE SMITH

Miss VERA COBURN's Costumes by REDFERN's, Ltd.
Miss MAIDIE HOPE's Costumes by NANETTE FITZGERALD, 6, Hanover Street.
Miss HAYDON's Costumes by Madame MARION ALDRIDGE, 40, York Place, Portman Square.
Uniforms by MORRIS ANGEL. Hats by MAISON LEWIS.

Preceded, at 8.30, by a New Comedy, in One Act, called

HER POINT OF VIEW

By WILFRED T. COLEBY.

REV. PHILIP MONKTON	Mr. ATHOL FORDE
ALBERT BARTLET	Mr. ARTHUR CLEAVE
Mrs. BARTLET	Miss BERYL MERCER

The action of the play takes place in the Chaplain's Quarters, in the Government Industrial Home for Boys, at Beechcroft, Essex.

62

The production of the above play, so many times postponed owing to the regrettable illness of Mr. James Welch, took place on Saturday evening last. The plot, which is of the slightest, turns on the efforts of Billy Hargrave, Rugby international half-back, to conceal from the latest object of his affections, Beatrice Sloane, the fact that he has had to replace his four front teeth with false ones, the result of an accident in a football match. Ordered a sea voyage for his shaken nerves, he arranges that he and his sister Alice shall be fellow-passengers to the canaries on board the same boat as Beatrice and her mother, who are accompanied by Sam Eustace, another aspirant to the daughter's hand. Billy declares his affection to Beatrice, and proceeds to explain his misfortune, but does so in such ambignous terms that she mistakes his reference to his "dental encumbrances" for a confession of former liaisons. Further explanation is cut short by a collision with the steward which sends Billy flying, and causes him to "shoot" his top-plate, the latter being afterwards picked up by 'Erb, an A.B. with Sherlock Holmes tendencies.

The remaining two acts are concerned with Billy's search for these indispensable articles, hampered by the necessity of concealing his loss meanwhile; and matters are further complicated by his theft, through the port-hole of her cabin, of Mrs. Sloane's "set" under the impression that they are his own, and his consequent difficulty in returning them. However, all finally ends happily, as it might quite well have done two acts earlier without materially lessening the gaiety of nations. Though it had some humorous moments the play as a whole is irritatingly unamusing.

new comedy, in one act, by Wilfred T. Coleby, called "HER POINT OF VIEW."

Rev. Philip Monkton ..... Mr. Athol Forde
Albert Bartlet ..... Mr. Arthur Cleave
Mrs. Bartlet ..... Miss Beryl Mercer

The action of this piece, which abounds in quiet, well-observed humour, and shrewd characterisation, takes place in the Chaplain's quarters in the Government Industrial Home for Boys at Beechcroft, Essex. The bibulous but "respectable" Mrs. Bartlet, the mother of Albert, one of the show products of the Home, is anxious that her younger son, Reggie, shall share the advantages enjoyed by his elder brother, which, as a ratepayer and by her "habits," she considers she has contributed to provide. That her "point of view" is more general than is perhaps supposed is confirmed by police court instances of stalwart and muscular parents who profess to find "incorrigibles" of very tender years beyond their control, and only to be dealt with (and incidentally fed and clothed) by the State. But these advantages can only be enjoyed by those who have strayed from the narrow way; and Reggie, who is "that artful and God-fearing," and is also not particularly favourably impressed on a visit to the Home to a birthday tea, will not oblige his mother by qualifying for admission. Mrs. Bartlet visits the chaplain, the Rev. Philip Monkton to ask him to add his persuasion to her own to bring this about. A letter left by Reggie proves that on reflection he has decided to adopt the principle of his mother's advice by stealing her savings—the accumulated result of "slipping off motor omnibuses just as they was starting, an' bringing actions"—hoping to avoid the practical result his parent desires by getting clear off to Nebraska with the £50. But here the serene Mrs. Bartlet scores again; for the coins are "wrong 'uns," and a telephone message saying that Reggie has been arrested for uttering counterfeit money reassures his mother with the reflection that he will probably soon be an inmate of the Home.

His Majesty's Theatre

Proprietor and Manager - SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.

SHAKESPEARE'S

OTHELLO.

EVERY EVENING AT 8.

TUESDAY, APRIL 9TH AT 7 O'CLOCK

(SUBSEQUENT EVENINGS AT 8).

SHAKESPEARE'S

OTHELLO

Duke of Venice		HENRY MORRELL
Brabantio	(a Senator)	A. E. GEORGE
Gratiano	(brother to Brabantio)	A. R. DIGHT
Lodovico	(kinsman to Brabantio)	ROSS SHORE
Othello	(a noble Moor in the service of the Venetian State)	HERBERT TREE
Cassio	(his Lieutenant)	PHILIP MERIVALE
Iago	(his Ancient)	LAURENCE IRVING
Roderigo	(a Venetian Gentleman)	ERNEST THESIGER
Montano	(Othello's predecessor in the Government of Cyprus)	HUBERT CARTER
A Senator		E. ION SWINLEY
A Herald		ANTHONY WARDE
Desdemona	(daughter to Brabantio and wife to Othello)	PHYLLIS NEILSON-TERRY
Emilia	(wife to Iago)	ALICE CRAWFORD
Bianca		LAURA COWIE

Sailors, Messengers, Officers, Gentlemen, Musicians and Attendants.

ACT I.

SCENE 1.—A Street in Venice.—Harker. SCENE 2.—The Square outside Othello's House.—Harker.
SCENE 3.—The Court House.—Harker.

ACT II.

SCENE 1.—The Sea Port (Cyprus).—Harker. SCENE 2.—The Open Street.—Craven.
SCENE 3.—The Sea Port (Cyprus).—Harker.

ACT III.

The Logia in the Castle.—Craven.

ACT IV.

SCENE 1.—A Narrow Street.—Craven. SCENE 2.—The Bedroom—Harker.

The Music has been specially composed by COLERIDGE TAYLOR.

The Dance in Act II. Scene 3 arranged by SIGNOR ROSI.

The Costumes have been designed by PERCY MACQUOID, R.I.,
and carried out by B. J. SIMMONS & Co., 7 & 8, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C. Wigs by W. CLARKSON.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.

STAGE MANAGER—CECIL KING. ASSOCIATE STAGE MANAGER—STANLEY BELL.
MUSICAL DIRECTOR—ADOLF SCHMID. CHORUS MASTER—ALFRED BELLEW.

GENERAL MANAGER - - - - - HENRY DANA.

PRICES :—Reserved Seats : Private Boxes, £4 4s., £3 3s., and £1 11s. 6d. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d
Balcony, 5s. Upper Circle, 4s., 3s. and 2s. Unreserved Seats : Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (Mr. POTTER.) OPEN DAILY 10 TO 10. TELEPHONE GERRARD 1777

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE

SHAKESPEARE'S

OTHELLO

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE,

CHARING CROSS ROAD.

Proprietors - - - - - - - - - - Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Sole Lessee ... ... FRANK CURZON.

On WEDNESDAY, 10th APRIL, 1912, at 8 o'clock, and EVERY EVENING at 8.30,

A New Comedy in Four Acts, entitled

"JELF'S"

By HORACE ANNESLEY VACHELL.

Richard Jelf (of Jelf's Bank)	... Mr. GERALD DU MAURIER
Sir Jonathan Dunne (Chairman of the Amalgamated Association of Bankers)	... Mr. ALFRED BISHOP
James Palliser (of Palliser's Bank)	... Mr. CYRIL KEIGHTLEY
The Hon. Archibald Mull	... Mr. ROBERT RENDEL
Adam Winslow (Head Clerk, Jelf's Bank)	... Mr. JULES SHAW
Charles Perkins (Chief Correspondence Clerk at Jelf's)	... Mr. HUBERT DRUCE
Fagge (Porter at Jelf's)	... Mr. HARRY CANE
Tom Harkaway (A Bookmaker)	... Mr. A. E. BENEDICT
Gramshawe (Jelf's Butler)	... Mr. RICHARD CARFAX
Bulger (Private Policeman at Jelf's)	... Mr. HARRY GERRISH
The Countess of Skene and Skye	... Miss VANE FEATHERSTON
The Lady Fenella Mull	... Miss ROSALIE TOLLER
Dorothy Dunne	... Miss DOROTHY FANE
Maid	... Miss DOROTHY GILES

ACT I. .. .. Partners' Room. Jelf's Bank.
ACT II. .. .. Garden at Shepperford-on-Thames (Saturday Afternoon).
ACT III. .. .. The Same (Sunday Evening).
ACT IV. .. .. Partners' Room. Jelf's Bank (The following Tuesday).
Time, To-Day.

THE PLAY PRODUCED BY GERALD DU MAURIER.

Scenery by J. A. FRASER and W. H. DAVIES.
Miss Toller's Costumes by Miss GRAY, LTD., Miss Featherston's by JAY'S, LTD., and Miss Fane's by LÖYSE.
Furniture by D. L. ISAACS, New Oxford Street.
Pianoforte by CHAPPELL & Co.
Stage Flowers by the CRIPPLEGATE FLOWER GIRLS' MISSION.
Wigs by CLARKSON. Grass Matting by ELKAN BROS.
Floral Decorations throughout the Theatre by the CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., Haymarket.

MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY AT 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of ERNEST BUCALOSSI, will play the following Music:—

1.	SELECTION	"Les Merveilleuses"	Hugo Felix
2.	a. TANGO MAXIXE ...	"La Gitanette"	Valverde, Jun.
	b. MORCEAU	"Veillée de l'Ange"	Pierné
	c. SERENADE	"Evening in Toledo"	... Pierné
3.	a. HARROW SONGS ...	... ...	...Schmeling
	b. TWO-STEP	... "Barbers' Ball"	... ...
4.	a. ENTR'ACTE	"Chanson Grand-Maman"	... Cohan
	b. INTERMEZZO	... "Liebestraum"	... Pierné
	c. SUITE	... "Casse Noisette"	...Von Blon

Musical Director ... ... ERNEST BUCALOSSI
Stage Manager ... ... W. T. LOVELL

PRICES OF ADMISSION:—Private Boxes, £6 6s., £3 3s., £2 2s. and £1 1s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

BOX OFFICE (W. AYSOM) OPEN DAILY FROM 10 to 10. Telephone No. 4028 GERRARD.
Doors open at 8. Matinee at 2. Commence at 8.30. Matinee at 2.30.
NOTE.—On the First Night, Wednesday, April 10th, the Curtain will rise at 8 o'clock.

Business Manager ... ... HERBERT JAY

"The man who does the correct thing, and says the correct thing, and wears the correct thing, is generally an ape," says the beautiful Lady Fenella Mull to her fiancé, Richard Jelf (of Jelf's Bank). If her verdict be true, Richard, nicknamed "The Kangaroo" (I) because he sailed from Australia, (2) because in the eyes of that negligible section of society known as "the smart set" he was a "a bit of a bounder," was certainly minus any simian tendencies, for he did none of these things. Richard is a man "simple and straight, but not cut to pattern," and it is more because he represents an inexhaustible supply of the "pretty things she loves" than from affection for the man that Fenella has consented to marry him. The Lady Fenella Mull is daughter to a somewhat decrepit but still "sporting" old lady the Countess of Skene and Skye, and she and her brother Archie are typical representatives of an effete aristocracy, incapable either of honest work or honest emotion, content to sell themselves to the highest bidder in the matrimonial market. Fenella, it is true, has some realisation of the depraved principles and conditions of her set, and has twinges of conscience when she assures the "simple, straight man" that he is her first love, although five minutes earlier she had parted from Jim Palliser (of Palliser's Bank), one of her own set, a "charming slacker," to whom twelve months before she had been secretly engaged. Richard is a regular Don Quixote of a fellow, and allows himself to be bled mercilessly by his future wife's family—a "cool thou." to the Countess to settle a few outstanding "little debts," a supplementary income of £500 to Archie to enable that graceless young cub to marry the lady on whom he is "dead spoons"—a Miss Dorothy Dunne, whose rich father has an invincible objection to pennikes "slackers"—and finally a promise extorted by Fenella herself to "stand by" Palliser's Bank which is on the verge of a crash because Messrs. Palliser and Co. "believe in a minimum of work and a maximum of self-indulgence," even though it may mean the ultimate downfall of "Jelf's." Whether Richard has the moral right to jeopardise the reputation and play ducks and drakes with the funds of the old-established bank that he has inherited from an uncle a few months before the play begins, is a problem which Mr. Vachell, the author, does not discuss. For the sake of his "fair lady," who, oblivious to possible conditions, assures him that "a promise is a promise," and, regardless of the feelings of the depositors rich and poor, Richard insists on bolstering up a rotten concern, with the result that the "run" is transferred from Palliser's Bank to his own, and the enormous private fortune of Richard himself is in imminent peril. But just in the nick of time Sir Jonathan Dunne, chairman of the Amalgamated Assocation of Bankers, whose advice Richard had disregarded, arrives with the comforting assurance that the Association is prepared in its turn to "stand by" Jelf's, and the run is stopped accordingly. In the meantime pretty Fenella has learned that her Richard is more man than ape, and has found that she respects him greatly, because with him "the little things don't count." Jim she sees in his true light as a man "nice to horses but not nice to grooms," who swears at waiters, and is a splendid loser. So it is to "the Kangaroo" she turns, so the lover who wants her not only as a "pal," but also as a "mate," and we are left with the pleasant conviction that this alliance of the "useful and ornamental" is likely to be a conspicuous success.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE

Sole Proprietors ... The Executors of the late Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.

Lessee and Manager ... ... FRANK CURZON.

BY ARRANGEMENT WITH FRANK CURZON

TO-NIGHT AND EVERY EVENING AT 9,

MISS MARIE TEMPEST

PRODUCES

"AT THE BARN"

A New Play in Three Acts, by ANTHONY P. WHARTON.

Lord Clonbarry	Mr. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
Kenneth Maxwell	Mr. NORMAN TREVOR
Austin Crane	Mr. CHARLES V. FRANCE
William Lewis	Mr. ERNEST MAINWARING
Duncan Stewart	Mr. BEN FIELD
Knowles	Mr. CHARLES WEIR
Euphemia Hawes	Miss KATE SERJEANTSON
Linda Moore	Miss MARGUERITE LESLIE
Grace Trevelyan	Miss DOROTHY BELL
Mollie Blair	Miss MARIE TEMPEST

Acts I. and III. ... The Sitting Room at "The Barn." (W. Hann & Son.)
Act II. ... ... The Garden. (W. Hann & Son.)

The Play produced under the direction of DION BOUCICAULT.

Miss Tempest's Costumes by MADAME HAYWARD, 67, New Bond Street, W. Miss Leslie's and Miss Bell's Costumes by MADAME HAYWARD, 67, New Bond Street, W. Hats by MAISON LEWIS, 210, Regent Street, W. Furniture by OETZMANN & Co., Ltd., Hampstead Road, W. Wigs by CLARKSON.

Preceded at 8.30 by

Mr. ARCHIE NAISH

At the Piano.

Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.

The Orchestra, under the direction of HAROLD ROBERTSON GRIMSTON, will play the following Music:

1 MARCH ... "Ladies' Pageant" ... ... Lincke
2 OVERTURE ... "Les Cloches" ... ... Lincke
3 (a) VALSE ... "Mon Bijou" ... ... Lincke
(b) CELESTA SOLO ... "Mon Bijou" ... ... Lincke
(c) TWO-STEP ... "Merrie Maiden" ... ... Hilsberg
4 (a) VALSE ... "Mon Bijou" ... ... Lincke
(b) CELESTA SOLO ... "Vilia" ... ... Lincke
(c) TWO-STEP ... "Coon's Carnival" ... ... Hilsberg

The Celesta & Mustel Organ by MUSTEL & Co., 80, Wigmore Street, W. Grand Pianoforte by BLUTHNER & Co., 13, Wigmore Street, W.

Musical Director ... H. ROBERTSON GRIMSTON | Stage Manager ... ... E. W. TARVER

Prices—Boxes £1 1s. to £4 4s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Balcony Stalls, 7s. 6d. Upper Circle, First Two Rows, 5s.; Other Rows, 3s. 6d. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. Box Office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. Gerrard 7283.

Business Manager (for Miss Marie Tempest) ... ... HERBERT ROSS
Business Manager (for Frank Curzon) ... ...T. B. VAUGHAN

"AT THE BARN."

Play, in Three Acts, by Anthony P. Wharton, Produced at the Prince of Wales Theatre on Thursday, April 11.

"The Barn" is a delightful, old-fashioned house in the country, with a garden that in the summer-time is a sight to gladden the heart of man. Into this Eden strays, one bright sunny afternoon, Miss Mollie Blair, actress. The motor-car in which she travelled from town has broken down, and the lady leaves its owner, Lord Clonbarry, and his friend, Duncan Stewart, to put the machine right. Kenneth Maxwell, who resides at "The Barn" during the summer months, is an author who has written at least one very successful novel, and with him are staying his two bachelor friends, Austin Crane, an artist, and William Lewis, a journalist. It so happens that when Miss Mollie Blair assumes the rôle of an uninvited guest at "The Barn" the three men are away playing golf, and on their return they are amazed to find a lady in possession. According to the report of Knowles, Maxwell's faithful servant and companion in his travels, the stranger is upstairs in his master's bedroom washing her hands and making herself tidy. When she presently appears in the charming old-fashioned sitting-room she is just as cool and as calm as if her arrival had been expected. In fact, she carries "The Barn" and its astonished inmates by storm. In less than five minutes this amazing young person is calling the men by their Christian names, and ordering Knowles to bring her a cup of tea. She has taken a fancy to "The Barn," and intends to stay if the host and his friends have no objection! A little later Kenneth Maxwell hears from her own lips the story of her life. She was a chorus girl in a musical play when she made the acquaintance of Lord Clonbarry, who became her constant companion. He promised to help her in her profession, by his influence she would be able to get the chance which had hitherto been quite beyond her reach. His lordship exacted a certain condition from the girl he was helping, but this condition, the nature of which may easily be guessed, has not yet been fulfilled. She is shortly to appear in the leading rôle of a new musical play, and the object of the motor journey is to inspect a new yacht which has been purchased by his lordship, and is lying off the coast near Southampton a dozen miles away. When Lord Clonbarry and his friend Stewart arrive in search of the missing lady Maxwell gives him to understand that Miss Blair is an old acquaintance and has accepted his invitation to stay at "The Barn" for a few days. As Mollie herself refuses to return to town, his lordship and Stewart have no alternative but to take their departure without their fair companion.

Mollie remains at "The Barn," and proves that she is quite a domesticated young person by "doing the rooms" spring cleaned." She gets on splendidly with the artist and the journalist, but not so well with her host, who takes very little notice of his lady visitor. He finds her a disturbing element, a distraction that interferes sadly with his work. The heroine of his latest novel is a rough factory girl, and she begins to "talk like Mollie." At the end of a fortnight Lord Clonbarry returns to carry the actress back to town. Jealous of Maxwell, he offers to make her a star, but she refuses, without the slightest hesitation, at the same time, however, expressing her willingness to fulfil the condition he had previously imposed. She takes a tearful farewell of "Jimmy" and "Billy," and makes every preparation for departure. In an interview with Lord Clonbarry Maxwell expresses himself very plainly, but his lordship naturally resents any interference with his private affairs. In order to have an undisturbed interview with Mollie his lordship has, by Maxwell's orders, locked up in the boathouse, and when he obtains his liberty he considers that Mollie is lost to him for ever, as she has promised to become Mrs. Maxwell and mistress of "The Barn."

3724

THE GLOBE THEATRE

Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

TO-NIGHT (Thursday), APRIL 11th, 1912, AT 8 O'CLOCK,

CHARLES FROHMAN

PRESENTS

KLAW & ERLANGER'S PRODUCTION

Of the Musical Comedy

THE PINK LADY

Founded on the French of "Le Satyre." By GEORGES BERR and MARCEL GUILLEMAUD.

Book and Lyrics by C. M. S. McLELLAN. Music by IVAN CARYLL.

THE CAST.

Characters in the order in which they appear.

Serpolette Pochet	FLORA CROSBIE
Désirée	FRANCES GORDON
A Photographer	HENRY M. JOHNSON
Pochet	F. NEWTON LINDO
The Hungry Man	JOSEPH CAREY
Annette	POLLY BOWMAN
Gilberte	DOROTHY GODFREY
Gabrielle	MARIE VERNON
Raymonde	FLORENCE BERYL
Minette	JESSIE CRANE
Sophie	IRENE O'DONNELL
Yvonne	EDYTH TAYLOR
Benevol	FRED. WRIGHT, JR.
Lucien Garidel	JACK HENDERSON
Julie	ETHEL STANNARD
Nini	TEDDY HUDSON
Suzanne	MAY HENNESSY
Angele	ALICE DOVEY
Maurice D'Uzac	CRAUFURD KENT
Bebe Guingolph	SCOTT WELSH
The Girl from the Saskatchewan	JEAN CRANE
Claudine, The Pink Lady	HAZEL DAWN
Crapote	EDDIE MORRIS
Madame Dondidier	ALICE HEGEMAN
Philippe Dondidier	FRANK LALOR
Theodore Lebec	A. S. HUMERSON
La Comtesse de Montauvert	LOUISE KELLEY
Rouget	HENRY M. JOHNSON
Dr. Mazou	MAURICE HEGEMAN
Pan	W. JACKSON SADLER
Ywaxy, a Violinist	VIOLINI

Act I. .. .. The Gardens of "Le Joli Coucou," a Restaurant in the Forest of Compiègne, France

Act II. .. .. Interior of an Antique Shop in the Rue St. Honore, Paris

Act III. .. Ball of the Nymphs and the Satyrs at the Café Les Satyres, Paris

MUSICAL NUMBERS.

ACT I.

1. Opening Chorus	Miss GORDON, Miss CROSBIE, VICTIMS and CHORUS
2. "Bring Along the Camera"	Mr. WRIGHT and CHORUS
3. "I'm Going to be Married in June"	Mr. HENDERSON
4. "When Love Goes Astraying"	Miss DOVEY and Mr. KENT
5. "The Girl by the Saskatchewan"	Mr. WELSH, Miss CROSBIE, VICTIMS and CHORUS
6. "In a French Girl's Heart"	Miss DAWN and CHORUS
7. Finale	ENSEMBLE

ACT II.

1. Opening Chorus	Mr. MORRIS and CHORUS
2. "The Intriguers"	Mr. HENDERSON, Mr. LALOR, Miss DAWN, Mr. MORRIS
3. "Donny Did, Donny Didn't"	Miss KELLEY, Miss HEGEMAN, Mr. LALOR Mr. HENDERSON
4. "The Kiss Waltz"	Miss DAWN
5. "Hide and Seek"	Miss DOVEY and Mr. LALOR
6. "The Duel"	Miss DAWN, Miss DOVEY, Mr. HENDERSON, Mr. KENT
7. Finale	ENSEMBLE

ACT III.

1. Parisien Two-Step	Mr. SADLER, Miss CROSBIE, Miss GODFREY and CHORUS
2. "I Like It"	Mr. LALOR and CHORUS
3. "Beautiful Lady"	Miss DAWN, Miss DOVEY
4. Finale	ENSEMBLE

Mr. IVAN CARYLL will personally direct the Orchestra this Evening.

Staged by HERBERT GRESHAM.

Musical Numbers staged by JULIAN MITCHELL.

FREDERICK SOLOMON, Conductor.

Scenes designed and painted by ERNEST ALBERT, of the Lee Lash Studios.

Costumes by the SCHNEIDER-ANDERSON COSTUME CO.; from designs by F. RICHARD ANDERSON.

Hats by the SCHNEIDER-ANDERSON COSTUME CO. and TAPPEL.

Properties by JOHN BRUNTON.

Shoes by CAMMEYER and MILLER.

Electrical effects by FRANK DETERING.

Wigs by WILLIAM HEPNER & Co.

FIRST MATINEE SATURDAY, APRIL 13th, and EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY FOLLOWING AT 2.

Manager ... ... } For Klaw and Erlanger { ... SAM'L HARRISON
Stage Manager ... } { ... NACE BONVILLE

BOX OFFICE (Mr. VINCENT POTTER) open 10 to 10.

Prices:—Private Boxes, £3 3s. and £2 2s. Orchestra Stalls, 10s. 6d. Dress Circle, 7s. 6d Upper Circle, 5s. and 4s. Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s.

Telephone: 8722 GERRARD.

Charles Frohman's General Manager ... ... W. LESTOCQ

Business Manager ... ... OSCAR BARRETT, JUNR.

Six weeks only of single life are left to Lucien Garidel, who determines to make the most of them by a flirtation with Claudine, "the Pink Lady," whom he appoints to meet at a restaurant in the Forest of Compiègne. Angele, his betrothed, becoming suspicious, follows him to the hotel, and comes face to face with Claudine. There is jealousy in Angele's heart, and out of pique she expresses her intention of marrying Lucien's friend, Bébé, an obliging young man, who, however, is devoted to a sweetheart in Canada. In the nick of time he prompts Claudine to affirm that she is the wife of Dondidier, declared to be a dealer in antiques by day and a satyr who pursues his avocations in the neighbouring forest by night. Only partially convinced, Angele announces her intention of visiting Dondidier, and it therefore becomes necessary for him to keep up the character. Lucien and Claudine repair to the antique store, and induce the owner, hitherto a highly respectable individual, to take up the rôle. He acquits himself of the task only too well, for he mistakes the aristocratic mother of the young man, to whom he wishes to espouse his daughter, for Angèle, and bestows warm attentions upon her, involves himself in compromising positions both with the "Pink Lady" and Angèle, and is arrested as the Satyr who has infested the woods. Angele finally convinces herself of her lover's integrity by disguising herself as a fortune teller at a ball of nymphs and satyrs, and the "Pink Lady" is left to work her enchantments elsewhere.

ROYALTY THEATRE

Licensed by the Lord Chamberlain to J. E. VEDRENNE, Dean Street, W.

On TUESDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOONS,
April 16th, 19th, 23rd, 26th, 30th, and May 3rd, 1912, at 3,

MESSRS.
VEDRENNE AND EADIE
PRESENT

THE ODD MAN OUT

A Comedy in Three Acts by HAROLD BRIGHOUSE.

Daniel Weir	Mr. DENNIS EADIE
Jonas Enderby	Mr. HUBERT HARBEN
Laurence Enderby	Mr. STANLEY LOGAN
Dick Carrington	*Mr. MALCOLM CHERRY
Butler	Mr. ARTHUR BOWYER
Constance Enderby	*Miss HELEN HAYE
Barbara Weir	*Miss GLADYS COOPER
Dolores	Miss MARCELLE CHEVALIER

The action, which is continuous, takes place in the Drawing Room and Library of Mrs. Enderby's House, at Barringford, Shropshire.

The Play Produced under the Direction of FRANK VERNON.

 These Artists will appear by arrangement with Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Carl F. Leyel, Mr. Seymour Hicks.

3724

Mr. Harold Brighouse comes to us with high credentials from the Manchester and Glasgow Repertory Theatres, and by the considerable qualities of his piece, "The Polygon," produced by the Play Actors at the Court in February last year, he made a favourable impression on London playgoers. That impression will be deepened by the production at the Royalty, by Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie, of the comedy, in three acts, entitled "The Odd Man Out." This was thoroughly enjoyed by a matinée audience on Tuesday, and it should be said at once that the young author writes with observation and humour, and has the faculty of inventing dialogue that is smart and amusing. The situation in the second act between Mrs. Enderby and her two husbands is treated with considerable cleverness, and the hearty laughter evoked by it was a genuine tribute to a success upon which author and producers may be congratulated. The character-drawing, generally speaking, is good, though the conversion of the heroine from a dour little prig into a really sensible girl is somewhat sudden.

Mr. Jonas Enderby, the second husband of Mrs. Enderby (formerly Weir), is the step-father and guardian of Barbara Weir, whom he destines for his nephew, young Laurence Enderby, a vicious young scamp who is wasting his allowance on a liaison with Lisette, a French girl. To give Laurence his due, he is not at all keen on marrying Barbara; in fact, he has brought into the family circle a clean-living young engineer, Dick Carrington, who proposes to Barbara, and is referred by her to her step-father. Jonas has a few questions to ask of the young suitor, and casually remarks that he (Dick) is rather lax in religious matters. Dick's confession that he is an Agnostic condemns him in the eyes of the elderly man, a smug Wesleyan, and the lover is sent about his business.

In the course of a conversation between the older and the younger Enderby, Uncle Jonas darkly hints that there is a remote possibility of Mrs. Enderby's first husband being alive, and if Laurence will only immediately marry Barbara—who is informed of her fate—there would be settlements of her mother's money upon her. This monetary advantage Jonas proposes to share with Laurence if the missing Mr. Weir does turn up again. Barbara, not being the obedient and passive young person she is supposed to be, has a violent wrangle with Laurence, and the end of the act comes with the arrival of her father, Daniel Weir. The shock to Enderby is better imagined than described, and during the interview with his predecessor in the affections of Mrs. Enderby he has a very bad quarter-of-an-hour. Weir has no desire, however, to disturb existing arrangements. He has taken advantage of Central American laws of divorce and has married Dolores—a lady of Spanish extraction. His only purpose in coming to England is to see his daughter, and one of the really charming passages of the play is the affectionate scene between father and daughter. He gives her sound advice and says a good word for Dick, who is made happy by her consent to their engagement. The conscientious Mrs. Enderby's scruples are overcome when, by her caustic comments, she so enrages the second Mrs. Weir that that violently hysterical lady levels a pistol at her head. This rough touch of melodramatic burlesque detracts from the merits of a piece that keeps to the smooth ways of comedy.

NEW PRINCES THEATRE,

SHAFTESBURY AVENUE (New Oxford Street End),

LONDON. W.C.

Under the direction of . . { WALTER MELVILLE. / FREDK. MELVILLE.

On WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17th, 1912, at 7.45,

The Romantic Play in Four Acts,

THE APPLE OF EDEN

By G. CARLTON WALLACE.

The Play produced by WALTER and FREDK. MELVILLE.

Julian Hanbury, an English Gentleman ...	...	Mr. HENRY LONSDALE
Robert Bertram, his Friend ...	...	Mr. FRED INGRAM
King Ferdinand of Slavonia ...	...	Mr. STEPHEN E. SCANLAN
Prince Nicola, his Cousin ...	...	Mr. FRED MORGAN
General Pavlos ...	...	Mr. EDWARD VALENTINE
Colonel Ferat ...	...	Mr. HENRY CHALMERS
Vassili, a Revolutionary ...	...	Mr. LIONEL BRAHAM
Zlatan, a Spy ...	...	Mr. PERCY BAVERSTOCK
Stefan, the Queen's Servant ...	...	Mr. HERBERT WILLIAMS
A Sentry ...	...	Mr. P. G. MARLER
Lady Hanbury ...	...	Miss ANNIE HILL
Winifred Cresson ...	...	Miss ALICE BOWES
Anna, the Queen's Maid ...	...	Miss ETHEL BRACEWELL
AND
Queen Margaret of Slavonia, travelling as Countess Maritza ...	...	Miss NORA KERIN

Guards, Servants, &c.

Act I. ...	Scene ...	Ragusa, the Dream City of the Adriatic
Act II. ...	Scene ...	... The Hotel Lacroma, Ragusa
Act III. ...	Scene ...	... ... The Mountain Cottage
Act IV. ...	Scene 1 ...	... ... The Mountain Cottage
	Scene 2, A Room in the Palace, Slavonia.
	Scene 3, The Pine Forest, Slavonia.
	Scene 4, Outside the Palace.
	Scene 5, The Royal Palace, Slavonia.

The Scenery painted by W. D. HOBBS and The LYCEUM STUDIO.
Uniforms and Costumes by JOHN HYMAN, 19 Leicester Square, W.

Acting Manager and Treasurer . . . . GORDON JEFFERSON
Stage Manager . . . . . HARRY G. WRIGHT

The favourable verdict on the first production of this piece at the Elephant and Castle Theatre on Aug. 22, 1910, was fully endorsed on Wednesday evening by a large and well-pleased audience. "It is not exactly a play for children, but I think it is a good play," said Mr. Melville, at the close; and the author has certainly written an admirably invented piece, which should fill the New Princes for many weeks to come.

